The CHURCH of this pariſh, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a lofty ſpacious building, with north and ſouth aiſles, which the Chancel alſo hath; The Tower is covered with a ſpire to be ſeen at a great diſtance, and in it are five Bells. In the window of the north aiſle of the Chancel is a picture of K. Edward the Confeſſor, and ſeveral Coats of Arms, but it does not appear whoſe they are.

Since the Vicars of Horn-Church are not to be found in the Biſhop's Regiſtry, I inſert them here as far as I can trace them: The account of all but the firſt two is taken from the Pariſh Regiſter. Richard Whyght. Lands and tenements were put in feoffment by William Walderon, to the intent that the Wardens of Trinity Gild here ſhould find a Prieſt to celebrate within the Church of Horn-Church; and to keep ſolemn Obits yearly. It was worth at the ſuppreſſion 5 l. 15 s. 8 d. yearly. And in the Certificate it is ſaid, That the ſaid Town of Horne-Church 'ys a populous towne, having 'in yt about the number of 600 of houſeling 'people.'

Under this Mother-Church there are, within this extenſive Pariſh Four CHAPELS OF EASE: Two at Havering-Bower, one at Romford, and one at Dagenhams.

One of the Chapels at Havering was a Peculiar Royal Chapel for the King, Queen, and Houſhold: It is ſtill uſed for the neighbouring Inhabitants. The other Chapel at Havering was for the Foreſters, Officers, and the reſt of the neighbours.

The Chapel of Romford is the moſt conſiderable; and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and [C] The inhabitants pay the great Tithes on Chriſtmaſs-day, and are treated with a bull and brawn. The Boar's head is wreſtled for: the Poor have the Scraps. The Leſſee of Horn-Church-hall under the College, is Richard Spencer Eſq;

St. Edward the Confeſſor (s). It is ſpacious, conſiſting of two paces of equal height, and a Chancel. The Tower is low; and in it are five Bells. For ſome ages Horn-Church was the only publick place of worſhip in the Liberty of Havering, to which the Inhabitants reſorted, and where they were buried. About the reign of K. Edw. II. [D], ſoon after 1323, a Chapel was erected at Romford. By this time we may ſuppoſe the number of people here increaſed, upon clearing great part of the Foreſt of the wood, and turning it to agriculture. And it was grown ſo conſiderable in 1247, as to obtain the privilege of a Market.

The old Chapel of Romford ſtood a quarter of a mile nearer to Horn-Church than the preſent; the Place bears ſtill the name of Old-Church (t), though no traces of the ſtructure are left. We may ſuppoſe the buildings of Romford to have ſtood thereabout, till upon making the preſent road the Inhabitants choſe to remove hither. The old Chapel being ruinous was taken down, and the preſent Chapel, 28 feet longer, and 14 broader, than the former (u), erected by compoſition between the College and the inhabitants, confirmed by the Biſhop of London. This inſtrument is recited by Mr. Newcourt, containing a Licence from the College for the People of Romford to have a Cemetery, and Sepulture; who till that time were forced to carry their dead to Horn-Church; though, as they alledged in their Petition to the Pope, they were five miles diſtant from that Church.

This, it ſeems, was not done by authority of the College or Biſhop, but of the Pope; for, in purſuance of the Petition juſt now mentioned, a Bull was obtained from Pope Alexander V, about the year 1407, granting leave to the Inhabitants of Romford to bury in the Church-yard of that place.

In the Compoſition, the Warden and Fellows of New College reſerved to themſelves and ſucceſſors for ever, all Tithes real and perſonal, offerings, obventions, fruits, and profits, and all other rights belonging to the mother Church of Horn-Church. With this proviſo, that if the inhabitants of Romford ſubtracted any, they ſhould be deprived of their right of Sepulture here, till they made amends. Moreover, the Warden and Fellows reſerved to themſelves the power of putting in, and removing the Chaplain.

This Chapel [E] belongs to the Temporary Vicar of Horn-Church, as he is ſtyled. He appoints and maintains a Chaplain to officiate here, to whom a dwelling-houſe belongs. The Vicar receives yearly from the poſſeſſor of the land, once the Royal Park, at Havering 5*l.* in lieu of a buck and doe, formerly received in kind. This is paid from that part which is in leaſe to Mr. Ladbroke.

Avery Corneborow, Eſquire of the Body to K. Henry VI. and Edward IV. founded a Chantry here, for one Prieſt to pray for his ſoul, and the ſouls of his friends, in the Chapel: And alſo to preach twice in the year at leaſt at South-Okingdon, Horn-Church, Dagenham, Berking, and South-Weld, beſides Romford: and to keep one Obit of 20 s. for the ſaid ſouls. The yearly value of it, at the ſuppreſſion, was 15 l.

Another Chantry was founded by divers perſons, to find a Prieſt called our Lady Prieſt, to ſay divine ſervice in this Chapel. The yearly value of the ſame amounted to 6 l. 7 s. 6 d. And in the Certificate it is ſaid, "The ſaid Town ys "a very great Towne, conteyning 20 myles in "compaſs, and having in yt by eſtimacon about "the number of 900 of houſeling people."

John Ongir the younger, gave by will, to the Chapel here, in caſe his daughter dyed without iſſue, an eſtate in this Town, out of which 5 marks to the brotherhood of our Lady, to pray for him, his brothers and ſiſters; 20 s. yearly to pore pepyll, and to foule ways &c. This eſtate was once Robert Darcy's, and afterwards John Marſhall's, before Ongir. —— J. Thoroughgood left it by will to —— William Jermin; who, about 1716, ſold it to —— Thomas Scawen Eſq; by whom it was conveyed again to —— Oneſiphorus Leige.

THE HUNDRED OF CHAFFORD

HATH on the Weſt the Liberty of Havering, from which it is parted by a Brook named Ingreburne: On the South it is bounded by the river Thames; and on the Eaſt by Barnſtaple Hundred; between which, and Havering, it runs into a point towards the North Weſt, where it joins a ſmall part of the Hundred of Ongar.

It is written in records Ceafford, Ceffeord, and Ceffeurd: The latter part of which name was undoubtedly taken from a Ford through Ingreburn, or ſome Ford through the other Brook that partly divides this Hundred from that of Barnſtaple, and diſcharges itſelf into Purfleet. There is ſuch a Saxon word as Caꝼ, ſwift, ſtrong; but whether the firſt part of the name is derived from that, or from Ceadda, otherwiſe Cedd, the famous Biſhop of the Eaſt-Saxons (w), quaſi, Cead's Ford; we ſubmit it to the Reader's judgment. In the pariſh of Berking, there is Chadwell-ſtreet, and Chadwell-Heath, undoubtedly ſo called from St. Cead, or as vulgarly ſtyled, Chad: that Biſhop having been in great repute, and ſainted, for bringing the Inhabitants of theſe parts again to Chriſtianity, after their apoſtaſy. He was the ſecond Biſhop of London; and preached much, and erected ſeveral Churches in this County, and neighbourhood, particularly at Tilbury (x).

The Length of this Hundred from north to ſouth is thirteen miles; and the Width from weſt to eaſt ſeven miles where wideſt; but in the northern extremity, about South-Weald, it is not above two miles and a quarter wide.

'Tis in the diſpoſal of the High-Sheriff for the time being [F].

With regard to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, it is in the Archdeaconry of Eſſex.

There are within this Hundred fourteen Pariſhes, which I treat of in the following order.

Alveley.
Wenington.
Rainham.
Thurrock-Weſt.
. . . . Greys.
Stifford.
S. Okendon.
North Okendon.
Cranham.
Upminſter.
Great Warley.
Little Warley.
Childer-ditch.
South-Weald.

1. ALVELEY.

The name of this Pariſh is written in records theſe other various ways; Avele; Alvithley; Alvethele; Alvi, and Alvy-thele; Alviela; Alumeleye; Anvelers, and Anveliers; Auvelers: which makes it difficult to account for the true derivation.

Moſt of the Names of Pariſhes in this County being of Saxon original, ſo is undoubtedly this. The termination ley is well known to ſignify a paſture ground. And the firſt ſyllable might be formed from Ælꝼ, an Elf, or Fairy: or from Alvid, a Saxon Freewoman, which had other lands in this neighbourhood (y). It doth not appear that hyð [i. e. harbour] at any time made part of the name. And to derive it from Alveus, a creek, and make this name a compound of Latin and Saxon (z), is too far-fetched, not to ſay ill-grounded.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the lands in this pariſh belonged to Suene; to five Freemen, named Ulſi; Edward; Godmann; Uluuin; Ulſtan: and to five other Freemen, whoſe names are not ſpecified. At the time of the general Survey, they were held by John ſon of Waleram; Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux; William of Wa-

[F] The perquiſites of it, one may imagine, were formerly very conſiderable; as appears by the following record, wherein John Carbonel, Sheriff in 1292, lett one half-year's profits of it to Edmund Columbers, for the ſum of 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. equal then to what would amount now to 70 l. at leaſt. ruen; Suene, and his under-tenant Leuuin; and by Anſgar the Cook.

They were divided afterwards into theſe four Maners. 1. The Maner of Alveley. 2. The Maner of Belhouſe. 3. and 4. And thoſe of Bumpſted, and Bretts.

1. The Maner of ALVELEY.

The manſion houſe is entirely demoliſhed. It ſtood in a little field, of about two acres, adjoyning to the ſouth-eaſt corner of the Church-yard. This field, or cloſe, is ſtill ſurrounded with a moat; which, though more or leſs grown up, plainly appears all round the cloſe, and in ſome parts is ſtill of a conſiderable width, and full of water. The ſituation is dry and pleaſant, the ground falling gently to the ſouth, with an agreeable proſpect to the diſtant Kentiſh-hills. This eſtate is part of what the Son of Waleram poſſeſſed at the Survey [G].

In the reigns of K. Henry II. and K. John, Gilbert de Tany, or Tani, held it, of the King, under the name of Anvilers, as part of his Barony [H], by the ſervice of ſix knights fees (a) [I]. [Concerning the Tany Family, ſee above, p. 79. and under Stapleford-Tany.]

Afterwards, it was for ſeveral years in Families ſurnamed de Breanſun or Brianſon, Bradeſton, and De la Pole.

It came by marriage into the Brianſon Family [K]. For, Bartholomew de Brianzon, who dyed in 1287, is recorded to have held, as part of the inheritance of his wife Johanna, this maner of Auuelers, as it is there ſtyled, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. [See above, p. 113.] His ſon and heir—— William (b) held, by the ſame ſervice, this maner of Alumeleye; and dying in 1310, was ſucceeded by his brother——John: who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1315, held the maner of Alvethele, with the maners of Fyſhide, Terling-hall, Leighe, Weſt-Thurrock, Thorndon, &c. (c). His ſon and ſucceſſor —— Sir John Brianzon, held, jointly with his wife Margaret, this maner of Avythele of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; beſides a parcel holden of William de Bumſted; and another parcel, of the heirs of Thomas Wyche, ſen. the former, by the ſervice of one pound of pepper, and the latter, of 20d. per ann. He dyed in 1337 (d).——Joanna, his daughter and heir, held two parts of the maner of Alvythele, of the King, as of the Crown; and alſo two parts of Weſt-Thurrock maner. She dyed in 1339. It is not ſaid who was her next heir, only that the remainder, or reverſion (of W. Thurrock we ſuppoſe) was in William de Wanton (e).

Alveley Maner was next in the Bradeſton Family. Thomas de Bradeſton, who had ſummons to Parliament from 1342 to 1360, and departed this life in Auguſt 1360, held this maner of Alvythele, with the Advowſon of a Chapel here, of the King by the ſame ſervice as his predeceſſors. Thomas was his ſon (f). Agnes, his widow, enjoyed the third part of this maner in dower, till her deceaſe in 1369; and her next heir was——Thomas, ſon of Robert, and grandſon of her ſaid huſband (g). He enjoyed this whole maner, with the advowſon of a Chapel here; and dyed in 1374, leaving his only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth Bradeſton (h): The time of her death is not mentioned. She was married to Sir Walter De la Pole, who held this maner of Alvythele by the law, or courteſy, of England, at the time of his deceaſe in 1433, as part of the inheritance of his late wife Elizabeth, of the King in capite by knight's ſervice; remainder, or reverſion, to

Edmund Ingleſthorp, couſin and heir of the ſaid Elizabeth (i).—Johanna Ingaldſthorpe, moſt probably his daughter, dyed 21 June 1495. But ſhe is not recorded to have had any thing more in this pariſh, than the Advowſon of the free Chapel in Alveley, then valued at 16l. She held alſo the maners of Hokeley, and Overhall near Berklowe. Theſe two laſt had belonged to John Tiptoft Earl of Worceſter, who dyed in 1469. The heirs of the ſaid Johanna, were, the grandſon, and the four daughters, of Iſabell, her only Daughter and heir; viz. 1. John Stonor, ſon of Anne, one of the daughters; and the four other daughters, of the ſame Iſabell; 2. Elizabeth, married firſt to Thomas

[I] Quære, if not a miſtake here? ſix knights fees ſeem too great a ſervice for the ſingle Maner of Alveley, though it might then include Belhouſe, Bumſted, and Bretts.

[K] Bartholomew de Brianſon is one of the ſubſcribing witneſſes, together with other then inhabitants of this pariſh, to ſeveral antient Deeds in the poſſeſſion of the Rt. Honorable the Lord Dacre: From whence it ſeems very probable, that the Brianſon Family about that time reſided here. And that they had a Capital Manſion in this place, appears, not only from the aſſignment of the Dower of Margaret widow of John Brianſon, in 1319, wherein mention is made of . . . 'Capitale Meſſuagium dicti Manerii'. . . . But alſo from the Inquiſition taken after the death of Thomas de Bradeſton, in 1369, where we find theſe words. . . . 'in quo quidem 'Manerio. [viz. Alveley] eſt unum capitale Meſſuagium, 'quod nihil valet per annum ultra ſuſtentationem domorum '&c. Item eſt ibidem quedam Paſtura annexa Manerio 'predicto et inclus' pro feris continent' xxx acr' que nihil 'valet ultra ſuſtentationem ferarum.'—— xxx ſeems to be a miſtake for ccc, it being hardly credible that they ſhould be ſo few as Thirty, whether the incloſure was for a Park or a Warren.

Le Scrope, and afterwards to Sir Henry Wentworth; 3. Margaret, wife of Sir John Mortimer; 4. Iſabell, wife of Sir William Hodilſton; and 5. Lucy, wife of Sir Thomas Fitz-William (k).

Alured Rawſon, citizen of London; and merchant of the Staple at Calais, was lord of this maner in 1509 (l).——Nicolas Rawſon, his ſon, left one daughter and heir, named Anne, who was married to Sir Michael Stanhope (m); anceſtor of the Lord Cheſterfield. He was involved in the unhappy fate of Edward Duke of Somerſet, the Protector; who had married his ſiſter. Anne, his widow, long ſurvived him, to the great advantage of the Stanhope family, for ſhe took very great care of her childrens education and fortune.

How it came afterwards to the Crown doth not appear. But it was made part of the Endowment of the Hoſpital of the Savoy in London, founded about 1505, by K. Henry VII. William Holgyll, Maſter of ths Hoſpital, granted it to John Martin, citizen and bocher of London.

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Edward VI. granted to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, this maner of Alvithley, among others, to hold in ſocage (n). It belongs to them as Governors of St. Thomas's Hoſpital.

The Maner of BELHOUSE,

The ancient Seat belonging to this Maner, is ſituated in a Park, of about three miles in circumference; well adorned with old Oaks, and various other kinds of Trees.

Here was formerly a Heronry, which, being a thing not commonly to be met with, was eſteemed a circumſtance of no ſmall conſequence while the diverſion of Hawking was in faſhion: But of late years not thought to ballance the inconveniences attending it, and the Herons therefore not ſuffered to build longer.

This eſtate took its name from the Belhouſe Family [L], which flouriſhed in the reigns of K. John, and K. Henry III. and was originally of Cambridgeſhire. Richard de Belhus had a confirmation from K. John, in 1200, of all the lands which Reinfred de Bruer held in Ramſden; from him and his ſucceſſors denominated Belhouſe (o). His ſon,——Sir Theobald de Belhus, had two ſons, Sir Richard, and Sir Thomas. ——Sir Richard, the eldeſt ſon and heir, having only one daughter, Alice, married to Sir Nicolas Barrington, gave in 1283, the maner of Ramſden, to his brother Sir Thomas; who had acquired, in 1274, of John de Burgh, ſon to Hubert Earl of Kent, the maner of Stanway [ſee in the other Volume, p. 190.] which afterwards became the principal ſeat of the Family; and where the Maner-houſe ſtill bears the name of Belhouſe. He had alſo Newington-maner in Kent, ſince called Newington-Belhus. This Sir Thomas was Sheriff of Cambridgeſhire from 1282, to 1289. and made by K. Edward I. Seneſhal of Ponthieu, a province which that King had acquired in right of his Queen. By Floria, or Florentia, his wife, he had three ſons, John, his ſucceſſor at Stanway, who received the Order of Knigthood in that ſolemn inſtallation made by K. Edw. I. [M]. Nicolas; and William.

NICOLAS de Belhous, the ſecond ſon, ſeated himſelf at Alveley. He is buried in the Chancel of this Church, under an ancient Tombſtone; the legend torn off but which by the Arms of the Wife appears to have been for him, and not for his ſon, or grandſon. By his wife . . . Odingſel [N], he had——Thomas his ſon; who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Richard de Nortone, of Alveley. He had with her a conſiderable eſtate in this pariſh and the adjoyning ones; and moſt probably this very Maner, ſince called Belhous: for in ſome old deeds and court-rolls 'tis called Nortons alias Belhous. By a deed dated in 1389, he granted to certain feoffees the maner of Bumſted, and other lands in Alveley and Upminſter, in truſt to convey them to the Abbey of Stratford Langthorne; which they accordingly did. He departed this life about the latter end of K. Richard the Second's reign, leaving his ſon and heir, John, and two daughters, Alice, and Iſolda. ——John, the ſon, dying without iſſue, was buried in the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn, to which his Father had been ſo great a benefactor. Upon his deceaſe, his two ſiſters and coheirs made, in 1397, a Partition of his Inheritance, not only of the Lands but alſo of the Manſion houſe of Belhous [O]. Alice, the eldeſt, was married to John Barrett Eſq; and Iſolda, firſt, to Gilbert att Lee, by whom it doth not appear ſhe had any iſſue; and ſecondly to Walter Serjant.

John Barrett Eſq; upon his becoming thus poſſeſſed of a purparty of this eſtate, came and reſided at Belhouſe. Till that time the Barrett Family lived at Hawkhurſt in Kent, where they had been ſettled for ſeveral generations: and 'tis probable came into England with William the Conqueror, the name being in the Roll of Battle-Abbey. They might poſſibly be a branch of the Barretts of Perry-Court in Preſton within the Hundred of Feverſham; ſtyled by Philipot a good old Family (p); that long made a conſiderable figure there: the laſt Male whereof was Valentine Barrett, who dyed in 1440, and is buried in Lanharn Church.——John Barrett Eſq; aforementioned had, by Alice his wife, ——Thomas, his ſon and heir, who married Matilda, daughter of John Pointz of North-Okendon, [ſee under that pariſh.] He was dead before the year 1441 [P].——Robert Barrett Eſq; his eldeſt ſon, in 1548 purchaſed his couſin Walter Serjant's moiety of the maner of Nortons, alias Belhous, and became ſole Lord thereof. His firſt wife was Margaret Chichley, a relation of Archbiſhop Chichley, by whom he had no iſſue. But by his ſecond wife, Margery, daughter of Knolles, probably of the ſame Family as the Lords Knolles, her Arms appearing to be the ſame as theirs [Q], which ſurvived him, he had——John, who applying himſelf to the ſtudy of the Law became eminent in that profeſſion, and is celebrated by J. Leland for his eloquence (q). He married four wives. 1. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Rchard Braytoft [R], by whom he had, George; and Thomas, that became a Prieſt. 2. Philippa, daughter of John Harpsfeild, and relict of Thomas Dineley, and by her he had ſix daughters: viz. Cecily, wife of William Culpepper; Muriel, married to John Champneys; Anne, to Martin Boice; and Joyce to Sir James Wilford; all Gentlemen of the firſt rank in the County of Kent; Margaret wife of Walter Crompton; and Bridget. 3. His third wife, was Margaret daughter of Henry Norris of Yattenden in Berkſhire, (by Fridſwilda his wife ſiſter and heir of Francis Viſcount Lovel) ſiſter of Henry Norris Eſq; beheaded in 1536, and aunt of Henry Lord Norris (r): whether he had any children by her is uncertain; any more than by his 4th wife, whoſe name was Mary [S], and whom he amply provides for, in his Will dated in 1525. By that it appears, he had rebuilt the old Seat at Belhouſe, and much encreaſed his eſtate by many purchaſes in the neighbourhood [T]. He departed this life 4 October 1526 (s). George Barrett, his eldeſt ſon by Elizabeth Braytoft, dyed in his life time; having taken to wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Dineley of Stanford-Dineley in Berkſhire (by Philippa Harpsfeild above-mentioned.) This Elizabeth brought with her a very conſiderable eſtate in Berkſhire and Hampſhire; being deſcended by heirs female from the old Barons Fitz-Herbert, and from Milo Earl of Hereford, whoſe Arms with thoſe of ſeveral other illuſtrious Families ſhe quartered. She ſurvived her huſband George Barrett, and married afterwards Sir John Baker of Siſſenhert in Kent. By her, George Barrett Eſq; had three ſons, Edward, Arthur, and Robert, which two laſt do not appear to have left any iſſue; and a daughter married to ——Kelway.——Edward, the eldeſt ſon, born in 1521 (t), upon his grandfather's death ſucceeded to this and other his eſtates. He was High-Sheriff of Eſſex in 1571, and dyed in 1586 (u). He married, firſt Catharine, daughter of Alexander Culpepper, but whether he had any children by her does not appear. His ſecond wife was, Anne only daughter of Sir George Somerſet, third ſon of Charles Earl of Worceſter: By her he had Charles; Edward, who dyed without iſſue; and Margaret, wife of Sir Humfrey Foſter of Aldermaſton. His third wife was Elizabeth, ſecond daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Lytton of Knebworth [U], by whom he had Anne, married to Thomas Corbet

[P] Weever in his Funeral Monuments has made a miſtake concerning this Thomas, whom he ſuppoſes to be the ſame Thomas Barrett that was Eſquire to K: Henry the 6th and killed in an inſurrection of the mob Ao. 1461, whereas it is plain from an antient deed bearing date 20 years before that he was then Dead.

Soon after his coming of age, which was in 1601, he ſet out on his travels, as appears by a letter of attorney he left with his mother, and Sir John Leveſon of Halling in Kent to whom ſhe was remarried. He was at Florence in 1606; and before that had been in Spain [W]. K. James I. knighted him; and, in 1618, granted him a Charter of Free-warren in his maner of Belhouſe &c. about which time he made the Park. In the beginning of the year 1625 he was appointed Embaſſador to France [X]: but it doth not appear that he went thither. The 17th of October 1627, he was created Baron Newburgh of Fife in Scotland (x); and 20 July 1628 was ſworn Privy Counſellor to K. Charles I. The 20th of Auguſt following he took his ſeat as Chancellor of the Exchequer. Afterwards he was appointed Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, which he enjoyed as long as he lived. Upon Biſhop Juxon's reſigning the ſtaff of Lord Treaſurer, that office was put into the hands of the Lord Newburgh, with four other of the chief Officers of the Crown. He was a man of a very amiable and reſpectable character, and lived with great hoſpitality, as the authors who wrote in thoſe days do teſtify. By his firſt wife, Jane daughter of Sir Edward Carey, Maſter of the Jewel-Office, he had one daughter, Catharine, that dyed an infant. His ſecond wife was Catharine daughter of Hugh Fenn of Wotton under Edge in Glouceſterſhire, widow of Hugh Perry Alderman of London, by whom he had no iſſue. She ſurvived him. He dyed at Belhouſe in 1644, and was buried 2 January 1644-5, in Alveley Church, with his anceſtors [Y]. By his laſt will, dated 17 March 1643, and written with his own hand, he left this his Maner of Belhouſe, with all the reſt of his eſtates in Eſſex, to his couſin

Richard Lennard Eſq; on condition he took the name of Barrett; and, at the ſame time, bequeathed to him his Creſt, being a Hydra proper on a wreath argent and gules; and his paternal Arms, viz. Parti per pale, Barry of four, counterchanged argent and gules, and the other Coats he, the ſaid Lord, had a right to quarter [Z]. . . . This Richard Lennard was ſon of Richard Lord Dacre by Dorothy his ſecond wife, daughter of Dudley Lord North, and was allied to Lord Newburgh, by his grandmother Cecily Lady Dacre, daughter of Sir Richard Baker: which Cecily and Lord Newburgh's father were couſin germans, her grandfather, Sir John Baker, having married Elizabeth, widow of George Barrett, as above-mentioned.——The Lennard Family had been long ſettled at Chevening in Kent, at leaſt as early as the time of K. Henry VI. and the title of Dacre came into it in Qu. Elizabeth's reign, when Sampſon Lennard, ſon and heir of John Lennard Eſqr. Sheriff of Kent in 1571, married Margaret Fynes, ſiſter of Gregory Fynes Lord Dacre; and, upon his death in 1589, ſole heireſs to his eſtates and Barony: which Honor Sir Richard Fynes of Herſt Monceaux in Suſſex, her progenitor, got in the time of K. Henry VI. by his marriage with the Lady Joan Dacre grandaughter and heir of Thomas Dacre Lord Dacre. This Family of Dacre was one of the moſt illuſtrious in the North of England, where they had great poſſeſſions in the Counties of Cumberland, Weſtmoreland, and York; particularly in the former, where they had their principal ſeat. . . . Sampſon Lennard aforeſaid had, by Margaret Lady Dacre his wife, Henry Lennard their eldeſt ſon and heir; who, upon his mother's death in 1611, became Lord Dacre. He married Cecily, daughter of Sir Richard Baker of Siſſenherſt in Kent, by whom he had Richard, his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor: who took to his firſt wife Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Arthur Throckmorton of Paulers Perry in Northamptonſhire, eldeſt ſon of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, by Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Nic: Carew Knight of the Garter, in the time of K. Henry VIII. and had by her Francis his eldeſt ſon, and three others who left no iſſue. His ſecond wife was Dorothy, daughter of Dudley Lord North; and by her he had Catharine, wife of Chaloner Chute of the Vine in Hampſhire, and one ſon, Richard Lennard, who, as we have already obſerved, was by Lord Newburgh's will made heir to this Maner of Belhouſe.

As to the eldeſt ſon, Francis Lennard Eſq; On the death of his Father in 1630 he became Lord Dacre. And having married Elizabeth, daughter, and at length coheir, of Paul Viſcount Banning, he had by her, Thomas; Francis, who dyed a batchelor; and Henry who left three daughters, Philadelphia, wife of Daniel Obrien, Viſcount Clare; Elizabeth, wife of John Earl of Meath; and Margaret. This Francis Lord Dacre dyed in 1662.——Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir, was advanced to the title of Earl of Suſſex 5 October 1674. He married the Lady Anne Palmer, alias Fitz-Roy, daughter of Barbara Dutcheſs of Cleveland, born before ſhe and Roger Palmer Earl of Caſtlemain her huſband were ſeparated; but acknowledged by K. Charles II. as his natural Daughter, who aſſigned her the Royal Arms with the Batoon ſiniſter. This Earl, though poſſeſſed of many amiable qualities, yet by indulging himſelf in the levities of the Court, where he was one of the Lords of the Bed-Chamber; by deep play; and by other acts of imprudence; very much hurt his eſtate; a great part of which he ſold at different times, particularly his noble Seat at Hurſt-Monceaux in Suſſex. He dyed in 1715, at Chevening in Kent; leaving by Anne his wife two Daughters, his heirs, Lady Barbara, who married Charles Skelton, a Lieutenant General in the French ſervice; Grand Croix and Commandeur of the order of St. Louis [A]. She dyed in 1741, without iſſue. Lady Anne, the other daughter and coheir, was married three times. Her firſt huſband was her couſin Richard-Barrett Lennard; whom we ſhall more particularly mention preſently. By her ſecond huſband, Henry Roper Lord Teynham, (to whom ſhe was third wife) ſhe had two ſons, Charles; Henry; and a daughter, Anne. And by her third huſband, the Hon. Robert More, a younger ſon of Henry Earl of Drogheda, ſhe had one ſon, Henry. Upon her ſiſter's deceaſe without iſſue in 1741, She became ſole heir to her Father, and as ſuch Baroneſs Dacre.

To return to Richard Lennard above-mentioned, whom the Lord Newburgh by will conſtituted his heir; In purſuance of that will he took the Name and Arms of Barrett, and was Sheriff of Eſſex in 1679. He married Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Loftus, Kt. eldeſt ſon of Adam Viſcount Loftus, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and had with her the maner of Clones in that kingdom, which ſhe inherited from her mother, the eldeſt daughter and coheir of Sir Francis Ruſhe Kt. one of the Privy Council there. This Richard dyed at Belhouſe in 1696, having had, by the ſaid Anne his wife, two ſons, Dacre; Richard, who dyed a batchelor, being killed by a fall from his horſe in the Park at Belhouſe; and two daughters, Anne wife of Carew Mildmay of Marks in Eſſex, and Dorothy, who dyed ſingle.——Dacre-Barrett Lennard, Eſq; the ſurviving ſon, ſucceeding his father, married firſt the Lady Jane, daughter of Arthur Chicheſter, the ſecond Earl of Donegal, by whom he had one ſon, Richard; and three daughters, 1. Jane, married in 1730 to John Ranby, Eſq; Chief Chirurgeon to his Majeſty, by whom ſhe had no iſſue, 2. Dorothy, wife of Hugh Smith of South Weald-hall Eſq; who had by her two daughters, his coheirs, Dorothy, late wife of the Hon. John-Smith Barry a ſon of the late Earl of Barrymore; and Lucy, late wife of James Lord Strange, eldeſt ſon of Edward Earl of Derby. 3. Henrietta dyed ſingle. The ſecond wife of Dacre-Barrett Lennard Eſq; was Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Thomas Moore Eſq; and by her he had a ſon who dyed an infant; and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to William Sloan Eſq; nephew of the late Sir Hans Sloane, but dyed without iſſue. His third wife was Sarah, daughter of Sir Capel Luckyn of Meſſinghall, widow of Richard Saltonſtal of Groves in this County, by whom he had Catharine, wife of Sir Philip Hall of Upton Kt. Dacre-Barrett Lennard Eſq; was Sheriff of Eſſex in 1705, and dyed at Belhouſe in 1724. . . . Richard, his ſon by his firſt wife the Lady Jane Chicheſter, was dead about eight years before him. He married his couſin the Lady Anne Lennard, as mentioned above, but lived only ſix months after his marriage, leaving the Lady Anne his wife with Child of a Son, born in April 1717, and named —— Thomas; which Thomas Barrett Lennard Eſq; upon his grandfather's death ſucceeded him in this Maner of Belhouſe, and the reſt of his eſtates: As he did the Lady Anne his mother in the Barony of Dacre, upon her deceaſe in 1755; and accordingly took his ſeat that year in the Houſe of Lords. His Lordſhip married Anna-Maria daughter of Sir John Pratt Kt. Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench, and Siſter of the Right Hon. Charles Lord Camden, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, by whom he had one Daughter, Anna-Barbara, who dyed of a violent fever, 14 March 1749, in the tenth year of her age.

3. The Maner of BUMPSTED, alias NEW PLACE.

is ſuppoſed to be what belonged in the Confeſſor's reign to Edward, and Godmann; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo Biſhop of Bayeux, and Anſgar the Cook [C].

The manſion houſe is entirely demoliſhed. It ſtood on the northern edge of Lord Dacre's Park, about a good mile north-eaſt from Alveley-Church; and was moated round.

This Maner did anciently belong to a Family ſurnamed de Bumpſted, from whom it took the name it hath borne ever ſince. In a deed without date in the poſſeſſion of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Dacre, Matthew, ſon of . . . de Bumſted-Steple, grants to his Son, G. . . . de Bumſted all his lands, rents, and ſervices in Alvithley, as well of freemen as villans, to hold by the annual delivery of a roſe. To this deed Bartholomew de Breanſun, John le Bret, William Baudwin, &c. are witneſſes. In another deed, the ſaid Matthew, ſtyling himſelf of Bumſted ad Turrim, makes over all his lands, rents, &c. in Alvithley to his forementioned ſon G. . . . and his heirs, by which it ſhould ſeem he was a younger ſon. ——Sir William de Bumſted, and —— William his ſon, in the reigns of K. Edward I. II. and III. had alſo lands in Alvethley [D]. The latter, in 1341, granted a meſſuage, mill, lands, rents, and ſervices in Avely, to Nicolas Taunton, or Staunton, clerk. And, in 1348, Robert, ſon of the late Sir William de Bumſted, granted his meſſuage, lands, &c. in Alvithley, to —— Henry de Dutton; who conveyedthem to——William Chidle; and the latter granted them to——Sir John de Staunton.—In 1372, Thomas de Staunton held, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, this fourth part of a fee called Bumpſted hall (y) [E]. The ſame year——Ralph, ſon of Sir John de Staunton of Reinham, granted all the meſſuage, lands, &c. called Bumſted, in Alvithley, to

John Byrch, and John Seward; who, in 1373, granted them to

Samuel Gryce, and others. And theſe conveyed the premiſſes, in 1375, to

Thomas Belhous Eſq; Some years after, He veſted them in Thomas Moraunt, citizen and fiſhmonger of London, John Stodey, William Alkham, William Copto, John Verdon, and other truſtees; to the intent, that after his deceaſe they ſhould make them over to the Abbot and Convent of Stratford Langthorn. Accordingly they obtained, in 1400, licenſe to give to that Abbey, 1 meſſuage, 1 toft, 300 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, & 32 s. rent in Alvythele, and Upmynſtre, being this maner of Bumſted; and in the 2d. of K. Henry IV, ſettled it in purſuance of their truſt.

After the ſuppreſſion of religious Houſes, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1540, to Edward North Eſq; Treaſurer of the Court of Augmentation, afterwards Lord North. And He, 28 May 1541, ſold it to Edward Barrett Eſq; by which means it returned again into the poſſeſſion of the heirs of Thomas Belhouſe Eſq; who had given it to Stratford-Abbey. It hath deſcended, like the reſt of the eſtates in this pariſh, to the Rt. Honble. the Lord Dacre.

Brooklands, a reputed Maner, adjoyning to that of Bumpſted, was purchaſed in 1390, of Robert Roydone by Thomas Belhouſe Eſq; and by his direction conveyed, with the other, to Stratford-Abbey. Ever ſince which it hath gone along with Bumpſted-Maner.

4. The Maner of BRETTS,

The manſion houſe is about a mile north weſt from the Church, within ſight of the road leading from Alveley to Romford. It is large, encompaſſed with a wide moat of clear water; and though long ſince converted into a farm houſe, retains ſigns of its having been once a Gentleman's ſeat. Charles Barrett Eſq; father of the Lord Newburgh, lived in it. The lower ſtory is of brick, with very ancient Gothic windows: the reſt is of plaiſter, or rough caſt.

Kelitun is ſuppoſed to have been the ancient name of this eſtate; of which one Ulſtan had a part, and Five Freemen the reſt, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey, Suein and his under-tenant Leuuin, and William de Warenn, were the poſſeſſors [F].

A part of it took the name of Bretts from its ancient owners the Family of le Bret, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 556. 559. The other part retained its original name as low as the year 1395. For, in a grant of that date, in the Rt. Hon. the Lord Dacre's poſſeſſion, from John Chapman to William Warle, of a houſe and ten acres of land in Alveley; they are deſcribed as lying between the land of Kelington ſouth, and the land of Bretts, north.

This Maner, on account of having belonged to Suein, and to William de Warenn, was afterwards holden of the Honor of Raley, and of the Fee of Earl de Warenn, as appears by the Inquiſitions poſt mortem. From which alſo we have this further account of the Bret family.

Hugh le Bret, who dyed in 1266, held in this town of Anveliers 1 meſſuage in ca. of the King as of the Barony of Releigh, and 19 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, and 29s. rent of aſſiſe, of the Honor of Releigh, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee [G]. He held alſo of the fee of Earl de Warenn, 5s. 6d. by the ſervice of the twelfth part of a knight's fee: And of the fee of the Earl of Mandeville, 90 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow and paſture, and 3s. 6d. rent.——John, his ſon (z), at the time of his deceaſe in 1297, or 1298, held in Anvelers, 1 meſſuage, 90 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 8 of paſture, and 2 s. ob. rent, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reylie: And of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford, 80 acres of arable, 2 acr. of paſture, 2 s. rent of aſſiſe: Of Earl Warenn, the ſame as his father: And of John de Brianzon 50 acres of arable, and 2 of paſture.——Simon was his ſon (a). We do not find when he dyed.——Thomas le Brett, moſt probably his ſon, held in this pariſh 1 meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 8 of paſture, 2 of meadow, and 5s. 5d. rent of aſſiſe, of the King in ca. as of the Honor of Reyley; and 20 acres of the Earl of Hereford, by the ſervice of 1 d. ob. per ann. He departed this life in 1329. And Joane his widow had an aſſignation of her dower out of this maner (b).

Elizabeth, their only daughter, and heir (c), brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband Henry Baudwin of South Okendon, probably younger brother of William Baudwin of North Okendon.

In 1342, Robert Bolington was poſſeſſed of part of this eſtate. And in 1349, his ſon——John de Bolington, granted to Henry Dutton, in truſt, the meſſuage and lands he had in Alvethley, of the gift and grant of Elizabeth wife of Henry Baudwin. In 1375, he ſettled in truſtees all his lands and tenements called Le Bretts in Alvethley [H]. He dyed about 1395, leaving

Joanna, his daughter and heir, under age; whom John Loughton, Clerk, took, and ſold her marriage to William Sautree, to the damage of the King, who had a right to diſpoſe of her in marriage (d). This William Sautre Eſq; was poſſeſſed of Le Bryttes place in 1404 (e).——John Sautree, his ſon and heir, was living in 1424. And, in 1446, he paſſed away this maner to

Richard Andrew, clerk, the King's Secretary, afterwards Dean of York (f) [I]. In 1462, he ſold this eſtate to

Richard Selye, alias Cely, merchant of the Staple at Calais: who dyed 5 June 1494, holding the maner of Bretts; and divers lands and tenements ſo named in this pariſh; of the Lady de Ingleſthorpe. He left three daughters coheirs, Margaret aged 4 years, Iſabell, three; and Barbara half a year old (g). The eldeſt was married to John Kettleby Eſq; and Iſabella, firſt to Robert Warham, Gent. afterwards to Antony Cook of Alveley Gent. By the death of the two others without iſſue, or by purchaſing their ſhares, Iſabella became poſſeſſed of the whole. In 1531, ſhe, and her huſband Cook conveyed it to

John Baker, Recorder of London, afterwards knighted, and made a Privy Counſellor, and Chancellor of the Exchequer. He married Elizabeth, widow of George Barrett Eſq; abovementioned: They two jointly, in 1554, ſettled the reverſion of this Maner, after their deceaſe, on Edward Barrett Eſq; ſon of the aforeſaid Elizabeth by her firſt huſband George Barrett Eſq;

From him it hath deſcended to the Right Honorable the Lord Dacre.

The Part of KELITON formerly holden by Suein, is a large Farm belonging to the Lord Dacre, known at preſent by the name of Kennington. The poſſeſſors of it after Suein are unknown till the reign of K. Edward III; when it was in the Gernet family, owners of Wenyngton-maner, and mentioned in the other Volume, p. 456. Sir Henry Gernet, who dyed in 1345, held, jointly with his wife Joanna, one meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 15 acres of meadow, and 6 s. 8 d. rent in Alvethele, of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the ſervice of 30 s. per ann. [Which quit-rent is ſtill paid to the Crown, and was undoubtedly given to that Priory by the Founder Robert ſon of Suein.] Gernet held alſo here, 60 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, and 15 of paſture, of Thomas de Bradeſton, by homage, and ſcutage when it happened to be levied, and 6 d. per ann. And, in this pariſh and Reynham, of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, 20 acres of arable, and 6 s. 8 d. rent, by the yearly ſervice of 10 s. —— Maud, and Margaret, were his daughters and heirs (h).

William Truſſell, who dyed in 1480, held this maner of Kenyngton, of the Prior and Convent of Prittlewell, by ſocage, and rent of 30 s. per ann. as well as that of Wenyngton (i).—— Sir Edward Truſſell his ſon held the ſame, and dying 10 June 1499, was ſucceeded by his ſon ——John Truſſell Eſq; He departed this life 20 Decemb. the ſame year.

Elizabeth, his ſiſter and heir then 10 years old (k), was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford, and brought this eſtate into that noble Family.——Edward, the 17th Earl, ſold the maners of Kennington and Wennington to

William Ayloffe Eſq; who dyed poſſeſſed of both of them, in 1585. [See under Bretons in Horn-Church.] His ſon——William, afterwards created a Baronet, ſucceeded him (l): whoſe ſon —— Sir Benjamin Ayloffe Bart. alienated them to Edward Barrett, Lord Newburgh. And from him it hath paſſed to the preſent poſſeſſor, the Lord Dacre.

The ancient Family of De Plaiz, had 4 fees in this pariſh of Alnemyele, or Alvedele, and in Wennington, Reynham, and Wedyton, in the reign of K. Edward III. which Robert, and Gilbert le Veyſe, the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, and Sir Thomas Charvil, held under them (m). What the Priors of St. John held in this pariſh, is now called More-hall, and was part of the eſtate of the late Sir John Croſs Bart.

It ſeems to have been given the Priors aforeſaid by William de Chiſhull, John le Emmeſie, and Mr. Elias de Anvelers; for in 1285 they ſued for a writ ad quod damnum to give them 3 meſſuages, 2 carucates and a half of land, in Anvelers, and Wenynton; which were of the fee of the ſaid Priors and Hoſpital, and holden of the ſame, in capite (n).

The Lord Newburgh erected an Alms houſe in this pariſh on the front of which was fixed this inſcription, Donum Dei, 1639. It being grown quite ruinous, was taken down in 1745, and a leſſer one built out of the old materials by the Lord Dacre, and the original inſcription put again on the front.

In 1639, Thomas Clear gave three pounds yearly for ever to the Poor of this pariſh, to be diſtributed in bread.

Alveley, was formerly a Market-Town, as appears from ſeveral ancient deeds (o).

The High-Road which runs through this pariſh, was anciently called Bredle-ſtreet (p); and from the latter part of the name very probably was a Road in the Romans time, eſpecially as there could not be a better way than this from the Havering quarter of the County to the Thames.

The Soil in Belhouſe Park is dry and clean, being gravel; which yet is not unfertile. In the reſt of the Pariſh the ſoil is much the ſame; Except that in the ſouthern part of it 'tis rather poorer: But here they have ſome Chalk-pits, which afford good manure for the Country adjoyning.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, conſiſts of a middle pace and north and ſouth ailes, leaded: The Chancel hath a north Chapel, or Veſtry, alſo leaded. At the weſt end there is a ſquare Tower of flint and ſtone, containing 5 Bells. Formerly there ſtood upon it a lofty Spire, ſhingled, but it was blown down during the great ſtorm of wind in November 1703.

This Church was at firſt a Rectory, and a Sine Cure, in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of Leſnes in Kent, till 1327, when the firſt Vicar was admitted at the preſentation of the then Rector. But here was no Vicarage endowed till the year 1330; when, at the petition of the Convent of Leſnes, Stephen de Graveſend, Biſhop of London, appropriated the great Tithes to them, and endowed a Vicarage, reſerving the Collation to himſelf and his Succeſſors for ever, in whom it hath continued ever ſince.

The Rectory and great Tithes remained in the ſaid Abbey till the general ſuppreſſion. On the 20th of January 1525, K. Henry VIII. made a grant of them to Cardinal Wolſey: upon whoſe præmunire they coming again to the King, he granted the ſame, in 1535, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their ſucceſſors. And Lord Dacre now holds them by Leaſe under the ſaid Dean and Chapter.

Near the Maner houſe of Alveley formerly ſtood a Chapel endowed, called the Chapel de la Lee, of which mention is made in records (q) [K].

[K] Whether this Chapel was at a diſtance from, or adjoining to, the pariſh Church, we are not certain. But by ſome paſſages in a record communicated by Lord Dacre, it ſeems to have been at ſome diſtance; ſince there is mention in it, of placia vocata la Lee,—paſtura de la Lee—la Lee hatch—& terra Capellani de la Lee. Moſt probably it was founded by, and took its name from, Adam de Legh, who married Maud, one of the heirs of Gilbert de Tani, Lord of Aveley maner, as above mentioned. See Clauſ. 13 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 30. dorſo. and Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. I. p. 509 Or elſe from John at Lee, who had married one of the daughters and coheirs of Thomas Belhouſe.

2. WENINGTON.

This pariſh lies weſt of Alveley, having Rainham on the north, and Ingreburn and the river Thames on the weſt and ſouth: over againſt Erith. It ſeems named from the bending or winding of the River: The Scots uſe Weend in that ſenſe now. Or, elſe, the firſt part of the word may be from the ſame original as mentioned above under Wanſted, p. 28. and under Wendon in the other Volume, p. 591. It is otherwiſe written in records Wenyngton, Winiton, and Wininton (r). The Abbey of Weſtminſter had Wenington before the Conqueſt; Edward the Confeſſor, in a confirmation of their lands, mentions four hides in Wuntune; and in Domeſday-book it is ſet down as one of their Maners [L].

It was afterwards parcelled out into three; ſo that there have been reckoned here, The Maners 1. of Wenington-hall. 2. . . . . of Noke. 3. . . . Leventhorp's: holden of the Abbey by the families of Gernet, Gildeſburgh, Leventhorp, &c.

WENINGTON-HALL.

The Maner-houſe ſtands near the Church on the left hand ſide of the road from Raynham to Alveley. John de Mariſco ſeems to have been antiently lord of this maner [M]. After him, we find no record relating to Wenington till 19 Edw. III: Then Garnet, an ancient Family of High-Eaſter, who gave name to a maner there, was poſſeſſed of this. [See in the other Volume, p. 456.] Henry Gernet, who dyed in 1345, held, jointly with Joane his wife, the maner of Wenyngton of the Abbot of Weſtminſter, by the ſervice of 100*s. per ann.* (s) [N].——Maud and Margaret were his daughters and co-heirs. This eſtate ſeems to have been before in De la Hay, becauſe Thomas De la Hay and Elizabeth his wife, the ſame year, gave up by fine all their right in the maner of Wenyngton, and lands in Alvythele and Raynham, to Joane, wife of Sir Henry Garnet, and her heirs (t).

Of Maud, wife of Sir Thomas Charnels, daughter of Sir Henry Garnet, this eſtate was purchaſed by Sir John Gildeſburgh (u). Sir John conveyed it to Sir Richard Waldgrave, and other truſtees; and Clement Spice releaſed all his right in the maner of Wenyngton and in one meſſuage, 250 acres of arable, 30 acr. of paſture, and 13 s. 4d. rent, in Alvythele, Raynham, and Upminſter, to theſe truſtees (w). [Concerning this Spice, ſee under Stapleford-Tany, and in the other Volume, p. 75. 123.]

William Truſſell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1480, held the maner of Wenyngton of the Abbot of Weſtminſter, and not of the King, by what ſervice was unknown. His ſon and heir—— Edward Truſſell, then two years old (x), afterwards of Cubbleſtone in Staffordſhire, Knight Banneret, dyed 10 June 1499. He held the maner and Advowſon of this Church of the Abbot of Weſtminſter; —— Elizabeth was his daughter and heir (y). Another Inquiſition ſhews, that he had a ſon John, who dying 20 Decemb. the ſame year,

Elizabeth his ſiſter, was found to be his heir (z). She was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford [O]. [See above under Alveley, p. 84.] John, the next Earl, at the time of his deceaſe, 3 Auguſt 1562, held lands in Wennyngton: and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Edward, the 17th Earl of Oxford of this noble family (a), who ſpending his noble patrimony, ſold this eſtate to Sir Wiliam Ayloffe, of Bretons in Horn-Church: mentioned alſo in the other Volume, p. 139. He held, at the time of his deceaſe 11 Auguſt 1627, the maner, meſſuage, or farm, called Wenington-hall, of the Dean of Weſtminſter; 40 acres of marſh, and ruſhy ground, of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice, &c. ——Sir Benjamin, his ſon (b), alienated this eſtate. It belonged afterwards to the Rev.

Thomas Allen, Vicar of Cookham in Berkſhire; and to——John Alllen, whoſe daughter, Anne, brought it in marriage to

William Aſhby of Breakſpears in Harefeild, Middleſex, Eſq;

We find by the Inquiſition, that Sir Edward Truſſell held the Advowſon as well as the Maner, and though his father might have had the ſame right, it does not appear from the Regiſtry, that any but the Convent preſented.

The Maner of NOKE.

Noke-hall lies in the Marſhes Weſtward from the Church; and was ſo named probably from its ſituation at the bend of the River, which makes there a promontory, or what we call a Nook. This muſt have been taken out of the maner of Wenington, becauſe in Domeſday-book there is mentioned but one Maner in this Pariſh; and in Inquiſitions it is ſaid to hold of the Lord of Wenington.

A Family of this name, and undoubtedly ſo denominated from hence, was in being about the beginning of K. Edward the Firſt's reign, as appears from a Charter of William de Rykham to Waltham-Abbey, giving to that Convent, among other things, the ſervices of Richard de Coleworth and Hugh ate Noke in Boreham. One Thomas at Noke lies buried in this Church juſt under the pulpit: Weever has preſerved his Epitaph, in old French; which hath no date: Many are without, the time of whoſe death was known by the Obits kept for them. In 1320, Robert at Noke, ſon of Thomas, granted to his brother Henry at Noke, for the term of his life, 22 acres in the marſh of Wenington and Alvithley (c) [P].

Afterwards this eſtate belonged to the Family of Warner, of Votes Cray in Kent. John Warner Eſq; in 1457, conveyed to

William Iſle Eſq; all his right in the maner of Noke in Wennyngton, which his father, William Warner, formerly held (d). This was, three years after, alienated to William Pert of Alvethley.

Henry Andrews, of South-Okendon, yeoman, was the next poſſeſſor. His ſon——Robert Andrews, of London, aſſigned this Maner to

John Barrett of Belhouſe Eſq; At the time of his deceaſe, 4 October 1526, he held this maner of Noke, 220 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 12 of wood, 100 of marſh, and 40 s. rent in Wenington, Alvethley, and Raynham; of John Earl of Oxford.——Edward his ſon and heir, five years old (e), ſucceeded him, and dyed in 1585, at which time he held the maner of Noke of William Ayloff Eſq; as of his maner of Wenington, in free ſocage. From him it came, as Alveley, to his grandſon——Edward Barrett, created Lord Newburgh in 1627, and hath deſcended, as the reſt of his eſtates in Eſſex, to the preſent worthy owner was another ſubdiviſion of the Maner of Wenington; and ſeems to have been the purparty of Margaret, younger daughter of Sir Henry Garnet. Her ſiſter's huſband dyed in the reign of K. Richard II. and we may ſuppoſe them of not very different age.

Thomas-Barrett Lennard, Lord Dacre.

The Rental of Hedingham-Caſtle has this; ‘William Truſſell held lately half a knight's ‘fee in Wennington, now Leventhorp;’ This was in the reign of K. Henry VI. So that this Maner took the name of Leventhorp from him that poſſeſſed it after Truſſell. A Family of Leventhorp came from Leventhorp-Hall in the Weſt Riding of Yorkſhire, and ſettled at Sabridgeworth in Hertfordſhire in 1391 (f): But whether this was a branch of the ſame is not known.

We have another Entry in the Inquiſitions, which perhaps relates to this eſtate. Sir John Howard, who dyed in 1437, held, in right of Margaret his wife, by the courteſy of England, two fees and half in Raynham and Wenyngton, formerly Arnulph Veſey's, and a moiety of a fee in Wenyngton belonging to the ſame Arnulph (g).

Reginald Byſmere, at the time of his deceaſe 15 Auguſt 1506, held the maner of Leventhorp in Wenington, Raynham, and Alvethley, of Elizabeth Truſſell, as of her maner of Wenington; and divers lands and hereditaments in Wenington, Reynham, Alveley, and Barwick [Q]; called Launders, Waltons, and Peryns, by the ſervice of coming twice a year to the turn of the Hundred of Berdſtabill, or paying a fine of 12 d. to the Sheriff.——William his ſon and heir, was twenty three years old (h) [R].

The name of Leventhorp's is almoſt forgotten in this pariſh; being retained only in a moderate Farm-houſe, or Ale-houſe, weſt of the Church. It belongs to Mr. William Bradſhaigh of Lancaſhire.

The Lands of the three Pariſhes of Wenington, Alveley, and Raynham, have been ſtrangely intermixed, and many of the inhabitants removed to Alveley. Or elſe Wenington hath been greatly depopulated, as have alſo been many other Pariſhes. It appears from Mr. Symonds's Collections in the laſt century, that here were then about 38 or 40 houſes; and now not above 12 or 13. One of them, called Cold-Harbour, ſtands near the Thames. And Mr. Peter Catman hath an eſtate in this Pariſh, beſides the perſons above mentioned.

In 1405, John Kilet of Wenyngton granted to John Loughton, and others, thoſe lands and tenements which he lately had of the gift of John Frere, and Gilbert Henger, in Reynham, South and North Wokendon, Upmonſtra, and Weſt Thurrock.—And in 1407, Thomas, ſon of William Kylet, releaſed to John Lane, Richard Forſter, and Thomas Aleyn mercers in London, and their heirs, all his right in 3 meſſuages, 400 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 120 of paſture, 6 l. 5 s. rent, in Wenyngton, Reynham, Alvythele, South and North Wokyngdon, Upmynſtree, and Weſt Thurrock; which lately were the ſaid William Kylet's (i).—Through whoſe hands thoſe lands have ſince paſſed, is not mentioned in records.

Some of the lands belonging to the maner of Bretts in Alveley, part of the eſtate of the Lord Dacre, extend into this pariſh.

. . . Barrett Eſq; gave ten ſhillings a year, for ever, out of an eſtate of 12 l. a year in this pariſh, for buying ſhifts for 4 poor widows.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Peter, is a handſome building, ſtanding high, near the Hall above the marſhes. The Church, Chancel, and north aiſle are all tiled: A ſquare Tower embattled, contains three Bells. It has been lately very much repaired.

This Rectory was in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of Weſtminſter till the year 1540, when K. Henry VIII. granted it to adjoins north north-weſt to Wenington: and is bounded on the weſt by the rivulet Ingreburn. This rivulet receives veſſels from the Thames, and has a commodious wharf, which Capt. Harle brought to great perfection.

Thomas Thirleby Bp. of Weſtminſter (k). But, upon the ſuppreſſion of that ſhort-lived See, Qu. Mary I. granted, 3 March 1554, the Advowſon of this Living to Edmund Bonner, Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors (l), in whoſe collation it hath continued ever ſince. There is no Parſonage-houſe.

3. RAINHAM,

The name is otherwiſe written in records Raineham, Rayneham, Reinham, Renaham, Reneham, and Reynham.

It is derived from the two Saxon words Rein, clean, or Ran, a wild goat, and ham, often mentioned before.

In the Saxons time, the lands in this pariſh belonged to Alſi, a freeman; Aluard; Lefſtan and a Prieſt. At the time of the general Survey, they were held by Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Hugh; by Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Robert; by Walter de Doai; and Haghebern.

From thence aroſe the ſeveral following Maners. 1. The maner of South-hall. 2. . . . that of Berwick. 3. . . . that of Gerberville, or Gerpins. 4. . . . Launders.

1. The Maner of SOUTH-HALL, is ſo named from its ſituation in the Southern part of this pariſh. The manſion houſe is ſeated juſt above the marſhes, on the left hand ſide of the road leading from Rainham to Wenington.

This is what belonged to Odo [S], upon whoſe being deprived of all his eſtates by the Conqueror, it came again to the Crown.

Soon after it was held by Roger de Crammavill [T]. And in 1254, Henry de Crammavill held 20 l. land in Renham of the King by the ſervice of wardſhip at Dover-caſtle; He was then amerced for not taking the order of Knighthood, when he had a knight's fee (m). At the time of his deceaſe, in 1269, he held this maner of Reynham of the King in capite; for which, and three other Maners, he paid 60 s. yearly, to the ward of the ſaid Caſtle.——Henry was his ſon (n). This laſt enfeoffed jointly

Robert Waleraunt, and Maud his wife, in this maner. Robert Walround, uncle of John, dyed in 1308, holding this maner, by the yearly payment of 20 s. to the ward of Dover-caſtle;

Alan Plunkenet was his heir (o).

Then it came into the King's hands; and K. Edward III. in 1329, granted this maner, late Oliver Plonkenett's, to Thomas de Weſton; and, the year following, confirmed it to Robert Weſton, in fee (p).

Richard de la Bere, who had an intereſt in this maner, conveyed all his right in the ſame to

Walter de Cheſhunt, and his heirs (q). He, and Alice his wife, held it in 1343; and he dyed the year following, leaving ——Menander his ſon and heir (r). In 1346, he conveyed all his right in the premiſſes to

Sir John de Stanton, and Alice his wife (s).

In 1390 Thomas De la Bere, of Dorſetſhire, releaſed to Thomas Newetune, and Amye his wife, and their heirs, all their right in this maner and advowſon of the Chapel (t).

Joane, wife of Roger de Aſhbournham, that dyed in 1418, held Southall maner of the feoffees of the maner of Oſpreng in Kent.——Robert, ſon of her daughter Anne, was her heir (u).——John Godeſtone held it of the ſame, in 1440. And another——John Goddeſton, who dyed 24 Febru. 1498, held the maner of Southall of the King in capite; and ſix meſſuages, and 300

Sir John Shaw, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1503, held the ſame, of the King, and the Prior (x).

A Pardon was granted in 1519, to John Makyn for purchaſing this eſtate of . . . Godſtone: And another pardon to —— Ellis for purchaſing the ſame with appertenances, and 400 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of paſture, forty of wood, 300 of marſh, and 6 l. rent in Reinham, Wennington; Aveley, &c. Sir John Rainsforth had licence, in 1520, to alienate this maner with appertenances, and 500 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of paſture, 40 of wood, 300 of marſh-land, and 6l. rent, in Reynham, Wennington Alveley, and Upminſter to

Richard Nix Biſhop of Norwich: He, like his Predeceſſor Odo, forfeited it, by falling under a Præmunire in the time of K. Henry VIII. who granted or ſold it to

William Bellamy, and he, by licence dated 12 April 1552, conveyed it to truſtees. Richard Bellamy, moſt probably his ſon, alienated it by licence, in 1576, to Antony Radcliff citizen of London, who held it by knight's ſervice, and paid an annual rent of 26*s.* 1*d.* ob. for wardſhip of Dover-Caſtle, it being then worth 12 l. beyond repriſes. He dyed 8 May, 1603, leaving —— Edward his ſon and heir (y).

This maner at length was purchaſed, and poſſeſſed by Elizabeth, widow of Robert Conway, an Eaſt-India Captain. She was a daughter of —— Wetherley of Cheſhire, Barriſter at Law, and had by the Captain three ſons and three daughters:——Robert Conway, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, dyed unmarried; the other Brothers and eldeſt Siſter being dead without iſſue, the eſtate came to Catharine, ſecond Siſter, who being a lunatic, the guardianſhip of her was granted to Mary, daughter of Laurence Johnſon, by Mary his wife, ſiſter to Catharine.

Afterwards, one moiety of this eſtate was in Mary Johnſon, who ſold it to Samuel Heckford, of Clement's-inn, Gent: The other moiety was in Frances Howland, niece of Mrs. Conway, who was married to Barrington Taverner, Gent.

is ſo named, becauſe it was originally a Beꞃe ƿic; [a country-hamlet,] in this pariſh: And is ſometimes called a Pariſh.

The manſion houſe is near two miles north-eaſt from the Church, on the left hand ſide of the road leading to Upminſter. It is pleaſantly ſituated; and though but mean now, ſhews viſible remains of a large Houſe.

It was the land of Robert Gernon, at the time of the Survey [U], and came of courſe to——William de Montfichet, his eldeſt ſon; and then to his grandſon——Gilbert de Montfichet. The latter gave it to the Knights Templars, as appears by the Confirmation-Charter of K. John (z) [W]. But in that Charter Gilbert is very improperly, and by miſtake, ſurnamed de Ver; For the Vere Family came not to be ingrafted by marriage into the deſcendents of Gernon, till the reign of K. Henry VI. And this ſerves indeed to render that Confirmation-Charter very dubious.

After the ſuppreſſion of the Knights Hoſpitallers, K. Henry VIII. 21 December, and 20 January 1525, granted this maner, with the Advowſon of the Church, to Cardinal Wolſey, for building his Colleges. But, upon his præmunire, they falling again to the Crown, the ſame King, 8 February 1544, granted the Maner of Berwyke-Rayneham, and the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, lately belonging to the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, with many other lands, and large demeſnes [W], to Sir [W] The Clauſe relating to this land in K. John's Charter, is this 'Ex dono Gilleberti de Ver villam de Reinham 'cum pertinentiis ſuis, quas idem G. dedit eis cum corpore 'ſuo.' There is a very great miſtake in affixing to this Gilbert the ſurname of de Ver; none of the de Veres having been named Gilbert. Indeed a Part of the inheritance of Montfichet came to John de Vere, by his marriage with Elizabeth, the heireſs of Playz; deſcended from Philippa one of three coheireſſes of the laſt Richard de Montfichet. However, from the Rental of Heningham-Caſtle, in the reign of K. Henry VI. it appears, that the Knights Hoſpitallers then held two knights fees and half of the Earl of Oxford in Reynham and Alveley. This evidently ſhews, that Gilbert de Montfichet had been the donor, from whom the Veres inherited. In the Pleas at York, Anno 1298, we find the following Grant of a Maner of Reynham, from Joane de Grey to the Knights Hoſpitallers, which is puzzling: Convenc'o inter Priorem Scī, Johis Jer'lm. in Anglia, & Dnā Johanna, uxor' Rob'ti de Grey Militis, quam ip'a concedit p'dco Priori & Fr'ibus, &c. in libam pura & ppetu' Elemoſinā manerium de Hampton juxta Kingeſton, in Com' Midd' Maneriū de Reynham in Com' Eſſex, & manerium de Sobynton in Bucks. And the Prior, by fine, at the ſame time, grants this Maner to Joane wife of Robert Grey for life, with a view of frank-pledge. Placit. 27 Edw. I.

How it came to this Joane, wife of Sir Robert Grey of Rotherfeild, we have not been able to diſcover. The Grey family had the neighbouring pariſh of Greys Thurrock, and alſo ſome lands in Weſt Thurrock. Upon the whole, this maner of Greys ſeems to me to have been that which was called Gerpins, in this pariſh.

[X] Thoſe lands and tenement were, the Park of Berwick; Hickmans tenement; In Cotemanfield, 10 acres; Bollingtons croft, Richers croft: And the following parcels of arable land and paſture; in the Melfeild, 15 acr. in Thomasfeild, 8 acr. in Sparks croft, 11 acr. in Brompton Hoke, Robert Southwell, Maſter of the Rolls (a). He dyed 26 October 1559, poſſeſſed of this maner of Barwicke-Rainham, with appertenances; and the Rectory; Advowſon of the Vicarage; and free Chapel, here: one meſſuage, and 50 acres called Jordens; and the maner of Morehall in Morehall Barwike and Aveley.——Sir Thomas Southwell, his ſon and heir, had licenſe, 2 Sept. 1591, to alienate this to

Robert Houghton Eſq; and others (b). But we find no names of other poſſeſſors till

Ralph Freman of Aſpeden in Hertfordſhire, Eſq; who preſented to this living in 1644; and dyed 28 July 1665, leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of Sir William Hewyt Kt.——Ralph his eldeſt ſon and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Aubrey of Glamorganſhire (c). The latter gave this eſtate in his life-time to his eldeſt ſon——Ralph Freman Eſq; And by him it was alienated to

George Finch Eſq; a younger branch of the antient noble Family of the Earls of Winchelſea: who by Conſtance his wife, daughter of . . . . Hornby Eſq; had——William Finch Eſq; He ſold this Maner, and ſeveral of the lands mentioned in note [F] to

Sir Thomas Croſs, of Weſtminſter Bart. mentioned under Alveley: who was ſucceeded therein by his ſon, the late——Sir John Croſs, Bart. 18

But ſome parts of this Maner had been diſmembred by Sir Robert Southwell the younger. For John Slaney, merchant, who dyed 7 April 1632, held the meſſuage called Damyans, mentioned above in note [F], the Rectory and Church and great Tithes of Raynham; with ſeveral fields and meadows called Stockfeidcloſe, Peartree feild, Brooks, Homebre-feild, Birds marſh, &c. and a meſſuage called Jordens, with South-feild, Midle-feild, Jordans meads &c. His nephew —— Richard was his heir (d).

This eſtate is near Gerpins: It is ſometimes called Downe-hall.

The Maner of GERBERVILLE, or GERPINS, took its name from the ancient family of Jarpenville, mentioned under Goldangre, and Totham. It ſeems to have been what belonged to Walter de Doai [Y].

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half eaſt north-eaſt from this Church, near the road leading to Upminſter.

Laurence de Impervill, who dyed in 1297, held in Reynham, of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee, 60 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 5 of paſture; and of the heirs of Robert Walram, 100 acres of arable, by the ſervice of 6s. 8d. yearly; and of Thomas de Fountaynes, 10 acres of heath, by the ſervice of one penny per ann.——William was his ſon (e). At the time of his deceaſe, in 1337, he held in this pariſh, 53 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 4 of paſture, of the Prior of St. John, as aforeſaid. ——John, was his ſon and heir (f).

We hear no further of this eſtate till 1631. Then Daniel Lowen held the maner of Jerpines, alias Garleviles, and dying 30 April, that year, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John, aged 28 years (g).

The Maner of LAUNDERS

is but little mentioned in records. It ſeems to have been part of what belonged to Walter de Doai.

John Leventhorp held this eſtate in 1440.

Reginald Byſmere, mentioned under Leventhorps in Wenington, held Launders in 1506 (h).

Richard Herde, citizen and butcher of London, who dyed 13 December 1568, held this maner, or capital meſſuage, of Lawnders; a meſſuage called Aylwards, ſeveral cloſes called the Backſide, Homefeild, Welcroſſe, Horſeleaſe, Barnmead, Launders paſture; meſſuages and lands called Laks, Swannoks, Brownes, Flaggs, Cowpers croft; 4 acres in Cotmansfeld and Croked croft; of the maner of South-hall in ſocage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 36s.—And Chappell lands, of Edward Barrett Eſq; as of his maner of Bretts, by fealty, ſuit of court, and rent of 6s.—And 3 acres called Hickmans, of the Queen in capite.——Richard, his grandſon, was his heir (i).

DOVERS, a Maner in Horn-Church pariſh, juſt over Rainham-bridge, extended, according to the records, into this: A third part of it being ſaid to be in Raineham (k). See under Havering Liberty.

D. by will, 13 March 1677, 2 l. 12 s. 0. to provide ſix two-penny loaves every ſunday for ſix of the pooreſt aged and infirm of this pariſh. —John Elkin, about 1680, 20 l. to the poor, which was expended, with an additional ſum, in building an Alms-houſe in 1714.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Helen and St. Giles, conſiſts of a body, and two aiſles; The Chancel is of one pace.

The Walls of this Church are very thick, and the pillars ſquare and very maſſy: the upper part of the Church-door, and the arch between Church and Chancel, are indented, or curiouſly wreathed.

This Church was given, either by K. Henry II. or Richard de Lucy the founder [Z], to the Abbey of Leſnes in Kent. And K. John confirmed alſo to them the donation of Hugh ſon of Fulk Peynell, of Renham (k).

Thereupon the great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage endowed, of which the Advowſon continued in the Convent till their ſuppreſſion, when they were granted to Cardinal Wolſey (l); upon whoſe fall they reverting to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. exchanged them, 29 May 1536, with Sir William Weſton, Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, for the maner of Paris-Garden in Southwark, and other lands in Surrey. This of Raynham was appropriated to them by act of Parliament, but their poſſeſſion laſted but eight years. Then the Rectory and Advowſon were granted, with Barwyke, to Sir Robert Southwell, as above mentioned.

From him they paſſed, as the maner of Berwick, to the families of Freman and Finch. The great Tithes belong now to William Blackborn Eſq;

The Vicarage houſe being utterly decayed, Samuel Keckwich, Vicar, in 1701, purchaſed a Houſe, garden, and out-houſes, for the habitation of his ſucceſſors. And George Finch Eſq; then patron, rebuilt it at his own charge.

In K. Edward IIId's reign, a Chantry was founded here by Sir John Staunton, for the good eſtate of Iſabell, the King's mother, for Sir John Staunton and Alice his wife, &c. It was built in the Church-yard, and had a Chapel there dedicated to All-Saints. In 1391, K. Richard II. gave licence to John Shipman and Willam Lucas, to endow it with 22 acres of arable land, in Reynham and Avele: But the revenue ſinking to 33 s. 4 d. per ann. no Chaplain thought it for a long time worth their acceptance. So Richard Fitz-James Biſhop of London, with conſent of the Patron, Biſhop Nix, Lord of Southall maner, 12 October 1521, diſſolved the Chantry, converting it into a Free Chapel, to be enjoyed by a Lay-man unmarried, who was to be abſolved from the the obligations of a Chantry-Prieſt. This Lay-man was enjoined daily to ſay the Pſalm, for the ſoul of the Founder, &c. and once a quarter to procure a Prieſt to celebrate the Exequies, and Maſs for the dead; the poſſeſſor to be preſent, and to offer one penny at each maſs, to be diſtributed by the Prieſt; and to keep the Chapel in repair. In the Book of Chantries the value, after it came to a Lay-man, was ſet down at 6 l. 10 s. and the poſſeſſor then was one Nicolas Lental, a temporal man. Sir Edward Southwell had a Grant of all belonging to this Free Chapel, and dyed poſſeſſed of it, except one parcel thereof, with a certain croft called Capell-Land, and appertenances, worth 35 s. a year (m). This, I preſume, did belong to the Chapel, however it came to be excepted from his grant. The book of Alienations mentions lands, meadows, feedings, and paſtures lying within Berwick-Park, and other lands called Jordans lands, and Brome croft &c. as part of the endowment of this Chantry.

4. THURROCK

THURROCK.

Here are three adjoyning Pariſhes, along the ſide of the river Thames, called in Domeſday-book by the general name of Turoch, and diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Weſt, Greys, and Little. The two firſt are within this Hundred, and the latter in the Hundred of Barſtaple.

The name ſeems to be formed, either from the German and Saxon Deity Đoꞃ, and ac, or oak; here being probably a Grove of Oaks conſecrated to him (n): Or elſe from the Saxon word Đuꞃꞃuc, a ſhort or light boat: a Currogh, as it was called by the Iriſh; made of wicker, covered over with leather (o).

It is otherwiſe written in records, Thorrock, Torrocke, Thurrok, Thurruca, Turoc, Turruc, and ſometimes ſtyled Thurrock Breanſon, and Torells, from its ancienteſt owners.

4. WEST-THURROCK

is ſo named with reſpect to its ſituation, Weſt of the two others.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the owners of the lands in this pariſh were, Aluuard, a freeman; Mannic, another freeman; eleven other freemen; and Uluuin. At the time of the Survey, they were held by Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux, and his under-tenants Hugh and Anſchetill; and by Tedric Pointel [A].

Here is now but one MANER.

The maner-houſe has been called Weſt-Hall, and Le Vyneyard, becauſe it had formerly a Vineyard, now High-Houſe, for its beautiful ſituation on the ſide of a Hill, commanding a delightful proſpect over the marſhes and the river Thames.

After Odo, who was deprived of his eſtates for his ſecret practiſes againſt his brother W. the Conqueror, the next owner we find here, is ——Brianzon, who had it probably of the gift of the Crown.——Robert de Brianſon held one fee in Tirroke in the reigns of K. Henry II. and K. John (p). This Robert ſeems to have been the father of —— Bartholomew, who poſſeſſed Alveley in the time of K. Edw. I. becauſe Bartholomew had a ſon——William, who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1310, held both Alveley and Thurrock [B]. His brother and heir——John de Brianzon dying in 1315, was ſucceeded by his ſon—Sir John de Brianzon (q): who held this maner, and alſo Micheleſlond. And departing this life in 1337, left——Joanna his daughter and heir (r). She ſurvived him but two years; and had only two parts of this maner, with the Advowſon of the Church; the reverſion being in Sir William de Wanton (s). He held this maner of the Earl of Richmond, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1347, with ſeveral other eſtates in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 344. 348, 349. 440. 448. 478. 558.] —— William was his ſon and heir (t). This Sir William ſeems to have had it in mortgage or on a leaſe for years, becauſe in the Inquiſition upon the death of Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Torell, in 1375, ſhe is ſaid to hold the maner of Weſt-Thurrock, which was formerly Sir William de Wanton's (u). And an Inquiſition on Little-Thurrock mentions Wantons having been poſſeſſed of Weſt-Thurrock.

It ſeems afterwards to have been in the Bohun Family, becauſe Thomas Duke of Glouceſter who married Alianor one of the daughters and coheirs of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, at the time of his tragical death in 1397, held, jointly with his wife, among other eſtates, the maner of Weſt-Thurrock (w).

In 1404, John Lightfoot and others were tenants of this maner, of whom Richard Torell held two parts (x).

Next we find it in the Wydevile, or Woodville, family; K. Henry VI. having granted it to Richard Widvile, 29 May 1448, upon creating him Lord Rivers [C]. His eldeſt ſon and heir ——Antony Wydevill, at the time of his deceaſe in 1483, held a maner in Weſt-Thurrock, called Weſt-Hall, of the King as of his Hundred of Chafford, by fealty, and rent of 4 s. per ann. worth 20*l.* a year;——Richard Earl Rivers was his brother and heir, 34 years old (y). He dying without iſſue in 1491, it deſcended to the ſon of his eldeſt ſiſter Elizabeth, married firſt to

Sir John Grey, and afterwards to K. Edward IV. namely to

Sir Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet ſon of the ſaid Elizabeth. He dyed poſſeſſed of it 30 Auguſt 1509 (z). His ſon—— Sir Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet, levied a fine, and paſſed it to John Spencer, in 1517 (a). Sir John Spencer dyed in April 1522, or 1523, holding of the King, by ſuit at the Hundred of Chafford twice a year, and payment each time of 13 d. ob. qa. and at Michaelmaſs yearly 6 s. 8 d. 16 cottages, 300 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of paſture, 100 of wood, 100 of marſh, and 10 s. rent, with appertenances, in Weſt-Thurrock.——William Spencer was his ſon and heir, aged 24 years (b).

Before we proceed any further, I ſhall obſerve, that under the capital Lords of this Maner hitherto mentioned, part of it, or the whole, was held by the Torell family, [mentioned in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. &c.] from the reign of K. Henry III. to that of Henry VIII.

William Torell, who dyed in 1266, held in Weſt Torrocke, 160 acres of arable, and paſture for 240 ſheep, a meadow, paſture for 20 cows, a wind-mill, and 10 s. rent; and alſo lands in Little Thurrock (c).——William Torell held, in this pariſh, of Sir Bartholomew de Brienſon, 44 s. rent of aſſiſe, and a capital meſſuage, a wind-mill, 180 acres of arable, 20 of meadow and marſh, by the payment of 27 s. 8 d. to the ſaid Bartholomew.——John, his ſon (d), held here, of the ſame Bartholomew, 1 meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, paſture for 20 cows and a bull, 22 s. rent, a wind-mill, by payment of 2 marks, and ſuit of court: and dying in 1282, left——John, his ſon and heir (e).——William Torell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1290, held here a capital meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 120 of paſture, &c. of Sir Bartholomew de Brianzon. His grandſon——John ſucceeded him (f): He held in Weſtthorrok, of the heir of John de Breaunſon, the ſame, except the paſture; and departed this life in 1329.——John was his ſon (g).——Thomas Torell ſucceeded him: Elizabeth, his widow, held here of the Duke of Glouceſter, in 1375, one meſſuage, 124 acres of arable, 52 of paſture and marſh, 6 of meadow &c.——Richard Torell, her ſon, who dyed in 1404, held two parts of this maner (h);——Thomas was next.——Henry Torell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1480, held of Antony Earl Rivers, as of his maner of Weſt-hall, this maner of Weſt-Thurrocke, alias Torells Thurrocke, the firſt time we find it ſo called; leaving——Humfrey his ſon one year old (i).——Thomas Torell Eſq; who dyed 7 February 1516, held this maner of Weſtthurrocke, alias Torrells in Weſtthurrock, of Thomas Marquis of Dorſet, as of his maner of Weſt-hall, by fealty.——Henry, his ſon, held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe 7 January 1525, of William Spencer Eſq; as did——Humfrey his ſon, who departed this life, 12 September 1544 (k).

Anne, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to Henry Jocelyn Eſq; fourth ſon of Sir Thomas Jocelyn of Hyde-Hall [D]: He had by her Thomas afterwards knighted, and ſeveral other ſons; and Winifred, married to Richard Scott Eſq; [See in the other volume, p. 478.] But this eſtate doth not appear to have continued in the Jocelyn Family.

The Torell family, had, beſides this maner, alſo thoſe of Little Thurrock, Torells-hall in Willingale Dou, and Shellow, and the maner of Gernons in Keldon-Hatch (l).

To return to the capital Lords of this Maner.

Sir William Hollis had the maner of Weſt-hall, alias Weſt-Thurrock, after William Spencer Eſq; by what conveyance does not appear; but, at the time of his deceaſe 20 October 1543, he held it of the King in capite, by the ſervice of being the King's Naparius on his Coronation-day; ſuit, twice a year at the Hundred of Chafford, and the ſame payments as Sir John Spencer. He had alſo 22 acres called Ordwyns, and 27 acres called Quernys.——Sir Thomas Hollis, his ſon and heir (m), joining with others in a Fine, in 1547, paſſed it to

Robert Taverner, and within four years after it was in Robert Long, citizen and mercer of London, whether by marriage of a female heir, or otherwiſe, is not ſaid; but he dyed poſſeſſed of it 12 January 1551. And his widow Cecily enjoyed it after him till her death 13 October 1559 [E].

[D] This Sir Thomas Jocelyn is ſtyled in his will of High-Rothing, meaning New-Hall there; for the maner of Rothing was purchaſed by his ſon Sir Thomas. There are ſome particulars of this Will, that expreſs ſo well the plainneſs and integrity of that age, and cuſtoms of it, now obſolete, that they are worth reciting.—" He appoints his burial in St. Mary's Chapel in Hatfield Priory, near his firſt wife. If his ſon die without heirs lawfully begotten and his heirs die without iſſue, he appoints his lands and eſtates to be ſold, which are mentioned to be in Hertfordſhire, Eſſex, Staffordſhire, and Glouceſterſhire, and diſpoſed of for reparation of poor Churches and Highways, and ſinging of Prieſts for his ſoul. If any man or woman can ſhew, within three years after his death, any wrongs done by him, his executors ſhall agree with them, as law and conſcience ſhall require, in diſcharge of his Soul. His executors to pay for his tythes and offerings negligently withdrawn and forgotten 20 s. and to the Priory of Tremhale, for reparations and their prayers 6 l. 6 s. 8 d. His daughter Anne to have 300 marks in three years after her marriage, if ſhe be ruled in her marriage by the diſcretion of Philippe his wife. If ſhe die before her marriage in that caſe 100 marks to be employed in marriage of his poor kinſwomen being maids, or other poor maidens."

[E] At the time of her deceaſe, ſhe held, the maner, or lordſhip of Weſt-Thurrock, Weſt-hall, or Le Vynyard; alſo 9 meſſuages, or tenements, and 317 acres of arable, 319 acres of paſture, 87 of wood, and 307 acres and a half of marſh, in Weſt-Thurrock, Orſet, Stifford, Greys, Alvithley, and Duddinghurſt; one of which meſſuages was called Walter Monks; another Daniells; and another Quernes lands. Inquiſ. 2 Eliz. n. 37.

Mary wife of Henry Vyner; Martha, of William Meredith, Magdalen, of Roger Sadler, were their daughters and co-heirs (n).

Meredith, and his wife, by licence, dated 20 April 1583, alienated their part to Richard Smyth and others.

Magdalen Sadler dying 17 March 1574, left her ſon——John Sadler Gent. (o) who by licence dated 7 May 1583, ſold his mother's moiety to Thomas Owen Eſq; and Stephen Ducket Eſq;

The eſtate was next in Chriſtopher Holford Eſq; deſcended from the Holfords of Holford in Somerſetſhire. John Holford married Joane, daughter of Roger Bryne of Stapleford in 1345.——Sir George Holford of Holford, by Iſabell, daughter of Robert Lee of Addington, had——Sir John Holford, who, by Margery his wife daughter of Sir Ralph Brereton of Malpas left 3 ſons, Thomas, John, and Chriſtopher. The latter married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Daniell, ſiſter of Sir William Daniell, by whom he had ——Chriſtopher, ſeated at Weſt-Thurrock. He dyed 4 January 1607 (p). His children by Mary his wife, daughter of Henry Vinour of Cundon in Shropſhire, were Chriſtopher, Daniel, Henry, Robert, and Martha.—Chriſtopher dying without iſſue,—Daniel, the ſecond ſon ſucceeded to this eſtate; and dyed 23 February 1629-30. On the 24th of January 1612, he married Martha, daughter and heir of Valentine Pell of Lynn in Norfolk; by whom he had two daughters and coheirs,——Martha and Mary.

Martha was married to Sir Henry Heyman of Somerfeld in Kent, created a Baronet 12 Auguſt 1641. They jointly preſented to this living in 1643 (q).

Mary became the wife of Sir Cranmer Harris. [See under Crickſea.] He held Purfleet in right of Mary Holford his wife.

This eſtate was afterwards in Benjamim Deſbrow, or Deſbrough, Eſq; ſeventh ſon of Major-General Deſbrow: His deſcendents are ſeen at Downham in this county. He ſold it to Caleb Grantham Eſq; ſon of George Grantham of Yorkſhire; who by his firſt wife had Caleb, Joſhua, and Lydia. By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Veſey of Kent, widow of——Seymour, he had Nathanael.——Caleb Grantham Eſq; by will gave this eſtate to his brother——Nathanael, who married three wives. 1. Mary daughter of David Lambert, Gent. 2. Elizabeth, daughter of John Bromwell Eſq; 3. Mary, daughter of Jacob Croome. By this laſt he had no iſſue. But by the firſt had Caleb, and Mary; and by the ſecond Nathanael, and Elizabeth.——Caleb Grantham, the eldeſt ſon, was a Captain in the Eaſt-India Company's ſervice. He married Mary, daughter of James Somner Eſq; and had by her a daughter and heir, married to another Maner in this pariſh, is called, in an old Deed of 19 Edw. III. in the Lord Dacre's poſſeſſion, Pourteſlete; which ſhews from whence the name is derived, namely from the two Saxon words, Poꞃꞇ, a haven, and ꝼleoꞇ, an arm of the Sea, a bay; here being a little harbour, where the rivulet that paſſes by Stifford falls into the Thames [G].

It anciently belonged to the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, of whom it was holden in the beginning of K. Henry the Eighth's reign. Afterwards it was in Qu. Elizabeth.——Sir George Hart held it of her in 1583. And Sir Cranmer Harris enjoyed it in right of his wife, as hath been juſt mentioned before.

About the beginning of the preſent century, this maner was in

Sir Biby Lake, created a Baronet 17 October 1711 (r). The joint owners of it, a few years ago, were,

Sir Atwell Lake, Bart. ſon of Sir Biby, Sir Cæſar Child, Bart. Robert Hudſon Eſq; and Philip Hubert Eſq; in right of his wife daughter of Sir Jonathan Andrews. A diviſion of it was ordered by the Court of Chancery, which was to be made in Trinity Vacation, 1749.

At Purfleet lately ſtood very large Corn-Mills, the property of one Mr. Fawcet; which were an annoyance to the Country, by letting in the Tide from the river Thames into that water-courſe which runs from Bulvan through Stifford, and is the ſouthern bundary of Alveley-pariſh. But that nuiſance is now prevented by a ſtrong ſluice, which entirely keeps out the Tide.—For the Government having bought thoſe Mills, the Board of Ordinance have erected here a fine and well contrived Magazine, ſtrongly arched, and every way well ſecured againſt Fire, Lightning &c. to receive the large Store of Powder that ſtood near Greenwich. They have alſo made a quay by the water-ſide for landing the powder; and built a handſom Houſe on the hill above for the Store-keeper; and Barracks for about 100 matroſſes, to guard the Magazine.

Near Purfleet among the Hills are very great Chalk pits, and Lime-works, which bring conſiderable profit to the Bricklayers Company, that took a leaſe of them from Caleb Grantham Eſq;

Here formerly was a Ferry over the Thames into Kent.

That River made a Breach and Inundation at Weſt-Thurrock in the year 1680; at which time ſubterraneous Trees were waſhed out, in as great numbers, and of the ſame kind of Wood, as

Mr. John Sech; Robert Cornwell; and Thomas Hunt, have alſo ſome Lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, didicated to St. Clement, conſiſts of a body and two aiſles; as doth alſo the Chancel.

It was the endowment of one of the Seven Prebends, founded in the Collegiate Church within the Caſtle of Haſtings in Suſſex. The Prebendary was Rector, and had the great Tithes of this Pariſh appropriated to him: and preſented to the Vicarage.

Upon the diſſolution of Religious Houſes, K. Henry VIII. granted this Prebend of Weſt-Thurrock, with all the Marſh and Upland, and Tithes of Corn and grain thereto belonging; 1 January 1546, to Sir Antony Browne, and Elizabeth his wife (t).

His ſon Antony Brown Viſcount Montacute, by licenſe, 2 January 1567, ſold it to Henry Joſceline and Anne his wife; They, in 1572, ſold it again to Mary, widow of Geffrey Gate Gent.——Geffrey Gate, and Elizabeth his wife, by licenſe dated 9 April 1575, alienated it to ——Humfrey Hayes, who preſented twice to the Vicarage (u): He had a ſon Humfrey his heir, whoſe daughter Catharine brought it in marriage to her huſband——Thomas Reading. He dyed 21 February 1592, poſſeſſed of this Prebend and Rectory, with 2 tofts, 1 dove-houſe, 2 gardens, 30 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 30 of paſture, 10 of wood, 40 of marſh, 40 of ſalt-marſh, 5 l. 3 s. 4 d. rent; and the Tithes of corn, grain, and hay; and the advowſon of the Vicarage.——Richard Reading was his brother and heir (w); after whom——George Reading and Roſe his wife had it; and Roſe, together with Thomas Hayes Clerk, I preſume her ſecond Huſband, ſold it to Daniel Holford Eſq; from whom it paſſed to the ſubſequent owners of the capital Maner in this pariſh as above-mentioned, namely Grantham, &c.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 748 l. 2 s. 8 d.

5. GREYS-THURROCK, took that name from the noble and ancient Family of Grey, to which it belonged for many years: Sometimes it is called Great-Thurrock.

It is the ſouth-eaſt corner of this Hundred, adjoyning to that of Barſtable. Part of the pariſh is a ſmall Town, upon a creek from the Thames, fit to receive hoys and veſſels of ſmall burden.

This Town is 17 miles from London.

Richard de Grey obtained by Charter of K. Henry III. a Market weekly here on Fridays, now altered to Thurſday; and a Fair yearly on June 28 and 29, now on May 23. This Grant was confirmed by K. Edw. III. in 1330 [H].

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the lands in this Pariſh belonged to Herold, and Almar: At the time of the Survey, they were held by the Earl of Ou; and William Piperell. Seven houſes in London were annexed to the Earl's Maner: Five ſochmen; Giſlebert, tenant of the Biſhop of Bayeux; and Anſchetill, tenant of the Biſhop of London, had then ſome lands here [I].

The Manſion-houſe of the CAPITAL MANER in this pariſh, once the Earl of Ou's, or Eu's, ſtands, on the right hand ſide of the road, leading from this Town to Stifford.

This Maner becoming veſted in the Crown, by what means we do not learn; K. Richard I. in 1194, granted it to Henry de Grey. Which grant was confirmed by K. John, with the ſpecial privilege of hunting the hare and fox in any lands belonging to the Crown, excepting the Parks of the King's own demeſne (x). This Henry married Iſolda, niece and co-heir of Robert Bardolf; and was progenitor of the noble Families of the Greys of Codnovre, Wilton, Ruthin, and Rotherfield (y).——Richard de Grey, his eldeſt ſon, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1238. Joining the diſcontented Barons againſt K. Henry III, he was taken priſoner at Kenelworth; and his lands were ſeized, but reſtored afterwards (z). His ſon——John de Grey, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1271, held the maner of Thurrock of the Earl de Ferrers by the ſervice of half a knights fee.——Henry his ſon, then aged 14 years (a), held it alſo, at the time of his deceaſe, leaving——Richard his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor (b). He held this maner of Thurrocks-Grey, [the firſt time we find it ſo called,] of Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; charged with the payment of 6 s. to the church of this pariſh, and 2 s. 10 d. to the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem; and dying in 1335, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——John, 30 years old (c). He mortgaged this eſtate to Stephen Graveſend, biſhop of London (d). The time of his death we cannot find.

Joane Cobham, Lady de Grey, was poſſeſſed of this maner in 1392 (e).

Henry de Grey, of Codenoure, who dyed in 1443, held this maner of Thurrok Grey of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem. This ſhews, either that Piperell's maner, then in the hands of the ſaid Prior, was paramount here: Or elſe, by the Maner of Thurrok are only meant ſome other lands, improperly called here a Maner. For Henry de Grey was alſo ſeized of divers lands and tenements within the maner of Thurrok, called Clays. He married Elizabeth, daughter and one of the coheirs of Ralph Lord Baſſet of Sapcote (f); by whom he had——Henry.

Catharine Grey, widow of Sir William Berkley, that dyed 25 Novemb. 1521, held the maner of Thurrock Grey, and divers lands there, of the King in capite, as of his Honor of Mandeville, parcel of his Duchy of Lancaſter; Sir John Stourton Lord Stourton, ſixty years old, was her couſin and next heir (g) [K].

Sir John Zouch was lord of this maner in 1564 (h).

It belonged next to Thomas Kighley Eſq; deſcended from the Kighleys of Littleton in Worceſterſhire. He dyed poſſeſſed of it 21 April 1617 (i). By Margaret Littleton his wife, daughter of . . . Luce, he had——Thomas, his ſon and heir, born in 1582. He married Bridget, daughter of Edward Waldgrave of Lawford, Eſq;——Edward his ſon and heir, by his firſt wife, Jane, daughter of Sir William Ayloffe Kt. and Bart. had——Thomas, born in 1628; Bridget, Frances, Margaret, and Elizabeth: By his ſecond wife, Iſabella daughter of James Harvey of Dagenham, he had John.

Of this laſt Thomas, William Palmer Eſq; purchaſed this eſtate. He married Anne, third daughter of Sir Robert Smith of Upton Kt. and Bart. by whom he had——William, his ſon and heir; who dying in May 1710 without iſſue, gave this Maner and lands to Joſhua Palmer Eſq; ſon of Dr. Palmer of Devonſhire, for the ſake of the name, being no relation. It came after him to his ſon—Aſhley Palmer, of Eaton Soken, in Bedfordſhire Eſq; the other in this pariſh, ſet down in Domeſday-book; came by the marriage of Margaret, daughter and heir of William Peverell to the Ferrers Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 413.]

William Ferrers, Earl of Derby, is ſuppoſed to have given it to the Knights Hoſpitallers: For, of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem Henry de Grey held, in 1443, the maner of Thurrok Grey, as hath been obſerved a little above; which ſhews that they had a Maner here. Whatever it was, 'tis now involved with the Rectory, or Parſonage; the Manſion houſe of which ſtands in the fields, on the right hand ſide of the road leading from this Town to Weſt-Thurrock. It now belongs to John Van-Hattem of Buckinghamſhire Eſq;

William Palmer Eſq; founded a Free School here, near the Church, and ſettled 40 l. a year on a Maſter, to teach ten poor Children of this pariſh, to read, write, and caſt accounts, and to inſtruct them in the Latin tongue. The School-maſter is choſen by the owner of the manſion houſe [L].

He alſo gave to the Poor five chaudrons of coals, and clothing for four children, to be diſtributed November 5, yearly: and twenty ſhillings in bread, the firſt ſunday in the year.—Moreover, he ordered 20 s. for a ſermon on the 5th of November.—20 s. yearly for the repairing of the wharf, and highway leading thereto: a cauſey to be raiſed behind the ſtore-houſe: 40 s. per ann. to treat the pariſh officers, when they meet to ſettle accounts. Twelve Truſtees were appointed to look after the benefactions; when reduced to three, to chooſe new ones.

[K] Arms of Grey. Barry of 6, argent and azure.

Theſe Truſtees are to deduct their charges; and the reſidue to go for repairs.

The eſtates given by him for theſe uſes, were, a houſe in Lombard-ſtreet, then of 45 l. a year; another in occupation of Capt. Stiles, of 27 l. five meſſuages in White-croſs ſtreet of 24 l. one in Cripplegate pariſh of 4 l. another of 3 l. 4 s. Tot. 103 l. per ann.

Mr. Kighley gave to the Church 10 l. 6 s. 8 d. yearly.

A gift of 40 ſheep, loſt, afterwards recovered, and improved to 20 l. for the uſe of proceſſion in Rogation-week; viz. for a kilderkin of beer, a lead of cheeſe, and 6 dozen of bread.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is built in form of a croſs: The Tower ſtands on the north ſide of the Church, and contains 2 Bells. There was formerly on the top of it a Spire, now taken down.

This Church came from Peverell to the Ferrers family, with the other eſtate in this Pariſh. Some time after the year 1200, William, Earl de Ferrars, with the conſent of his heirs, granted the Church of Turrok, with all its appertenances, and whatever right he had in the ſame, to God, St. John the Baptiſt, and the Poor of the Hoſpital of Jeruſalem; in pure and perpetual alms, for the health of his ſoul, his wife's and his anceſtors and heirs (k). The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to them, and a Vicarage endowed, of which they continued patrons till their ſuppreſſion.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted this Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, to William Riggs, and Leonard Browne. [See under Folyat's-hall in High Onger.] The ſame year, they alienated them to William Goodwyn; who had licenſe, 17 May 1561, to ſell them to John Oſborne, and Andrew Oſborne (l). And John Oſborne, by licenſe dated 30 April 1569, alienated them again to Thomas Farnell, and Thomas Ruſſel (m). Tho: Farnell, in 1577, paſſed his moiety to Simon Farnell; whoſe heir John Farnell preſented to the living in 1578, as did John Ruſſel in 1580. Through whoſe hands it paſſed ſince, may be ſeen in Mr. Newcourt's Repertorium (n). William Kenwrick Eſq; was patron in 1692, and 1693. He ſold this eſtate to Sir Thomas Davall Kt. who dying in November 1712, was ſucceeded by his ſon Sir Thomas: upon whoſe deceaſe in June 1718, it came to his widow, Lydia-Catharine, daughter of Van-hattem, Eſq; re married to Henry Brydges, Duke of Chandos: ſhe dyed 18 Novemb. 1750. John Van-hattem Eſq; is the preſent owner.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 662 l.

6. STIFFORD

lies north of the two laſt-deſcribed Thurrocks; and is watered by the Stream that goes to Purfleet: There is a tradition that this little River was formerly navigable as far as Bulvan fenn. From a Ford through it was this Pariſh named. Sometimes it has the addition of Stifford-Clay, which made ſome fancy, that the Stiffneſs of the ſoil at the ford occaſioned the firſt part of the name. In records it is otherwiſe called Eſtinfort, and there is ſuch a Saxon name as Eaſt-inne, eaſtern coaſt; but how applicable to this place, we ſubmit to the reader's judgment.

The lands in this pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Aluric; Aluuin; and Berking Nunnery; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo, biſhop of Bayeux, and his undertenants Hugh, and the ſon of Turold: William Piperell, lord of Greys-Thurrock, had alſo ſome lands here; and William de Warenn 30 acres by way of exchange [M].

We hear no more, after this, of land here, belonging to Berking, or holden of that Nunnery. And as to William de Warenn's, the term of exchange is a comprehenſive word, and frequently ſignifies, in Domeſday-book, as much as ſeiſin without livery. So the whole Pariſh came ſoon into new hands, but nothing ſhews the next poſſeſſors after the Biſhop and Warenn. Odo was deprived of all his poſſeſſions in England by his half-brother William the Conqueror, as is obſerved elſewhere.

This pariſh was divided afterwards into 1. The maner of Stifford; and 2. . . . into that of Flete-hall.

1. The Maner of STIFFORD.

Stifford Hall ſtands a little way eaſt of the Church: and Ford-houſe about half a mile north-weſt of the ſame, on the north ſide of the Brook.

The earlieſt poſſeſſors of it upon record, after thoſe already mentioned, were the Crammavill family, of the neighbouring pariſh of Rainham. In 1199, a fine paſſed between John Becket, nephew of Thomas Archbiſhop of that ſurname, and William de Crammavill for one hide and a half of land with appertenances in Stifford and Thurrock (o).

John de Hamme, who dyed in 1319, held one meſſuage, ſixty acres of arable, and 13 s. rent in Styford, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of 4 d. per an.——Robert de Hamme was his ſon and heir (p). The Biſhop had nothing at Stifford: but this probably was an appendage to his adjoining Maners of Orſet, or Little Thurrock. Or elſe, the Abbey of Weſtminſter, being lords at Wenington, might have lands extending into this pariſh, and the Biſhop ſeems named here as a protector of the Abbey Lands. There is ſome countenance for this from records, where a man is ſaid to hold of the Archbiſhop; and another, in the next reign, of Chriſt-Church. David de Tillebury, who dyed in 1330, held in Stifford one meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, and 20 s. rent, of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee (q).——Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Torrell, at the time of her deceaſe in 1394, held thirty acres of arable in Stifford of the Prior and Convent of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by the ſervice of doing ſuit at their view of frank pledge at Stifford-Hethe once a year;——Richard Torell was her ſon (r). From this account one would imagine Archbiſhop Becket had placed money in his nephew's hands, to purchaſe lands to be given to the Convent of Canterbury.

There is good reaſon to believe, that the maner of Stifford came into a family ſurnamed de Tilbury, or Tylleberg, about the time of K. Edward II. which we find at Weſt-Tilbury as early as the reign of K. Henry II. We find them again granting away Weſt-Tilbury to Richard Abell, in K. Edward the Second's reign. And we have ſeen here David de Tilbury holding lands in Stifford of the Archbiſhop; He probably was ſon or heir of him that parted with Weſt-Tilbury. This David de Tillebury lies buried here, with a French epitaph, without date. It is farther probable, that this David's ſon, dropping the Name of de Tilbury, aſſumed that of de Stifford; for Sabina, a widow, buried here, without a date, calls herſelf the wife of David de Stifford.

The eſtate was for ſome generations in the Ardale family. One of whom, William Ardale, was returned for a Gentleman of Eſſex, in 1433 (s) [N]. John Ardale, as appears from his epitaph, was Lord of Stifford, and dyed 31 May 1504.

Thomaſine, daughter and heir of John Ardall, Gent. was married to Robert Latham, ſecond ſon of Hugh Latham of North Ockingdon Eſq; and brought him this eſtate. She had for her ſecond huſband Richard Badby; Gent. and dyed 30 June 1532 (t). Ralph Latham Eſq; their eldeſt ſon, was of Upminſter.——Thomas Latham Eſq; the ſecond ſon, held the maner of Stifford of Sir John Zouche, as of his maner of Greyes Thurrocke, by fealty, and yearly rent of 8 s. 3 d. per ann. then of the yearly value of 20 marks. He dyed 27 Septemb. 1563, leaving——Ralph, his ſon, aged 32 years (u).——William Latham Eſq; the next poſſeſſor, dyed 26 Auguſt 1622. He married Suſan, daughter of Simon Sampſon, of Carſey in Suffolk Eſq; and had by her——Thomas, who took to wife Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Bernard, citizen of London. She dyed 14 Septemb. 1630, in the 37th. year of her age (w).——Thomas, their ſon, married Barbara, daughter of . . . Wakefeild, of London, vintner, and had by her——Thomas, who married Mary Croſsley of Alveley.

Richard May had this eſtate afterwards. And then James Silverlock Eſq; who ſold it to Nathanael Grantham Eſq; couſin of the Granthams of Weſt Thurrock. He dyed 24 April 1708, and is buried in this Church.——Kenwrick Grantham Eſq; was his ſon.

Iſaac Thorley, Gent. was the next poſſeſſor. Of him it was purchaſed by Andrew Goodwin; whoſe ſon——Henry Goodwin, of Marſhalls near Romford, alienated it, about 1738, to Henry Barrett, of Southwark, for 5400 l. The latter gave it to his daughter, wiſe of Richard Cooke, of Foſter-lane London. But, under a mortage of Kenwrick Grantham's, it came to John Archer Shiſh Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor.

He hath ſold Ford-Houſe, or Place, to Captain Dodſworth.

2. The Maner of FLET-HALL, otherwiſe CLAYS.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north-eaſt from the Church, on the eaſt ſide of the Brook.

Till K. Henry VII's time we hear not of the name, of Flet-hall, nor is it to be diſtinguiſhed whoſe lands theſe were at the time of the general Survey. It is moſt probable they were in the Family of Bruyn of South-Okendon; for, in 1462, Maurice Bruyn Kt. and Elizabeth his wife, granted to Sir John Clay, and John Crow- land, and others, the maners of South-Okendon and Stifford, which they lately received from Philippa late Ducheſs of York (x). This ſeems to have been done for the ſake of a ſettlement. ——Sir Henry Bruyn, ſon of Sir Maurice, married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon, Eſq; She dyed in 1471, leaving two daughters, Elizabeth, and Alice, coheirs (y).

Elizabeth was thrice married, 1. to William Malory, Eſq; 2. to Thomas Tyrell, ſecond ſon of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, 3. to Sir William Brandon, ſtandard-bearer to K. Henry VII. at Boſworth-feild.

Alice had three huſbands, Robert Harleſton, Eſq, Sir John Heningham; and William Berners Eſq; The eſtate in Stifford fell to her ſhare. In her right, Sir John Heningham, who dyed 10 May 1499, held the maner of Flet-Hall, and a mill with appertenances in Stifford, of the King, as of his Honor of Hagenet, by the ſervice of the 20th. part of a knight's fee. He had alſo two parts of the Advowſon of this Church; the maners of South-Okendon, Goldhanger, Little Totham, and Breghall.—Thomas, his ſon and heir, was fifty years old (z).——Sir John Heveningham, who dyed 4 Auguſt 1536, doth not appear to have had Flet-hall, though the other eſtates belonged to him. But his ſon ——Sir Antony Heveningham, at the time of his deceaſe, 22 Novemb. 1557, held Flete-hall of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayleigh.——Henry, his ſon and heir, was then 20 years old (a).

Antony Bradſhawe, who was buried in this Church in 1636, Judith his wife in 1641, and William their ſon in 1649, were of Stifford-Clays (b); but whether owners, or tenants, is not ſaid.

By the preſentations to this Living, it is probable, that this eſtate belonged ſome time to the families of Harleſton, Durning, Twiſden, and Wyld (c): As it did not long ago to . . . Goodwin, and afterwards to . . . Smith.

A maner here called Tendering, and lands and tenements holden of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, belonged to Joane Bradbury, who dyed 11 May 1530. Her heir was her grandſon John Bodeley (d). [Concerning her, ſee in the other Volume, p. 124. 480.] Who had theſe lands afterwards we do not find, nor into what others they are incorporated.

At the eaſt end of this Village, Jaſper Kinſman Eſq; hath a very handſom Houſe, and Gardens. See under South-Okendon.

The Clock-houſe, anciently named Loveland, now an Ale-houſe here known by the ſign of the Dog and Partridge, belonged to Sir Thomas Gourney, Kt. Sheriff of this County in 1622, who had the Advowſon of this Church; and ſeveral parcels of land [O]. He dyed 3 April 1631 (e). His father Richard Gourney, Alderman of London, dyed 5 March 1596 (f). Over the porch of the houſe are theſe Letters, and date T. G. H. 1607.

John Dunning Eſq; gave by will 26s. to this Pariſh, which was charged by deed upon the late Mr. Latham's eſtate.

Here is alſo an Alms-houſe for two dwellers.

In Stifford-ſtreet a Pottery was ſet up by Kenwrick Grantham Eſq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands pleaſantly. Beſides the body, it hath a ſouth aiſle, and the Chancel a ſouth Chapel, all tyled. The Tower is topped with a ſpire, ſhingled, and contains 3 Bells.

This Rectory was for a long time in the gift of the Bruyn family of South-Okendon, who had alſo a Maner here, as we have ſhewn. But it ſeems to have been alſo alternately in the Torell family of Weſt Thurrock (g), it being held originally of the maner of Greys Thurrock.

Sir Ingelram Bruyn, who dyed in 1399, or 1400, held two acres of land in Stifford and the advowſon of two parts of the Church of Stifford, of the Lord Grey (h). Elizabeth, widow of Sir Maurice Bruyn, at the time of her deceaſe in 1471, held thoſe two acres of land, and the advowſon of two parts of this Church belonging to the ſaid two acres, of the Lord Grey (i).

From her they deſcended to her younger daughter Alice's heirs, as above mentioned; namely to Sir John Heningham who dyed in 1498; Sir Clement Harleſton in 1550; John Harleſton Eſq; in 1568; Thomas Harleſton in 1572; and Robert Harleſton in 1573 (k) [P]. It was afterwards in Sir Thomas Gourney; Henry Joſſelyn Eſq; heir of the Torells; in John Durning Eſq; and others.

Edmund Noble, of London, vintner, having purchaſed it in the laſt century, ſold it in 1706 to Kenrick Grantham Eſq;

OKENDON

North of Stifford and Alveley are two contiguous Pariſhes of this name, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of South and North, in reference to their ſituation. Okingdon, Wokendon, Wokindon, Wokyndon, Wochaduna, and Lackington, are the other different ways they are ſtyled in records: And, whether from the Saxon Ac inᵹ ðun, i. e. Oak paſture hill; or from Wocen, or Woca, a proper name, they were ſo called; I am not able to determine.

7. SOUTH-OKENDON

is denominated Rokele, from its ancient owners as will appear in the ſequel; and ad Turrim, from the Church having a Tower-Steeple, as Little Eaſton and Bumſted were.

This pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Frebert a Thegn; and, at the time of the Survey, was part of the large poſſeſſions of Geffrey de Magnaville [Q].

It was divided afterwards into the two Maners, 1. . . . of Bruyns. 2. . . . of Groves.

The capital Seat was a ſtately one, not far from the Church, on the right hand ſide of the road leading to Warley and Burntwood. Little of it remains now but the front, which is of ſtone, in the Gothick ſtyle. It was encompaſſed by a moat, very wide, and full of fine clear water.

In the reign of K. Henry II. Hugh de Ou held of Geffrey de Mandeville, in Eſſex, one knight's fee, and William de Rochelle three parts of a knight's fee, of the new feoffment (l): which ſeems to have been this eſtate. In ſome deeds, William de Ou is ſtyled William de Rochelle (m). Probably he married a daughter of Hugh, and ſo came into this Maner. [Concerning the Family de Ou, which gave name to Willingale D'ou, ſee in the other Volume, p. 477.]—— Sir Richard de la Rokele, who dyed 13 Decemb. 1222, at his maner of Wokingdon, had, by Maud his wife,——a Son, to whom the King confirmed this maner, to be held of Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford. His ſon —— Richard de la Rokele, held it alſo of the Earl of Hereford, by knight's ſervice; and dying in 1277, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Philip (n). The latter, at the time of his deceaſe in 1295, held of the Earl of Hereford, in Wokindon, by the ſervice of three knights fees and a half, 1 meſſuage, 400 acres of arable, 24 acr. of meadow; 20 of paſture, 20 of wood, 10 of heath, a wind-mill, and 32 s. 10 d. rent of the free-tenants.——Maud, his daughter and heir (o), was married to the Lord Grey [R].

Iſolda, another daughter and co-heir of his, brought this eſtate in marriage to Sir William de Brune, or Bruyn, of the Bed-Chamber to K. Edward I; was ſo much in favour with that Prince, that he gave him the Maner of Beckingham in Kent: And his wife, Iſolda, who was Lady of the Bed-Chamber to Queen Alianore, obtained alſo from her ſeveral lordſhips. They had——Maurice their ſon and heir; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 17 March 1354, held this maner of Wokyndon Rokele, with the Advowſon of the Church, by the law of England, after the death of Maud his wife.——William was their ſon (p); afterwards knighted. He married Alice, daughter and heir of Richard Lair of London; and in 1357 they levied a Fine for this maner, and advowſon of the Church and Chapel of this village, and the Hoſpital of St. John de Brook. He dyed 24 February 1361, leaving ——Ingelram his ſon and heir (q). His widow Alice was re-married to Sir Robert Marney; who, 20 March 1370, had this maner releaſed to him for a term of years; and afterwards his ſon in law granted it to him by deed in 1377. Sir Robert preſented to this Living five times in thirty-one years, and, all but the laſt time, upon the death of the Incumbents (r).

Sir Ingelram Bruyn held this maner, with appertenances, of the Counteſs of Hereford, by the ſervice of one knight's fee and a half; and the advowſon of this Church; with the advowſon of the free Chapel of St. John Baptiſt of Sedebourghbroke. He dyed 7 Auguſt 1400. Elizabeth his widow, daughter and coheir of Sir Edmund de la Pole held in dower the third part of this maner, till her deceaſe 1406 (s).——Maurice their ſon and heir was in wardſhip to the King, who preſented to the Rectory upon that ſcore in 1400; but he himſelf preſented from 1408 to 1446, being a Knight, and Sheriff for Eſſex and Hertfordſhire, in 1424, and 1436 [S]. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Ratford of Ireby, he had——Sir Henry Bruyn his ſon and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Darcy of Maldon Eſq; [T] When he dyed doth not appear; but She dyed in 1471, leaving Alice, late wife of Robert Harleſton Eſq; and Elizabeth, wife of fell to the ſhare of Elizabeth, who had three Huſbands; 1. William Malory Eſq; by whom ſhe had no iſſue; 2. Thomas Tyrell Eſq; 3. Sir William Brandon, Standard-bearer to K. Elizabeth Brandon dyed 26 March 1494. She held the maner of South-Wokindon, and Advowſon of the Church, of Elizabeth Queen of England, by the ſervice of a knight's fee; —— Hugh Tyrell her ſon, by her ſecond huſband, was her heir (u).——William, his brother, ſucceeded him, and married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Bodley Eſq; They had two ſons, John who dyed without iſſue, and —— Humfrey. This laſt, who dyed 15 January 1548, held of the King, as of his Earldom of Hereford, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 3 s. 4 d. to the King, payable to the Dutchy of Lancaſter; the maner of South-Okindon, and 400 acres of arable, as much of paſture, 100 of meadow, forty of wood, and 12 s. 10 d. rent in South-Okingdon; and certain parcels of land, called Colcarters, Chamberlyns, Hamptonys, Boſts, Wreſts, Geppys, Nether-Crofts, Cokehedds-Crofte, and Le Forge (w). By Jane his wife, daughter and heir of Robert Ingleton, of Thornton, he had——George Tyrell of Thornton in Buckinghamſhire, and of Okingdon in Eſſex, Eſq; his ſon and heir; who dyed 10 May 1571, poſſeſſed of a moiety of this maner; which he held in fee-tail, to him and the heirs of the body of his firſt wife Helen (x). She was daughter of Sir Edward Montague of Boughton, Lord Chief Juſtice of England, anceſtor to the Earls of Sandwich and Halifax. By her he had, Edward, William, Thomas; and Margery, wife of Thomas Yorke. His ſecond wife was Margery, daughter of . . . Cooke of Cheſter.——Edward Tyrell Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, being a Knight, was created a Baronet 31 Octob. 1627 (y) [W].

The genealogy of the Family makes William Tyrell, ſecond ſon of George, alienate Bruyns, but ſhews not to whom. By this one would believe it was ſettled on him by his father.

The next owner we find was William Petre of Stanford-Rivers, Eſq; He ſold it to Jaſper Kinſman of Ardern-Hall in Horndon on the Hill, who gave it, from his eldeſt ſon, to his couſin——Joſias Kinſman, and to his ſon ——Joſias Kinſman Eſq; who dyed poſſeſſed of it: As did his brother——Jaſper Kinſman Eſq; at Stifford 29 May 1754; from whom it deſcended to his ſon——Jaſper Kinſman Eſq;

The Maner of GROVES.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile north of this Church.

This was the part of Alice, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Bruyn. She had three huſbands; 1. Robert Harleſton Eſq; 2. Sir John Heningham, 3. William Berners Eſq; Harleſton, the firſt huſband, left iſſue. But K. Richard III. upon the attainder of William Brandon, having reſtored to Sir John Heningham, a moiety of this maner, and the advowſon of the Church, he dyed poſſeſſed of them 10 May 1499.——Thomas Heningham was his ſon and heir (z). [See under Stifford.]

The ſame year K. Henry VII. preſented to this Church, as well by reaſon of the death of Sir John Hennyngham, as of the minority of the ſon and heir of John Harleſton. The Preſentation was at this time alternate between the heirs of Bruyn's two daughters, for Humfrey Tyrell Eſq; ſon of William, preſented in 1535, in his turn (a).——John, ſon of Robert Harleſton Eſq; of Shington, married Jane, daughter of Thomas Higham; and had by her——Clement, afterwards knighted, who by . . . . his wife daughter of William Tey, of Layer de la Hay, had 4 ſons, John, Henry, Clement, and Antony. He held the ſite and capital meſſuage and manſion of the maner of South-ookindon, and 7 meſſuages, 6 tofts, 8 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 1000 of paſture, 100 of meadow, and 100 of wood, in this pariſh; and the Advowſon of the Church; of the King, as of the Honor of Hertford, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. He dyed 27 March 1550, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——John, then aged 37 years (b). He was alſo knighted, and had two wives, namely, Mildred, daughter of Sir John Munday, and Mary, daughter of . . . . Felton. By the firſt, he had, Robert, born in 1539; Thomas; William; Juliana, Joanna, Frances, [U] Sir William Dugdale makes Thomas Brandon brother of William, huſband to Elizabeth Bruyn; but, if the following Roll be authority, William muſt have been the perſon, who was huſband to the ſaid Elizabeth. 'William Tyrell, brother and heir of Hugh Tyrell, who was ſon and heir of Elizabeth, who was wife of Sir William Brandon, and lately the wife of Thomas Tyrell Eſq; and likewiſe of William Malory Eſq; and one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir Henry Bruyn, and Elizabeth his wife, acknowledged himſelf to hold a moiety of the maner of Begenham, &c. of the King in capite.' Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. II. p. 299. Liber Relevior' 12 Hen. VII. rot. 2. Trin. Fin.——William Brandon, of South-Okendon Eſq; was witneſs to a deed, 1 Edw. V. in Lord Dacre's poſſeſſion. This William Brandon had been Eſquire of the body to K. Edward IV.

[W] This Sir Edward Tyrrell had, by his ſecond wife, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Aſton of Cheſhire Eſq; Sir Timothy Tyrrell Kt. whoſe ſon, Sir Timothy Tyrell, by Elizabeth his wife, ſole daughter and heir of the moſt learned Archbiſhop Uſher, was father of James Tyrrell Eſq; author of the General Hiſtory of England, 5 Vols. fol. Bibliotheca Politica, &c.

Margaret, Elizabeth. And by the ſecond, Mary, married firſt to Gilbert Saltonſtall, and afterwards to . . . Dyngley. Sir John Harleſton dying 28 February 1568, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Robert (c). He held of the Honor of Tutbury, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, the maner place of South-Okindon, with fiſh-ponds, warenn, and 200 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, parcel of that maner: a meſſuage called Mollands, and 300 acres of land; another meſſuage called Rowleys, with 60 acres of land, in this pariſh; another meſſuage, and 60 acres of land, in this pariſh and Stifford, named Hobbes and Fordes: and ſeveral other parcels. He dyed 28 January 1569; without iſſue.——Thomas, his next brother and ſucceſſor, departed this life 11 Auguſt 1572. By Mary his wife, daughter of Rowland Lytton, he had ——John, his only ſon (d): who dyed 13 April 1626, leaving——John, aged thirteen years, and 8 months (e).

It appears above, that Mary, daughter of Sir John Harleſton by his ſecond wife, was married to Gilbert Saltonſtall Eſq; deſcended from the ancient family of that ſurname of Halifax in Yorkſhire; and eldeſt ſon of Richard Saltonſtall of London, merchant-adventurer. Gilbert dyed 17 Novemb. 1585, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph. He doth not appear to have had any iſſue; but, in all probability, the Half of this maner had been ſettled in marriage upon him, remainder to his Heirs: Or elſe his father had purchaſed it, for he preſented to this Living in 1590. He was afterwards knighted, and Lord Mayor of London in 1598. By Suſan his wife, only daughter of Thomas Poyntz of North-Okendon, with whom he lived fifty years 'in the chaſt and holy Lawes of marriage (f),' he had 7 ſons, and 9 daughters, of whom 4 ſons and 7 daughters ſurvived him; and having arrived to the age of 80 years, he dyed 17 March 1601, and was buried in this Church, with an epitaph. At the time of his deceaſe, he held a moiety of the maner, of South-Wokingdon, and divers lands and meſſuages; and a moiety of the advowſon of this Church: alſo the tenement, or meſſuage, called Graves or Groves-land, formerly parcel of the endowment of a Chantry in the Pariſh Church of Grace-Church, in London [X]: and divers lands and tenements in Stifford. ——Richard is ſaid to be his ſon and heir (g). But he had undoubtedly this eſtate of the gift of his father; for, according to the pedigree, Sir Samuel, Sir Peter [Y], and Edward were older than him. Richard was knighted, and held the moiety of this maner, and of all other lands and tenements, aſſured, as well as not aſſured, upon his marriage: with the moiety of the Advowſon of this Church; and the meſſuage called Groves. He dyed 11 Decemb. 1619, leaving——Sir Richard Saltonſtall Kt. his ſon and heir, aged 23 years (h). His ſon, or grandſon,——Philip Saltonſtall, lord of this vill, Patron of the Church, dyed by a fall from his horſe, 14 Septemb. 1668, in the 33d year of his age. He had ſix children; by Alice his wife, daughter of ——Graham, namely, Miſericord, Anne, Philip, Richard, Mary, and James.——Philip, the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Sarah, daughter of Sir Capell Luckyn of Meſſing Bart. afterwards remarried to Dacre-Barrett Lennard, of Alveley Eſq; [See under that pariſh]. By her huſband Saltonſtall ſhe had —Philippa [Z], who became the wife of John Goodere of Claybury Eſq; and brought him this part of the maner and eſtate in marriage. And it continues in that Family.

Pointz, is a Houſe here, belonging formerly to Admiral Littelton.

Mr. James Harrold, and the heirs of Mr. Edward Cheſlyn, have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

John Crowland, Rector of this pariſh, gave by will lands in North-Okendon, called Crowlands, for the reparation of the Church, and to the Poor. After the ſuppreſſion of Chantries, K. Edward VI. gave them to Tho: Golding (i).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is pleaſantly ſituated. It conſiſts of a body, and a north aiſle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel: both the latter are leaded, but the body of the Church, and the Chancel, are tyled. The Tower is round, after the Daniſh faſhion, and embattled. There was on it a leaden Spire, which was fired by lightning, and burnt down in December 1638.

The Advowſon of this Rectory was at firſt in the Bruyn Family. After the diviſion of the Maner and eſtates here, the Preſentation became alternate in their heirs, and ſucceſſors.

Some have fancied, that here was in old time only a Free-Chapel; grounding themſelves upon a Preſentation of Sir Maurice de Bruyn to the Free-Chapel of Sedebourghbroke, in 1326 (k). But this Free Chapel was in the Hoſpital of Brook-ſtreet, which was alſo in the gift of the ſaid Sir Maurice. And we find the Advowſon of the Church of South-Wokendon, and the Advowſon of that Free Chapel, diſtinguiſhed in the Inquiſitions poſt mortem (l) [A].

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1307 l.

8. NORTHOKENDON,

as the name imports, lies North of the other. It is otherwiſe written in records Wokyndon Septem Fontium, or Fontan,' either from ſome owner of that ſurname; or from Seven Fountains, or Springs, formerly famous here.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to Earl Harold; and, at the time of the Survey, to the Abbey of St. Peter's at Weſtminſter: Of which, part was held of the Abbot by William Camerarius, or the Chamberlain [B].

We hear no more of the Abbey of Weſtminſter here, and may conclude the land went away in exchange, or what was called ſo. William Camerarius, a Courtier, the Chamberlain, having made a beginning here, probably got a grant of the reſt.

From the year 1086 to 1315, no mention occurrs in records of the owners of this eſtate. In 9 Edw. II. John Malegreſſe was poſſeſſed of it: For then a Fine paſſed between William Bawdewyn, plaintiff, and John Malegreſſe, deforc', of two meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 10 of paſture, two of wood, and 10 s. rent, with appertenances, in Wokendon ſeptem Fontibus and Wokendon-Rokele (m). William Baudewin was buried in this Church in 1316 (n). In 1320, it belonged to Baldwyn, ſon of William de Wokyndon Setfantayna [C]. And a fine was levied in 1321, between this Baldwyn, ſon of William de Wokindon Seet Fountaynes, and Emma his wife, plaintiffs, and B——, Parſon of the Church of Seet-Fountaynes deforc' of the maner of Seet-Fountaynes, and Advowſon of the Church of the ſaid maner (o). This B—— muſt be Bartholomew Baldwyn: The London Regiſtry ſhews, he quitted the living, and Henry de Wokyndon, was inſtituted, in 1326. Whether he was proprietor or truſtee, nothing ſhews.

Soon after, by the marriage of Elianor, daughter and heireſs of . . . Baldwyn, this eſtate came into the ancient Family of Pointz, originally of Tokington in Glouceſterſhire. The firſt mentioned in the Pedigree, is Sir John Pointz, who by . . . daughter and heir of Sir John Glanbow, had his ſon, Sir John Pointz, who married . . . . ſiſter and heir of Sir John Acton, and had by her Sir Robert Pointz, whoſe wife was Catharine, daughter and heir of Thomas Fitz-Nicholl. They had two ſons, Nicolas, and Thomas. Nicolas, the eldeſt, took to his firſt wife Elizabeth daughter of Henry Huſſey, by whom he had one daughter, Jane. By his ſecond wife, . . . daughter of . . . Milles of Glouceſterſhire, he had two ſons, 1. John; whoſe ſon, Sir Robert, married Margaret daughter of Antony Wodville, Earl Rivers.

2. Henry Pointz Eſq; the ſecond ſon of Nicolas, married Elianor, daughter and heir of William Bawdin of this pariſh, and came and ſettled here. By her he had one ſon, John; and two daughters, Agnes, married to William Copdo of South-Wokendon, Gent. and Margaret to John Fuller of Cavendiſh.——John Pointz Eſq; the ſon and heir, by Elianor his wife, daughter and one of the coheirs of Sir John Dancote, had John his ſon; and two daughters, Matilda, wife of John Barrett of Alveley Eſq; and Margaret, of John de Bures, Gent.——John Pointz Eſq; ſucceſſor to his father in this eſtate, married Maud, daughter, and one of the coheirs, of William Perte of Alveley Gent. by whom he had—— William, and ſeveral other children. William, by Elizabeth his wife, ſiſter of Sir John Shaa, Lord Mayor of London, had John, Thomas, Henry, and other children. They both dyed in 1500.——John, the eldeſt ſon, married Anne, ſiſter and heir of Iſaac Sibley of Buckinghamſhire; and dyed 16 June 1558; but having no iſſue was ſucceeded by his brother——Thomas Pointz Eſq; He is the firſt of this Family mentioned in the Inquiſitions poſt mortem; which is very uncommon. At the time of his deceaſe, 5 May 1562, he held this Maner, with appertenances, and 6 meſſuages, 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 500 of paſture, 200 of wood, 100 of marſh, 20 l. rent &c. in North and South Wokenden, Alveley, Upminſter, South-weald, Brend-wood, Warley, Childerdiche, Dunton, Eſt Horndon, Greys-Turrock, and Bulvan; and the Advowſon of this Church of North-Wokenden, of the Queen in free ſocage, by fealty (p). It is ſaid in his Epitaph, that for his moſt faithful ſervice to his Prince, [K. Edward VI. we ſuppoſe,] and his moſt ardent profeſſion of the truth of the Goſpel, he ſuffered bonds and impriſonment beyond ſea, and was deſtined to death, if he had not wonderfully eſcaped out of priſon by the divine aſſiſtance. He married Anne Van Calva, daughter and one of the coheirs of John Calva Eſq; a German; by whom he had, Gabriel, afterwards knighted; Ferdinand; Robert: and one daughter named Suſanna, wife of Sir Richard Saltonſtall, of South-Okendon.——Sir Gabriel Pointz, the eldeſt ſon, born in 1538 [D], married Etheldred, daughter of Peter Cutts, of Arkeſden, Eſq; widow of Ralph Latham, of this pariſh, Eſq; and had by her, Thomas, who dyed without iſſue; and Catharine, ſole heireſs to this eſtate, which ſhe brought in marriage to her huſband Sir John Morice, of Cheping-Ongar in this County. They had 4 ſons, and 3 daughters (q), and among the reſt——John, their eldeſt ſon, who took the ſurname of Pointz, alias Morice, and was knighted 22 May 1603. He dyed 31 January, 1617-18, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Sir James Pointz, alias Morice, Kt. who alſo departed this life 31 Auguſt 1623 [E].

The latter held this maner of North-Wokendon; the capital meſſuage called Groves, or North Ockendon-hall, with divers lands, in the adjoyning pariſhes, belonging to this maner; and the maner of Poyntz in South-Ockenden. And, in Bulſan, tenements called Wicks, otherwiſe Gyrlſty, and Frithes: in Little Thurrock, Saveryngs, Berds Court, Swaynes, &c. He had alſo the eſtates in Ongar; Maſcalls-bury, in White-Roding; and Abbots-hall in Great Wigborough (r). By Mary his wife, one of the daughters of Sir Richard Smith of Leeds Caſtle in Kent, he had his only ſon——Richard Pointz, alias Morice, Eſq; who dyed, unmarried, at Montauban in France 15, 1643, and was buried there [F].

This eſtate then came by marriage to the Family of Lyttelton, or Littleton, deſcended from the famous Judge, Sir Thomas Lyttelton, author of the Treatiſe on Tenures. According to the account of this Branch of the Family, Sir Adam Littleton, Bart. married Audria, daughter of Thomas Pointz Eſq; I preſume this Thomas muſt have been a younger ſon of the firſt Sir John Pointz, alias Morice, and uncle to Richard, and that by her the eſtate came to Sir Adam Littleton, created a Baronet 14 Octob. 1642, and then ſtyled of Stoke-Milburgh in Shropſhire. He had 4 ſons, Thomas, William, Edward, and James. Sir Thomas Littleton, alias Pointz, his eldeſt ſon and heir, married Anne, daughter and heir of Edward Lord Littleton, Lord Keeper, and had by her an only ſon. He dyed 12 April 1681, aged 57 years, and was buried here, as alſo was his Lady, who dyed 27 Novemb. 1705, aged 82.—Sir Thomas their ſon, born 3 April 1657, after a ſuitable education at Oxford, and the Inns of Court, was made Commiſſary of Prizes; was member in ſeveral Parliaments; and Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, in 1698. He married Anne, daughter of Benjamin Baron of Weſtcote in Glouceſterſhire, Eſq; and dying 1 January 1709, was buried here, with a monument. By will he gave this eſtate to his Lady for life; and having no iſſue, left it after her, [who dyed 21 July 1714,] to his kinſman, or great nephew, James Littleton of Longueville in Surrey Eſq; who by his firſt wife Suſan, daughter of——Meddlicot of London, widow of Mr. White Attorney at Law, had——James his ſon and heir, who being bred to the Sea, became at length Vice-Admiral of the White, and was alſo Member of Parliament for Woodſtock, and for Chicheſter, and Portſmouth. He married Jane, only daughter of Richard Bunch M. D. by whom he had iſſue Thomas, and other children. He dyed 5 Feb. 1722, and was buried here, the Admirals Jennings, Wager, Norris, Hoſier, De la Vall, and Strickland, ſupporting the pall. His only ſon——Thomas Littleton Eſq; dyed before him without iſſue: and his daughter, Suſanna, was married to Sir Barnham Rider, of Kent, Kt. [G].

The eſtate is in Littleton Poyntz Meynell Eſq;

There was paid out of this maner a yearly rent of 10l. and 4s. for a common Fine and View of Frankpledge, within this Maner; alſo 5s. yearly rent for a meſſuage called Baldwins and Wards in this pariſh and Upminſter; and for the Advowſon of the Rectory: All which ſums K. Henry VIII. granted to John Pointz, and his heirs for ever (s).

Stubbers, is an ancient ſeat or capital meſſuage in this pariſh, about half a mile weſt from the Church, which anciently belonged to the Family of Coys, of Welch original.

Gwillim ap Jenkyn, alias Herbert, of Guorney in Monmouthſhire, by his wife Gwenlian, daughter and heir of William Howell, ap Jovan ap Howell, had iſſue John ap Gwillim; David Howell ap Gwillim; and Thomas ap Gwillim, alias Herbert.——John was father of——Roger Coys of London, who by Joane his wife, daughter of Robert Warren, of the ſame place, and of Thurlow in Suffolk, had one ſon, William, and ſeven daughters. ——William Coys, of North-Okendon Eſq; married Mary, ſecond daughter of Giles Alleyn of Haſeley-hall Eſq; and had by her 8 ſons, and 6 daughters. He dyed 6 March 1627, and ſhe 13 March 1617; and both are buried in this Church with an epitaph. ——Giles Coys Eſq; was their eldeſt ſon and heir.

It was purchaſed by Sir William Ruſſel Kt. of a Worceſterſhire family. From him it came to his ſon——William Ruſſel Eſq; mentioned in the other Volume, p. 573. He married Mary, daughter of Samuel Saville of Colcheſter Eſq; and had by her——William, his ſon and heir; who dying 6 October 1754, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John Ruſſel Eſq;

Mr. William Mayes, hath alſo ſome Lands here.

Richard Pointz Eſq; above-mentioned, left by will, in 1643, the ſum of 200l. to be laid out in the purchaſe of land for the Poor. With this money was bought a Farm, of about 40 acres of land, called Stedding-hill, lying in the pariſh of Horndon on the Hill.

He alſo gave 50l. to purchaſe Plate for the Communion.

9. CRANHAM,

appears in Records by this name no higher than the reign of K. Edward IV. Okendon, or Wokendon, was at firſt a name common to this diſtrict; which, when it came to be divided into three Lordſhips, received the three diſtinguiſhing appellations of South, and North, Okendon, and this in particular of Wokendon-Epiſcopi, i. e. the Biſhop's, becauſe at the time of the Survey it belonged to the Biſhop of London, and his undertenant Hugh. But, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it had belonged to Aluric [H]. The name of Cranham ſeems taken up for brevity, to avoid ſo long a one as Biſhop's-Okendon [I].

This is one of the eighteen Maners entered in Domeſday-book, under the title of Feudum Ep'i Londonienſis; diſtinct from the Terra Ep'i Londonienſis. The Feudum ſeems to me the Biſhop's private eſtate granted upon the Conqueſt, and the Biſhop to have been Gul. Normannus, or his ſucceſſor Hugh de Orevalle, both foreigners, perhaps of great merit; or nearly related to the Conqueror, or ſome of his great men. The names of theſe Lordſhips are for the greateſt part loſt, and I believe abſorbed in other eſtates. Some few of them were afterwards in the See of London, which I cannot account for, unleſs that Biſhop, who had the grant upon the Conqueſt, ſettled them upon his ſucceſſors [K].

If this maner was ſettled upon the See of London, and holden of the Biſhop in the time of K. Edward III. as we ſhall preſently obſerve it was, it is much we ſhould hear no more of the Biſhop here till the time of K. Henry VIII. and after that, he is ſaid only to have the Leet. For, if the Maner were at any time taken from the See, how came the Leet to remain? But however ſo it was.

Cranham-hall,

the maner-houſe is ſituated near the Church.

Nicolas de Halughton, heir of Joane, daughter of Nicolas de Wokingdon, claimed free-warren in Wokingdon, Braxted, and Chaldwell (u). He held the maner of Wokendon-Powell [L], of the Biſhop of London, and three parts of the maner of Little Braxted, and lands in Terling, and the maner of Chaldwell, of the ſame Biſhop, by knight's ſervice. He dyed in 1339, leaving —— Margaret and Joane his daughters and heirs (w).

In 1399, a fine was levied between Sir Thomas Erpingham, James Billingford, William Wolſeley, William Burgh, and William Trendle, Chaplain, plaintiffs, and Sir John Curſon, and Beatrix his wife, deforc' for this maner; the right of William Trendle (x). The ſame year, Sir John Curſon granted to Sir John Erpingham, and James de Ballingford, 120 cows and four bulls within the maner of Wokyndon-Epiſcopi.

In 1407, Nicolas Seyntleger Eſq; releaſes to Sir John Curſon, and his wife, and to Byllingford, Burgh, and Trendle, and to John Filyoll, all his right in this maner. And in 1421, William Trendye, or Trendle, Parſon of the Church of Ingeldeſthorpe in Norfolk, releaſes all his right in the ſame, to Sir John Curſon and his heirs (y).

[I] I ſhould imagine it came from a reſort of Cranes here, the Hawking of which was an ancient ſport. And if we would gueſs by the bills of fare into which Cranes come, and the price of Proviſions, remarked by our Hiſtorians, in the time of K. Edward I. we muſt imagine the ſtomachs of that fighting age of a ſtrange tone. By order of Council, a fat cock was to be ſold at three half-pence, a fat capon two pence half-penny, two pullets three half-pence, a gooſe four pence, a malard or a partridge three half-pence, a pheaſant four pence, a Heron ſix pence, a plover a penny, a ſwan three ſhillings, a Crane twelve pence, two woodcocks three half-pence, a fat lamb, from Chriſtmas to Shrovetide, ſixteen pence, and all the year after four pence, and wheat twenty pence a quarter.—K. William Rufus, is ſaid to have turned off his Major-domo, for ſetting before him a crane half roaſted.

In 1426, . . . Selman releaſes to John Archbiſhop of York, all his right in the maner of Wokendon-Epiſcopi, and in fifteen acres of land in Little-Warley (z).

Sir Lodowic John, [of Weſt-Thorndon where ſee an account of him,] who dyed in 1442, held the maner of Wokyndon-Epiſcopi, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of 30 s. per ann. (a). His ſon,——Lewis John, was attainted, but for what reaſon we cannot find, unleſs it was during the cruel wars between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter.

However, among other very large eſtates, in 1471 Richard Duke of Glouceſter, afterwards King Richard III. obtained a grant of this maner, by the name of Cravenham, part of the poſſeſſions of Lewis John, attainted (b).

It came afterwards, with the maner of Weſt Horndon &c. into the Mordaunt Family; For Ela, wife of Sir John Mordaunt, that dyed 2 June 1543, held the maner of Craneham, in Wokingdon-Epiſcopi and South-Wokingdon of the Biſhop of London by fealty and yearly rent of 33 s. —— Lodowic, or Lewis Mordaunt was her ſon and heir, five years old (c). This Ela and her huſband, Sir John Mordaunt, granted the Preſentation of this Rectory to Edward Lee, who preſented twice, in 1545. and 1559; and in the grant ſhe was called daughter and heireſs of Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis.

Soon after, they ſold this eſtate, with others, to Sir William Petre: At the time of his deceaſe, 13 January 1571, he held this maner and advowſon of the Church;——John his ſon and heir, afterwards created Lord Petre, dyed 11 Octob. 1613, and held this eſtate of the Biſhop of London, as of his Caſtle of Stortford (d); with the advowſon of the Church. He gave this eſtate to his third ſon,

Thomas Petre Eſq; who reſided at Cranham-Hall, and married Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Baſkerville of Wanſborough in Wiltſhire. He dyed 3 Octob. 1625, holding this maner of Cranham, and advowſon of the Church, of George Biſhop of London, as of his maner of Stortford, in free ſocage, and yearly rent of 33 s. (e).——Francis Petre Eſq; his ſon and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Gage of Ferle in Suſſex, Bart. He was Lord of the Court-Baron in 1635; and the Biſhop of London at that time Lord of the Leet. He ſold this eſtate to

Nathan Wright Eſq; merchant in London, ſecond ſon of John Wright of Keldon-Hatch, in this County, Eſq; He dyed 11 March 1657, aged 66, leaving by Anne his wife, daughter of Giles Fleming of Warley-place Eſq; his ſon and heir, Benjamin; and five daughters, Suſan, Alice, Mary, Frances, and Jane. Suſan was married firſt to Charles Potts, afterwards to Francis Drake, Eſqres. and dyed 15 July 1664, aged 39 years. There is an Epitaph in this Church for her, and another for her father.——Benjamin Wright, the ſon and heir, was created a Baronet 15 Febr. 1660, being ſtyled of Cranham-Hall. He married Jane, daughter of John, or William Williams of London, Merchant; and had by her Nathan, born 21 Auguſt 1661, and Benjamin.——Sir Nathan Wright, the eldeſt ſon and heir, had four wives. Firſt, Anne, daughter of John Meyrick of London, Merchant, by whom he had—Nathan, who married . . . daughter of Sir Thomas Lawley, and John. His ſecond wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Frances Brage of Hatfield-Peverell, Eſq; widow of William Brown of Norwich, Eſq; by whom he had Benjamin, and another ſon. His third was Elizabeth, daughter of John Bowater of Whitely in Warwickſhire, Eſq; by her no iſſue. His fourth was Abagail, third daughter of Samuel Tryſt of Culworth in Northamptonſhire, Eſq; by whom he had Samuel and Elizabeth.

Sir Nathan dyed 16 Octob. 1727 [M]. Abigail his widow was remarried to Herbert Tryſt Eſq; Sheriff of this County in 1737, who in her right enjoyed this eſtate till her death 7 Decemb. 1741 [N].

Elizabeth, his daughter by his fourth wiſe, and his only ſurviving heir, was married, 15 Septemb. 1744, to James Oglethorp, of Weſtbrook place in Surrey Eſq; General of his Majeſty's Forces: who was at the pains of ſettling the Colony of Georgia.

Berdens, is a reputed Maner, or capital meſſuage, in this pariſh, about two miles north from this Church, toward Warley-place.

Ralph Latham Eſq; who had eſtates in Upminſter, and Warley &c. held the maner of Berdens, with appertenances, and 24 acres of arable in Craneham, called Buſſhops, of the maner of Cranham, by fealty, and rent of 36s. 8d. He dyed 19 July 1556, leaving—William Latham his ſon and heir (f): who held the maner of Bardens, and 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 80 of paſture, 20 of wood, and 3*s*. rent, with appertenances, in Cranham, of Sir John Petre, as of his maner of Cranham. He departed this life 17 May 1600.——William Latham, was his ſon and heir (g).

Stephen Skrofield hath alſo ſome lands here.

There are two Alms-houſes in St. Mary lane, given by Sir Nathan Wright.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. In a wooden Turret there are three Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Cranham-hall. The Parſonage-houſe was rebuilt ſome years ago.

The pariſh of Cranham is rated to the land-tax at 710 l. 2 s. 0d.

10. UPMINSTER,

otherwiſe called in records Upmonſtra, Upmunſtre, Hepmynſtre, is a large pariſh, extending from Rainham on the South to S. Weald on the north; having Cranham and the Warleys on the eaſt; and, on the weſt divided from the Liberty of Havering by the rivulet named Ingreburn. Mynſter, though it generally ſignifies a Cathedral or Collegiate Church, being derived from the Latin Monaſterium, yet frequently means a Pariſh Church (b). Up is for ſome diſtinction, either in reſpect of one of the neighbouring Churches which ſtands lower; or from its ſituation on a riſing ground, above the rivulet. It is divided into North and South Upminſter.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the lands in this pariſh belonged, to Waltham-Abbey; Suene Suart; and Uluuin. And, at the time of the Survey, they were in the ſaid Abbey, in Walter de Doai; and in Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux.

What Walter held, being the greateſt part of the Pariſh, is what received afterwards the name of

from a very conſiderable Family ſurnamed de Engaine, who had one of the Colnes, denominated alſo Gaines from them. [See in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] [O].

The manſion houſe of Gains ſtands about half a mile South of this Church, near Gaines croſs.

This eſtate did not very long continue in Walter de Doai's Family. In K. John's reign, it was in William de Courteney [P]. His heirs were William de Cantilupe Baron of Bergavenny, and Vitalis Engaine Lord of Blatherwick in Northamptonſhire (i). And upon the partition of his eſtate, in 1242, this, with other Maners fell to Engaine, in whoſe Family it continued at leaſt till the year 1318 [Q]. [For a more particular account of the intermarriages of this Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] [R].

Vitalis Engaine dying in 1244, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſurviving ſon——Henry, who dyed 24 Febru. 1271, unmarried: Whereupon——Sir John Engaine, his brother, came into his eſtates (k). He held this Maner by the ſerjancy of keeping the King's grey-hounds [S]. Departing this life in 1297, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——John; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1302, held the maner of Hepmynſtre of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice (l). Leaving no iſſue, he ſettled by fine this eſtate, about the year 1318, on John, the ſon of his brother Nicolas, and the heirs of the body of the ſaid John (m). This laſt —— John Engaine was a Knight banneret; ſerved under K. Edward III. in his wars in France; and had frequently ſummons to Parliamene. [See in the other Volume, p. 121. 217.] But, according to John Weever, (n)

Simon de Havering, and afterwards John de Havering, about this time, were in poſſeſſion of this Maner: whether as feoffees in truſt, or otherwiſe, doth not plainly appear. It ſeems to have been in fee, upon the payment of a pair of gilt ſpurs of the price of ſix pence. For,

Sir Thomas Engaine, who dyed 29 June 1367, is not recorded to have had this Maner, only the rent of one pair of gilt ſpurs, and the Advowſon of the Church of Upmynſtre; the ſaid rent to be received out of the Maner once John de Havering's. Sir Thomas married Catharine, daughter of Hugh Courtney Earl of Devonſhire, but leaving

Dr. Brady, author of the Engliſh Hiſtory, uſed to ſay, that theſe were poſſeſſed by, and had their name from one ſurnamed De Ingeniis, Engineer to the Conqueror, or from his deſcendants. Agreeably to this, we have the Name in the Monaſticon written Ingaine. There is one difficulty in admitting this, that ſo great a man as the Conqueror's Engineer would be found in the entries of Domeſday in many Counties. It is probable that we have him ſo but by his Family name, and not by that of his office, which his poſterity might be fond of taking. Monaſtic. Vol. II. p. 297.

no iſſue, his three Siſters became his coheirs; namely, Joyce, wife of William de Goldington; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Laurence Pabenham; and Mary wife of Sir William Barnak (o).

Elizabeth, and her huſband Sir Laurence Pabenham had the Advowſon of this Church, and the yearly rent of a pair of gilt ſpurs of the price of 6 d. (p). Which he held in her right at the time of his deceaſe in 1398 (q). The Advowſon continued in their heirs till the year 1557; namely, in Sir Thomas Ayleſbury, the Cheney family, William Lord Vaux, &c. as we ſhall ſhew more particularly under the account of the Church (r).

As for the Maner itſelf of Gaines, it remained in the Havering Family. Lora, wife of Sir John de Havering, afterwards of William Morewoode, held it till her deceaſe, 4 Novemb. 1393 (s).

It hath been ſaid, that Alice Perrers, Abiſhag to old K. Edward III. and daughter or grandaughter, of Richard de Perers, ſeveral times Sheriff of this County [T], was poſſeſſed of this maner; undoubtedly of the King's gift. This Maner is not indeed mentioned among the reſt, which ſhe had in this County, [namely thoſe of Bradwell near the ſea, Hokkele, Pilton, Daneſeye, and Weſt Newland in St. Laurence and Steple,] and were declared forfeited in 1377 (t). But in 1378, the ſentence againſt her being reverſed, and her goods and eſtates reſtored to her, and her huſband Sir William Windſor, Lieutenant of Ireland, he had, among the reſt, a grant of the reverſion of this maner of Upminſtre, otherwiſe called Gaynes in Upminſtre. He dyed in 1383 (u). After his deceaſe, Sir John Deyncourt obtained a grant of the reverſion of this maner; but he dyed either before, or at leaſt the ſame year, as Lora aforeſaid; leaving his ſon——Roger, under age, and the King's Ward (w). Immediately upon Lora's death, one Robert Chickell of London, as heir to the ſaid John Deyncourt, intruded and entered upon the King's poſſeſſions, viz. two meſſuages called Napers-Tenement and Snellinge-Tenement, together with arable, meadow, and paſture, to the ſaid meſſuages belonging, in Havering, which were members and parcels of the ſaid maner of Upminſter (x).

Sir John Deyncourt, who obtained a grant of this Maner, was a branch of the noble Family of D'Eincourt, deſcended from Walter, that came in with William the Conqueror, and had large poſſeſſions in the northern parts of England (y). Sir John married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Henry De la Feld, who is ſaid to have had an intereſt in this Maner [U]. His ſon Roger Deyncourt, or Dencourt, dyed 20 . . . 1455, and is buried under the arch between the Chancel and north Chapel, with Elizabeth his wife, by whom he had ſeveral children (z). Whether one of them was Robert Dencort of Alveley, we cannot exactly find out. But the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record,

Nicolas Wayte, citizen and draper of London, ſon of Thomas Wayte of the ſame place and occupation, married Ellyn daughter of the ſaid Robert Dencort, by Elizabeth his firſt wife daughter of Jenkyn Clarke of Alveley: And Robert Dencort by his ſecond wife Maryon Miller, had Richard, Anne, and Alice. Whether Nicolas Wayte had not this eſtate in right of Ellyn his wife, is doubtful, and yet very probable. She dyed 27 May 1545, and he 7 Auguſt 1543, and both lye buried in this Church, with an epitaph. He held this maner of Gaynes, with appertenances, and 3 meſſuages, 250 acres of arable, 26 of meadow, 121 of paſture, 130 of wood, and 16l. 2s. 3d. qa rent. His heirs were, the grandſon, and the daughter, of his kinſman Edward Wayte late of Ronhale in Bedfordſhire, namely, Edward Bendowe, ſon and heir of Elizabeth Bendowe, one of the daughters and heirs of the ſaid Edward Wayte, aged 38 years; and Agnes Pyke, the other daughter, 53 years old (a). Upon partition of Wayte's eſtates, this Maner fell to John Pyke's ſhare, in right of his wife, who ſoon parted with it: For, 12 May 1543, they obtained a licenſe to alienate this maner of Geynes with appertenances, 3 meſſuages, 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 200 of wood, 60 of furze and heath, in Upminſter and Horn-Church, to

Ralph Latham Eſq; (b) citizen and goldſmith of London. This Ralph was a lineal deſcendent in the male-line from a younger branch of the ancient family of Latham, of Latham in Lancaſhire, who were lords of that place from the time of K. Richard I. to the latter end of K. Edward the IIId's, when Iſabel, ſole daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Latham, by her marriage with Sir John Stanley, brought it into the noble

Ralph Latham Eſq; dyed 19 July 1556, poſſeſſed of the maners of Gaynes, Upminſter-hall, Bridge-houſe, and Newplace; and one meſſuage, 40 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 32 of paſture, and 6 of wood, called Gladmans, with appertenances, all in Upminſter; and ſeveral eſtates in pariſhes adjoyning (c) [W]. This Ralph was ſon of Robert Latham of North-Okendon Eſq; ſon of Philip, and grandſon of Sir Robert. Robert's wife was Thomaſine, daughter and heir of Thomas Ardale, [remarried to Richard Badby,] and by her he had Ralph; and Thomas, from whom deſcended the Lathams of Stifford. Ralph's wife was Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Hill, or, according to J. Weever, of Sir William Roche Lord Mayor of London, by whom he had two ſons both named William, the youngeſt of whom was ſettled at Sandon in this County.——William Latham Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, born in 1539, departed this life 17 May 1600; at which time he had, in this pariſh, only the capital meſſuage called New-Place, and Goodhouſe, and Gladmans (d) [X]. For he had alienated this maner, by licenſe dated 14 Septemb. 1560, to

Robert Badby, Gent. and to Ralph Latham, and others (e). Again, by licence dated 21 March 1563, to

William Strangman, and others, for the proper uſe of the ſaid W. Latham (f). And, by licenſe dated 1 May 1587, to

Gerard D'Ewes, citizen and ſtationer of London, ſon of Adrian D'Ewes, deſcended from the ancient Lords of Keſſel in Gelderland, who had come and ſettled in England about the beginning of K. Henry VIIIths. reign. He dyed 12 April 1592, leaving——Paul D'Ewes his ſon and heir born in 1570 (g), afterwards one of the Six Clerks in Chancery [Y]. He, by licence dated 7 Auguſt 1793, alienated this Maner, with all its rights, members, and appertenances, and the Advowſon of the Church and chapel, to Francis Rowe Gent. and George Wiſeman, for the uſe of William Latham Eſq; the elder, for the term of his life, remainder to his ſon. So that now Gaines-hall returned into the Latham family; and probably all the foreſaid alienations were only by way of truſt. The father William Latham Eſq; married Amia, daughter of William Strangman Eſq;——William his ſon married Alice, daughter of Paul d'Ewes Eſq; and dyed 14 Febru. 1614 (h).——Ralph his ſon, Common Serjeant of the City of London, was his heir; whoſe ſon —— Ralph ſucceeded him in this eſtate.

Tradition goes, that one Mr. Herbert has been ſince that time Lord of Gaynes. The maner was ſold in 1721, by a widow of Mr. Graves, brother to Mr. Joſeph Graves a Clergyman of Lewes in Suſſex, who had enjoyed it about ſixty years, to Mr. Amos White, preſent poſſeſſor.

The Maner of UPMINSTER-HALL

was one of the ſeventeen, given by Earl Harold to the Abbey founded by him at Waltham, and thence named Waltham-Hall.

K. Edward the Confeſſor confirmed it to that houſe, as did alſo K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. Henry III. And in the Cartæ antiquæ it is called 104 acres (i). That Abbey was poſſeſſed of it at the time of the general Survey [Z].

The Bounds of this Lordſhip are particularly deſcribed in the Monaſticon, Vol. II. p. 12. in the following Saxon words. . . . Eꞃeꞅꞇ æꞇ Tiᵹelhẏꞃꞅꞇ ꞅuð ꞇoþaꞃe Maꞃcꝺice. oꝼ þaꞃe ꝺice Weꞅꞇ in Inᵹcebuꞃne. ⁊ oꝼ þaꞃe buꞃne noꞃð in ꞇo Beccenᵹaꞃe. ⁊ oꝼ Beccenᵹaꞃe noꞃð anꝺ lanᵹ þaꞃe Walꝺꞅꞇꞃaꞇe inꞇo Sꞇanᵹaꞃe. oꝼ Sꞇanᵹaꞃe noꞃð inꞇo Manneꞅ Lanꝺ. oꝼ Manneꞅ lanꝺe eꝼꞇ inꞇo Tiᵹelhẏꞃꞅꞇe:·. 'Firſt 'at Tigelhyrſte South toward Marcdike, from that dike weſt 'in Ingceburne, and from that burne north to Beccengare. 'and from Beccangare north along the Wald-ſtreet to Stangare. from Stangare north into Mannes land. from Mannes 'land again to Tigelhyrſte.' Upon which the learned Dr. Derham made the following obſervations.

The Northern limit was what is now called Tilehurſt from the two Saxon words Tiᵹel, and ꞅẏꞃꞅꞇ ſignifying a wood affording earth, fit for making Tiles; and ſuch is the ſoil at this day, near Mr. Branfill's, above the Medicinal Spring; where is a houſe called Tyler's, and where the beſt Tiles and bricks in theſe parts are made. Tiᵹel is probably from the Latin Tegula, the Saxons having borrowed both name and uſe of Tiles from the Romans. Southerly we go to Maꞃcꝺice or Mark-Ditch, otherwiſe Boundary, by Cranham pariſh, to the road leading from Horn Church to Warley. Here may have been a Ditch for a Britiſh mound, dividing the Territories of one petty King from another, which perhaps extended to Childerdich, and there gave name: And this may have been defaced by ploughing and Huſbandry. Weſtward we go thence to Inᵹcebuꞃne, or, as it is now written, Ingreburne, a Bourn or brook, which ſeparates Chafford Hundred from the Liberty of Havering. Thence we go Northward to Beccenᵹaꞃe, the brook, or beechen weare; or perhaps it was a compound of Becan-aunᵹꞃe, the Beacon-place, where the Beacon once ſtood, which probably Upminſter-Hall was probably a retiring-place, or hunting ſeat, for the Abbat. Here he had a Chapel, built of ſtone, yet remaining; with a Font in it, for the uſe of his Tenants and dependents; which farther appears from their having a Cemetery where the Garden now is, for, in it human Bones have been dug up. It is pleaſantly ſituated about a mile north from this Church.

After the diſſolution, K. Henry VIII. granted this eſtate to Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex. Upon his attainder, it reverted to the Crown, and was by the ſame King 7 July 1543, for the ſum of 848 l. 8 s. 11 d. granted, or rather alienated, to Ralph Latham of London, goldſmith, together with the annual rent of 38 l. 19 s. 8 d. which was the fee-farm rent reſerved to the Crown for the keeping of thirty dogs, or hounds [A]. This grant was full and abſolute, with all the Honors, &c. And exempted from all ſervice to the Crown.

In the grant were included the following woods, or coppices. Anſedown, Milredon, Newfeild, Sallethills, Thickehope, copices; and a wood and waſte called Abbots common wood (k). Ralph Latham dyed poſſeſſed of it 19 July 1556 (l). His ſon——William Latham had licenſe, 21 May 1563, to alienate the maners of Upminſter-hall, and Gaynes, with appertenances, to

William Strangman, and others (m): And again, 8 Auguſt 1593, to Roger James, and his heir (n): This Roger dyed 10 Decemb. 1596, holding the lordſhip or maner of Upminſter of the Queen in capite, in the ſeveral tenures of George Wiſeman, and William Latham.——Roger, his ſon and heir, was 7 years old (o).

In 1599, a Court was held here in the name of Thomas Clayborne Gent. and Sarah his wife; and in 1605, another Court was kept in their names. In 1628, Sir Roger James and Mary his wife, with Sir Robert Cock and Robert Fryth and their wives, levied a fine and declared the Uſes to

Ralph Latham Eſq; Common Serjeant, and his heirs. In 1641 Ralph, ſon of the Common Serjeant, mortgaged this eſtate, and next year ſold it for 6640 l. to

Juliana Viſcounteſs Dowager Campden, who ſettled it on herſelf for life, Remainder to Henry ſecond ſon of Baptiſt Noel, grandſon and heir apparent to Edward Lord Campden. In 1664 the ſaid Henry Noel poſſeſſed it: He dyed in 1677, and by will gave it to his wife for life, then to his brother——Edward, afterwards Earl of Gainſborough, in whom it continued till 1685; then it was purchaſed under a decree in Chancery by Captain Andrew Branfill. He was of Dartmouth in Devonſhire; and being bred up to the ſea, as moſt of his relations were, became Commander of a ſhip at the age of 19 years, and by his induſtry acquired a conſiderable fortune. The original name of this family is ſuppoſed to have been Bampfield, but ſince altered to Branfill: the Arms of both families being the ſame. In 1681, he married Damaris, eldeſt daughter of John Aylet of Kelvedon-Hatch, ſon to the heroic Captain Aylet, of Magdalen-Laver; concerning whom ſee more under that pariſh. By her he had ſeveral children. He dyed 27 July 1709, aged 59, and was buried in the north aiſle of this Church, with a monument.——Champion Branfill Eſq; his eldeſt ſon and heir, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Brawne citizen and vintner of London. He was High Sheriff of Eſſex, in 1734, and dyed in . . . ——Champion Branfill Eſq; is his ſon and heir, preſent poſſeſſor [B].

A third MANER,

in this pariſh, that was Uluuin's in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, belonged to Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux, at the time of the general Survey [C].

This I take to have been the moſt ſoutherly part of this pariſh, adjoyning to Alveley, and parcel of the eſtate called Bumpſted's [of which ſee an account under Alveley.] Probably it comprehended many of the lands which are now freehold in South-Upminſter; if not moſt of the lands, from Bumpſted's along the eaſtern ſide, and ſo through Corbet's-Tye, as far as New-Place.

If we divide the whole pariſh of Upminſter into ten parts, according to the number of Hides in Domeſday-book; about ſix parts and more will belong now to the maner of Gains; about two parts to Upminſter-hall; and the remaining part and a half to Bumpſted's. And what adds to the probability, or rather certainty, that theſe was about the preſent Windmill in the moſt conſpicuous part of the country, anſwering to another Beacon which was near to Mr. Green's Houſe at Naveſtoke. Thence more northward along Waloꝛtꞃaꞇe, the Street which leads to Weald Camp from Tilbury or thereabout. Then to Sꞇanȝaꞃe, or Stone-weare, which ſeems to have been a paved Paſſage in Brook-ſtreet Stream or Weare; ſo to Manneꞅ Lanð, which was a boundary for Weald maner, deſcribed to be a ſpot on the confines of Weald, Warley, and Upminſter, which their proceſſioners went up to, but none of them took in. Going eaſtward from No Mans Land, the circuit is ended at Tiȝelhyꞃꞅꞇe.

[A] I have found nothing before this time of the eſtate's being obliged to keep the King's Dogs, nor is it uſual for Monaſtery eſtates to be ſo charged. This would have been a great deal too high a price in Harold's time, nor can it be thought to be impoſed upon the Abbat afterwards. It is like one of the fineſſes of Empſon and Dudley, to exchange ſuch ſervices for ready money, and to ſcrew up the owner of an eſtate to ſuch a pitch.

very lands were what belonged to Odo, is, that Malger held alſo under him the lands in Alveley, adjoyning to theſe, and part of Bumpſted's eſtate.

NEW PLACE,

a nominal Maner, ſtands a little way eaſt from this Church: and was ſo named in contradiſtinction to Gaines, the ancient reſidence of the Lords of this maner. The Houſe is down, and nothing but the out-houſes remaining.

There belonged to it 40 acres of arable, holden of the maner of Cranham-hall, by fealty, and yearly rent of 33 s. And 10 acres of meadow, 2 meſſuages, 2 gardens, and 3 s. yearly rent, of the maner of South-Okendon, by fealty, and a red Roſe on June 24.

It was part of the eſtate of Ralph Latham, who dyed in 1556 (p). His deſcendent Ralph came and reſided in it, after having parted with Gains, and Upminſter-hall.——Mary, his only child and heir, brought it in marriage to Sir Thomas Skipwith, Bart. of Metheringham in Lincolnſhire. He ſold New Place to——John Rayley, citizen and draper of London.——John, his ſon, departing this life without iſſue, in 1718, left it after the deceaſe of Heſter his mother, who dyed in 1724, to Sarah his wife, daughter of Francis Clerke, Vicar of Stoke-Daubernon, in Surrey. Having no iſſue, ſhe was remarried to John Major of London.

BRIDGE-HOUSE,

another maner in this pariſh, ſtands near the Bridge over the Brook, from whence it takes its denomination: and lies partly in this pariſh, and partly in that of Horn-Church. John de Reydon, John Cook, and Richard Goddeſton were the ancienteſt poſſeſſors upon record [D].

The lands belonging to it were 30 acres of arable, holden of the maner of Dovers, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6 s. . . . 18 acres of arable, and 15 acres of meadow, of the maner of Gwydye-hall, by fealty, ſuit of court, and yearly rent of 8 s. 8 d. . . . and 60 acres of paſture, and 6 of wood, of the Warden and Fellows of New College, by fealty, and rent of 11 s. per annum (q).

It belonged, as the former, to Ralph Latham, and his ſucceſſors, mentioned above.

SUNNINGS is a capital meſſuage in this pariſh, a mile and upwards ſouth-eaſt from the Church, beyond Gaines.

It was anciently the reſidence of the Family of Frith, who were benefactors to Rainham. John Frith of Sonnings in Upminſter, and of London, Scrivener, had iſſue George Frith of Rainham, who married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Howe of Naveſtok, and had by her Thomas Frith of Sonnings, who by Elizabeth, daughter of John Holden of Rainham, had Robert, Gregory, James, Joan, and Catharine.

Catharine, widow of George, was remarried to Robert Holden, and had children by him. She lived a wife and widow 65 years in Rainham, and dyed there 15 Decemb. 1612, aged 90.

Park-Corner, a farm of 66 acres in this pariſh, belonged to John Lewen; then to John Radford, who left it in 1723 to Tudor Lockley.

In 1569, John Willett held of the maner of Gaines, one meſſuage, and 50 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, here, called Martyns and Motts (r).

Corbet's Tye, a hamlet in this pariſh near Gaines, was ſo named from an owner, and the Saxon word ꞇẏᵹ, incloſure.

Mr. James Eſdale; William Palmer; Robert Reynolds; Thomas Engliſh, and William Braunds, have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The Charitable Benefactions, are Five pounds ten ſhillings, diſtributed in bread weekly, and for a ſermon: the gift of Tho: Frith.

Given by Mr. Phoenix 40 l. towards a ſtock. —5 l. added, in 1613, by William Latham Eſq; —5 l. added, in 1626, by Mrs. Grace Latham. —5 l. added, in 1636, by Mrs. Alice Latham. —20 l. added by Mr. Nathan. Sand, Curate of this pariſh.

In North Upminſter is a mineral Water impregnated with alkaline ſalts, of the ſame nature as that at Brentwood. It is good to correct acidities, and in vomitings, reachings, and too copious hæmorrhoidal fluxes.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel, built by Sir John Engaine. The Church and Chancel are tyled, the reſt leaded.

In 1638, part of the Church and Steeple were fired by lightning, and defaced; but ſince repaired. The Tower, which is of ſtone, contains 4 Bells; and on the top of it there is a Spire, partly ſhingled and partly leaded.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Gaines, till they were ſeparated by Sir John Engaine, as related above. After that time the Advowſon of the Rectory continued in Engaine's heirs. From Sir Thomas Engaine, it came to his ſiſter Elizabeth, and her huſband Sir Laurence Pabenham. Their only daughter and heir, Catharine, brought it to her firſt huſband, Sir Thomas Aleſbury; and afterwards to her ſecond huſband, Sir William Cheney, or Cheyne;

'Twas the burial place of the Families of Engaine, and Latham: which had in it ſeveral monuments and epitaphs. The learned and good Dr. William Derham, Rector of this pariſh from 1689 to 1735, was not only an ornament to it, but alſo to this County and Nation. He was born at Stowton near Worceſter 26 November 1657; educated at Trinity-College in Oxford; Chaplain to Catharine Lady-Dowager Grey of Warke; preſented to this Living 31 Auguſt 1689; inſtalled Canon of Windſor 19 September 1716; created Doctor in Divinity by diploma from the Univerſity of Oxford, 26 June 1730. He was one of the moſt uſeful and induſtrious Members of the Royal Society, to which he communicated great numbers of curious pieces, inſerted in their Philoſophical Tranſactions. Phyſico-Theology; Aſtro-Theology; Chriſto-Theology; Notes and Obſervations upon Eleazar Albin's Natural Hiſtory of Birds, and Engliſh Inſects, &c. are well known works of his. But for a fuller account of him we beg leave to refer to Biographia Britannica, Vol. III. p. 1649. By Anne his wife, aunt to George Scott of Chigwell Eſq; he had ſeveral children; the eldeſt of whom, William Derham, D. D. dyed Preſident of St. John's College in Oxford ſome years ago.

Samuel Bradſhaw, M. A. 3 May 1735, upon Derham's d.... Thomas Bradſhaw Eſq;

WARLEY,

Two adjoining Pariſhes of this name, are diſtinguiſhed from each other by the appellations of Great, and Little; otherwiſe Abbeſs, and Semeles.

From which of theſe Saxon words, Ƿæꞃ, ſignifying Weare or pond; Ƿaaꞃ, a Sea-weed; Ƿaꞃe, wares, or merchandiſe [E]; the firſt ſyllable of the name is formed, we cannot judge. As for the termination ley, it ſignifies untilled, or paſture, land. It is otherwiſe written in records Verdeleia, Wardley, and Wareleia.

II. GREAT WARLEY

is the largeſt Pariſh of the two, as the name imports.

In it are two Maners, 1. The maner of Great Warley, alias Abbeſs-Warley. 2. . . . that of Warley Franks.

The Maner of GREAT or ABBESS WARLEY, belonged, before and after the Conqueſt, to the Abbeſs of Berking [F]: which occaſioned its name of Abbeſs.

The manſion houſe ſtood behind the Church, but is now down: The Farm houſe belonging to the eſtate is called Pound-houſe. The Court is kept at an ale-houſe on Warley Common.

The Cellereſs of Berking Nunnery received from the collector of Warley 50 s. at Eaſter, and 50 s. at Michaelmaſs (w).

Upon the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries this eſtate coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, 10 Febru. 1539, the maner of Great Warely, with all lands and privileges thereto belonging, in this pariſh, Stifford, and Shenfield; and the Advowſon of the Church, to William Gonſon Eſq; and his heirs: to hold by the tenth part of a knight's fee, and payment of 4 l. 2 s. per ann. (x). And yet, 28 May 1541, Edward North is found to have alienated them to Edward Barrett Eſq; (y); ſo great was the confuſion of property in thoſe times of Reformation! But William Gonſon at the time of his deceaſe, 3 Auguſt 1544, was poſſeſſed of this maner, and Advowſon, and 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture,

He dyed 26 May 1600, poſſeſſed of this maner, and Advowſon, and of Cley-tey &c. in this pariſh: And his four daughters were his coheirs; namely, Urſula, wife of Robert Peterſon; Anne, wife of Giles Fleming; Benedicta, wife of Thomas Wallenger; and Thomaſine, wife of Edward Fenton (b).

Among theſe four was this eſtate divided. For Anne Fleming, who dyed 28 March 1627, held a fourth part of the maner of Great-Warley, and of the Advowſon of the Church, and of other, the premiſſes, of the King in capite:——Urſula Fleming, her daughter and heir was 17 years old (c). The Fleming Family lived at Warley-Place.

Some of the Evelyn family had it from the year 1649 to 1655; and in 1655 ſold it to

John Hart, of London, merchant: of whom it was purchaſed, in 1669, by

Rowland Winne of London, merchant, ſecond ſon of Edmund Winne, of Thornton in Lincolnſhire Eſq; younger brother to Sir George Winne of Noſtell-Abbey in Yorkſhire. Rowland fined for Alderman and Sheriff of the city of London. He gave this eſtate to two nephews, and the ſurvivor of them.——Mark Winne Eſq; one of the nephews dyed poſſeſſed of the whole, from whom it deſcended to——Mark Winne Eſq;

This Family ſprung from thoſe of the ſame name in Wales, and have been a long time at Little Warley.

The Maner of WARLEY-FRANKS.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile weſt from the Church.

This was held free by one Godric in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and at the time of the Survey by Suene of Eſſex [G]. His grandſon Hugh de Eſſex forfeiting it by his cowardiſe, [as related under Rayleye, and in the other Volume, p. 611.] it eſcheated to the Crown.

K. Henry III. upon his creating Hubert de Burgh Earl of Kent, 11 February 1226, granted him, among others, the maner of Warlee, part of the poſſeſſions of Henry de Eſſex (d).

It was, not long after, in Francis de Scoland, father and ſon; from whom it is ſuppoſed to have derived the name of FRANKS.

Francis de Scoland, who dyed in 1284, held of Laurence de Plumberive one meſſuage and 310 acres of arable, ten of meadow, 12 of wood, and 40 s. rent in Warle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee;——Francis was his ſon and heir (e). The eſtate continued ſome time in this family, for we find that, in 1372, Francis de Scoland of Cataungre, granted to John Payn, citizen of London, his heirs, and aſſigns, the maner of Great-Warle (f).

In 1418, Joane, wife of Roger Aſhbournham had the maner of Frankis in Great-Warle; and alſo the maner of Southall in Rainham, and eſtates in Upminſter.——Robert, ſon of Anne her daughter, her grandſon and heir, was eighteen years old (g).

John Godſton, who dyed 24 Febru. 1498, held the maner of Warle-Franks, of the King in capite; by knight's ſervice; and parcels of land, called Latchetts, Tarecroft, Smithfeild, and Smithes mead, Coddeham, North-land &c.——Joane, Elizabeth, Alice, Margaret, and Millicent, daughters of his ſon William, were his heirs (h).

The maner after this appears divided between Hollingſhed, Elton, and Ellis, probably huſbands of three of the daughters, but no wives names are in theſe Inquiſitions. Ralph Hollingſhed had licence, 20 March 1528, to alienate a fourth part of the maner of Franks, alias Warley-Franks to Henry Averell of London, goldſmith. He departed this life 13 Novemb. 1540, leaving——John, his ſon and heir (i): who, at the time of his deceaſe, 20 Septemb. 1554, held a fourth part of this maner, and the third part of a fourth part of the ſame, and the third part of a meſſuage, 4 cottages, 360 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 280 of paſture, 95 of wood, 30 of marſh, and 40 s. rent in this pariſh. His father elder brother's ſon——Bartholomew Averell, then aged 42 years, was his heir (k). He dyed 14 May 1562, poſſeſſed of the premiſſes.——Bartholomew was his ſon (l) [H].

John Elton, coheir to this eſtate, dyed 28 May 1550, poſſeſſed of a third part of this maner, and the other premiſſes (m).——Charles, his brother and heir, dyed 12 Novemb. 1586, poſſeſſed alſo of the ſame, leaving——Antony, his ſon and heir (n).

Hugh Ellice, another coheir to this eſtate, dyed 30 June 1538, poſſeſſed of a fourth part of the maner of Warle.—Frankes, and a third part of a fourth part of the ſame.——William Elys, his ſon, then aged 23 years, held a third part of this maner, and the ſame quantity of land as Henry Averell aboveſaid. He dyed 14 January 1543, leaving an only daughter——Anne, but 2 months and 7 days old (o).

Thomas Drywood, and Anne his wife bought Bartholomew Averell's ſhare of this eſtate, by licenſe dated 4 Novemb. 1584. He alſo bought Antony Elton's ſhare, by licenſe dated 2 March 1589 (p). And it ſeems very probable, that Anne his wife was the daughter and heir of William Elys. He dyed 16 March 1592-3, holding two third parts of the maner of Warley Franks, of Henry Lord Hunſdon, as of his Honor of Raley, by two parts diviſible into three of one knight's fee, and ſuit of Court from month to month.——William Drywood, his ſon and heir (q), of Cheſthunt in Hertfordſhire Eſq; did, in 1604, ſell this eſtate to Nicolas Fuller of Gray's-inn Eſq; afterwards knighted. He held this maner of Warley Franks of the King in capite; and dying 3 July 1620, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Dowce Fuller, of Chamber-houſe in Berkſhire Eſq; (r). The latter, in 1658, ſold this eſtate to Thomas Gundrey, of Chingford Eſq; [concerning whom ſee more under that pariſh.] From him it hath paſſed to his heirs.

Peter Poulton, and Elizabeth his wife, paſſed by fine, in 1568, to Henry Billingſley, two third parts of one third part of this maner of Warleigh Franks; and two thirds of one third part of ſeveral parcels of land in Abbeſſe Warley, and Reynham (s).

WARLEY HALL, a capital meſſuage, ſtanding eaſt of the Church, is no Maner. Benedicta, daughter of Benjamin Gonſon above-mentioned, having it for her purparty, brought it to her huſband Thomas Wallenger. From him it came to Antony Wallenger of London Eſq; who dyed 4 June 1728. One of his daughters was married to John Wright, another to . . . Webſter; and the youngeſt to Mr. Harris, of London, merchant. They left three daughters; one married to Mr. Batt, of Devonſhire-Square, London, merchant; another to John Creſwick of the Cuſtom-houſe Eſq; and another to . . . . Godfrey.

WARLEY-PLACE is an ancient ſeat, pleaſantly ſituated, about two miles north from this Church.

It once belonged to the Abbeſs of Berking; and afterwards to the ancient family of Fleming. Thomas Fleming was father of Giles, of Warley-place, Eſq; who dyed 18 October, 1623, having married Catharine, daughter of Paul Claybrook of Kent, by whom he had, Capt. William Fleming, and Giles. The latter, who dyed 29 November, 1633, had by Suſanna, his wife, daughter of Francis Sturtevante, two ſons, John, and Edmund, and 8 daughters. Capt. John Fleming, the eldeſt ſon, married Mary daughter of Ralph Latham, of Upminſter, Eſq; and had by her 9 daughters; of whom, Anne was wife of Nathan Wright of London, merchant; Suſan, of Samuel Ferrers, of Berkſhire; and Martha, of Thomas Clere, of London [I].

This eſtate belonged afterwards to Thomas Jackſon Eſq; Bencher of Gray's-inn, who departed this life 13 October 1727, aged 64; and then to ——George Jackſon, Eſq; his ſon, who dyed 28 Decemb. 1734. His ſiſter and heir, Winifred Jackſon, that dyed 1 May 1746, gave by will Warley-Place, and the lands thereto belonging, with a conſiderable eſtate in London, to David Scott Eſq; Upon an ejectment brought by him againſt the heirs at law, he had a verdict at the ſummer-aſſiſes in 1747. And a writ of error being brought thereon, judgment was affirmed in the Court of King's-Bench in Eaſter-Term 1748.

Browns, a tenement ſo called, in this pariſh; and 40 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 50 of paſture, and 8 of wood, belonged in 1557 to Ralph Latham: who had alſo here 10 acres of arable, and 8 of paſture, called Cotterells (t).

Cley-Tey, a meſſuage or farm, with 212 acres of land in this pariſh, belonged to the Gonſon Family (u).

Mr. John Arnold; Thomas Robinſon; Samuel Sumner; John Scott, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, and almoſt of the ſame breadth: the whole tyled. The Steeple, in which were 5 Bells, was burnt down with lightning, ſome years ago. At preſent there is a wooden Belfrey, ſhingled; and in it 3 Bells. On the top there is a ſmall ſpire, of one ſquare piece of wood [K].

This Rectory was in the gift of Berking Nunnery till the diſſolution. After that it was granted to the Gonſon family (w): in which it continued till after the year 1589; and by ſucceſſive purchaſes came into ſeveral other hands. It now belongs to St. John's college in Cambridge.

The Priory of Prittlewell received Tithes out of ſeveral lands in this Pariſh; which, by a very advantagious compoſition to the Rector, were granted to him and his ſucceſſors, 20 July 1513, for the reaſonable payment of 20 s. a year (x).

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1100 l. 2 s. 0d.

12. LITTLE WARLEY.

This Pariſh lies Eaſt of the other, and on that account is called Eaſt Warley; It is otherwiſe ſtyled in records Semeles, and in Latin De Septem Molis, & Septem Molar' (y), becauſe there might be in it at one time Seven Mills; which is a thing not impoſſible.

Anciently this pariſh belonged to the Church of St. Paul; but had been taken from it, and one Guert was in poſſeſſion before the Conqueſt. William the Conqueror gave it to William, Biſhop of London, becauſe it had formerly belonged to his ſee [L].

How, and when, the Biſhops of London parted with this Maner, does not appear; but they had the Advowſon of the Church as low as the year 1327 (z).

There is only one MANER in this pariſh.

Little Warley Hall ſtands near the Church, and is pleaſantly ſituated, with a fine proſpect over the vale below: but it is old and decayed.

William de Semeles was poſſeſſed of this maner in the reign of K. Henry III [M].

About the ſame time, or ſoon after, it ſeems to have been in the Burnel family, mentioned above, p. 14. 17. and in the other Volume, p. 12. 577. For, Petronilla de Bello manſo, Pernel de Belhouſe, who dyed in 1296, held of the inheritance of Philip Burnel, by the rent of 1*d*. per an. one meſſuage in Warle-Semeles, 280 acres of arable, 18 of meadow, 15 of paſture, 33*s*. rent of aſſize; —— Malcolm was her ſon and heir (a). But how Burnel came to be intereſted here nothing ſhews, nor how the Biſhop's right, acknowledged in Domeſday-book, came to be defeated.

In the year 1361, Sewall Michel, of Canewdone, preſented to this Church (b). And in 1363, he did grant to Sir Thomas Tyrell, and his heirs, two acres of land in Little-Warle-Semeles, with the Advowſon of the Church of the ſame village (c). But it muſt be ſuppoſed, the Patron of the Living had lands here before his purchaſe of two acres.

About the ſame time, John de Fiſhide held what was called his maner of Little-Warle; for John Smert, who was out-lawed for felony in 1372, held a meſſuage, and half an acre of arable, here, of Fiſhide, as of this maner (d).

In 1413, Thomas Clevehoud releaſed to William, ſon of William Parker citizen and mercer of London; and to John Parker, brother of the ſaid William Parker the father, and Edmund Chymbeham, the other brother of the ſaid William Parker the father, all his right in the maner of Warle in the vill of Eaſt-Warle Semeles (e). From theſe Parkers deſcended the Lords Morley and Monteagle. [See above, p. 512.]

John Eton, who dyed in 1453, held the maner of Eaſt-Warle-Semeles, and divers lands and tements called Fynches, of Thomas Biſhop of London, in right of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, by fealty and 10*s*. per an. rent for all ſervices; —— Iſabel his daughter and heir, was forty-one Weeks old (f). It is ſtrange that the Biſhop's title, ſo long dormant, ſhould in this reign be revived. We find it mentioned again in the time of K. Henry VIII. and Sir John Tyrell holding under it. This ſeems to have been for part of the maner which ſome of his anceſtors had purchaſed of one Gylvyn. For, in 1503, a fine paſſed between Robert Tyrell Knight, plaintiff, and Richard Gylvyn and Alice his wife, deforc' of the third part of the maner of Eaſt-Warley-Semel (g). Sir John Tyrell, who dyed 28 February 1540, held the maner of Little-Warley, alias Warley-Semels, and 300 acres of arable, 40 of wood, and 40*s*. rent in Eaſt-Warley-Semells and Childerdich, of the Biſhop of London;——John Tyrell, his ſon and heir, who was then aged 26 years (h), departed this life 2 March 1585, leaving——Mary, wife of Thomas Clinton, his daughter and heir (i).

Of this ancient Family a particular account will be given, under Heron, their ſeat in Eaſt Horndon. And here we ſhall only give this ſhort abſtract. Sir John Tyrell of Heron, Treaſurer of the Houſhold to K. Henry VI. married Alice, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Coggeſhall, and had by her——Thomas his ſon and heir, afterwards knighted; who by Emma, daughter of Sir John Marney of Layer-Marney, had four ſons, 1. Sir William the eldeſt, of Heron; 2. Thomas of South-Okendon; 3. Humfrey, fixed at Warley-Hall; and 4. Robert, at Horndon on the Hill.——Humfrey-Tyrell, of Warley-hall, Eſq; was twice married. By his firſt wife, Iſabella, daughter and co-heir of John Helion Eſq; he had Anne, heireſs to her mother, and married to Sir Roger Wentworth of Codham-Hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 306. 381. 531.] His ſecond wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Walwyn of Lounsford in Hertfordſhire, by whom he had——Sir John Tyrell of Warley, his ſon and heir; and Humfrey of Shenfeild, who by Alice, daughter and heir of Thomas Glemham, had Thomas, Richard,

Henry, and Robert [N]. Sir John married Anne, daughter of Edward Norrys, by whom he had, John, William, Stephen, Ralph, Maurice; and Gertrude, wife of Sir William Petre. He dyed 28 February 1540. The next that we find poſſeſſed of this eſtate, is Sir Denner Strutt Knight, created a Baronet 5 March 1641, and ſtyled of Little-Warley-Hall. His firſt wife was Dorothy, one of the daughters of Francis Staſmore of Forleſworth in Leiceſterſhire, Eſq; Knight for that ſhire in the firſt parliament of K. Charles I. She dyed 17 Auguſt 1641. His ſecond wife was Elizabeth daughter of Sir Tho: Woodhouſe of Kimberley. His third was Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Chapman of London, Eſq; She dyed 4 Auguſt 1654, aged 32. By his 2d. wife, he left two daughters co-heirs; Anne, the younger, was wife of William Samwell of Watton in Norfolk;

Blanch, the elder, was married to Thomas Bennet of Wiltſhire, Eſq; related to Lord Oſſulſton: and had by her, Denner, Bennet, Thomas, Andrew, John [O]. The eldeſt ſon and heir,——Denner Bennet Eſq; married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. John Walker of Brentwood, and had by her, Denner, Hugh, Elizabeth, and Mary.——Denner, the eldeſt ſon, dyed in 1741, and left his ſon.——Denner Bennet.

Dannelins, or Dame-Ellins, is a farm, or reputed Maner, of about 140 acres of woodland, and other grounds adjoining. Denner Bennet Eſq; and his truſtees, ſold it, in 1686, to Miles Corbet, Attorney, of Lyons-inn and Old Brentford. It belongs to . . . Mr. Groſvenor.

Thomas Sumner hath alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Mr. Pocklington, of this place, Attorney, gave 18 l. a year for ever to the Poor of this pariſh, and tied lands here for the payment.

Three Houſes with gardens are alſo for the uſe of the Poor.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The Tower was new-built of brick in 1718, and contains 1 Bell.

This Rectory hath been in the gift of the ancient family of Tyrell of Heron, ever ſince the year 1382.

lies north of the Warley's. The name is otherwiſe written in records, Childewyk, Childiche, Childrick, Chiltendich, Chilterdich, Chilterdyke, Ciltedic, Ciltendis. From whence it is derived, is not very eaſy to diſcover. A Ditch being an uſual mound, or boundary, among the ancient inhabitants of this iſland, here might formerly have been ſome remarkable one. From whence the firſt part of the name was taken, whether from cilð, cille, or ciltern, I am not able to determine.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the lands within this pariſh were divided into three parts; one whereof belonged to Herbert, and afterwards to the Queen; another to Aluuen, a freewoman; and the other to Orgar, a freeman: At the time of the Survey, the firſt was held by the Sheriff of Surrey; the ſecond by Suene, and his under-tenant Oſbern; and the third by Saſſeline [P].

They were divided afterwards into the two Maners of 1. Childerditch-hall; and 2. . . . . Tillingham-hall.

Childerditch-Hall

ſtands a little way ſouth-weſt from the Church.

This is what belonged to the King at the Survey, and was in the hands of the Sheriff of Surrey. The Maner is ſaid to have continued in the Crown till the reign of K. Henry VIII; who granted it, as well as the other, to Sir Thomas Seymor.

[N] This Robert was of Berking; and by Anne his wife, daughter of Bolney, had Robert of Warwics in this County.

[O] Sir Denner Strutt was greatly hurt by the civil wars, being forced to pay a compoſition of 1350 l. Liſt of Compounders.

This is placed within the Hundred of Berdeſtaple, next to another eſtate of Suene's.

But ſeveral of the Demeſnes of it were granted early to the Abbey of Coggeſhall, as appears by the quantity of land they had here, even two knights fees, in the year 1254. And ſome lands they had obtained from Robert Hovel, and Margaret his wife [Q].

How Childerditch-Hall with its demeſnes was diſpoſed of by K. Henry VIII. we ſhall ſee preſently.

TILLINGHAM-HALL

ſtands low about a mile and a quarter ſouth ſouth-eaſt from the Church, and contains a vaſt extent of land: ſome of which lies in the pariſh of South-Weald.

In all probability it was ſo denominated from a Family, ſurnamed de Tillingham from the pariſh of that name in this County.

Richard de Tillingham held 2 fees in Childiche and Tilbery; which Robert de Tillebury held afterwards in 1165 (k). And another Richard de Tilbury held the ſame, in 1275, of the Honor of Reylie, by knight's ſervice (l).

Sir William Baude, ſenr. who dyed in 1376, held this maner of Tillingham of the King, as of his Honor of Reyle, by ſervice and homage (m). Theſe Bauds were ſeated at Coringham, and had alſo eſtates at Wormingford, and Bures: ſee in the other Volume, p. 231.

In 1377, licenſe was granted to William de Humberſtone and others, to give the maner called Tillingham-Hall, in Chilterdich, Dodinghurſt, and South-Welde, late the eſtate of William Baud, to the Abbat and Convent of Coggeſhale (n), for finding daily a wax-taper, to burn, in their Abbey-Church, before the high altar, at the time of high maſs (o).

The maner of Tillingham continued in the Abbey of Coggeſhall for many years, but not till its ſurrender and final diſſolution which was 5 February 1538. For, in 1525, K. Henry VIII. had granted it among many other eſtates to Cardinal Wolſey, for the building and endowment of his two Colleges (p). This ſeems to be the reaſon, why it is not valued among the reſt of that Abbey's revenues. [See in the other Volume, p. 164.] Upon the Cardinal's præmunire all his lands and goods coming to the Crown, K. Henry granted the Maners of Childerdich, and Tillingham, &c. to

Sir Thomas Seymor, and his heirs (q). The 17th. of April 1540, he had licenſe to alienate the Maners and Granges called Childerdiche-hall, and Tillingham-hall, in Childerdiche, Little Warley, and Weſt-Horndon, to Sir Richard Riche (r): who, upon licenſe obtained 15 April 1554 (s), ſettled them, with North Weald, on his ſecond ſon, Sir Hugh Riche; at his marriage with Anne, daughter and heir of Sir John Wentworth; He dying 1 November 1554, She took to her ſecond huſband Henry Fitz-Alan, Lord Maltravers [R]. But as Sir Hugh had no iſſue, theſe Maners reverted to his father Richard Lord Riche, who was poſſeſſed of them at the time of his deceaſe, 12 June 1566 (t). From him they paſſed to his deſcendents —— Robert, Lord Riche, and—— Robert, Earl of Warwick (u). The daughters of Robert, the ſecond Earl of Warwick, ſeem to have ſhared theſe eſtates: For, Edward Montague, Earl of Mancheſter, who had married Anne, the ſecond of thoſe Daughters, (and others,) preſented to this Vicarage in 1662 (w).

For many years they were in the Cheke Family of Pirgo. Concerning which ſee above, p. 61] Sir Thomas Cheke had to his 2 d. wife Eſſex, daughter of Robert Rich the firſt Earl of Warwick of this Family; and with her he probably got this eſtate in marriage; or elſe purchaſed it of his brother, or father-in-law. However the Cheke family appears poſſeſſed of it ever ſince the year 1666. Namely——Robert,—— John,——Edward,——Thomas,——Edward. And then, in 1707, it came to the youngeſt ſiſter of the laſt, namely

Thomas Offin hath alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

A widow gave ten pounds to this pariſh, for ever, to be lent out, by 50s. to ſome of the poor inhabitants, for a year, without intereſt.

About a mile from this Church, there are Alms-houſes for two dwellers.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints and St. Faith, is a neat building, of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The Steeple, of brick at the bottom, and of timber above that, with a ſpire ſhingled, hath in it only 1 Bell.

Robert Hovel, and Margaret his wife, in 1249, put the Advowſon of this Church into the hands of the Abbot and Monks of Coggeſhall; to which they preſented as a Rectory from about that time till 1370 (x).

In 1379, upon the petition of the Abbot and Convent to Urban VI. that Pope, by his bull dated 16 Auguſt that year, deputed and empowered Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to appropriate this Church to that Abbey: which he accordingly did 13 June 1380; and, the 16th of January following, ordained and endowed a Vicarage here. But this being done without the King's licenſe according to the ſtatute of mortmain [S], the patronage became forfeited to the Crown. However they obtained a pardon from K. Henry VI. for the ſum of 100 s. paid into the Hanaper, under pretence that it was done by them through ignorance, and the neglect of their Counſel. And they remained poſſeſſed of the Great Tithes, and of the Advowſon of the Vicarage, till their diſſolution; when they were granted away with the two Maners and have paſſed with them ever ſince.

[R] She had the Advowſon of the Vicarage during her life, and preſented to it from 1557 to 1575.

14. SOUTH-WEALD,

is a large Pariſh, taking up the northern point of this Hundred. The Saxon word Weald ſignifies Wood, and this place ſeems to have been one of the firſt inhabited parts of the Foreſt of Eſſex. It has the addition of South, to diſtinguiſh it from North-Weald near Epping.

By the ſouth-weſt ſide of Weald-Hall Park, there is a Camp, incloſing about ſeven acres. It is circular, and ſingle-ditched, and is thought to have been a Roman Summer Camp, or Caſtra Exploratorum.

The chief part of this pariſh belonged before, and at, the time of the Survey to Waltham-Abbey [T]; Geffrey de Magnaville got ſome of it by way of exchange. And Robert Gernon had alſo one portion, which had belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to one Sprot.

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. The Maner of South-Weald. 2. . . . . that of Bowells. 3. The Maner of Caldecot's. 4. The Maner of Brentwood, or Coſted-hall. 5. . . . that of Baads, or Dounſells. 6. . . . and that of Ropers.

In this pariſh are the Four Hamlets, of Brentwood, Brook-ſtreet, Haſtingwood, and Thornwood.

The Maner of SOUTH-WEALD.

The manſion houſe, called Weald-Hall, is pleaſantly ſituated, a little way north-weſt from the Church.

This is one of the ſeventeen Lordſhips wherewith Earl Harold endowed his Abbey at Waltham in the year 1062, under the name of Walda. And by the ſame name it was confirmed to that Houſe by K. Henry II. and K. Richard I. (y) [U]. From its belonging to the ſaid Abbey it received the denomination of Abbot's Weld.

It continued in the poſſeſſion of that Abbey till 26 February 1540, when K. Henry VIII. granted the Maner of South-Weld, with appertenances, and the Rectory or Great Tithes, for the ſum of 883 l. 6 s. 8 d. together with a meſſuage called Bowells lately belonging to the Priory of Blackmore, to Sir Brian Tuke, Treaſurer of his Chamber, and his heirs; To hold in capite by the 20th. part of a knight's fee, and rent of 4 l. 18 s. 2 d. (z). He had been Sheriff of this County in 1533; and was a man of learning [W]. For a further account of him, and his eſtates, ſee under Layer-Marney, where his ſeat was. He dyed 26 October, 1545, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon, Upon which N. Salmon made the following obſervations, or rather conjectures. The Delle is the low ground towards Naveſtoke, through which the Rivulet paſſes which divides the Liberty of Havering from Weald. The Gate, or way, goes from thence by Pilgrims-Hatch through part of Shenfeld to Billericay, out of which is ſtill a Road through the middle of the Camp. The Northern courſe of this Road points to Ongar, anciently called by the Saxons Aungre, i. e. the Place, by way of eminence. The Road as it paſſes by Coxey-Green has the name of Weſt-ſtreet. North of this lane and Coxey Green, is a lane retaining the name of Haccot-Lane and Haccot-Hall, ſuppoſed to be a corruption from Half-Gate. Toward the north-eaſt are Pits, named probably by the Saxons Wulfpitts, for having been the kennel of beaſts of prey whilſt Wolves were in this iſland. Thence we go ſouth to Purce; thence ſtill ſouthward to Freebairns-Leap, ſomewhere about Brook-ſtreet: ſuppoſed to have been a Place of Exerciſe of young gentlemen, for vaulting, leaping, throwing the bar, and other feats of activity, in all nations uſed as well as Troy Games by the Romans. Hence the deſcription leads to Mannes-Land, and ends the circle at Delle again.

[W] J. Leland highly commends him, for his wonderful eloquence in the Engliſh language.—' Anglicæ linguæ elo-' quentia mirificus.'—And J. Bale ſays, he wrote Obſervations on Chaucer, and a Chronicle againſt Polydore Vergil. *T. Charles Tuke Eſq (a); who departing this life 29 March 1547, was ſucceeded by his next brother——George (b): to whom indeed their father had left this eſtate by will (c). He, and Walter Celey, Gent. had licenſe 10 Decemb. 1547, to alienate them to

Sir Richard Riche, Lord Chancellor of England. And a Fine was levied accordingly (d). Of Riche I ſuppoſe it was purchaſed by

Sir Antony Browne. The Browne Family was originally of the weſt of England. Robert Browne had two ſons, Thomas, of Abbeſs Roding in this county; and Robert, of Wakefeild in Yorkſhire, which laſt had only one daughter named Agnes.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, married Joanna, daughter of . . . Kirkham, and had by her——Robert Browne, of Langenhoo in this County Eſq; who by his wife, Mary daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Charlton, had 3 ſons, Robert, Humfrey, and——Wiſtan [X]. This laſt married Elizabeth, daughter of William Mordant of Turvey in Bedfordſhire Eſq; by whom he had Antony the purchaſer of this eſtate; John, of Abbeſs-Roding; Thomas, a prieſt; William, that dyed without iſſue; Jane, wife of . . . . Bridges, Conſtance, wife of . . . . Smyth of Lincolnſhire; Anne, wife of William Eyton; . . . . of John Pryour; and Elizabeth, of John Cutts, of Depden.——Antony Browne aforeſaid ſtudied ſome time at Oxford; but before he had taken a degree he removed to the Middle Temple. In 1555 he was created Serjeant at law; and, 16 October the ſame year, made King and Queen's Serjeant. The 5th of October 1558 he was conſtituted Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas: and continued in that office by Qu. Elizabeth, 18 Novemb. 1559. But, the 22d of January following, he was removed from it, moſt probably becauſe he was a Papiſt, however he continued as one of the Judges of that Court: in which employment he remained till his deceaſe 16 May 1567, having received in 1566, the honor of Knighthood from the Queen in the Parliament-houſe (e) [Y]. He and his Lady lie buried in the Chancel of this Church, under a large tomb. Her name was Joane, only daughter and heir of William Farington Eſq; widow of Charles Booth Eſq; ſhe dyed 22 Novemb. the ſame year. They left no iſſue. The eſtates he poſſeſſed, were, the maner and Rectory, of South-Welde, and 20 meſſuages, 40 acres of arable, . . . meadow, 300 of paſture, 200 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 4 l. rent, in this pariſh, Shenfeild, and Duddinghurſt; which he held of the Queen in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 4 l. 18 s. 2 d. He held alſo, in this pariſh, the maners of Calcote, and Coſted-hall: the Hoſpital and Free-Chapel in Brook-ſtreet: the maner of Cockermouth, and the Rectory in Dagenham: Church-hall in Pakelſham, &c. (f). His great nephew——Wiſtan Browne Eſq; was his heir: being the grandſon of his brother John, juſt mentioned above, and ſon of George Browne, both of Abbeſs-Roding. [See under that pariſh.] Wiſtan Browne Eſq; dyed 1 Auguſt 1580, poſſeſſed of this and other eſtates. He married firſt Mary daughter of Sir Edward Capel, by whom he had Antony, who dyed 14 April 1583, without iſſue: and two daughters, Catharine, wife of Sir Nicolas Waldegrave, and Jane, married firſt to Edward Wyatt Eſq; of Gellingham, and afterwards to Gamaliel, fourth ſon of Henry Capel Eſq; the firſt then aged 18 and the ſecond 16 years (g). Antony dying thus without iſſue, is ſaid to have been ſucceeded by his father's brother——John Brown of Wickham Eſq; But the eſtates at South-Weald do not appear in the Inquiſition taken after his death, which happened 26 February 1585, there being only the maners of Merks, and Colville-hall in White Roding, and Church-hall in Pakleſham, ſet down (h). He married Anne, daughter of Thomas Stanton of Somerſetſhire Eſq; by whom he had 3 ſons, Wiſtan, who dyed without iſſue; Antony; John: and 5 daughters, Jane, wife of John Filiol of Rayne, Gent. Sibilla, of John Chriſtmaſs of Colcheſter, Gent. Elizabeth, of Thomas Cheney; Anne, of Thomas Perient; and Mary, who had three huſbands, Antony Pake, John Cutts, and Brian Tuke.——Antony, the eldeſt ſurviving ſon and heir, knighted 23 July 1603, married firſt, Margaret daughter of John Sulyard Eſq; widow of Thomas Tyrell Eſq; and by her had no iſſue; but by his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Pyrton, of Little Bentley Eſq; he had John; Elizabeth, wife of . . . . [X] This Humfrey Browne was brought up to the Law, in the Middle Temple; created a Serjeant at law in 1532; made King's Serjeant in 1536; one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas 20 November 1543; afterwards knighted. He dyed 5 Septemb. 1562, poſſeſſed of Ridley-hall in Terling; and of Whitey Roding. [See the other Volume, p. 128. 469.] He was twice married. By Anne his firſt wife, daughter of Sir Henry Vere, of Great Addington, he had, George, who dyed before him, leaving, Thomas his ſon, that dyed without iſſue. By Anne, his ſecond wife, daughter of John Lord Huſſey, he had Mary, wife of Thomas Wilford, of Kent, Eſq; Chriſtian, of Sir John Tufton; and Catharine, wife of Sir William Rooper, remarried, after his deceaſe, to Roger Townſhend of Brampton in Suffolk, Eſq; father of Sir Roger Townſhend of Rainham. . . . ſon [Z], having obtained an act of Parliament in 1661, or 1662, to ſell lands for payment of his debts, alienated this eſtate to

Sir William Scroggs, who was created Serjeant at law 25 June 1669; King's Serjeant 2 November following; Juſtice of the Common Pleas 23 October 1676; Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench 31 May 1678; but removed 11 Apr. 1681, through the heats of the Plots in the reign of K. Charles II. (k). He married a daughter of Matthew Bluck Eſq; and dying 25 October 1683, was buried in this Church.—Sir William Scroggs Knight his ſon and heir, not long after ſold this eſtate to Eraſmus Smith, alias Heriz, of St. John's Clerkenwell in Middleſex, Eſq; Alderman of the City of London. He was eldeſt ſon, by the ſecond wife, of Roger Smith, alias Heriz, of Edmunthorp in Leiceſterſhire, Knight; whoſe great-grandfather was William Smith, alias Heriz, of Withcock in Leiceſterſhire Eſq; deſcended in a direct line from the ancient family of Heriz of Weverton in Nottinghamſhire, but who changed his name, in the reign of K. Henry VII. to Smith, alias Heriz, and quartered the Arms of Smith and Heriz, as all his deſcendents have done ever ſince. The cauſe of this ſo changing his name is not mentioned: It may however be reaſonably preſumed, that the maner of Withcock might be ſettled upon him by ſome relation of that name, upon thoſe conditions; becauſe in the Pedigree of Heriz, when he is named, theſe words follow, "Smith of Withcock." He married Catharine, daughter of William Aſhby of Loſeby in Leiceſterſhire, Eſq; whoſe anceſtor had to wife Elizabeth the heir-general of William Burdet of Loſeby aforeſaid, Eſq; that had married Elizabeth, ſole daughter and heir of Sir Robert de la Zouch of Lubſthorp in Leiceſterſhire; from whom deſcended Alan, Lord Zouch of Aſhby: whoſe lineal anceſter, named Alan Viſcount of Rohan in Bretagne in France, married Conſtance, daughter and heir of Conan le Gros Duke of Bretagne, by Maud his wife daughter of Henry I. King of England.—The lineal anceſtor of the ſaid William Smith, alſo named William Heriz, in the reign of K. Edward I. married Maud, daughter of Peter Lord Baſſet of Drayton; from which family deſcended the Duke of Kingſton upon Hull, and the Viſcount Chaworth.

Eraſmus Smith, Eſq; above-mentioned, married Mary, daughter of Hugh Hare, Baron of Colrane in Ireland, by the Lady Lucy Montague, daughter of Henry Earl of Mancheſter. He had by her ſix ſons, Eraſmus, Samuel, Hugh, Roger, Montague, and Henry; and three daughters, Lucy, Mary, and Anne. Eraſmus, and Samuel, dying without iſſue [A], the eſtate deſcended to the third ſon——Hugh Smith Eſq; who alſo ſurvived his three younger brothers, that dyed batchelors. He made great improvements at his ſeat of Weald-Hall, and much beautified it in the modern taſte: But dyed 9 May 1745. He married Dorothy, daughter of the Honble. Dacre-Lennard-Barrett, of Alveley, by whom he left only two Daughters, coheirs, Dorothy, and Lucy [B].

On the 17th of April 1746, Dorothy was married to the Hon. John-Smith Barry Eſq; fourth ſon of James Earl of Barrymore: And Lucy, 17 March 1746-7, to the Rt. Hon. James Stanley, Lord Strange, eldeſt ſon of Edward Earl of Derby, by whom ſhe had 5 children. She dyed 7 February 1759.

Thomas Towers Eſq; now reſides at Weald-Hall.

The Maner of BOWELLS, otherwiſe called Boyls, Cooke a Bowells, Dowells, and Cook a Dowells.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half ſouth of this Church, on the right hand ſide of the road leading from Brook-ſtreet to Warley.

This ſeems to be the carucate of land, lying within the Maner of Weald, which one Sochman had poſſeſſed before the Conqueſt; and that Robert Gernon held, of the King's gift, as mentioned in note [T].

It belonged afterwards to the Priory of Blackmore, and was granted, 26 February 1540, with the Maner of South-Weld, to Sir Brian Tuke (l). His ſon——George Tuke obtained a licenſe, 20 April 1551, to alienate this meſſuage, called Bowells, alias Cocke a Bowellys, and 40 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 70 of paſture, and 4 of wood, with appertenances, in this pariſh, to Humfrey Frith (m).——Robert Fryth, who dyed 27 July 1573, held this capital meſſuage, and 120 acres of land occupied therewith, of the Queen, in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee.——Ralph was his ſon (n).

It belonged afterwards to John Juſtice Eſq; of whom it was purchaſed by David Papillon, Eſq; late Commiſſioner of Exciſe, and Member of Parliament: and now belongs to his ſon.

The Maner of CALDECOTS.

The manſion houſe lies north of the London-road, near Weald-hall park. And the name might be derived from the two words, Cealꝺ and coꞇe, i. e. cold cottage, or houſe. Part of the Roman Camp is within this eſtate.

This is the part that Sprot held in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Ralph, at the time of the Survey [C].

The whole, or part, of this eſtate was given by William, or Richard de Montfitchet to the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn. This appears by the following extract from a Rental of the Honor of Hedingham-Caſtle, in the reign of K. Henry VI. ‘ The Abbot of Stratford held ‘ one quarter of a knight's fee in Welde, in pure ‘ alms, as he ſays, of the donation of Richard ‘ Mounfichet.’

In the valuation of the lands belonging to this Houſe, taken at the Diſſolution, the ſtate of this Maner is thus ſet down; Rent-aſſize of the free and cuſtomary tenants 6 l. 3 s. 4 d.—Farm of the maner 53 s. 4 d.—Perquiſites of Courts, 1 l. 14 s. 0 d.

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. 22 Auguſt 1544, made a grant of this maner to Thomas Blucke, and other citizens of London (o).

Qu. Elizabeth, in 1592, granted Caldecots, a maner once belonging to Stratford-Langthorn, to William Tipper and Robert Dawe; among many other eſtates (p). But as few grants to thoſe hunters after concealed Lands ſtood good; the ſame Queen, 15 Auguſt 1599, granted this eſtate to (q)

Antony Browne, Eſq; From whom it paſſed, as the reſt of the eſtates, to Hugh Smith, Eſq; and his heirs.

Langton's, a principal Houſe here, ſeems to have been ſo named from Langthorn, the Abbey at Stratford, to which it belonged.

The Maner of BRENTWOOD, otherwiſe COST-HALL, or COCKSTED-HALL.

This Maner contains the chief Hamlet in this pariſh; that of Brentwood, or Burntwood, a Town on the London-road, 17 miles from that city; pleaſantly ſituated on a hill, with an agreeable proſpect. And, as it is at ſo ſmall a diſtance from the capital, it affords an agreeable retirement to ſeveral citizens; upon which account it is lately much improved in buildings.

Here is a good Market on Thurſdays weekly; and two Fairs yearly, one July 18, and the other October 15.

The Aſſiſes have been ſometimes kept in this Town; but the unreaſonable Expence of obtaining that Favor; the want of proper and ſufficient Accommodation; and the Diſtance of the Place from the northern and largeſt parts of the Shire, have generally cauſed them to be fixed, as well as the Seſſions, at Chelmsford, which is conſiderably larger, better provided with Inns, and in the center of the County.

What occaſioned the Name, is at preſent unknown. Undoubtedly it was on account of a Wood here, (part of the Foreſt of Eſſex) being deſignedly, or by accident, Burnt, or Brent, as the old Engliſh word is. In Latin it is ſtyled Boſcus arſus, by corruption harſus: and in old French Bois ars.

As for Coſtede, alias Cocſtede, it was probably derived from Coꞅꞇ, a weed called Herb-Mary, or Coc, a Cook, and ꞅꞇeꝺe, place. It is ſometimes called Coaſt-wood.

This land was by William de Wochendon given to the Abbey of St. Oſith, and confirmed to that Houſe by K. Henry II. (r) [D].

The donor ſeems to have been the ſame William de Wochendon, Camerarius, who held land in North Okendon; and, if he was the King's Chamberlain, might eaſily obtain from the Crown ſo much Foreſt-land as this. However, it ſeems to have been given as ſoon as the Monaſtery of St. Oſith was founded by Richard de Beaumeis Biſhop of London; for it was grown ſo conſiderable a Place in the reign of K. Stephen, as to have of his grant a Market and Fair.

It continued in that Monaſtery till its diſſolution; and, in the Valuation of its revenues, is thus deſcribed, ‘ The maner of Brentwood, called Coſt-Hall alias Coſted-Hall. The farm of this maner was let to John Derby, 31 Decemb. 1537, for twenty years at 20 l. per ann.’

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. in 1559, granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell (s); Upon whoſe Attainder it came again to the Crown; and belonged in 1549 to the Lady Anne of Cleve (t).

K. Edward VI. in 1553, granted this Maner of Coſted-hall, with a Fair and a Market in Brentwood, to Antony Browne; to hold in ca. by the 100th part of a knight's fee (u). From Browne and his ſucceſſors, it came, as the maner of Weald, to Hugh Smith Eſq; and his heirs, Lords paramount of all the Maners in the Pariſh.

The Maner of BAADS, or DOUNSELS,

Lies on the right hand ſide of the Street leading from Brentwood towards Ongar: and the Houſe is about 2 miles north-eaſt from Southweald Church. It ſtands partly in this pariſh, and partly in that of Shenfeild. The higheſt account I find of this eſtate, is a conveyance from John Baas of Brendwood, to Thomas Willyngale and others, of all his lands and tenements in the pariſh of South-Weld and Hamlet of Brendwood (w). And the firſt time it occurs in records by its two names, of Bawdes alias Dounſells, is in 1483 (x).

Ralph Bawde, who dyed in 1483, held the maner of Bawds, otherwiſe called Dounſells, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of 6*s.* 8*d. per ann.*——Thomas his ſon and heir, was thirteen years old (x). One would have imagined this eſtate held of the Abbey of St. Oſith. How the Biſhop of London came by any Lordſhip here will be hard to account for; nor is he mentioned in the more ancient conveyance of Baas, ſo that he ſeems to have had no title to any thing here before Richard II. nor after Henry VIII. [E].

Thomas Bradbury, who dyed 9 January 1509, held the maner of Bawdys, with appertenances, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 20 of wood, and 20*s.* rent in South-Weld, Dodinghurſt, and Shenfield, of the Biſhop of London. But eighty acres of arable, parcel of the ſaid maner, lying in Shenfield, held of the Queen, as of her maner of Shenfeild-hall, by the rent of 19s.——William, ſon of Robert his brother, was his couſin and next heir (y).

The Bradbury family had alſo the Maner of Manuden. See in the other Volume, p. 619.

From Bradbury this maner came to the Family of Crafford, whether by inheritance or purchaſe nothing ſhews. Arthur Crafford Gent. who lived at his maner of Downſells, and dyed 11 May 1606, aged 72 years, held the maner of Bawdes, alias Downeſells, with appertenances in South-Weld, of Sir Thomas Lucas, as of his maner of Shenfield;——Mary, and Winifrede then wife of George Gittens, were his daughters and heirs (z). Mary was married very ſoon after into the Jermin Family, and held a moiety of the maner of Bawds, alias Downſels, in South-Weyle, Shenfield, and Duddinghurſt. She left no iſſue, for at the time of her deceaſe 13 June 1608, her ſiſter Winifrede, wife of George Gittens Gent. was found to be her heir (a). The ſon of this George, named alſo George Gittens, dwelt at Biſhop's Hall in this pariſh, and departing this life there 25 November 1712, in the 83d of his age, was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph.

But the Maner of Bawdes got, during the civil wars, into the hands of one John Leech, a Corniſh-man, and grocer in London, Secretary to the Sequeſtrators for this County. Soon after the Reſtoration, he ſold it to Thomas Manby Eſq; deſcended from William Manby of Eliſham in the County of Lincoln; a Family ſo named from Manby, a place in that County, which they enjoyed from the reign of K. Edward I. William Manby aforeſaid, living in 1563, had iſſue——James, father of William, and——Robert. The latter, living at Walmſgate in 1634, had three wives, 1. Joane, daughter of Thomas Manby of Leiceſterſhire, 2. Ellen, daughter of Lyon Skipwith, 3. Alice, daughter of John Newcomen Eſq; (b)—Thomas Manby Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, who purchaſed this eſtate, dyed 2 February 1678-9, aged 55, and was buried in this church with an epitaph. He married Mary, daughter of Daniel Caldwell of Horndon on the Hill, Eſq; and had by her two ſons, Caldwell, and Thomas. The eldeſt ſon, and two daughters, dyed in their infancy.——Thomas Manby Eſq; the ſecond ſon, and heir, was knighted by K. James II. in the firſt of his reign, and High Sheriff of Eſſex in 1688. By his firſt wife, Julian, daughter of Sir George Selby of Northamptonſhire, Bart. he had two ſons, Francis, and Thomas; the latter dyed young: By his ſecond, wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir George Cary of Torr-Abbey, in Devonſhire, Knight, he had Robert, Edward, and George.——Francis Manby Eſq; the eldeſt ſon ſucceeded his father.

This eſtate is between 50 and 60 l. a year; and the Quit-rents belonging to it are 1 l. 2 s. 0 d. a year, and ſome capons. It pays a Quit-rent of 1 l. 3 s. 6 d. to the Maner of South-Weald [F].

The Maner of ROPERS

Is at preſent divided into Great-Ropers, and Little Ropers. The Lands are on the left hand ſide of the London road going from Brentwood, and extend from Brook-ſtreet toward Great-Warley: It was ſo named from an owner. Henry Roper Gentleman Purſuivant to Queen Catharine of Arragon, in 1614, lett a Leaſe of the Place, Lands, and Mill, here. The Place is that now called the Moat-Houſe.——Conſtance Roper paſſed this away, in 1517, to William Ipgrave (c).

Great-Ropers was in John How of Stonedon, Eſq; and then in William Taylor Eſq;

Little-Ropers is in Henry Hall of Hutton, Eſq;

The MOAT-HOUSE, ſo ſtyled becauſe ſurrounded with a Moat, was called Brook-Hall when it was in the hands of Wright, who had both Ropers. It ſtands in Brook-ſtreet, on the left hand as you go to London: and was held of the Duchy of Lancaſter. The eſtate came from Laurence to Wright, and probably from Ipgrave to Laurence, becauſe we have ſeen Conſtance Roper convey to Ipgrave.

This Family of Wright came from Kelvedon-Hatch. John, of that place, had 3 ſons,

[E] A Conjecture may here be ventured; that after the death of Thomas of Woodſtock Duke of Glouceſter, who inherited the lands of Bohun in Shenfield, and their coming to the Crown, the Biſhop of London might obtain of Henry IV. or ſome ſucceeding King, a grant of the maner of Bawds, in order to ſecure the intereſt St. Oſith had in the three abovementioned pariſhes from the encroachments of the chief Lords of thoſe Pariſhes. BROOK-STREET is one of the Hamlets in this pariſh, by a Brook, at the bottom of Burnt-wood-hill, and about a mile ſouth-weſt from that Town, on the London-road. The Brook here is called in old writings, Seddeburhebrok, Sedebourbrock, Southbournbroke, Sydeburghbroke.

On the north ſide of this ſtreet, by 'Spital-lane, was formerly an Hoſpital for Lepers, dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt; and founded by the Bruyn Family of South-Okendon. It had a Maſter, or Warden, admitted by the Biſhops of London, at the preſentation of the ſaid Bruyn Family (d) [H]. Some remains of the building are yet viſible.

Of this, Sir Antony Brown had a grant, but the name of Hoſpital, for better ſound, was turned into Free Chapel. At the time of his deceaſe he held a Free Chapel in Brook-ſtreet, and one meſſuage or tenement called Le Spittle in Brook-ſtreet, and 80 acres of arable and meadow, and three of wood, with appertenances in South-Weld, and all other lands, tenements, rents, ſervices, and hereditaments, in the tenure of John Wright of Brook-ſtreet, of the Queen, by the ſervice of the 40th part of a knight's fee, worth by the year 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. —In the next Inquiſition it had got the name of Chantry-Lands. Winſtan Brown Eſq; who dyed 1 Auguſt 1581, held a third part of one meſſuage or tenement, one orchard, one garden, and one curtilage, lately belonging to the Free Chapel; and the third part of 100 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, and wood, commonly called Spittle-Lands or Chantry-Lands; and the third part of 36 s. 3 d. of yearly rent, late parcel of the ſaid Chapel; and of certain other meſſuages, lands, and tenements in South-Weld, Brentwood, Brooke-ſtreet, Shenfield, and Doddinghurſt, to the ſaid Chapel lately belonging; parcel of the poſſeſſions of Sir Antony Brown (e).

This eſtate is now parcelled out. Mr. Erning Bayley has, or lately had, the ſite of the Houſe.

TILLINGHAM HALL,

deſcribed above under Childerdich, has ſome of its lands and demeſnes, and alſo copyholds, extending into South-Weald; from about Bentley-mill unto Doddinghurſt pariſh.

Mr. George Gittens alſo charged Biſhops-Hall with 20 s. per an. for the Poor of Brendwood.

Twenty Shillings per an. charged upon a Copy-hold eſtate held by Thomas Attridg of Coxey-Green, for the uſe of the Poor of South-Weald.

George Abbot Biſhop of London, and Dr. John Donne, Dean of St. Paul's, 18 July 1622, publiſhed the Inſtitutions of this School, drawn up by Edmund Grindall Biſhop of London and Dr. Nowell Dean of St. Paul's, *temp. The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, ſtands on a hill, from whence is a fine proſpect. It is a handſom building, conſiſting of two paces, ſupported in the middle by five pillars of the Tuſcan order: The Chancel the ſame; and the whole tyled. At the weſt end there is a ſtone Tower, of conſiderable hight, embattled, in which are 5 Bells. This Tower was built in the beginning of K. Henry the VIIth's reign; and for that purpoſe a rate was granted for five years, on which were collected 289 l. 5 s. 10 d (f).

This Church was given by Earl Harold to his Abbey of Waltham, under the general name of Walde, "with all its appertenances;" and probably there was then no Church built here. Afterwards K. Henry II. and K. Richard I. confirmed to that Abbey Walda, and the Church of this vill by name, with its appertenances [I].

About the year 1244, this Church was appropriated to that Abbey by Fulk Baſſet, biſhop of London; and afterwards more fully ſettled, 26 January 1274, by John Chiſhull, biſhop of that ſee. At which time, the Vicarage was endowed with all Tithes, both great and ſmall, out of the lordſhip or demeſnes of the Abbey and Convent of Stratford in this pariſh; and with all other Tithes belonging to this Church, except the reſt of the Corn only [K], which was to belong to the Abbey of Waltham. At the ſame time, the Biſhop reſerved to himſelf and ſucceſſors the collation to this Vicarage: and it hath accordingly continued ever ſince in the gift of the Biſhops of London.

The late Incumbent, Dr. Bridges, was a conſiderable Benefactor to this Living, by building a handſom Vicarage-houſe of brick, and laying out a pleaſant Garden.

A CHAPEL

was founded at Brentwood, in or about the year 1221, at the requeſt of David Abbot of St. Oſith, for the conveniency of their tenants at Coſt-hall; with the conſent of the Biſhop of London, of Richard Parſon of Weld, and the Abbot and Convent of Waltham.

The Abbot and Convent of St. Oſith were to build it in their own Fee, at the New-Place [L]; to dedicate it to the Honor of St. Thomas the Martyr, i. e. a-Becket; and to maintain a proper Prieſt to officiate daily in it, if they thought fit.

The Chaplain was to be preſented by the Convent of St. Oſith, and, before his admiſſion, to ſwear that he would not knowingly injure the mother-Church: That he would not receive any of the Pariſhioners to divine offices, Communion, Confeſſions, or Purifications, on Sundays or Holydays, without the Parſon's expreſs leave, except on the day of St. Thomas's paſſion, or tranſlation, and the time of the Fair, if there ſhould be any appointed. Nor ſhall there be any Baptiſm, or Burial of the dead. If any profit ſhould ariſe from the pariſhioners, the Chaplain is immediately to give it to the parſon of the mother Church; and not receive any thing to its prejudice privately or openly. And if there ſhall be any Fair, the parſon of the mother-Church, or a prieſt deputed by him, may if he pleaſe officiate the whole time of the Fair in the Chapel; and on the Feaſts of St. Thomas, and receive all the offerings to his own uſe. The Chaplain during that time ſhall ſerve the mother-Church, but at no other time be compelled to it. The offerings that are made by ſtrangers and paſſengers at other times of the year ſhall be entirely for the maintenance of the Chaplain, who ſhall pay yearly two pounds of wax to the Parſon. The Chaplain may receive any gifts for the building, repair, or ornaments of the Chapel, employing them ſtrictly to that uſe. If he invades the Privileges of the mother-Church contrary to his oath, and the Convent doth not, upon complaint of the Parſon, ſuſpend or correct him in twenty days, the Parſon ſhall have liberty to deprive him, without aſking the Abbot's and Convent's leave, ſaving to the Biſhop all his right. And the mother-Church ſhall receive all Tythes great and ſmall from the demeſne of the ſaid Abbot and Convent without deduction, upon any pretended privilege now in being, or hereafter to be obtained [M].

The Perquiſites of this Chaplain aroſe from Travellers upon the road, and ſuch as came out of devotion to St. Thomas; whence a gate upon the way from Ongar in this pariſh retains the name of Pilgrims-Hatch. Oppoſite to it, was another Hatch, or Foreſt-Gate, which is called to this day Hou-Hatch.

Divine Service is now kept up in this Chapel for the benefit of the Inhabitants, who are numerous ſince the London Road was made here, and are a mile from South Weald Church. The Chaplain is preſented by the Lord of the maner of S. Weald, who pays him 5 l. per an. out of Caldecots; and he hath a Houſe, garden, and orchard, and a little field. The Revenue of this Chapel is lately augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty.

This Chapel continued in the Abbey of St. Oſith's diſpoſal till the reign of K. Henry VIII.

Upon the Diſſolution, K. Henry granted this Chapel to Thomas Lord Cromwell. On his attainder it reverted to the Crown, and the ſame King, 12 July 1544, granted the Chapel of Brendwood, known by the name of Thomas Becket's Chapel, and the Church-yard and Belfrey, and all the houſes, meſſuages, edifices, ſtructures, and gardens, adjoining to the ſaid Chapel, late part of the poſſeſſions of Thomas Lord Cromwell attainted, to John Cocke and Anne his wife, to hold of the King in fealty, and not in capite (g).—Whether this grant took effect, or whether Cocke or his heirs transferred their right to Antony Brown, does not appear, but Brown had a grant of it in 1553 (h), from whom it hath deſcended and paſſed as the maner of South Weald. This Chapel is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. A ſmall ſtone Tower, with a ſpire on the top, contains 1 Bell.

In this Chapel was a Chantry founded for the ſoul of Iſabel Counteſs of Bedford. In 1388, licenſe was granted to Edmund Duke of York, Sir Robert de Pleſington, and John Parker, to give one meſſuage, 220 acres of arable in Shenfield, Weld, Yengrave, and Brentwood, to a certain Chaplain of the Chantry at the Altar of St. Mary in the Chapel of Brentwood, to be founded by the ſaid Duke, Sir Robert, and John; and the ſaid meſſuage and lands were held of the Duke of Glouceſter as of his maner of Shenfield, by the ſervice of 40 s. 1 d. rent per an. and ſuit at the Court of Shenfield; except 20 acres in Yengrave, holden of Robert Goſhalme by the ſervice of 2 s. (i). A Chaplain was inſtituted, and admitted 3 May, 1393, at the preſentation of Edmund Duke of York and others. After this, according to the London Regiſtry, the Rectors of Shenfield and Ging-Raſe preſented [N].

This pariſh, with its ſeveral Hamlets, is thus rated to the Land-tax, South-Weald, 1303 l. Brentwood, 1181 l. Brooke-ſtreet, 572 l.—— Thornwood Hamlet, 595 l. Haſtings-Ward, 457 l. Theſe two laſt are rated with the Half-Hundred of Harlow.

[O] The Crown Inn at Burntwood is very ancient, as appears from the buildings of the back part of it. Mr. Symonds, in his Collections, ſaith he was informed from the Maſter, who had writings in his cuſtody to ſhew it, that it had been an Inn three hundred years with this ſign; that a Family named Salmon held it two hundred years; that there had been eighty-nine owners, amongſt which an Earl of Oxford, and an Earl of Suſſex.

THE HUNDRED OF ONGAR

TOOK its name from the chief Town in it, that of Ongar, derived from the Saxon word Aunȝne, ſignifying The Place, by way of eminence. Unleſs it ſhould be derived from the old word Hangre, a hill (k).

Its Boundaries, On the ſouth, are Becontree-Hundred, and Havering Liberty; On the eaſt, part of this ſame Liberty, and of the Hundreds of Chafford, Barſtaple, and Chelmsford; On the weſt, the Half-Hundred of Waltham, and part of that Harlow; and On the north, part of this laſt, and of the Hundred of Dunmow.

In its greateſt extent from North to South it is about fourteen miles long; and where wideſt from Weſt to Eaſt about ſeven miles broad. Through the midſt of it runs the River Rodon.

This Hundred was originally in the King's diſpoſal. K. Henry II. granted it to Richard de Lucy, who had alſo the Honor and Caſtle of Ongar. Maud, ſiſter of Herbert de Lucy, brought it in marriage to her huſband, John de Ripariis, or Rivers; ſhe dyed in 1242, or 1243. Her grandſon, John de Rivers, held it of the King, as of his Crown; at the time of his deceaſe in 1294 (l). John de Rivers, in 1336, enfeoffed John de Havering, and his heirs, in this Hundred; and, in 1339, granted it to——Sir John de Sutton, of Theydon-Mount and Wivenhou in this County (m); with all its rights and liberties. The latter, in 1348, enfeoffed ——Ralph Lord Stafford, and his heirs, in this Hundred of Aungre, with letes, view of frank-pledge, and Sheriffs turns, belonging to the ſame Hundred; which was holden of the King in capite, in free ſocage, without any payment (n). This Ralph, then Earl Stafford, dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1372 (o). It continued in his poſterity, Earls of Stafford, and at length Dukes of Buckingham (p), till 1521, when upon the attainder of Edward it reverted to the Grown. K. Henry VIII. granted it to —— Richard Lord Riche, who dyed poſſeſſed of it 12 June 1566 (q). In his poſterity it continued ſeveral years: And, upon the partition of the Family's eſtates, was allotted to ——Sir Henry St. John; who ſold it to——Philip Traherne Gent. of whom it was purchaſed by——Sir Eliab Harvey; and it has been ever ſince in the Harvey Family of Chigwell.

As to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, the Hundred and Deanry of Ongar is in the Archdeaconry of Eſſex.

Within the Hundred of Ongar are twenty ſix Pariſhes, of which we treat in the following order.

Aungr Hundr The Order of the gathering and yearly making of the Wardſtaff of the King there with the due courſe and circumſtance of the yearly Watch, Ward, and Service Royall incident to the ſame. That is to ſay, Firſt, The Bailiffe of the ſaid Libtie, or Hundr, ſhall gather and yearly make the Wardſtaffe of ſome Willow Bough growing in Abbaſſe Rothing Wood the Sunday next before Hock-Munday (r), which ſhall containe in length iii qrters of a yard, and viii inches round in compaſſe or thereabout. And hee ſhall convey the ſame ymediately unto the Mannor Place of Ruckwood-Hall in Abbaſſe-Rothing aforeſ'd, where the Lord of the ſaid Manor for the tyme being ſhall reverently the ſame receive into his houſe, and ſhall rowle itt upp in a faire fine lynnen cloth, or towell, and ſo lay it upon ſome Pillowe or Cuſhion on a table or cubberd ſtanding in the chiefe or higheſt place in the Hall of the ſaid Maner Place, there to remaine untill the ſaid Bailiffe ſhall have relieved and refreſhed himſelf. And when the ſaid Bailiffe ſhall ſee convenient tyme to dep'te he ſhall convey the ſame Staffe by ſunne ſhineing unto Wardhatch-Lane beſides Long-Barnes in Roothing aforeſaid, when and where the ſaid Lord of Ruckwood-Hall and all and everie other tennant and tennants, land-owners, which by reaſon of their Tenure doe hould their lands likewiſe by ſervice Royall, to watch and warde the ſaid Staff there upon convenient ſummons and warning to be given unto them yearly by the ſaid Lord of Ruckwood-Hall for the time being, with their full ordinarie number of able men well harniſhed with ſufficient weapon ſhall attend. Where uppon the Lord of Ruckwood-Hall ſhall then and there yearly at his p'per coſts and charges, have readie prepared a great Rope, called a Barr, with a Bell hanging on the end of the ſame, which he ſhall cauſe to be extended overthwart the ſaid Lane, as the cuſtom hath beene, to ſtay and arreſt ſuch people as would paſs by. Att the end of which ſaid Barr, not farr from the ſaid Bell, ſhall be laid downe reverently the ſaid Staffe upon a Pillowe, or Cuſhion, on the grounde; which done, forthwith the ſaid Bailiffe ſhall ſeverally call the names of all the aforeſaid tenants, land-owners, who ſhall preſent their ſaid ordinarie number of men accordingly. Then ſhall the ſaid Bailiffe in the King our ſoveraigne Lord's name ſtraightlie charge and comand them and everie of them to watch and keep the Ward in due ſilence, ſoe that the King be harmleſs and the Countrie ſcapeleſs, untill the ſunne arriſing, when good houre ſhall be for the ſaid Lord of Ruckwood-hall to repaire unto the ſaid Staffe, who in the preſence of the whole Watch, ſhall take the ſame Staffe into his hand, and ſhall make uppon the upper rind of the ſame with a knife a ſcore or notch, as a marke or token, declaring their loyall ſervice done for that year in this behalf. And ſoe ſhall deliver the ſaid Staffe unto the Bailiffe, ſending it unto the Lord, or Land-owner, of the Mannor of Fiſfeild, or unto the Tennant reſiant, ſaying this notable narracon of the Wardſtaffe hereafter written in the Saxon tongue; which done, they may hale up the ſaid Barr, and depart at their pleaſure.

This is the Tale of the Wardſtaffe.

The Munday following, called Hock-Munday, the ſaid Staffe ſhall be preſented yearly unto the Lord and Owner of the mannor of Fiſfeild for the time being, or his reſient, who ſhall ymediately unfold the clothes it is wrapped in, that it may appear by the Score made thereon how the aforeſaid Lord of Ruckwood-Hall and other Tennants, which by reaſon of their Tenures of their lands, owe ſuite and ſervice to watch the ſaid Staffe at Abbaſs-Rothing aforeſaid have done their Watch and Service Royall accordingly the night before. Then ſhall he cloth it again, lay it in order, and uſe it in every degree as the Lord of Ruckwood-hall hath done, &c.

This is called Abbaſs-Rothing Watch.

N. B. The Watch is kept at the Croſs with a hand, at the three Wants in Fiſfeild.

[P] The manuſcript whence this was taken, is an Account of the Rents of the Hundred in the time of John Stoner, [of Loughton,] who had a grant of it for his life in the 34th year of Henry VIII; which are ſaid to be ſuch as have been executed, done, paid, uſed, obſerved, and kept, not only in the time of Edward III. and Robert Bruce ſometime King of Scotts, but alſo in the time of his noble Progenitors Kings of England long before when the Saxons inhabited this realme, as manifeſtly may appeare more at large by antient records thereof made by Humfrey de Bohun then Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, and Conſtable of England, Lord of the ſaid Hund. dated at Pleaſhy the 10th Day of July, in the 11th year of the Reigne of the ſame King Edward; as alſo by divers others ancient and ſundrie notable Records, the ſame remaining written in the Saxon tongue.

Tueſday following it is carried to the Lord of the Mannor of Naſh-Hall in High-Ongar, who, &c." as before.

This is called Stondon Watch.

N. B. the Watch is kept at Horrelsford, alias Hallsford.

The Wedneſday following the Staffe ſhall be preſented yearly unto the Lord of the Manor of High-Laver, &c.—Watch at Poole-Lane end in Maudlin-Laver.

The Ceremony of the Watch in each pariſh I have omitted, being the ſame as in Abbaſſe-Rothing. I have alſo omitted the number of Watch-men in each Pariſh.

This Proceſſion ſeems to have been a yearly Muſter of fencible men who were appointed to guard the Hundred againſt murthers and robberies, for both which it was liable to pay, a fine. If by preventing theſe the King receives no Harm, as in the loſs of a ſubject, or the felonious breach of his peace, the Subject eſcapes a Fine, otherwiſe due for ſuffering a murtherer or thief to eſcape.

The Ceremony began at Abbaſſe-Rothing, as at the extremity of the Hundred, went on to Chigwell the other extreme, and returned to High Laver, which was in the neighbourhood of Ruckwood-hall. At one of theſe two maner-houſes we may ſuppoſe it depoſited, with due regard to Royal Authority.

What we learn from records concerning the Deſign of this ceremony of the Ward-ſtaff, is, Tnat it was to repreſent the King's perſon [Q]; and to keep the King's peace. Some lands were held by the ſervice, of finding two men to watch with the Ward-ſtaff; of keeping the Ward-Staff; and of paying Ward-Silver, and doing white ſervice at the Ward-ſtaff [R]. To conclude, this Ward-Staff, was to be carried through the Towns and Hundreds of Eſſex, as far as a place called Atte wode near the Sea, and be thrown there into the Sea [S]. This Cuſtom hath been long neglected.

1. ONGAR

This Town having given name to the Hundred, claims the firſt notice. To diſtinguiſh it from the other adjoyning Ongar, it has the addition of Cheping; from the Saxon Ceaping, buying. For it hath been many years a Market Town; The Market being now held weekly on Saturdays, but formerly on Tueſdays. It hath alſo a Fair on the 30th of September.

It is otherwiſe called Ongar ad Caſtrum, from a Caſtle built here by Richard de Lucy, as we ſhall ſee preſently. Beſides Ongar, it is written in records, Angra, Angre, Angria, Aungre, Ongre.

This Town is 21 miles from London.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, this Lordſhip belonged to Ailid; and to a Freeman; at the time of the Survey, Euſtace Earl of Bologne held it in demeſne: and Ralph Baignard had the part that had been the Freeman's [T].

From Euſtace this eſtate deſcended to his third ſon ——Euſtace, alſo Earl of Bologne; whoſe daughter——Maud brought it in marriage to her huſband.

Stephen Earl of Blois, afterwards King of England.

K. Stephen's ſon, William Earl of Mortain, and Surrey, gave it to Richard de Lucy, Lord of Diſce in Norfolk, who being Governor of Falaiſe in Normandy bravely defended that place againſt the attacks of Geffrey Earl Anjou, by whom that place was beſieged (u). With this he had alſo a Grant of Greenſted near this Town, and of Stanford-Rivers; and Rodings, and Criſthall; to hold by the ſervice of three knights fees (w).

He got this Lordſhip erected into an Honor, on which depended ſeveral Fees [U]: And built a Caſtle here. It was ſituated on the top of a very high round artificial hill, [i. e. thrown up with hands,] and ſurrounded by a large Moat; which, with ſeveral other moats, compoſed the old Fortification, moſt of which are ſtill to be ſeen. This Caſtle being grown much ruinous and decayed, was taken down in Qu. Elizabeth's reign by the then owner William Morice Eſq; who, in the room of it, erected a very ſtrong, handſom, brick Building, three ſtories high: and by reaſon of its lofty ſituation, proſpects, beauty, and pleaſant walks exceeded any place in this County. But this Building was demoliſhed by Edward Alexander Eſq; who in 1744 erected, inſtead of it, a large and handſom ſummer-houſe.

To return to Richard de Lucy, he was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1156; conſtituted Juſtice of England in 1162; and intruſted with the office of Lieutenant of the Kingdom, during the King's abſence in Normandy in 1166. As we have already obſerved, he had a grant of the Hundred of Aungre; and of an hundred acres of aſſart lands in the Foreſt of Stanford, and of Greenſted, and Angre (x). The Priory of Leſnes in Kent, was of his foundation, where he entring himſelf a Canon Regular, dyed there 14 Janu. 1179, and was buried in the Chapter-houſe. By Rohais his wife he had two ſons, Geffrey, and Herbert; and two daughters, Maud, married to Walter Fitz-Robert, progenitor of the noble family of Fitz-Walter, to whom ſhe brought the lordſhip of Diſce; and Robais, to Fulbert de Dover, Lord of Chilham in Kent. [See in the other Volume, p. 115.]

The eldeſt ſon,——Geffrey de Lucy, dyed in his father's life-time leaving ——Richard, his ſon, who departed this life without iſſue.

Herbert the younger ſon, who had the Hundred of Aungre, and lordſhip of Stanford, for his maintenance, dying alſo without iſſue, their ſiſter Robais, upon paying a fine to the King in 1207 had livery of the whole Barony, whereunto ſhe then had an hereditary right by deſcent from her two brothers (y).

In 1242 Maud de Lucy held this maner of Aungre of the Honor of Glouceſter, by ten knights fees (z). She held alſo the maner of Stanford of the King, in his eſcheatry. If ſhe was the ſame Maud, as the above-mentioned daughter of Richard de Lucy, ſhe muſt have lived to a very great age, this being 63 years after the ſaid Richard's deceaſe. She was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to

Richard de Ripariis, or Rivers, for which he paid the King a fine; and his lands here were then valued at 40*l. per ann* (a). She had by him two ſons,——Richard, who dyed before her; and Baldwin (b). The former left a ſon ——Richard, born in 1238, for whoſe wardſhip Philip Baſſet gave 1000 marks (c).——John de Rivers, who dyed in 1293, held this maner of Aungre ad Caſtrum of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of three knights fees.——John was his ſon and heir (d). He had alſo the Hundred, as mentioned-above: And ſo likewiſe had his ſon——John (e). It ſeems to have paſſed from this laſt, with the Hundred, to

Sir John de Sutton: and to have been by him conveyed to

Ralph Lord Stafford. For his ſon,——Hugh Earl of Stafford, who dyed in 1386, held this maner of Aungre ad Caſtrum of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's ſervice (f). So did——Thomas Earl of Stafford, ſon of Hugh, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1392 (g). And——William, and——Edmund, brothers of Thomas, who dyed in 1398. and 1403 (h).——Humfrey, ſon of this laſt, and created 14 September 1444 Duke of Buckingham, had alſo this maner among other conſiderable eſtates [W]. Being ſlain at the battle of Northampton 10 July 1460: and his eldeſt ſon Humfrey having been killed at the battle of St. Albans in 1455, he was ſucceeded by his grandſon ——Henry Earl of Stafford (i). He had this maner in 1483, when he was beheaded for attempting to dethrone K. Richard III. and his eſtates became forfeited to the Crown (k). Among which are named the maners of Ongre, Vances and Hatfeild Brodoke, and the Hundreds of Ongre and Harlow (l). For a further account

In 1541, K. Henry VIII. granted this maner of Onger ad Caſtrum, alias Chipping-Onger, to George Harper, and his heirs. The 20th of May 1543, Harper had licenſe to alienate it to

William Morice Eſq; (m) eldeſt ſon of John Morice of Roydon in this County. He married Anne, daughter of . . . Iſaack, of Kent, by whom he had James, Thomas; and Margaret wife of George Tuke. At the time of his deceaſe, 17 January 1553, he held this Maner, and the manſion houſe called Banſons, with ſeveral other meſſuages, lands, &c. by knight's ſervice; and ſome lands in High-Ongar.——James his eldeſt ſon and heir was then 15 years old (n). And dying 2 February 1596, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John Morice Eſq; (o) [X]; He married Catharine, daughter and ſole heireſs of Sir Gabriel Pointz, which brought him a conſiderable eſtate; [ſee under North-Okendon, p. 103.] They had 4 ſons and 3 daughters.——John their eldeſt ſon, took the ſurname of Pointz, and was knighted 22 May, 1603. He dyed 31 January 1617-18, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon—Sir James, who departed this life 31 Auguſt 1623 (p). His widow was re-married to Maurice Barrow.—Richard, his ſon, dying without iſſue, the eſtate came to his two ſiſters, Anne, married to Sir Fulk Grevill, and Elizabeth, to William Duncomb of Battleſden in Bedfordſhire, Eſq; Theſe ſold the maner of Ongar to hath ſometimes been called Old-Aungre, and ſometimes Great, and Little, Aungre. It could not be ſtyled Little in regard to its extent, which muſt exceed that of Cheping, but that its Lords were inferior. The addition of Old is not met with 'till above 100 years after the Conqueſt, when William de Monceaux, who got it ſo named in a Charter, had, perhaps, as little reaſon for it as was afterwards for calling it High: Or, if it was written Aungre-Alta, or Alt, that might, by miſtake, come to Old.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Leuric was poſſeſſed of part of this pariſh, which John ſon of Waleram, and his under-tenant Roger de Ramis, held at the time of the Survey [Y]. Another part called Paſſefeld belonged before and after the Conqueſt to Waltham-Abbey.

The part that belonged to John ſon of Waleram was divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. The Maner of Aſtelyns. 2. Onger-Park. 3. Folyot's-hall. 4. The maner of Chevers. 5. The maner of Aſhe-hall. 6. . . . that of Wetherſpane.

The Maner of HIGH-ONGAR,

as we obſerve by the Survey, comprehended the chief of this Pariſh. But it may reaſonably be ſuppoſed to have been then chiefly wood-land, elſe it would have been rated, or valued, more than at one Maner, and three virgates.

The next poſſeſſor, upon record, after John Waleram's, was William de Moncell, or Monceaux, who held Little-Angre, by the Serjeancy, of being Marſhal of the Barony of Gilbert de Thany; This was in the reign of K. Henry II. (q) [Z].

It is probable Monceaux came into this eſtate by a daughter, or deſcendent, of John de Waleram, becauſe in the year 1277, in an Inquiſition upon Shelley, Waleram de Munceus is mentioned (r).

William de Monceaux is ſaid to have obtained of K. Henry III. 3 Aug. 1220, a Fair here on the 7th. and 8th. of September.

The Maner of ASTELYNS, otherwiſe Gapps, [a Hamlet in this pariſh,] is one of thoſe which were taken out of the capital Maner here: the lands lye partly in Bobbingworth, and North-Weald. It has now no Court nor quit-rents. There formerly belonged to it a ſeat, moated round; but is now a mean farm-houſe, or cottage. It had anciently about it a Park of ſome hundred acres; the Lodge ſtands in Bobbingworth. Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk is ſaid to have concealed himſelf here, when he was charged with high treaſon; for abetting Mary Queen of Scots.

After Monceaux, the next poſſeſſors upon record were the Wretyll, or Writell Familly, ſeated at Bobbingworth, and mentioned in the other Volume, p. 156. 609. Walter Writell, who dyed in 1475, held this maner of Aſtelyns, and lands and tenements in this pariſh, Bobbingworth, Morton, Lauver Maudlyn, Fiſhide, and North-Weld.——William, was his ſon and heir (s). Catharine Hawte, his widow, being remarried to John Grene, enjoyed till her deceaſe 12 July 1493, this maner of Harſtelynes, with appertenances, and 4 meſſuages, 2 crofts, and 140 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 30 of paſture, in the pariſhes aforeſaid (t).——John Wretyll held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe, 28 July 1507 (u). As did William Ayliffe Eſq; 10 Auguſt 1517.

Dr. Baldwin Hamey of the College of Phyſicians London, purchaſed it, and ſettled it, in 1672, on that College, who are preſent poſſeſſors. The Eſtate contains three hundred thirty ſeven acres (w).

The Maner of FOLYOT'S-HALL, alias FOLLIATS, now FOREST-HALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands about three quarters of a mile north of the Church.

It does not appear whence the name of Folyot came: it was, probably, from ſome owner. Likely from Gilbert Foliot, Biſhop of London.

This eſtate belonged of old to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. K. Henry VIII. having got it into his hands, granted it, in 1544, to William Riggs, and Leonard Brown. They had licenſe, 15 Auguſt the ſame year, to alienate it to

Sir Richard Riche; who by licenſe dated 2 May 1562, did ſell it to

Richard Stane, ſenior, and Richard Stane, junior (x). Richard Stane, dyed 8 March 1600, holding this eſtate, of the Queen in capite by knight's ſervice.——Richard, his ſon and heir, was 42 years old and upwards (y). He was Doctor of Laws, and poſſeſſed of the premiſſes: which, at the time of his deceaſe, 7 January

He dyed 15 Janu. 1714, aged 84, leaving by his wife. . . . daughter of Dr. John Gauden Biſhop of Worceſter, his ſon and heir ——William Stane Eſq; who married Alice, daughter of Sir Thomas Abdy of Felix-Hall, Bart. and had by her——William Stane Eſq; is ſuppoſed to take its name from Sir William Chevre, who poſſeſſed it in the time of K. Edward III. (a). [Concerning this Family of Chevre, ſee the other Volume, p. 44.]

The Maner of CHEVERS

The maner houſe ſtands on the ſide of a hill, about a mile eaſt from the Church.

John Stalbroke held this maner of Cheverſhall, 1 May 1484, of Jaſper Duke of Bedford and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Matthew (b).

William Pawne Eſq; had it in 1524, and dyed 22 May 1570, leaving his ſon——William, who dying without iſſue, 2 April 1578, it came to Bridget, wife of William Chatterton daughter of Roger Baſſingborn by Anne his wife ſiſter to the firſt William Pawne (c).

In the Inquiſition taken after the death of this laſt, this maner is called Chyvers-hall, alias Paſfeld Chyvers.—The Pawne Family had alſo the great Tithes of Norton-Mandeville.

John Auſtin, who dyed 16 January 1633, held this eſtate, and after him——James his ſon and heir (d).

About the ſame time, it was held by Philip Holeman (e), one of whoſe anceſtors enjoyed alſo Wetherſpane. For ſome years it has been in the Family of William Stane Eſq;

The Maner of Newarks is alſo in Mr. Stane, lying partly in this pariſh, and partly in the pariſh of Norton, in which the maner-houſe ſtands.

The Maner of ASHE-HALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a quarter of a mile eaſt from the Church, by a brook.

John de Frenles, ſon and heir of Sir William, held this maner of Hugh Earl Stafford, as of his Hundred of Aungre, by the ſervice of 12 d. a year, and ſuit at the Hundred. He dyed in 1378, and was ſucceeded by his brother——William de Frenles (f).

We hear no more of the owners of this eſtate till the reign of K. James I. Sir Thomas Mildmay of Springfeild-Barnes, Kt. then held it by the name of Naſhall, with divers lands and tenements in both the Ongars, Norton-Mandeville, and Shelley; and dying 15 Decemb. 1612, was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Thomas Mildmay Eſq; (g).

Mr. Thomas Wallenger had it ſome time ago; and afterwards

Peter Champion, of Croydon, Eſq;

The Maner of WETHERSPANE.

All that we can find concerning this Maner, is, that it belonged in 1614 to Alexander Holman; and was held under him by Dr. Stane (h). It belonged ſince to

Mr. William Baker: and then to his ſon——Bramſton Baker.

The Maner of ONGAR-PARK.

This is no where contiguous to the reſt of the pariſh, but is cut off from it by Greenſted and Bobbingworth; which gives room for a conjecture, that theſe two vills were erected out of the Woods of Ongar, before the Conqueſt. Part of Ongar Park pays tythes to Stanford-Rivers, and only 3 l. per ann. to the Rector of High-Ongar.

The oldeſt poſſeſſor of this maner, after Monceaux, that we have an account of, is Andrew de Walden, who dyed in 1352. He held of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice, 1 meſſuage, 1 carucate of land, and 800 acres of wood in Aungre, Stanford Rivers, and Welde; jointly with his wife Joane (i). Their ſon——Thomas de Walden, dying in 1420, was found to hold, jointly with Margaret his wife, the maner of Aungre Park of the King, in capite by knight's ſervice: remainder to

Thomas Bataile, ſon of his ſiſter Alice, and to Alianore his wife, daughter of Thomas Ondeby, and their heirs (k). He departed this life in 1439, leaving, by Iſabel his wife,——John, his ſon and heir, 14 years old (l). He was knighted, and at the time of his deceaſe in 1473 left——John, his ſon (m):——Richard Bataile, ſon, as I preſume, of this latter, held of the King in capite in Stanford-Rivers, and Ongar Parke by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, 1 meſſuage, 1 carucate of land, 100 acres of arable, 100 acr. of paſture, 600 of wood, and 4 s. 5 d. ob. rent; all together of the yearly value of 36 l. 13 s. 4 d. He dyed in 1540. Two Siſters were his heirs; Conſtance, wife of William Ferne, Margery Butler, and Richard Kigbley, ſon of a third ſiſter (n). [Concerning the Bataile Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 187. 620.]

Humfrey Shelton, Eſq; who dyed 1 May 1605, held this maner of Ongar, formerly Battells maner, containing 1 meſſuage with appertenances, 280 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 400 of paſture, 220 of wood, and 20 d. rent, in this pariſh, Stanford-Rivers, and Stapleford-Taney.——William Shelton Eſq; his ſon and heir, was then 30 years old (o).

Some years after, this maner was purchaſed of William Minſhull Eſq; by Sir Thomas Webſter, of Copped-hall; who ſold it again to

Aaron Frank Eſq;

The Maner of PASSELOW, otherwiſe called Paſſefeld, was one of the ſeventeen Lordſhips given by Earl Harold to his Abbey of Waltham [A]. They remained poſſeſſed of it till the Diſſolution, when it came to the Crown. In 1541 K. VIII. granted this maner of Paſsfeld, alias Paſslow-hall, then valued at 210l. per ann. to

George Harper: who, the ſame year, alienated it to Sir Richard Riche (p). He had it at the time of his deceaſe; and it deſcended to his poſterity, Earls of Warwick (q). Upon the partition of that noble Family's eſtates, as mentioned in the other Volume, p. 102, this came to the Earl of Mancheſter.

Sir Joſiah Child purchaſed it; from whom it hath deſcended to the Rt. Hon. John Earl Tylney, the preſent poſſeſſor.

Mr. John Witham; William Robjent; John Williamſon; William King; Francis Yates &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

In Marden-Aſh, a ſeat here, reſided Nicolas Alexander Eſq; He dyed 29 July 1714, aged 83, leaving 7 children, William; Edward of Chipping-Ongar; Thomas; Henry: Anne; Margaret; and Joanna, which laſt was married to John Gibſon D. D. Provoſt of Queen's-College in Oxford.—It was anciently called Mardens and Brekeles, and conſiſted in 1524, of one meſſuage, 16 crofts, 2 cloſes, a marſh, Long croft, and a parcel of meadow called Betts (r).

Henry Parker, who dyed 15 January 1541, held the maner of Fritball, and 180 acres of land thereto belonging, in High-Onger and Norton Mandevile, of the Biſhop of London, William Pawne, and . . . Chedley, Gent. in ſocage, by the rent of 17 s. 8 d. (s). Concerning this H. Parker, ſee the other Volume p. 380.

Mr. John Wyberd, citizen and haberdaſher of London, gave 50 s. a year for ever, to buy bread for the Poor of this pariſh, payable out of the King's head-inn at Kirton in Lincolnſhire.

Eight poor widows of this pariſh partake of Mrs. Alice Thomlinſon's benefaction, viz. 5 s. each yearly, to buy them waſtcoats. See a more particular account of it in the other Volume, p. 509.

Mr. Waller, gave 10 s. yearly to the Poor here, out of a farm called Farrows.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. The roof is lofty, arched, and painted with clouds, and a ſun riſing in a glorious manner. The ſpire is ſhingled, and contains 5 Bells.

This valuable Rectory is a Maner, conſiſting of demeſnes, and ſeveral copyholds (t).

It was all along in the gift of the Crown, till K. Henry VIII. gave it to Sir Richard Riche, in whoſe heirs it continued till lately. The laſt that preſented was John Turvin Eſq; had the name of Norton moſt probably from its northern ſituation with reſpect to Ongar. The addition of Mandeville it took from Ralph Mandeville, whom we ſhall mention preſently, to diſtinguiſh it from Cold-Norton in Dengey-Hundred.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1214l. 0 s. 10 d.

3. NORTON MANDEVILLE

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, this pariſh was divided into two parts; one belonged to Godid, a woman, who gave it to the Church of St. Paul in London. The other part belonged to Gotil; and, at the time of the Survey was held by Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Wimund [B].

Hence aroſe the two Maners in this pariſh. 1. . . . that of Norton Mandeville. 2. . . . that of Newarks Norton.

The maner of NORTON MANDEVILLE.

By the account given of it in 1181, it contained 100 acres of arable, 5 acr. of meadow, 12 of wood, paſture for 40 ſheep, 3 cows in demeſne, one plough; and paid to the Canons of St. Paul 40 s. at Eaſter, and 3 l. on the 14th of September.

Dammartin, at the yearly rent of 100 s. about the year 1190 (u). But how they came to be deprived of the Lordſhip of this place, we do not find. Galiena Dammartin had for her ſecond huſband Ralph Mandeville, and gave ſome lands here to her ſon Robert Mandeville (w). [Concerning the Dammartin family ſee in the other Volume, p. 331. 338.]

In 1480, this maner of Norton, and that of Cannes in North-Weald, belonged to Thomas Danvers Eſq; and were both purchaſed that year by Merton-College in Oxford, with the ſum of 400 l. given them by Thomas Kempe, biſhop of London, once Fellow of that College; with the addition of 93 l. 6 s. 8 d. of the College's money. The Biſhop's gift, was for finding the Fellows with liveries, as the revenues of the College could allow. All which appears from the old Regiſter of that Houſe, fol. 40. a. & fol. 47. b.

The Maner of NEWARKS NORTON, was probably named from ſome new building or other work. The houſe is about a mile eaſt from the Church. This eſtate lies partly in Norton, partly in High-Ongar. Some of the poſſeſſions of Hamo came by marriage to the Family de Clare, Earls of Glouceſter, and ſo to the Honor of Clare. [See in the other Volume, p. 115. 423.] I find nothing how this eſtate paſſed, 'till K. Henry VIII. granted it in 1542, to

John Williams and Antony Stringer, who had licence, the ſame year, 25 Febru. to alienate it to Sir Richard Riche (x). I have ſeen a memorandum that this eſtate was once in the Church of Weſtminſter, but find no authority for that. King Henry's poſſeſſing it, makes it not unlikely.

John Waylett, at the time of his deceaſe, 5 Septemb. 1566, held this maner, of the Queen in capite, by knight's ſervice.——John his ſon, who dyed 30 October 1612, held this ſame maner, with 60 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 28 of paſture, and 10 of wood, thereto belonging; and left——John his ſon and heir (y). [Se in the other Volume, p. 481.]

It is now in William Stane of High-Ongar, Eſq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. A little ſpire, ſhingled, contains 1 Bell.

Here is neither Rectory nor Vicarage; a Curate is appointed by the Impropriator, and licenced by the Ordinary. This Curacy was augmented in 1743.

The Rectory and great Tithes were given by Galiena de Dammartin to the Nunnery of St. Leonards at Bromley in Middleſex, and confirmed by her ſon, and her ſecond huſband Ralph Mandeville. Robert de Burgate and Galiena his wife gave to the ſame all the tythes out of his wood called Alewode, &c. (z). After the Suppreſſion K. Henry VIII. granted this Rectory, in 1540, to Sir Ralph Sadlier: who conveyed it to——William Pawne Eſq (a) [C]. He dyed poſſeſſed of it 22 May 1570, as did his ſon——William, 2 April 1578. From whom it deſcended, as Chevers, to Bridget Chatterton (b).

Edward Ellyot held it at the time of his deceaſe, 26 Decemb. 1595; and left it to his ſon——Thomas Ellyott (c). [See in the other Volume more concerning this Eliyott family, p. 33. 74. 182.]

It belonged ſome time ago to one Mr. Nicolas, but hath ſince been ſold.

Thomas Mead, and Thomas Mullucks have alſo lands here.

John Bott, B. A. was licenſed to the Perpetual Curacy 1 Febru. 1738 9.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax, at 326 l. 2 s. 2 d.

4. FIFIELD is north of the two Ongars, and of Norton. 'Tis otherwiſe written in records, Fifhide, Fyfhide, Fiſhide, Fyſhide, which name is plainly derived from Fiꝼ, five, and hyꝺe, a quantity of land in the Saxons way of reckoning [D].

The lands in this pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Brictmar, Aluuin, Leuric, and Aleſtan; and, at the time of the Survey, to Euſtace Earl of Bologne, and John ſon of Waleram [E].

[C] Mr. Newcourt believes Norton to have been a Chapel of eaſe to High-Ongar, from the account of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, lands, and the ſtate of them, taken in 1181, wherein it is ſaid, That the parochial duty of the mother Church of Great Angre extended to the neighbouring one of Norton, for which the Rector of Angre received all Tithes both great and ſmall out of the whole Maner, [that is, we ſuppoſe, out of that part of Newarks which lay in H. Ongar.] But yet, on account of the conveniency of attending Chriſtian duties, it payed to the neighbouring Church of Fyfhide one ſack of wheat, and one ſack of oats. They were divided afterwards into 1. The Maner of Fifeild. 2. . . . that of Herons. 3. . . . that of Lampetts; which laſt is partly in Moreton pariſh.

Who were the immediate and diſtinct Owners of theſe ſeveral Maners, after Euſtace, and John ſon of Waleram, doth not plainly appear from records. The Earl of Bologne's was paramount, but Waleram's had the largeſt demeſnes.

Fifield-hall, the maner houſe, ſtands on the north ſide of the Church.

In K. Henry the IId's reign Pharin de Bologne, and afterwards William de Feſſues, or Feſnes, held of the Honor of Bologne ſix knights fees, and among the reſt Fiſhid. At the ſame time, Fifid is mentioned among the fees of Oger de Curcun (d).

Very ſoon after, it was in the Family ſurnamed de Tani, lords of Stapleford, and ſeveral other eſtates in this County: namely, in Haſculf de Tani, and his wife——Maud (e). Then in——Rainald: and in his brother——Grailand, or Gruel de Tani. This laſt dying in 1179, was ſucceeded by——Haſculf; and he by——Gilbert de Tani who, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1220, left William de Fauburg, Maud, wife of Adam de Legh, and Nicolas de Beauchamp his next heirs (f).

Nicolas de Beauchamp had this whole eſtate, and preſented to the Living, in 1331 (g).——Roger de Beauchamp held in 1280, 1 meſſuage, 2 carucates of land, 20 acres of meadow, 10 of paſture, 10 marks rent, 80 acr. of wood, a wind-mill, in Fiſhide, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the King in capite by the ſervice of one knight's fee (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 329, by miſtake printed 229.]——John de Beauchamp, his ſon, who dyed in 1305, held alſo this maner of Fyfhid (i).

John de Brianzon was poſſeſſed of the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1315, and ſucceeded by his ſon——John (k). See under Alveley.

The next poſſeſſor was John, ſon of John Hotham, of Bondeby [F], who held it jointly with his wife, and dying in 1351, was ſucceeded by his two ſiſters and coheirs——Catharine, and Alice (l).

Whether one of theſe two was married to Henry Lord Scrope, of Maſham, doth not appear. But, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1392, he held this Maner, with Brettes tenements being 200 acres of arable, and 20 of meadow, purchaſed of old from it; with the Advowſon of the Church; of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne. Three acres, part of Bretts, were holden of the Prior of Leghes: 16 acres of Robert Tomkyn, and 18 of Sir William de Wanton.——Sir Stephen Scrope was his ſon and heir. He dyed 25 Janu. 1405 (m). Margery, his widow, had this eſtate in jointure till her death in 1422 (n). Their eldeſt ſon Henry being executed in 1415, for his treachery to K. Henry V. his next brother——Sir John Scrope Treaſurer of the Exchequer, ſucceeded to this and other eſtates. He dyed 15 Novemb. 1455; as did Elizabeth his wife, who had this eſtate, in 1466 (o).——Thomas, their ſon, Lord Scrope, departed this life in 1475 (p); leaving——Thomas Lord Scrope, his eldeſt ſon and heir, and alſo three other ſons, Henry, Ralph, and Geffrey: and three daughters Alice, Mary, and Elizabeth. This laſt Thomas Lord Scrope married Elizabeth, daughter of John Nevill, Marquis Montacute, but dyed 23 April 1493, leaving an only daughter, Alice, then 12 years old (q): married afterwards to Henry Lord Scrope of Bolton. His widow was remarried to Sir Henry Wentworth; and held this maner of Fivefeild, and advowſon till her deceaſe Septemb. 30. 1515 (r). [Concerning this Family of Scrope, and their other eſtates in this County, ſee in the other Volume, p. 237. 240.]

Thomas, the laſt Lord Scrope, leaving only a Daughter, and his three Brothers dying without iſſue, his Three Siſters became his coheirs: namely, Alice, married to Thomas Strangways Eſq; Mary, to Sir Chriſtopher Danby, and Elizabeth, to Sir Ralph Fitz-Randolph.

In 1531, Sir James Strangways held in capite, of the Honor of Bologne, this maner of Fiſhed (s).

Marmaduke Wyvill Eſq; by the marriage of Agnes, ſiſter and coheir of John, ſon and heir of Sir Ralph Fitz-Randolph, had another ſhare.——Chriſtopher Wyvill was their ſon and heir. The 13th. of July 1536, Marmaduke Wyvill Eſq; and Agnes his wife, and Chriſtopher their ſon, ſold their purparty of this maner, and Advowſon to [F] There is an unknown name, Bondelay, uſed by Froiſſart, l. iv. c. 33. 36. when he is giving an account, how K. Richard II. decoyed his uncle the Duke of Glouceſter, and brought him through the Foreſt towards London. I am inclined to believe that the right name was this Bondeby, a ſeat or place hereabouts. See in the other Volume, p. 452.

The Maner of HERONS.

The manſion houſe ſtands near a mile ſouth from the Church.

This Maner, which was taken from the capital one of Fifield-hall, was given to Lees Priory in this County; but when, and by whom, we do not find. Part of Bretts-tenements, as above-mentioned, were holden of the Prior of Lees, as of this maner.

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. in 1536, granted this maner, with the Priory's other poſſeſſions, to Sir Richard Riche (u). He was poſſeſſed of it, at the time of his deceaſe in 1566: And alſo of 40 acres of land in this pariſh, that had belonged to the Monaſtery of Waltham (w). It continued, as the laſt, many years in his noble deſcendents.

Thomas Brand Eſq; of Pickerells in this pariſh, was lately poſſeſſed of it: and it now belongs to his ſon——Thomas Brand, of the Hoo, Eſq; of which the manſion-houſe ſtands about three quarters of a mile weſt northweſt from this Church; either took its name from, or gave name to, Thomas Lampett, an ancient owner about the reign of K. Henry IV. (x). See under Lambourn.

He hath alſo John-Aſh, a large Farm in this pariſh.

The Maner of LAMPETS,

It belonged to the Writell family, of the neighbouring pariſh of Bobbingworth. Walter Writell Eſq; who dyed in 1473, held the maner of Lampettys, in Fiſhide and Moreton, of Thomas Scroope of Maſham (y). This Walter ordered, in his will dated 6 Octob. 1473, this maner to be ſettled for the maintenance of an Obit in Bobbingworth-Church. But this deviſe doth not ſeem to have taken place [G]. For his ſon and heir——John Wretyll, Eſq: held alſo this maner of the Lord Scroope; He dyed 28 July 1507, and by reaſon of his minority the premiſſes came into the King's hands (z).

This eſtate belonged lately to John Collins Eſq; a Juſtice of Peace, who reſided in it: He dyed 18 Septemb. 1750, leaving, by Mary his wife ſiſter of Mr. Thomas Binckes of Ongar, an only daughter named——Mary.

Mr. John Collins; Robert Goodwin; Edward Barwick; William White; George Wolfe; William Glaſcock; Simeon Havers; Samuel Kent; Joſeph Lindſey, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Richard Fiſhide, who dyed in 1374, held one meſſuage, and 160 acres of arable in Fiſhide, of Sir Henry Le Scrope, by the ſervice of 21 s. per ann. Humfrey was his ſon. He had alſo eſtates in Shelley, and Lamborne (a).

Whitney Green is about half a mile eaſtward from this Church. Upon it ſtands a fair manſion houſe, ſome time the ſeat of George Pochin Eſq; Sheriff of this County in 1700. His ſon John had it afterwards, and dyed in 1723 [H]. It afterwards came to . . . Major, who left two ſons, William, and Joſeph.

Charities.

Six pounds a year towards the reparation of the Church; The Donor's name unknown.

Dr. Walker, Rector of this Church, gave 10 l. a year for teaching poor Children to read and write.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is large, conſiſting of a body, and two aiſles ſupported by pillars arched over: But the Chancel is of one pace; the whole tyled. In the middle ſtood the Tower, cathedral-wiſe, with 5 Bells. It fell down ſome years ago. In the ſouth wall of the Chancel are three arches, one above another, ſupported by two columns of gray marble, of the Tuſcan order: And the windows are curiouſly wrought in ſtone-work.

The Tithes of this Pariſh [I] were given, in the year 1094, to the Monaſtery of Bermondſey, by Roger, I ſuppoſe de Tany, one of the Knights of John Fitz-Waleran, with his Lord's conſent (b).

In 1107, theſe Tithes were confirmed to that Monaſtery, by Maud wife of Aſculph, and her ſon Graald de Tany; who, at the ſame time, gave them this Church of Fiſhide: which grant was confirmed by K. Henry I. and II. (c). Notwithſtanding, before the year 1331, this Church was taken again from them, by whom doth not appear: and, luckily, before they had got the Tithes appropriated to themſelves.

This Rectory hath been ever ſince appendent to the Maner of Fifield-hall; and is now in Earl Tylney.

The pariſh of Fifield is rated to the land-tax at 1372 l. 2 s. 4 d.

5. RODING BEAUCHAMP.

There are eight Pariſhes in this County named Roding. Six of them are in the Hundred of Dunmow, under which we have deſcribed them, in the other Volume, p. 465. &c. We proceed to deſcribe the other two, which are within this Hundred of Ongar.

Roding Beauchamp was undoubtedly ſo named from William Beauchamp of Bedford, who held it in 1262 (d).

Leuuin and Eccius enjoyed this pariſh in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey, Alan Earl of Bretagne was poſſeſſed of it, and under him Alberic de Vere [K].

LONG BARNES,

the Maner houſe here, ſtands in a bottom, about a mile north of the Church.

Henry Biddock or de Byddik, held this eſtate about the year 1328; undoubtedly under the Vere Family.

Robert de Vere Duke of Ireland, loſt it upon his attainder in 1387, and it was forfeited to the King.

Richard Weald, who dyed in 1391, held this maner of Longebernes, with the Advowſon of the Church, of K. Richard II. by reaſon of the ſaid forfeiture. His next heir was his daughter——Elizabeth, married to Lewes Mewes Eſq; (e) who preſented to this Church in 1430. and 1447. as did his ſon——Thomas Mews Eſq; in 1463 (f).

It was next in the Gate Family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 146. 457. 450. &c. Sir Geffrey Gate, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Rothing-Beauchamp, alias Longbarnes; with lands and tenements in this pariſh called Frayes, of Richard Duke of Glouceſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's-fee.——William, his ſon and heir, was then aged 14 years. But his widow Agnes, remarried to William Bramlac, enjoyed theſe eſtates till her deceaſe in 1481 (g) [L]. Richard Gate, who dyed 28 September 1485, held the premiſſes of John Earl of Oxford; and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Geffrey, then but one year old (h). He was afterwards knighted; and, at the time of his deceaſe 7 May 1526, held this maner of Bechampe Rodinge, alias Long Rodinge, with appertenances; and the Advowſon of the Church: And the Maner of Frayes; all of the Earl of Oxford. His ſon ——John Gates Eſq; (i) afterwards knighted, had the misfortune of loſing his life and eſtates, for his adherence to the Lady Jane Gray.

K. Philip and Qu. Mary, 21 July 1558, granted all Sir John Gate's eſtates, and the Maners of Long Barnes and Fraies among the reſt, to Richard Weſton, and Margaret his wife: To hold, the firſt of the King in ca. by the ſervice of the 40th. part of a knight's fee; and the latter of the King as of the maner of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty in free ſocage (k). He was ſoon after conſtituted one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas [See in the the other Volume, p. 71. 171.] Dying 16 July 1572, he was ſucceeded in this eſtate by his ſon——Jerom (l): afterwards knighted; who departed this life 31 Decemb. 1603.——Sir Richard Weſton Kt. his ſon and heir, was then aged 26 years (m).

In 1605 Richard Courtman, and others, recovered this eſtate againſt the ſaid Sir Richard Weſton, by writ of Entry (n).

It belonged in 1635 to Edward Stokes.

Next to the Lord North.

And afterwards to . . . Heneage Eſq; of Hatton Garden: and then to——Mrs. Elizabeth Heneage.

The Maner of FRAYES, of which the Houſe is the chiefeſt in this pariſh, lyes not far from Long-Barnes.

The Families of Gate, and Weſton, were poſſeſſed of it a conſiderable time, as well as of the other.

Mr. John Miller ſold it to

Mr. John Pochin of London, brother to George, of Fifield. From him it hath paſſed to his ſon——George, and to his——grandſon of the ſame name.

Mr. Thomas Davis, and John Brecknock, have alſo ſome Lands here.

There is no Court kept in this pariſh.

Birds-Green is a Hamlet partly in this pariſh and partly in that of Willinge-hall Dou. It is rated to the Land tax at 401 l.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Botolph, is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the maner of Long-Barnes, but hath paſſed, through ſeveral mean conveyances, into divers hands.

John Harrington, and George Durden had it in 1559 (o).

Sir Gamaliel Capell, not taken notice of by Mr. Newcourt, was poſſeſſed of the Advowſon of this Church at the time of his deceaſe 13 Novemb. 1613 (p).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 511 l.

6. RODING-ABBESS, was ſo named, becauſe a Maner in it, and the Advowſon of the Church, belonged to the Abbeſs of Berking.

Leuild had another Maner in this pariſh, before the Conqueſt, which, at the time of the Survey, was held by Geffrey de Mandeville, and his under-tenant Geffrey Martell [M].

In this pariſh are now three Maners. 1. Abbeſs-Hall. 2. Rookwood-hall. 3. The maner of Berwick Bernes, or Berners.

1. ABBESS-HALL

ſtands behind the Church.

This maner continued in Berking-Abbey, till the ſuppreſſion.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. ſold the maners of Abbes-hall, and Caldecotes, with appertenances, and Tanfeild grove, in this pariſh, to Robert Chartſey, and others; to hold by the 40th part of a knight's-fee (q). The next year, by licenſe dated 10 January, Robert Chertſey alienated the premiſſes, and a wood called Abbots wood, to

Robert Meredith (r): who, the day following, ſold them again to

Robert Long (s). The latter, in 1549, conveyed the maners called Abbes-hall and Cladecotts, in Abbes, and Leden, Roting, formerly belonging to the Monaſtery of Barking, with a wood of 17 acres, called Abbes-wood; Abbes grove, containing 2 acres; and Tanfeild grove, 2 acres; to William Glaſcock, Gent. (t). He dyed 3 Decemb. 1579, poſſeſſed of this, and other eſtates in this County, [See in the other Volume, p. 424. 508. 580.] leaving——Richard, his ſon and heir, 32 years old (u).

Tipper, and Dawe, the two greedy hunters after concealed lands, got a grant of theſe among many others, in 1592 (w). But, whether they could not keep poſſeſſion or otherwiſe, Qu. Elizabeth, 31 Aug. 1599, granted this maner again to

Richard Glaſcock (x). He ſold it, a few days after, to Gamaliel Capel, Eſq; owner of Rookwood-hall adjoining, under which we ſhall give an account of him and his family. He was knighted 7 May 1603, and dyed 13 Novemb. 1613, poſſeſſed of this eſtate: wherein he was ſucceded by his ſon—Sir Gamaliel Capel, Kt. (y). He dyed in June 1652, and had for ſucceſſors his ſon and his grandſon, both named—Gamaliel. The latter dyed in 1720. He mortgaged, or ſold, this eſtate to

John Howland, of Stretham Eſq; from whom it came to his daughter——Elizabeth; and then to her ſon——John, Duke of Bedford. His Grace, in 1739, ſold it to Stephen Skinner, of Waltham-Stow Eſq; Emma, his eldeſt daughter, was married to the late William Harvey, of Chigwell Eſq; his ſecond daughter, to the late Sir James Colebrook, and the third to   Groſvenor Eſq; brother to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Groſvenor.

ROOKWOOD-HALL

is about half a mile weſt from this Church: and took that name from ſome ancient owners [N].

This was the part which, at the Survey, belonged to Geffrey de Mandeville; who, it ſeems by the account given there, had taken it from the Abbey of Berking. But he that held it was only a tenant of Geffrey's anceſtor; and they could not diſpoſe of this land any where but to the Abbey.

We have no account of the ſubſequent owners of it till 1250, when John Fitz-Richard held it; next——Richard Fitz-William; and——Richard, ſon of William de Roynges, in 1268.

The lords paramount were the Earls of Oxford. For, under John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, the heirs of William Fitz-Richard held half a fee; and William Weld one fee in Rothyng Abbeſſe (z). The latter held the whole fee and a half, under Thomas de Vere Earl of Oxford who dyed in 1370 (a). ——William Weld held it in the reign of K. Henry V.

We find it next in a branch of the Browne Family; for a particular account of which ſee under South-Weald. Anne Browne was poſſeſſed of it in 1427, and Thomas Browne in 1466. ——John Browne, who dyed in 1468, held this maner of Rothing Abbeſſe of the Earl of Oxford. He had alſo thoſe of White-Roding, and [See above, p. 118.] Robert, dyed 20 April 1488, holding this maner of Rookewode hall [the firſt time we find it ſo called] alias Brounes maner, and 300 acres of arable, 200 of paſture, 26 of meadow, and 10 of wood, of John Vere Earl of Oxford, as of his caſtle of Heningham, by knight's ſervice. [See in the other Volume, p. 498.] This William we ſuppoſe dyed without iſſue. For the next poſſeſſor was——John Browne Eſq; ſecond ſon of Sir Wiſtan Browne, and grandſon of Robert. [See under South-Weald.] At the time of his deceaſe 27 Octob. 1550, he held this eſtate, and the maners of Lagenhoo, and White Roding, and the third part of Marks (d). By Etheldred, daughter and coheir of Henry Vere of Addington, he had George, and Henry.——George Browne Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, born in 1510, dyed 26 Febru. 1558 (e), having had two wives. The 1ſt was Elizabeth, daughter of John Leventhorp, by whom he had Wiſtan, and John; and two daughters. By . . . . . Wilford, his 2d wife, he had no iſſue. —— Wiſtan, the eldeſt ſon, dyed 1 Auguſt 1580; poſſeſſed not only of this eſtate; but alſo of thoſe in South-Weald, which he inherited from his kinſman Sir Antony Browne (f). [See above p. 118.] By Mary, his firſt wife, daughter of Edward Capel, of Rayne-hall, Eſq; he left Antony, who dyed 14 April 1589, without iſſue; and two daughters, Catharine, married to Sir Nicolas Waldegrave; and Jane, married, firſt, to Edward Wyatt of Ilkham, and afterwards to Gamaliel Capel Eſq; (g) [O].

Between theſe two coheireſſes and their huſbands was this eſtate divided.

We cannot find when Sir Nicolas Waldegrave dyed. But Sir Gamaliel Capel, at the time of his deceaſe 13 Novemb. 1613, held a moiety of this maner of Rookwood-hall with appertenances, and a moiety of Rookwood PARK, in this pariſh, and in Margaret, and Beauchamp, Roding, High, and Little Laver; of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Caſtle of Heningham, by fealty: alſo the maner of Bydfeild farm, with the lands thereto belonging; Abbeſs-hall; Halgreen, and 80 acres of land thereto appertaining; Nethercroft: theſe two laſt in Little Laver, &c. (b).

As this Sir Gamaliel Capel, and his poſterity reſided here, it will be proper to give a particular account of him. He was the fifth ſon of Henry Capel Eſq; of Rayne hall in this County, by Catharine, his ſecond wife, daughter of Thomas Maners Earl of Rutland. [See in the other Volume, p. 402.] On the 6th of September 1584 he married Jane, one of the daughters and coheirs of Wiſtan Browne Eſq; as above-mentioned, by whom he had ſix ſons, Gamaliel, born in 1589; Thomas, Antony, Henry, Theodoſius, and Francis: and three daughters, Mary, wife of . . . . Arundell; Anne, married 29 Septemb. 1619, to Robert Wiſeman of Canfield Eſq; and Mildred, to Sir William Luckyn of Little Waltham Bart. She dyed 23 Auguſt 1633 aged 31, and is buried in the Chancel of this Church, with a noble monument. Their father, Sir Gamaliel was knighted 7 May 1603, and, at the age of 50, departed this life 10 Novemb. 1613; His Lady departed alſo this life 22 Auguſt 1618. They are both interred in the Chancel of this Church, with a fair monument.——Sir Gamaliel Capel Kt. the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Dorothy Bennet. They had five ſons, Gamaliel, Francis, Arthur, Thomas, Robert; and five daughters, Dorothy, Mildred, Anne, Elizabeth, and Lucy. He was buried in this Church 27 June 1652, and his Lady 22 March 1648.——Gamaliel, their eldeſt ſon, married Sarah Marſhall, of Surrey, and had by her two ſons, Gamaliel, baptized 8 March 1659; and Charles: and three daughters, Sarah; Dorothy; and Mildred, married, 10 Septemb. 1685, to John Wale of Little Bardfield Eſq; Their father was buried here 24 Decemb. 1683; and his widow 18 April 1698.——Gamaliel Capel Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was married, firſt, to Anne, daughter of Sir James Bunche, Alderman of London, by whom he had Anne, wife of William Maſon of London, brewer. His ſecond wife was Elizabeth daughter of John Booth of London, cloth-worker, and by her he had Gamaliel, and John, who both dyed young; Mildmay: and Elizabeth, wife of . . . King, bookſeller. He ſometimes lived at Springfeild, and was buried here 12 June 1720.

He mortgaged, or ſold, this eſtate, as well as the former, to

John Howland of Stretham Eſq; From him it deſcended to his only daughter——Elizabeth, Ducheſs of Bedford, who dyed 29 June 1724, and then to her ſon——John, Duke of Bedford. His Grace, in 1739, ſold it, as well as Abbeſs-Hall, to mow, which cauſes it to be reputed within that Hundred. The Houſe is above a mile north-eaſt from this Church.

But the Maner, and ſome of the Demeſnes, had been ſold before to Mr. Hazard, of Harlow. He mortgaged them to Mr. Jackſon, whoſe widow ſold them again to Mrs. Clark.

It belonged anciently to the noble Family of Berners, from whence it took its additional name.

Ralph Berners, who dyed in 1297, held this maner of Rothinges and Berwyk of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex. [See in the other Volume, p. 449. 474.] ——Edmund was his ſon and heir (i).——Sir James de Berners held it in the reign of K. Richard II. and after his attainder for being one of that King's evil counſellors, it was reſtored by the ſame King to his widow——Anne Berners, in 1389 (k).——Sir John Bourchier, Lord Berners, was alſo poſſeſſed of it at the time of his deceaſe in 1475 (l). He is ſaid to have ſold it to

Sir William Capel; who held it of the King as of his Caſtle of Plecye, parcel of the Honor of Mandeville: He dyed 6 Septemb. 1515 (m). And his heirs that enjoyed it after him, were, his ſon——Sir Giles, who dyed 29 May 1556. He held this maner of Barwick Barnes, with appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, 10 tofts, 450 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 120 of paſture, 70 of wood, and 6l. rent in Barwick Barnes, Rothing Abbeſſe, and High-Eſter.——Sir Henry was his ſon and ſucceſſor (n). Next——Sir Edward Capel, who dyed 19 March 1576, and his ſon——Henry Capel Eſq; who departed this life 22 June 1588 (o). Then——Arthur——Sir Henry &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 401, &c.] [P]. It was afterwards in Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. who ſold it to

Thomas Brand of Fifield Eſq;

Samuel Pratt Eſq; and Mr. Thomas Nicholls, have alſo ſome lands here.

Nicolas Burton, Rector of this pariſh, gave out of a tenement near Rookwood-hall, 40 s. a year to the Church-Clerk, who lives in one end of the Houſe.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Edmund, is of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tyled. In a little wooden Turret, with a Spire, there are 3 Bells.

This Rectory ſeems to have been appendent to the Maner of Abbeſs-Hall, and as ſuch was in the gift of Berking-Abbey till its diſſolution.

After that it was held by Sir Ralph Fane in 1550: and by John Gate Eſq; in 1552 (p). William Glaſcock was poſſeſſed of it in 1579, from whom it came to his ſon Richard (q). And then to the Capel family (r): From whom it hath paſſed through ſeveral hands.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 438 l. 1 s. 0d. and Berwick-Bernes Hamlet at 276 l.

is a general name for three contiguous Pariſhes here, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the appellations of High, Magdalen, and Little.

They are otherwiſe called in records Lagafare, Laghefare, Lanfare, Lauver: which name might be derived from Laᵹa, and ꝼaꞃe, or læꝼeꞃ; but the reaſon of it we cannot aſſign.

7. HIGH LAVER, is otherwiſe ſtyled, in records Great Laver, and King's Laver (s).

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to Luuin; Aluuin; a Freeman; and Brictmar. At the time of the Survey, it was held by Euſtace Earl of Bologne [R].

There are two Maners in this Pariſh. 1. The Maner of High Laver. 2. The Maner of Otes.

The Maner of HIGH LAVER.

The manſion houſe ſtands behind the Church.

This Maner having deſcended to Earl Euſtace's grandaughter Maud, Queen of K. Stephen, remained in the Crown till K. Henry II. gave it to William Fitz-Aucher; whoſe ſon,——Richard Fitz-Aucher, held, in that reign, eight pounds in land, in Lagefare: and his ſucceſſor——Richard four fees in 1210, and 1211 (t).

The Abbeſs of St. Sulpicius in Berry claimed the ſervices and homage of the tenants of this maner, as aſſigned to her Abbey, by Richard ſon of Henry Fitz-Aucher, who held in this pariſh two carucates of land, with appertenances. She founded her claim upon a grant of William Earl of Bologne, ſon of K. Stephen, who ſhe pretended had given it to her Church. At laſt, in 1237, it was agreed between Amicia, the then Abbeſs, and Richard ſon of Henry Fitz-Aucher, that He ſhould hold and enjoy this Maner with appertenances, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and pay the Abbeſs and her ſucceſſors ten pounds per ann. This was ſettled by fine (u). Afterwards Joane, another Abbeſs, granted this 10 l. rent to Waltham Abbey, which Stephen ſon of Richard, ſon of Henry, was to pay; and thenceforth the Auchers held of the Abbot of Waltham (w) [S]. There muſt have been ſome exchange or equivalent from the Abbot to the ſaid Joane.

Sir Henry Fitz-Aucher, who dyed in 1304, held of the Abbey of Waltham this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church.——Sir Aucher Fitz-Aucher was his ſon and heir (x). He preſented to this Church in 1331, and 1334 (y). Concerning this Family, ſee above, p. 48.

If we can judge by the Preſentations, it was for ſome years in the noble Family of Ferrers of Groby. And in Richard Priour Eſq; in 1438, and 1452 (z).

Walter Writell Eſq; of the neighbouring pariſh of Bobbingworth, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1475, held this maner of High Laver, with the Advowſon; and other lands, tenements, &c. in theſe three Lavers, and in Moreton, Harlow, and Matching:——William, or John, was his ſon and heir (a). The latter dyed 13 October 1485, and was ſucceeded by——John, his ſon; who departed this life 28 July 1507, under age (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 156.] They held this maner of High Lanfere, alias Laver, of the Family of Stafford, Dukes of Buckingham.

Alienor, daughter and heir of Walter Writell aboveſaid, and wife of James Walſingham Eſq; ſeems to have inherited this eſtate. For they two jointly preſented to the Living, in 1533 (c). Their ſon——Sir Thomas Walſingham, who dyed 15 Janu. 1583, held this Maner of the Lord Riche, as of his Hundred of Ongar;——Edmund was his ſon and heir, who departing this life 16 Novemb. 1589, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Walſingham (d).

Arthur Stanlake Eſq; had it next.

In the laſt century it came to two co-heireſſes: Mary, daughter of Richard Matthews citizen of London, brought one moiety in marriage to her huſband Samuel Beachcroft Eſq; and they left it to their ſon Matthews Beachcroft Eſq; The other moiety was enjoyed between Lewis Scawen Eſq; and Mr. Richard Merry of London, merchant, that married the daughters of Abraham Forſter of Eltham in Kent Eſq; who had the other coheireſs to wife.—Lewis Scawen Eſq; was ſecond ſon of Sir Thomas Scawen, Kt. Alderman of London. He married his wife . . . . Forſter 13 September 1728 [T].

The Maner of OTES,

According to tradition, took its name from John Otes, who, with others, held the maner of Little-Laver of the Lord Scales; in the time of K. Edward II. (e).

The Maner houſe ſtands about a mile and a half north from the Church.

This eſtate ſeems to have been divided, about the year 1486, or before, between Sir John Suliard, and John Pikenham Eſq; Sir John Suliard, one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, who dyed 18 March 1487, held a moiety of the maner of Otes in High-Laver of Edward Duke of Buckingham, as of his maner of Cheping-Ongre.——Edward was his eldeſt ſon and heir (f), whoſe ſiſter Elizabeth was married to . . . Garneys, or Garniſh, Eſq; The time of Edward Sulyard's death doth not appear, but his ſon—Sir William Sulyard dyed 25 March 1539. He held the half of this maner of Otes, and 2 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, 70 acr. of meadow, 200 of paſture, 200 of wood, and 11 l. rent, in the three Lavers, and Maching, of the King, as of the maner of Cheping Ongar, by fealty, and rent of 3 s. per ann. Alſo 20 acres, parcel of the moiety of this maner, of the King, as of the maner of Beaulieu: and other eſtates in Lambourn, Runwell, Downham, &c. Leaving no iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his couſin

Robert Garneys Eſq; ſon of his aunt Elizabeth above-mentioned (g). He was then aged 50 years. [See in the other Volume, p. 42.] But it came again into the Sulyard Family, for Euſtace Sulyard Eſq; who dyed 26 February 1546, held a moiety of this maner in High-Laver, alias Laver Muchgroſe, of the maner of Onger ad Caſtrum, by fealty, and 18 d. rent, and ſervice at the Ward-Staff, and fine of 3 s. per ann. to the Bailiff of Onger-Hundred for ſuit at the Court of that Hundred.——Edward, his ſon, ſucceeded him (h): He was afterwards knighted, and dyed 5 June 1610. But this eſtate is not mentioned in the Inquiſition taken after his deceaſe, ſo that it had undoubtedly before that been purchaſed by Sir William Maſham.

As to the other Moiety of this Maner, George Pikenham Eſq; who dyed in 1499, held a moiety of the maner of Otes in High Laver, of John Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Boreham-hall, worth 20 marks a year——Margaret and Elizabeth, daughters of Thomas his brother, were his heirs (i).

The eſtate has been farther ſubdivided; for John Limſey, who dyed 4 May 1546, held a moiety of a moiety of the maner of Otes, and a moiety of a moiety of 10 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 1 dovehouſe, 10 gardens, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 40 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, and 100 s. rent, in the three Lavers, Matching, and Harlow, of the maner of Chipping-Onger ——Edward was his ſon and heir (k).

In the reign of K. James I. it was purchaſed by Sir William Maſham.

The family of Maſham, or Maſſam, was antiently ſeated in the north parts of England; and undoubtedly took their ſurname from Maſham, a village near Richmond in Yorkſhire (l). About the reign of K. Henry VI. Sir John Maſham fixed himſelf in Suffolk, and was buried at Thornham in 1450. From his heir, John Maſham Eſq; deſcended Thomas Maſham Eſq; ſeated at Badwell-Aſh in the ſaid County, anceſtor of the Maſhams of Suffolk. His ſon John had two ſons, John; and William, who was an Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs, of London in 1583. His ſon——William Maſham Eſq; became ſeated at Otes, and by . . . daughter of . . . Calton, left——William Maſham Eſq; who was created a Baronet 20 Decemb. 1621. He repreſented in Parliament the burgh of Maldon in 1623, and twice in 1625; the burgh of Colcheſter in 1640, and was one of the knights for this ſhire in the Long Parliament. [See the Hiſtories of thoſe Times, and the Peerages.] He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Francis Barrington of Hatfeild-Broad-Oak, widow of Sir James Altham of Mark-hall in Latton.——William was his eldeſt ſon and heir, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Trevor Kt. He dyed in his father's life-time, having had, beſides other children, two ſons William and Francis;—— Sir William dyed unmarried, upon which the Honor and eſtate came to——Sir Francis, who had ſo great intereſt in this County, that he was choſen one the Knights of the Shire in 1690, and 1695, and in all the Parliaments from 1700 to 1708. He married, firſt, Mary, daughter of Sir William Scot of Rouen in Normandy, Bart. and by her had eight ſons, all of which dyed in his life-time, except the youngeſt, Samuel, created Lord Maſham.

Francis, the fourth ſon, left a Son Francis, who ſucceeded to the Baronetſhip upon the death of his grand-father, and dyed unmarried. Sir Francis had alſo a daughter, Heſter, who outlived him; ſhe was a Lady of great accompliſhments. He had to his ſecond wife Damaris, daughter of Dr. Cudworth Maſter of Chriſt's College Cambridge, by whom he had a ſon Francis Cudworth Maſham Eſq; who was Accomptant general to the High Court of Chancery. She dyed 20 April 1708, and is buried at Bath, with a monument. Sir Francis himſelf dyed 2 March 1722-3, and was ſucceeded in his eſtates by his ſon——Samuel, Lord Maſham. He was in high poſts under George Prince of Denmark: and, under Queen Anne, had the command of a Regiment of Horſe, and was advanced to be Brigadier General: In the year 1711 he was Cofferer of the Houſhold, and 1 January that year created Baron Maſham of Otes. His Lordſhip married Abigail, daughter of Francis Hill, Eſq; an eminent Turkey-merchant, ſiſter to General John Hill of Enville green in Surrey; and dying 16 October 1758, was ſucceeded by his ſon, the Rt. Hon.——Samuel Lord Maſham, who had married Herriot, daughter of Thomas Winnyngton Eſq;

Mr. William Betts; John Runnington; William Morris; Edward Speed; John Andrews; Robert Foſter; James Randal; John Corney; Benj. Redington &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The learned John Locke Eſq; ſpent much of his time in the laſt ten years of his life at Otes, as appears by the dates of his Letters; where he was uſed with the utmoſt civility by Sir Francis Maſham, and his excellent wife Damaris. Here he dyed 28 Octob. 1704, and was buried in the ſouth ſide of the Church-yard, under a black marble grave-ſtone, incloſed with iron rails; and on the Wall of the Church above it is an Epitaph, printed in his works.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. The Steple, in which are 3 Bells, is covered with a lofty ſpire, ſhingled.

This Rectory was a long time appendent to the Maner of High-Laver. It hath paſſed ſince, by ſale, into ſeveral Families.

8. MAGDALEN LAVER.

was ſo called, from the dedication of the Church to St. Mary Magdalen.

This pariſh belonged in the Saxons time to one Sexi; and, at the time of the Survey, to Ralph de Todeni, and his under-tenant Roger [U].

Here is but one MANER.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church.

The earlieſt poſſeſſors we find after Todeni, are Robert de Burnaville, and John de Angerville, John de Monpyncon, and Arabella his wife, in the reign of K. Henry III. (n). The two firſt were infeoffed by Joane de Marcy their grandmother (o).

In 1320, a fine paſſed between Humfrey de Waldene plaintiff, and John ſon of Robert de Burnaud, for this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church (p). And this Humfrey, at the time of his deceaſe in 1331, held them in capite, of Sir Hugh de Audele, and Margaret his wife daughter and co-heir of Gilbert Earl of Clare, as of the ſaid Margaret's right, by the ſervice of half a fee, and 7 d. to the Hundred of Aungre, for the Wardſtaff.——Andrew, ſon of his brother Roger was his heir. He dyed in 1352 (q), holding in fee-tail, of the Earl of March, this maner; and having no iſſue, was ſucceeded by Thomas Bataile, ſon of his ſiſter Alice; who held the premiſſes of the Honor of Clare; and departing this life in 1439, left——John, his ſon and heir, 14 years old (r). [See above, p. and the other Volume, p. 187. 620.

The next poſſeſſors upon record, were Sir Thomas Cook, mentioned above, p. who dyed in 1478: and his grandſon——John, in 1515 (s). And——Sir Antony, in 1576 (t).

But, in the mean time, it was alſo poſſeſſed by ſome, of the Families of Ayloffe, and Barrington; namely, by —— William Ayloffe Eſq; mentioned above, p. and in the other Volume, p. 138. 368. 606. He dyed 10 Auguſt 1517, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——William, then aged 13 years (u).

John Barrington Eſq; held alſo this maner of Maudelon Lower, in 1536, of John Earl of Oxford, as of his Honor of Caſtle-Henningham (w). Howſoever they got it, yet it reverted to the Cook family.

William Cook Eſq; ſecond ſon of Sir Antony, preſented to the Living in 1588, but the Maner doth not appear among the reſt of his poſſeſſions (x).

It was next in the Aylet-family.

William Aylet yeoman preſented to the Rectory in 1619. William Aylet of Magdalen-Laver, married Anne, daughter of . . . Sumner, and had iſſue——John Aylet, of the ſame place; who took to wife Alianor, daughter of Iſaac Bernard. His ſon and heir was——John Aylet of White-Rothing, in 1664, who married Mary, daughter of Ralph Pettus of Brices in Kelvedon-Hatch (y). This muſt be the ſame Gentleman who, according to the Account kept in his Family, was Lord of Magdalen-Laver, and, like his father-in law . . . Pettus, was a great ſufferer for King Charles I. He ſpent 700 l. per ann. in that ſervice, raiſed a troop of horſe at his own expence, and was in many engagements during the war [W]. He was one of the commanders in Colcheſter at the Siege, and was ſentenced to be ſhot, but eſcaped in woman's cloaths. However, he was retaken, and purchaſed his life of the Parliament for 460 l. and had a pardon from them. He received afterwards a commiſſion from King Charles II. to ſurpriſe Chepſtow Caſtle in Monmouthſhire, and to be Governor of the ſame. There he was betrayed, and made priſoner 'till the Reſtoration ſet him at liberty. It is probable then he took up his Reſidence at White-Rothing, within view of his loſt eſtate [X].

John Throckmorton Eſq; preſented, in 1662, George Kindleton B. D. to the Rectory, to which he had been preſented before in 1631, but during the civil wars had been ſequeſtred for 16 years. After his deceaſe, in 1667,——George Throckmorton Eſq; preſented again (z), by which we may conclude they poſſeſſed the Maner. Of one of the Throckmortons, the eſtate was purchaſed by William Cole Eſq; Treaſurer of St. Thomas's Hoſpital, who was Sheriff of Eſſex, in 1716, and dyed 1 Febru. 1729-30. He gave it to his nephew——William Cole, who dyed 24 February

[W] The King, to ſhew his approbation of his zeal, ordered an augmentation to his Arms, at Oxford in 1646, having no other reward to beſtow on him. His Coat was, Gules; three annulets, a chief, argent. The addition was, on a canton, or, the Roſe of England, proper. Creſt, an Arm, gules, holding a ſword, hilted, or, blade argent. Motto, NOT IN VAIN.

[X] There he might, as Dryden ſays of Alexander, Fight all his Battles o'er again; and count his ſword drawn NOT IN VAIN, if he had refined his taſte enough to prefer the eſteem of Heroes and Philoſophers to a comfortable inheritance. This Gentleman is not mentioned as a condemned perſon in our Hiſtories. Having eſcaped his purſuers, their intention might not be proclaimed, though he had intimation of it. 'Tis generally ſaid, that no more than the three Knights were appointed for execution; yet it is plain from the Authentic Journal of the Siege, publiſhed by one that was in the Town, that Colonel Farre was called out with the Knights, to have been ſharer of their fate, if he had not, contrary to cuſtom, ran away.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is of one pace, and equal breadth, with the Chancel, and tyled [Y].

was in the Saxons times, and at the Conqueſt, comprehended under one of the two others: there being then no account of it as a diſtinct Maner, or Pariſh.

Here are two Maners. 1. Little-Laver-hall. 2. The maner of Enefield, or Enville.

LITTLE-LAVER-HALL,

the maner-houſe, ſtands near the Church.

The earlieſt account we have of it, is, that, in the year 1200, Euſtace de Lageſare paſſed this eſtate, by fine, to Ralph de Roueceſter (b). This Ralph, in 1210, held half a Fee in Parva Langefara of the Honor of Bologne (c). He was ſon of Thomas Rocheſter, or Roſſes, Lord of Nucelles in Berkway in Hertfordſhire, which maner was given to one of his anceſtors by Eudo Dapifer. Ralph had iſſue William, Peter, and Alice. Upon the death of William, in K. Henry the IIId's reign, —— Peter inherited; and he leaving no iſſue, it came to Alice, who carried it to her huſband Robert de Scalariis, or Scales; deſcended from Hardwin de Scales, who came in with William the Conqueror, and had many grants from him in Hertfordſhire; one whereof in Berkway had a great wood, ſtill called Scales Park. [For a more particular account of the Scales Family, ſee the other Volume, p. 145.] Robert de Scales abovesaid dyed in 1324, leaving his ſon and heir——Robert: at which time, John le Bouſſer, John Otes, Thomas de Badeford, and John de Ennefeild, held the maner of Little Lauare of him, as of his maner of Rewen-hall, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (d). It ſeems after that to have been holden entirely by the Bourchier-family under the Lords Scales. Robert Bourchier, High Chancellor of England obtained free warren here in 1330 (e). His ſucceſſors were,——John Lord Bourchier, who dyed 21 May 1400.——Sir Bartholomew, 18 May 1409.——Idonea, his widow, 12 Septemb. 1410. Afterwards —— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, and Eſſex, who departed this life 4 April 1483, and——Henry, Earl of Eſſex, his grandſon, who dyed by a fall from his horſe, 13 March 1540 (f). The laſt but one held it of Henry Stafford, Earl of Hereford, &c. Anne, daughter and ſole heir of Henry Bourchier the laſt Earl of Eſſex, of this family, brought it in marriage to her huſband William Lord Parre [Z]. And he obtained a licenſe 1 October 1542, to alienate this maner of Little Laver, alias Bourchiers-hall, to

Sir Richard Riche (g). Of him it was purchaſed by John Collyn, or Collen, of Roding-Beauchamp. We can find little more of this Family, than the bare names; viz. William — John — John — John living in 1589.—John, who had 3 children —John, Mary, and Etheldreda. — Nicolas, — Thomas, who married Dorothy, daughter of Edward Elrington of Theydon-Bois Eſq; and had by her—Thomas, living in 1664, that married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Wheeler of Laverton in Glouceſterſhire (h) [A].

This maner was lately in Matthew Bluck of Hunſdon in Hertfordſhire, Eſq; who bought it of Collin. It was ſold by decree in Chancery to the Right Honorable the Lord Maſham.

The Maner of ENEFELD, or ENVILLE.

This ſeems to have been parted from that of Laver-Hall about the time of K. Edward II. For William de Enefeild, who dyed in 1361, held, jointly with his wife Joane, 1 meſſuage, 1 mill, 2 carucates of land, 12 acres of meadow, and 40 s. rent, in this pariſh.——John, his ſon, held the ſame, in 1377 (i). From them it was called Enefeld-Laver.

Ralph Tyle, in right of Alice his wife, had it ſoon after. And John Tyle, his ſon, who dyed in 1399, held, in this pariſh and Fiſhide, 1 meſſuage, 270 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 40 of wood, 100s. rent, and 17 capons. His heir was Thomas Enefeld, uncle of his mother Alice (k).

It was long in the Family of Collins of Beauchamp-Rothing; and purchaſed of the heirs of one of them by Mr. John Auſtry, who ſettled it on his grandſon Mr. John Evans of Wood-ſtreet, London.

Mr. William Norris; George Halden; and William Roaſt, have alſo ſome lands here.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is ſmall, of one pace, and the ſame width, with the Chancel; and the whole tyled. The Belfrey ſtands in the middle of the Church, with a ſpire ſhingled, in which there is only 1 Bell.

The Advowſon of this Rectory was in the Crown, from the year 1313 to 1532; notwithſtanding the claim put in by Silveſter de Everdon, of which an account may be ſeen in Mr. Newcourt (l). K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1540, to John Coyes, and his heirs (m); afterwards to Sir Richard Riche: from whom it came to the Collyn family; and then to Lord Maſham.

was ſo named from the two Saxon words Moꞃe, a hill, or riſing ground, and ꞇun, town, village, or farm. Between it and the Lavers runs a Brook, that falls into the Rodon at Chipping-Ongar.

This pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Sexi, and one freeman: At the time of the Survey, it was held by William Scobies, or Scobies [B].

The next poſſeſſors of it after him upon record, was the Family de Abrincis, or D'avranches, lords of Folkſton in Kent. William de Averenches held it about the reign of K. John, of his Barony (n) [C]. He dyed about 1230, leaving by Maud his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Hawiſe wife of John de Bovill that had eſtates at Great Lees in this County, [See in the other Volume, p. 95.]——William Davranches, who dyed before the year 1235, without iſſue; and Maud, a great heireſs (o). She was married to Hamo de Crevecoeur or Crevequer, lord of Ledes in Kent, deſcended from Hugo Dapifer. By her he had——William, [who dyed before him at the age of 24 years, leaving a ſon named Robert, who had no iſſue ſurviving,] and four daughters; Agnes, wife of John de Sandwich; Iſold, wife of Nicolas de Lenham; Elianor, wife of Bartholomew de Kyriell, and Iſabell, wife of Henry de Gaunt.

Hamo de Crevecoeur, huſband of the ſaid Maud, dyed in 1262; and Robert his grandſon in 1296; whereupon this eſtate was parcelled out between thoſe 4 daughters, or their heirs (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 339. 570.] Iſabella dying in 1283, her right had centered in the others (q).

This Maner was held of the King in capite, by the Serjancy of finding one man with a horſe of 10s. price, and four horſe-ſhoes, a leather ſack, and one iron faſtening, whenever the King ſhould happen to go into Wales; at his own charge, viz. the tenant's, for 40 days: as appears by the record ſet down below [D].

From the partition of this eſtate aroſe theſe two Maners; 1. Nether-hall; 2. Over-hall.

The Serjancy above-mentioned was performed between the owners of both.

NETHER-HALL, or BOURCHIERS-HALL [E].

The manſion-houſe ſtands near the ſouth-eaſt corner of the Church-yard.

[E] There hath been no Family in this County that hath ſo called the Lands after their own name, as the noble Family of Bourchier; there being almoſt an incredible number of Bourchiers-halls.

This moiety came by marriage to the noble Family of Bourchier. Robert Burghcher, who dyed in 1349, held it, jointly with his ſon——John, Lord Bourchier, by the ſerjancy aforeſaid (r). The latter is ſaid to hold it, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1400, by the ſervice of the 4th. part of a knight's-fee (s). His ſon——Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, and his wife——Idonea held the ſame (t). Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two huſbands Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart. But having no iſſue by either, it deſcended to——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, and Eſſex, who dyed 4 April 1483, and then to his grandſon —— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex (u); that dyed by a fall from his horſe in 1540. —— Anne, his daughter and heir was wife of William Lord Parre Earl of Eſſex. He by licence, dated 1 October 1542, ſold it to

Richard Lord Riche; who held it at the time of his deceaſe, with divers lands and tenements, in Moreton, Little and High Laver, and Matching (w). It continued in that Family 'till it was purchaſed by Robert Bourne of Blake-Hall in Bobbingworth, Eſq; His daughter Alice was married to John Lord Digby, as appears from Mr. Bourne's epitaph, who dyed in 1665. Lady Digby dying without iſſue, Mr. Bourne ſettled the reverſion.

Some time ago, it belonged to Ambroſe Page, one of the South-Sea-Directors: and it being ſold, with Scotts farm, by the Company, 12 Febru. 1723-4, was purchaſed, for the ſum of 2505 l. by William Cole Eſq; from whom it paſſed to his two nephews,——William, and——Henry Cole, Eſqres. as Magdalen Laver.

The Maner of UPPER-HALL, OVER-HALL, or LADY-HALL, was one of the moieties into which the Maner of Moreton was divided.

The manſion houſe ſtands in the fields a little way ſouth-eaſt from Nether-hall.

This ſeems to have been named Lady-hall from Juliana, daughter and heir of John de Sandwich, by Agnes, eldeſt daughter of Hamo de Crevecoeur. She was married to John de Segrave, ſtyled le Uncle, becauſe he was uncle to John Lord Segrave (x). This moiety he held by petit ſerjancy, as above-mentioned [F]. He dyed in 1343. As did his ſon —— John, in 1349, whom——Stephen de Segrave his couſin and next heir ſucceeded (y).

Elizabeth ſole daughter of John Lord Segrave, by his wife Margaret only daughter and heir of Thomas de Brotherton Earl of Norfolk, ſeems to have brought it in marriage to her huſband, Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk: at leaſt he dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1400. As did his ſon ——Thomas, who was beheaded in 1404 (z). In the Inquiſition taken after the death of this laſt we find it firſt called Lady-hall.

From the Mowbrays it came to the Howards. Edmund Lord Howard had licence 29 May 1538, to alienate this maner to Thomas Duke of Norfolk (a).

Next it belonged as well as the other to Sir Richard Riche; and his ſon —— Robert, Earl of Warwick (b). Of ſome of their heirs it was purchaſed by

Dr. Joſias Woodward, Miniſter Poplar. After whoſe widow's and ſon's deceaſe it came to Lewen Choldmondley, a brewer in Southwark; and then to his ſon——Lewen Choldmondley, of Sutton in Surrey Eſq;

The two Moieties of this Maner appear to have been further parcelled out. And the parcels were charged with the duty, or ſerjancy aforeſaid.

John de Lenham, alias de Burndiſh, had a part of it about the year 1336; which his daughter Elianor brought to her huſband

John Gifford, of Bures; and they two enfeoffed, Nicolas Burndiſh and his heirs with 24 acres, parcel of the ſame (c).

Of Robert de Sandwich, John Spencer held here, in 1356, one meſſuage, and 46 acres of land: and of the King in ca. one meſſuage, and 12 acres of land, by the ſervice aforeſaid (d).

Another parcel of this Maner, being 1 meſſuage, and 15 acres of land, were held by Richard Edwards, and John Scott, in 1358; by John de Dupham, in 1360; and by John Buſhe, in 1396 (e) [G].

Thomas Urſwick, who dyed in 1479, held 1 meſſuage called Lithehall, and 50 acres, whereof 30 were holden of the maner of Bourchier's-hall, and the other 20 lay in Little Laver (f). [See above, p. 141, and in the other Volume, p. 507.]

Tho: Winſlowe, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1481, held the maner of Brundiſhe, in this pariſh, of the Earl of Eſſex: and 2 meſſuages, 79 acres of arable, and 5 of meadow, of the Lord Howard (g). [See above, p. 141.]——

Mr. Jonathan Carver, citizen and cloth-worker of London, a native of this pariſh, by his will dated 22 Auguſt 1699, gave a rent-charge of 5 l. per ann. out of an eſtate lying in Moreton-end; to be diſtributed on Chriſtmaſs-day in money or clothes, at the diſcretion of the feoffees.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The Tower, of brick plaiſtered over, with a Spire ſhingled, contains 5 Bells.

This Church was given by William Scobies above-mentioned, to the Monaſtery of St. Stephen at Caen in Normandy founded by William the Conqueror, with the land and tithe thereto belonging. The grant was confirmed by K. Henry I. and a Vicarage ordained, to which the Prior of Pantfield uſually preſented (i): that Priory being a cell to the Convent of Caen, and the Prior of Pantfield Procurator for them, and receiver of their rents. It was ſeized by K. Edw. III. as a Priory alien, and afterwards granted by Parliament to K. Henry V. [See in the other Volume, p. 407.] K. Henry VI. endowing his College of Eaton, ſettled on it a penſion of eighteen marks from the Vicarage of Moreton (k). For, a Vicarage it continued till 1532, when K. Henry VIII. preſented to the Living as a Rectory, and it has continued ſuch to this time. He granted the Church and Advowſon firſt to Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and afterward to Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, who had licence, in 1538, to ſell it to the Lord Riche (l), in whoſe Family it continued till it was purchaſed by St. John's College in Cambridge.

is otherwiſe written in records, Shelfele, Shellegh, and Senley; which name is derived from the Saxon words ꞅcell, a hedge-hog, or ꞅcen, pleaſant, and leẏ, paſture.

This little Pariſh lies between Moreton, and the Ongars, and contains only one Maner.

Shelley-hall, the maner houſe, ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

Leuedai was poſſeſſed, in the Saxons time, of this Pariſh; which, at the time of the Survey, belonged to Geffrey de Magnaville, and his under-tenant Rainald [I].

The next owner upon record was Johanna, wife of Waleram de Munceus, a family mentioned above under High-Ongar. At the time of her deceaſe, in 1278, She held this maner of the Earl of Hereford, by the ſervice of one knight's-fee; and Sir William de Cloyle, and Aveline, wife of Roger de Lees, deſcended from her two ſiſters, were her heirs (m).

This Aveline brought it into the Lees, or Leigh, Family; in which it continued till the reign of K. Henry VIII.——John de Leys held two fees in the vills of Shelſteye, and Frinton, under Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1301 (n). 12. BOBBINGWORTH lies weſt of Shelley, and ſeems to have been ſo named from an ancient owner named Bobbing, and Ƿoꞃð, a hall, or Ƿoꞃði, a farm.

'Tis otherwiſe written in records Bobingford, and Bubingeorda: vulgarly, Bovinger.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, two Freemen were poſſeſſed of this pariſh: At the time of the Survey it was held by Ralph brother of Ilger [N].

There are in it two Maners. 1. Bobbingworth-hall. 2 Blake-hall.

1. BOBBINGWORTH-HALL

This entry was, by miſtake of the Writer, entered in Domeſday book under the Hundred of Witbricteſherna, or Dengey, next after Niuuelanda, or Newland, in the pariſh of St. Laurence.

The next owner of this eſtate that occurs in records, after Ralph, was Henry Spigurnell, who dyed in 1328. He held the maner, and the advowſon of the Church, of William Bohun, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Thomas was his ſon (z). He was afterwards knighted; and Lord of Dagew-hall, which we take for Deux-hall in Lambourn. Henry, the father, was undoubtedly ſon, or grandſon, of Edmund Spigurnell, who had the maner of Stondon in 1295 (a). [See under that pariſh.] In 1339, Sir Thomas Spigurnell granted to Robert de Hakeney, citizen of London, and his wife Catharine, and their heirs, this whole maner of Bobbingworth, with all his lands and tenements in High-Aungre (b).

In 1403, it was purchaſed by Sir John Aſheles. And in 1423——William Aſheles, of Thaxted, ſold it to John de Veer, Earl of Oxford, Sir Reginald Weſt, Nicolas Thorley, Richard Wentworth, and Richard Ardern (c) [O].

Theſe conveyed the premiſſes, in 1446, to Sir Thomas Tyrell, Sir Peter Ardern, and others. And in 1464, they were purchaſed by Walter Writell Eſq; He was of a very ancient family, deſcended from Ralph Fitz-Ralph Eſq; to whom Margaret Counteſs of Gallway gave the maner of Writtle in this County, and from whence he took the ſurname of Writtle. [See in the other Volume, p. 156.]——Peirce de Writtle, his ſon, by Mabel, daughter and heir of Sir Stephen Boys, had——Walter Writell, above-mentioned. He married Catharine, daughter of Alexander Walden, and had by her——Hugh; who, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Sir John Norford, had——Ralph: that married Anne daughter of Thomas Breton.——Ralph was their ſon and heir, and by Elizabeth his wife daughter and heir of Robert Ramſey, left Ralph Writtle, of Bobbingworth Eſq; The latter married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Boſton, and had by her, John, father of——John, who dyed 13 October 1485, without iſſue; and three daughters, Griſild married firſt to John Rocheſter, afterwards to Edward Waldgrave; Lora, wife of John Waldgrave; and Elianôr of James Walſingham (d).

Walter Writell Eſq; firſt named here, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1469, and 1471. He dyed 18 April 1475, and was buried in this Church with his wife Catharine (e). Beſides this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, he held in this pariſh of Anne Ducheſs of Buckingham, 3 meſſuages called Pykerells, Reynkyns, and Bolleſcrofts; and lands and tenements called Hyerds, Pikerells, Wilkyns, Crowches crofts, Chamberleyns, Pappis, and Tylehous; and eſtates in ſeveral other places (f) [P].——John Wretill, ſon and heir of John, who dyed 28 July 1507, had alſo ſeveral other eſtates in this County (g) [Q].

In 1510, there was a partition made of this eſtate between the coheireſſes of Writell; viz. James, and Elianor, Walſingham, and Edward and Griſild Waldgrave. And in 1575 there was another partition between James Walſingham and his wife, and John Rocheſter and his wife, whereby the Preſentation to the Living became alternate. In 1586, Rocheſter's part, the Hall, was purchaſed by John Pool [R]; His ſon——John Poole dyed 20 April 1633, being ſucceeded by his brother——Richard (h), and his deſcendents dwelt in the Hall till 1708. Walſingham's part, which was land only, was purchaſed, of Sir Thomas, and Sir Andrew Walſingham, by Robert Bourne, of Blake-hall.

Theſe two moieties were afterwards purchaſed by the Houblon Family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 513. The late Rev. Jacob Houblon enjoyed this eſtate many years, and it now belongs to his nephew——Jacob Houblon Eſq; ſtands about half a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church. It has now only the empty title of a Maner, without court, or tenants.

BLAKE-HALL

This maner was originally holden of the Honor of Clare, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; formerly by Robert de Haſtings, of the Honor of Mareſcall, then by John de Londres (i).

Sir Robert Brent, who dyed in 1420, held this maner of Blakehall, of the Earl of March, as of the Honor of Clare, in ſocage.——Joane, wife of John Tretboke, was his ſiſter and heir (k).

And half the Advowſon of this Church. Inquiſ. 45 Eliz. nu. 72.

It belonged afterwards to . . . . Thomſon: and in 1516 to——Sir William Capel, who held it of Catharine Queen of England, as of the Honor of Clare (l).

Sir Richard Riche had it afterwards; and next ——John Waylet; of whom——John Glaſcock purchaſed it in 1592, and paid 4 l. ingreſs fine. He ſold it, in 1598, to

Robert Bourne, Gent. who paid 70 s. ingreſs fine. His father, William Bourne, had purchaſed of the Lord Riche, 3 Octob. 1566, a certain tenement, and 200 acres of land in this pariſh. He dyed 18 May 1581, and was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph.——Robert, his ſecond ſon, lord of this maner, married Catharine, daughter of Henry Medley of Tiltey-Abbey, Eſq; which dyed 26 April 1645, aged 80 years, having had 5 ſons, William, Robert, Edward, &c. and 6 daughters, among the reſt, Mary, wife of William Chapman, of London, merchant; Margareta wife of William, or Nicolas Cowper, of the ſame place; and Elizabeth, of Richard Glaſcock of Downe hall in Hatfeild-Broad-oak. The ſaid Robert dyed 10 May 1639 (m). The ſecond ſon——Robert Bourne Eſq; married Roſe, daughter of Humfrey Walcott of Shropſhire Eſq; He dyed 24 February 1665, and ſhe 6 March 1653 [S]. Their only daughter and heir——Alice, was married to John Lord Digby, 26 May 1650, but dyed in 1658, without iſſue. Whereupon the two daughters of his ſiſter Margatet Cowper inherited this eſtate; namely,

Dorothy Thomſon, and Anne Fowler. In 1709, theſe two coheireſſes ſold this eſtate to

John Clark Eſq; who married Elizabeth daughter of Sir Richard Haddock Kt. and had by her——Richard Clark Eſq; who has to wiſe Anne ſiſter of Thomas Fytche of Danbury Eſq;

An eſtate called Bobingford, alias Monkis, conſiſting of one meſſuage, and 200 acres of land, in this pariſh, and High, and Caſtle Ongar, Stanford-Rivers, and Shelley, belonged in 1496 to Joane Biddleſdon (n).

Mr. Charles, and William, Pool; William Burling; John Butler; Henry Greenwood; Joſeph Cox, &c. have alſo ſome eſtates in this pariſh.

The 2d of July 1639, Thomas Pool, Richard, and John Poole, for themſelves, and others, lords of Bobbingworth-hall, paid a compoſition to the King's Commiſſioners for diſafforeſting ſome lands; being the Biſhops of London and Wincheſter, and Francis Cottington; for diſafforeſting 481 acres in this pariſh.

13. NORTH-WEALD

is ſo named in contradiſtinction to South-Weald, from which it ſtands northerly, and ſignifies North Wood. Baſſet is added to the name, becauſe it anciently belonged to a branch of that noble Family. It is ſometimes called Nether-Weld.

This Pariſh is not mentioned in Domeſday-book, unleſs it ſhould be what is there called Aſtoca, and placed in the original between Greenſted and Kelvedon Hatch [T].

In the reign of K. Henry II. it belonged to Henry de Eſſex, and then to his younger ſon——Hugh de Eſſex (o), whoſe ſon——Baldwin granted this his maner of North-Wand to Philip Baſſet, and the Lady Ela his ſecond wife (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 268.] He dyed in 1271 (q):——Aliva his daughter and heir by his firſt wife, held, at the time of her deceaſe in 1291, this maner of North Weld ſome time of the caſtle of Benyngton by the ſervice of 5 knights fees; whereof, the Templars of Creſſing held two fees in Sutton near Rochford, William de Montchenſy one fee in Leyre de la Hay, Sewall de Springefeild one fee in Springefeild, and the heirs of Iſabell de Beringham one fee in Beringham and Hylington (r). She was married firſt to Roger Bigot, and afterwards to Hugh le Deſpenſer. Her ſon ——Hugh le Deſpenſer held this maner of John de Benſted in 1324 (s).

granted this, among the reſt, to his brother Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, to hold by the yearly gift of one ſpar-hawk (t). For endeavouring to releaſe the ſaid King his brother from his impriſonment he was attainted and executed, in 1330. And this eſtate was given to

Bartholomew de Burgherſh for his life (u). But Edmund's attainder being reverſed, his ſon

John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, enjoyed this eſtate as parcel of the Earldom of Kent, till 27 Decemb. 1352, when he dying without iſſue, it deſcended to his ſiſter——Joane, the Fair Maid of Kent (w), married, firſt, to William Montacute Earl of Saliſbury, next to Thomas Holand Earl of Kent, and then to Edward the Black Prince. Upon her deceaſe, in 1385 (x), it deſcended to her ſon

Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent; though it is not mentioned in the Inquiſition taken after his death; but——Alice, his widow, held it at the time of her deceaſe in 1416 (y). As did——Lucy de Viſconti, widow of Edmund Holand, Earl of Kent, that dyed 14 April 1424 (z). His ſiſter Elianor brought it in marriage to her huſband

Thomas Montacute, Earl of Saliſbury, who held it by the law of England at the time of his deceaſe 3 Novemb. 1428, and then it came to her daughter

Alice, wife of Richard Nevill, Earl of Saliſbury (a). She dyed in 1462. ——Richard Nevill, her ſon, Earl of Saliſbury and Warwick, was ſlain at Barnet field 14 April 1471. His eldeſt daughter and coheir, Iſabel, wife of George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, held it at the time of her deceaſe 16 Decemb. 1476 (b) [U]. Margaret Plantagenet, their daughter, widow of Sir Richard Pole, obtained it in 1513; but her fatal end, in 1541, is well known (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 504. 612] [W].

This eſtate coming then to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. in 1543, granted the maner of North-Weld, and North-Wed Park, to Richard Higham, and his heirs, to hold by the 20th part of a knight's fee. He had licenſe, 1 June 1544, to alienate them to Sir Richard Riche (d), who, by licenſe dated 15 April 1554, conveyed them to his ſecond ſon——Sir Hugh Riche (e).——Robert Lord Riche had them at the time of his deceaſe 27 Febru. 1580, as had his ſon,——Robert Earl of Warwick, 24 March 1618-19 (f).

From this noble Family it paſſed into that of Cheke of Pirgo. Lætitia, widow of Thomas Cheke Eſq; dyed poſſeſſed of it 9 January 1721-2. Her daughter——Anne, Lady Tipping, enjoyed it after her: upon whoſe deceaſe, 20 January 1727-8, it came to her youngeſt daughter Catharine, who was married to the preſent owner, the Rt. Hon. Thomas Lord Archer. See above, p. 61.

This Maner had anciently a Park, and there are ſome fields on the ſouth-weſt of the Houſe, ſtill called Park-fields.

From this Maner have ariſen two others, named MARSHALLS, and CANNES.

The Maner of MARSHALLS

Was ſo named from Roger Bigot Earl Marſhal, firſt huſband of Aliva Baſſet.

William Fitz-William of Milton in Northamptonſhire, Knt. who dyed 9 Auguſt 1534, held the maner of Marſhalls;——William was his ſon and heir (g). [See under Theydon-Gernon.] Richard Spranger, of Harlow, held a meſſuage called Homans, and lands thereto belonging, in Haſtings-wood hamlet within this maner, in 1632 (h). The manſion-houſe, which is now demoliſhed, ſtood within a moat. A family named Larder inhabited it not long ſince. Walter Larder and his wife and children were buried here about the beginning of the laſt century.

This eſtate was once in the Searle family, but now belongs to John Archer of Cooperſale, Eſq;

John Smyth of Epping, who dyed 22 July 1570, held of John Searle, as of his maner of Marſhall here, a maner or meſſuage called Welbridg [X], alias Gymblis, in free ſocage, and by yearly rent of 4 s. 2 d. He alſo held Prytlewell lands, of the Queen, in free ſocage; all in this pariſh (i) [Y]. This Welbridge farm belonged lately to John Stokes.

The Maner of CAWNES, or CANNES, belongs to Merton-College in Oxford; and hath been many years held by leaſe by the Family of Binckes. See under Norton Mandeville.

Richard Spranger held of this maner, in 1631, a parcel of land called Arnott croft, in North-

Some have likewiſe placed in this pariſh

A Maner called PARIS.

Such an one appears by the records to extend into this pariſh. But the chief of it lies within the pariſhes of Harlow, Latton, and Theydon Gernon.

It was holden of John Writell Eſq; as of his maner of Haſtlyns (l); and belonged, as well as the maner of Huberts Hall in Harlow, to the Shaa Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 338. 484.] Alice daughter of Ed. Shaa brought it to her huſband

William Poley Eſq; (m) who, at the time of his deceaſe, 17 Decemb. 1587, held this maner of Paris of George Colt Eſq; as of his maner of Sewells, by the rent of 4 s. per ann. (n). His ſon,——Sir John Poley dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame, 7 Decemb. 1593, leaving his ſon—— William Poley Eſq; aged 24 years (o). Of him, or his ſon, it was purchaſed by Mr. Fuller, of Coggeſhall, clothier, from whom it hath deſcended to —— Mr. William Fuller.

Wheelers, is an eſtate in this pariſh, about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church, that belonged to the Rev Simon Lynch, Vicar of this pariſh; His daughter ſold it to John Searl, Gent. [A].

Mr. George, and Robert, Burrell; John Searl; Rev. Philip Walter; John Wilſon; Nathanael, and Thomas, Adams; Thomas Pegrim; Daniel Binckes; Richard Prieſt, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Simon Thorowgood, citizen and fiſhmonger of London, did, in 1635, deviſe by will 50 l. towards building a Grammar School houſe in this pariſh; and gave in truſtees an annuity of ten pounds a year for a School-maſter, payable out of his lands called Harts-grove in Berking, for inſtructing the children of this and the confining Towns next thereunto. Through ſome bad management, this Donation lay dormant above 40 years, till 1678, when, by a Commiſſion of charitable uſes, it was recovered and ſettled as it now ſtands. A ſchool is kept, and the endowment well paid.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle, at the upper end of which there is a Chapel; all tyled. The Tower is embattled, and contains 5 Bells.

This Church, by the name of Walde, was given to the Priory of Clerkenwell, London, by Cecily de Eſſex, with the patronage of the ſame, and all its appertenances in lands, tithes, and obventions: which grant was confirmed by her ſons Henry, and Hugh de Eſſex, abovementioned; and by Richard Nigel, biſhop of London, in 1194 (p).

The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to that Priory; and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Biſhop of London reſerved the collation to himſelf and ſucceſſors, and they conferred it without interruption till 1483 (q). But the Nunnery of Clerkenwell claiming a right to the Patronage; after many controverſies, the matter being referred to Arp. Warham, and the Lord Chief Juſtice Fineux, they awarded, 10 Decemb. 1515, that the preſentation ſhould be alternate, between the Biſhop of London, and the owner of the impropriate Tithes: and it hath continued ſo ever ſince.

After the diſſolution, the Rectory was granted, 2 January 1559, to William Dodington (r). It is a Maner, and reckoned worth about 200 l. a year. John Searle Gent. had it ſome time ago [B], and conveyed it to——George Finch, who had married his daughter. The latter ſold it to——William Plummer Eſq; late Knight of the Shire for the County of Hertford, and it is now in his family.

Out of this Rectory are diſtributed yearly to the Poor, on Aſh-Wedneſday, 36 buſhels of grain, wheat, barley, peaſe, malt; or the value of the ſame in money. The donor was one of the Searl family.

The maner of North-Weald had anciently a Free Chapel, in the diſpoſal of the Lord (s).

The Vicar, beſides the ſmall Tithes, is endowed with the third part of Corn and Hay: but he pays to the Rector 4 marks yearly (t).

[A] This Mr. Lynch was memorable upon ſeveral accounts. He was born at Staple in Kent in December 1562, inſtituted to this living 3 Auguſt 1592, and enjoyed it till 24 May 1656, almoſt 64 years. He dyed at the age of 94, having lived 61 years with Elizabeth Seane his wife, by whom he had 10 children, and yet ſo good a manager was he, that he provided well for them. Bp. Aylmer, his kinſman, gave him this living, then not worth 50 l. a year, and pleaſantly ſaid to him, Couſin, play with this a while till a better come. The Biſhop afterwards offered him South-Weald, three times better than this, To whom Mr. Lynch anſwered with a pun; That he preferred the Weal of his pariſhioners ſouls before any other Weal whatſoever. 15. GREENSTED, ſignifies Green Place. This hath uſually the addition of Near Ongar, to diſtinguiſh it from the other Greenſted, in this County near Colcheſter.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Gotild was poſſeſſed of this maner, which, at the time of the Survey, belonged to Hamo Dapifer. Serlo held 40 acres of this maner. Three Freemen had in the Saxons time enjoyed half a hide, and 45 acres. And Ralph, ſuppoſed to be de Marci, held half a hide and 5 acres, at the Survey [C].

Hamo Dapifer dying without iſſue, his lands deſcended to his brother——Robert Fitz-Hamo, to whom K. William II. gave the Honor of Glouceſter: He dyed in 1107. His eldeſt daughter Mabel, or Maud, was married to

Robert, natural ſon of K. Henry I. created Earl of Glouceſter; to whom ſhe brought her uncle Hamo's large inheritance. He departed this life in 1147. Whether K. Stephen took this eſtate from him, for his ſtrong adherence to his competitor the Empreſs Maud, doth not appear. But William, K. Stephen's ſon, gave Greenſted, together with Cheping-Ongar, to Richard de Lucy (u). Of whom ſee an account under Cheping Ongar.

From the Lucy family it came into that of Rivers. From them to William de la Hay, though we are not informed by what means: And from him to the noble Family of Stafford, under which it was holden by the noble Family of Bourchier, mentioned ſufficiently under Moreton; and more fully in the other Volume, p. 253, &c.——Robert Burgcher, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1349, held a certain tenement in Greenſted, with the advowſon of the Church, of Ralph Baron de Stafford, as of the maner of Aungre (w).——Hugh, Lord Stafford, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, had this maner (x). And ſo had——Sir Lewis Robeſſart, ſecond huſband of this Elizabeth (y). She was poſſeſſed of it, at the time of her deceaſe 1 July 1433 (z).——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, who dyed 4 April 1483, held this maner of Henry Lord Stafford, Earl of Hereford (a); and Northampton. His grandſon, and ſucceſſor, —— Henry, Earl of Eſſex, being killed by a fall from his horſe 13 March 1540, this, with the reſt of his great eſtates, came to his only daughter and heir

Anne, married to William Lord Parr, created afterwards Marquis of Northampton. She is recorded to have had this maner, and 4 l. rent, the advowſon of the Church, and free-warren. The time of her death was 26 Janu. 1570 (b). But, before that, this eſtate was purchaſed by Sir Richard Riche, who preſented to the Rectory in 1548 and 1561 (c); and, at the time of his deceaſe, 12 June 1566, held the maner of Greneſted-hall, with appertenances, in this pariſh, High-Onger, and Standen, and the Advowſon of the Rectory, of James Morrys, as of the maner of Chipping Onger in free ſocage, by fealty only (d).

This eſtate was afterwards in William Bourne, Gent. of the neighbouring pariſh of Bobbingworth, who preſented to this living in 1593: and next in the Young family, which preſented from 1617 to 1661 (e).

Mr. Gulton enjoyed this eſtate ſince, and ſold it to

Mr. Alexander Cleeve, citizen of London. He dyed 11 April 1738, having had two wives, 1. Mary, daughter of . . . . . Duffield. 2. Anne, daughter of . . . Butcher, and had iſſue by both.

It belongs now to David Rebotier, Eſq;

Greenſtead-hall ſtands a little way eaſt from the Church.

Mr. Iſaac Blyth has alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is ſmall; the Church and Chancel being of one pace, and tyled.

It is a very uncommon antique building; for the Walls are of timber, not framed, but trees ſplit, or ſawn aſunder, and ſet into the ground.

There is a print of it engraved by the Society of Antiquaries. It has but 1 Bell.

This Church was, by act of Parliament in 1548, conſolidated and united to that of Cheping-Ongar, and the reaſons alledged in the act, were, " becauſe the profits of the Church of Chipping-Ongar were not ſufficient to find a Prieſt, being not above 6l. in the King's Books, and becauſe the charges of the repairs, ornaments, and other accuſtomed Duties to that Church and the Church of Grinſted, (which was of the ſame value or little more, and ſtood but a quarter of a mile diſtant from it, and commodious for the acceſs of the pariſhioners of Ongar) were much greater than could be raiſed or born among ſuch poor pariſhioners, It was therefore enacted that the Church of Chipping-Ongar ſhould be diſſolved, and the Church of Grinſted made the Pariſh Church, as well for the pariſhioners of Ongar as thoſe of Grinſted; and the advowſon of Ongar was thereby inveſted in the patron of Grinſted, viz. the Lord Rich, his heirs and aſſigns." But this conſolidation, or union, was diſſolved by another act made in 1554; in the preamble of which it is ſaid, that one William Moris Eſq; then patron of the Church of Chipping Ongar, and member of parliament, did by ſiniſter labour and procurement get the act for the conſolidation.

This Rectory was for many years appendent to the Maner. Some time ago it was purchaſed by Mr. Pratt, Miniſter of St. Botolph's Aldgate: and ſettled ſo, that upon every vacancy it is to be given to the Curate of that Church.

There belongs to it a Glebe of 28 acres.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 328l. 3s. 0d.

15. STANFORD-RIVERS.

Stan-ford, ſignifies a ſtone or ſtony ford; and was a name given to this Pariſh, becauſe a Ford through the river Rodon here, was naturally ſtony; or was paved with Stone, after the manner of the Romans, who raiſed a pavement in many rivers in Britain, to make the paſſage ſhallower and ſave the expence of a bridge. The addition of Rivers is from the Family de Ripariis, or Rivers, its ancient owners, diſtinguiſhing it from Stanford le Hope.

Stanford-hall ſtands a little way north-eaſt from the Church.

In Edward the Confeſſor's days, the poſſeſſors of this pariſh were, Aluuin, afterwards Ingelric; a certain freeman; Brictuuin; and one Aluric's father: At the time of the Survey, it was held by Euſtace Earl of Bologne. Part of it was then called Little Stanford [D].

Earl Euſtace's grandaughter, Maud, brought it in marriage to her huſband Stephen Earl of Blois, afterwards King of England. That King's ſon, William, Earl of Mortain and Surrey, gave this Lordſhip, with thoſe of Cheping-Ongar, and Greenſted &c. to

Richard de Lucy. [See above, p. 127.] By Rohais his wife he had two ſons, Geffrey, and Herbert, and two daughters, Maud, and Rohais ——Geffrey was father of——Richard, who dyed without iſſue. Herbert, the ſecond ſon, had this eſtate, and dying alſo without iſſue, the inheritance came to the ſiſters. In 1242, Maud de Lucy held the maner of Stanford of the King, in his eſcheatry, of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of 3 knights fees (f). She was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to Richard de Ripariis, or Rivers, by whom ſhe had two ſons, Richard, who dyed before her; and Baldwin.——Richard, ſon of Richard, born in 1238, ſucceeded his grandmother Maud (g) [E]. His ſucceſſors were,——John de Rivers, who dyed in 1293.——John, his ſon: and——John his grandſon. [See above, p.] [F].

From them it came into the noble family of Stafford. Ralph, Earl of Stafford, who dyed in 1372, held the maner of Stanford-Rivers of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's ſervice: and one carucate of land in this pariſh, called Traceys, of the ſame Honor. ——Sir Hugh Stafford was his ſon. Traceys is elſewhere deſcribed, as 240 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 64 of wood, and 45s. rent of aſſiſe, within the lordſhip of Stanford-Rivers, holden of the Abbot of Waltham (h). Sir Hugh Stafford, jointly with his wife —— Elizabeth, in 1415, demiſed to John Tyrell, and others, this maner. So that, at the time of his deceaſe in 1421, he held in this pariſh only 46 acres of arable, and 9 acres of meadow, of John Chambers, by fealty; and 40 acres here, called Botelers, of the Abbot of Waltham; and for the term of his life, a tenement, 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 16 of paſture, called Tracies, remainder to the right heirs of his brother Edmund late Earl of Stafford (i). The ſaid Edmund Earl of Stafford, had in Stamford Cheyners half a knight's fee, which the heirs of John le Gros held under him (k). But Elizabeth, widow of Sir Hugh, remarried to Sir Lewis Robeſſart, had this maner till her deceaſe, 1 July 1433 (l).——Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, who was ſlain at the battle of Northampton, 10 July 1460, held the maners of Stanford Rivers, and Traceyes, of the King of the Honor of Bologne: and the maners of Suttons, Piggeſland, Bottelles, and Brigges, and lands and tenements in this pariſh and High Ongre (m).

By theſe extracts from the Inquiſitions, it appears, that this maner was ſubdivided into thoſe of TRACEYS, BOTELERS, PIGGESLAND, and BRIGGES; ſo named from under-tenants, to whom parcels of the Maner were demiſed [G].

To return to the capital Maner of Stanford-Rivers. It was given by K. Edward the IVth. to John Stafford, younger ſon of Humfrey, created Earl of Wiltſhire 5 January 1469, who dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame 8 May 1473, with thoſe of Piggeſland, Botelles, and Brigges; and that of Sutton in Stapleford-Tany (n).——Conſtance, his widow, at the time of her deceaſe in 1475, held this maner of Stanford-Rivers, and 4 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 1000 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of wood, in this pariſh and High Ongre, of the King in ca. by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and Tracyes by the 10th part of a knight's fee: and the maner of Brigges, and 2 meſſuages called Piggeſland and Botley's, by the 20th part of a fee.——Edward, their ſon and heir born in 1470 (o), dyed 4 March 1499, without iſſue.

Henry, and Edward, Stafford, both Dukes of Buckingham, had this eſtate, which upon their ſeveral attainders and executions came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. 18 June 1524, granted to William Cary Eſq; and Mary his wife, the maners of Stanſted-Rivers, Tracies, Piggeſlond, Brigeſtone, Botteleys and Suttons, and 500 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 200 of wood, and 4 l. 6 s. 8 d. rent (p).

This eſtate belonged afterwards to William Lord Petre, in the laſt century, who gave it to his ſecond ſon——William Petre Eſq; He was born at Weſt-Horndon in 1602, had his education at Exeter College in Oxford, and at Wadham founded by his great aunt. Afterwards he went to the Inns of Court, and then travelled; He tranſlated Ribadeneira's Lives of Saints out of Spaniſh into Engliſh, and continued the work to the year 1669 (q). He married Lucy, daughter of Sir Richard Fermor of Oxfordſhire Kt. by whom he had two ſons, and a daughter, and dying 15 January 1677, aged 75, was buried in the Chancel here; as was alſo his wife, who dyed 3 March 1679.——William their eldeſt ſon and heir, married Anne, daughter of Mr. Caldwell of Cantes-Hall in Eſſex; he dyed 11 November 1686, aged 56 years; and ſhe 4 May 1688: both lie buried here. They had two ſons, and two daughters.——William Petre, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, married firſt Anne, daughter of Robert Poultrel of Derbyſhire, Gent. who dyed in child-bed 21 Febru. 1688, and afterwards, Penelope, daughter of John Wolphe Eſq; Barriſter at Law, by whom he had 8 children.——William Petre, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married a ſiſter of the Rt. Hon. James Earl of Derwentwater, and had by her William and Mary, who dyed before him. He departed this life 24 September 1745, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph.

This eſtate belongs now to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

BELHOUSE,

about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church, hath been chiefly the Seat and reſidence of the Petre Family in this pariſh.

It is written in records Gelhowes, and called a Maner (r).

Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Philip Malpas, citizen and clothier of London, and widow of Sir Thomas Cooke, held, at the time of her deceaſe in 1484, this maner of Belhous of the Earl of Wiltſhire, as of his maner of Stanford-Rivers, by fealty, and rent of 2 d. a year.——Philip Cooke was her ſon and heir (s).——John Cooke dyed 20 Auguſt 1486, poſſeſſed of this maner, and of a tenement here called Morells.——John was his brother and heir (t).

It belonged in 1524 to Robert Troblefeild (u). And came afterwards into the Petre Family.

[G] Tracys in particular was ſo named from a Family of that ſurname. For, in the Foreſt Rolls, in 1311, we find mention of John Tracy of this place. And Thomas, ſon of James Tracy, who dyed in 1353, held, in this vill, a tenement called Tracy, of the Earl of Stafford, by the ſervice of a pair of ſpurs of the value of 6 d. and yearly rent of a pound of pepper. Inquiſ. 27 Edw. III.

Berwick, and Caunes, or Cadnes, are two other reputed Maners, partly in this pariſh.

John Skrene, who dyed in 1451, held theſe two meſſuages in Stanford Rivers, with their appertenances in Ongre, Matching, Bobbingworth, and Stapilford: leaving——John his ſon (w). [Concerning the Skrene family, ſee more in the other Volume, p. 70.]

Richard Harper, who dyed 11 March 1517, held the maner, or tenement of Berwick, in this pariſh, and in Onger, Matching, Bobbingworth, and Stapleford, of the Duke of Buckingham; and of Henry Torell, as of his maner of Shelley-hall.——George was his ſon (x). It is now incorporated with the aboveſaid eſtates.

Littlebury, and Rockenhoe, is another Maner, of which the manſion-houſe ſtands about three quarters of a mile eaſt from this Church, but moſt of the lands lie in the pariſh of High-Ongar.

In 1528, Richard Salinge held this maner of Catharine Queen of England, as of her maner of Anſtye, parcel of the Honor of Clare, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee. ——Auguſtin was his ſon (y).

It belonged in the laſt century, to John Atwood Eſq; who married Dorothy, daughter of William Walter of Wimbledon in Surrey, Eſq; and left —— John Atwood of Bromfeld, and Gray's Inn, Eſq; his ſon and heir. He married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Patrick Younge Eſq; and had by her, John born in 1644, William, Elizabeth, and Sarah (z). —— John Atwood Eſq; ſold this eſtate to Mrs. Sarah Bull, who dyed 24 July 1694. It hath continued ever ſince in that family.

Here was formerly a Park, which Humfrey de Waleden held in 1331, of the King of the Honor of Bologne, as parcel of the maner of Stanford Rivers. His nephew, and heir,——Andrew de Waleden held, in 1335, 1 meſſuage, 1 carucate of arable land, and 800 acres of wood, in Stanford Rivers and Welde, of the King, in ſocage, by fealty only (a). [Concerning this family, ſee more above, p. 131.] and in the other Volume, p. 497. 570. 582.

William Green, citizen and merchant-taylor of London, gave to twelve of the pooreſt inhabitants of this pariſh, forty ſhillings a year for ever, payable from certain lands and tenements in St. Botolph's Aldgate London. The time of the donation is unknown; but Sir John Ayloffe, Rector of this pariſh, had ſeen a receipt for this Charity dated 18 April 1634.

In 1600, William Petite of Greenſted left 10*s.* per ann. for the benefit of poor folks Marriages here, and at Greenſted, payable at Michaelmaſs.

Lands called Knights in this pariſh is charged with the payment.

The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is of one pace with the Chancel, and both are almoſt of equal breadth, and tyled. The Belfrey is of wood, containing 1 Bell; and hath on the top a ſpire, leaded.

This valuable Rectory was from the firſt in the gift of the Crown. Qu. Mary I. annexing to the Duchy of Lancaſter, 15 April 1558, the lordſhips and maners of Stanford-Rivers, Stanford-hall, Tracys, Bridges, and Piggeſland (b), from that time the Advowſon of this Rectory hath been in the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaſter.

THEYDON.

The Saxon words Ðeᵹn ðun ſignify Thegn's hill, from whence it is moſt probable that this diſtrict was originally the extenſive Lordſhip of ſome Saxon Thegn, or as vulgarly written Thane; and was then but one Lordſhip. When divided afterwards into three, they came to be ſtyled, for diſtinction ſake, 1. Ad Montem, or at Hill, 2. Gernon; and 3. Bois. But that diſtinction was not known at the time of the general Survey; for it is entered in Domeſday-book only under the name of Taindena, and Teindana: and is otherwiſe written in records Teydene, Theydon, Thedon.

The owners, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, had been, Godric, Ulmar, and Hacun.

1. Theydon-Mount, or Ad Montem, received that name, as ſtanding upon the higheſt ground.

It is the part that had belonged in the Confeſſor's reign to Godric; and was one of the fifty five Lordſhips beſtowed by William the Conqueror upon Suene of Eſſex, who had given it to his father Robert [H].

Suene was poſſeſſed of the Honor of Raley, where his Caſtle and chief reſidence was; whence this Maner came to be held of the Honor of Raley. To Suene ſucceeded—— Henry de Eſſex, Conſtable to K. Henry II. and hereditary Standard-bearer; who, for throwing down the Standard in a battle with the Welſh in 1163, which occaſioned the defeat of the Engliſh, was deprived of all his eſtates. He had two ſons—— Henry, and Hugh, both knights (c).

In 1210, and 1211, Henry de Theydene held 3 knights fees, that had been Henry de Eſſex's, of the Honor of Raleye (d).

Soon after, this eſtate was in the Lord Robert de Brus, Brews, or Brywes; in exchange, or recompence, for other lands he had yielded to Robert de Wallerand. Under him, John de Lexenton held this maner, containing 3 carucates of land, by the ſervice of 2 knights fees. He had licence in 1250, to make a Park in Theydon, and, in 1253, to hunt in the Foreſt of Eſſex (e). He was Chief Juſtice of all the Foreſts north of Trent, and Governor of ſeveral caſtles in the north; alſo commiſſioner of the Great Seal in 1253 (f). He dyed in 1257.—— Henry de Lexington, Biſhop of Lincoln, was his brother and heir (g). He dying in 1258, his nephews William de Sutton, and Richard de Markham, were his heirs.

This maner being a very fine one, and lying contiguous to Stapleford Tany, Richard de Tany junr. obtained a pretended and fraudulent grant of it; and, under pretence of that grant, ſeized ſome tenements in this pariſh, belonging to Robert de Sutton, the King's enemy during the wars between him and his Barons. But, upon a tryal before the King, in 1265 or 1266, the fraud was diſcovered, and Robert de Brywes remained in quiet poſſeſſion (h).

The Sutton family appears to have been very ſoon after reſtored to their eſtate here; and even to have held the maner, and Advowſon of the living, of Brywes. For Robert de Sutton, who dyed in 1274, held in the vill of Theydon de Monte, of the Honor of Reyley, 1 meſſuage with a vineyard and garden, and 200 acres of arable, 21 of meadow, 61 of paſture, a windmill, an outer wood, 4 l. 5. 6 d. rent of aſſize, with the Advowſon of the Church; doing for it one ſuit from month to month to the Lord of the Honor of Reylye, and yielding to the Lord Robert de Brus a pair of gilt ſpurs, or 6 d. yearly, and ſcutage for 2 knights fees, when levied.—— Richard was his ſon (i). The Sutton family remained poſſeſſed of this eſtate till 1331, when —— John de Sutton, lord of Dudley, granted this maner and advowſon, for twelve years, to Henry de Malyns (k). [Concerning the Sutton Family ſee more in the other Volume, p. 187.] —— Edward de Malyns, a nobleman, preſented to this living in 1335; As did—— Sir Reginald Malyns in 1361 (l).

The latter dyed in 1384, and held, jointly with Florence his wife, this maner as of the Honor of Reyley, by knight's ſervice, and ſuit to the Court at Reyley from month to month. ——Edmund was his ſon (m). We find no further mention of the Malyns family in the Inquiſitions; but they preſented to this living till 1432.

This Eſtate is next ſeen in the Family of Hampden, in an age when there were ſo many changes by confiſcation and forfeiture during the wars between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, that frequently the bare poſſeſſion is to be known.

Thomas Hampden dyed 21 Auguſt 1486. He held the maner of Theydon at the Mount, and Hill-Hall [the firſt time we find it mentioned] and Advowſon of the Church, and 1200 acres of arable, 80 acr. of meadow, 100 of paſture, 100 of wood, in Theydon Gernon; and a tenement called Bordeviles, of the Honor of Rayley; ——John his ſon and heir, was 30 years old (n). His grandſon —— Sir John Hampden dyed 21 Dec. 1553, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, called the maner of Mounthall, and Hill-hall, and then deſcribed as 1000 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 200 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 100 s. rent; holden of the Honor of Raylegh, in ſocage, by fealty, and rent of 3 s. 4 d-—— Edward Ferrers, aged 28 years; and Anne, wiſe of William Paulet, aged 23; were his next heirs (o).

[i] Amongſt the Pleas of the Crown, before Solomon de Rocheſter, and other Juſtices Itinerant, 10 Edw. I. the Jury found thus; 'Hund. de Aungre venit per duodecim 'jurat. De Valettis dicunt quod Robertus de Sutton tenuit 'manerium de Teydon, quod valet per an. 20 l. de domino 'rege in capite; & Richardus de Sutton, filius ejus & heres, 'modo eſt infra etatem & in cuſtodia Dni Regis &c.' This was the form in the Pleas of the Crown in Edw. I's time, and ſome part of Edw. III. There was a Commiſſion of an high nature ſitting every ſeven years to enquire concerning what had paſſed ſince the laſt ſitting. Of murders and miſdemeaners, Of Wards, and whoſe children they were. Therefore the Jury was charged with enquiring de Valettis, a name, which though ſometimes taken for an ordinary ſervant, yet has been appropriated to Officers of the Crown; and indeed to thoſe under age, not being reckoned ſui juris. And ſometimes theſe Preſentments begin with, De Valettis & Puellis, including the Females, of which the King had the right of Wardſhip and marriage as well as of the Males. The Jury find the Biſhop of Lincoln poſſeſſed of the maner, but by what warrant they knew not; therefore the Maner ſhould be ſeized into the King's hands, until, &c. The Biſhop appeared by his attorney, and ſaid, the King had granted the Wardſhip of the lands, and the marriage of the Heirs of Robert de Sutton, to Stephen de Sutton Canon of York, for a fine of 650 marks, till they came of age, and produced the King's charter for the ſame.

Sir John Hampden married Philippa, daughter of John Wilford of London, Gent. by whom he left no iſſue. After his deceaſe, ſhe was remarried, and ſecond wife, to

Sir Thomas Smiith. She was jointured in this Maner and eſtate, of which Sir Thomas purchaſed the reverſion. But he had no iſſue by her, nor by his firſt wife, who was Elizabeth, daughter of William Karkek, or Carkyke, of London Gent. This great man was the ſon of John Smiith of Saffron-Walden in this County Gent. and born in that town 28 March 1514. He was educated at Queen's College in Cambridge, where by ſtudying the beſt ancient authors he acquired a pure elegant Latin and Greek ſtyle; and for his further improvement ſtudied ſome time in the univerſities of France and Italy: So that he became a moſt excellent orator, mathematician, philoſopher, and perfect in ſeveral of the modern languages. In 1548 he was made Secretary of State, and knighted: and employed afterwards in ſeveral embaſſies and negociations of the greateſt importance: and conſtituted Chancellor of the Order of the Garter. He built Hill-Hall, as we ſhall ſhew more at large preſently. But for a fuller account of this accompliſhed ſtateſman and ſcholar, we ſhall beg leave to refer to his Life publiſhed by the induſtrious John Strype, in 1698, and to Biographia Britannica. He dyed 12 Auguſt 1577, and was buried in the Chancel of this Church, where a noble monument is erected to his memory. Beſides the maner of Theydon-mount, alias Mount-hall and Hill-Hall, he held lands and tenements in this pariſh called Bennetts and Skinners, all of the Honor of Rayleigh (p). He had two brothers, John, and George. John was of Walden, and had a ſon, William, who dyed in 1576. George was a merchant in London: His ſon —— Sir William Smiith was a brave ſoldier, and till the age of thirty followed the wars in Ireland, where he was one of the Colonels of the Army. But upon the death of his uncle Sir Thomas, being his heir, he returned here to enjoy his full and fair inheritance; as is ſaid in his epitaph; which he did till his deceaſe 12 Decemb. 1626, being then aged 76. He married Bridget, one of the daughters of Tho. Fleetwood of the Vache in Chalfont St. Giles's in Buckinghamſhire Eſq; by whom he had William, Thomas who dyed young, another Thomas; and 4 daughters.——Sir William, his eldeſt ſon, married, firſt, Helegenwagh, one of the daughters of Edward Viſcount Conway, by whom he had Edward, and two daughters who both dyed young. By his ſecond wife, Anne Croft, he had no iſſue. Departing this life in 1631, in the 32d year of his age, he was buried in this Church, with a monument.——Edward, his ſon, at the age of 15, ſerved volunteer under Prince Rupert in the Civil wars, where he gained great reputation; but dyed at the age of 22, without iſſue. Whereupon his uncle——Thomas Smiith Eſq; came into the eſtates, and was created a Baronet 28 Novemb. 1661. He married, firſt, Johanna daughter of Sir Edward Altham, of Latton, by whom he had eleven ſons and four daughters, whereof 9 ſons ſurvived him. She dying 14 July 1658, he took to his ſecond wife Beatrice, daughter of Francis Viſcount of Valentia, which dyed 26 March 1668, and by her he had no iſſue. After he had lived 66 years with great reputation for Loyalty to his Prince and Conformity to the Church of England in apoſtate Times; and ſerved his King and Country in chief places of truſt and credit in the Country, as is ſaid in his epitaph, he dyed 5 May 1668, and was buried in this Church with a monument.——Sir Edward Smiith, Bart. his eldeſt ſurviving ſon and ſucceſſor, married Jane, daughter of Peter Vandeput of London, Eſq; by whom he had four ſons and two daughters; of which children five dyed in their infancy. He departed this life 24 June 1713, ætat. 76. and was buried in this Church with an epitaph. His only ſon——Sir Edward Smiith, Bart. married, firſt, Anne daughter of Sir Charles Hedges Kt. by whom he had Edward, Charles, Thomas, William, and Peter; and a daughter, dead. After her deceaſe, which happened in October 1719, he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Wood of London Eſq; He dyed 15 Auguſt 1744, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Sir Edward Smiith Bart. who dying without iſſue, the title and eſtate came to his next brother —— Sir Charles Smiith, Bart. the preſent poſſeſſor (q). [See in the other Volume, p. 439.]

the ſeat of the family, ſtands on a great aſcent, or hill, from whence it took its name. Sir Thomas affected to call it Mont-haut in French. He began this ſtately ſtructure near the old Houſe, and as he did not live to finiſh it, made proviſion in his will to have it compleated. The Houſe is quadrangular, with very thick and ſtrong walls, adorned with great columns in imitation of ſtone; and the Court is paved with free ſtone. It has a fine and delightful proſpect all ways, eſpecially ſouth and weſt. The entrance is north-ward, along a very pleaſant Avenue of great length and ſuitable breadth; on each ſide of which are Rows of ſtately elms, with other plantations. Great alterations were made in it by Sir Edward Smiith in the laſt century, and more have been undoubtedly made by his ſucceſſors.

Sir Richard Glynne, Kt. Mr. Joſeph Law, and John Morris, have alſo ſome eſtates in this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, ſtands pleaſantly. It was burnt by lightning, and rebuilt by the firſt Sir William Smiith. It is of one pace with the Chancel. The Tower was ſo denominated from a branch of the Gernon family.

Robert Gernon, or Grenon as he is frequently written in Domeday book, was one of thoſe Chiefs that accompanied William the Conqueror in his Expedition into England, and was very amply rewarded by him, particularly with 31 Lordſhips in this County. He had two ſons, William, and Robert.

William was of Stanſted, and dropping the ſurname of Gernon took that of Montfichet, from the raiſed Mount on which his Caſtle there was built.

Robert, the ſecond ſon, retained the ſurname of Gernon. His ſucceſſors were,——Matthew, or according to others Antony, living in K. Stephen's reign, who by his wife Hodierna de Saucavilla had —— Ralph, who by a ſiſter of William Briewer had his ſon——Ralph Gernon, Kt. a Judge itinerant. He dyed in 1247, leaving by his wife, daughter of . . . Baſſet, William, Edward; and Mary, wife of Robert Mantell. —— Sir William, the eldeſt ſon, of the Council to K. Henry III. and Marſhall of his Houſe, married Beatrix daughter and heir of Henry de Theydon, by whom he had Ralph, Arnulph, and Geffrey. His father Ralph gave him this Lordſhip, which from him took its diſtinguiſhing appellation. [Concerning the Gernon family ſee more above, p. and in the other Volume, p. 179. 181. 576.]

Having thus accounted for the Name of this Pariſh, we proceed to ſhew through whoſe hands it hath paſſed.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign it belonged to Ulmar; but, at the time of the Survey, it was held by Eudo Dapifer [K].

Who were Eudo's immediate ſucceſſors I do not find. Paulinus de Theydon, and Henry de Theydon, had it in the reign of K. Henry III. And Paulin had a Fair and a Market here.

It belonged next to Ralph Gernon abovementioned, who dyed in 1247. He held this maner of Teydene of Margaret Riveres, Lady of the Honor of Ongar, by one fee; and part, of the heirs of Angre, by the third part of a knight's fee. Before his deceaſe, he had given to his ſon John by Hawiſe his wife, this maner of Theydon. But——William Gernon, his eldeſt ſon and heir (r), had afterwards this eſtate. For, at the time of his death in 1259, he held of Lady Dionyſia de Montchenſi 3 parts of a knight's fee in Teydene, worth 4 marks a year; and of Badwin de Liſle 2 knights fees, part whereof lay in this pariſh, worth 100 s. a year, and the reſt in divers counties.——Ralph his next heir was 30 years old (s). [See in the other Volume, p. 179. 181.]

This Maner had been hitherto called only by the general name of Teydene: But about the year 1345 it appears in records by the name of THEYDON GERNON, and ſome parts of it called HEMERHALES, or HEMNALES, PARKHALL or GAYNES-PARK.

Adam de Welles, who dyed in 1345, held the maner of Theydon-Gernon of Thomas Gernon, by the ſervice of 7 s. per annum. And a tenement called Hemerhales, in this pariſh and Theydon-Boys, of John Fitz-Walter, by the ſervice of 26 s. a year. He had alſo Madles in Epping. ——John was his ſon (t). He held this Maner, and 1 meſſuage, 172 acres of arable, 6 acr. of meadow, 12 of wood, 43 of paſture, 68 s. 7 d. rent in this pariſh, Epping at Hethe, and Theydon Bois, jointly with his wife Maud, of Sir Adam de Wells; which maner was holden of Earl Stafford, Reginald Maleyns, the Abbot of Waltham, and Lucy Gernon. He dyed in 1360.——John was his ſon (u). He was afterwards knighted, and at the time of his deceaſe in 1421, held the maner of Parkhall of the heirs of Thomas Gernon; and the maner of Hemnales of Earl Stafford, as of his Caſtle of Ongre; and alſo Madles. His ſon Eudo being dead before him, he was ſucceeded by his grandſon ——Leo de Welles, then 15 years old (w). He held the maner of Park-hall, alias Gayneſpark, Hemnales, and Madles in this pariſh; and 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, and 20 of wood; of Anne Ducheſs of Buckingham, as of her Hundred of Ongre; And the maners of Hemnales and Madles are ſaid here to be members and parcels of Park-hall, and made with it the entire maner called Park-hall, alias Gaynes. He was killed in 1461 at Towton-feild, fighting for K. Henry VI. whereupon his eſtates were con-fiſcated by K. Edward IV. [L]. By his firſt wife, Joane daughter and heir of Sir Robert Waterton, he left Richard his ſon, then 24 years of age (x): and four daughters, Alianor wife of Thomas Lord Hoo and Haſtings; Margaret, of Sir Thomas Dimock; Cecily, of Robert Lord Willoughby, ſecond ſon of Thomas Lord Willoughby; and Catharine of Sir Thomas de la Laund (y).

This eſtate thus eſcheating to the Crown, appears to have been parcelled out: Therefore I ſhall firſt trace down to this time the owners of

The Maner of THEYDON-GERNON.

The manſion houſe, called Garniſh-hall, ſtands about half a mile north-weſt from the Church.

The next poſſeſſor we find of this eſtate, after the attainder of L. de Welles, was Francis Hampden, Eſq; in right of his wife Elizabeth, in the years 1507 and 1535 (z). This Francis was undoubtedly a branch of the Hampdens of the neighbouring pariſh of Theydon-Mount. He appears to have had only daughters, co-heireſſes. One of them moſt probably was Margery, wife of Edward Buſhopp, Gent. At the time of her deceaſe, 20 May 1544, ſhe held this maner of Theydon-Garnon, alias Garnons-hall, with appertenances. She held alſo 17 acres of wood, and the third part of the Advowſon of the Church, of the maner of Gaynes Parkhall, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. 10 d. per ann. She had a ſon,——Edward, then but a month old (a).

Ellen, wife of John Branche, citizen and merchant of London, was another daughter and coheir of Francis Hampden Eſq; She dyed 14 April 1567, and lies buried in this Church with an epitaph. ——John Braunche, her ſon as we believe, who dyed 4 July 1588, held the maner of Garniſhe, alias Theydon-Garniſhe, with a farm called Garniſhe mill, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Lyſle, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaſter, to be divided into three parts. His heirs were, Anne Stonly one of his ſiſters; William Udall, ſon of Mary another of his ſiſters; and Grace Dorrell, Martha Gelbrand, Joanna Bales, and Mary Bery, daughters of Ellen Rowley another of his ſiſters (b). [See above, p. 56.]

Anne, before ſhe took for her ſecond huſband Richard Stonly Eſq; [M] was married to Robert Dun, and had by him Daniel; William M. D. and Samuel.

Sir Daniel Dun, Kt. the eldeſt ſon, held this maner of Garniſhe, alias Theydon Garnon, and 5 parcels of paſture and wood called Hides and Bradleys, of the King as of his Honor of Liſle, otherwiſe Liſky, parcel of his Duchy of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of two parts of a knight's fee, to be divided into three parts. He had alſo a meſſuage here called Barnells, and four parcels of land named Barnefields, Homefields, and Oatfields. He dyed 27 Septemb. 1617, aged 72 (c). By Joanna his wife daughter of William Aubrey Eſq; he had, 5 ſons, and 11 daughters [N]. John, the eldeſt ſon, dying unmarried,——Cæſar Dun Eſq; the ſecond ſon, inherited the eſtates: and, beſides the lands above-mentioned, he had in this pariſh ſome called Maynards, Garniſh-wood, Warleys croft, How-croft, the Copyhold-grounds, Oldberry, and Ten acres. He dyed 27 January 1634, leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of Joſeph Haines Eſq;——Daniel, his ſon, then aged 12 years, and 8 months (d). He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Thornton of Northampton Eſq; and had by her——Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, that became the wife of Ralph Sheldon, of Dichford in Warwickſhire Eſq; (e).

About the year 1660, it was purchaſed by Sir Robert Abdy, of Albins in Stapleford-Abbots, Kt. and Bart. [where ſee a particular Account of the Family] and hath continued ever ſince in his poſterity.

PARKHALL, or GAINS-PARK.

R. Gernon obtained of K. Henry III. a licenſe to incloſe his wood of Tayden, for a Park, called Le Leyt (f); which Park gave name to this eſtate.

The manſion houſe ſtood about two miles north-eaſt from the Church, but is now down.

Of this Maner the noble Family of Welles was poſſeſſed, and alſo of Hemnales, as hath been ſeen above.

[M] By her ſecond huſband Stonly, ſhe had Dorothy, wife of William Dawtrey of Suſſex, and Anne wife of William Higham.

[N] We learn from his epitaph, that he was worthily born, and learnedly brought up, and attained to ſuch perfection and degree of knowledge in the Civil Law, that he was honoured by Qu. Elizabeth with the ſtate of an Ambaſſador, and office of Maſter of Requeſts; whoſe Honour was inlarged by K. James with the order of knighthood, and increaſe of honourable imployment, Dean of the Arches, and Judge of the Admiralty, long living in great Honour in Court and Country. His wife Joanna was daughter of William Aubrey, L L. D. Maſter of Requeſts. She outlived her huſband 27 years, not dying till 26 Decemb. 1640, aged 72. . . . He was by miſtake called in his epitaph Sir Samuel; but the Inquiſition poſt mortem calls him Daniel.——Arms of Dun. Azure, a griffin ſaliant argent, on its ſhoulder a ſpot of ermines.

Upon Leo's forfeiture, K. Edward IV. ſeems to have given it to his own ſecond daughter Cecily, wife of John Lord Welles, ſon of the ſaid Leo de Welles by Margaret Ducheſs of Somerſet his ſecond lady. At leaſt Cecily, at the time of her deceaſe 24 Auguſt 1506, held this maner of Gainſpark-hall, and divers other lands in this pariſh, of Francis Hampden and Elizabeth his wife, in right of the ſaid Elizabeth, as of their maner of Theydon-Garnon, by fealty, and rent of 6 s. per ann. And the maner of Hemnalls, with other lands, of Edward Ogleſthorp, and Joane his wife, in right of the ſaid Joane, as of their maner of Hubberds and Lovaine, by fealty, and yearly rent of 20 s. She had alſo the maner of Maddels; [See above, p. 51.] but all only during the term of her life (g). Her huſband dyed before her, 9 Febru. 1498, leaving only one daughter, which dyed young (h).

This eſtate was next in Sir William Fitz-William, citizen of London, and choſen alderman in 1506 [O]; He held, at the time of his deceaſe, 9 Auguſt 1534, this maner of Gayneſparke-hall, and 3 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 350 of paſture, 250 of wood, and 10 l. 16 s. 6 d. qa. rent in this pariſh; and 6 acres of meadow in Theydon-Boys, of the heirs of Francis Hampden, and by the ſame ſervices as above-mentioned: Alſo the maner of Hemmalls, and 3 meſſuages, 260 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 70 of paſture, 40 of wood, 3 l. 8 s. 4 d. ob. rent, and 2 capons, of the heirs of John Shaw, by fealty, and rent of 26 s. per ann. He had alſo Madells, as above deſcribed, p. 51. and a conſiderable eſtate in Lambourn (i). He had two wives, 1. Anne, daughter of John Hawes, 2. Mildred, daughter of Sir Richard de Sackville of Suſſex. His children, by the firſt, were, William, born in 1504; Richard; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Brudenell; and Anne, wife of Antony Cook of Geddy-hall: And by the ſecond, Francis, Thomas, Chriſtopher; Elianor, wife of Sir Nicolas Straunge, of Norfolk; and Mary, wife of John Shelley, remarried to Sir John Guilford,—— William Fitz-William Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, by Anne his wife daughter of Sir Richard Sabcotts of Elton, had William; Bryan, and John, both which dyed without iſſue; and Chriſtian, married firſt to Richard Wingfeild, afterwards to George Delves, Eſqres. The eldeſt ſon, —— Sir William Fitz-William was much employed in the wars in Ireland, and was four times Lord Deputy, namely in 1559, 1560, 1572, and 1587, and three times one of the Lords Juſtices of that kingdom (k). The time of his death we cannot find. He married Anne, third daughter of Sir William Sidney of Penſhurſt, by whom he had, William, and John; and three daughters, Mary, wife of Sir Richard Deyer; Philippa, wife of Sir Thomas Coningſby; and Margaret of Sir John Byron. She dyed 11 June 1602, and was buried in this Church, with a monument.—— William, the eldeſt ſon, is not mentioned in records. But——John, the ſecond ſon, dyed 15 June 1612, holding in demeſne as of fee this maner of Gaynes-park; and that of Hamnalls, in this and pariſhes adjoyning. His heir was his brother —— Sir William Fitz-William, Kt. then of full age (l). The maner of Madells had been out of this Family ever ſince the year 1553. See above, p. 51. (m). Sir William married Winifred, daughter of Sir Walter Mildmay Chancellor of the Exchequer, and had by her William, and Anne [P].

In 1617, Sir Richard Wingfeild Kt. held the maner of Park-hall (n). And by records it appears, that —— Harriſon Eſq; had it about 1636.

The eſtate has been ſince in the Earls of Angleſea; and upon the death of —— Arthur, late Earl, it came to the Rt. Hon.——Richard Earl of Angleſea.

COOPERSALE.

Is a capital Houſe, about two miles north of the Church. The name doth not occur in records, before K. James Iſt's reign; and therefore need not be fetched from the Saxon. Moſt probably the name was originally Coopers-hall.

It hath been a conſiderable time the reſidence of the Family of Archer. This Family derive themſelves from Simon de Bois, who attended K. Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt, and had a patent then for a penſion of five marks per annum for life. The occaſion of altering his name is thus related. This Simon, at a ſhooting match, with the ſaid King Henry, at Havering at Bower, performed ſo well, that the King ordered his name ſhould be changed to Archer.

[O] He was at firſt a merchant-taylor, and ſome time ſervant to Cardinal Wolſey. And, after the Cardinal's fall, happening to give him kind entertainment at his ſeat at Milton in Northamptonſhire, he was ſent for by K. Henry VIII. and aſked, How he durſt entertain ſo great an enemy to the ſtate. ' His anſwer was, That he had not contemptuouſly or wilfully done it, but only becauſe he had been his maſter, and partly the means of his great fortunes.' The King was ſo pleaſed with this Anſwer, that, ſaying himſelf had too few ſuch ſervants, he immediately knighted him. . . . He gave fifty pounds to mend the High-ways between Coperſale and Chigwell; alſo 100 l. for poor Maids marriages; forgave all his debtors; and did ſeveral other handſom and charitable actions. Stow's ſurvey of London, edit. 1720. book I. p. 262. But all that is related further concerning him, in page 263, col. 1. is a bundle of miſtakes, all that belonging to William Fitz-Williams Earl of Southampton. See Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. II. p. 105.

Simon's ſucceſſors were, —— John, father of another—— John: and —— Richard. The latter had two ſons; of whom —— William, the younger ſon had iſſue —— Henry Archer of this place, Eſq; At the time of his deceaſe, 3 Novemb. 1615, He held a capital meſſuage in which he dwelt, ſituated and being in Cooperſale, in this pariſh, and divers lands, tenements and hereditaments thereto belonging, of Sir Richard Winkfeild, as of his maner of Hemnals, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 6 d. He held alſo of the ſame, tenements and lands called Patches, Drewries, and Plants, alias Fiſhers. Of Sir Daniel Dun, lord of the maner of Theydon-Gernon, he held meſſuages and lands called Peacocks, Brookhouſe, Coſines, Little Strondcroft, &c. And of Sir William Smythe, as of his maner of Theydon Mount, he held a meſſuage and lands in that pariſh called Brookhouſe (o). By Anne his wife, daughter of Simon Crouch, Alderman of London, he had —— John, his ſon and heir, born in the latter end of the year 1598. He applied himſelf to the ſtudy of the law, and was called to the degree of a Serjeant 1 June 1660, and conſtituted one of the Judges of the Common Pleas 4 Novemb. 1663. He dyed 8 February 1681-2, and was buried in this Church, with a monument. By Elianor his wife, daughter of Sir John Curſon of Kedleſton in Derbyſhire, he had John, and Elianor. —— John his ſon dying without iſſue, Elianor his ſiſter inherited. She was the firſt wife of Sir Walter Wrotteſly of Wrotteſly in Shropſhire Bart. and left only a daughter; named Elianor, upon whom her uncle Mr. Archer ſettled the eſtate. She became wife of William Eyres Eſq; who had ſeveral children by her, but all dead. He married for his ſecond wife Suſan, daughter of Sir John Newton of Barrows-Court in Glouceſterſhire Bart. —— John Archer Eſq; is his ſon and heir [Q]. He hath married Mary, ſiſter of the Rt. Hon. Earl Fitz-William.

Jernegan Cheveley Eſq; of the Six Clarks Office, hath a ſeat here.

Mr. John Archer; William Cole; Samuel, and Philip, Martin; John, and Richard, Palmer; Edward Smith; Richard, John, and William, Rogers; William Kidd; Samuel Willingale; John, and Thomas, Biſhop; Tho: Scales, &c. have alſo ſome eſtates in this pariſh.

Anne Lady Fitz-William, mentioned above, appointed by her will an Hoſpital to be erected within this pariſh for the perpetual maintenance of four poor Widows, and their ſucceſſors; and gave to every of them twelve pence a week (p).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle. But the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tyled. It appears by a free ſtone, inlaid in brick on the ſouth-ſide of the Steeple, that Sir John Croſbie was a conſiderable contributor to the building this Steeple. He was knighted in the field by K. Edw. IV. in 1471, was Alderman of London, Sheriff in 1470, and built Croſbie-Place in Biſhop's-gate-ſtreet.

The time of his death was in 1475 (q). But the date on the ſtone is 1520. From which it is concluded, that the building was then finiſhed, and that Money having been collecting for it ſeveral years, a good ſum was 'gevyn out of 'his godys toward the makyng of this ſtepyl:' as the words of the inſcription are.

This Rectory was originally in the gift of the Gernon family: of which we find this further account. After Ralph above-mentioned followed —— Sir William Gernon, father of —— John Gernon of this place, who had a ſon named —— Thomas, father of —— Elizabeth, who was married to . . . Prince. —— John Prince, his nephew and heir, ſucceeded him, and preſented to this living in 1458. How the Advowſon paſſed to all the ſucceeding patrons doth not appear. But it is appendent to the Maner of Gernon, alias Garniſh-hall; hath been in the Abdy family, ever ſince 1660; and is now in the heirs of the late Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. of Albins.

18. THEYDON-BOIS,

is the moſt ſouthern, and the leaſt, of theſe three Pariſhes.

The addition of Bois, ſignifying in French Wood, was annexed to the name, either becauſe it ſtood more among the Woods than the others: Or elſe it received it from ſome ancient poſſeſſors,

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Hacun, and Uluuin, and ſeven Freemen, enjoyed this pariſh; which, at the time of the general Survey, was held by Peter de Valoines [S].

Under Robert de Valoines, in 1166, Oſbert de Thaiden held a knight's fee here: And William de Boſco, one knight's fee, of the new feoffment (r). Alſo the eighth part of a knight's fee in Hertfordſhire (s).

The Maner of THEYDON-BOIS belonged afterwards to John de Tany, ſon of Sir Peter de Tany, who gave it, in K. Henry the third's reign, to Waltham-Abbey (t) [T]. They remained poſſeſſed of it till the ſuppreſſion, when it was valued at 8 l. a year; clear.

The demeſnes of this Maner were then very extenſive, but have ſince been much leſſened, by the owners ſelling off conſiderable parcels from time to time.

This eſtate remained in the Crown till 1551, when K. Edward VI. granted it to Sir Thomas Wrothe (u), whoſe Family is ſeen at Loughton. He dyed 9 October 1573, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, which he held of the Queen by knight's ſervice.——Robert, his ſon and heir (w), knighted in 1603, ſucceeded him; and, at the time of his deceaſe, 27 January 1605, had not only this maner, and demeſnes, but alſo Great Bardfield, and other immenſe eſtates in this and other Counties. [See under Loughton, and in the other Volume, p. 519. 616.]——Sir Robert, his ſon, was then aged 30 years (x). He had the ſame eſtates as his father; and dyed 14 May 1614, leaving——James, his ſon, only 5 weeks old (y). He dying 4 July 1616,——John Wrothe Eſq; his father's brother ſucceeded him (z).

It was ſoon after purchaſed by Edward Elrington: who had before a Maner in this pariſh, called

BIRCH-HALL.

The manſion-houſe ſtands on a hill, in the road from Waltham-Abbey to Affe-bridge: It had been the reſidence of the Elrington family, ever ſince their being poſſeſſed of the great Tithes of this pariſh.

As we do not hear of two Maners in this pariſh whilſt Waltham-Abbey enjoyed it; 'tis probable, that this part, erected into a Maner, was purchaſed of the Wroth Family.

Edward Elrington Eſq; who dyed 4 April 1578, held this capital meſſuage, called Burch-hall, of Robert Wroth Eſq; as of his maner of Taydon-Boyes, by fealty, in ſocage. His ſon ——Edward Elrington Eſq; held the capital meſſuage called Birch-hall, of the King, by the ſame ſervice as the maner of Theydon-Boyes was then holden, by reaſon of the unity of their poſſeſſion. He held alſo the maner of Theydon Boyes, with divers lands, hereditaments &c. in this pariſh, and in Theydon-Gernon, and Mount, Lamborne, Loughton, Epping, &c. of the King in ca. by the 100th part of a knight's fee: And lands and tenements parcel of Birch-hall, called Little and Great Gaunts, in Loughton. [See in the other Volume, p. 566. 586. 607.] He dyed 3 Auguſt 1618.——Edward Elrington, his ſon and heir, was then near 17 years old (a). This ſhews, that the Elrington-family purchaſed the maner of Theydon Bois between the years 1578 and 1618.

About the year 1656, they ſold all their eſtate here to John Smart, of London, merchant: whoſe eldeſt ſon ——John ſucceeded him; and having no iſſue, it came to his two brothers, Joſeph, and Benjamin.——Joſeph, who had the whole at length, was Sheriff of this County in 1685; an Alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1699; and a Knight. He was buried here in 1702, with Anne his wife, of the family of Hoſkins of Oxted in Surrey. She dyed in 1701. By her he had, Elizabeth, wife of John Lethieullier Eſq; [See above, p. 27.] Anne wife of Tho. Barrington of Tofts Eſq; and —— Benjamin Smart Eſq; his ſon and heir, of the Middle Temple [U].

It was purchaſed ſome time after by Robert Meggot Eſq; who dyed in 1721, and is buried here. He left a ſon named ——John, and a daughter.

There is no Court kept at Theydon hall, but at Birch-hall, and ſometimes on Theydon-green.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. A little wooden Turret, with a ſpire ſhingled, contains 3 Bells.

This Church was given by William de Boſco to the Priory of St. Bartholomew's Weſt Smithfield, and confirmed by K. Henry the third's Charter, 15 June 1253 (b). They preſented to it twice as a Rectory, and then the whole Tithes being appropriated to them, it became only a Curacy, and ſo continues, ſupplied now by ſuch Clergyman as the Impropriator nominates, and the Biſhop licenſes. It is augmented, by Qu. Anne's Bounty.

The Tithes, after the diſſolution, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1543, to Edward Elrington, Eſq; above-mentioned (c). He was chief Butler of England to K. Edward VI. Qu. Mary, and Qu. Elizabeth. [See in the other Volume, p. 590.] It continued in his poſterity, with the reſt of the pariſh (d), till 1656, when it was ſold to . . . John Smart Eſq; and hath paſſed as the reſt of the eſtates.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 981 l. 2 s. 2 d.

19. LOUGHTON.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written in records Lochintun, Lockton, Loketon, Lucton, Lukentone; and derived from the Saxon words Loc, an incloſure, and tun, a town, a village; or perhaps from the word Lowe.

It is one of the ſeventeen Lordſhips wherewith Earl Harold endowed his Monaſtery of Waltham (e). 'Tis entered in Domeſday-book under Becontree-Hundred [W].

This eſtate continued in the Canons of Waltham Holy Croſs till their ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown; being then valued at 46 l. per ann. clear.

The 15th of April 1558, Qu. Mary annexed the Lordſhip and Maner of Lucton, with ſeveral others, to the Duchy of Lancaſter (f).

LOUGHTON-HALL,

the Maner-houſe, ſtands near the Church.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted this maner of Lucton, alias Loughton, and the Advowſon of the Church, among many other great eſtates, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (g).

It was in the Crown again in 1569 (h).

The Wroth family mentioned above under Theydon-Bois, became poſſeſſed of it ſoon after; by the marriage of Suſan, daughter of Francis Stonard of this place, Gent.

The Stonards had been ſeated here ſome time. For John Stonnard Gent. who dyed 19 June 1541, is buried in the north aiſle of the Chancel of this Church, with his wives Joane and Catharine. George Stonard preſented to this Rectory in 1554, jointly with Edward Stacy (i). And the ſaid George dying 25 Novemb. 1558, was buried in ſame aiſle, with his wife Mary. At the man's feet were the effigies of ſeveral ſons, and at the woman's the effigies of 6 daughters (k). Francis Stonard Eſq; one of the ſons, dyed 13 Septemb. 1604 (l).

As for the Wroth family, they derived themſelves from John Wroth, Mayor of London in 1361. His ſon —— Robert, by —— daughter of Sir Thomas Lewkenor had —— Thomas, who, by his wife Margaret Newdigate, had—— Robert Wroth, of Durance in Enfeild: He married Jane, daughter of Thomas Hawte, by whom he had Thomas; Dorothy wife of Edw. Lewkenor; and John.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, by his wiſe, Mary, daughter of Sir Robert Riche, had 4 ſons.

——Sir Robert Wroth of Durance, the eldeſt ſon, married Suſan, daughter and heir of Francis Stonard of Loughton, and had by her Thomas, who dyed without iſſue; Robert; John, of Durance; and Henry of Woodbury in Hertfordſhire. At the time of his deceaſe, 27 January 1606-7, he held a meſſuage with appertenances, in this pariſh, called Buckhurſt [X], of the King, as of his maner of Eaſt-Greenwich.

He was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Sir Robert, then 30 years old (m); who dyed 14 May 1613, holding, among other things, the maner of Loughton, alias Luckton, with appertenances, of the King, as of his maner of Endfeild, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaſter, by fealty only, in free and common ſocage [Y]. By Mary his wife, eldeſt daughter of Robert Sidney Earl of Leiceſter, he left —— James his ſon only 5 weeks old (n). This infant departing this life 5 July 1616, was ſucceeded by his father's brother—— John Wroth, of Durance Eſq; then 38 years old (o). He married Maud, daughter of Richard Lewellin, widow of Gregory Leonard, and had by her—— John, who by his wife, Elizabeth fourth daughter of William Lord Maynard, left—— John Wroth Eſq; one of the Verdurers of Waltham Foreſt. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Wroth of Durance Bart. a woman of a martial ſpirit, who attended him in K. William's Campaigns. He departed this life 3 April 1718; and having no iſſue, left this eſtate [Z], after his wife's deceaſe, to

The Rt. Hon. William-Henry, Earl of Rochford. In 1745, his Lordſhip ſold it for the ſum of 24,500 l. to William Whitaker Eſq; of Lime-ſtreet London; choſen Alderman of that Ward in 1746, one of the Sheriffs of the ſaid City in 1750, but did not live to be Lord Mayor. He ſettled this eſtate and maner on his ſecond wife, Anne, now living; and, after her death, on his youngeſt daughter, Anne. He had alſo a daughter by his firſt wife, to whom he left a large fortune.

It is ſaid that in 1688, the Princeſs of Denmark, afterwards Queen Anne, retired to Loughton-hall, when ſhe ſaw how things were going on with her ill-adviſed father.

Sir William Johnſon; John Eyre, and Sackville Bate, Eſqres. and Mr. Thomas Shelley, have alſo ſome eſtates in this pariſh.

The pariſh receives 20 s. a year, part of Robert Rampſton's benefaction, ſo often mentioned.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, conſiſts of a body, and a north-aiſle the length both of Church and Chancel; all tyled. In a belfrey, with a Spire ſhingled, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory belonged to Waltham-Abbey till its diſſolution. After that, in 1554, George Stonard, and Edward Stacy preſented once, by virtue of a turn granted them by the Abbey. The Crown preſented next from 1555, to 1609. Then it came into the Wroth family; and is now we ſuppoſe in Mrs. Whitaker.

20. CHIGWELL, is the moſt ſouthern part of this Hundred. In records the name is written Cingwell; which was undoubtedly formed from the two Saxon words; Cinᵹ, and ƿelle, that is King's Well. For the Saxons uſe C inſtead of K. which they pronounce ſtrong like it. The name was occaſioned by a Well in Chigwell-Row behind the wind-mill, among the trees, whoſe water has a purging quality; and the late Dr. Frewin uſed to ſpeak in its favour. That celebrated Phyſician was born in Chigwell-Row, in an old manſion houſe, now pulled down, once belonging to the Pelling family, and afterwards to the Frewins. Here the Doctor's mother dyed, and he uſed to viſit the place every two or three years till his deceaſe. Near this well, there is a Hole, or hollow place, wherein is a Water of the ſame nature, perhaps proceeding from the other. In Havering Liberty, there is alſo another purging Water, in a Well near Bone, or rather Bourn, Bridge, under which runs a ſmall ſtream of common water.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written in records Cingheuuella, Cinguehella, Chiwellia, Chickwell, Gykewell.

In this pariſh are three capital Maners, 1. Chigwell-hall. 2. Barringtons, or Rolls. 3 Wolſton-hall.

The firſt, now called Chigwell-hall, was, before the Conqueſt, held by Earl Harold of Edward the Confeſſor.

At the time of the Survey, the poſſeſſor of it was Ralph de Limeſei, who had alſo Brundon, and one more Maner, in this County [A].

Ralph de Limeſei was ſeated at Ulverlei in Warwickſhire; of which He and his poſterity bore the title of Barons. A grandſon of his, of the ſame name, was ſucceeded by his ſon—— Alan, father of —— Gerard de Limeſei. The latter had 6 children; Alianor; John; Alan; Gerard, Amabilla, which three laſt dyed without iſſue; and Baſilia.——John, by Alice de Harecourt, had his ſon —— Hugh; who dying without iſſue in 1213, his two aunts Alianor, and Baſilia, became his coheirs. Alianor was married to David de Lindſey, and Baſilia to Hugh de Odingſells (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 316.]

Alan de Limeſei above-mentioned gave all his land of Chiggewill, with appertenances, to Richard de Luci, and his heirs; to hold of him and his heirs in fee and perpetuity, by the ſervice of one knight: which grant was confirmed by his ſon Gerard de Limeſei; and for the ſame Richard gave him three marks of ſilver; and his ſon Geffrey de Luci a gold ring, when he became his liege.—— Afterwards, Richard de Luci granted this land of Chiggewill, with all its appertenances, to

Ralph Briton, to hold of him and his heirs in fee, as above. Next,

Richard de Luci yielded to William de Goldingham, and his heirs, his inheritance of Chigwell; to hold of him and his heirs, by the ſervice of one knight; and received his homage, for the love of Ralph Briton, and at his petition. Upon that, at the requeſt of the ſaid William, Richard de Luci, when he received his homage before the Barons of the Exchequer, granted and confirmed to——Robert, ſon of Ralph, Briton, his maner of Chigwell, with all its appertenances, in fee and for ever; by the ſervice of one knight to the ſaid William. And this William de Goldingham granted to Robert Briton, and his heirs, all his land of Chigewell with its appertenances, in fee and for ever; to hold of him and his heirs, by the ſervice aforeſaid; And for this grant he became his liege; paid him 20 marks of ſilver; and he received his homage before the Barons of the Exchequer (q). All this was in the reign of K. Henry II.

For ſeveral years this Maner continued in the Goldingham Family; and they held it of the Lords Fitz-Walter.——John de Goldingham held one fee in Chigwell, under Robert Fitz-Walter who dyed in 1328. And ſo did—— Sir Alexander de Goldingham under Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1386 (r).

The Goldingham-family had alſo the Advowſon of this Rectory from 1331 to 1386. And it was next in——John Lord Bourchier, and Sir Bartholomew Bourchier (s), from whence it might be inferred that they had alſo the Maner, but of this we have no certain evidence.

It was next in Mannock family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 232. 361. 456.

John Mannock, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Chigwell-hall; and other lands and tenements here, of Anne Ducheſs of Buckingham, by knight's ſervice, as of her Hundred of Ongre, by the rent of 3s. 4d. per ann. He had alſo other eſtates in this County [B].——George Mannock was his ſon and heir (t). In June 1534, he, and his ſon William with his wife Audry or Etheldred, paſſed by fine, for 1000 marks, the Maners of Chigwell and Weſt Hache, with appertenances, deſcribed to be 6 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 300 acr. of meadow, 300 of paſture, 80 of wood, and 12 l. rent in this pariſh, and Theydon, Lambourn, and Berking; to Sir Thomas Audeley, Lord Chancellor; Sir Brian Tuke, Treaſurer of the King's Chamber; Thomas Cromwell Eſq; Maſter of the Jewels; and Chriſtopher Hales, Attorney-general; the right of the ſaid Thomas Audeley (u). It ſeems to have been purchaſed for the uſe of the Crown. For, 24 July 1550, K. Edward VI. granted the maners of Chigwell and Weſt-Hatch to

Sir Thomas Wrothe, to hold of the King by the 40th. part of a knight's fee (w). He had it at the time of his deceaſe 9 October 1573. as alſo his ſon——Sir Robert Wrothe, 27 January 1605. And——Sir Robert Wrothe, Kt. ſon of the laſt, who dyed 14 May 1614 (x). For a further account of the Wrothe family, ſee under Theydon-Bois and Loughton. It continued in that family till 1669, when they ſold it to

Sir William Hickes. Having traced this family down to the year 1720, I ſhall now bring it to this preſent time.—Sir Harry Hickes having ſold Rockholt's, in 1720, built a plain brick houſe here called The Bowling Green, almoſt oppoſite to Weſt-Hatch, in which he dyed   His eldeſt ſon——Robert having the unhappineſs of being blind, he left his eſtates from him to his ſecond ſon —Michael, who dying in March 1764, gave by

But he ſettled one hundred pounds per annum on Michael, the ſon of his youngſt ſiſter, widow of Michael Burton D. D.

Sir Harry ſold Chigwell-hall, the maner-houſe, and farm, to William Davy Eſq; Treaſurer of St. Luke's Hoſpital.

But the Maner remains in the Hickes family. Their ſhare in the Foreſt is at leaſt 1300 acres.

WEST-HATCH, a nominal maner above-mentioned, belongs alſo to this family. The Houſe ſtands about 3 quarters of a mile ſouth ſouth-weſt from the Church, and is a tolerably handſom houſe, in which lived the late Sir William Nutt. This Houſe, and what land belonged to it, was purchaſed by James Crokatt Eſq; of Luxboroughs. — Weſt-hatch and Buckhurſt belonged to Walter Writell in 1475 (y).

The Maner of BARRINGTONS, now called ROLLS.

The manſion houſe, called Rolls, is about a mile north from the Church. It was purchaſed, with the Park and land about it, by Sir Eliab Harvey.

This ſeems to be the eſtate which Anſchetill held of Robert Gernon, at the time of the Survey; but had belonged, in the Confeſſor's reign, to one Doth [C]. How it came into the Houſe of De Vere appears not; but about the reign of K. Stephen, or Henry II. Alberic de Vere granted it to Sir Humfrey, ſon of Sir Euſtace de Barinton [D].

From the Feodary of the De Veres Earls of Oxford, it is manifeſt, that the following perſons of the name of Barrington, held this maner under them.——George Barington in 1263.—— William Barington in 1270. —— George Barington in the reign of K. Edward I.——Geffrey Barington in 1429. ——John Barington in 1447, ——Thomas Barington in 1466.——Margaret, wife of Thomas Barrington, that dyed in 1479, held, jointly with him, the maner of Little Chigwell called Barrington's maner, of Anne Ducheſs of Buckingham, as of her Hundred of Aungre, by the ſervice of doing ſuit at the Sheriff's turn of that Hundred, and rent of 6 d. per ann. —— Humfrey Barrington was their ſon and heir (z).——Sir Nicolas Barrington did homage at Caſtle Hedingham, in 1512, for this maner: and held it, at the time of his deceaſe, 22 July 1515, by the name of the maner of Chigwell with appertenances, of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, during the minority of John de Vere Earl of Oxford. —— John Barrington, his ſon and heir, was 6 years old (a). At the time of his deceaſe, 23 Septemb. 1537, he held this maner of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Honor of Henningham-Caſtle. —— Thomas was his ſon and ſucceſſor (b).

Some names in the Feodary above-mentioned are not in the pedigree of the Barrington-family, namely two Georges, William, and Geffrey. To reconcile that, we muſt ſuppoſe that Chigwell was held by a younger branch, and returned to the elder. [See in the other Volume, p. 503. &c.]

William Tiffin did homage for this maner in 1573. It appears after that in the Wiſeman family, of Great Waltham. [See in the other Volume, p. 88.] For Thomas Wiſeman Eſq; who dyed 15 July 1584, held the maner of Barringtons: leaving Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiſeman, his daughters and coheirs (c).——John Wiſeman, of Stiſted, who dyed 20 Decemb. 1616, had the reverſion of this maner. [See in the other Volume, p. 390.]—— Thomas his ſon (d) ſold it to

John Hawkins. And he, or his ſon, alienated it to Eliab Harvey. Of the conſiderable Family of Harvey we have the following account. Thomas Harvey of Folkſtone in Kent, Gent. by Joane Halke his wife had ſeven ſons; 1. William. M. D. [See in the other Volume, p. 530.] 2. Thomas, who had John Harvey, of Antwerp. 3. John, Member of Parliament for Hythe, in 1640. 4. Daniel, father of Daniel, of Combe Nevill in Surrey, Embaſſador to the Porte. 5. Eliab, of Bread-ſtreet, London. 6, and 7. Matthew, and Michael, twins. Matthew purchaſed the maner and advowſon of Langford in this County, and dyed without iſſue, as did the eldeſt and third ſons. The ſix youngeſt being bound apprentices in London, and at laſt becoming conſiderable Merchants, got large fortunes, of which they made their father treaſurer: and he being as ſkilful in purchaſing lands, as they in getting money, he lived to ſee the meaneſt of them of far greater eſtate, than himſelf (e).

Eliab Harvey, the fifth ſon, was he who ſettled here; and dying 27 May 1661, aged 72, was buried at Hempſted in this County; as were alſo Sarah, and Elizabeth, two of his daughters, and Mary his widow, who dyed 30 Decemb. 1673, aged 67. His eldeſt daughter, Mary, was wife of Sir William Whitmore of Aſley in Shropſhire, Bart. which dyed 30 Janu. 1710, aged 64. —— Sir Eliab Harvey, Kt. the eldeſt ſon and heir, married . . . daughter of Sir William Whitmore, Bart. and had Eliab, who dyed 3 June 1681, at the age of 22. William; Matthew, that deceaſed 23 Janua. 1692, aged 23 years: and Elizabeth, wife of Edward Harvey of Combe, Eſq; She dyed 15 Janua. 1695. Sir Eliab was choſen one of the knights in Parliament for this County in 1678, and Burgeſs for Malden in 1695, and dying 20 Februa. 1698, aged 64 years, was buried at Hempſted. ——William, the eldeſt ſurviving ſon, was elected one of the Knights for this ſhire in 1722. He married Dorothy, ſole daughter and heir of Sir Robert Dycer of Uphall in Braughing in Hertfordſhire Bart. by whom he had William; Eliab. that dyed young: Dorothy, wife of Sir Philip Monoux of Wotton in Bedfordſhire, Bart. Mary, wife of Sir Edmund Anderſon, of Broughton in Lincolnſhire, Bart. and Agnes, of Pulter Forreſter, of Hertfordſhire, Eſq; He dyed 30 Octob. 1731, aged 68.—William, his eldeſt ſon and heir, married Mary, one of the daughters and coheirs of Ralph Williamſon of Berwick in the County of Northumberland Eſq; and had by her 3 ſons, William; Eliab, now King's Counſel, and member of parliament for Dunwich; Edward, Major, and Adjutant General, and alſo member of parliament for Gatton; and two daughters. He departed this life 25 Decemb. 1742, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon —— William Harvey Eſq; choſen one of the Knights of Parliament for this County in three Parliaments, in 1747. 1754. and 1761. The 14th. of Auguſt 1750, he married Emma, eldeſt daughter of Stephen Skynner of Waltham-Stow Eſq; He dyed 11 June 1763, leaving——William, his eldeſt ſon and heir, a minor, two other ſons, and three daughters; to whom his widow, to her great honor, acts a truly motherly part.

The maner of Barringtons was once divided between the Families of Harvey, and Comyns. But the former hath now the whole, having purchaſed the half of the Comyns family, or of Sir Hugh Myddelton, Bart. father of the late Sir Hugh, whoſe mother was a Comyns. That family is extinct [E].

The Maner of WOLVERSTON, or WOOLSTON, is the next conſiderable Maner in this pariſh. The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half north from the Church.

This ſeems to have been anciently a Pariſh of itſelf, or at leaſt a very conſiderable Hamlet, and united to Chigwell, ſince the Conqueſt. There belonged to it a Church, or at leaſt a Chapel.

The name of it is written in records theſe other different ways, Ulſelmeſtun, Wolfamſton, Wolfhameſtone, Wolſton, or Woolſton, Woolhampton, Woolverhampton, Wolvermeſton, &c. and was undoubtedly taken from a Saxon owner, named Wulfham, or Wulfhelm, and ꞇun, town.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to Earl Harold; and a freeman had 20 acres: At the time of the Survey, it was part of the royal demeſnes, and was farmed by the King to the Sheriff [F].

After having continued ſeveral years in the Crown, it was granted by K. Henry II. to a Family ſurnamed de Sandford, to hold by grand ſerjancy; namely of finding a Damſel to wait in the Queen's chamber on the day of her Coronation (f) [G].——Alice daughter and heir of Gilbert de Sandford, being in ward to Fulk Baſſet, biſhop of London, for which wardſhip the Biſhop had given the King 1000 marks; He, in 1248, ſold the wardſhip and marriage of the ſaid Alice to Hugh de Vere [H], the 4th. Earl of Oxford, for five years, whether ſhe lived or dyed. And he gave her to his eldeſt ſon

Robert de Vere, the 5th. Earl of Oxford, who in her right became Baron Sanford, among his other titles. By this lady he had his ſon and ſucceſſor, Robert de Vere, the 6th. Earl of Oxford, and a daughter named

Joane, that became the wife of William, eldeſt ſon of John Plantagenet, Earl of Warenn and Surrey: Upon whoſe marriage, this maner, and others [I], were ſettled upon them, and their iſſue, in 1284 (g). But they lived a very little while together, the huſband dying in December 1285, and leaving her with child of a ſon, born the 27th. of June following, that was named ——John. Her father, the Earl of Oxford, enjoyed this maner till his deceaſe in 1295, at which time it was held of William le Plomer, by the rent of 10 s. per ann. the reverſion of it being in the heirs of Earl Warenn (h). John Earl of Warenn dyed 30 June 1347, without lawful iſſue; whereupon this eſtate, and the reſt of his inheritance, fell to his ſiſter

Alice, wife of Edmund Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel (i).

In 1323, this Edmund Earl of Arundel, Lord of Wolfamſton, claimed Common for himſelf and tenants in Hyneholt, with houſebote, hay, or hedge, bote, and firebote, in his own woods without view of the woodwards, and freedom from gelt, toll, paſſage, and expediating his Dogs. The Earl, and Alice his wife, had alſo licence to impark fifty acres in their own maner, within the bounds of the Foreſt of Eſſex (k). This Earl was beheaded in 1326. His ſon ——Richard, being reſtored in blood, enjoyed this eſtate, till his death, 24 January 1375.—— Richard, his ſon, loſt it by his attainder, and his ſubſequent execution 21 October 1397. But his ſon ——Thomas was reſtored to his honors and eſtates. He held this maner of Wolfhampſton near Chigwell of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice. Having no iſſue, he was, on his deceaſe 13 October 1414, ſucceeded by his 3 ſurviving ſiſters, 1. Elizabeth, then wife of Sir Gerard Ufflet, married before to Thomas Moubray Duke of Norfolk and two other huſbands; 2. Joanna, wife of William Beauchamp, Lord Bergavenny; 3. Margaret, wife of Sir Rowland Lenthall. Alice, another ſiſter he had, who had been married to John Charleton Lord Powis, was then dead (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 53. 463. 465. 498.] Edmund, ſon of Sir Rowland Lenthall, dying without iſſue in 1450, his ſhare, the third part of this maner, came to the two other coheirs (m).

Margaret, wife of Norman Babington, ſeems to have brought him one of theſe third parts. For, at the time of his deceaſe in 1433, he held a third part of this maner: As ſhe herſelf did at the time of her deceaſe in 1451. And her heirs were, Elizabeth wife of William Hungate, and Beatrix wife of Robert Conſtable, both of Yorkſhire, daughters of William Neffeld brother to the ſaid Margaret (n). She was undoubtedly a deſcendent from one of the three ſiſters of Thomas Earl of Arundel.

John Moubray, Earl of Norfolk, who dyed in 1461, held a moiety of this maner, of the King, in capite (o).——John his ſon, Earl of Warenn and Surrey, dyed in January 1497. From him it came to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, who was ſlain at Boſworthfield 22 Auguſt 1485, and attainted.

This eſtate becoming then veſted in the Crown, was granted about the beginning of K. Henry VIIth's reign, to William Scott Eſq; ſeated at Stapleford-Tany, and lineally deſcended from Sir William Scott, Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and Juſtice of the Foreſts in the reign of K. Edward III. made Serjeant at law in 1335; Juſtice of the Common Pleas, 18 March 1338; Juſtice of the King's Bench, 2 May 1340; Chief Juſtice of the ſame, 8 Janu. 1341; and Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, 27 April 1342. He ſeems to have been advanced again to the King's Bench in 1343. He dyed in 1346. The preſent worthy owner of Wolverſton-hall, George Scott Eſq; is in poſſeſſion of his papers, and of the ſilver Cup he uſed to drink out of.

William Scott Eſq; the grantee of this eſtate, ſon, I take it, of Sir John Scott of Eaſt-Tilbury, married Margery, daughter and heir of Thomas Swynborne, of Yorkſhire, Eſq; and had by her ſix ſons, John the elder, William, Edward, John the younger, George, and Hugh; and two daughters, Joane, and Elizabeth. He dyed 3 Novemb. 1491, and was buried in Stapleford-Tany-Church, with his wife Margery, who dyed 14 October 1505 (p). He held, at the time of his deceaſe, this maner of Woolhampton, with appertenances, of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice: and the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Howſham-hall, Langtons; and Margaret-Inge.——John Scott ſenr. his eldeſt ſon and heir, was then 35 years old (q). He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Draxe of Berkſhire, by whom he had three ſons, George of this place; Thomas of Stapleford-Tany; who married Mary daughter of Sir Thomas Urſwick, and had by her Walter; John, of the ſame pariſh, and alſo owner of the maners of Little Lees-hall, and Langtons, who dyed 6 Febru. 1526; and William, of Oveſham-hall, who departed this life 20 Janua. 1531 (r).——George Scott Eſq; above-named held this maner, containing 10 acres of arable, 24 of meadow, 80 of paſture, 8 of wood, and 9 l. rent; and dying in

He married Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Belknap, and had by her Roger, Edward, John, Richard, Walter; Elianor, wife of . . . . . Michell; and Mary. At the time of his deceaſe, he was poſſeſſed not only of this maner of Wollehampton, alias Worſon-hall, but alſo of thoſe of Stapleford-Tany, Oveſham, and Little Lees. By his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John Leeds of Steyning in Suſſex, he had George, Richard, William, and another Richard. He dyed 9 September 1586 (u).——George, his eldeſt ſon and heir, dyed 3 Febru. 1588; aged 29 years. By Dorothy his wife, daughter of John Franck of Hatfeild-broad-oak, and of Duton-hill in Great Eaſton, he left two daughters, coheirs, Elizabeth, 1 year old; and Mary 41 weeks, and 4 days. He had the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Howeſham-hall, and Little Leighs, (w), which his eldeſt daughter, Elizabeth, brought in marriage to Sir Edward Alleyn of Hatfeild-Priory. But the maner of Wolverſton-hall, had been given by the father to his brother William, that married Prudence, daughter and coheir of Edmund Alabaſter, of Bretts-hall in Tendring Eſq; His ſon——George Scott Eſq; of Lincoln's-inn, married, in 1641, Joane, daughter of William Towſe Eſq; ſerjeant at law, remarried to George Brett; and had by her——George; who by his wife Elizabeth, third daughter of Robert Cheyne, of Bramhanger in Bedfordſhire Eſq; had William, George, Lætitia, and Heſter. He dyed 15 October 1683, aged 61, and ſhe 27 July 1705, eighty five years old: and both lie buried in this Church; with a monument. —— William, the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Catharine, daughter of Thomas Luther of Stapleford-Tany Eſq; She dyed 16 October 1710, aged 58, and he 27 June 1725, aged 72. Their children were, George, who dyed un-married 19 Febr. 1726; —— Thomas; Anne, wife of the Rev. Dr. William Derham; and Elizabeth. —— Thomas Scott Eſq; the eldeſt ſurviving ſon and heir, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Hare of Southwark, that dyed 29 March 1720. He himſelf dyed 19 Janu. 1732-3, aged 52 years, leaving his only ſon and heir——George Scott Eſq; born in 1719. He was educated at St. John's-College in Oxford, where he took the degree of Dr. of Laws. To this good man I am greatly indebted for his kind communication of ſeveral curious particulars relating to this Hundred. He married, 13 May 1746, Jane, ſecond daughter of the Right Reverend Dr. Edmund Gibſon, Biſhop of London, my moſt munificent patron.

Oveſham-Hall returned into this family, upon Sir Edmund Alleyn's dying without iſſue male, in 1656. [See in the other Volume p. 499.] [K].

The Maner of GRANGE, was one of the Maners, Granges, or Barns, belonging to Tiltey-Priory. [See in the other Volume, p. 436.]

After the ſuppreſſion, this was granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1537, to Thomas Adington, and his heirs, to hold by the 20th. part of a knight's-fee (x). In 1554, he ſold it to

James Altham Eſq; and doing it without licenſe, was forced to procure a pardon; as was Altham, for ſelling it without a licenſe to Antony Browne Eſq; (y) The latter made it part of the endowment of his Free-School at Burntwood.

It was formerly a Hamlet, now only a Farm, on Grange-hill.

LUXBOROUGH,

ſtands about a mile ſouth-weſt from this Church.

We have no mention of the name, nor any account of the poſſeſſors, of this eſtate, till the beginning of the laſt century. Then, Sir Robert Wrothe, who dyed 27 Janua. 1605, held the maner of Luxborowes, with its appertenances, and a tenement called Shepecotts in this pariſh, of the maner of Chigwell, by fealty &c.—— Sir Robert Wrothe was his ſon (z).

Of ſome of his heirs the demeſnes of this Maner were purchaſed by Robert Knight Eſq; caſhier of the South-Sea Company; who built a fine houſe here. Upon this eſtate's being ſeized and ſold by the South-Sea Company, Sir Joſeph Eyles bought it: He dyed 8 Febru. 1739-40.

After his deceaſe Robert Knight Eſq; purchaſed it again; and dying 8 Novemb. 1744, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Robert Knight Eſq; created, 26 July 1746, Baron Luxborough of Shannon, and in 1763 Earl of Catherlough, in Ireland. The 30th. of July 1747, his Lordſhip contracted with Thomas Braddyll Eſq; for the ſale of this eſtate, for the ſum of 19500 l. Governor Braddyll dying before Henry Knight, only ſon and heir of the Lord Luxborough (in whom was the remainder in tail-male) attained his age of 21 years, which was not till 25 December 1749; it was purchaſed by James Crokatt Eſq; who reſides in it, and hath married a daughter of Peter-Darnel Muilman Eſq;

As to the Maner of Luxborough it is, with the Maner of Weſt-Hatch, in the Hickes family.

Poteles, alias Langford-Place.

Here has been a Royal Houſe and Lodge, perhaps as antient as any thing in the Foreſt. K. Henry VIII. 28 Febru. 1512, having before granted to Sir John Riſley, among other things, the keeping his Palace in the pariſh of Chigwell, within his Foreſt of Waltham, called Potteles alias Langford's Place with the Lodge annexed; that came into the hands of K. Edward IV. by reaſon of the minority of Edward ſon and heir of George Duke of Clarence, (which Edward was afterwards attainted of high-treaſon in K. Henry VIIth's time,) the King, viz. Henry VIII. on Sir John Riſley's death gave it to William Compton and his heirs (a).

In 1596, 31 January, Qu. Elizabeth granted the reverſion and remainder of the ſame to Thomas Spencer, and others (b). It hath ſince paſſed through ſeveral hands. [See above, p. 18. .]

In Chigwell village, there is a very good Brick Houſe, which was the habitation of the Penington-family even before the year 1620. John Penington Eſq; dyed 21 Novemb. 1702, in the 60th year of his age, and Sarah his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Abdy of Albins, dyed 19 January 1690, in the 42d year of her age (c). John Bramſton Eſq; of Skrene's married Mary one of the daughters, and became in her right poſſeſſed of this houſe and eſtate, till his deceaſe 17 Auguſt 1718. He left three daughters, the ſecond of which, Mary, was married, 17 Novemb. 1730, to the Hon. Edward Byng, fifth and youngeſt ſon of the Lord Viſcount Torrington. After her death, the farms belonging to this Houſe were ſold to Sackville Bale, of Loughton Eſq; who, in conſequence of this purchaſe, ſupports ſome Alms-houſes in Chigwell.

The manſion-houſe, and about 15 acres of land, were bought by Edward Tymewell, Eſq; of the Victualling-Office; after whoſe deceaſe, they were ſold to John Raymond Eſq; the preſent owner.

A Houſe here, formerly belonging to Abp. Harſnet, hath been lately repaired and modernized by a deſcendant of his, Mr. William-Park Fiſher, Jeweller in Taviſtock ſtreet, Covent-Garden.

Appletons, a tenement and lands in this pariſh, were held of John Mannock Eſq; in 1486, by John Coke, a branch of the ſame family as that of Gedding-hall. He had alſo the maners of Gelhowes, or Belhouſe, in Stanford-Rivers; of Chadwell; the tenement called Tyleherſt in South-Weald; and held 400 acres of land, and more, in Weſt-ham, of the Abbot of Stratford (d).

The ſame Abbey of Stratford had, in this pariſh and Woodford, a tenement and curtilage called Buckhurſts alias Monkenhall; concerning which ſee above, p. 39. We cannot trace out the preſent owners of theſe two laſt parcels; moſt probably they are incorporated with ſome of the larger eſtates.

Samuel Harſnet, Archbiſhop of York, once Vicar of this pariſh, founded here, in 1629, two Free-Schools, one called The Grammar, the other The Engliſh, School. In the former, to uſe the Archbiſhop's own words in his ſtatutes, 'the children and youth are to be taught the 'Latin and Greek tongues; in the latter, to 'read, write, cipher, and caſt accompts, and 'their Accidence.' Theſe Schools have 12 Governors or Truſtees, two of which are always to be the Vicar of Chigwell, and the Rector of Loughton, for the time being; and the Biſhop of London perpetual Viſitor.—The Archbiſhop alſo gave 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year, for the relief and maintenance of the poor people living in the Alms-houſe; and 8 or 10 l. a year for maintaining of the high ways.

Beſides the Archbiſhop's ſchools, here is another for the education and cloathing of ten girls, under the care of a treaſurer, principally ſupported by an annual Charity Sermon.

Lands called Cardhams in this pariſh are tyed for the payment of 6 s. 8 d. a quarter to three poor widows in the Alms-houſe. They are, I believe, ſome of thoſe now belonging to Sackville Bale Eſq;

Twenty four two penny loaves are diſtributed every ſunday to the poor.

This pariſh receives alſo 40 s. yearly, part of Mr. Robert Rampſton's benefaction, ſo often mentioned.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle: both Church and Chancel are leaded, and the aiſle tyled. The eaſt end of this aiſle is called the Little Chancel, being the burial place of the ancient family of Scott. The Belfrey is of timber, with a ſpire ſhingled, and in it are 5 Bells.

Here is both a Rectory, which is a fine-cure, and a Vicarage to which the Rector preſents [L]. From the year 1329 to 1406 the Rectory was in lay-patrons; namely the Families of Goldingham, the Lords Bourchier, and Doreward.

In 1439, John Doreward gave the Advowſon of this pariſh Church and Rectory to the Priory of St. Botolphs in Colcheſter; and they procured a licenſe to appropriate it to themſelves and their ſucceſſors: by virtue of which they preſented twice to the Vicarage. But in 1451 and 1466 the Rectors uſed again their right. Soon after, Thomas Kemp, Biſhop of London, founding a Chantry in St. Paul's Church, endowed it with the Advowſon of this Church, and with lands here and at Great Clacton: uniting it to the office of Confeſſor in that Cathedral. Afterwards, in 1474, he appropriated to the Prieſt of that Chantry and Confeſſor the Prebend of St. Pancras; from which time, whoever had that Prebend, was alſo Penitentiary; and as ſuch hath ever ſince been Rector of Chigwell, inveſted with its profits without inſtitution or induction, and patron of the Vicarage [M].

[L] Mr. Newcourt found in the London Regiſtry, that a Rector here, a Pluraliſt, appointed a Vicar without proper authority; that afterwards there were diſputes between Rector and Vicar, till the Vicarage was ſettled by Simon Sudbury Biſhop of London, in 1374. It is poſſible that Woolſton-hall having been diſtinct from Chigwell, had alſo a Church and a ſeparate living, which upon the coalition with Chigwell, might make the Rector a Pluraliſt. But of this no traces are left, any more than of Woolſton's being incorporated with Chigwell, which was once ſeparate. See Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 140.

The great Tithes are held by leaſe upon three lives. The late Sir Joſeph Eyles had them, and now James Crokatt Eſq; of Luxborowes.

21. LAMBORN, otherwiſe written in records Lamburn, derived its name from the Saxon words, Lamb, a lamb, or from Lam, dirt, and buꞃn, brook.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the only poſſeſſor here upon record was Leſſi; and the only one recorded in the Survey, is Euſtace Earl of Bologne, whoſe under-tenant was one David [N].

The ſeveral Maners and Eſtates in this Pariſh, are ſet down in records in a more confuſed manner than any others: However we ſhall endeavour to unravel them as well as we can.

After Earl Euſtace, the oldeſt poſſeſſor here mentioned, was Pharin, or Pharam, de Bologne; and then Sibill de Feſnes; who had two knights fees in Lamburn [O], about the year 1210, or 1211 (e). Some have imagined, that the lands of this whole pariſh would not make up two knights fees, conſidering how much of it was wood and foreſt (f): but that ſurmiſe is groundleſs, conſidering the extent and value of the pariſh.

The ſeveral Maners in Lamburn we find mentioned in the Inquiſitions poſt mortem, are. The maner of Lamburn. The maner of Shepeſhall of Norwich. Hunts, Affebridge, and Arneways. Dawes hall, or Deux-hall. The maner of Priors. Waltham-Abbey had alſo ſome land here [P], but it is very doubtful whether they had a Maner; for in the foundation-Charter it is written Lambebythe, i. e. Lambeth near London, where Earl Harold, the founder, is ſaid to have had a maner.

LAMBORN-HALL,

the manſion houſe of the capital Maner in this pariſh, ſtands a little way north from the Church. It is now only a farm houſe. The owners have commonage &c. in the Foreſt.

A family ſurnamed De Feſnès was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in K. John's reign, as we have juſt mentioned above. But, either they ſoon parted with it, or named themſelves from the Place, for in eight years after, anno 1218, we find a Lord by the name of Robert de Lamburn, giving the Rectory to Waltham-Abbey (g). This Robert de Lamburn paid ſcutage for his eſtate in Eſſex, from the firſt to the 13th. of K. John; viz. two marks towards the ſcutage for Normandy (h).——Will. de Lamburne was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire for half a year, in part of 1285, and 1286.

This Willliam lived at the Manor of Lamborn in Canewden in the Hundred of Rochford. At the time of his deceaſe in 1300, he held the maner of Lamburn of the inheritance of Philip de Burnel, then under age, and the King's ward, by the ſervice of two knights fees——James was his ſon and heir (i). He was living in 1334, and under him, Robert William, of Havering, who was outlawed for felony, held three roods of meadow in the vill of Lambourne.

[M] In this Church was a Gild, or Fraternity of the H. Trinity; to which John Elderton, citizen and ſtokemonger, i. e. ſtockfiſhmonger, gave, in 1500, lands and tenements, for 'the ſuſtentation of a Chantre preſt to ſynge at the 'trenteall, and to help devyne ſervice in the quere upon the 'holy days.' And in the certificate it is ſaid, that Chigwell was then 'a great towne, having in yt by eſtimac'on 360 of 'howſling people.'

[P] 'Terram de Lamburne,' . . . ſo it is ſtyled in the confirmation-Charters of K. Henry II. and K. Richard I. but not called a Maner. Monaſtic. Vol. II. p. 14. 16.——That land is called in Inquiſ. 33 Hen. VIII. Maplus, and ſaid to contain 80 acres of arable and paſture, 6 of meadow, and 4 of wood. It then belonged to Sir William Sulyard. Inquiſ. 33 Hen. VIII. It is called Maples, in Inquiſ. 2. Edw. VI.

What elſe the ſame Robert held in this pariſh, ſhews the owners of the ſeveral other lordſhips here: Of the Prior of Dunmow he held 20 acres of arable, 3 acr. of paſture, and the moiety of one meſſuage; of Thomas Ruſſell, 13 acres of arable, 2 acres and a half and one rood of meadow, and the moiety of one meſſuage; of John de Lancaſter, 16 acres of arable; of Richard de Wylleby, 4 acres of arable; and of the Biſhop of Norwich, 15 acres of arable, and 1 acre and a half of meadow (k).——Thomas Lamborn dyed in 1360, and——William, his ſon, in 1362. [See in the other Volume, p. 53, 54.] The latter dying under age, was ſucceeded by his ſiſter Joane, wife of Sir William Chene (l). Under him Richard Fifhide, and Alice his wife, in 1374, held 1 meſſuage, and 200 acres of arable, in this pariſh, called Laghames; undoubtedly part of the maner's demeſnes; by the ſervice of 4 s. per annum (m). See under Fifeild.

Thomas Lampet held the maner of Lambourn about the reign of K. Henry IV.

We find no account of the maner of Lamborne from this time till 1485. John Curſon who dyed the 22 d. of Auguſt that year, held it of Jaſper Duke of Bedford, in right of Anne his Ducheſs.——Anne Curſon, his daughter and heir, was but one year and a half old (n).

It came next into the Barefoot family, which continued poſſeſſed of it till the beginning of this century.

Robert Barefoot, citizen and mercer of London, held the maner of Lamborne with appertenances, as of the Hundred of Ongar, by ſuit at that Hundred, and the ſervice of the Wardſtaff, viz. to carry a load of ſtraw with a cart and 6 horſes, and 2 men in rapiers to watch the ſaid Wardſtaff when it is brought to the town of Abridge, and alſo to make a certain quantity of the Park pale at Havering when need ſhall be, according to the old cuſtom, in lieu of all ſervices. He held alſo a meſſuage, and 100 acres, in High-Ongar, of the maner of Stanford-hall; and 80 acres called Perrills in Stanford-Rivers and Bobbingworth (o). He dyed 22 Auguſt 1546, and is buried in this Church, as likewiſe Catharine his wife, with an epitaph. At his feet are the effigies of 4 ſons and 1 daughter; and at her feet the effigies of 4 ſons and 10 daughters. ——Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir, ſucceeded him. What further account we have of this family, is, that——John Barefoot Eſq; by Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of Thomas Goodman of Leatherhead in Surrey, had Anne; and ſeveral ſons, the youngeſt of whom ——John, a woollen-draper in London, married Mary, daughter of John Eldred of Little Birch Eſq; and had by her——John, his only ſon, of Lincoln's-inn, who by Mary his wife, daughter of John Eldred of Stanway Eſq; had John; Mary; and Anne, wife of the Rev. Thomas Bernard, Vicar of Earl's-Colne &c. He dyed 26 January 1724-5. It was next in John-Forteſcue Aland, Eſq; He was born 7 March 1670, and being bred up to the law, was conſtituted one of the Barons of the Exchequer 24 Janu. 1716; one of the Juſtices of the King's bench 19 May 1718; and 27 Janu. 1728 one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas, being then a knight: but reſigned this place in June 1746, on account of his age and infirmities. The 15th. of Auguſt following he was created Baron Forteſcue, of Credan in the County of Waterford in Ireland; but enjoyed his dignity but a few months, departing this life 19 December, the ſame year. He had been created Doctor of Laws by diploma from the Univerſity of Oxford, which he hath publiſhed in his Reports, a work in very good eſteem. By his firſt wife he had two ſons, one a Counſellor; and the other a Sea-Officer; and a daughter, all which dyed ſingle. By his ſecond wife . . . Dormer, he had his ſon and heir Hugh-Forteſcue Aland, the preſent Lord Forteſcue [Q].

is the next Maner in this pariſh, of which the oldeſt mention occurrs in records.

Henry Spencer, the military Biſhop of Norwich, held, in 1383, this maner called Shepeshall of Norwich, of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, and of Sir John Sutton, by the Service of 6 s. per an. And of the King in capite, as of the maner of Havering, by the ſervice of making ſixty perches of the Park-pale with his own timber; and of the Earl of Oxford by one ſuit of court from three weeks to three weeks, and to Thomas Baill 6 d. per an. He held other eſtates in Terling of the Honor of Peverell, and at Much-Lees of the Prior of the Knights Hoſpitallers (p). This martial Prelate, bred to arms in Italy in the ſervice of Pope Adrian, a native of England, in his wars againſt the Duke of Milan, as a reward obtained from the Pope the Biſhoprick of Norwich, in 1370. He got together a fleet and tranſported an army into the Netherlands, in 1383, againſt the King's will, to chaſtize the ſchiſmaticks of that county, who threw off the authority of Pope Urban the VIth. for which he had the Pope's commiſſion. The King and Parliament reſenting this, ſeized his temporalties, and kept them two years; but they were reſtored by the Parliament in 1385. He had been very ſerviceable, in 1381, to the King and Nation during Wat. Tyler's inſurrection. A party of thoſe malecontents were very ſtrong in Norfolk, againſt whom the Biſhop marched but with a ſlender force; yet by a ſtratagem and dint of valour he ſubdued them, beheading ſome, killing and taking others, and at length hanged up their Leader Litſter, a dyer of Norwich. This boiſterous hero, at length, fell out with the Monks of Norwich, whom he humbled and trampled upon fifteen years, till they were forced to purchaſe their peace with four hundred marks (q).

The Biſhops of Norwich had lands in Lambourne till the Reformation, when they came into the hands of Chancellor Audeley, who had licenſe, 2 April 1538, to alienate them to

William Hale: and the latter obtained licenſe, 12 February 1555, to alienate them again to William Porter, and others (r).

BISHOP'S-HALL was the houſe appertaining to this eſtate; about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church. It was lately the ſeat of —— Thomas Walker Eſq; Surveyor general to his Majeſty; upon whoſe deceaſe 22 Octob. 1748, it came to his nephew —— Stephen Skynner Eſq; and belongs now to Mr. Skynner's heirs.

HUNTS, AFFEBRIDGE, and ARNEWAYS, are other eſtates in this pariſh; which, according to order time as here ſet down occur in records by the name of Maners.

Hunts took its name from John Hunt, and his partners, who held half a fee in Lamborne, under John, and Thomas, de Vere, Earls of Oxford, in the years 1358, and 1370 (s).

Affebruge, Affebridge, or Abridge, a hamlet and maner in this pariſh, had its appellation from the Bridge there over the river Rodon. Either this eſtate, or ſome lands adjoyning, were given to the Knights-Hoſpitallers by Peter de Valoines and William de Bois [R]. In 1358, John de Affebregge held 1 meſſuage, and 60 acres of arable in Affebregge, of the Earl of Hertford (t).

Arneways was ſo named from Adam Arneway, who, jointly with the Biſhop of Norwich, and Joane Pellican, held half a fee here, under the Earls of Oxford, about the reign of K. Henry VI. But the Earls had a parcel of it in demeſne within their maner of Stapleford-Abbot (u).

Sir William Fitz-William, mentioned above, p. 51, held 1 meſſuage, 250 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 100 of wood, and 18 s. 6 d. rent in Arnways, Lamborne, Laxdens in Lamborne, and Awbrigg, &c. of the Counteſs of Saliſbury: And of the Counteſs of Oxford, 3 meſſuages, 6 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 200 of paſture, and 20 of wood, in this pariſh, Stapilford-Abbots, and Naveſtock. His ſon and heir——William Fitz-William Eſq; ſucceeded him, on his deceaſe 9 Auguſt 1536 (w).

Richard Morgan, and Thomas Carpenter, held, the maner of Lamborne and Affebridge, in 1552 (x).

Robert Taverner Eſq; held the maner, or capital meſſuage, of Arneways, with all its rights and appertenances; and lands and tenements called Arneways, Piggs, Hunts, and Le pryſon-houſe; and 60 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 24 of paſture, 6 of wood, and 40 s. rent, in this pariſh, Stapleford-Abbot, and Naveſtock, of Richard Lord Riche, as of his maner of Rayleigh, in fealty: Alſo, the maners of Lamborne and Affebridge, and 20 acres of paſture, and 60 of wood; with 4 acres in Rey-mead, and 1 rood in Affebridge-mead; and the Advowſon of this Rectory, of the Queen, as of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, by fealty only, in free ſocage. He dyed 30 April 1556, leaving —— Thomas, his ſon, then only 14 weeks old (y). At the time of his deceaſe, 7 June 1610, he held Arneways, with all lands, tenements, and hereditaments thereto belonging; but not Affebridge, nor the Advowſon of the Church.——Thomas was his ſon (z).

As to the maners of Lamborne and Affebridge, they were then in Sir Robert Wrothe, who dyed poſſeſſed of them 27 January 1605 (a). [See under Loughton.] And afterwards were in the Peacock family.

Arneways belonged, in K. Charles Iſt's reign, to Robert Draper Eſq; who had conſiderable eſtates at Crayford in Kent &c. and departing this life 8 July 1635, was ſucceeded by his ſon ——Robert (b).

This eſtate of Arneways, now called Arnolds, lately was in Mr. John Todd of Waltham-Stow. He gave a moiety of it to Mr. William Church, who married his daughter. And their daughter and heir being married to

Mr. Peter Searle, brought it to him. Mr. Searle ſold it to

Thomas Scott of Woolſton hall Eſq; and it is now in his ſon——George Scott, Eſq;

The manſion houſe of Arnolds is a large old timber building, a mile and a half north-eaſt from the Church, beyond Abridge.

LAMBORNE ABRIDGE, alias ST. JOHNS, is mentioned as another Maner in this pariſh.

It belonged in 1637 to Francis Peacocke Eſq; From this Family it came into that of Scott of Chigwell; and William Scott Eſq; gave it in marriage, with his daughter Anne, to the Rev. Dr. Derham, of Upminſter. It is now only a ſmall Farm, and not reckoned a Maner.

Deux-hall, is otherwiſe written in records Dagew-hall, Daweſhall, Deux-hall, Dewxhall.

The firſt mention we find of this eſtate by that name, was in 1505. Reginald Byſmere who dyed 15 Auguſt 1505, held this maner of Daweſhall, of Edward Duke of Buckingham, as of his Hundred of Ongar, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. per annum called Ward-ſilver, and doing the ſaid Duke white ſervice at the Wardſtaff in Ongar Hundred.——William was his ſon and heir. [See above, p. 86.]

Sir William Sulyard held the ſame in 1539, then deſcribed as 400 acres of arable and paſture, 12 of meadow, and 20 of wood; holden of the King, as of the Ward Staff, by fealty, and rent of 8 d. ½ per ann. (c). [See above, p. 140.] In the year 1621 it was in the Family of Palmer, as appears from an epitaph in Epping Church, for Tho. Palmer Eſq; ſon of Henry Palmer of Dews-Hall in Lamborn, buried in May 1621.

One of the Palmers ſold it to Catlyn Thorowgood Eſq; He was chief Factor to the South Sea Company at Vera Cruz and Porto-Bello, and ſerved the office of Sheriff for this County in 1729. Upon his deceaſe, 13 Novemb. 1732, it came to his ſon —— Pate Thorowgood Eſq; who ſold it to Richard Lockwood Eſq; an eminent Turkey-merchant; choſen member of Parliament for Hindon in 1713, for the city of London in 1722, and for Worceſter in 1734. To the old brick building he made a conſiderable addition, and with a good deal of taſte. The new part makes the grand front, and is very judiciouſly joined to the old Houſe. This ſeat ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church.

It belongs now to Richard Lockwood Eſq; ſon of the foreſaid Richard [S].

Priors,

a mile and a half eaſt from Abridge; by the name ſeems to have belonged to ſome Priory, but we do not find it ever did.

The earlieſt account of it we find, is, that it was part of the eſtate of Henry Earl of Suſſex; who ſold it, 18 September 1553, to

Robert Taverner, above-mentioned. At the time of his deceaſe, 30 April 1556, he held this maner or tenement called Pryors, and 60 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, and wood, of the Queen in ca. by knight's ſervice, i. e. by the 20th. part of the 20th. part of a knight's fee.——Thomas was his ſon (d); whoſe ſon ——Robert ſold it, 18 Novemb. 1625, to

Robert Draper, Eſq; He dyed poſſeſſed of it 8 July 1635 (e).——William Draper ſold it in 1641 to

Robert Bromfield, whoſe grandſon —— John gave it by will to his ſiſter,——Elizabeth wife of Nicolas Staphurſt, M. D. [T]. Their ſon, Nicolas Staphurſt, heir to his mother Elizabeth, ſold this eſtate 22 April 1713, to

Dr. Tho. Tooke, Rector of this Pariſh.

Having no iſſue, he deviſed it by will, with Manuden-hall, to his brother, the Rev.——John Tooke, after his wife's deceaſe. And the latter dying in 1764, was ſucceeded by his ſon, the Rev.——Robert Tooke.

Dr. Thomas Tooke, the purchaſer of this eſtate, was deſcended from the ancient family of Tooke, or Tucke, of Bear, in Eaſt Kent. His father, Thomas, had the honor of preſenting a Bible and Common-Prayer to K. Charles II. upon his landing at Dover: He was admitted in Bennet-College in Cambridge 12 October 1685, made Fellow 20 Novemb. 1690, commenced Doctor in Divinity in 1712. Above 30 years he was maſter of Biſhop's Stortford-School, where by his honeſt application he became extremely uſeful in that moſt important ſtation, and by his induſtry accumulated a conſiderable fortune. He dyed 24 May 1721, aged 54, and was buried in this Church, with a monument. His brother John, above-mentioned, married Suſanna, daughter of the Rev. Robert Taylor of Little Hallingbury, by whom he had ſeveral children. See in the other Volume, p. 516. [U].

The Luther family had formerly ſeveral parcels of land in this pariſh. See under Kelvedon-hatch.

John Boddicoat Eſq; Mr. Samuel Huntley; Richard Holford; William England; Robert Gough; Thomas-Mansfield Muſgrave; William Quarell, have alſo eſtates, or lands here.

In this pariſh are two Alms-houſes, without endowment.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary and All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tyled. At the weſt end there is a leaded Spire, in which are 3 Bells. The edifice ſeems to be very ancient. For, the north Door is indented, and the pillars of the Tuſcan order, as Margaret-Roding Church.

This Church was given by Robert de Lamburn to the Canons of Waltham Holy-Croſs, and confirmed to them by William de S. Maria Biſhop of London in 1218. We do not find it was appropriated to them, tho' ſuch a deſign was formed; but continued a Rectory, in their gift till the diſſolution of Monaſteries (f). Then it came ſucceſſively into the hands of Sir

Of Nicolas Staphurſt Dr. Tooke purchaſed the Advowſon 17 October 1712, and gave it to Bennet or Corpus-Chriſti-College in Cambridge, of which he had been Fellow; they are to have the Patronage after fifty years from his death, the right of preſenting for that term being reſerved for his brother's Family. He dyed, as hath been already obſerved, 24 May 1721.

STAPLEFORD.

Here are two contiguous Pariſhes named Stapleford, one on the ſouth ſide, and the other on the north ſide, of the river Rodon.

The name is derived from the Saxon Staple, or ꞅtapul, and ꝼoꞃd; here being very probably piles or ſtepples at the Ford over the River, for the conveniency of foot-paſſengers.

22. STAPLEFORD-ABBOTS, is that on the ſouth ſide of the River; and ſo called becauſe it belonged to the Abbot and Convent of St. Edmunds-bury in Suffolk.

Upon what occaſion it came to be given to that Abbey, is thus related.

The body of K. Edmund the Martyr being removed, in the year 1010, to London from Bederichesworth, [afterwards St. Edmundſbury,] becauſe the Danes infeſted thoſe parts; three years after, when they were removing it back into Suffolk, the lord of this maner, who had a languiſhing Illneſs, hoſpitably received it into his houſe; and being for this charitable deed wonderfully recovered, he, out of gratitude, gave this maner to the foreſaid Abbey where St. Edmund's body reſted (g). Such is the legendary account.

In this pariſh are three Maners. 1. Stapleford-hall. 2. . . . The maner of Batayles. 3. . . . that of Albins.

STAPLEFORD-HALL.

The manſion houſe of this capital Maner, ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church.

As it had belonged before the Conqueſt to St. Edmunds-bury, ſo it continued in it at the time of the Survey [W]. And they had the privilege here, and at Harlow, of being exempt from the regarders of the Foreſt [X].

Upon the diſſolution of Monaſteries, this maner was granted, in 1540, to John Maynard; and, 28 February the ſame year, he had licenſe to alienate it to Brian Tuke; which was not executed, but a freſh grant made to John Maynard. He had the Advowſon of the Church with it, and Hamans grove, paying 400 l. 16 s. 4 d. (h).

This eſtate reverted again to the Crown, and hath continued in it ever ſince: for which reaſon it is ſtyled ſometimes Stapleford-Regis. Grace, Lady Carteret and Counteſs of Granville, held it, by leaſe or grant from the Crown, till her deceaſe 18 October 1744; and it is now in her ſon —— the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Granville.

BATAYLES

Batails-hall, the maner houſe, ſtands about a quarter of a mile weſt from the Church.

It took its name from the ancient family of Batailes, who enjoyed it as early as the reign of K. Henry II.

Five Freemen were poſſeſſed of it in the Saxons time; but at the time of the Survey it was part of the large eſtates of Robert Gernon [Y]: fully mentioned above, and in the other Volume, p. 576.——William, his ſon, dropped the ſurname of Gernon, and took that of Montfichet. Under him Richard Battaile held two fees, in 1165 (i). His ſon Will. de Bataile, gave and confirmed all the Tythes of his lordſhip of Stapleford to the Priory of the Holy Trinity in London, except an acre of wheat, and an acre of oats, which antiently were divided between the Churches of Stapleford and Lamburn. Alſo he gave, and confirmed, to them, the Tythes of his aſſart lands in theſe pariſhes for the health of his ſoul &c. And this grant he made, by laying down a gold Ring on the Altar of the ſaid Church of the Holy Trinity. He calls it his gift, though he owns the ſame was granted by Harvey Battaile, his great grandfather. This Deed had a Seal of green wax, and a large Bird upon it, with wings expanded (k).

——Simon de Bataile was ſucceeded by his ſon ——Sir Richard de Bataile, who married Catharine, daughter and heir of Sir Andrew le Blund, lord of Tendring maner, by whom he had two daughters his coheirs.

Margery, one of them, was married to Sir William de Sutton, and brought him this eſtate, and Wivenhoo &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.] He held theſe eſtates, in 1302, of Giles de Plaiz, a deſcendent of the ſaid William de Montfichet [Z]. And his ſon——Sir John de Sutton held 3 fees and 3 quarters in Stapelford and Naveſcote, Wyvenhoo, and Donilond, of Richard de Plaiz, who dyed in 1273 (l). He, or his ſon —— Sir John de Sutton, held the ſame, in Stapelford, and Naviſtock, under Sir John de Plaiz, in 1360 (m). And, at the time of his deceaſe in 1393, held them of Sir John Howard, who had married Margaret ſole daughter and heir of the laſt Sir John de Plaiz. His brother,—— Sir Richard de Sutton dyed poſſeſſed of them in 1395, leaving his ſon and heir—— Thomas de Sutton (n). He dying without iſſue,

Margery, daughter of the laſt Sir John de Sutton inherited his eſtates. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.] She was the wife of John Walton Eſq; and had by him —— John Walton Eſq; father of Richard, and Joane.——Richard held the maner of Stapelford called Batayles, of Sir John Howard by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and dying in 1408, 10 Hen. IV. was ſucceeded by his ſiſter

Joane, then wife of Sir John Howard junr. eldeſt ſon of Sir John Howard above-mentioned by Margaret heireſs of the Plaiz family (o). He dyed 13 Decemb. 1424, leaving Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, 14 years old; who was afterwards married to John de Vere, the 12th. Earl of Oxford (p). He being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to K. Kenry VI. this maner underwent, no doubt, the fate of the other eſtates of this noble Family. But it was reſtored to his grandſon —— John, the 13th. Earl of Oxford, who dyed poſſeſſed of the maner of Battleſhall, 10 March 1512; and —— John, the 14th. Earl, 14 July 1526; both holding it of the Abot of St Oſith (q).

Tradition makes this maner to have been afterwards in the family of Smith: And it is probable, becauſe Thomas Smith, Gent. preſented to the Living in 1557, for that one turn (r). As lord of Battail's-hall, he might have a turn granted him from the Crown. One Philip Smith, Eſq; is put down by Mr. Holman as holding his firſt court at Battails-Hall, in 1583.

Anne Waller, who dyed in 1590, held two parts of the maner of Batteſhall, by which we ſuppoſe is meant this, of the Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter. She dyed without heirs, and ſo it eſcheated to the Crown (s).

In 1612, this eſtate was poſſeſſed by Richard Wiſeman Eſq; for Clement Stoner held then of him ſeveral parcels of land in this pariſh (t).

Carew-Hervey Mildmay Eſq; of Marks is the preſent owner of Bataills-hall. [See above, p. 68.]

lies partly in this pariſh, and partly in that of Naveſtoke; the manſion houſe is in Stapleford, about half a mile north from the Church, in the middle of a ſmall Park.

This maner and eſtate was made part of the endowment of a Chantry founded in Wivenhoo Church, in 1413, by Robert Newport, John Tyrell, Ralph Chamberleyn, and others; who had licenſe to endow it with one meſſuage, 240 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 26 of paſture, 4 of wood, and 26 s. 8 d. rent, in Wivenhoo, Stapelford-Abbots, Naveſtoke, and Lamburn; of which, the meſſuage and 80 acres were holden of the maner of Naveſtoke; 5 acres of the meadow, of Sir John Howard as parcel of the maner of Stapelford, which whole maner was held of him; and 20 acres, of Iſabell, widow of Tho: Lampet, as of the maner of Lamburn, by the ſervice of a pair of ſpurs or 6 d. (u). [See in the other Volume, p. 189.]

Upon the ſuppreſſion of Chantries, K. Henry VIII. by Indenture dated 6 December 1545, lett the revenues of this maner called Albins, lying and being in the pariſhes and fields of Naveſtoke and Stapulforthe Abbot, with all buildings, houſes, lands, meadows, &c. thereto belonging, to William Luter, for 21 years, at the rent of 15 l. 9 s. per ann.—The 22d. of June 1552, it was ordered to be lett to John Smithe for 21 years (w).

But, in 1548, K. Edward VI. had made a grant of the two Chantries in Wivenhoo, and of the maner of Albyns in particular, with appertenances, to Walter Cely, and his heirs; to hold by the 40th. part of a knight's fee (x). His ſon——George Celye, Gent. levied a fine, in Trinity term 1569, of the premiſſes, and conveyed them to George Wiſeman Gent. and Mary his wife.

In Michaelmas Term, the ſame year, a fine was levied for the conveyance of the maner of Albynes, with appertenances, in Stapleford-Abbot and Naveſtock, from Thomas Hale and Thomas Convers, or Combers, to Thomas Makyn and Richard Convers, or Combers; with 5 meſſuages, 240 acres of arable land, 40 of meadow, 140 of paſture, 10 of wood, 40 of furze and heath, and 40*s.* rent (y).

William Fitche Eſq; who dyed 20 Decemb. 1578, held this maner of Albyns, with lands and tenements, of the Queen, in ca. by knight's ſervice (z). [See in the other Volume, p. 446. 457. 462.]

Sir John Woode Kt. Clerk of the Signet, who dyed 5 Septemb. 1610, held the maner of Albyns; alias Albyons, with appertenances, and 3 meſſuages, 40 acres of arable, 20 of paſture, and 10 of wood, in this pariſh, and Naveſtocke, of the King, in capite, Lady Magdalen, wife of Sir Thomas Edmonds; Anne Woode, two of his daughters; and Tho. Clark Eſq; his grandſon, by Mary another of his daughters, were his heirs (a). Lady Magdalen Edmonds dyed 31 December 1614, poſſeſſed of this eſtate (b). Her huſband Sir Thomas Edmonds enjoyed it by the courteſy of England (c), probably till his deceaſe 20 Septemb. 1639. He was employed in ſeveral important Embaſſies and Negotiations, by Qu. Elizabeth, and K. James I. and conſtituted Treaſurer of the Houſhold. [See his Life in Biographia Britannica.]

They had one ſon, Sir Henry Edmonds, K. B. who dyed in 1635, without iſſue; and three daughters, Iſabel, wife of Henry Lord Delawar; Mary, married to Robert Mildmay, grandfather of the late Benjamin Earl Fitz-Walter; and Louiſa.

Of theſe coheireſſes, Albins was purchaſed by Antony Abdy Eſq;

This family was firſt ſeated at Kelvedon near Witham, in this County. [See the other Volume, p. 152.] Antony, ſecond ſon of Roger Abdy, of London, merchant, was Alderman of that city, and one of the Sheriffs in 1630; and dyed in September 1640. By Abigail his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Cambell of London, merchant, he had ſeveral children, particularly three ſons that were created Baronets; viz. Sir Thomas, of Fillol's-hall; Sir Robert, of Albins; and Sir John, of the More in Salcot-Verley, who left no iſſue.——Sir Robert, juſt now mentioned, the fourth ſon of Antony, was created a Baronet 9 June 1660, being the 477th. as his elder brother Sir Thomas was the 312th. Baronet. He married Catharine daughter of Sir John Gayer Kt. Alderman of London, by whom he had 7 ſons, and 4 daughters; namely, John, Robert, Charles, Edward, &c. Catharine; Mary; Sarah, wife of John Pennington Eſq; Elizabeth. Their mother was buried here 25 Septemb. 1662, and Sir Robert their father in 1670. His eldeſt ſon and heir——Sir John Abdy Bart. ſucceeded him in title and eſtates. He married Jane, only daughter of George Nicholas Eſq; youngeſt ſon of the truly loyal and faithful ſervant of the Crown, Sir Edward Nicholas Kt. Secretary of State to K. Charles I. and II. by whom he had Jane married to the Rev. Edw. Crank; another daughter, and one ſon. She being left a widow in the 25th. year of her age, was not more diſtinguiſhed for her piety and charity, than for rejecting every offer of a ſecond marriage from a real maternal affection for her children. Sir John and She both lie buried here in the Family vault. —— Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. the ſon and heir, was a man of deep knowledge in Antiquity, and Natural Hiſtory, a great connoiſſeur in Medals of which he had a fine collection; and, what is more valuable, a true Patriot, and a perſon of unſhaken integrity, and remarkable humanity. All which qualities gained him ſuch univerſal Love and Eſteem, that he was elected one of the Knights of the Shire for this County in 1727, and continued to be choſen in all the ſucceeding Parliaments till his death, which happened 27 Auguſt 1748. He married Theodoſia, only daughter and heir of George Bramſton L L. D. [A], by whom he had 4 children, Jane, who dyed young; John; Robert who departed this life in 1735, aged about 20; and Theodoſia, married, 17 March 1752, to her couſin the Rev. Stotherd Abdy, Rector of Theydon Gernon, and Stapleford-Tany, but ſhe dyed 20 Febru. 1758.—— Sir John Abdy, Bart. his ſon and heir, was elected Knight of the Shire in his father's room, and again in 1754. He dyed 1 April 1759; and being unmarried, ſettled by will his eſtates on his aunt Mrs. Jane Crank during her life. And, after her deceaſe, deviſed them to the poſterity of his anceſtor Antony Abdy Eſq; namely to Sir Antony-Thomas Abdy, Bart. of Chobham in Surrey; and then to his brother the Rev. Stotherd Abdy. They are both married, but have no children. For want of their iſſue, the inheritance is to go to the ſon of the Rev. Thomas Rutherforth D. D. Archdeacon of Eſſex, who has married a ſiſter of Sir Antony-Thomas Abdy; though there is a younger Brother of the Abdy Family.

The manſion houſe of Albins is by ſome thought to have had Inigo Jones for its architect; but the Hon. Horace Walpole, in his Lives of the Painters, is of a contrary opinion. It was repaired by the laſt owner, Sir John Abdy, Bart. and very judiciouſly, he keeping in his repairs to the old taſte in which it is built.

otherwiſe Knowle's-hill, a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church, is a pleaſant ſpot in this pariſh, where Henry Spencer Biſhop of Norwich had a ſeat. One piece of ground, being a wood of 12 acres, is ſtill called Biſhop's-Moat, where is a moat, reported to have been paved with marble. Moſt of the lands belonging to this eſtate lie in Lamborn.

In Qu. Elizabeth's reign, it belonged to the Stonard family of Loughton.

Francis Stonard, who dyed 13 Septemb. 1604, and Lucy his wife, one of the daughters of Sir Clement Higham Chief Baron of the Exchequer, which dyed 14 Aug. 1596, are buried in the Chancel of this Church, with an epitaph. He held this meſſuage and 80 acres called Knolles-hill; alſo Foreſt-croft, of Richard Wiſeman Eſq; as of his maner of Battells-hall, in free ſocage; —— Clement, his ſon and heir, born in 1558, ſucceeded him (d). Beſides the above, he held in this pariſh, a meſſuage called Wrights alias Dallons, and 30 acres of land thereto belonging; and Shepherds croft: Two fields called Little Sawyers, and Little Stanes; two other fields called great and little Perry feilds, and Buſhie croft; and Black croft, Sedwyne, the Mote, and Mote grove, Barne-feilds, and Wheelers-ridden, all which laſt were parcel of Biſhop's Mote, in Lamborn, and this pariſh; and holden of the King. He dyed 23 Septemb. 1612. leaving by Mabel his wife daughter of Roger Harlakenden. —— Francis Stonard, or Stoner, his ſon and heir (e), who married Anne, or Jane, daughter of Edward Bacon of Codenham in Suffolk Eſq; Amy their daughter and heir, was married to George Waldron Eſq; and carried the eſtate to him. He departed this life 2 Septemb. 1696. She dyed Auguſt 24, 1712, aged eighty ſix; her epitaph ſtyles her the laſt ſurviving child of Francis Stonard of Knowles-Hill Eſq;

They had a ſon, named George, who was a ſtudent in Chriſt's College in Cambridge, but was cut off by death 15 May 1681, at the age of 17 years and 9 months (f) [B].

Sir John Forteſcue Aland, lord of the capital Maner in the neighbouring pariſh of Lamborn, having purchaſed this ſeat, made it the place of his reſidence: and by ſeveral improvements rendered it a delightful Place.

His Lordſhip founded a Free School here, near Bone-bridge, for teaching poor Children to read and write.

Mr. William Caldwell; and William Gregory, have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace and of equal width with the Chancel; tyled; but adjoyning to this laſt is a north Chapel, called Abdy's, being the burial place of that Family.

It was granted, as an appendage of the Maner, to St. Edmund's-Bury Monaſtery, as above related; and the Rectory continued in their gift till the ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. granted the Advowſon to John Maynard, with the Maner in 1540; but it ſeems to have been only for a term of years: For it reverted to, and hath been in the gift of, the Crown, ever ſince the year 1560. This Rectory hath a Glebe of thirty acres.

23. STAPLEFORD-TANY, received its diſtinguiſhing appellation of Tany from a conſiderable Family, of that ſurname, who had eſtates at Latton, Chicknal-St-James, Elmeſted, and other parts of this County.

Godric was poſſeſſed, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, of this Stapleford; which Suene of Eſſex, and his under-tenant Siric, held at the time of the Survey. And Robert, [moſt probably Gernon, who had an eſtate in the other Stapleford] held one hide here, given him by W. the Conqueror [C].

On account of its belonging to Suene Lord of Raley, it was holden afterwards of that Honor.

STAPLEFORD-TANY-HALL,

The manſion houſe of the capital maner in this Pariſh ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church.

In the reign of K. Henry II. and Richard I. Richard Fitz-William held eight knights fees of the foreſaid Honor (g); and this among the reſt.

William Fitz-Richard, or ſon of Richard, held two carucates of land in Stapleford, in 1260 (b).

Margery, his daughter and heir, was married to Sir Richard de Tany, and brought him this eſtate; which he held at the time of his deceaſe in 1270, or 1271 (i). He was grandſon to Sir Peter de Tany, Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire, for the laſt half of the year 1236, for 1237, 1238, and part of 1239: and ſon of John de Tany, who gave the maner of Theydon Bois to Waltham-Abbey, to which aſt this Sir Richard was a witneſs. Sir Richard himſelf was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1260, and part of 1261; conſtituted Keeper of the Peace within the ſame in 1263; and Governor of Hadley Caſtle, in 1268 (k). He obtained a licenſe to empark his wood of Stapleford, within the Foreſt (l). Departing this life as above in 1271, he was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Richard (m). At the time of his deceaſe in 1296, he held this maner of the King, of the Honor of Reyle, by one knight's fee (n). —— Roger, or Robert de Thany, his ſucceſſor, held this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, of the ſaid Honor, by the ſervice of 2 knights fees. He dyed in 1301, and left —— Laurence his ſon and heir (o), who dyed in 1317, poſſeſſed of this maner and advowſon. He had no iſſue though he was married [D]: whereupon his ſiſter

Margaret, inherited his eſtates (p). She was the wife of John de Drokensford; who, in her right, preſented to this Living in 1321; and had free warren in all her lands in Eſſex. We find him poſſeſſed alſo of Weſt-Horndon (q).—— Thomas de Drokensford, or Trekenesford, their ſon, dyed in 1361, leaving Anne, his only daughter and heir then 4 years old (r). She was afterwards married to Thomas, ſon and heir of Sir Thomas Mandeville of Black-Notley. [See in the other Volume, p. 79. 123.] He preſented to this living in 1370, and 1373, being then a knight (s). His ſon —— Sir Thomas Mandeville, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Wauton, had Thomas, Joane, and Alice.——Thomas dyed, in Auguſt 1499, it ſeems, before his father [E]; under age and unmarried; and was ſucceeded, in this and other eſtates, by his two ſiſters and coheirs, Joane, and Alice (t).

Joane was married firſt to John Barry, and afterwards to William Pirton of Ipſwich. They had 20 l. a year out of this maner of Stapleford; 35s, 6 d. out of Eaſtwick maner, and the advowſon of that Church; and the maner of Elmſted. Her iſſue by J. Barry was John, and Joane. John the ſon dying without iſſue, Joane inherited, and was married to a Lombard named Frankanel, who had by her Raphael and Daniel. Raphael, after his father's death, would have entered upon the maner of Stapleford; but Clement Spice, great grandſon of Alice Mandeville, filed a bill in Chancery againſt him, wherein all this is recited (u).

Alice Mandeville, the other ſiſter and coheir, had this maner of Stapleford, with the advowſon of the Church; and the maners of Bromfield, Chatham-hall in Great Waltham, and Eaſtwick in Hertfordſhire. Her firſt huſband was Helmingius, or Elmyn, Leget, otherwiſe Legat, Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1401 and 1408, by whom ſhe had a ſon, Thomas, of whom we have no further account, than that he was 18 years old at the time of her deceaſe. [See in the other Volume, p. 75. 123.] Her ſecond huſband was Richard Spice, by whom ſhe had a ſon named Roger. She dyed in 1420 (w).——Roger Spice, her ſon, preſented to this living from 1431 to 1452. He dyed 11 March 1459, and lyes buried in Black-Notley Church [F]. —— Clement Spice, his ſon and heir, ſold this maner, and the advowſon of the Church, to William Scott Eſq; By a deed of feoffment dated 18 May 1485, George Nevill Lord Bergavenny, Thomas Lord Ormond, Alured Cornburgh Eſq; Robert Fenne, Gent. &c. delivered and confirmed to William Scott ſenr. and Margery his wife during their lives, and to the longeſt liver of them, this maner of Stapleford Tany, without impeachment of waſte; and, after their deceaſe, to their eldeſt ſon John Scott ſen. and his heirs male; if he dyed without any, then to his next brother William; and if he did not leave any, then upon the ſame condition to the four other brothers, Edward, John the younger, George, and Hugh: remainder to Joane, wife of Robert Fenne, and Elizabeth Scott, daughters of the ſaid William Scott ſen. And if they ſhould dye without iſſue of their bodies, then to the right heirs of the ſaid William Scott the elder (x). This William, the purchaſer of this eſtate, dyed 3 November 1491, and Margery his wife 14 Octob. 1505, and are buried in this Church, with an epitaph. His ſucceſſors in this eſtate, were——John Scott ſen. Eſq;——Thomas, his ſecond ſon.——Walter, who dyed 25 October 1550.—— Roger, his ſon, 9 Septemb. 1586.

[F] Having peruſed ſome papers relating to this Family, I am thereby enabled to correct ſome miſtakes in the other Volume, p. 123, col. 2. It was Richard Spice that married Alice widow of Elmyn Legat. The time of his death is not mentioned in records. — Roger Spice, their ſon, dyed 11 March 1459, leaving — Clement Spice his ſon, who dyed in 1483.

——George eldeſt ſon of Roger, departed this life 3 February 1588, aged 29 years, leaving only two daughters coheirs, very young; Elizabeth, and Mary. [For a more particular account of the ancient Family of Scott, ſee above under Chigwell, p. 168.]

Elizabeth, the eldeſt of theſe two daughters, brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband, Sir Edward Alleyn, of Hatfeild Priory; with Oveſham-hall in Matching, and Little Lees-hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 99. 132.] He was High-Sheriff of this County in 1629, and 24 June the ſame year created a Baronet. By his ſaid wife Elizabeth he had iſſue Edmund; George; Robert; John, and Dorothea, which two laſt dyed unmarried, and two daughters more, Martha, wife of the Rev. Joſhua Blower, and Mary of Robert Clive Eſq; Sir Edward dyed in November 1638. His eldeſt ſon Edmund dyed before him, viz. 28 February 1633, leaving by Mary, daughter of Nicolas Miller of Wrotham in Kent Eſq; a ſon, Edmund, one year and two months old; and a daughter named Elizabeth, married firſt to John Robinſon, of Denſton-hall in Suffolk Eſq; afterwards to Sir William Jones, Kt. Attorney-general to K. Charles II.——Sir Edmund Alleyn ſucceeded his grandfather in title and eſtate; and married Frances, only daughter and heir of Thomas Gent of Moynes in Steple-Bumpſted Eſq; He had by her Edmund; and two daughters, Frances; and Arabella, which laſt was born 5 November 1655. Sir Edmund dyed 2 Novemb. 1656, and his Lady 15 January 1657. Their ſon Edmund, and daughter Frances, dyed young; ſo that Arabella became the ſole and a very conſiderable heireſs. She was married firſt to Francis Thompſon of Hambleton in Yorkſhire Eſq; and had by him, William Thompſon Eſq; Her ſecond huſband was the Hon. Lord George Howard, eldeſt ſon of Henry Duke of Norfolk, by Jane Bickerton his ſecond wife. [See in the other Volume, p. 132.] This Arabella dyed 9 July 1746; but, thirty years before, namely in 1716, ſhe had ſold this eſtate to ſeems to have been ſo named from its ſituation in the ſouthern part of this pariſh. The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile ſouth ſouth-eaſt from the Church, near Piſſingford-bridge.

Sir Edward Smyth, of Hill-Hall, Bart. from whom it hath deſcended to his grandſon —— Sir Charles Smyth Bart.

The Maner of SUTTONS,

This maner ſeems to have been taken from the capital one of Stapleford-hall. We find no mention of it till about the year 1474, when Conſtance, widow of Sir John Stafford, late Earl of Wiltſhire, is recorded to have held the maner of Suttons of Clement Spice, as of his maner of Stapleford Tany. Edward Earl of Wiltſhire was her ſon and heir (y) [G]. It was afterwards in the Luther family.

John Luther, who dyed in 1567, is ſtyled of Stapleforth Tawney, but he doth not appear to have had any eſtates here: what he poſſeſſed then lying in Stanford-Rivers, North-Weald, Lamborne, Stapleford-Abbot, Little Laver, and in Waltham Holy Croſs. His ſon——Richard Luther, of this pariſh Gent. dyed 5 May 1619, and is buried here, with an Epitaph.——John Luther alias Hewitt, of Suttons, married Jane, daughter of . . . Winterflood, and had by her —— Thomas Luther, that married Catharine, third daughter of Robert Bourne of Blake-Hall in Bobbingworth. They both lie buried here, with epitaphs. He dyed 27 Janu. 1648; aged 86: She 20 Auguſt 1639. They had one ſon named Thomas; and 3 daughters, Catharine, Mary, and Anne. The ſon——Thomas Luther Eſq; dyed 1 March 1694, aged 67; and Ann his Wife 2 Febru. 1682. She was daughter and heir of Luke Jackſon of London. They had 5 ſons, and 6 daughters. John, the eldeſt ſon, born 10 March 1662; Bourne, Thomas, Robert, and another Thomas, which four laſt dyed young. Five of the daughters alſo dyed young, and Anne, married to William Groſvenor of London, merchant, dyed 30 Janua. 1717-18, aged 66 years.——John Luther Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Jane Luther, of Miles's, by whom he had ſix or ſeven ſons, and three daughters, moſt of which dyed young. Jane, the mother, dyed 26 September 1745. Only one of her ſons, and one daughter, arrived to any age.——Thomas Luther Eſq; the ſon, being unmarried, and dying before his mother, ſettled this eſtate on her during her life, and, after her deceaſe, on his ſiſter

Rebecca, and her heirs. She was married to Florian Goebell of Waltham-Stow Eſq; now deceaſed. Out of a numerous family, he left only one ſon,——John Goebell Eſq; ſtill ſingle; and a daughter, Rebecca, wife of Mr. John Voguell, Sugar-baker in London.

This eſtate was annexed, 15 April 1553, to the Dutchy of Lancaſter.

Mr. John Wood; John Laundy; James Collop; &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

It is rated to the land-tax at 868 l. 0 s. 6 d.

On Stapleford Common are 2 or 3 dwellings for poor people, but without endowment.

[G] This Conſtance was daughter and heir of Sir Henry Greene, of Draiton in Northamptonſhire, and the wife of Sir John Stafford, younger ſon of Humfrey Stafford Duke of Buckingham; created Earl of Wiltſhire 5 Janu. 1469. He dyed 8 March 1473, and ſhe 2 March 1474. Their ſon, Edward Earl of Wiltſhire dying without iſſue, Conſtance's inheritance fell to her aunt Iſabel, ſiſter and heir of Sir Henry Greene, wife of Richard Vere of Addington in Northamptonſhire. The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace; but the Chancel hath a ſouth aiſle; all tyled. The Belfrey is of timber, with a ſpire ſhingled, in which are 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Stapleford-Tany-Hall (a): and is now in the gift of Sir Charles Smyth Bart. It has a valuable Glebe of 116 acres.

24. NAVESTOCK.

The name of this Pariſh is otherwiſe written in records Naſeſtoca, Naſſeſtoka, Neſſetochus, and Naſingſtoke, or Naſtoke; which name ſeems to be derived from the Saxon words Næꞅiᵹ, or Napis; or, if the true and original name was Naſing, then it had the addition of ſtock, or ſtoke, to diſtinguiſh it from the other Naſing. Stocce, denotes remains of felled timber. See the other Volume, p. 51.

K. Eadgar gave an eſtate in this pariſh to the Cathedral of St. Paul's in London [H]. The authenticity of this grant is queſtioned by Mr. Newcourt (b), on account of the erroneouſneſs of the date, and Odo, Archbiſhop of Canterbury's being ſet down as a witneſs. But as that Archbiſhop did not dye, according to the beſt authors (c), till 958, the year after K. Eadgar's acceſſion to the throne (d), it is neither impoſſible nor improbable that he ſhould be one of the Witneſſes to the King's Grant.

However, certain it is, that St. Paul's had lands in this Pariſh before the Conqueſt. They had been taken away and detained from it; but William the Conqueror reſtored them to the Church on his Coronation-day: Exempting them, as they were before, from all tribute and taxes, except the three uſual ones, for military expeditions, and for building and repairing caſtles, and bridges (e).

The perſons that poſſeſſed or detained them, were, Two Freemen, Houard, and Hulci, who held part of the Pariſh, for two Maners and five hides; Turſtin Ruffus held another part for one Maner, one hide, and 40 acres; Seven Freemen held two hides; and one Prieſt held half a hide: At the time of the general Survey they all belonged to the Canons of St. Paul's [I].

In the time of K. Henry I. this Maner was taxed or rated for eight hides; paid to the Sheriff half a mark; to the bailiff of the Hundred 8 s. for Ward-penny 20 d. and for every maſter of a family that uſed huſbandry one penny.

K. Edward II. granted to it, among other Maners of the Cathedral, this immunity or privilege, That the Purveyors ſhould not take corn within its precincts for the King's houſhold (f).

At the Reformation, K. Henry VIII. took this eſtate from the Church, under the form of an exchange, in the year 1544. What he gave in lieu of it, doth not appear. After having continued in the Crown till 1553, Qu. Mary I. granted not only the Maner of Naveſtocke, but alſo the Rectory, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to Sir Edward Waldgrave, and his heirs; to hold in capite, by the 50th part of a knight's fee (g).

The very ancient Family of Waldegrave, derive their name from the German word Wald, power, authority, and ᵹeꞃeꝼa, now contracted into Grave, i. e. governor, ſtill uſed in landgrave &c. qua. the Chief Governor.

They are ſaid to have flouriſhed in this Kingdom before the Conqueſt, and to have been originally ſeated in Northamptonſhire, where they gave name to the pariſh of Waldegrave. John de Waldegrave, it is reported (h), loſt his lands upon the Conqueror's invaſion, but having an only daughter, and meeting with a name ſake of his in William's ſervice, that was come out of Germany; upon conferring together, they found they were related, And the German promiſed the other to obtain a reſtitution of his lands, and a pardon from the Conqueror, if he would

He married Elizabeth eldeſt daughter and coheir of Sir John Tray, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and departed this life in 1500, leaving three ſons, William, EDWARD, and Richard.——William, the eldeſt ſon, of Smalbridge, departed this life, 30 January 1526. By Margery his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth of Codham-hall in Wethersfield, he had——George, born in 1483, that had Wormingford among other eſtates. For a further account of the ſeveral Branches of this Family we ſhall beg leave to refer to the Peerages; and return to

EDWARD, ſecond ſon of Sir Thomas Waldegrave above-mentioned, from whom is deſcended the noble Family ſeated at Naveſtock. He married Elizabeth, Iſabell, or Mabell, daughter and coheir of John Cheney of Pindehoo in Devonſhire, by whom he had John, and two daughters. Departing this life in 1506, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——John Waldegrave Eſq; His wife was Lora, daughter of Sir John Rocheſter, and ſiſter of Sir Robert Rocheſter. He dyed 6 October 1514, leaving three ſons, Edward, Robert, and John. The eldeſt ſon and heir——Edward Waldegrave Eſq; had a grant of Borley-hall in this County, and of the maner and rectory of Weſt Haddon in Northamptonſhire. He was an officer in the houſhold of the Princeſs Mary, and incurred the diſpleaſure of K. Henry VIII. and was impriſoned in the Tower, for refuſing to forbid the celebration of the maſs in her houſehold, then at Copped-hall. But, upon her acceſſion to the Crown, ſhe rewarded him, by granting him the maners of Chewton in Somerſetſhire, and of Hever-Cobham in Kent. Moreover, ſhe conſtituted him Maſter of the Great Wardrobe, Lieutenant of Waltham Foreſt, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaſter, &c. Upon Qu. Mary's death, he was diveſted of his employments, and committed to the Tower, where he dyed 1 Septemb. 1561, aged 44 years [K]. By Frances his wife, daughter of Sir Edward Nevill, he had, Charles; Nicolas, ſeated at Borley: and 3 daughters, Mary, married to John Lord Petre; Catharine, to John Gawen of Devonſhire; and Magdalen to John Southcot, of Witham, Eſquires. His widow did not dye till 8 October 1599, in the 80th year of her age.——Charles Waldegrave Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was of Staining-hall in Norfolk, and of Chewton in Somerſetſhire: and having married Jeronyma daughter of Sir Henry Jerningham of Coſſey-hall in Norfolk, Maſter of the Horſe to Qu. Mary I. left Edward; and two daughters, Frances, and Magdalen.——Edward Waldegrave Eſq; the ſon and heir, received the honor of knighthood 19 July 1607. Upon the breaking out of the civil wars, though ſeventy years of age, he zealouſly engaged in the ſervice of K. Charles I. and ſo worthily behaved, that his Majeſty conferred on him the dignity of a Baronet 1 Auguſt 1643. He continued ſteady in his loyalty to the laſt, although he loſt two of his ſons, and ſuffered in his eſtate to the value of 50,000 l. We do not find the time of his death. By his Lady, Elianor, daughter of Sir Thomas Lovel of Harling in Norfolk, who dyed 12 Septemb. 1604, he had——Sir Henry Waldegrave, his ſon and heir. He was twice married; firſt, to Anne, daughter of Edward Paſton Eſq; by whom he had 7 ſons and 4 daughters: ſecondly, to Catharine, daughter of Richard Bacon, Gent. and had by her 6 ſons and 6 daughters. He dyed 10 October 1658, aged 60. His eldeſt ſon and heir——Sir Charles Waldegrave Bart. by Helen daughter of Sir Francis Englefield of Berkſhire, Bart. had two ſons, Henry, and Charles.——Sir Henry, the eldeſt ſon, was created Baron Waldegrave, of Chewton, 20 Janu. 1685. His Lordſhip was appointed, 26 May 1727, Embaſſador extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of Germany; and continued in the ſame honorable ſtation to the Court of France from 7 Auguſt 1730 to 1740. Departing this life 11 April 1741, he was buried in this Church. His Lordſhip married, in 1714, Mary ſecond daughter of Sir John Webb of Hatherop in Glouceſterſhire Bart. by whom he had, James, born 14 March 1714-15. John born 17 January 1715-16, dyed the ſame day; John, born 28 April 1718, and Henrietta.——James Earl Waldegrave, the eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, was appointed in 1752, Governor to his moſt excellent Majeſty: but dyed of the ſmall pox 8 April 1763. Leaving only two daughters, by his Lady, Maria, ſecond daughter of Sir Edward Walpole K. B. he was ſucceeded in titles and eſtates by his brother the Rt. Hon. ——John Earl Waldegrave. He is married to Lady Elizabeth, fifth daughter of John Earl Gower, by whom he hath ſeveral children. For a more particular account of this noble Family we beg leave to refer to the Peerages.

Naveſtock-hall ſtands a little way north from the Church.

From this capital Maner of Naveſtock have ariſen ſome ſubordinate ones, called Boys-hall, Loſt-hall, and Slades.

BOYS-HALL,

ſtands a mile eaſt from the Church.

The firſt mention we find of this maner was in the reign of K. Henry VII.

Andrew Prior, who dyed 1 June 1507, held this maner called Boys with appertenances, of the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's London, as of their Prebend of Naviſtock, by fealty and yearly rent of 17s.——John was his ſon and heir aged 14 years (i). See under Kelvedon-hatch; and under Roding Morell, in the other Volume, p. 471.

John Preſt Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 30 Auguſt 1546, held the maners of Boyſe, and Miles, and 4 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of wood, and 100s. rent in Naveſtocke, Kelwedon, Chepyng and High Onger, and Stanford Rivers, of the King, as of his maner or Prebend of Naveſtocke, parcel of the Deanery of St. Paul's Cathedral.——Frances was his daughter and heir, then 4 years old (k).

In Michaelmaſs term 1564, William Bradbourne, and Frances his wife, I preſume daughter of Preſt, levied a fine of both theſe Maners, to William Tuſſer, and Charles Belfield. And in 1565, Tuſſer and Belfield, conveyed by Indenture the maner of Boys-hall to John Greene Eſq; He was deſcended from the ancient family of the Greenes, of Green's Norton in Northamptonſhire.——Thomas, his ſon and heir, had, ſeveral children, among the reſt John, and Robert [L].——John Greene Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, was one of the Judges of the Sheriff's Court in London 37 years, and created Serjeant at law 19 May 1640. He dyed 17 May 1653, aged 74; and Anne his wife, daughter of James Blanchard, 21 July 1641. They had two ſons, John, and James; and four daughters.——John Greene Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, educated at St. John's College Cambridge, and of Lincolns-inn, was choſen Recorder of London in March 1658-9, and dyed in the November following. By Mary his wife, daughter of Philip Jermin Eſq; one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, he had his ſon ——John Greene Eſq; born 6 March 1643, who was created Serjeant at law 1 October 1700, and dyed 12 December 1725, aged 81.——John Greene Eſq; his ſon and heir, was educated at St. John's College in Cambridge, as his great, great grand-father, and the reſt of his anceſtors, had been, and was alſo of Lincoln's-inn. He dyed 14 Jan. 1752; leaving his eſtate to his Kinſman Maurice Greene, Doctor of Muſick [M].

is called another Maner in this pariſh.

John Sedley, who dyed 12 Auguſt 1581, held it of Frances Pawlett, widow, as of her maner of Naveſtocke, in ſocage, by fealty and rent of 20s. per annum. Alſo 2 meſſuages, and 2 granaries, 2 gardens, 60 acres of arable, 36 of paſture, and 20 acr. of furze and heath, in this pariſh, by the yearly rent of 17s.——William Sedley was his ſon and heir (l). It was purchaſed, in 1654, of Sir William Sedley Bart. of Northfleet in Kent, by John Greene Eſq; and hath paſſed as the former to the Rt. Honorable Earl Waldegrave.

is alſo ſtyled a Maner in this pariſh.

The earlieſt account we have of it, is in 1525. Henry Torrell Eſq; who dyed 7 January 1525, held it of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, as of their maner of Naveſtocke. And——Humfrey, his ſon, held it at the time of his deceaſe 12 Septemb. 1544, of the King, in

It belonged afterwards to the Howland family of Stone-hall in Little Canfield: [See in the other Volume, p. 464.] and now to the Right Hon. Earl Waldegrave, who has the beſt and chief part of this pariſh.

This Eſtate conſiſts of two farms, but is not at preſent reckoned a Maner.

Mr. William Bowyer; Henry Mott; John Clark; William Pinckney; Thomas Livingſtone; George Hills; John Morris; George Rumbold, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Donations.

In 1365, John Barnet, biſhop of Bath and Wells, who had been a Canon reſidentiary of St. Paul's, and Archdeacon of London, granted to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, a water-mill, 76 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 9 of paſture, 8 of wood, and 43 s. rent in this pariſh; for finding a Lamp to burn every night before the image of the Virgin Mary in that Cathedral, &c. (n).

John Greene, citizen and grocer of London, ſeventh ſon of Robert Greene of this pariſh, who dyed unmarried 3 September 1625, bequeathed by will to the Poor of this pariſh for ever, certain copyhold lands and tenements held of the maner of Naveſtock; and ſeventy pounds in money, to be employed to buy freehold lands for the further relief of the ſaid poor for ever: He alſo deviſed the ſurplus of his eſtate, after the payment of his debts &c. to be divided amongſt the poor of this pariſh, at the diſcretion of his executors (o).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Thomas, is pretty large, and conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle. The Belfrey is of timber, with a wooden ſpire.

The great Tithes of this pariſh were appropriated to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and a Vicarage was inſtituted, which continued in their collation till 1544, when K. Henry VIII. took both Maner and Church from St. Paul's. Qu. Mary granted them both to Sir Edward Waldegrave in 1553, as we have ſeen above.

However, the Eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction remained in the Dean and Chapter, who are Ordinaries of this place, and give inſtitution and induction to the Vicarage.

John Barnet, Biſhop of Bath and Wells above-mentioned, granted to the Vicar of this Church, and to his ſucceſſors, nine acres of arable land, two acres and one rood of meadow, and 12 d. yearly rent, in this pariſh.

John Furman, Vicar, dyed 26 Auguſt 1512.

This Rectory, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, were given, with other Poſſeſſions, to the Preſident, Fellows and Scholars, of Trinity College Oxford, by their Founder Sir Thomas Pope, in December 1555. Newcourt recites part of an Inſtrument, by which it may ſeem that Sir Edward Waldegrave gave the premiſſes to the College (p). The truth is, as we are informed by one of the Fellows of that College, their Founder, purchaſed, or acquired by exchange the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, of the ſaid Sir Edward, granting him at the ſame time a commiſſion to convey them to the College: And hence aroſe this Appearance of a Donation to the College from Sir Edward Waldegrave. In a Schedule of the Maners, Lands, &c. ſettled on the ſaid College by the Founder, and ſigned by Him, this Rectory and Advowſon are recited as parcel of his Endowment: and his original Grant of the ſame now remains in the College. Some years ago the Vicarage was amply endowed by the College on theſe Conditions: The Vicar, for the time being, is the Leſſee for the Great Tythes, paying to the College a ſmall Quit-rent, and a fine certain of 60l. per annum. The firſt Preſentation made by the College to the Vicarage is dated 8 May 1556, in their founder's life-time, when they preſented William Biſhop, upon Richard Goſteloo's reſignation. After him no Preſentation occurs in their Regiſter, although they certainly preſented, till Auguſt in the year 1615, when, Robert Avis B. D. Fellow was preſented on the death of John Wood who was admitted Fellow in 1581. Afterwards to the Reſtoration, they preſented, Richard Combes, M. A. 3 Novemb. 1619, upon Avis's d. . . .

Richard Brooke, B. D. 10 June 1628, upon Combes's d. . . .
Samuel Fiſher, B. D. 8 July 1629, upon Brooke's ceſſ. . . .
John Pettifer, M. A. 3 Septemb. 1660, on the reſignation or removal of Malachi Harris, who was never Fellow, and had undoubtedly been put in during the times of confuſion [N].

25. KELVEDON-HATCH.

There are two Pariſhes named Kelvedon in the County of Eſſex.

This, we are now entering upon, has the addition of Hatch, i. e. a low Gate towards the Foreſt; to diſtinguiſh it from the other Kelvedon or Eaſterford, in the Hundred of Witham. For the derivation of the name we beg leave to refer to the other Volume, p. 150.

In the Saxons time, the lands in this pariſh belonged to Ailric; Algar, a freeman; and Leueua. After the Conqueſt, St. Peter's at Weſtminſter held one maner and two hides here; Odo biſhop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Herbert's nephew, half a hide and 20 acres; and Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Ralph, one hide, and 45 acres, and one maner [O].

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into the two Maners, 1. . . . of Germins, or Jermayns; 2. . . . of Miles's.

Ailric, or Agelric, gave his part of the Pariſh to St. Peter's; which grant was confirmed by Edward the Confeſſor (q).

The Abbot and Monks continued Lords paramount of this Maner till after the year 1532.

As far as we can find, either part of it, or the whole, was what bore afterwards the name of

The Maner of GERMINS, or JERMAYNS.

The Rectory was appendent to this Maner; and by the Preſentations we can trace out the owners of the eſtate. Now, the Advowſon in 1372 was in Sir Roger de Kirketon, and others.

John de Hagh; Thomas de Hagh; Richard Haw; and John Haw; Eſquires, preſented from 1383 to 1457.

Next the Bollis, Bolles, or Bowle, family from 1464 to 1511.

John Wright, Gent. preſented in 1547 (r), and his deſcendents enjoy the eſtate to this day.

Richard Bolles Eſq; who dyed 15 June 1521, held this maner of Kelwedon of the Abbot of St. Peter's Weſtminſter, by fealty. So did his ſon——John Bolles Eſq; who dyed 9 February 1532, leaving——Richard his ſon and heir, 24 years old (s).

About 1444, Henry Chadirton, held a maner called Germaynes, and certain lands and tenements in Keluedon and Naveſtoke, of Richard Hawe, by the rent of 6 d.——Henry Chadirton was his ſon and heir (t).

Henry Torrell Eſq; mentioned under the foregoing pariſh of Naveſtock, held, in 1524, this maner of Germins with appertenances in Kellowdon, of John Bolles Eſq; as of his maner of Kellowden. His ſon——Humfrey Torrell Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 12 Septemb. 1544, held the ſame of John Wright Eſq; as of his maner of Kellowdon-Hatch (u). So that the Wright Family became poſſeſſed of the capital maner in this pariſh between the years 1524 and 1544.

John Wright Eſq; lies buried in this Church with an epitaph, together with Olive his wife. He dyed 5 October 1551. —— John, his ſon, departed this life 10 October 1563. By his wife Joane . . . he had —— John his ſon and heir, who held this maner of Kelvedon, with its rights members and appertenances, of Robert Lord Riche, as of the Wardſtaffe, by 8 d. rent per annum; and by the ſervice of finding two men to watch with the Wardſtaffe, in lieu of all other ſervices. He had alſo the maner of White Notley, and the Advowſon of Upmynſter Church &c. He dyed 25 May 1608, leaving——John Wright his ſon, aged 21 years (w); who married Anne one of the daughters of Sir Edward Suliard of Flemyngs in Runwell in this County; and had by her 3 ſons and 4 daughters. She dyed in childbed 28 November 1617, and he himſelf 4 March 1661. —— John Wright Eſq; their eldeſt ſon and heir, departed this life 31 May 1656, aged 46; and Frances his wife, eldeſt daughter of Philip Waldegrave of Borley in this County Eſq; 25 December 1658, in the 44th year of her age. They had two ſons, John, and Philip; and one daughter, Frances. —— John, the eldeſt ſon, married Philippa, daughter, of William Fitz-Williams of Glixby in Lincolnſhire Eſq; and had by her 5 ſons, and 4 daughters. She dyed 16 May 1687, and he himſelf 2 October 1691 (x).——John Wright Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, by Eugenia his wife, daughter of Charles Trinder Eſq; had ——John his ſon and heir, who dyed 3 December 1751, leaving by Miſs Smyth, alias Carrington, of Warwickſhire,——John Wright Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor of this eſtate [P].

MILES'S,

another Maner in this pariſh, is ſuppoſed to be what belonged to Leueua in the Saxons time, and to Hamo Dapifer after the Conqueſt [Q].

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile north from the Church.

Of this Maner no mention occurrs in records, at leaſt by the preſent name, till the latter end of K. Henry the Seventh's reign. Then, Andrew Prior, who dyed 1 June 1507, is recorded to have held a maner called Milles with appertenances in Keledone, and the maner called Boys in Naviſtocke of the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's in London, as of their Prebend of Naviſtock, by fealty, and yearly rent of 17 s.—— John was his ſon (y).

John Preſt Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe, 30 Auguſt 1546, held the maners of Miles, and Boyſe, with appertenances, and 4 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of wood, and 100 s. rent, in Kelwedon, Naveſtocke &c. He left only one daughter named —— Frances (z). [See above, under Naveſtock, p. 182.]

Alice, wife of Robert Blackwall Eſq; to whom ſhe had been remarried after the death of her huſband John Preſt; held the maners of Miles and Boyſe, and 300 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, in Keldon &c. of Sir Edward Waldgrave, as of his maner of Naveſtocke, by the rent of 17 s. She dyed 13 July 1561 [R], leaving—— Frances Blackwall, her only daughter and heir, 20 years old (a). [See in the other Volume, p. 471.]

This eſtate was next in Richard, and Antony Luther, Eſqres. who, as we learn from their epitaph, were 'ſo truely loveing brothers, that 'they lived neare fortie years joynt houſe-'keepers together at Miles without anie accompt 'betwixt them.' They dyed in 1627.

The firſt time we find that Family mentioned in this County, is about the latter end of K. Henry VIIIth's reign, when William Luter [for ſo was the name then written] had a Leaſe from the Crown of the Maner of Albins [S] in Stapleſord-Abbot. [See above, p. 176.]

They were firſt ſettled at Stapleford-Tawny. John Luter, of that pariſh, who dyed 10 January 1566, had eſtates in Stanford-Rivers, North-Weld, Lamborne, Stapleford-Abbot, Little Laver, and Waltham Holy-Croſs [T].—— Richard Luter, his ſon and heir was then 9 years old (b).——John Luther dyed 15 October 1611, poſſeſſed of a capital meſſuage, and divers eſtates in Stapleford-Abbots, Lamborne, Theydon-Mount, Fobbing, and Coringham. [See above, p. 180.]

Richard Luther was his brother and heir (c). This Richard dyed 8 February 1638-9. He is the firſt who is recorded to have been ſeized, in his demeſne as of fee, of the Maner of Miles with appertenances, in Kelvedon-Hatche, Chipping and High-Onger, and Stanford-Rivers; and of the maner of Kemis, or Camoys-hall, in Morell Rothinge; and lands in Little Warley; and the maner of Weſthedilthorpe, in Lincolnſhire.——Antony, his ſon and heir, was then of full age (d). He had three wives, 1. Jane, eldeſt daughter of Gilbert Armſtrong Eſq; that dyed 8 January 1640. 2. Bridget, daughter of John Sadler of Wiltſhire Eſq; She dyed 28 Septemb. 1649. 3. Anne . . . who dyed 16 October 1680. By the two laſt he had no children; but by the firſt he had 5 ſons, and 5 daughters. Gilbert, one of the ſons dyed in 1664, aged 23 years, and Antony 28 Septemb. 1692. Their father departed this life in 1665, in the 77th year of his age, and was buried in this Church with an epitaph. —— Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir, had——Richard; who by Mary daughter of Edward Meade of Berden had——Richard, that married Rebecca, daughter of Edward Ridge, Alderman of London. ——Edward Luther Eſq; his ſon and heir, was Sheriff of Eſſex in 1701, and married Sarah, daughter of Thomas D'autrey of Doddinghurſt-Place Eſq; by whom he had——Richard Luther Eſq; ſtill living, who upon the death of his uncle William Dawtrey Eſq; without iſſue, had a great acceſſion both of real and perſonal eſtates. Bryces is a good old houſe in this pariſh, above a mile South-eaſt from the Church, near Naveſtock Common. It was built by, and took its name from, Thomas Bryce, citizen, and mercer of London, about 1498. He remained poſſeſſed of it till 1515, when he ſold it to Sir John Allen, Alderman of London; who, in 1528, alienated it to John Catchmaid; and the latter aſſigned it to Edward Northey, Gent. Attorney at Law. About the year 1548, Northey conveyed it to Richard Pettus, of an ancient family in Norfolk; whoſe daughter, or grandaughter, Elizabeth, was married to Sir Francis Jones, Alderman of London, and Lord Mayor in 1620. His daughter Mary Jones was married to Ralph Pettus, ſon of William brother of Sir John Pettus, Bart. and brought him 6000 l. a large fortune in thoſe days. Ralph being a great Royaliſt during the civil wars in the laſt century, and ſequeſtred for 800 l. was obliged, for raiſing that ſum, to mortgage this eſtate; which he could never redeem. It has been for ſome time in the Glaſcok family, concerning which ſee in the other Volume, p. 456.——Robert Glaſcock of this place, Gent. married Mary Hawker of Great Badow, by whom he had, Robert, and Anne. See under Bobbingworth.

John, and Willis, King; Rice Evans, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Waltham-Abbey had lands here called Pryors land; which, after the ſuppreſſion, belonged to Philip Lentall, and John Ballard (e).

In 1356, John Peghbrigg had a Park in Kelvedon [W].

26. STONDON, or STANDON, MARCI, was ſo named becauſe it ſtands on a Stony, or gravelly, hill. And the addition of Marci, came from its ancient Lords the Mark, or Merks, Family; which had ſeveral eſtates hereabouts. For Serlo de Marcy held four fees belonging to the Honor and Caſtle of Aungre: and Ralph de Marcy two knights fees (g). They had alſo conſiderable eſtates in ſeveral other parts of this County [Y]. As for Maſſy it is viſibly a corruption from the word Marci.

This place is not mentioned in Domeſday-book, and therefore was then included in ſome neighbouring Pariſh; none ſo likely as Ongar, to which the Mark family were tenants afterwards.

Here is only one Maner, that of Stondon-hall, the manſion houſe of which ſtands a very little way north from the Church.

The ancienteſt owners of it after the Marks, were the Spigurnell family mentioned above, p. 148. under Bobbingworth.

Edmund Spigurnell, who dyed in 1295, held in Standon, of Ralph le Merk, by the ſervice of three quarters of a knight's fee, 180 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, 20 of paſture, 4 l. 10 s. rent of aſſize, 16 acres of wood, with the works of the cuſtomary tenants. ——John, his ſon and heir, held the ſame, of Ralph Merk, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and departing this life in 1308 [Z], was ſucceeded by his ſon——Edmund (h). This laſt held in the maner of Staunden 2 parts of one meſſuage with a garden, 90 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 3 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 7 s. 1 d. rent. And this maner, with a member of it, namely a quarter of a knight's fee in Willingale Spain, in the tenure of two others, was holden of William de Bohun, by the ſervice of three quarters of a knight's fee. He dyed in 1314. ——John Spigurnell was his ſon (i).——Edmund

[X] Under the arch of the ſouth aiſle of the Chancel is an Epitaph in old French for Richard de Welleby, in very ancient characters. And in the eaſt window of the ſame aiſle, was painted on very old glaſs. Milo de Mounteney, in Saxon Letters. Symonds's Collect. Vol. III. fol. 103. Whether they were both, or either of them, patrons of this Church, we cannot certainly learn.

Spigurnell had held three fees in Standon, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1372 (k). But Spigurnell was dead before that [A].

By the marriage of Joane, an heireſs, it came into a branch of the Gobyon family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 96, 361, that had conſiderable eſtates at Finchingfeild, Bardfeild, Great Lees, Laindon, Eaſt Tilbury, &c. This Joane, wife of William Gobyon, preſented in her own right to this Living from 1369 to 1385. As did John, and William, Gobyon, from 1391 to 1410 (l).

This eſtate was next in that rich man, Sir John Hende, Lord Mayor of London in 1391, and 1404; of whom ſee a more particular account in the other Volume, p. 155. He had two ſons, both named John; to the younger of which he gave by will, in 1418, the maners of Staundon, Ramſey, and Wrabneſs, and other lands, in Eſſex [B], when he ſhould arrive to the age of 21 years. Sir John dyed 1 Auguſt 1418. Elizabeth, his widow, was remarried to Sir Ralph Boteler, afterwards created Lord Sudeley, who in her right preſented to this living in 1433, during the younger John's minority.—This John, after coming of age, preſented to this living from 1445 to 1461 (m). He dyed in 1464, without iſſue; and his elder brother John, who dyed in 1461, left only one daughter, Joane, heireſs to the whole eſtate. She was married before 1462, the time of her grandmother's deceaſe, to Walter Writell of Bobbingworth, Eſq; who in her right preſented to this living in 1470, and 1473. He dyed 18 April 1475, leaving two ſons, William, who dyed young, and——John. This laſt departed this life 13 October 1485, leaving——John, his only child, but ſix weeks old (n). He was married very young to Etheldreda, daughter of his guardian Sir John Shaa, but dyed under age 28 July 1507, leaving one daughter——Julian, which ſurvived him but a little while (o). [See in the other Volume, p. 156.]

By what means we cannot trace out, whether by gift or ſettlement, this eſtate appears next in the Belknapp family. Joane, one of the ſiſters of Sir Ralph Boteler above-mentioned, had been married to Hamon Belknapp Eſq; who had by her——William, father of——Sir Edward Belknapp. [See in the other Volume, p. 470.] Sir Edward, at the time of his deceaſe 26 March 1521, held this maner of Stondon, with appertenances; the maner of Maſkaleſbury in White-Roding; and the third part of the maner of Blomſers in Great Eaſton. His heirs were, his ſiſters Anne, wife of Robert Wootton, of Boćton Malherb; Mary, widow of Gerard Dannett, Eſq; Alice, wife of William Shelley; and Antony Coke, ſon of Elizabeth, his third ſiſter; for Alice was the youngeſt (p).

William Shelley ſeems to have had this eſtate; for he preſented to the living in 1538 (q).

In 1604, K. James I. granted this maner of Stondon to John Carill (r).

We find it next in a branch of the Rich family, deſcended from Richard Rich, Sheriff of London in 1441, who had two ſons, John; and Thomas, grandfather of Richard Lord Rich. . . . John Rich, the eldeſt ſon, dyed before his father, in July 1458. He left——John, his ſon and heir, citizen and mercer of London; whoſe ſon——Thomas, by Margaret his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Edward Shaa, had——Richard Rich of South-Weald. He married Rachel, daughter of Thomas Newborough of Berkley in Glouceſterſhire Eſq; and left two ſons, Edward of Horndon, and Sir Robert, Maſter in Chancery. ——Edward Rich, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, dyed in 1599; leaving, by Joan daughter and heir of Edward Sanders Eſq;——Robert Rich, of Stondon Eſq; who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Dutton Kt. and had by her ——Nathanael his ſon and heir called Colonel Rich. He married, firſt, Elizabeth daughter of Sir Edmund Hamden of Buckinghamſhire, Kt. ſecondly, Anne, daughter of Charles Earl of Ancram. By this laſt he had no iſſue; but by the firſt he had two ſons, Nathanael, and Robert [C].——Nathanael, the eldeſt ſon, married Mary daughter of Matthew Rudd of Little Badow, by whom he had ſeveral children. He was for ſome years Receiver general of the land-tax for this County. But, in 1706, an Act paſſed for enabling the Lord High-Treaſurer to compound with him. Whereupon this eſtate being ſold, it was purchaſed by Richard How Eſq; who married Grace, daughter of Edward Linſell Eſq; and had by her, Richard who dyed without iſſue; and——John.

[B] Beſides the three maners here ſpecified, he had thoſe, of Morehall in Writtle, Little Canfield, Little Chiſhall, Picotts, Bradwell near Coggeſhall, Maſklebury, in White Roding, a conſiderable eſtate in Rayne, Great Saling, and pariſhes adjoining. Inquiſ. 6 Hen. V. See in the other Volume, p. 155.

[C] This Robert was of Roſe-hall in Beccles, Suffolk, and ſerved in ſeveral parliaments for Dunwich. He ſucceeded 16 May 1677, in the dignity of Baronet, and in eſtates, Sir Charles Rich, fourth ſon of Sir Edwin Rich the third ſon of Robert the firſt Lord Rich; who was created a Baronet in 1675, with remainder, in caſe of failure of iſſue male, to this his kinſman and ſucceſſor Robert. This Sir Robert, by Mary ſecond daughter of his predeceſſor Sir Charles Rich, had Charles, who dyed without iſſue, and Robert, beſides three other ſons, and eight daughters. He dyed 1 Octob. 1699. Sir Robert Rich, Bart. his eldeſt ſurviving ſon, was one of the Grooms of the bed chamber to his late Majeſty; ſerved in ſeveral Parliaments; and has gone through various poſts of the Army with great honor; is now ſenior Field-Marſhall of his Majeſty's forces; Colonel of the fourth regiment of Dragoons; and notwithſtanding the great dangers of war is arrived to a good old age. See the Baronettage, ed. 1741, Vol. III. Part 2. p. 587. &c.

He was Sheriff for this County in 1730, and departed this life 28 September 1748. By will he gave this maner and eſtate to William Taylor of Great Hadham Eſq; [D].

Stondon-Place, the ſeat of the late John How Eſq; is about half a mile ſouth ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

Francis Taylor; John Aley; &c. have alſo lands in this pariſh.

And here are two Farms belonging to Chriſt's College, and Emmanuel College, in Cambridge.

Mrs. Alice Thomlinſon's benefaction extends to ſix, or eight poor Widows of Stondon, 5 s. each, to buy them waſtcoats. [See in the other Volume, p. 509.]

Mr. Giles, or Styles, citizen of London, gave the Poors land in this pariſh, lett for about 3 l. 10 s. per ann.

Here is alſo a houſe and land rented at 2 l. 10 s. 0d. a year, given to buy bell-ropes.

We find in Domeſday-book a parcel of land, under Stondon, then called Plumtons, which Ralph Peverell held [E]. Gilbert Bacun; and Sabina his wife, held it, in 1286, of Dionyſia de Montchenſy, as of her Barony of Aneſty, by the name of Plimpton-hope (s).

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. It hath a Spire, ſhingled, in which there are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been uſually appendent to the Maner.

It hath the Tithes of Marks Maner in Roding, where anciently ſtood a Chapel named Capella de Roothing Marci; which the Rectors of Stondon have ſometimes been inſtituted to, with this Church. [See in the other Volume, p. 473.]

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 438 l.

THE HUNDRED OF BARSTABLE.

THIS Hundred is bounded on the North-weſt by Ongar Hundred; on the Weſt by the Hundred of Chafford; on the North by Chelmsford Hundred; on the Eaſt by part of this laſt and the Hundred of Rochford; and on the South by the river Thames.

In its greateſt extent from North to South it is about fifteen miles and a half long; and from Eaſt to Weſt where wideſt about eleven miles, and a half. A point in the north-weſt ſtretches between Chafford and Chelmsford Hundreds, which is croſſed by the great London road: And if this is taken into the meaſure, then it muſt be reckoned about ſeventeen miles long.

The name of this Hundred, beſides Barſtable, is otherwiſe written in records Barſtaple, and in Domeſday-book Berdeſtapla. From whence it is derived, is not eaſy to diſcover. As it was undoubtedly from the Saxon, we find ſuch words in that language, as Baꞃ, a boar, baꞃe, bare, naked, and ꞅtapul, the foot of a pillar, ꞅtaple, a bearer, and ſupporter; or elſe poſſibly from the common word Stable, the latter part was taken. Some are for deriving it from Burgh, there being Burghſted, and Tillaburgh, within the bounds of the Hundred; and ꞅtabol, according to them, ſignifies a manſion or ſettlement. But, upon the beſt grounds, it appears to have been taken from the place now called Barſtable-Hall, in Langdon and Baſildon; where, according to tradition, formerly ſtood a Town; and which being near the center of the Hundred, was then the moſt convenient place for holding Courts, and tranſacting all Affairs of a public nature.

The King is ſeized in fee of this Hundred, and uſed to grant the cuſtody and bailiwick of it by patent for life; but of late only for a term of years. The perſons, ſome of them of the greateſt eminence, who have enjoyed it, are thus found in records. Robert de Sutton, in 1210, 1211, and 1224, for a fee-farm of 18 l. (t). He gave it to William, ſon of Hugh Bigot Earl of Norfolk, who married his daughter Margaret (u). Alianore, Queen of K. Henry III. was poſſeſſed of it in 1263 (w). William Gifford, or Gyffard, and Joane, or Gundred, his wife, in 1265, and after; at a fee-farm of 25s. (x). Edmund of Woodſtock, third ſon of K. Edward I. Edmund viſcount Beaumont. John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, ſecond ſon of Edmund of Woodſtock, in 1352. Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent, in 1361. Joane, the fair maid of Kent, daughter of Edmund aforeſaid, and widow of Thomas Holand, afterwards wife of Edward the Black Prince, and mother of K. Richard II. had it in 1385. Thomas de Holand, his ſon, in 1396. Sir Roger Ree, in 1475; and William Ree next (y). In 1678, June 4, it was granted to William Scroggs Eſq; for 41 years if he ſhould live ſo long. And, 3 July 1707, to Sir John Sparrow, Kt. at the yearly rent of 6 s. 8 d.

As to Eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, this Hundred is within the Archdeaconry of Eſſex.

1. DODDINGHURST,

is the north-weſt point of this Hundred, adjoyning to that of Ongar immediately preceding, and therefore very properly comes next thereto.

The name is otherwiſe written in records, Doddenhene, Dudeho, Duddinghurſt. As the Diviſion of the Pariſhes, and the preſent Names of them, are generally allowed to have been a work of the Saxons; it is hardly credible, that, though the latter ſyllable hẏꞃꞅꞇ ſignifies a wood, the former part therefore was fetched by thoſe Northern people as far as from Dodona a city of Epirus, near which ſtood a wood of oaks, dedicated to Jupiter, and the Temple of Jupiter Dodonæus (z). The learned Dr. Stukeley derived it from the Britiſh-word Doeth, a wiſe man or wizard, as they might call a Druid: and ſo Doethinel denoted the Druids wood. But as there have been ſuch northern names as Dodo, or Dudo; Dodo's hyrſt, or wood, might be the real origin of the name.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Aluric was poſſeſſed of this pariſh; which, at the time of the general Survey, was held by Robert ſon of Corbutio, and his under-tenant Girard [F].

In it are two Maners. 1. That of Doddinghurſt. 2. Doddinghurſt-Place, otherwiſe Kenſington's.

DODDINGHURST-HALL,

the manſion houſe of the firſt, is on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

This Maner came early into the noble family of De Vere, as part of their Earldom of Oxford. ——Hugh, the 4th Earl, held it, at the time of his deceaſe in 1263. As did Thomas, a younger ſon of his, for life. Next,——Robert, the 6th Earl in 1331, as member of his Earldom (a).— Then —— John, the 7th Earl in 1358.—— Thomas, the 8th Earl, in 1370.——Alberic, the 10th Earl, in 1400.——Richard, the 11th Earl, in 1415.——Alice, Counteſs of Oxford, widow of Richard, held it in dower, at the time of her deceaſe in 1451 (b). Her ſon and ſucceſſor—— John, the 12th Earl; then aged 44, loſt it in 1461, with his eldeſt ſon Aubrey; being both beheaded for their adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter; and their eſtates were declared forfeited by act of Parliament in 1472, and given by K. Edward IV. to his brother Richard Duke of York (c). But K. Henry VII. reſtored them to the ſecond ſon——John, the 13th Earl of Oxford; and they were enjoyed by —— John, the 14th Earl; who dyed in 1526.——John, the 15th Earl in 1539. —— John, the 16th Earl, in 1562, and —— Edward, the 17th Earl (d).

For a more particular account of this illuſtrious Family, which produced a ſucceſſion of 20 Earls, we beg leave to refer to Hedingham-Caſtle, in the other Volume, p. 292, &c. which was their capital ſeat, and the head of their Barony.

Edward, the laſt Earl, ſquandring his eſtates [G], ſold, 1 March 1579, the maner of Doddinghurſt, and 20 meſſuages, 20 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 30 acr. of meadow, 200 of paſture, 100 of wood, 50 of furze and heath, 5l. rent, one capon, and a view of frankpledge, to

Richard Stoneley Eſq; who ſuffered a recovery of the ſame, with the Advowſon of the Church, 9 May following (e). But, in 1599, he ſold both Maner and Advowſon to

Thomas Glaſcock. At the time of his deceaſe, 6 June 1623, he held the premiſſes, and 180 acres of the demeſne lands; and others called Booles, and Edwins, of the King, in ca. by the hundredth part of a knight's fee: Alſo a meſſuage and 16 acres, called Popes; another meſſuage and 23 acres, called Styles; and two other meſſuages, in this pariſh. Priors land, 23 acres, in Shenfeild: and a meſſuage called Aſhewell in the hamlet of Downeſells in South-Weald. He left one daughter, his ſole heir, then aged 18 years, and wife of Thomas Luther Eſq; (f) a branch of the family of Miles's and Stapleford Tany in this County.

[G] We have given in the other Volume, p. 293, 294, under Hedingham-Caſtle, [Notes O and R.] a particular account of the Eſtates belonging to this noble Family, in the 14th century; and of the eſtates entailed upon the heirs male. But, as it may not be diſagreeable to the Reader, to ſee what Eſtates beſides they had in later times, we ſhall bring them here into one view. And they were, In Eſſex, The maners of Battleſhall, and Battleſwick Bendfeildbury, in Stanſted Montfichet; Berwicks, and Scoteneys, in Toppesfeild; Brayes, Northtoſts, and Skeyes, in Tilbury near Clare; Cockains, in Elmſted; Colne-Wake; Cruſtwick; in Danbury, Eſt-Haningfeild, Purley, and Sandon, 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 800 of paſture, 100 of wood, 200 of furze, &c. They had——Antony Luther, their ſon and heir, who departed this life 10 Novemb. 1678, aged 56 years (g). By his wife, Dorothy, daughter of Sir Henty D'autrey of Petworth in Suſſex Kt. he had Henry, William, Bridget, and Dorothy. ——Henry, his eldeſt ſon and heir, married Jane, daughter of Thomas Luther of Suttons Eſq; and had by her—— Antony Luther Eſq; He took to wife . . . widow of William Billingſley Eſq; but dyed without iſſue: ſo that, upon his deceaſe, this Eſtate came to his widow, who left it to her niece Miſs Surman.

With this maner is incorporated a parcel of land, of about 60 acres, which Oſbert Daggeworth, in 1259, held of the King, of the Honor of Rayley, in ſocage, by the ſervice of three arrows, feathered with eagle's feathers, bound round with a gold thread.——John Daggeworth, his ſon, ſold them to Thomas de Vere, who held them by the ſame ſervice, in 1304; being then deſcribed as 1 toft, 69 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 9s. 3d. rent (h).

DODDINGHURST-PLACE, otherwiſe KENSINGTON'S, is the other Maner in this pariſh.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north-weſt from the Church, in a bottom.

It is independent from Doddinghurſt-hall; but when it was taken and ſeparated from that maner, doth not appear. Neither have we any account of its owners till about Qu. Elizabeth's reign. Then it belonged to Richard Stoneley, and by the marriage of one of his daughters came to . . . Dawtrey.

This is an antient Family, ſeated in Suſſex ever ſince the Conqueſt. The name is Norman; in Latin De alta ripa, tranſlated De haut rey, contracted into D'haut rey, or D'autrey.—— Thomas Dawtrey Eſq; was Sheriff of this County in 1682, and dyed 6 October 1732. He married Sarah, daughter of William Bright, of Talmaſh-hall in Suffolk Eſq; by whom he had—— William Dawtrey Eſq; Sheriff alſo of this County in 1736, who dying unmarried [H], his great eſtates came to his nephew, Richard Luther of Miles's, Eſq; See above.

GROVES, is another reputed Maner, of which we find only this account.

K. Henry VII, in 1503, granted Licence to Sir Thomas Bourchier, to give to the Chantry in Grace Church, London, the maner of Groves, worth four marks per an. one meſſuage, and 29 acres of arable called Popes, in Dodinghurſt; one meſſuage, and 31 acres, of arable, called Smiths, in Naveſtock; and other lands in Naveſtock, South-Okyndon, and other places, of four marks value (i).

Reginald Greene was owner of Smiths in Naveſtock; his daughter and heir,——Chriſtian, married John Sheffield, whoſe heir-general ſold it, in 1739, to the Right Honorable Earl Waldegrave. Amongſt Smith's lands a quit-rent is paid for lands, formerly of the Fraternity of St. Bennet Fink, London.

CONVERS is alſo called a Maner in this pariſh.

Winſtan Browne was poſſeſſed of it in 1567, when, according to the Curſitors book, it was purchaſed of him by Richard Pety, or Pettus; being 40 acres of arable, 8 acres of meadow, 6 of paſture, and 5 l. rent, in Doddingherſt and Shenfield (k).

Edward Fage Gent. who dyed 8 June 1611, held this maner of Convers, with appertenances in Duddinghurſte, and 120 acres of land, of Sir Thomas Joſlyn, as of his maner of Torrellshall, in free ſocage.——Robert was his ſon and heir (l).

Theſe lands ſeem to have given name to, or taken their name from, a family ſurnamed Convers; one of whom was buried at Stapleford-Abbots in 1599. The eſtate extended into Naveſtock, where the name is yet remembred.

A meſſuage, lands, and tenements called Wyſſhefelds, or Weſtridgefelds, and Wysſhefeldgrove, in this pariſh, belonging to the monaſtery of Edingdon in Wiltſhire, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1540, to William Barners, and Walter Farre (m).

Mr. Antony-Luther Richardſon; Thomas Bolley; Joſeph Hill; Richard Thomas, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Doddinghurſt Liſt is part of South-Weald, and of Kelvedon-Hatch, conſiſting of about 400 acres, which pays Conſtables rate to Doddinghurſt, but no other rates. Weald, Kelvedon, and Doddinghurſt are in three different Hundreds. So much of Weald and Kelvedon as is reckoned in the Liſt, is, indeed, in the Hundred of Barſtable. See in the Introduction, under the title Taxes.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tyled. The Belfrey is of timber.

This Rectory was always appendent to the capital Maner here; a long time in the gift of the noble Family of De Vere; then of Richard Stoneley; of Glaſcock; of Butler; Harris; and Luther, in which laſt Family it continues, or their aſſigns.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1328 l.

2. SHENFEILD,

next to Doddinghurſt, is the other Pariſh that lies in the north-weſt point of this Hundred; on the great road to London, between Mountneſſing, and Burntwood. Some of its Houſes ſtand in the eaſtern part of Brentwood-town, from which it is divided by the road leading from Billericay to Ongar.

The name of it is formed from the two Saxon words Scen, and ꝼelꝺ, a pleaſant field; its ſituation being really pleaſant.

Some Roman Lares were dug up here, about 40 years ago; which came into the hands of Mr. Jackſon of Warley-place.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Bodd a freeman enjoyed this pariſh; But, at the time of the Survey, it was held by Euſtace the great Earl of Bologne [I].

It was divided afterwards into two maners. 1. . . . of Shenfeild-hall. 2. . . . of Fitz-Walters.

SHENFIELD-HALL

ſtands near the Church.

Who were the immediate ſucceſſors of Earl Euſtace in this maner, we do not find [K].

The next poſſeſſor of it after him, upon record, was, Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1298, he held this maner of Shenefend of the King in capite, of the Honor of Mandevill; with the Advowſon of the Church (n). By his holding it of that Honor, it is quite credible that it came into his family upon the marriage of his great-grand-father Henry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, with Maud, heireſs of the Houſe of Mandeville. For a particular account of that Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 451. 545. &c.——Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, had it alſo at the time of his deceaſe in 1361, and——Humfrey, his nephew in 1372 (o).

Elianor, his eldeſt daughter and coheir, brought it in marriage to her huſband, Thomas of Woodſtock, ſixth ſon of K. Edward III. who had it at the time of his violent death, 8 Septemb. 1397 (p). He left three daughters, Anne; Joane, who was married to Gilbert Lord Talbot, and had 73 s. 4 d. per ann. out of this maner; and Iſabel, a nun. Joane dying in 1399, left one daughter, but ſhe ſurviving her mother a very little while, the whole inheritance came to the eldeſt ſiſter

Anne (q). [See in the other Volume, p. 62. 80. 453.]

She had three huſbands, Thomas, and Edmund, Lords Stafford. The latter had it at the time of his death 22 July 1403 (r). Her third huſband, Sir William Bourchier, enjoyed it afterwards, for he preſented to the Living in 1408. If her ſon, Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, ſucceeded her, as probably he did; upon his being killed in the battle of Northampton, 10 July 1460; this eſtate was ſeized on by K. Edward IV. who ſettled it upon his Queen Elizabeth, and ſhe preſented to the Rectory from 1466 to 1495. It remained in the Crown till K. Henry VIII, Edward VI, or Queen Mary granted it away. We find the Advowſon in private Hands ſome time; Humfrey Tyrrel preſented in 1545; Francis Rylie in 1559; William Walton in 1562; and Thomas Parker in 1567 and 1575 (s).

But before the year 1559, both Maner and Advowſon had been granted to the Lucas Family. For

John Lucas Eſq; who dyed 13 September 1556, held the maner of Shenfelde, alias Shenvyle, and Advowſon of the Church, and ſix meſſuages, ſix gardens, ſix orchards, five tofts, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 40 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, and 5*l.* rent in Shenfield, Brentwood, Weld, Gyngraberd Landrye, and Herfordſtoke.——Thomas, his ſon and heir, then aged 22 years (t), afterwards knighted, dyed 29 Auguſt 1611, leaving——Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir, alſo knighted; and who dyed 25 September 1625. Before marriage he had a ſon Thomas, whom he ſettled at Lexden; and, after marriage, two ſons, John; and Charles, which laſt was cruelly ſhot by Lord Fairfax's order after the ſurrender of Colcheſter.——John Lucas Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was knighted, and, 3 January 1744-5, created Baron Lucas of Shenfeild, with limitation to his two brothers. But his only ſon, and his brother Charles dying without iſſue, and his brother Thomas without iſſue male, his only daughter Mary, by Anne, daughter of Sir Chriſtopher Nevill of Newton St. Loe in the County of Somerſet, inherited. She was, by K. Charles II. 7 May 1663, created Baroneſs Lucas of Crudwell in Wiltſhire, and brought the eſtate in marriage to Antony Earl of Kent, who left——Henry his ſon and heir, created, 14 Decemb. 1706, Marquis and Earl of Harold, and Viſcount Goderich, and afterwards 28 April 1710, Duke of Kent. He married Jemima, daughter of Thomas Lord Crew of Stene, elder brother to the Biſhop of Durham, and had Antony Earl of Harold, called up to the Houſe of Lords by the ſtyle of Baron Lucas of Crudwell; who Whereupon their father, Henry Duke of Kent, ſettled his real eſtates upon Jemima, the only daughter and heir of his eldeſt daughter Annabella, who had married John Campbel Lord Viſcount Glenorchy, ſon and heir apparent to John Earl of Broadalbin in Scotland, and dyed 2 March 1726-7. This Lady Jemima Cambel was married in May 1740 to the Honorable Philip Yorke Eſq; eldeſt ſon of the Right Honorable Philip Earl of Hardwick Lord Chancellor, and upon his deceaſe now Earl of Hardwick. His conſort, the Lady Jemima, was created Marchioneſs de Grey in 1740. [For a more particular account of the Lucas family, ſee Hiſtory of Colcheſter, p. 124.]

The Maner of FITZ-WALTERS,

Was named from the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, to which it belonged. It was derived from the Earl of Bologne's capital Maner in this pariſh.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a quarter north-eaſt from the Church, in a bottom, by a rivulet; on the right hand ſide of the road from Ingatſtone to Brentwood. It is called The Round Houſe, from its unuſual octogon form, the chimnies ſtanding in the middle of the whole building.

In 1301, Robert Lord Fitz Walter had licence, to encloſe his wood at Shenfield within the Foreſt of Eſſex, to make a Park; which is ſuppoſed to be this eſtate(u). About the year 1363,—Joane, wife of Robert Fitz-Walter, held for term of her life the maner of Shenfieild, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs at the Coronation (w).——Walter Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1386, held a maner called Fitz-Walters in Shenfeild of the King in capite, as parcel of the Barony of Fitz-Walter (x).

Elena, wife of Robert Knyvett, at the time of her deceaſe in 1435, held in fee-tail the maner of Shenefeild, otherwiſe called the maner of Fitz-Walters in Shenfeild, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the twentieth part of a knight's-fee.——John, her ſon and heir, then aged 24 years (y), held it alſo in fee-tail, at the time of his deceaſe in 1450, and was ſucceeded by—Thomas Knyvett Eſq; his brother and heir (z). [Concerning this Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 191.].

John Morecroft Eſq; was poſſeſſed of it in the laſt century; and is ſaid to have built the Houſe after an Italian model. Penelope, his eldeſt daughter by Suſanna his wife, dyed 5 April 1677, aged 21 years, and is buried in this Church with an epitaph [L].

In the beginning of this Century, it belonged to Sir Thomas Ambroſe, Kt. brewer in Hounſditch, and Sheriff of London in 1718, and 1719. His ſon——Thomas ſucceeded him, and left——Thomas, who was Sheriff of this County in 1735 [M].

SHENFEILD-PLACE is a capital meſſuage on the north ſide of the London-road, which hath belonged ſeveral years to the Vaughan Family. Richard Vaughan of Shenfeild Eſq; married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir William Appleton, Bart. and had by her, William, who dyed young; John, Stephen; Sophia, and Jane.——John, married . . . daughter of . . . Patridge of Doddinghurſt, a conſiderable fortune, and has by her Richard. [See under South Bemflete.] [N].

Mr. Thomas Oſborne; John, and Thomas, Newland; Robert Holmes; Thomas Walters; John Platt; James Aldridge; Henry Barber, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

John Baſſet had licenſe, in Edward the ſecond's reign, to incloſe his wood of Shenfeld, within the Foreſt of Eſſex (a).

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel. At the weſt end there is a wooden ſpire of conſiderable height, leaded.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Shenfeild-hall.

Henry Foreſter, not taken notice of by Mr. Newcourt, was Rector here, on or before the year 1320 (b).

3. HOTON, or HUTTON, ſtands eaſt of Shenfeild. The ancient Saxon name of it was Hou, a hill, from which, and the addition of ꞇun, a town, or village, was formed the preſent name; ſignifying the village upon a hill. In records it is otherwiſe written Atahou, and Hutton.

This place belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to one Got a freeman; William the

Sir Richard Riche (c). —— Robert, Lord Riche, his ſon, by will gave it to his third ſon —— Edwin Riche, Eſq; who, 1 March 1594, alienated the maner of Hutton, alias Hoton-hall, 20 meſſuages, 20 tofts, 1 dove-houſe, 20 gardens, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 100 of wood, and 40s. rent, to

George ſold this eſtate to

Thomas Cory Eſq; born at Great Franſon in Norfolk, one of the Benchers of the Inner Temple, and 18 years Chief Protonotary of the Court of Common Pleas; who dyed 16 December 1656, aged 65, and is buried in this Church with a monument [R]. He married Judith, one of the daughters of Sir Chriſtopher Clitherow Kt. Lord Mayor of London, by whom he left one daughter married to John Heyward.

The next poſſeſſor we meet with was Mr. William Hatherly, a Taylor in Durham-Yard, London, whoſe wife Mary was niece to Mr. Heyward, and brought him the eſtate. He, or his ſon—— William, ſold it to

Robert Surman Eſq; Caſhier of the South-Sea Company, for the ſum of 15200 l. comprehending a capital meſſuage, and ſeveral farms, lands, &c. of the yearly value of 480 l. Upon R. Surman's forfeiture, the South-Sea Company ſeized it, and ſold it, 12 Decemb. 1723, for the ſum of 12060 l. to Henry Hall Eſq; brother to Sir Philip Hall, of Upton, Kt. He dyed 2 February 1749-50, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Henry Hall Eſq; [S].

Hutton-Hall ſtands on the north ſide of the Church.

Iſaac Davis, and Joſeph Roberts, have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

George White Eſq; above-mentioned gave Church field here, of nine acres, for the repairs of the Church, and to the Poor.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a body, and two aiſles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tyled. In a ſpired ſteple of timber are 5 Bells. It is very pleaſant, and well lighted.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, belonged to Battle-Abbey till its diſſolution, and have paſſed ſince with the Maner. But the Advowſon of the Vicarage hath been, at leaſt ſince the year 1325, in the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

BURGHSTED, or BURSTED.

Eaſtward of the three laſt places we have been deſcribing, lie the two contiguous Pariſhes of Burghſted, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great, and Little. The name is formed from the Saxon Buꞃ, or Buꞃᵹ, a place of retirement, a town, or tower, and ꞅꞇeꝺ, place.

The learned Mr. Camden once thought this place to have been the Cæſaromagus mentioned in Antonine's Itinerary: but at laſt left it doubtful (f). Hereabouts, unqueſtionably, was ſome Roman villa, or little ſtation. For, at Blunts-Walls in this pariſh, are Earth-works, the remains of a Ditch and Rampart, containing about four acres, one part of which hath been incloſed round. And, within the incloſure, have been ſome Mounts artificially raiſed, now chiefly levelled.

In Novemb. 1724, a perſon digging for gravel in a field near Billerica on a high hill, after he had ſunk about three feet, came to a large bed of black earth, or aſhes; which endeavouring to clear away, he found mixt with it a great quantity of pieces of earthen veſſels, of different kinds and colours, ſome white, ſome red, and ſome of a dark brown. Neither he, nor any who have ſince ſearched, have been able to meet with any thing entire; but the pieces appeared plainly to be fragments of urns, patera's &c. In one part of the earth, there was a place made like an oven, of the hard dark clay; and the man believed it was large enough to have held ſix half-peck loaves. There is no clay within three miles of the place. There have been ſeveral Roman coins of copper found here; and two of ſilver; one of Trajan, the other of Hadrian.

4. GREAT BURGHSTED

is the largeſt of the two Pariſhes, as the name imports.

This Lordſhip belonged in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Ingar, a Saxon Thegn.

William the Conqueror having taken it from him, gave it to his half-brother Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux [T]. As this was the capital Maner Odo had in this County, it will be proper here once for all to give ſome account of him. After Arlotta had brought forth to Robert the firſt of the name and ſixth Duke of Normandy his natural ſon William the Baſtard, Conqueror of England in 1066; ſhe was married to Herluin a Norman Gentleman, by whom ſhe had Odo, or Eudo; Robert, Earl of Mortaing; and Emma, Counteſs of Aumale (g). Odo, being a man of ſenſe and ſpirit, was much conſidered by the Duke his brother, and conſtituted Biſhop of Bayeux. He attended him at the fatal battle of Haſtings, and is ſaid to have aſſiſted him with his prayers and advice (b). After the victory, he was loaded with lands and poſſeſſions, namely 39 lordſhips in this County, and 216 in the whole Kingdom. He was alſo conſtituted Governor of Dover-caſtle, Earl of Kent, Count Palatine; one of the two chief ſuperintendents of all the military Forces of the Realm, and Juſticier of England. But having been guilty of grievous extortions, and preparing to go to Rome with great treaſures and a large retinue, in order to get himſelf choſen Pope, his brother the Conqueror, who had appointed him Governor of England during his abſence, arreſted him in the iſle of Wight, and kept him priſoner in Normandy the remainder of his reign. Entering afterwards, in 1088, into a plot againſt William Rufus, he was baniſhed England, and deprived of all his poſſeſſions (i).

This Lordſhip becoming veſted in the Crown upon that confiſcation, we have no account for many years to whom it was next granted: Only it ſeems to have been to the Family of Mareſchall, Earls of Penbroke. For, the firſt time we find it mentioned in records, the Abbot of Stratford who had moſt of the lands in this pariſh, held of the Honor of the Mareſcall half a fee in Bordeſtedd (k). —— Thomas Earl Stafford, who dyed in 1393, had half a fee in Great Burſted, which the ſaid Abbot held (l). —— William Earl Stafford, his brother, had the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe in 1398 (m). And ſo had Edmund, brother of William, who was ſlain at the Battle of Shrewſbury in 1403. And Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, killed at the battle of Northampton in 1459 (n).

John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, at the time of his deceaſe in 1433, was poſſeſſed of two fees and a half in Burſted, formerly holden by Geffrey Benhale; and one fee and a half, once Ralph Syward's (o).

Theſe extracts ſhew who were the Lords paramount of the lands in this pariſh.

They were divided into theſe three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Burghſted, otherwiſe Burghſted-Grange. 2. The maner of Weſthouſe. 3. . . . That of Blunts-walls.

1. Burghſted-Grange, the manſion houſe of the Maner of Great Burghſted, ſtands above half a mile eaſt from this Church, towards Ramſden Cray.

It is named Grange, becauſe it was one of the Barns of the Ciſtercian Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn [U]. They had moſt of the lands in this pariſh, but the donors only of ſome part are known. Their Founder William de Montfichet had not any lands here, to give them. As early as the year 1262, they held half a fee of the Earl Marſhall, as above-mentioned; but this gives no light as to the original donor. K. Richard II. indeed, was a benefactor, beſides his removing the Monks who had ſettled here, and rebuilding their Abbey at Stratford; as is related above, p. 19.—But, before that, in 1338, John Henny, and Rhoeſia his wife, gave them 60 acres of arable, and 1 acre of wood, in Great Burſted: They two had remaining in this pariſh 1 meſſuage, and 100 acres of arable, holden of the Abbey. —— Laurence Gurney gave them alſo 3 acres here (p).—Their greateſt benefactor was William Langdich, who, in 1358, granted them one meſſuage, 240 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 90 of paſture, and 44 s. ob. rent, in Gr. Burſted holden of the Abbey; and the Abbey held them under the Earl of Glouceſter (q).

K. Henry III. in 1253, and K. Edward I. in 1285, granted the Abbot and Monks a Market and a Fair at Great Burghſted. And K. Edward IV. in 1476, a Market, and two Fairs at Billerica (r).

Such were the Grants made to Stratford Abbey in this pariſh. The State of their Revenues here, at the diſſolution, will beſt appear from a Certificate taken of them in 1537; wherein it is ſaid, That the Maner of Burſted was let to William Herres 21 Decemb. 1515, for thirty years after the expiration of a former grant made to John Herres, father of the ſaid William, for 31 l. 7 s. 4 d. The Rent-aſſize of the free cuſtomary tenants in Burghſted 22 l. 19 s. 8 d.—The Maner of Weſt-Houſe was let 1 May 1535, for forty years, for 13 l. 16 s. 8 d.

Theſe Maners, with the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, which alſo belonged to Stratford-Abbey, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1539, to Sir Richard Riche, who had a confirming grant from K. Edward VI. (s).

He obtained a licenſe, 30 October, 1551, to alienate this maner, with the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage, to Thomas Marſhe (t). But moſt probably that ſale did not go on. For Richard Lord Riche dyed 12 June 1566, poſſeſſed of the premiſſes, wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſecond ſon and heir —— Robert Lord Riche (u). He gave it by will, 25 Febru. 1580, to his third ſon——Sir Edwin Riche, who ſold it, 2 Septemb. 1600, to

Sir John Petre, Kt. and his ſon William (w). Sir John was created Baron of Writtle, 21 July 1603; and at the time of his deceaſe 11 October 1613, was poſſeſſed of this maner of Burſted, alias Burſted Grange, and the Rectory of this pariſh, with the Advowſon of the Vicarage (x); which have deſcended from him to the preſent poſſeſſor, the Rt. Hon Robert-Edward, Lord Petre.

The Maner of West-House.

We have ſeen that this maner belonged to Stratford-Abbey, and was granted to Sir Richard Riche. He, 8 February 1540, had licenſe to alienate it to Walter Farre, and others (y). —— Richard Farre, his ſon, had —— Henry Farre Eſq; who dyed 15 Decemb. 1608, and held the farm called Weſt-Houſe of the King in capite by the ſervice of the ſixtieth part of a knight's fee; and the Maners of Buckwyns in Butſbury, and of Abbots-Hall in Stanford le Hope. —— Henry his ſon and heir, was then five years old (z).

This eſtate came by purchaſe into the Family of Lumley, whoſe reſidence was, till lately, at Great-Bardfield. It deſcended to Sir James Lumley Bart. and was, ſome years ago, ſold to Guy's Hoſpital by Sir James Lumley's Truſtees.

Sir Martin Lumley, or his father, built here; the Houſe was left for ſome time unfiniſhed, then fell to decay.

It ſtood about half a mile weſt from the Church.

The Maner of Blunts-Walls, was ſo named from the ancient family of Blunt, or Blund, which alſo poſſeſſed, and gave name to, another Maner adjoyning, in the pariſhes of Butſbury and Stock. [See in the other Volume, p. 48, &c.] Walls, for diſtinction-ſake, was added, being taken from the Walls, or earthworks, ſtill here partly remaining, and juſt mentioned above.

The houſe ſtands a mile and a half north-weſt from this Church. Here is a Court-kept, but without copy-holders.

This Eſtate belonged to the Priory of Thoby in Mountneſſing, concerning which ſee in the other Volume, p. 45.

In 1525, it was granted, among many others, to Cardinal Wolſey, for endowing his two Colleges (a). Upon his incurring a præmunire it falling to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, is a Hamlet in Great Burghſted, but ſo conſiderable as to be a Market Town; the only one indeed within this Hundred; except the Little Town of Horndon on the Hill.

Sir William Petre, and his heirs; to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (c). It hath ever ſince continued in that noble family.

This eſtate pays neither great nor ſmall Tithes.

It ſtands about a mile and a half north from the Pariſh Church. The Market is on Tueſday; and here are alſo two Fairs, July 22, and October 7.

The name is not eaſily accounted for; The firſt time we find it mentioned is in 1343, when Thomas Malegreff is recorded to have held in Burſted, in the Hamlet of Beleuca, of the Earl of Hereford as of his maner of Fobbyng, 4 s. 6 d. rent, by the ſervice of 4 s. rent per ann. and ſuit of Court (d). [See above, p. 102.] That name Beleuca was probably derived from the old word Baleuga, or Banleuga, denoting a territory or precinct round a Borough or Maner; in French Banlieu. But how it came to be transformed into Billerica, which name we find it bore in 1395 (e), we cannot even gueſs.

This Town ſtands pleaſantly, and is a great thorough-fare to Horndon on the Hill, Eaſt Tilbury, and Graveſend: and, between Tilbury and Graveſend is ſuppoſed to be the place where the Emperor Claudius forded, or croſſed, the Thames.

There has been of old a Chapel here, which ſerved for a Chantry. Mr. Newcourt ſuppoſes it of 200 years ſtanding, and founded by the Sulyards, of Flemyngs in the pariſh of Runwell (f). I have never found any thing diſcovering either the age, or founder. It is a ſtrong antique brick Building in the Street, where the Vicar of Great-Burghſted officiates on Sunday Afternoon; or elſe a Chaplain choſen by the Inhabitants.

The Book of Chantries has this Entry; ‘ Burſted-Magna; Lands and Tenements there put in feoffment by divers perſons to the ſuſtentacon and maintenance of a Preiſt to ſing Maſſe, and alſo to miniſter Sacraments within the Chapple of Burſted-Magna, which ſaid Chapple is diſtant from the Pariſh Church a mile and a quarter.—The ſaid Town of Burſted ys a great Towne and populous, and alſo a Haven towne, there ys in it by eſtimacon about the numb', of 600 howſeling people, and more. Yt ys no Pariſh, but the Incumbent celebrateth in the ſaid Chappel of Much-Burſted. The yerely valew of the ſame worth 38 s. 4 d. For 2 meſſuages, and certain lands thereunto belonging, copihold of the Lord Rich Lo. Chancellor, as of his maner of Burghſted aforeſaid, doth amount to the ſome of 9 l. 10 s. 6 d. whereof in rent-reſolute to divers Lords by the yere 1 l. 6 s. 3 d. and to the Lord Rich for the copiehold 8 s. 8 d. The value of all the Goods, Jewels, &c. one ſmall Bell praiſed at 1 s. one Hutch 1 s. two Veſtments one ſurpliſe, and other implements, 2 s. 6 d.’

If we may gueſs at the time of this Chapel's being erected, having nothing ſure to go upon, one would imagine it to have been ſome time after the year 1345, the date of the compoſition between the Vicars. Mr. Newcourt hath recited from Bp. Bonner's Regiſter, p. 412, that in regard of the inundation of the waters in the winter time, when the Inhabitants of the weſtern part of the Hamlet of Billerica could not conveniently come to their Pariſh Church of Ging Mountney, the Vicar of Great-Burghſted ſhould receive the ſmall tythes and oblations of Blunts-Walls. Then we will ſuppoſe this Chapel built as well for the Chantry, as for the eaſe of theſe inhabitants now laid to Billerica. And whether the Inhabitants contributed to the purchaſe of the Chantry Lands, or by voluntary gifts helped to maintain the Prieſt; it is plain a Prieſt was maintained, and, according to the Book of Chantries juſt quoted, did ſing maſs and miniſter ſacraments, which laſt was not the Office of a mere Chantry Prieſt. Farther it is ſaid, that this was in the Chapel of Burghſted-Magna, which ſounds enough like a Chapel of eaſe. I preſume the Vicar of Burghſted was at no expence or attendance here; but when the Chantry Lands were forfeited, the maintenance of the Chantry Prieſt ſunk, and then the duty here devolved upon the Vicar of Burghſted.

K. Edward VI. ſold the Chapel, with the Chantry lands to Mr. Tyrell and his heirs; and he, keeping the lands, again ſold the Chapel to the inhabitants of Billerica, which was in Truſtees for their uſe. But not knowing whether it had ever been rightly conſecrated, the Truſtees ſurrendered their right to Henry Biſhop of London, on the 30th of Auguſt, 1693; And he, on the 8th of October following, conſecrated, and dedicated it to St. Mary Magdalen, with all the uſual Privileges belonging to ancient Chapels; but reſerving to the mother Church all her Rights (g).

Mr. Baylye, Rector of North-Bemflete, left an eſtate of 20 l. per an. for the education

The CHURCH, conſiſts of a body and two aiſles; and the Chancel hath a north Chapel; all tyled. The Steeple, with a ſpire leaded, contains 5 Bells.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, of this pariſh belonged to the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn, being appropriated to them. And they had alſo the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to which they preſented till their diſſolution. Then it came into the Families of Riche, and Petre.

5. LITTLE BURGHSTED, adjoins to and lies weſt ſouth-weſt of the other; on which account it is ſometimes called Weſt-Burghſted.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Godwin was lord of this pariſh.

At the time of the general Survey, it was the Biſhop of London's Fee [W], by which I ſuppoſe was meant his private eſtate.

The capital Maner here is ſtill in the See of London; probably ſettled upon it by the Biſhop, whoſe Fee it was.

But it lay unfortunately within the reach of Odo's Talons, who was Lord of Dunton; ſo that out of this were erected two maners more, which extend into Dunton, whither they may be ſuppoſed to have been carried by that mitred plunderer.

From his encroachments were erected the Maners of Whitehall; and of St. Margarets, with South-fields.

The Maner of WHITE-HALL.

The manſion houſe is fallen down; The out-houſes remain, where the Court is kept.

This maner was in the family of Helion as early as the reign of K. Henry II. Of the Barony of Robert de Heliun, William de Heliun held one knight's fee in demeſne, ſcil. Burſted in Eſſex (b).

In 1301, Gilbert de St. Ouen held one knight's fee in Weſt-Burghſted and Weſt-Tilbury of Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex (i). This was le White-Hall and Bodnecks.

Humfrey de Waleden who dyed in 1331, held one meſſuage, and two acres of land, of the maner of Atte White-Hall, by the ſervice of 10 s. per an.—— Andrew, ſon of his brother Roger, was his next heir (k).

Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1372, held two knight's fees in Little Burſted, that Sir Humfrey de Walden formerly held (l).

John Pikenham in 1377, had in Donton and Little-Burſted a certain maner called le White-Hall. His ſon —— Robert Pekenham dyed in 1399. In his life-time this maner was granted for ever to Roger Folyot and John Grafton Clerk (m). [Concerning the Pekenham Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 349. 491.]

From the reign of K. Edward IV. this Maner, and lands called Bodnecks, or Botley, have been in the ancient Family of Tyrell. For Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held this maner of White-hall, and 20 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 acr. of meadow, 40 of paſture, and 60 of wood, in Great and Little Burſted, Donton, Eſt-Horndon, Gynge Rauſe, Downham, Ramſden Belhous, and Shenfeild, of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, by fealty, and rent of 2 s. (n). His grandſon —— Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1510, held the ſame: as did his ſon —— Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed 3 April 1541 (o).

ST. MARGARETS, is named in records as another Maner in this pariſh. For Sir Thomas Tyrell, laſt mentioned, held the maners of Whight-hall, and St. Margarets, of the King, as of the Duchy of Lancaſter, by the rent of 2 d. He left two Daughters, coheirs, Catharine ſeven years old; and Gertrude, only half a year old (p).

On the oppoſite ſide of the lane in which ſtands the Houſe belonging to St. Margarets, there is another Houſe belonging to an eſtate adjoyning called SOUTH-FIELDS.

White-hall, St. Margarets, and South-Fields, belong to the heirs of the late Sir John Tyrell Bart.

The Walton family have been ſeveral years ſeated in this pariſh.

Thomas Walton of Nether-holm in the pariſh ſo Higham, and of Shapwick, in Somerſetſhire, Gent. married Anne, daughter of . . . Hunton, of Knolle in Wiltſhire, and had by her four ſons, Thomas; James, of Axley in Somerſetſhire; Andrew; and William. This laſt ſettled here, and married Anne, daughter of Henry Crooke of the Inner Temple Eſq; He dyed 16 October 1640, aged 65; and ſhe 11 June 1639, aged 48 years; leaving, two children, Suſanna, and——George, born in 1615, who by Elizabeth his wife, eldeſt daughter of Chriſtopher Harris of Shenfield in Margaret-ing, had George; and Elizabeth, maried to Sir John Poley of Boxford, Kt. He departed this life 16 July 1662, and ſhe 1 March 1666. By her the eſtate of Shenfield came into this family. —— George Walton Eſq; the ſon and heir, married Sarah, daughter of . . . Hyde, merchant in London, and had by her two ſons named George which dyed in 1663, in their infancy, William, George, Charles, commonly called Captain Walton. This Charles dyed 26 November 1714, aged 47 years; having had by Elizabeth his wife, drughter of John Croſs, merchant in London five children; three of whom ſurvived him, namely, one ſon, William; and two daughters, Poley, and Elizabeth. Poley was married to Richard Onſlow Eſq; General of his Majeſty's Forces, younger brother of Arthur Onſlow Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

William Walton Eſq; dyed 11 June 1739, aged 74. His brother, the brave Sir George Walton, Kt. Admiral of the Blue, who dyed 21 November 1739, in the 74th year of his age, was an honor to this family, as well as his Country [X].

William-Cutts Walton Eſq; departed this life 18 March 1746-7, aged 36 years; leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of William Ditch, of London, dry-ſalter, —— George Walton Eſq; his ſon and heir (q).

Mr. Richard Mayott; and Richard Carver, have alſo ſome lands here.

In this pariſh are three Alms-houſes.

Twenty ſhillings a year are given to the poor at Chriſtmaſs by the Church-wardens from lands called Pancraſs money: and five ſhillings in bread at Whitſuntide.

The CHURCH ſtands obſcurely, and is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. It hath a ſmall ſpire ſhingled, in which are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along in the collation of the Biſhops of London. It hath a Glebe of 31 acres, 3 roods and 7 perches.

Mr. William Dunbar, late Rector of this pariſh, left 20 l. a year to the ſucceeding Rectors, payable out of an eſtate called Braintrees near Braintree.

is viſibly a compound of the two Saxon words, Ram and ðen, ſignifying Ram's Valley.

Adjoyning to the Burghſteds, on the North-eaſt, are two contiguous Pariſhes of this name; known, at the time of the Norman Survey, only by the general appellation of Ramſden; but diſtinguiſhed afterwards by the ſurname of their ancient poſſeſſors, the Families of Cray and Belhouſe.

6. RAMSDEN CRAY, is the neareſt of the two to Burghſted.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, part of it belonged to two Freemen; and one Siric enjoyed another part freely: Ravengar diſpoſſeſſed one of them, and Robert ſon of Wimarc the other. At the time of the Survey, Odo Biſhop of Baieux, and Ralph brother of Ilger, held the ſame.

There are two Maners in this pariſh; 1. The maner of Ramſden Cray. 2. . . . that of Tyled-hall, or Thill-hall.

The Maner of RAMSDEN CRAY.

The manſion houſe lies down in a bottom on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

This maner is what belonged to Odo [Y].

[Concerning the Liſton Family ſee in the other Volume, p. 320.] In 1363, Thomas, ſon of William de Liſton, granted to

Sir Thomas Tyrell of Eſt-Horndon, and his heirs, all his lands and tenements in Rameſden-Craye, with the Advowſon of the Church (u). From the time of K. Edward IV. the Tyrells preſented to the Living till 1630.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Crayes in Ramſden-Crays of the King in capite by the ſervice of 8 d. per ann. [Z]. He had alſo 16 meſſuages called Wyndellond, in this pariſh; and 1000 acres of arable &c. in this and pariſhes adjoyning. [See under Eaſt Horndon.] And held the maner of Tyled-hall in this pariſh alſo, of Henry Bourchier Earl of Eſſex, as of his maner of Barington, by fealty, and yearly rent of 12 d. (w). His ſon—— Sir Thomas Tyrell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1510, held the maner of Crayes, of the King, as of his Honor of Clare; the maner of Thill-hall, and the reſt as above; wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Thomas Tyrell (x). He held the maner of Grays, alias Crays, of Catharine Queen of England, as of her Honor of Clare; and the maner of Tyled-hall, of the Lord Parr and Anne his wife, as of their maner of Barrington. He dyed 2 April 1541, and left only two daughters.——Henry, his brother, had the maner of Tyled-hall at the time of his deceaſe, 20 May 1588 (y).——Sir John Tyrell, alienated theſe maners of Crays, and Thill-hall, to

William Walton of Little Burghſted Eſq; who preſented to this Living in 1630. About the beginning of this century, —— William Walton Eſq; elder brother to the Admiral, ſold this eſtate to ſeems to be the part, which belonged to Ralph brother of Ilger, at the time of the Survey [A].

Richard Earl of Scarborough; and he, 20 March, 1718, ſold it again for 7200 l. to

Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, held it in 1372, by the name of one fee in Ramſden Creye, and Ramſden Belhouſe (z). Under this family it was holden by John de Vere, Earl of Oxford; and by his ſon Thomas de Vere, Earl of Oxford, in 1358, and 1370 (a).

Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, was poſſeſſed of it in 1398, and Hamo de Chevre held it under him. Concerning this Chevre family ſee in the other Volume, p. 44.

It hath paſſed ſince, with the other Maner and Demeſnes, to the Families of Tyrell, Walton, and Hopkins.

Mr. John Sachwell; Robert Watts; John Richardſon; Chriſtopher Woods; John Hawkins; George Leake, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled [B]. The Belfrey hath on the top a ſpire ſhingled.

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner.

lies north-eaſt of the laſt: and had the diſtinctive appellation of Belhouſe, from its ancient lords of that name.

The Biſhop of London, and Robert Gernon, were poſſeſſed of the lands in this pariſh at the time of the general Survey. One part called the Biſhop's Fee had belonged, in the Confeſſor's reign, to Godric; and Gernon's to three Freemen. Theſe lands were divided afterwards into the Maners, 1. . . . . of Ramſden-Belhouſe. 2. . . . of Ramſden Barrington, alias Barnton.

This is the part that belonged to the Biſhop of London [C].

Reinfred de Bruer was poſſeſſed of it about the reign of K. Henry II. In the year 1200, K. John gave a confirmation of all the lands which the ſaid Reinfred held in Eſſex, to Richard de Belhus (b). [Of this Family ſee a particular account above, page 78, and in the other Volume, p. 190.]—Sir Theobald de Belhus, ſon of Richard, had two ſons, both made knights; Sir Richard, and Sir Thomas.——Sir Richard de Belhus, being poſſeſſed of the two Maners in this pariſh, and having only one daughter, Alice, He gave with her in marriage to Sir Nicolas Barrington, the maner that had been Gernon's; afterwards named from them Ramſden-Barrington: But he enfeoffed, in 1283, his brother and male heir,——Sir Thomas de Belhus, in the capital Maner of Ramſden Belhus; and a Fine was levied thereupon, in 1284 [D]. This Sir Thomas was Sheriff of Cambridgeſhire from 1282 to 1289, which ſeems to have involved him in difficulties [E]. K. Edward I. conſtituted him Seneſhal of Ponthieu; a province that had come to him in right of his Queen. By Floria, or Florentia, his wife, he had three ſons, John, Nicolas, and William. [See above, p. 78.] John was ſeated at Stanway; and Nicolas at Alveley. —— Sir John de Belhus, the eldeſt ſon, by Iſolda daughter of William Fitz-Warin, had Thomas, a knight; Iſolda; and John. —— Sir Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, married Margery . . . . but dyed without iſſue. —— John, the other ſon, married Joanna. . . . .

Before we proceed any futher, we ſhall obſerve, That the Families De Legre, and De Watevile, had an intereſt in the capital Maner of this pariſh, which they made over to the Belhouſe family. For, in the year 1325, Thomas, ſon of William de Legre, by fine, paſſed all his right in the maner of Ramſden-Belhouſe, and Advowſon of the Church, to Thomas de Belhous and Margery his wife. And in 1329, Robert de Watevile and John de Clavering did the ſame, to Thomas ſon of John de Belhous, and Joanna his wife (c).

Sir Thomas de Belhouſe dyed in 1375, without iſſue as we have obſerved. Iſolda his ſiſter was married to John Caſtelayn Eſq; and had by him

Margaret, an only daughter and heir, which brought his eſtates in marriage to Robert Knivet Eſq; ſecond ſon of Sir John Knivet, Lord Chancellor. At the time of his deceaſe in 1419 he held this maner, with the advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London. —— Thomas Knivet Eſq; their ſon and heir, then aged 24 years (d), had two wives, firſt, Elianor daughter of John Doreward; next,——daughter of . . . Flemingles. By the firſt he had, John; and by the ſecond Robert, and Margaret. He dyed in 1458. —— John, his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor (e), by . . . daughter of . . . Baynard, left his only ſon,——Thomas Knivet Eſq; who, by Elizabeth his wife, ſecond daughter and coheir of William Lunsford, of Lunsford in Suſſex Eſq; had Edward; and two daughers, Thomaſine, married to Sir William Clopton, of Kentwell in Suffolk; and Margaret to Thomas Roydon, whoſe only daughter Elizabeth became wife of John Clopton, ſon and heir of Sir William.——Edward Knyvett Eſq; the ſon, at the time of his deceaſe 4 Febru. 1500-1, held this maner of Rammiſden Belhouſe, and alſo that of Stanway &c. His ſecond wife, Catharine held them alſo at the time of her deceaſe, 28 June 1535 (f). By Anne his firſt wife he left an only daughter

Elizabeth, born in 1490, and married to Sir John Rainsforth. She dying 4 February 1507, without iſſue, her aunt Lady Thomaſine Clopton, then aged 40 years, and Catharine Roydon, aged 18, became her coheirs (g). But they did not come into poſſeſſion till 1535, after the death of the ſaid Catharine, when Lady Thomaſine was upwards of 60, and Elizabeth, wife of John Clopton Eſq; upwards of 40 years old. They held this Maner of the Biſhop of London, by fealty, and yearly rent of a Roſe on St. John Baptiſt's day, if demanded (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 190, 191.]

The Knivet Family preſented to this living from 1388 to 1498; and the Clopton from 1546 to 1616 (i): which ſhew how long they were poſſeſſed of the capital Maner, and of the Advowſon. The Inquiſitions poſt mortem do not particularly mention this maner and advowſon, after the year 1535.

William Clopton Eſq; ſold them to Sir Jacob Gerrard Kt. created a Baronet 16 Auguſt 1662, being of Langford in Norfolk.——Sir Thomas his ſon and heir, preſented to the living in 1686. Upon his deceaſe, Jacob his eldeſt ſon being dead before him without iſſue male, the eſtate came to Sir Nicolas Gerrard the ſecond ſon who married Cecilia, daughter of Sir Edwyn Steed Kt. But having no iſſue, his eſtates deſcended to his heir at law,

Sir Jacob-Gerrard Downing, Bart. [For a further account of this family, ſee above, p. 15. 21. and The Engliſh Baronets, edit. 1727. Vol. II. p. 364.]

is the other Maner in this pariſh; which, at the time of the ſurvey, belonged to Robert Gernon [F].

It took the additional name of Barrington, from Sir Nicolas Barrington of Barrington-Hall in Hatfield-Broad-Oak: He had it in marriage with Alice, daughter of Sir Richard de Belhus, who gave the grand Maner of Ramſden to his brother,

Sir Thomas de Belhus, as mentioned above. By his wife Alice, Sir Nicolas Barrington had four ſons; Nicolas, Thomas, Roger; and

Sir Philip Barrington; to which laſt he gave this eſtate. He married Margaret daughter of Sir William Tey, and had by her——Nicolas Barrington of Raleigh Park, Eſq; [See in the other Volume, p. 504.]

This eſtate was then reputed a quarter of a knight's fee, as appears by a fine in 1220 [G].

After having paſſed from Philip Barrington to his deſcendents——Nicolas, ——John, and another——John, who left only one daughter Thomaſine (k), it came into the noble Family of Bohun. For Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1372, held the maner of Rameſden, with the Advowſon of a certain Chapel there, of Thomas de Belhous (l). He left two daughters coheirs, Elianor, and Mary.

Elianor, the eldeſt, was married to Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter; and had by him

Anne, and two other daughters. But they having no iſſue, the whole half of the inheritance centered in Anne. She was married firſt to Thomas, and then to Edmund, both ſucceſſively Earls Stafford, and afterwards to William Bouchier, Earl of Eu, by whom ſhe had Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex.

Upon a partition of the Eſtates of Humfrey de Bohun, between this Anne, and K. Henry V. ſon of Mary the other daughter and coheir of Thomas of Woodſtock; this eſtate fell to the ſhare of Anne. Whereupon it was diſſevered and diſunited from the Dutchy of Lancaſter, to which it had been annexed by K. Henry V. in 1414. [See in the other Volume, p. 452, 453.]

Henry Bourchier, ſon of Anne above-mentioned, Earl of Eſſex, dyed 4 April 1483; holding this maner of the Biſhop of London. His ſon William being dead before him, he was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Henry, Earl of Eſſex (m). At the time of his deceaſe 13 March 1540, he left his only daughter and heir

Anne, married in 1541 to Sir William Parr, created afterwards Earl of Eſſex, and Marquis of Northampton. She dyed 26 Janu. 1570-1, without legitimate iſſue; poſſeſſed, among many other large eſtates, of this maner of Barrington-hall, alias Rameſden, and 30 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, one Park (for there was then one here) 1000 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 400 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 5 l. yearly rent; in Rameſden Belhouſe and Crayes, Downeham, Duddinghurſt, South-Haningfeild, and Harfordſtocke (n). [For a more particular account of the Bourchier family, See the other Volume, p. 149. 253.—255.]

reux Lord Ferrers, Qu. Elizabeth, 25 Novemb. 1570, granted him Barrington-hall, and Rameſden Park, among other eſtates (o) [H]. [See in the other Volume, p. 149. 252. &c. 396. 516.] He ſoon after ſold Barrington-hall to Edmund Tyrell, of Beches in Rawreth Eſq; For this Edmund, at the time of his deceaſe 8 November 1576, held the maner of Barrington-hall, alias Rameſden-Barrington, of the Queen, as of her maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in free ſocage. His four coheirs were, —— Edmund Church, Gent. ſon of his daughter Mary;—— Margaret, wife of John Daniel, —— Thomaſine, wife of William Playter; and Suſan Tyrell (p).

Margaret took for her ſecond huſband Sir Francis Fitch, who in her right enjoyed this eſtate. At the time of his deceaſe, 2 October 1604, he held the maner of Ramſden-Barrington; —— William, ſon of Thomas his elder brother, was his heir, of full age (q). He was knighted 26 March 1608; and, ſome time after 1635, ſold this eſtate to

Sir Edmund Wright, Alderman of London, of whom

Sir Thomas Cheek bought it in 1640. It hath remained ever ſince in his Family, and deſcended, as the maner of Pirgo, to Thomas Archer Eſq; in right of his wife: now Lord Archer. See above, p. 61. 116.

In this Maner was a Free Chapel called Barnton-Chapel, which ſtood near a place called Numphs-Green. It ſtood a long time, but is now demoliſhed, and a cottage erected in its room. There was a diſpute as long ago as K. Edward the Firſt's reign, in 1281, between the Patron and Rector of Ramſden-Belhous, and the Patron and Rector of Barnton-Chapel, which of them had a right to the Tythe of the lands in the maner of Barnton. This was decided by Richard de Graveſend Biſhop of London, who awarded, that the Rector of the Chapel ſhould have Tythes from the lands of the Lord's demeſne, and the Rector of the mother Church from thoſe of the cuſtomary tenants. Another conteſt on the ſame ſcore aroſe about the year 1390, the determination of which is not preſerved; and pehap the Parties dropt it (r).

From the Book of Chantries it appears, 'That 'lands and tenements here were put in feoffment 'by ſundry perſons to find a Preiſt to ſing maſſe 'in the Chapple of Ramſden-Belhouſe, which 'ys diſtant from the Pariſh Church half a myle 'and more, and [was then] adjoining to the 'manſion-place of the Marquiſs of Northampton. The ſaid pariſh of Ramſden-Belhous ys 'a great pariſh, and the moſt part upland. The 'yerely value does amount to 3 l.'

Unto this Free Chapel did belong a Chapel-houſe and ſundry tythes; all which, amongſt other things, K. James I. 18 Auguſt 1606, granted to Robert Morgan and Thomas Butler, and their heirs; who ſold the premiſſes to John Cliff of Ingatſtone, Eſq; Edward Newport Eſq; and William Stourton of Little-Sandford, Gent. And they afterwards, by indenture, dated 29 January 1610, ſold them to Sir William Fitche of Ramſden-Barrington Kt.

Twenty ſhillings a year were given out of an acre and half of land joining to the Chapel-yard in Barnton, for finding bread and wine for the Sacrament.

Beſides the perſons above-mentioned, the following have ſome lands in this pariſh. John Salmon; John Unwin; George Kendall; Antony, Robert, and Thomas Bundock; John Richardſon; Robert Watts; William Platt, &c.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands low, and is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled. The ſteeple hath a ſpire ſhingled.

This Rectory was appendent to the capital Maner of Ramſden Belhouſe, but hath been alienated from it for ſome years paſt.

The Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 763 l.

8. DOWNHAM

hath Ramſden-Belhouſe on the weſt, and is bounded on the eaſt and north by Chelmsford-Hundred. From the two Saxon words Dun, and ham, a village on an hill, is the name formed; anſwering to the high ſituation of the place, eſpecially about the Church. It is not found in Domeſday-book by name. One of theſe two reaſons, as far as conjecture goes, may be aſſigned for it; firſt, that it was anciently a part of Ramſden-Belhouſe, and was that land which Anſchetil held of Robert Gernon.

Coots marſh in Aſheldham; Legats marſh in Tillingham; Oveſey lands; and Swaynes lands in Wivenhoo. Lett. pat. 13 Eliz.

Another reaſon for the omiſſion might be, that this was a Soke, or particular juriſdiction, as appears by a Fine in the year 1209 [I]. If by Soke be meant a Liberty ſubject to ſome Lord by ſpecial privilege, exempt from Taxes, Dunham may be left out of Domeſday-book, as the City of London is for that reaſon. It was indeed ſubject to livery and wardſhip, but that was an inſtitution ſubſequent to the feudal tenures, and the grant of maners to the Normans. Nor was that the intention of collecting the names and poſſeſſions of all the lords of maners in that Book, becauſe we find the Biſhop's and Church lands there, who paid none.

In this pariſh are three Maners. 1. The maner of Downham. 2. . . . that of Berne-hall. 3. The maner of Tremnals, alias Hemnals.

The Maner of DOWNHAM.

Downham-hall lies in a bottom, a little way ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

About the reign of K. John, or beginning of K. Henry the Third's, it ſeems to have belonged to a family ſurnamed de Rameſden, and to William de Mandeville Earl of Eſſex [K].

It ſoon after came into the noble Family of De Vere, Earls of Oxford. For Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who dyed 16 December 1263, held this maner of Dunham, and Advowſon of the Church (s). —— Thomas de Vere held it in 1329, of the gift of his father Robert, the 6th Earl of Oxford (t). As did Sir Baldwin Buttetourt for life, of the grant of John de Vere, 7th Earl of Oxford; it being then held of the King in capite, as parcel of the Earldom of Oxford: —— Thomas de Vere the 8th Earl of Oxford, in 1370 (u). —— Philippa, widow of Robert de Vere Duke of Ireland, in 1411 (w). —— Richard de Vere the 11th Earl granted it to John Hende (x): —— Alice Counteſs of Oxford held it in dower in 1451 (y). This noble Family loſt it, with their whole eſtate, for their adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, as more particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 293. But they recovered it when K. Henry VII. came to the throne. —— John, the 13th Earl, held it, with others, by the ſerjancy of being Great Chamberlain of England. And ſo did —— John the 14th Earl (z). It continued in this family, till —— Edward de Vere, the 17th Earl, ſquandering his eſtates, as related in the other Volume, p. 293, ſold, by licenſe dated 7 Septemb. 1584, the maner of Downham, alias Dunham, with the appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, two mills, one dovehouſe, 20 gardens, 80 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 700 of paſture, 200 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, 5 l. rent in Ramſden, &c. to

Henry Attſlow Gent. ſon and heir of Edward Attſlow M. D. Henry Attſlow dyed 26 May 1622, poſſeſſed of this maner, and the advowſon of the Church; and meſſuages called Sudburies, Barons alias Barnes or Worthams, Hodſhells, Homecroft, and Addiſland &c. —— Edward was his ſon and heir, 21 years old (a). Helen, his daughter and heir, brought this eſtate in marriage to

Sir William Andrew Bart. He dyed 15 Aug. 1684, and was buried in the Chancel here, with an epitaph, leaving —— Sir Francis Andrew his ſon and heir, who having obtained an act of parliament in 1698, ſold this eſtate to

Francis Platt Eſq; of the Victualling-Office. He dying 20 July 1714, without iſſue, his three ſiſters and coheirs, married to —— Davis, Thomas Pratt, and Francis Machaneſs, all of the County of Northampton, ſold it to Oſmond Beauvoir, of Balms in Hackney Eſq; He was Sheriff of this County in 1742, and dying was ſucceeded by his ſon —— [].

The Maner of BERNE-HALL, is ſuppoſed to be what occurs in Domeſday-book under the name of Bertuna [L].

The firſt account we have of this maner, is in the year 1330.

John de Rochford then held the maner of Bernehall of Edmund Earl of Kent, as of his Honor of Swanſcamp, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee (b).

In 1337, Sir Thomas de Rochford, ſon and heir of Sir Thomas de Rochford, releaſed to Adam, ſon of Geffrey de Derſham in Suffolk, and his heirs, all his right in the maner of Bernehall, and in a Park called Parkers-mead, and in all the lands in Downham, Wykford, Ronewelle, and South-Hanewfeld. And, in 1342, Thomas, ſon and heir of Robert de Rochford, granted to William ſon of Geffrey de Derſham, of Offeton, and his heirs, all his right in Bernehalle (c).—— Alianor Derſham was poſſeſſed of this maner in 1392 (d).

It came again to the Rochford family. For, Robert Rochford held a fourth part of a fee in Bernehall, of Joane wife of Sir John Grey, which dyed in 1425, or 1426. At the ſame time, John de Handlo held half a fee in Downham of this Lady (e).

In 1496, a fine paſſed between Edward Underwood and others plaintiffs, Sir John Gray of Wilton, and Edmund, his ſon and heir apparent, deforc', of the maner of Baronhall, alias Bernehale, and lands in Downham, Ronwell, Wykeford, South-Bemflete, North-Bemflete, South-Hanningfeld, Ramſden-Belhous (f).

William Latham Eſq; who dyed 10 April 1558, held the maner of Berne-Hall of Henry Lord Burgavenny;—Thomas Latham of South-Okingdon Eſq; was his couſin and next heir (g).

Sir Edward Sulyard at the time of his deceaſe, 5 June 1610, held the maner of Berne-Hall of Antony Weldon Eſq; [M] as of his maner of Swanſcampe; and 123 acres of land called Garrolds, alias Worthams, Burrys, and Joyſes.—— Edward, his eldeſt ſon and heir, was then 30 years old (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 42.]

We find it next in the Bayning or Banning Family, more particularly mentioned under Little Bentley; and in the other Volume, p. 49. 93.

Paul, Viſcount Banning, left an only daughter and heir [N], Anne, married to Albrey de Vere, the 20th and laſt Earl of that noble family. Upon her deceaſe without iſſue, her noble inheritance came among her four Aunts.

Elizabeth, the youngeſt, was married to Francis Lennard, Lord Dacre; and had by him, Thomas, advanced to the title of Earl of Suſſex, and——Henry Lennard Eſq; who had this among other eſtates. He married . . . . daughter of Timothy Haddock, of Carliſle, merchant, widow of George Uſher, Rector of Arthuret; and, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1703, left by her three daughters; Margaret, married to Col. Lanoye, by whom ſhe hath a ſon, Charles, Lieutenant in the Guards; Catharine, married to . . . Jones Eſq; by whom ſhe had a ſon: and is remarried to Thomas Morgan Eſq; Anne, married firſt to Jerom Tully of Carliſle, by whom ſhe hath no iſſue, ſecondly to Capt. Stack, an Iriſh officer in the French ſervice.

The Maner of TREMNALS, or HEMNALS.

The manſion houſe is a large old building, lying in a bottom, above a mile and a half north from the Church. 'Tis vulgarly called Frimnells.

There was an eſtate called Hemnales in Theydon-Gernon, and one called Thremhal in Stanſted Montfichet, where a Priory ſtood: what was the occaſion of theſe names nothing ſhews.

As to this maner, Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Hemnales, and 16 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 4 of wood, in Dounham, South-Hanningfeld, Weſt-Hanningfeld, Wykford, and Ramſden-Belhouſe, of Henry Earl of Eſſex, by fealty and rent of 40 d. per ann. (i).—His grandſon —— Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1510, held this maner of Hemenalis, alias Fremalis, by the ſame ſervices, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Thomas Tyrell, Eſq; (k) He left only two daughters, in minority, whereof Catharine, the eldeſt, was afterwards married to Sir Richard Baker of Siſinhurſt in Kent.—— Sir Henry, his next brother, inherited the chief of his eſtates; and dyed 20 May 1588, whoſe eldeſt ſon——Sir Thomas departed this life, 25 Septemb. 1592, poſſeſſed of this maner of Hemnalls, alias Fremnalls, holden of the maner of Baringtons in Ramſden Belhouſe (l). His eldeſt ſon——Sir John Tyrell of Herongate Kt. having no iſſue, ſold, 18 July 1627, to Sir Henry Browne of Writtle, Kt. and Edward Bulſtrode of the Inner-Temple Eſq; for their lives, and the longeſt liver of them, the maner and park of Tremnals, alias Hemenhales, and Ramſey-Tirrels, and the right of the Advowſon of the Churches of Little-Warley, Stock alias Haverſtocke, and of Boſworth in Springfeld (m).

Afterwards this eſtate belonged to Sir Thomas Raymond Kt. one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, who dying on the Circuit 14 July 1683, was buried here under an altar tomb, with an epitaph. His ſon Sir Robert Raymond, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, was created Baron Raymond of Abbots Langley, and dying 19 March 1732, was ſucceeded by his ſon, Robert Lord Raymond.

His father had a place in Qu. Elizabeth's Kitchen, where this ſon of his was brought up, who afterwards got up to the Green Cloth. See Wood Athen. Vol. I. col. 729.

[N] This Lord compounded with the Crown for diſafforeſting this maner, and the following parcels of land thereto belonging; namely, Le Bottom Croſley, 17 acres; Stone hill, 26 acres; Thiſlie-field, 14 acres; Barne-Croſley, 10 acres; two parcels called the Medes, 24 acres; Crab croft, 7 acres Grinſted, 34 acres; Peninsfeild, 16 acres; Elliotts Saywood, 6 acres; Elliotts Laye, 19 acres; Frotefeild, 15 acres: and all woods thereto belong. Then valued at 60 l. a year.

Soon after Sir Thomas Raymond's deceaſe, Benjamin Diſbrow Eſq; ſeventh ſon of the famous Major-general Diſbrow [* N], acquired this eſtate; and was made Sheriff of this County 27 April 1689. Departing this life 21 Febru. 1707-8; he was buried here. He had three wives; 1. Elizabeth daughter of . . . Armſted, of Torelby in Lincolnſhire; 2. Sarah, daughter of Robert Norden, married before to Andrew Sam, and to Cornelius Vandenanker: She dyed 9 April 1692. 3. Mary Norden, youngeſt ſiſter of his other wife. By the ſecond he had no iſſue. By the firſt he had Cromwell. And, by the third, Mary, Sarah, two of the name of Elizabeth, and Jane.——Cromwell Diſbrow Eſq; the ſon and heir, married Cornelia, daughter of Cornelius Vanden Anker, by whom he had—— Platt Diſbrow Eſq; the late poſſeſſor; who dyed 14 November 1741; and Charles, Benjamin, John, Nehemiah, another John, Cromwell, Samuel, Cornelia, Mary.

Mr. Thomas Simons; Henry Alexander; John Bull; Thomas Richardſon; and William Bull, have alſo ſome lands here.

John Scarle Clerk, and John Bette of Botulphe-Spene, had licenſe, in 1392, to give 46 acres of arable, one of meadow, and one and a half of wood, in Downham and Ramſden-Belhous; to the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, London (n).

Lady Cæſar, who it ſeems had the maner of Tremnals in 1635, gave for ever, payable out of it, 5 l. a year, to the poor of Downham, Ramſden-Cray, and Eaſt and Weſt Haningfeild.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, ſtands pleaſantly on an hill, and is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled. At the weſt end there is a Tower, which ſeems to be of ſtone.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Downham-hall, and a long time in the gift of the noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford. After having paſſed through ſeveral hands, it came into the Beauvoir family.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 623 l. 3 s. 0d.

HORNDON.

There are within this Hundred three Pariſhes named Horndon, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the reſpective appellations of Eaſt, and Weſt, and on the Hill; ſo ſtyled from their ſituation. But thoſe diſtinctions were not ſubſiſting at the time of the general ſurvey. The name is derived from the Saxon words Hoꞃn, and dun. i. e. Horn-hill. It is ſometimes written Thorndon, in which caſe the firſt ſyllable would be derived from Thorn. And in records it is called otherwiſe Hoꞃninduna, Torninduna, Torenduna.

9. EAST-HORNDON, otherwiſe Great Horndon; lyes eaſt of Weſt-Horndon, which occaſioned the names of them.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Aluuin, one of that King's Thegns; Aluric, a Prieſt; and Goduin, a freeman, were poſſeſſed of the lands in this pariſh: which belonged, at the time of the Survey, to Suene of Eſſex, and the Biſhop of London. Suene's under-tenants were, Siric, and Pagan. Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux, had 20 acres [O].

[* N] Major-General John Diſbrow, a man that rendred himſelf conſiderable during the unhappy times of confuſion in the laſt century, was a yeoman, or gentleman, of about ſixty or ſeventy pounds a year, at the beginning of the wars. But having married one of Oliver Cromwell's four ſiſters, 'he caſt away his ſpade, took a ſword, and roſe with him in 'the Army;' being conſtituted Colonel of a regiment of horſe; one of the four Commanders of the Fleet in the Dutch war; Commiſſary general of the horſe; Major-general of ſeveral counties in the weſt of England, &c. He was alſo one of Oliver's Council, one of the Commiſſioners of his Treaſury; one of the Lords of the Cinque Ports; of both the Committees of Safety; and a member of the Council of State; and of the Other Houſe: Moſt of which were very profitable places: for he had, as one of the Council, 1000 l. a year; as General at ſea, 1095 l. as Colonel of horſe, 474 l. 10 s. as Major general of the weſtern Counties, 666 l. 13 s. 4 d. in all 3236 l. 3 s. 4 d. per ann. He oppoſed earneſtly Ol. Cromwell's taking the title of King; and perſuaded Ric. Cromwell to diſſolve his Parliament. Ludlow, and moſt others that mention the General call him Deſborough; which moſt probably was his true name.—— Arms of Diſbrow. Argent, a feſſe between three bears heads muzled, eraſed, ſable.

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. The maner of Heron, with Montfrith, and other parcels. 2. The maner of Fuchers, or Foulchers. 3. . . . that of Low Horndon, or Abbots.

The Maner of HERON, or HERNE, ſeems originally to have taken its name from a Heronry here, as was lately at Belhouſe in Alveley. [See above, p. 78.] As for the family of Heron, that poſſeſſed it, and from whom it came by marriage into that of Tyrell, they undoubtedly took their name from this place of their habitation.

The manſion-houſe ſtands about a mile north from the Church. It is an old brick edifice, ſurrounded with a moat, on the outer ſide of which moat ſtand four towers detached from the reſt of the building. Great part of it is as old as the time of K. Henry VI, or Edward IV.

Whether this Maner was part of Suene's, and when detached from it; or whether it was the Biſhop of London's Fee mentioned above, we have nothing certain or deciſive. Moſt probably it was, about the reign of K. Henry II. in a Family ſurnamed de Cornhull, mentioned below under the maner of Abbots: or in the Family ſurnamed de Thorndon, lords of Thorndon in the reign of K. John (o).

When the Tyrell Family became firſt poſſeſſed of it, we have no exact account. Unqueſtionably it was when Sir James Tyrell married Margaret daughter and heir of Sir William Heron; which happened in the reign of K. Edward II. or III. Thomas Tirell had licenſe, in 1363, to impark 400 acres of paſture and wood in Thorndon and Ingraſe (*).——John Tyrell one of the founders of the Chantry in Wivenhou-Church, in 1413, held the maner of Herne in Eſthorndon, of the King as of the Caſtle of Rocheſter (p): the firſt time we find theſe names in Records. We ſhall give what occurs therein concerning this eſtate, and its owners the Tyrells, after having given ſome account of their Family.

They deſcended from Walter Tirel, who held the maner of Langham in this County, at the time of the general Survey. [See in the other Volume, p. 242.] Whether he was the ſame perſon who ſhot William Rufus in New Foreſt; or whether he did it at the inſtigation of Archbiſhop Anſelm, through the perſuaſion of a fanatic monk, as is aſſerted by Alan de Inſulis, we are not able to determine [P]. However, they were early perſons of great conſequence in this County; and one of the ancienteſt Families, at leaſt, that hath ſubſiſted till our days.—Thomas Tyrell was one of the Knights of the Shire for Eſſex, in Parliaments, 28. 31. 34. 38, 39. 43. 46, 47. of K. Edward III. and how often his ſucceſſors were, the Liſt of the Knights in the Introduction will ſhew. And the Liſt of Sheriffs there, will alſo ſhew how frequently they ſerved that office for this County: the firſt was John Tyrell of Herongate Eſq; 2 Henry V.

Their Pedigree, now before us, ſtands thus. Sir Walter,——Sir Henry,——Sir Richard,——Sir Edward, or Edmund,——Sir Geffrey,——Sir Lionel,——Sir Edward, who married Maud, or Anne, daughter of . . . Burgate of Suffolk; ——Sir Hugh his eldeſt ſon, was governor of Cariſbrooke caſtle in the Iſle of Wight, which he bravely defended againſt the French in 1377. He married Joane, daughter and co-heir of James Flamberd, and had by her ——Sir James Tyrell of Heron, who by Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir William Heron, had Emma, wife of Richard Enefeild, and——Sir Walter: He took to wife Jane, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Swinford of Eſſex, by whom he had his ſon and heir,——Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, that married firſt Alice daughter of . . . D'adeleigh, by which he had no iſſue. But by his ſecond wife, Elianor, daughter of John Flambert, he had —— Sir John Tyrell, Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1423, who ſerved in the wars under K. Henry V. and was appointed by him ſurveyor of the carpenters of the new works at Calais, with the wages of 12 d. a day: he was alſo Treaſurer of the houſhold to K. Henry VI. (q). He married Alice, daughter and coheir of Sir William Coggeſhall, of Little Sandford, by Antiochia his wife daughter of Sir John Hawkwood, by whom he had ſix ſons and four daughters; namely, Walter; Thomas, William ſenior, of GIPPING in Suffolk; John; William junior, of BEECHES in Rawreth; and John, Clerk. The daughters were, Alice, [P] It is far from being a clear point, that this Family was deſcended from the Walter Tirel who ſhot William Rufus; and as far is it from being certain that he did it deſignedly. Mr. James Tyrrell hath collected together, in his Hiſtory of England, Vol. II. p. 108, the difference between Authors concerning the manner of that King's death, to which we beg leave to refer. As to Alanus de Inſulis his ſtory, the learned W. Baxter, (Præfat. ad Gloſſar. Antiq. Britannic. p. 12.) doth not appear to applaud or commend it. For an account of that Alanus, ſee Bp. Tanner's Bibliotheca.

Elizabeth, Alianor, and another. Their mother dyed in 1422, and is buried in this Church, with an epitaph (r) [Q]. The ſecond ſon and heir——Sir Thomas, of Heron, married Emma, daughter of Sir William Marney of Layer-Marney, by which he had four ſons, Sir William; Thomas of S. OKENDON in Eſſex, and of Thornton in Buckinghamſhire; Humfrey of Little WARLEY; Sir Robert of HORNDON on the Hill: and two daughters, Anne, wife of John Darcy of Toleſhunt-Darcy; and Elizabeth, wife of Robert Darcy of Danbury, re-married to Richard Hawte.—Sir William Tyrell of Heron, the eldeſt ſon, married Alianor, daughter of Robert Darcy, by Alice Fitz-Langley, and had Sir Thomas, a Knight-Banneret; Alice, wife of John, or Robert, Rocheſter; and Maud, wife of Richard White,——Sir Thomas, the ſon and heir, married, firſt, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Devereux Lord Ferrers of Chartley: ſecondly Beatrix, daughter of John Cokaine, of Derbyſhire Eſq; by Elizabeth Bovile. By this laſt he had Thomas; and Beatrix, wife of Antony, ſecond ſon of Sir John Bruges Lord Mayor of London. He was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1460, and dyed in 1476 (s). The ſon and heir——Sir Thomas married Conſtantia, daughter, and at length heir of John Blount, Lord Mountjoy, and had by her ſix ſons, Thomas, Henry, William a Knight of Rhodes, John, Thomas, Charles; and two daughters, Catharine, and Anne. He dyed in 1510 (t).——Thomas Tyrell Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, Sheriff of this County in 1517, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Browne, Lord Mayor of London; [re-married after his deceaſe to Sir William Petre.] He dyed 3 April 1540; and having only two daughters, Catharine then 7 years old, and Gertrude but half a year (u), his next brother Henry inherited the chief of his eſtates. Catharine was afterwards married to Sir Robert Baker of Siſſinhurſt, in Kent.——Sir Henry Tyrell, his next brother, and ſucceſſor, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1551. He married Thomaſine, daughter of William Gounſton of London Eſq; by whom he had Thomas; Bennetta, wife of Edward Moone; Hawiſe, married firſt to John Daniell of Meſſing, afterwards to Stephen Beckingham; Gertrude, to John Browne, of Fidelers in Writtle; Thomaſine, to Francis Browne, of Radwinter; and Alianor, to Henry Palmer, of Dews-hall; and ſeveral other children. Departing this life 20 May 1588, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Thomas Tyrell Eſq; then 40 years old (w); afterwards knighted. He married Mary, daughter of Sir John Sulyard of Wetherſden in Suffolk, and had by her, John; Thomas, of Ramſey-Tyrells; Anne, wiſe of John Cliffe, of Ingatſtone; Hawiſe, wife of Francis Dacre of the north. He dyed 25 Septemb. 1592, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Sir John, then 20 years old (x). He married 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Croke, Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench, 2. Jocoſa, daughter of John Baker, of Siſſinhurſt Eſq; but having no iſſue by either, his brother——Thomas ſucceeded him. By Margaret his wife, daughter of John Fillol of Old-Hall in Rayne Eſq; he had John, born 14 Decemb. 1597, afterwards knighted; and Thomas, of Butteſbury, who, by Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Steward of Chelmsford, had John Tyrell of Billerca, married to Mary daughter of Giles Alleyn of Haſeley, Eſq;——Sir John Tyrell, married, 14 December 1624, Elizabeth, only daughter of George Evelyn in Wiltſhire Eſq; one of the Six Clerks in Chancery, by which he had Elizabeth, born 6 Octob. 1629; married to Humfrey Forſter Eſq; This firſt wife dyed of a conſumption in the February following, and was buried at Weſt-Dean. His ſecond wife, to whom he was married in June 1630, was Martha, daughter of Sir Laurence Waſhington of Stonage in Wiltſhire, Kt. Regiſter in Chancery; by her he had, Laurence, born 1 November 1632 at Springfeild, who dyed young, and John, born 14 March 1635. Their father, Sir John, was Batchelor of Arts of Wadham College in Oxford; knighted by K. Charles I. 27 Janu. 1627-8, put into the commiſſion of the Peace in 1628, put out of it in 1641. He was a great ſufferer for his loyalty to K. Charles I. having been once decimated, twice impriſoned, thrice ſequeſtred and forced to compound for 600l. and many times plundered [R]. After the Reſtoration, he was elected in 1661, one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for Maldon. He dyed in 1675, aged 82, and his wife Martha 17 Decemb. 1670, in the 90th year of her age; and are both buried in this Church with an epitaph. By this ſecond wife, beſides Laurence, and John, he had Thomas, and Charles, who both dyed without iſſue, and Martha wife of Sir Benjamin Ayloffe, of Great Braxted, Bart. Sir John, the eldeſt ſon, was created a Baronet 22 Octob. 1666, reſiding then at Springfeild. [See in the other Volume, p. 9.] But he dyed 30 March 1673 aged 36, before his father, having had three wives. 1. Lettice, daughter of Thomas Copping of Mercatſal, in Hertfordſhire Eſq; by whom he had his ſon and heir Sir Charles. 2. Anne, daughter of Richard Yeand of London, merchant: She dyed 24 April 1664. 3. Elizabeth, daughter of John Allen, alderman of London, remarried, after his deceaſe, to Sir Thomas Stamp Kt. alderman and Lord Mayor of that city. By theſe two laſt he had no iſſue.——Sir Charles ſucceeded his grandfather in 1675. He married Martha, daughter and heireſs of Charles Mildmay of Woodham-Mortimer Eſq; and with her obtained that maner and advowſon. They had one ſon, John; and a daughter married to Col. Windham of Suffolk. He dyed 3 Febru. 1714, aged 54, and ſhe 27 March 1690, aged 27, and were buried in this Church, with an epitaph.——Sir John, their only ſon and heir, married, firſt, Mary daughter of James Dolliff Eſq; knighted afterwards, and had by her Mary, wife of John Comyns Eſq; [ſee in the other Volume p. 60.] Martha, married, 11 October 1737, to Sir Thomas Drury, of Overſton in Northamptonſhire, Bart. Anne; and Elizabeth. By his ſecond Lady, Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter of John Cotton of the Middle-Temple Eſq; deſcended from Antony Cotton of Pantfeild, Gent. [See in the other Volume, p. 406.] he had Charles; John; and another ſon who dyed young. Sir John Tyrell departing this life 21 June 1729, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon—Sir Charles, who dyed in July 1735, at Felſted-ſchool: Whereupon his next brother——Sir John, born 23 March 1725-6, inherited the title and eſtates. He married 26 June 1762, Miſs Criſpe, only daughter and heir of Thomas Criſpe Eſq; of Perbold in Lancaſhire, by whom he had two Daughters. But he dyed 5 January 1766. His affectionate and diſconſolate widow, being overcome with her immoderate Grief at the loſs of ſo kind a Huſband, quite ſunk under it, and followed him the 23d of September 1766 [S].

[Q] After Sir John Tyrell's deceaſe ſhe was re-married to John, ſon and heir of Sir William Langham of Pantfeild in this County. See the other Volume, p. 162. 406. 525.

[R] In the preamble of his 'Loyal Advice to K. Charles II.' he ſays, 'he had loſt more than he had left (being no ſmall matter) for his Loyalty and Love to his Majeſty.'—And in the end, that 'he had lived in Purgatory near 20 years, to the Honour of his exhauſted Family.' From his MS. pocket Book, lent me by the late worthy Sir John Tyrell. In that and other MSS. Memoirs of his, lent me at the ſame time, I found the following anecdotes. 'It was the great fault of his Majeſty's [K. Charles I.] Counſellers, to take all his Servants, except ſome in the greateſt Offices, upon the recommendation of one or other of the Lords of the Council or Houſhold; and they always preferred ſuch as would give moſt, not regarding the Birth or Qualities of the Perſons: ſo that ſuch ſervants looked more upon thoſe Lords than the King by whom they got their fortunes.'—'As for Weſton, a man ſet up by the cunning of the Jeſuits, he privately borrowed 10,000l. of a certain Lord of the ſame profeſſion, to buy his place of Treaſurer. And then inſinuating himſelf into the King's favour, was all his time a cunning contriver, to put the King upon ſuch ſtrains, as proved the ſubjects regret, and a great upholder privately of the Jeſuitical party, which was now become almoſt the only ſect of all our Engliſh Papiſts, in which Religion this Treaſurer at laſt profeſſedly dyed. Theſe Jeſuits have been ſuch cunning atheiſtical contrivers in all States, that I have heard ſome moderate Papiſts confeſs, that they have almoſt undone their Religion.'

Having thus traced this ancient Family down to the preſent times, and ſupplied many omiſſions, as well as corrected ſeveral errors, which were in former accounts; I ſhall now ſhew what occurs in records concerning This and their other eſtates.

We have juſt obſerved above, That John Tyrell held this maner of Herne in Eſthorndon in 1413. The next owner of it, by the name of Hyern, and of ſeveral other very conſiderable eſtates in this County [T], mentioned in the

‘ His [Ol. Cromwell's] end was thought to be haſtened ‘ by the conſideration of his vaſt Debts, and the open eyes, ‘ and general Deſertion, of all the people, and by the cutting ‘ ſpeeches of his dying daughter Cleypole, upon his laſt viſit ‘ on her death bed.’

‘ Cromwell's wife, commonly called Old Joane, with his ‘ complices, at the Reſtoration conveyed to the Thames ſide ‘ a great quantity of gold, and ſome of the beſt Goods ‘ belonging to the King and Queen, to be conveyed beyond ‘ ſea, but they were found and ſeized by the Parliament.— ‘ Till then, ſhe lived at the Cockpit at Whitehall, but had ‘ all her goods ſeized.’—[In the Life of Ol. Cromwell by J. H. 1663, ſhe is called his wife Elizabeth, alias Joan .... viz. Boucher.]

Having oberved above, p. 139. note Q. that J. Thurloe, Ol. Cromwell's Secretary, was born at Roding Abbeſs, of which his father was Rector, we ſhall add the following anecdote concerning him out of Sir John's Memoirs. ‘ It ‘ was wondered that Thurloe made not his eſcape ſooner, ‘ but he preſumed upon pardon; becauſe he had Cromwell's ‘ Black Book, wherein were Cromwell's ſecrets, and others, ‘ diſcovering all the Plots and private Plotters and Traytors ‘ here, and alſo about the King, which he intended to preſeut ‘ the King, but his man ſtole it from him, and carried it to ‘ the King before his coming to London, and that made ‘ Thurloe flie for it.’

Welles, as of the maner of Old-hall; a meſs' called Hyern, 100 acr. of arable, 200 acr. of paſture, 60 of wood, and 40 of meadow, of the Queen of England, as of the Duchy of Lancaſter; 3 parts of the maner of Springfeild, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne; the maner of Crayes in Ramſden-Crayes, of the King in cap. and bis in anno 4 hominibus, & uno prepoſito; the maner of Tyled-hall in the ſame pariſh, of Henry Earl of Eſſex, as of his maner of Barington; ſixteen meſs' called Wyndellond, lying in Ramſden-Cray, 1000 acr. of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of paſture, 240 of wood in Eſthorndon, Springfeild, Chelmesford, Mulſham, Crayes, Bartleſden, Retyndon, Ingrave, Downton, and Little Burſted, of the Biſhop of London; 1 meſs' in Horndon, called the Swan, of Edw: Shaa; 32 acr. of arable in Horndon, called Whelers of Richard Duke of Glouceſter; 1 meſs' in Stanford in le Hope, called Bottons, 100 acr. of arable called Shermans, of Ric. Inquiſitions, was——Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476 (y). His ſon——Sir Thomas, who departed this life in 1510, held alſo the meſſuage called Herne, with the ſame quantity of land belonging to it as mentioned in the note [T], only it was now called 60 acres of meadow, 40 of wood, and 40 of furze and heath. He held alſo the maner of Fowlches in this pariſh (z). His ſon——Thomas Tyrell Eſq; held, at the time of his deceaſe in 1540, this maner of Heron of the King, as of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6 d. (a). His brother——Sir Henry Tyrell held alſo the maner of Heron, in 1588, of the Queen, as of her Honor of Mandevile, by one knight's fee; the maner of Foulchers, of the ſame Honor, by the ſixth part of a knight's fee; and lands here called Mountfrith, Fingods Heron, and Poddeſbrooke, by half a knight's fee (b). His ſon——Thomas held alſo the ſame in 1591 (c): From whom moſt of them paſſed to his deſcendents.

Fingods, and Poddeſbroke, are now only the names of Woods belonging to Herons.

The Maner of ABBOTS was ſo named becauſe it belonged to Waltham-Abbey. And it is alſo called Low Horndon, becauſe the Houſe lies in a bottom below the Church.

Suene of Eſſex was poſſeſſed of it at the time of the Survey, as appears above, and upon the forfeiture of his grandſon Henry de Eſſex, on account of his cowardiſe, it came to the Crown. [See under Raley, and in the other Volume, p. 166.]

K. Henry II. at the requeſt of Peter de Goldington lord of this vill, which Gervaſe de Cornhull held under him, granted it to Henry ſon of the ſaid Gervaſe, to hold of the King by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. In 1166, the heir of Henry de Cornhull held a fee in Thorndon of the Honor of Peverell of Nottingham. K. Richard I. confirmed to Henry de Cornhull the maner of Thorndon, with 100 acres of waſte-ground (d).

Joane, daughter and heir of Henry de Cornhull, brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband Hugh de Nevill, about the year 1195. [See in the other Volume, p. 371. 515.] With the advice and good will of his ſon John Nevill, he granted this maner with appertenances, except the Advowſon of the Church, to the Canons of Waltham-Holy Croſs, to pray for his ſoul, and the ſouls of his wife Joane, his heirs and ſucceſſors (e).

They enjoyed it till their diſſolution.

Half a knight's fee, parcel of what formerly belonged to Henry de Eſſex, and holden of the Honor of Rayleye, belonged to a family ſurnamed de Torndon.

Sir William de Tormdon, or Torindon, held it about the year 1210 (f). He had a daughter named Deſiderata, married to Robert de St. John; and they had a daughter, Agnes, to whom her grandfather Sir William gave ſome aſſart lands in this pariſh; which ſhe granted to the Abbot and Canons of Waltham. This laſt, as far as we can judge, is the ſame as was afterwards called the Maner of Damhelins. This, as well as the former, at the diſſolution of Monaſteries, came to the Crown.

In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted, or ſold them, by the name of the Maner of Eſt-Thornden, with appertenances, in Eſt-Thornden, and Damhelens, to Sir William Petre, and his heirs; to hold by the 100th part of a knight's fee: together with 74 acres of wood and underwood, in the tenure of John Tyrell (g). He gave 41 l. 13 s. 6 d. for them; and they were part of Anne of Cleve's jointure.

Pope Paul IV. confirmed them afterwards to him, by the name of the maner or lordſhip of Eaſt Borndon, [Horndon] with land called Dame Elyns.

Sir William Petre alienated the maner called Dambelines, and divers lands and tenements, to John Tyrell Eſq; by licenſe dated 28 October 1551.——John Tyrell of Little Warley Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe, 2 March 1585-6, held the meſſuage, and 20 acres of arable, 40 of paſture, 60 of wood, and 100 of furze and heath, called Dame Ellyns, in Little and Great Warley, and Childerdiche: He left Mary Clynton his daughter and heir, 30 years old, and upwards (h).

As for the maner of Low-Thorndon, by the name of Eaſt Horndon, it hath continued ever ſince, as far as we can find, in the noble Family of Petre (i).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground, and conſiſts of a body and two aiſles. The Chancel hath a ſouth Chapel, called the Lord Petre's Chapel, probably becauſe it belonged to his maner of Abbots. At the weſt end there is a Tower of brick, embattled, containing 4 Bells.

This Rectory was a long time in the Neville Family, who, when they gave their Maner [See in the other Volume, p. 79. 371.] K. Henry VI. 30 April 1442, granted it to Sir Thomas Tyrell, for his good ſervices, and to his heirs; and it hath continued ever ſince in that Family.

By a compoſition between the Abbot of Waltham and the Rector of this pariſh, the Rector was authorized to receive 5s. a year, on St. John Baptiſt's day, out of the Abbey's eſtate, for ſmall Tithes; upon his giving leave to the Abbot and Convent to build a Chapel here, within the bounds of their own Court, for divine ſervice; on condition the mother Church was no way damnified ( k)*. No traces of this Chapel are now remaining.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 508l.

10. WEST HORNDON

lies Weſt of the laſt, which occaſioned the name. It is otherwiſe called in records Little Horndon.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, two Freemen were poſſeſſed of this pariſh; which Edmund ſon of Algot held at the time of the Survey.

A certain Deacon had here 30 acres, and the fourth part of the Church, and it lay to the King's alms. Goduin Gudhen had illegally taken two manſions, being part of the land which Hugh de St. Quintin held of the King. The ſame Goduin had alſo taken 3 virgates of land, belonging to a certain freeman [U].

There is but one MANER in this pariſh.

Weſt-Horndon-Hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands in a Park on a riſing ground, from whence there is an extenſive proſpect. Sir William Petre made it a noble pile, but it is rebuilding in a more magnificent manner by the preſent owner, the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

The next poſſeſſors of this eſtate upon record, after the general Survey, were the Families of de Thany, Brianzon, Drokensford, and Neville.

Of the heirs of Roger de Thany, this maner of Thorndon, with the advowſon of the Church, were held by John de Brianzon, who dyed in 1315, and had, ſome years before, enfeoffed Bartholomew de Weſton in the ſame, in fee (l). Under his ſon —— Laurence de Thany, who departed this life in 1317, John Brianzon held lands and tenements in Little Thorndon, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. His ſiſter and heir,

Margaret (m), brought this eſtate to her huſband John de Drokensford, as ſhe did the maners of Stapleford-Tany, Chicknal St. James, &c. [See above, p. 77. 179. and in the other Volume, p. 79.]

Of them, William Noyle [Nevill] held this maner of Weſt Thorndon, by the 4th part of a knight's-fee, viz. of 40s. 10s. whenever a ſcutage happened (n). At the time of his deceaſe, in 1339, he held the maner of Weſt-Thorndon, with the Advowſon of the Church, beſides thirty acres of arable in Chilterditch, of John de Drokensford of his maner of Stapleford-Tany, by ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and a pair of gilt ſpurs, or 6d. a year; and the ſaid 30 acres were holden of the Counteſs of Kent, by the ſervice of 4s. a year, as of the Barony of Montchenſy. His ſon—— John Noyl (meaning Nevill) held alſo three parts of a knight's fee in Weſt-Horndon under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1360 (o) [W].

We have no account after this, for ſeveral years, of the owners of this eſtate [X]. At laſt it appears, in the reign of K. Henry VI. in a Family ſurnamed Lodowic John, not mentioned before in the records relating to Eſſex, and that had at once very large poſſeſſions in this County. In a pedigree of the noble Family of Mordaunt Earls of Peterborough (p), [one of whom, John Mordaunt Eſq; in the reign of K. Henry VII. married Ela, or Ellen, daughter and heir of Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis,] we have this account of the origin of the Fitz-Lewis Family. According to that, they were derived from Lewis, Dauphin of France, afterwards K. Lewis VIII. who was invited over by the Barons in the reign of K. John. During his ſtay here, by an intrigue with a noble Engliſh Lady, not named, he had a ſon ſurnamed Fitz-Lewis. That Lady, and two ſiſters ſhe had, were heirs to a great inheritance; and ſhe afterwards was married to a nobleman, from whom are deſcended ſome of our greateſt Families. Her natural ſon, Lewis Fitz-Lewis, married Margaret of Eſſex, and had by her——Sir John Fitz-Lewis, knighted in the firſt war with Scotland, but afterwards ſiding with Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, againſt K. Edward II. he happened to be killed at the battle of Burroughbrigg, and his eſtates were confiſcated. By his wife, Elizabeth de Harpden, he had his ſon —— Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, to whom K. Edward III. reſtored his father's lands. He married Elizabeth le Baude, by whom he had——Sir John Fitz-Lewis, of Weſt-Horndon: who dyed in 1442, poſſeſſed of this maner, and other large eſtates (q) [Y]. He is the ſame man who is called in the Inquiſitions Sir Lodowic John. He married three wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Nevill, by which he had Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Wingfeild. 2. Alicia, daughter of John de Vere the twelfth Earl of Oxford, by whom he had two ſons, Sir Lewis Fitz-Lewis, and Sir Henry Fitz-Lewis.

The latter, a brave Knight, and ſtrenuous in the intereſt of the Houſe of Lancaſter, married . . . Mary, ſecond ſiſter and coheir of Edmund Beaufort Duke of Somerſet, and had by her Mary his daughter and heir, married firſt to Antony Woodville Earl Rivers, by whom ſhe had no iſſue; afterwards to Sir John Nevill, a natural ſon of the Earl of Weſtmoreland, and had by him Anne, wife of Sir John Markham (r).

Sir John Fitz-Lewis's 3d wife was Anne, daughter of John Montacute Earl of Saliſbury, and by her he had Lodowick, or Lewis, John. She had been firſt married to Sir John Hankford (s), and her third huſband was John Holand Earl of Huntingdon, and Duke of Exeter. —— Sir Lewis, ſon of Sir John Fitz-Lewis, by Anne Montacute, daughter of the Earl of Saliſbury, appears to have had this eſtate. For K. Edward IV. in 1471, granted to his brother Richard Duke of Glouceſter, afterwards K. Richard III, the maners of Weſt-Horndon, Porters in Stebbing, Gyngrauf, Shenfeld, Cravenham, Eſt-Tilbury, Weſt-Tilbury, and Ames, all in Eſſex, part of the poſſeſſions of Lewis Fitz-John attainted (t), on account of his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter. [See above, p. 105.] He married Margaret Stonor, by whom he had—— Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, his ſon and heir, to whom the father's eſtates were reſtored, and who took to wife Mary, or Alice, daughter and coheir of John Harleſton Eſq; They had one ſon, named John, and a daughter Ela, Ellen, or Elizabeth, for ſo many different ways is ſhe called.——John Fitz-Lewis Eſq; the ſon, married Anne daughter of Sir Robert Lovel; but he and his bride had the misfortune, on their wedding-night, to be conſumed in the flames which deſtroyed Weſt-Horndon-hall (u).

Ela Fitz-Lewis, his ſiſter [Z], being a great heireſs, Sir John Mordaunt gave K. Henry VII. 1300 marks for her wardſhip; and married her: her eſtate being reckoned 500 marks a year. At the time of her deceaſe, 2 June, 1543, ſhe had moſt of the eſtates that had been her great grandfather's Sir John Fitz-Lewis [A]. Wherein ſhe was ſucceeded by her ſon——Lewis Mordaunt, then only 5 years old (w).

But his ſon——John Lord Petre, who dyed 11 October 1613, held the maner of Weſt-Horndon, with Feild-houſe, of the maner of Swanneſcombe in Kent, by the rent of 4 s. a year (x). Of this noble Family ſome account is given in the other Volume, p. 63.

GING-RALPH, vulgarly INGRAVE, after having been many years a diſtinct Pariſh, was, by act of parliament, united to that of Weſt-Horndon.

Ging, derived from the Saxon Ge-ing, a meadow or paſture, is explained in the other Volume, note W. p. 43. [B]. As for the addition of Ralph, it was taken from its owner at the time of the Survey, namely Ralph brother of Ilger.

The name is otherwiſe written in records, Ging-Raff, Ginges Radulfi, Ging ad Radulphum, Ingrave alias Ingraffe, Reng, or Rynge, Raufre, Yengrave.

Beſides Ralph brother of Ilger, who held what had belonged to Oſlac in Edward the Confeſſor's reign [C]; Odo, biſhop of Bayeux, and Serlo, held lands here; which had belonged to one Freeman, and to Alſid [D].

Theſe ſeveral parcels became very early united into one maner.

This lordſhip was held of the Barony of Swainſcamp, by the family of Montchenſy [E]; and, upon failure of the male line of the eldeſt branch of this Family, about the reign of K. Edward I. [ſee in the other Volume, p. 35. 253.] that King gave it to his ſixth ſon, Edmund of Woodſtock, Earl of Kent.

The Montchenſy family had a view of frank-pledge here. For William de Montchenſy was called upon in 1284, to ſhew by what warrant, or authority, it was holden by him.

A Family, ſurnamed from it de Ginges, held it, or at leaſt part, in K. Edward the Firſt's reign; for that King, in 1281, granted licenſe to Reginald de Ginges to impark divers lands in Ginges Radulfi, within the Foreſt of Eſſex (z). In 1314, a fine paſſed between John, ſon of Reginald de Genges and Margery his wife, plaintiffs, and John Malegraf deforc' of the maner of Ginges Rauf, with the Advowſon of the Church. And, in 1317, the ſaid John, and Margery, paſſed the premiſſes by fine, after their joint lives, to Richard Goſſalin, and Alice his wife; who is ſaid to have been daughter and heir of John de Ginges. They held them of Edmund aforeſaid, Earl of Kent, in 1330 (a). And in 1332, they held them of his Counteſs, by the name of Rynge, Raufre, as of the maner of Swaneſcompe, which was of the Barony of Monchenſy, by the ſervice of 2 s. per ann. and ſuit of Court from month to month. See under Eaſt and Weſt Tilbury. Sir Richard Goſſalyne dyed in 1332, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Richard (b) [F]. He was dead befor the year 1353; for John Earl of Kent, who dyed that year, held half a fee in Gynge-Raufe, which Richard Goſhalme lately held (c). —— Robert Goſhalme had this eſtate in 1388; He held it under Thomas de Holand, Earl of Kent, by the name of half a fee: and in 1398, under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, by the ſame title. The latter held here a view of frank pledge once a year (d).

The Goſhalm family ceaſed here about the reign of K. Henry IV. or V. For, in 1420, William Fitz-William Eſq; couſin of the late Robert Godſalm, releaſed to Edmund Traunpour, and William Larde, Chaplains, and their heirs, all his right in the maner of Gynge Rauf, with the Advowſon of the Church: and in lands and tenements in Eaſt and Weſt Tilbury, Horndon, Dounton, Chaldweil, and Little Thurock, which were once Robert Godſalm's (e).

John Godſalf had a Park at Gynge Ralf; in the name of Reginald de Gynge (f).

By the marriage of the heireſs of the Goſhalm family, as it is ſaid, this eſtate came to Lodowic, or Lewis, John; who preſented to this Rectory in 1435, and jointly with Anne his wife in 1438, 1439, and 1441, being called a Knight in the two laſt preſentations (g). See an account of him under Weſt-Horndon. He dyed in 1442, poſſeſſed of this maner of Gynge Raufe, with the Advowſon of the Church, which he held of Richard Duke of Yorke, by the ſervice of 5 s. per ann. (h). His ſon —— Sir Lewis Fitz-Lewis being attainted for his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, this eſtate was given, with many others, by K. Edward IV. to his brother Richard Duke of Glouceſter.

But the maner of Weſt-Horndon, and the Advowſon of this Church, were given to Thomas Bourchier, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who preſented in 1477 and 1480 to this Rectory, by reaſon of his Lordſhip of Thorndon. Upon Richard's being defeated and ſlain at Boſworth fight, all his eſtates coming to K. Henry VII. he reſtored theſe to Sir Richard Fitz-Lewis, who preſented to this Rectory from 1494 to 1519 (i).

Ela Fitz-Lewis brought them in marriage to Sir John Mordaunt. And of that family they were purchaſed by Sir William Petre, who dyed poſſeſſed of them 13 January 1571; and from whom they have deſcended to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre.

Mr. Joſeph Sworder; John Trott; Benjamin Bucknall, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Robert Spencer, who was 48 years Rector of this Church, and dyed 26 September 1638, gave a Houſe and Land, of three pounds a year, over againſt the great Pond on Ing-ralph Common, for the ornaments of the Church. It is called Church-houſe and Church croft.

The Poor have alſo a gift in bread.

And an Alms-houſe ſtands on the Green, for two dwellers.

The CHURCHES of Weſt-Horndon, and Ging-Ralph, being grown ruinous, an Act of Parliament was obtained for uniting thoſe two Pariſhes: and the Churches being taken down, a new one of brick was built at the Charge of the Rt. Hon. the late Lord Petre [G]. It ſtands about the mid-way between the two ancient Churches, near the Mounts belonging to W. Horndon-Hall, whence an avenue towards Burntwood is made, with new plantations of trees, and a baſon.

11. HORNDON ON THE HILL, ſtands about four miles and a half ſouth from the two others; and on a Hill, which occaſioned the name. From hence is a very good proſpect.

This Town has a ſmall market on Saturdays: And a Fair on St. Peter's day, unleſs altered with the Style.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Uluric a freeman enjoyed this Pariſh: But Euſtace Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant Garner, held it, at the time of the Survey [H].

It was divided afterwards into theſe Maners, 1. Ardern, or Arden, Hall. 2. The maner of Malgreffs. 3. . . . . that of Withfield.

ARDERN-HALL

ſtands at the eaſt end of the Town.

This is the largeſt Maner, but it formerly held of that of Malgreff.

After Earl Euſtace, its ancienteſt owners were a Family ſurnamed de Ardern, from which it took the appellation of Ardern-hall.

In 1122, Thomas Ardern and his ſon Thomas, gave to the Monks of Bermondſey, the tythe of corn of their lordſhip in Horndon, which was this eſtate (k).

John de Lovetot, who dyed in 1295, held of Thomas de Ardern, in Horndon, by the ſervice of one roſe of yearly rent, one meſſuage, 500 acres of arable, three acr. of meadow, 17 pieces of mead, 17 acr. of paſture, a wind-mill, and a fourth part of a market there, 61 s. 8 d. ob. rent, perquiſites of Court with a view of frank-pledge;——John was his ſon and heir (l).

Next it was in the families of Fabel, Shaa, and Pooley. For Thomas Fabel of Hatfield-Peverell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1353, held lands and tenements in Horndon, called Ardern-hall, of whom the jurors knew not; and the fourth part of the Market of Horndon belonging to Ardern-Hall, of the King of his Honor of Bologne (m). ——John his ſon and heir granted to Robert de Marney Knight, all his Right in the maner of Ardern-Hall (n). Though the Jury did not know it, the following record ſhews of whom this Lordſhip was holden.

In 1360, Sir Thomas Maundevill, granted to Robert de Marney Kt. and his heirs, all his lands and tenements, which Bartholomew Denmars and Robert Pycot, and John Fabel lately held in Horndon (o). The ſame year, Robert Pykot releaſed to Sir Robert Marney all his right in Ardern-hall. There are ſeveral Grants and Releaſes of this maner from the Family of Marney, in the time of K. Edward III. yet theſe ſeem to have been but for a time, and in truſt, becauſe we have proof of its being in their hands, afterwards. Sir Robert de Marney releaſed to Robert de Burton and John de Shropham, and their heirs, all his right in the maner of Leyre-Marney and Advowſon of the Chantry of the ſaid village, and the maner of Ardern-Hall in Horndon, in 1369. And, in 1377, John Shropham, Chaplain, releaſed to Robert de Burton, Parſon of the Church of South-Wokyndon, and his heirs, all his right in the maners aforeſaid (p). [See under Layer Marney. The ſame Robert de Burton granted to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Sergeaulx a yearly rent of twenty marks out of the maner of Ardern-Hall in Horndon for life (q). This was their way of marriage ſettlements; for Sir William Marney, who was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1402,

This Sir William Marney dyed in 1414. At the time of his deceaſe, he is recorded to have held the maner of Arden-hall in Horndon, of Thomas Malgrave; and one tenement with 100 acres of arable, called Horndon-Houſe, in Horndon, of John de Cham's by the ſervice of 15*s.* 1 d. ob. rent;——Thomas was his ſon and heir (s).

This is the only time we find it ſaid, that Ardern-hall held of Malgrave, who had a leſſer maner in this pariſh; but we give it as it is in the Inquiſition: ——Thomas, ſon and heir of Sir William Marney, was knighted; but having only one daughter, who dyed in her minority, he was ſucceeded by his next brother——John Marney Eſq; father of —— Henry, one of the Privy-Council to K. Henry VII. and created by K. Henry VIII. 9 April 1523, Lord Marney. But neither of them appear by the Inquiſitions to have been poſſeſſed of this Maner; though they ſeem to have been lords paramount till

For, before the reign of K. Henry VII. it was in the Shaa Family, mentioned

Sir Edward Shaa, who dyed 20 April 1488, held the maners of Ardern-hall, and Horndon-houſe, and other eſtates [L], wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Hugh Shaa Eſq; then aged 22, who, at the time of his deceaſe, 20 March 1491, held alſo the maners of Horndon-houſe, and Arden-hall, with appertenances, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee: alſo a tenement called Whelers, and Culverhouſe croft, and Welde croft, in this pariſh. His wife's name was Julian. They left only two daughters, Margaret, wife of Thomas Rich [M]; and Catharine, wife of William Browne, of London, mercers (t).

Sir John Shaa held, next, the maner of Arden-hall of the Maior and Commonalty of London, by fealty, and the ſervice of one pair of gilt ſpurs, if demanded; he held alſo the maner of Horndon-houſe, of Sir Henry Merney, by fealty, and the ſervice of one broad arrow, in lieu of all ſervices. In 1501, he and others, plaintiffs, and Henry Barnes, and wife, deforc'. levied a fine for 25 meſſuages, 10 acres of arable, and 100s. rent, in Horndon ſuper montem, and for a Market kept on Saturday every week, and Fairs here on the Feaſt of St. Peter and Paul. This Sir John Shaa was ſon of John Shaa of Rochford in this County, and Lord Mayor of London in 1501. He dyed in December 1502, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Edmund, or Edward (u); who held the maner of Horndon houſe of the heirs of John Lord Marney, and the maner of Arderne-hall, as before. And departing this life 24 March 1532, left his only daughter and heir

Alice, then four years old (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 484.] She afterwards brought this eſtate to her huſband

William Poley Eſq; a branch of the Poleys of Boxted in Suffolk. She dyed 7 March 1558, and he 7 December 1587. They both held the maner of Ardern-Hall and Horndon-Houſe, and Briſmers, of whom not known; and the Maner of Horndon Market, with a Market and a Fair, and Shoppe-ſtall, of the Queen, in capite, by fealty. They had iſſue, John, William, George, Anne, Mary, Martha, and Alice.——John Poley Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, then 30 years old, ſucceeded He was afterwards knighted; and, at the time of his deceaſe, 7 December 1593, held the maners of Ardenhall, and Horndon-houſe, with Brymſiners, and Limterdine, in this pariſh, Orſet, and Stamford, of the heirs of Lord Marney; and the Market and Fair as above. He was ſucceeded by his brother——William Poley Eſq; (x). The Lady——Anne Poley enjoyed it in 1635. [See in the other Volume, p. 233. 484.]

It was afterwards purchaſed by the Kingſman Family, of whom the following lie buried in this Church, with Epitaphs. Jaſpar Kingſman Eſq; of this pariſh, and of the Middle Temple, who dyed 15 September 1704, in the 86th year of his age.——Jaſpar, his eldeſt ſon, alſo of the Middle Temple, who dyed 24 June 1686, æt. 36.——Joſiah, late of Burnham, executor of Jaſpar the elder, who dyed 8 July 1719, in the 63d year of his age.——Joſiah, ſon and heir of Joſiah, who dyed 8 October 1735, in the 46th year of his age. The Maner of MALGREFFS, or MALGRAVES.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile from this Town, on the left hand ſide of the road leading to Langdon-Hills.

It took its name from the ancienteſt owners of it upon record.

In the year 1200, Arnulph Malegreffe paid two marks to the ſcutage of Normandy.

And in 1210, Alured Malegreffe held one fee in Horminedone of the Honor of Bologne (y).

In 1254, John Malegreſe of Horndon held a whole knight's fee, as did John Fitz-Bernard, and Richard de St. Ouen, and were preſented at the Pleas at Chelmsford; for that being of full age, they had not taken up the honor of Knighood, therefore they were amerced (z).—— John Malgreff, who dyed in 1286, held here of the King in capite as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of one knight's fee and ſuit at the Court of Witham, a meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, one marſh containing 100 acres, and a windmill, 20*s.* rent. the fourth part of the toll and ſtallage of Horndon Market. ——John was his ſon (a)——Thomas Malegreff, at the time of his deceaſe in 1343, held this maner, in which there was one capital meſſuage, 300 acres of arable, 8 acr. of meadow, 24 of paſture, and 34*s.* of rent.——Thomas was his ſon and heir (b). Another——Thomas Malgrave dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame in 1420——Richard his ſon had a market and a fair at Horndon att Hill, in 1445.——Thomas his ſon had them alſo, and the maner in 1459. And——Richard, brother of this laſt, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1467, held this maner by the 4th part of a knight's fee: and 80 acres called Hyldebrondes of the Prioreſs of Higham: and 80 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 24 of paſture, &c. of the Biſhop of London (c).——Elizabeth, wife of Richard Berners, and Agnes Malgrave, were his aunts and next heirs.

Sir John Tyrell, who dyed 28 Febru. 1540, held a meſſuage called Malgraves, and a field called Stony-hill, in Horndon, and Langdon (d). His ſon —— John Tyrell Eſq; purchaſed the maner of Malgraves of Henry Bernes, who had licenſe 5 May 1550 to alienate it to him, with intention that they ſhould hide or conceal it, [reconderent]. At the time of his deceaſe 2 March 1585, he held a meſſuage and 400 acres of arable called Malgroves, and Stonehill, by the tenth part of a knight's fee.—— Mary Clynton was his daughter and heir (e). [See above, p. 114.]

Edward Archer Gent. who dyed 27 April 1600, held this maner containing by eſtimation 350 acres, and Malgrave-mead 10 acres (f). Whether he married the heireſs or not, nothing ſhews. He left a ſon —— Henry, who dyed 16 Novemb. 1623 (g), and his ſon and heir was ——Henry.

It has been ſince in the Family of Andrews; Anne, daughter of Mr. Thomas Andrews, citizen of London, brought it to her huſband Thomas Cotton of Conington in Cambridgeſhire, Eſq; from whom it deſcended to their daughter and heir Frances, wife of Dingley Aſkham of Conington, Eſq; preſent Lord. This eſtate pays a modus of 13*s.* 4*d.* to the Vicar.

The Maner of WYTHEFELD.

The manſion houſe is about a mile north from the Church.

This Maner was diſtinct from the two already mentioned as early as the time of K. Edward III. For, in 1337, Maud, wife of John de Handloe, of Wythefeild, held a view of frank-pledge, 5*s.* rent, and a moiety of the Market and Fair of Horndon, of Philippa Queen of England of her Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee.——John Handlo, of Horndon, who dyed in 1348, held there of the King, as of the ſaid Honor, 16 acres of arable; and one meſſuage and a moiety of another of Hugh Malegraff, by the ſervice of 8 d. a year; and the moiety of a meſſuage of the Lord of Ardern-Hall; and ſix acres of arable and meadow of William Andrew;——Richard was his ſon and heir (h).

Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, had in 1372 a fourth part of a knight's fee in Horndon, which Abel de Withfeild held of him (i). From this perſon it was that the preſent Maner took its name.

Thomas Sampken Eſq; held the maner of Little-Thurrock; and the maners of Whitfeilds and Fulks, with appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 100 of wood, 300 of marſh, and 7*l.* 12*d.* ob. rent, and the rent of five buſhels of oats, in Horndon ſuper Montem, and Barking, of the King (k). [See above, p. 5. 8.

This maner was afterwards in Chriſtopher Chibborn Eſq; In 1607 he paid 12 d. to the Sheriff's turne. [See in the other Volume, p. 177.] He ſold it to Thomas Wright Gent. who ſettled it on his wife Eſther for life, then on Simon his ſon and heir (l).

Geoffrey Tucker Gent. had it afterwards; and ſold it to William Vernon Gent.

It was purchaſed by Jaſpar Kingſman of the Middle-Temple Eſq; who dyed in 1704, and gave it to——Joſiah Kingſman Eſq; from whom it came to his eldeſt ſon——Joſiah Kingſman Eſquire; upon whoſe death without iſſue, it came to——Jaſpar Kingſman Eſq; his brother, and continues in that Family.

Thomas Highbed, yeoman, who was burnt here for hereſy in the reign of Qu. Mary I. 26 March 1555, had in this pariſh a meſſuage and 60 acres of land called Hornedon houſe; and a cottage. This laſt he held of Francis Clopton and Lora his wife, as of their maner of Ardernhall. (m).

Daniel Caldwall Eſq; who dyed 13 Novemb. 1634, held in this pariſh a Maner or capital meſſuage called Cantis, about half a mile ſouth of the Church; and lands called Cantis ſalmonds, Sandholes, Bread and Checquer crofts, of the Biſhop of London, of his caſtle of Stortford, by the rent of 6s. for Caſtle-guard: And of the Lady Anne Poley, as of her maner of Ardernhall, meſſuages and lands called Dickers, Swanncrofts, the Little Goare oak, Reeves, with ſeveral other parcels. Of the King he held, as of the Honor of Clare, great Wheelers: and of Robert Earl of Warwick, as of the Honor of Raleigh, Potters houſe, Dame Joane's croft, Scabons, Skitts grounds, Wheelers, Rowleaze, Buſhcroft, Butfeild &c. (n). He is buried in this Church with an epitaph [O]; from which we learn, that he was ſon of Laurence Caldwall of Batterſey, and of the Middle Temple &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 220.]

Who has thoſe lands now I do not find; unleſs it is ſome of theſe perſons, George Stevens Eſq; Mr. John Blatch; Samuel Waldo &c. who have eſtates in this pariſh.

The Monaſtery of Bromehale in Berkſhire had lands here, which K. Henry VIII. 21 October 1522, granted to St. John's College in Cambridge (o).

The Abbey of St. John's in Colcheſter had Tithes out of ſeveral lands in this pariſh (p); by whom given doth not appear.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, ſtands pleaſantly in the middle of the Town. The Church and Chancel are tiled; but a north aiſle belonging to both, is leaded. A Tower of ſtone, embattled, hath on the top a ſpire ſhingled; and in it are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged to Berking Nunnery: to which the great Tithes were appropriated, and they had the Advowſon of the Vicarage. In them they remained till their ſuppreſſion, when they came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted both to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's London (q), in whom they have continued ever ſince.

The Vicarage was augmented, in 1719, by Bp. Robinſon, with 225 l. to which were added 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Here has been a cuſtom, time out of mind, at the Churching of a Woman, for her to give a white cambrick handkerchief to the Miniſter as an offering: This is obſerved by Mr. Lewis, in his account of the Iſle of Thanet, where the ſame cuſtom is kept up.

12. DUNTON,

ſtands between the Horndons, and has its name from the two Saxons words Dun and ꞇun, i. e. Hill town.

It is otherwiſe written in records, Dantune, Donton, Dounten; with the addition of Wallet, Waylet, Weylot, Willet, or Wilate; which addition was as early as the reign of K. Richard II. and probably from the name of a tenant under the Abbey of Bec.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, this pariſh belonged to one Prieſt, a freeman; and to Uluuin: At the time of the Survey, it was part of the large poſſeſſions of Odo, Biſhop of Baieux; and Goduin Gudhen had ſeized the part that was Uluuin's [P].

This Pariſh was divided afterwards into the two maners, 1. . . . of Dunton-hall. 2. . . . of Frierne.

Dunton-Hall

ſtands near the Church.

Upon Odo's being deprived of his poſſeſſions, as related above, p. 196. his half-brother, William the Conqueror, gave this eſtate to the noble Family of Albini, founders or benefactors to the Abbey of Bec in Normandy.

Negal de Albini gave to that Abbey 20 l. land in Dunton; which grant was confirmed by K. Henry II. And Nigel became a monk in that Monaſtery, where he was buried [Q].

Maud de Walingford gave Great and Little Okeburne to this Abbey of Bec. Theſe lay in Wiltſhire, and the lordſhip of this pariſh was ſubjected to the Priory of Okeburn, which was a Cell to Bec Abbey. Bec had the additional name of Herlewin from its firſt Abbot ſo named [R].

In 1395, this Alien Monaſtery demiſed, by their Proctor, to John de Pykenham and Elizabeth his wife, the Advowſon of the Church of Dounton Willett, and a yearly penſion of 4 marks iſſuing out of this Church; and the whole portion of Tithes they had within the pariſh of Woodham Ferrers; to hold and enjoy for their lives: and alſo the reverſion of the Maner of Dounton Waylett, after the death of Alice, late wife of Sir Thomas Tyrell (r).

Humfrey de Waleden, who dyed in 1331, held for his life this maner, the reverſion being in Margery widow of John de Say, and her ſon Humfrey (s).

John de Vere Earl of Oxford held it of the Prior of Okeburne in 1358, and——Thomas his ſon in 1370, as half a fee (t).

Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, at the time of his deceaſe in 1372, held one fee in Dunton near Hareward Stoke, which the Abbot of Waltham Holy Croſs had; and he farther held the tenth part of a knight's fee in Dunton called Sterling ſhell, of the Prior of Okeborne (u).

This maner, belonging to a Priory Alien, was ſeized either by K. Edward III. or K. Henry V; but when and to whom immediately granted doth not appear. The Advowſon was in the Family of Inglefield, who preſented ſix times to the living, from 1422 to 1451; and therefore probably had a grant of the eſtate, at leaſt of the Advowſon (w).

In 1442, Sir Lewis John dyed poſſeſſed of this maner of Dunton-Weylot, with the Advowſon of the Church, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the Prior of Okeburne (x). Moſt probably it remained in the Crown for a while, after its being confiſcated in the reign of K. Edward III. Concerning Sir Lewis John, and the Fitz-Lewis Family, ſee above, p. 213.

About the year 1467, K. Edward IV. gave this Maner and Advowſon &c. to Thomas Wilmot, Vicar of Aſheleford, (now Aſhford) in Kent, and his ſucceſſors, to provide two fit Chaplains, and two ſecular Clerks, to pray in that Church, for the ſaid King, and a few others, during their lives; and after their deceaſe for their ſouls, and the ſouls of the near relations of that King, and of ſeveral of his friends ſlain at the Battles of Northampton, St. Albans, and Shireborn (y) [S].

By virtue of this grant, Thomas Wilmot preſented to this Rectory from 1467 to 1479; and his ſucceſſor William Sutton, Maſter of the College of Aſhford, in 1496 (z).

Upon the ſuppreſſion of all ſuch Religious Foundations, the Crown became poſſeſſed of this Chantry, and all the lands belonging thereto.

In 1550, John Ponet had licenſe to alienate the Maner and vill of Dounton Waylate, with the Advowſon of the Church of Dounton, to John Cheke (a).

But, before that, the Provoſt and Fellows of King's College in Cambridge ſeem to have been poſſeſſed of both. For they preſented to the Church in 1532, and have ever ſince, as far as we can find, been poſſeſſed of the Maner and Rectory.

The maner of FRIERN belongs to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital in London, and is lett out upon leaſe. Friern-hall, the manſion houſe, lies in a bottom, about half a mile north from this Church.

Dunton-Waylett, a capital Meſſuage in this pariſh, above a mile north from the Church, belonged to George Drywood, Gent. who dyed 22 May 1603. He held alſo of King's College, in this Pariſh, 50 acres, called Sherebreds crofts, Primorlands, Barrefeild, Ruſhenfeild; and a meſſuage called Scotts, or great Cannons, and lands named Riches, and Does: alſo 44 acres, called Hilbrands in Langdon. Beſides ſeveral parcels in other pariſhes (b).

Mr. Thomas Weſton; John Staples &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. A wooden frame, with a Spire leaded, contains 2 Bells.

This Rectory was at firſt in the gift of the Albini family; then in the Abbey of Bec in Normandy; afterwards in the Inglefield family; and in the Maſters of the Hoſpital or Chantry of Aſhford; and ever ſince 1532 in King's College Cambridge.

lies ſouth of Dunton, and hath on the weſt the Brook that runs down to Purflete. It overflows ſo much of the country here, as to make a Marſh at Orſet, called Orſet Fenn, and another here called Bulfan Fen. And from this Fenn and the word Bull, was the name of this Pariſh originally derived, qu. Bull's Fenn. There is a tradition, that the Tide uſed to flow ſo ſtrong by Purflete up the Brook, that Boats could ſail up to Orſet-hall, or higher.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written Bulvan, the letters f and v being eaſily convertible; and alſo Bulgeven.

It belonged of old to the Nunnery of Berking [T]: and the celereſs of that Houſe received of the collector of this place 50s. at Michaelmaſs, and 50s. at Eaſter (c). The Maner, and Advowſon continued in that Houſe till the Diſſolution of Monaſteries.

Bulfan-hall ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

The Wic, ſtands in a bottom.

In 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Bulvan, alias Bulfan-hall, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Edward Bury, and his heirs, to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (d). He was of the Bed-Chamber to K. Henry; a Juſtice of Peace for this County; and ſon of——Bury, of Eaſtwood, by Alice his wife, daughter of John Strangman. The ſaid Edward Bury, at the time of his deceaſe in February 1582, held this maner; and Raileigh Park, and the great Lodge (e). He had two ſons, Bradford, and Joſeph, who jointly preſented to this living in 1616 [U].

The 1ſt of March 1618-19, a licenſe was granted to Joſeph Bury, and Mary his wife, and Bradford Bury, Gent. to alienate, or acknowledge a fine, and ſuffer a recovery; in order to make a diviſion of this maner, and of the advowſon of the living: It was made accordingly, and the Hall farm was the ſhare of Joſeph and Mary his wife for life.——Joſeph Bury dyed 31 Auguſt 1626. He held the capital meſſuage, or manſion houſe of the maner of Bulfanhall, with appertenances, a wind-mill, granary, and half the advowſon of the Church. Mary Benold, wife of John Ballard, was his daughter and heir, 31 years old (f).——Bradford Bury Eſq; the other brother, had a moiety and half a part of the maner of Bulfan-hall; a moiety of the advowſon of the Church, and of a wind-mill and granary, which he held of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the 40th part of a knight's-fee. He had alſo Railey Park, and the Lodge. All 14. ORSET.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written in records Horſet, Orſed, Dorſed, Orſedd, Orzed. It ſeems to have been originally Hoꞃꞅhæð, qu. Horſe's heath: contracted afterwards into Orſet, as Horſheath in Cambridge-ſhire is commonly pronounced Horſet. By ſome of the Germans Hors is pronounced Ors. See Somner. The Normans did not much like to uſe the aſpirate H, nor the final th. Here are ſome ancient intrenchments, or fortifications, incloſing four or five acres.

Before the conqueſt this pariſh belonged to the See of London [W]; but afterwards part of it was given to Euſtace Earl of Bologne, which he enjoyed at the time of the Survey.

Theſe made the two Maners of Orſet-hall, and Loft-hall.

Orset-Hall,

The Maner-houſe, ſtands a little way north-weſt from the Church. Roger Biſhop of London, in 1229, paſſed by fine 2 carucates of his demeſnes here, and the Church of Hackney, to Robert Harnigney (i).

In 1290, K. Edward I. confirmed to the Biſhop of London a view of frank-pledge in his maners of Orſet, Leynden, and Chelmsford (k).

Biſhop Bonner had a Houſe here, in which he ſometimes reſided: moſt of it is now demoliſhed.

This Maner and Eſtate continued in the See of London till the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign. But a private Act of parliament being then made, enacting, 'That upon the vacation 'and avoydance of every Archbiſhoprick or 'Biſhoprick, within this realm, it ſhould and 'might be lawful for her Highneſs to elect and 'chooſe, and to take into her hands and real poſ'ſeſſion, as much and ſo many of any the Ho'nours, Caſtles, Mannors, Lands, Tenements, 'or other Hereditaments, being parcel of the 'Poſſeſſions of any ſuch Archbiſhoprick, or 'Biſhoprick ſo being void, as the clere yearly 'valewe of all her Majeſties Parſonages appro'priate and yerely Tenths, within every ſuch 'Archbiſhoprick or Biſhoprick, ſhall yerely a'mount and extend unto (l):' By virtue of this act, upon Biſhop Bonner's deprivation, that Queen authorized Commiſſioners to take into her poſſeſſion the ſeveral Maners of Coppesford, Orſet, Maldon, Rickmanſworth with Pinchefeld, Rydmerley, Dabytot, Fanhope, Swell inferior, Knoll, Sewbury, and Stoke near Gildeford; and to ſettle in exchange the like value of Rents and Profits in the appropriated Rectories and Churches of Heſton, Eaſt Bedfont, Great Dunmowe,

. . . Latham, Gent. had it in 1635.

Soon after it was in John Hatt, of London, City-Attorney; ſon of Giles, and grandſon of Richard Hatt, of Leckhampſted in Berkſhire, Gent. He had two wives. 1. Elizabeth, or Cecily, daughter of Thomas Petitt of Kent. 2. Dorothy, daughter of Richard Piggot of London. By the firſt he had a ſon, John, who dyed before him; and one daughter. By the ſecond wife he had ſeven ſons, Richard; Charles, of Gingrave; John, of Stifford; William, &c. He dyed 19 April 1658, and was buried in this Church, with a Monument.——Richard Hatt of this place Eſq; married . . . daughter of . . . Williams, and had by her Piggot; Catharine, wife of . . . Smith; and Mary.——Piggot Hatt Eſq; by Honoria his wife, daughter of Thomas Luther of Suttons in Stapleford-Tany Eſq; had Anne, Honoria, and Henrietta [X]. Anne was married to Richard Letchmere, of London, Gent. and Honoria to the Rev. John Lidgould.

Richard Letchmere, and his ſon Richard, being intituled in moieties to this Maner, as having purchaſed Mrs. Lidgould's part, Richard, the father, agreed, 31 March 1743, to ſell a moiety of the Fines of this maner for the ſum of 670l. to Richard Baker of Stepney cauſeway, Gent. February 16 1743, Richard Letchmere, the younger, agreed to ſell a moiety of the demeſne lands to Mr. Baker for the ſum of 2900l. And, 18 April 1744, a moiety of the Maner.

Mr. Letchmere dying ſoon after, Anne his widow ſold Mr. Baker the Quit-rents amounting to 44l. a year, and an undivided moiety of the Maner for 1800l. The 23d of December 1746, Peter le Febvre of Walthamſtow Eſq; and Elizabeth his wife, in conſideration of 2900l. ſold the other moiety to Richard Baker Eſq; and an Act of Parliament paſſed in 1746 for confirming the purchaſe. Mr. Baker dyed 22 April 1751.

LOFT-HALL, otherwiſe LOST-HALL, is the other Maner in this pariſh, being the part that belonged to Earl Euſtace [Y].

The following perſons are with great reaſon ſuppoſed to have been poſſeſſed of this eſtate.

Stephen de Bockton, who dyed in 1286, held in the Vill of Orzete of the King in capite, one meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 25 s. rent of aſſize; Idomar wife of Thomas de Coteſdene; Joanne wife of Ralph de Otingdene Knt. and Iſende, were his daughters and heirs.

Stephen de Abyndon, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1305, held here the ſame lands, and 24s. 10d. in Orſett, which he purchaſed of John de Bevere, of the King in capite of his Honor of Bologne, and ſuit of court at Wytham from month to month (o). It paid 5 s. to the King's ſcutage when it happened.

In 1403, this Eſtate was given by Sir Gerard Braybroke jun. Edmund Hampden Eſq; John Boys Eſq; and Roger Albrighton Clerk, to maintain a Chauntry, for one Chaplain to perform divine ſervice at the Altar of St. Mary, under St. Mary's Chapel within the Biſhop of London's Palace, joining to the Church of St. Paul, to pray for the good ſtate of Robert Braybroke Biſhop of London. The ſaid Gerard and Edmund had remaining the maner of Danbury, Boys the maner of Tolles-ſhunt-Tregoz, and Albrighton the maner of Twinſted (p).——Sir Gerard Braybroke ſeems to have been of the Family of Biſhop Braybroke, Chancellor of England, who dyed 27 Auguſt 1404. Whether he purchaſed this eſtate to ſettle thus, or had it by grant of the Crown, doth not appear. It is plain, that for ſome time it held of the King of the Honor of Bologne.

After the ſuppreſſion of Chantries, this maner lately belonging to the Chantry of the low Chapel within the Biſhop of London's Palace remained in the Crown, till Qu. Elizabeth, 29 November, 1559, granted it to Edward Baeſh Eſq; and Henry Parker, to hold in ſocage (q) [Z].

Owen Clunne, citizen and draper of London, who dyed 2 Septemb. 1563, held this maner or lordſhip of Loſt-hall, and Loſt-hall lands, of the Queen, as of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in fealty: and meſſuages in this pariſh, called Skeltons, Hocheſons, Frends, with ſeveral parcels of land.——Anne, wife of John Sheppard of Balcote in Shropſhire, was his heir (r).

Frances Downes Eſq; held the maner of Orſett in 1616.

Loſt-hall belongs now to a perſon at Stratford. It is but a ſmall thing.

Mr. William Goodeere of Nottingham; Mr. Joſeph Berney; Gabriel Bale; John Jefferies; Richard Wood, &c. have alſo ſome Lands here.

Daniel Caldwall Eſq; held, in 1634, Le Frith, and Curry mead, being 70 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, in Orſett, of the King, of his maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in free and common ſocage by fealty (s).

[Z] Edward Baeſh was a conſiderable man under K. Henry VIII. &c. and ſeated at Stanſted Abbot in Hertfordſhire. See Sir Henry Chauncy, p. 194.

SABUR, or SEBOROW-HALL, is ſaid to be in the three pariſhes of Orſet, Mucking, and Chadwell. It ſtands on the right hand ſide of the road leading from Horndon on the Hill to Chadwell. Anciently it belonged to the Hoſpital of St. Mary's without Biſhops-gate London. K. Henry VIII, in 1543, granted this maner of Sabur-hall to John Wiſeman of Felſted (t). [See in the other Volume, p. 146.] Afterwards it was in ——William Strangman Eſq; and, if we are not miſinformed, hath been purchaſed for the Rector of Lime-houſe Church in Middleſex.

CRONDON, a conſiderable parcel of land, tho' above 10 miles north from Orſet, and between the pariſhes of Stock and Margaret-ing; is yet a Hamlet in this pariſh of Orſet. It was formerly a Park. This has been for ſome years turned to farms, all belonging to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Petre, except a ſmall part lately in Mrs. Tabor. The Lord Petre pays the Rector of Orſet for the Tythes of his lands here 16 l. per ann. clear of all taxes, in purſuance of an award made by Biſhop Compton, 3 May 1707, upon a reference to his Lordſhip from the Court of Exchequer, for determining a controverſy then depending in the ſaid Court concerning thoſe Tythes. Crondon pays to the Poor rates of Orſet. That part which lies in the pariſh of Stock pays Tythes to the Rector of Stock.

I take Crondon to be what Tidbaldus and others held at the time of the Survey.

Charities.

In the year 1495, Thomas Hotofte of Orſett gave by will to the Pariſhioners a parcel of land in Horndon on the Hill called Goldwell, containing by eſtimation forty acres; to bear out the common Fine of Orſett for ever. The Churchwardens for the time being to make yearly accounts before the pariſhioners of Orſett for the yearly profit of all the ſaid land called Goldwell to the behoſe of the ſaid Pariſhioners of Orſett. The common Fine was 20 s.

Ambroſe Gilbert of Orſett, S. T. B. by his will dated 6 May 1642, gave the Poor of Orſett five pounds yearly; to be paid to them, 50 s. on Chriſtmas day in the Church before morning Prayer, and 50 s. more on Eaſter-day in the Church before morning Prayer; out of a Houſe and Lands in the pariſh of Dovercourt or Harwich, known by the name of Pantries alias Pentrix. In 1683, there was a ſuit in Chancery for the recovery of arrears and for the payment of this 5 l. per annum (u).

There is another clauſe in Ambroſe Gilbert's will which concerns this pariſh, viz. 'Item I 'bequeath Marſh-houſe in St. Oſſeth Eſſex, 'with all the lands and woods belonging thereunto to the founding of a Fellowſhip and 'Scholarſhip in St. John's College Cambridge, 'and do appoint to be capable of thoſe places, 'firſt, the Gilberts, next the Torkingtons, then 'Colcheſter-Schol, laſtly Orſet in Eſſex.'—His ſiſter Margaret was married to Laurence Torkington.

Alice wife of Iſaac Heminge, by will dated 9 Mar. 1643, gave certain Lands in Orſet, particularly a tenement with its lands and appertenances called Little Bagge; and two cloſes belonging to it containing by eſtimation five acres lying in Orſett, to Edward Rawſon and Ellen his wife, to provide a maintenance for her ſon John Sharpe during his life, and to ſeveral others in caſe they ſhould refuſe to make ſuch proviſion, remainder after the ſaid John's death without iſſue to them the ſaid Edward and Ellen, and to the iſſue of the ſaid Ellen. And in default of ſuch iſſue to the uſe and behoofe of ſuch perſons as then ſhall be Churchwardens and Overſeers of the poor for the time being of the ſaid pariſh of Orſett; and Chadlington in the County of Oxford reſpectively; and of ſix or more of the ableſt Pariſhioners of each of the ſame ſeveral pariſhes, ſuch as the ſaid Churchwardens and Overſeers in each of the ſaid pariſhes reſpectively ſhall enfeoffe in the premiſſes, equally to be divided between the ſaid pariſhes, provided they pay out of the lands aforeſaid one quarter of the rents iſſues and profits of the ſame meſſuages lands and tenements yearly for ever for and towards the ſetling and maintaining of a Lecture in the pariſh Church of Orſett for every Lord's day in the afternoon: And one other quarter thereof to the poor of the pariſh of Orſett. And the third part for and towards the ſetling and mainteyning of a Lecture in the Chapple of Chadlington for every Lord's day in the afternoon; and a fourth quarter to the poor of Chadlington.—This benefaction fell upon the death of Mr. Rawſon to the pariſh, and has been commonly called Rawſon's Benefaction. The particulars of it now in the hands of the two Pariſhes, and employed as by the will of the ſaid Alice Heminge directed, are: A Tenement and about 20 acres of land adjoining, lett for 12 l. per ann. A cloſe called Pye Corner containing 5 acres lett for 3 l. per ann. A large houſe and orchard commonly called the pariſh houſe ſituate over againſt the Church, lett for 7 l. per ann. and 2 other tenements adjoining to the ſaid houſe with a yard and orchard belonging to them, lett for 3 l. 10 s. per. ann. all in the pariſh of Orſett and copyhold. And 4 houſes in Northumberland-Alley in Fenchurch-ſtreet London, lett for 40 s. per ann. The copyhold lands of this benefaction belonging to Orſet were enfranchiſed in 1738, at the expence of Dr. Francis Aſtrey, the late Rector.

The 21 of March 1605, two tenements in Baker-ſtreet in this pariſh with the outhouſes &c. to the ſame belonging, were purchaſed of John Bretton, with 32 pounds, left by Peter (u) Vid. Examiner's Office, Wigan et al. contra Pearſe, Caſtle of Orſet to the pariſhioners for this purpoſe. The rents to be received by the officers, and by them diſtributed to the Poor of this pariſh. They are now Alms-houſes.

There are alſo other Alms-houſes adjoining to the Church-yard.

Gaſpar Kingſman by his will dated Janu. 1 1700, left to the pooreſt induſtereſt perſons in the Pariſh of Orſett ten ſix penny loaves of wheaten bread every week for ever, to be delivered every ſabbath-day in the morning, immediately after Divine Service and Sermon, to ten of the pooreſt and moſt induſtereſt perſons by his executor or his aſſigns ſucceſſively for ever. And for want of payment of the ſaid poor of the ſaid Pariſh, Then his will is that they or their aſſigns ſhall have full power and good authority to enter upon all his lands in Curingham in this County and receive the rents iſſues and profits thereof until they ſhall be paid the arrears and charges thereof for ever. This will was proved 30 Sept. 1704. and is to be found in the Prerogative-Office Aſh. 214.

John Blatch of Orſett by his will bearing date 7 Oct. 1721 gave to the poor labouring men and poor widows of this pariſh forty ſix penny wheaten loaves, to be diſtributed upon the firſt day of May in every year for ever; to be paid for out of the rent and profits of his lands called Swaines which ly in this pariſh near the Town.

Beſides theſe Charities, there is another to the poor of Orſett, called Slade's-hold; conſiſting of a tenement and four peices or cloſes of land containing in the whole ten acres. The donor, and time when, unknown.

There is alſo a farm in this Pariſh conſiſting of a meſſuage and about 100 acres of copyhold land, given by Sir John Weld to the Curate of the Chapel of Southgate in the pariſh of Edmonton in Middleſex.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Giles and All-Saints, ſtands pleaſantly in the Street, is large, conſiſting of a double pace. The Chancel hath north and ſouth Chapels: the whole tyled. A brick Tower, with a ſpire of wood, contains 3 Bells, beſides a ſmaller one.

The Patronage of this valuable Rectory appears by the Regiſtry to have been in the Biſhops of London till the time of Queen Elizabeth. Mr. Newcourt finds a Rector preſented by K. Edward I. and another by the Biſhop of London; between whom there was a conteſt. The matter was referred to Ralph de Baldock Biſhop of London, who decreed it, 13 March 1307, to belong to the Biſhop. To underſtand this, we muſt ſuppoſe the Diſpute to be of two Years ſtanding, and that Mondon, in whoſe Favour the Deciſion had been, was preſented by Graveſend, Predeceſſor to Baldock. This Baldock was Lord Chancellor, in virtue of which office he probably determined. Qu. Elizabeth preſented thrice, reviving the pretenſion of the Crown in K. Edward's time, becauſe ſhe ſtyles herſelf in the preſentation the original patroneſs. She, or K. James I. granted it to Sir Robert Cecill, who exchanged it with the Biſhop of London for the Advowſon of Cheſhunt, where Sir Robert's Houſe of Theobalds ſtood, which eſtate was afterwards exchanged with K. James for Biſhop's Hatfield in Hertfordſhire. For the change of theſe Advowſons an Act of Parliament paſſed in 1603, which was a confirmation of Sir Robert's title to Cheſhunt; yet the Earl of Saliſbury, in 1674, would have unjuſtly preſented to this Church. The Lord Keeper Finch awarded for the Biſhop.

The Rector pays a penſion of 6 l. a year to the Chancellor of St. Paul's, probably in lieu of ſuch Tythes as were ſettled on the office of Chancellor of that Cathedral by Biſhop Richard Fitz-Neal, in the time of K. Richard I. (w).

Thomas Hotofte, above-mentioned, founded a Chantry in this Church, and endowed it ſo well, that at the ſuppreſſion it was valued at 7 l. 16 s. 8 d. In the certificate of Chantries it is ſaid, That this 'Towne of Orſett ys a populous 'towne having in yt by eſtimation 400 of houſe'ling people.' The Hotofte Family flouriſhed long at Knebworth in Hertfordſhire. K. Edward VI. granted 11 July 1548, to Clement Siſley the Endowment of this Chantry; being Lands called Raynolds, Cowpers, Camberlaynes, Rayſons, Ruſſels, Baringtons, Genyns, Speades crofts, and Requyres Crofts; and lands, tenements and hereditaments in the ſeveral tenures of Henry Frauncys, and John Baldwyn, in Orſett (x).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1840 l.

15. LITTLE THURROCK

is one of the three Thurrocks that are in this County, along the ſide of the River Thames.

The two others are in Chafford-Hundred; and This lying eaſt of them, is therefore called Eaſt Thurrock as well as Little Thurrock. The meaning and derivation of the name is explained above, p. 91.

Uluuin, a freeman, held this eſtate under Edward the Confeſſor.

At the time of the general Survey it was ſtyled the Fee, Feudum, of the Biſhop of London [A], by that name diſtinguiſhed from Terra Epiſcopi

(w) Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 454.

(x) Lett. pat. 2 Edw. VI.

[A] Feudum Epiſcopi Londonienſis. Hund' de Berdeſtapla. Turruccam tenet Anchetillus de Epiſcopo, quam tenuit Uluuinus liber homo ſub Rege Edwardo, pro i manerio & pro ii hidis & ii acris. Semper ii carucate in dominio. Tunc i bordarius, modo vi. Tunc vi ſervi, modo . Silva L porcis. Paſtura L animal'. Tunc i piſcina, modo nulla.

Londinenſis, the Biſhop of London's land; the firſt of theſe being, as I apprehend, his private eſtate, diſtinct from what belonged to the See. Of this part ſtyled Feudum, ſome lands I find deſcending to his ſucceſſors, others abſorbed into other maners, and loſing their primitive name. [See above, p. 104, note K.]

The value of the one Maner here, at the time of the Survey, is ſet ſo low; [namely 30s. 4d.] that, to make three Maners, as in time there were, it muſt have been but little improved, or ſome parcels out of the neighbouring two other Thurrocks, or adjoyning Pariſhes, taken in. One part of it ſeems to have continued in the Biſhops of London down to the reign of K. Edward III: the reſt to have been held of the Crown very early, by grand Serjeancy.

Three Maners are now in this Pariſh. 1. The maner of Little Thurrock. 2. . . . that of Torells-hall. 3. . . . that of Berewes.

The Maner of LITTLE, or EAST THURROCK.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church.

There is no Inquiſition for a while to be found relating to this firſt Maner, which gives one reaſon to believe it was not in lay hands, whence livery and wardſhip would have accrued. Then about the time of K. Edward II. or III. it was in a Family ſurnamed de Graveſend.

In 1338, a Fine paſſed between Thomas Graveſend and Joane his wife, plaintiffs, William Attwell, Chaplain, and Richard Pope deforc' of the maner of Little Thurrock, except the Advowſon of the Church; the right of the ſaid William, who granted it to Joane Graveſend, in fee-tail (y). This Joane, after the deceaſe of her huſband in 1371, held this maner of the Biſhop of London (z). Thomas de Graveſend ſeems to have had a grant of it from his kinſman Stephen de Graveſend, Biſhop of London, who dyed in 1338, and whoſe heir the ſaid Thomas was found to be. Sir John Grey had mortgaged the maner of Weſt-Thurrock to the Biſhop (a).

In 1372, there was another Fine levied between Nicolas Carren, or Carew, plaintiff, John Merelow, and Thomas Ferrers, deforc' of the Maner of Little-Turok and Advowſon of the Church; the right of the ſaid Nicolas; who granted it to John and Thomas for the life of Nicolas; remainder of a moiety to the daughter and heir of Sir Thomas de Graveſend, in tail; remainder of the other moiety to Joan de Coſington, couſin and heir of the ſaid Thomas (b).

For ſome time this eſtate was in the Family of Carew, who preſented eight times to the living: Namely, Nicolas de Carrow in 1372. Nicolas Carrew from 1383 to 1386: And the feoffees of Nicolas Carrew from 1388 to 1393.

William Skreen, and others, preſented in 1408, John Berdefeld, and others, in 1429, and 1437 (c). From which it is probable that they were alſo poſſeſſed of the Maner.

In 1539, Thomas Sampſon, or Sampken Eſq; as he is called in the Inquiſition, held the maner of Little-Thurrock with appertenances, and 4 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 40 of wood, 200 of marſh and 6*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* rent in Thurrock-Parva, and the Advowſon of the Church (d). [See under Horndon on the Hill.] The feoffees of Thomas Sampſon preſented to the Church from 1444, to 1459. Sir Thomas Urſwick, and other feoffees of the maner, preſented in 1475, and 1504. And the feoffees of the maner, un-named, in 1517, and 1532 (e).

This Maner was afterwards in the Crown, and granted by K. Philip and Qu. Mary, in 1558, to Sir Thomas White and others (f). The letters patent call it parcel of the poſſeſſions of St. Botolph's, Colcheſter, and of the late Lord Audeley. Mr. Newcourt alſo, from Grimes's Collections, finds lands here belonging to St. Botolph's Priory, and Stratford Priory. But I have no evidence of this [B].

This maner was again in the Crown in Qu. Elizabeth's time, who preſented to the Living from 1567 to 1597.——Sir John Lewes held it in 1596.

K. James I. 9 February 1603-4, granted the maner of Little Thurrock, with appertenances, and the Site of the ſaid maner, and all the demeſne lands, and Thurrock lands, to Robert Stratford, to hold of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in ſocage; without a ſyllable of St. Botolph. In K. James's patent is mention of lands exchanged with Audeley, which ſeems to have occaſioned the calling theſe St. Botolph's lands, granted to Audeley. And Audeley perhaps had ſome lands here in exchange for the other.

Sir Thomas Lake preſented to the living in 1605. Sir Lancelot Lake Kt. in 1661. Sir Thomas Lake in 1670. Abraham Fothergill Gent. in 1681. Sir Robert Daſhwood, Bart. and others, in 1697.

[B] It is poſſible that when people came about the Throne to obtain proling patents, they, either through ignorance or deſign, repreſented things differently from what they were; and from abundant care that nothing ſhould be loſt for want of words comprehenſive enough, have puzzled poſterity and made work for the lawyers. This was done remarkably by Chancellor Audeley, as I have obſerved in numberleſs inſtances. And there being in this grant ſeveral parcels belonging to St. Botolph's Priory, the clauſe, 'quondam parcell' poſſeſſion' nuper Prior Scī Bothī, & poſtea dcī 'Tho. Dnī Audeley,'—was repeated after Thurrocke, as it is done ſeveral times in this patent; though viſibly a miſtake here.

Afterwards, this eſtate was mortgaged to—— Newburgh, of Ireland Eſq; and of him purchaſed by Francis Hayes, of the Temple Eſq; whoſe nephew, and heir,——Charles Hayes Eſq; ſold it, in 1743, to
Mr. James Green, corn-factor in London: and he ſold it again, with the Advowſon, to Ebenezer Muſſel, Eſq; who dyed 3 October 1764.

This Maner holds no Court: And out of it is paid a fee-farm rent of 18 l. 10s. 0d.

TORELLS-HALL

ſtands by the ſide of the road, near the Pound.

This maner was derived from the other; and in the Torell family as early as the reign of K. Henry II. (g). It muſt have been new granted from the Crown ſince the Biſhop was Lord here; becauſe the Serjeancy by which it was held could not be performed by a Biſhop. That grand Serjeancy was, of being Napperer to the King, or having the care of the King's Nappery, or Table-linnen, on the day of his Coronation.

The Torell, or Torrell, family hath been pretty fully mentioned, above, p. 92, and in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. —— William Torell held this eſtate in the time of K. Henry II. as we have juſt obſerved.——Amauri Torrell was one of the great men that accompanied K. Richard I. to the Holy Land (h)——William Torell, in 1266, held in Little Thurrock 80 acres of arable, 20 acres of meadow, a ſalt marſh worth 8 s. per ann. 30 acres of wood, 50 s. rent aſſize, and owed ſuit at the King's Court of Barſtable every three weeks. He dyed in 1290, and is then ſaid to have been poſſeſſed of one capital meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, 32 of meadow, 60 of paſture, here, with pleas of Court, which he held of the King by Serjeancy, and payment of 10 s. in the Exchequer at Michaelmaſs (i). [See above, p. 92.] His ſon John Torell, who dyed before him in 1282, held here of the King, in capite, one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, paſture for 200 ſheep, and 22 s. rent. He was ſucceeded by his ſon——John; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1329, held in Little-Thorrock 80 acres of arable, 14 acr. of meadow, paſture, and marſh, 26 s. 8 d. rent aſſize, of the King in capite, by the Seajeancy of being the King's Napperer in his houſhold, and by the ſervice of 10 s. per an. paid at Michaelmas into the Exchequer, and 11 s. to the Hundred of Berſtaple, called Ward-ſilver, then in the hands of Edm. Plantagenet, Earl of Kent.——John was his ſon.——Chriſtiana, widow of John Torell, held this eſtate in dowry, paying to the Exchequer at Michaelmas 10 s. and to the Hundred of Berdeſtaple, then the Earl of Kent's, 2 s. called Ward-Penies [C].——Thomas was her ſon (k). ——Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Torrell, held, for term of her life, as joint feoffee with her late huſband, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 60 of paſture and marſh, in Chaldwell and Little-Thurrock, and 3 l. 16s. 8 d. rent aſſiſe, of the King in ca. by the 4th part of a knight's feee, viz. to be the King's Napperer in his Houſhold, and alſo by the ſervice of paying 2 s. a year called Ward-ſilver, to the Hundred of Berſtaple then in the hands of the Earl of Kent. She dyed in 1375, and was ſucceeded by her ſon and heir——Richard, then 21 years old (l). At the time of his deceaſe, in 1404, he held this maner in Little Thurrocke called Torells, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of petit ſerjeancy, viz. of being the King's Napperer on his Coronation-day. He had alſo two parts of the maners of Weſt-Thurrock, and Shelwe. [See above, p. 92. and in the other Volume, p. 476.] Alice his widow held a third part of the ſame in dower, by the ſervice aforeſaid. She dyed in 1417 (m). ——Thomas, her ſon had it next: He departed this life in 1442, leaving——John his ſon, then 19 years old (n); who by Emma his wife, ſiſter and coheir of John Raynesford, had——Henry Torell. He dyed in 1480, and——Humfrey, his ſon and heir, was then but one year (o).——Thomas Torrell Eſq; was the next who held this maner, by grand Serjeancy, viz. by the ſervice of being the King's Napperer on his Coronation-day: and departing this life 7 February 1516, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry, who held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe 7 January 1525, with ſeveral other eſtates (p). —— Humfrey, his ſon held alſo the ſame by grand Serjeancy, and dying 12 September 1544, left his only daughter and heir,

Anne Torrell, then only two years and 40 weeks old (q). [See above, p. 92. and in the other Volume, p. 474. 476. 478.] [D]. She was

[C] This will explain what ſeems wanting in the account of the Ward-Staff of Ongar Hundred, given above, p. 126. The Maners there mentioned were charged with the ſervice of finding Wardſmen to ſecure the peace of the Hundred: This ſeemed hard upon them, to be every year upon duty whilſt others watched not at all. We find here that other eſtates paid money inſtead of perſonal ſervice, into the hands of him to whom the King gave the Ward-Staff.

[D] We have no regular Pedigree of the Torell Family, only this account of their intermarriages, which are not quite exact. Humfrey Torell married . . . daughter of John Flemynge. —— William, . . . daughter of . . . Frevil. Antony, Mabel daughter of John Fitz-Oſborn.——Sir Humfrey . . . daughter of . . . Mortimer.——Thomas . . . daughter of Roger Tilbury.——John, . . . daughter of Thomas Montfort, of Beaudeſert.——Richard, Urſula daughter of Thomas Nanton.——Humfrey, Elizabeth daughter of George Bartlett.——Robert, . . . daughter of John Tyrell.——Brian, . . . daughter of Humfrey Barrington.——Humfrey, ... daughter of Gilbert Baſſingborn.——John, . . . daughter of Thomas Clapham. —— Thomas, . . . daughter of Roger Beauchamp of Bletſho.——John, Emma ſiſter and coheir of John Raynesford.——Henry, Anne daughter of William Mordaunt, of Roding-Berners.——Humfrey, Alice daughter of Thomas Leventhorp.

afterwards married to Henry Jocelyn Eſq; fourth ſon of Sir Thomas Jocelyn of Hyde-hall, and had by him ſix ſons, and four daughters. He was buried 25 Auguſt 1587, and ſhe 30 May 1589. ——Sir Thomas Jocelyn, the eldeſt ſurviving ſon and heir, by licenſe dated 2 Septemb. 1595, alienated this eſtate to

Nicolas Grice Eſq; and being ſold, by decree in Chancery, to pay his debts, was purchaſed by

Col. Henry Cornewall of Bradwardin caſtle in Herefordſhire. From whom it deſcended to his ſon——General Cornewall, brother to Velters Cornewall Eſq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Hereford. He dyed ſome years ago, and left this eſtate to a Gentlewoman that had lived with him ſeveral years. After the General's deceaſe ſhe married Mr. Moore of Ireland, to whom at her death, which happened not long after, ſhe bequeathed this eſtate: And he ſurviving her but a little while left it to his brother ——Blunden Moore Eſq; the preſent owner.

The office of the Nappery was claimed, at the Coronation of K. George II. by the Lord of the Maner of Aſhele in Norfolk, but not allowed.

The Maner of BEREWES, now called BARONS, is alſo derived from the maner of Little-Thurrock. The Houſe is on the left hand ſide of the road leading to Chaldwell, into which pariſh this Maner extends.

We have but the following imperfect account of this eſtate: Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, who dyed in 1360, had one fee in Little Thurrocke, called Berewes, which William Squery held of him.——John Squyry held the ſame under Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March in 1398, and under Joane, widow of Sir John Grey, in 1425 (s).—And it ſeems to have been the ſame knight's fee, which John Surey held under John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, in 1352 (t).

Thomas Springe, who dyed 13 June 1523, held the maner of Barrowe, with appertenances in Little Thurrock and Chaldwell, and Hodipole marſh, and 4d. yearly rent, in this pariſh, of Henry Torrell Eſq; as of his maner of Little Thurrock. He held alſo of the ſame 3 meſſuages, 3 tofts, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 30 of wood, 100 of marſh, 200 of furze and heath in Little and Weſt Thurrock (u). [See in the other Volume, p. 185. 284.] [E].

In Hilary term 1567, Clement Syſeley, and Anne his wife, and Agnes Kiddermiſter, widow, were injoined to deliver poſſeſſion to Joanna Laxton of the maner of Barrowe, with appertenances, and of two meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 200 acr. of meadow, 100 of paſture, 50 of wood, 200 of marſh, and 6l. rent, in Little Thorock and Chawdewell (w).

This eſtate belongs now to John Ruſſel, of North-Okendon, Eſq; See above, p. 103.

Mr. William-Weſtbrook Richardſon; Richard Wotton; William Adams; Piggot Ince; John Crow &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace, and almoſt of the ſame width, with the Chancel; the whole tyled. In the ſouth wall of the Chancel on the inſide are Arches, ſupported by pillars of the Tuſcan order. Such arches in other places have effigies or ſtatues of Founders, ſome as large as the life, and ſome leſs.

This Rectory ſeems to have been chiefly appendent to the Maner of Thurrock-hall. Who preſented to it all along hath been already mentioned above.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written in records Caudewell, Chaldwell, and Celdewell. And if not derived from St. Chad, mentioned above, p. 76, and Welle, qu. Chad's Well; it might be from the Saxon Cealꝺ, cold, and Welle, a Well, or ſpring. Some derive the firſt part of the name from Cealc, chalk, thinking it occaſioned by the great Chalk Wells, or Pits; from which Chalk was originally dug, or which were made to ſerve for Granaries to the ancient Britans. The Danes are vulgarly reported to have uſed them as receptacles or hiding places for the plunder and booty which they took from the adjoining inhabitants during their frequent piracies and deſcents upon this iſland; and hence they have been ſtyled Dane or Dene holes.

[E] There was a donation of Thurrock to the Church of Canterbury, very ancient; but which of the three it was cannot be diſcovered, for it is not mentioned in Domeſday-book. It was in theſe words, Ego Wſtanus cognomento Wilde Preſte, annuente domino meo Ardecnuto, concedo Eccleſiæ Chriſti in Dorobernia terram patrimonii mei, nomine Turroche. Decem Scriptores, col. 2226.

Mr. Camden hath given a ſketch of them in his Britannia (x), with the following account. "Near Tilbury are ſeveral ſpacious Caverns in a chalky cliff, built very artificially of ſtone to the height of ten fathoms, and ſomewhat ſtraight at the top." The learned and ingenious Dr. Derham, late Rector of Upminſter &c. who was a curious obſerver of every thing that was remarkable in his neighbourhood, gave the following deſcription of them, in a Letter of his, dated 17 February 1706.——'I myſelf meaſured three of the moſt conſiderable Holes, and found one of them fifty foot ſix inches deep; another ſeventy foot ſeven inches; another, in the Wood northward, eighty foot; the depth of the weſtern Hole, near the road, fifty-five foot ſix inches; on the ſame ſide the road is another ſeventy foot ſeven inches; on the other ſide of the way, in Hang-Man's-Wood, is another Hole of eighty foot four inches. A Cow fell into the Hole fifty-five foot ſix inches, not killed nor much hurt, drawn up by a carpenter who went down and put ropes about her. The bottom is a ſoft Sand on which the Cow alighted and was ſaved. Over the midſt of the Hole is an Arch of two hundred feet of chalk. Theſe Holes lie near the highway, within the compaſs of ſix acres of ground, leading from Stifford to Chadwell.' Some of them are within the bounds of the pariſh of Little Thurrock. And in Eaſt Tilbury there is a field called Cave-field, in which there is a horizontal paſſage to the Cavern.

Tradition will have it that here were the famous King Cunobilin's Gold mines. Upon the ſtrength of this notion, countenanced by a paſſage in Dr. Plot's Natural Hiſtory of Oxfordſhire, one of the Bubbles, or pernicious Projects, ſet up in the year 1720, was for extracting Gold, or Silver, out of the ſoil here; with this title, 'For improving a Royalty in Eſſex.' The paſſage in Dr. Plot, is as follows (y). 'From a fair ſhining Blue I judged the Mine-Chamber not to be far off. Which I rather gueſs to be of Silver, becauſe of the alabaſtrine or ſparlike ſubſtance mixed with it, which, ſaith Mr. Webſter, was in ſome places intermixt alſo in the beſt Silver Mine ever yet found in England, the ore whereof held about 66 lb. per ton. From all which it may be concluded that 'tis probable at leaſt that here may have been formerly ſuch a Mine, ſtopt up as I firſt thought by the aboriginal Britans, upon the arrival and conqueſts of the Romans or Saxons, who not being able to recover their Country within the memory of man, it might be loſt like the Gold mine of Glaſs-Hitten in Hungary, when Bethlem Gabor over-ran that country; or the Gold mine of Cunobeline in Eſſex, diſcovered again temp. Hen. IV. as appears by the King's letters of Mandamus bearing date May 11, an. 2. Rot. xxxiv. directed to Walter Fitz-Walter concerning it, and ſince that loſt again.'

From this paſſage of Dr. Plot there ſeems to have been a received doctrine, That Silver Mines have been in England. We can ſcarce imagine there were any when Julius Cæſar wrote his Commentaries, for the Britans would not then have uſed only plates and rings of iron or copper, for Money (z). Nor do the Roman Hiſtorians mention any here; yet I cannot but wiſh it true, that it may explain the difficulty under which we are about paying the large Daniſh tributes, or Danegelds, impoſed upon this Kingdom [F].

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the ſeveral owners of the lands in this Pariſh, were, Aluric a King's Thegn; Edwolt that King's Sheriff; and Godman, a freeman. At the time of the Survey, the Biſhop of London held the chief part under the title of his Fee; Odo Biſhop of Bayeux had the next conſiderable ſhare; and Grime the Sheriff, and Hubert de Port, another. The Biſhop of London's under-tenant was Hugolin; and Odo's the ſon of Turold [G].

Thoſe lands were divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. The maner of Chadwell. 2. . . . that of Ingleby. 3. . . . that of Longhouſe. 4. . . . that of Biggin.

The Maner of CHADWELL.

Chadwell-hall, the maner-houſe, ſtands near the Church.

The earlieſt account we find of this maner after the Survey, is about the year 1250, when a family ſurnamed de Wokindon [concerning which ſee above, p. 102.] held it under the Biſhop of London; and alſo the Advowſon of the Church [H].

Nicolas de Halughton, heir of Joane, daughter and heir of Sir Nicolas de Wokingdon, claimed Free-warren in Wokyndon, Braxſtede, and Chaldwell. Sir Nicolas de Halton [Halughton] preſented to this Church in 1336. At the time of his deceaſe in 1339, he held this maner of the Biſhop of London;—— Margaret, and Joane, were his daughters and heirs (a). Yet he ſeems to have had a ſon and a grandſon, who moſt likely dyed without iſſue, and made way for the daughters: or at leaſt ſome of the ſame name and family had an eſtate in this pariſh in 1357; which is confirmed by a releaſe of Thomas ſon of Sir Thomas de Halughton, or Halgeton as he is there called [I].

Margaret, eldeſt daughter of Sir Nicolas de Halughton, ſeems to have had three huſbands, Sir Roger de Northwood, John Barry, and Walter Grey. Sir Roger de Northwood preſented to the Rectory, in her right, in 1362. Margaret Barry, then widow of John Barry, in 1389, and Walter Grey, lord of the maner, and Margaret Barry his wife, lady of the maner of Chaldwell, preſented five times, from 1389 to 1407. Margaret, in 1385, when ſhe was the wife of Sir John Barry, granted to Richard Rikedon of Witham, and others, the maner of Chaldwelle and all her right and title in the maner of Little-Braxted, and in 6*l.* 10*s.* rent in Tierlyng and Crikeſheth (b).——Joane de Halughton, the other daughter, was married to Thomas de Aſheton. [See in the other Volume, p. 143.]

John de Bois had this eſtate afterwards, which he held of the Biſhop of London, and preſented to the Living in 1409.

Nicolas de Rykhill preſented in 1422 (c), and therefore unqueſtionably had alſo the Maner. [Concerning this laſt Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 136.]

The Maner and Advowſon were afterwards in Philip Malpas, citizen and draper of London, who preſented to the Rectory in 1450 and 1461.

Elizabeth, his only daughter, and heir, was married to Sir Thomas Cooke, of Geddy-hall. At the time of her deceaſe in 1484, ſhe held this maner, and advowſon of the Church, of the Abbot of Stratford Langthorne [K], by fealty. ——Philip Cooke, her ſon, ſucceeded her (d). ——John, his ſon, held it of the ſame Abbey; and dyed poſſeſſed of it 20 Auguſt 1486.——John Cooke, his brother, was then 34 years old; who departing this life 10 October 1515, left ——Antony, his ſon and heir, 11 years old (e). He was afterwards Præceptor to K. Edward VI. and knighted. At the time of his deceaſe, 11 June 1576, he held this of the maner of Great Burghſted. As did his ſon——Richard, who dyed 3 October 1579 (f). And——Sir Antony Cooke, his ſon and heir, who departed this life 28 December 1604.——Sir Edward Cooke Kt. his eldeſt ſon and heir (g), held it alſo in the ſame manner. He left only two daughters coheirs, Anne, married to Sir Edward Sydenham, and Vere to Sir Charles Gawdy, of Crowſhall in Suffolk. [See above, p. 66, 67.] The latter had this eſtate, and preſented to the Living from 1663 to 1683.

Then it was in Thomas Velley Gent. who preſented in 1690 and 1692 (h). Soon after it was purchaſed by Sir Robert Smyth, Bart. who was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Robert, and his great grandſon —— Sir Trafford Smyth, Barts. [See above, p. 14.] Sir Trafford 14 March 1748-9, ſold this maner, eſtate, and advowſon, for the ſum of 3250l. to

Mr. Richard Hyder, of Greys Thurrock; who ſince parted with the advowſon.

The Maner of INGLEBY.

The manſion-houſe is demoliſhed; it ſtood near the two Trees where the Court is held. But there are ſome Buildings belonging to the demeſnes, near the Ferry.

This was originally part of the Biſhop of London's Fee. Stephen de Graveſend, Biſhop, in 1337, paſſed by Fine lands in Chaldwell and Southminſter to William Vigerons, and others, who granted them to the Biſhop for his life; remainder to Hugh Nevill for life; remainder to Thomas de Graveſend, in tail; remainder to Thomas, ſon of Henry le Chamberlaine (i). ——Thomas de Graveſend held this, as one fee in Chaldewell, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of

But, as it was originally the Biſhop of London's fee, and not part of the Eſtate of his See, he might grant it away. However, it is not mentioned as holden of that Abbey till 1484. And poſſibly it might be a miſtake for the maner, or part of the maner, of Bigging. ——I ſhall take an opportunity of ſupplying here an omiſſion, above, p. 66. col. 2. l. 15. after Geddy-hall, add,—' dyed 20 ' Auguſt 1486, and was ſucceeded by his brother——John, ' then 34 years old. Hereford and Eſſex (k). In 1364, Joane, widow of Sir Thomas de Graveſend, holding this in dower, releaſed all her right in the ſame to Thomas de Ingelby (l). And from that Family it took the name of Ingleby.——John Ingleby, who dyed in 1438, held 1 marſh, and 12 acres of arable in Chaldwell of Anne Counteſs Stafford, by the ſervice of one Sparhawk yearly at Michaelmaſs. And of her ſon, Humfrey Earl Stafford, he held the maner of Inglebies entirely, by the ſervice aforeſaid; as of his maner of Fobbing; together with a meſſuage called Tholmodys, and divers tofts named Hampſteds.——John Ingelby, his ſon and heir, was then 4 years old (m).——Sir William Inglebye held this maner of Humfrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, as of his maner of Fobbinge. He dyed 4 December 1501, leaving ——John, his ſon, 24 years old: who departed this life 28 Auguſt 1502.——William Ingleby, his ſon, then 8 years old, was his heir (n).

The next poſſeſſor upon record was Peter Simonds. At the time of his deceaſe, 26 July 1587, he held the maner of Ingleby, alias Ingelbies, and divers lands and tenements in Chaldwell, of the Queen as of her maner of Fobbing, by fealty, and yearly rent of 7 s. His nephew ——Richard, ſon of his brother John, was his heir (o). The ſaid Peter Simonds gave by will 20 s. a year to the Poor of this pariſh; but the lands are not known which were charged with the payment.

This eſtate now belongs to the Poor of Winchester.

The Maner of Long-House, otherwiſe Chadwell Place, is not mentioned in records till the reign of K. Henry VI.

Sir William Skrene, who dyed in 1430, held jointly with Alice his wife the maner of Long-Houſe in Chaldwell, with appertenances in Orſete, Weſt-Tilbury, and Little-Thurrock. His heir was the ſon of his ſon John, named alſo——John. This John dyed 4 July 1451, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, and of the maner of Chambers in Epping, leaving by Philippa his wife, who ſurvived him,——John his ſon and heir, one year and a half old (p). He was afterwards knighted: And, at the time of his deceaſe in 1474, held not only this Maner, but alſo thoſe of Chambers, Berwicks and Cadnes; eſpecially Skrenes in Rokeſwell, which from him took its name (q). Concerning this ancient Family of Skrene, ſee more above, p. 50. 155. and in the other Volume, p. 70. 97.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1476, held 1 meſſuage and 100 acres of arable in Chaldewell and Little-Thurrock, called Longhouſe, of Henry Torell, by fealty and rent of 6 d. per ann. (r). His deſcendents do not appear to have enjoyed it: Nor do we find who did, between him and the preſent poſſeſſor John Ruſſel, of North-Okendon Eſq; [See above, p. 103.]

The word ſignifies a habitation, or maner-houſe, from the Saxon Biȝanȝe.

It belonged to the Abbey of Stratford Langthorn: And undoubtedly aroſe from the following Grants.

In 1338, Reginald Gobion, and his ſon John had licenſe to give to that Abbey 1 meſſuage, 9 acres of arable, and 31 acres of marſh in Chaldewell. And, in 1400, William Ford and Edward Mille obtained a licenſe to give them 1 meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 4 acr. of meadow, and 200 of marſh in Chaldewell, Eaſt and Weſt Tilbury, and Little Thurrok (s). Theſe conſtituted the Maner of Biggin.

Sir Ralph Joſſelyn held it in 1478 under the Abbot of Stratford, as of his maner of Great Burſted. The Abbey had free warren here (t).

After the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſtery, K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted this eſtate to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's in London in pure alms (u). They have enjoyed it ever ſince. And it has been leaſed out by them to Mrs. Goram, of Ratcliff-croſs;——to Edmund Hutchins;——and, in 1744, to Mr. John Crutchfield of London.

Cowpers is mentioned as another Maner in this Pariſh. Roger Taſker, who dyed 29 Septemb. 1595, held it; and tenements called Shepherds, Mots, Slepers, Tholmans, and other parcels on Orſet-heath in this pariſh (w). Who hath it now, or whether it is not incorporated in the other Eſtates, I cannot find.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands on the ſide of a hill, and is of one pace, and almoſt of the ſame breadth, with the Chancel; the whole tyled. At the weſt end there is a Tower of ſtone, of conſiderable height, in which are three Bells.

This Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner of Chadwell-Hall. But hath been alienated.

This pariſh is rated to the Land-tax at 737 l.

When Tilbury Fort was enlarged by K. Charles II. the road was turned into Chadwell, being that part which comes in at a Gate, and goes on the weſt ſide of the preſent Fort,

The inhabitants of Chadwell were indicted for not repairing ſo much of the road as lay in their pariſh: But, upon a tryal at the Aſſizes at Chelmsford, 8 July 1741, the inhabitants were acquitted, Becauſe it appeared, that the Governors of the Fort had kept the road in repair, out of the profits of the Ferry, from the time it was turned into this pariſh, and therefore it was adjudged they ought to do it ſtill now.

TILBURY

There are in Eſſex three Pariſhes of this name; two of them contiguous, and lying near the river Thames; and the other in Hinckford Hundred, ſtyled near Clare, becauſe it is within a few miles of that Town. The name is derived, either from the Saxon Tilia, a huſbandman, or Tiᵹel, a tile; and buꞃᵹ, or buꞃh, a city, town, caſtle, court, or houſe. Probably, becauſe here was anciently a Town, or Fortification, one of the firſt tiled in this iſland: Or a ſtrong place, which ſerved for retreat to the country people in caſe of invaſions.

17. WEST-TILBURY

lies Weſt of the other by the ſide of the river Thames, which is the reaſon of the name. Whether theſe two were originally but one Pariſh is not eaſily determined, and indeed is of no conſequence. More certain it is, that here was in the ſeventh century a conſiderable Town, though now reduced to a poor Village. For when Ceadda, Cedd, or St. Chad, came and converted again the Eaſt-Saxons to Chriſtianity, and was conſecrated Biſhop of this Dioceſe, he fixed one of his Epiſcopal ſees at Tilaburg, and the other at Ythanceſtir (x).

At the time of the Survey, Suene and his under-tenants Oſbern and Ralph, two Frenchmen, held this Pariſh; which, in the Saxons time, had belonged to Aluric a Prieſt, a freeman [L].

It was divided afterwards into the Maners, 1. . . . . of Weſt-Tilbury; and 2. . . . . of Condovers.

The Maner of WEST TILBURY.

Weſt Tilbury-Hall, the maner-houſe, ſtands a little way north-weſt from the Church.

Suene's grandſon, Henry de Eſſex, hereditary Standard-bearer, loſt his eſtates through his cowardiſe, as related above, p. 156.

A later poſſeſſor took his name from this place: Namely Robert de Tilbury who was here about the reign of K. Henry II. and held this maner, of the Honor of Raleigh [M].——Richard de Tilbury ſucceeded him, and had a Fair granted him here, and a Market (y). He held the maner of Tylleber' in capite, of the King, worth 20l. and dying before 1285, left ——Robert his ſon, under age, and in the King's cuſtody: who for the ſum of 200l. granted to Conſtance, the widow of Richard, and mother of the ſaid Robert, his wardſhip and marriage till he came of age; and ſhe bequeathed it to one William de Stowe (z).——William de Tillebery, who dyed in 1304, held this maner; and tenements near Tilbury, Chiltendiche, and Elteney, which were members of the ſame, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of 2 knights fees, and a quarter: and 160 acres of land in Orſeth, of Hugh de Nevill (a).——John was his ſon and heir, who granted it, in 1319, to Richard Abell, with the Advowſon of the Church, and Chapel of this maner; and Joane his widow, by fine, paſſed it, in 1320, to him with the Advowſon of the Church and Chapel, reſerving in it her own life (b).

John de Chavent, couſin and heir of Sir Peter de Chavent, granted, in 1344, to Thomas Lodelawe and his heirs 4*l.* of yearly rent, which William de Tilleburg, brother and heir of Robert de Tilleburg, had granted to Sir Peter de Chavent his uncle, and Agnes his wife, to be received out of his maner of Tillebury (c).

In 1348, John Charteney, citizen and merchant of London, releaſed to Sir William Vaughan, and Joane his wife, and the heirs of the ſaid William, all his right in the maner of Weſt-Tilbury.——Sir Thomas Vaughan held this maner of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1362.——Sir Hamo was his ſon and heir, who ſold the fee, with the Advowſon, to Edward Chambre and others, but the King's

After this the eſtate went amongſt female heirs, and was ſubdivided. Margaret, wife of Sir Richard Mutton, had a ſixth part, at the time of her deceaſe in 1420.——William was her ſon and heir; who conveyed his part to Nicolas Fulke. The ſame year,——Philip Bokilton Eſq; had a ſixth part; Iſabel, wife of John Fulk, was his ſiſter and heir (f).

In 1422, John Fulke, and Catharine his wife, paſſed by fine a moiety of the third part of this maner to John Harpur, of Hereford. And in 1436, Nicolas ſon of John Fulke, and Catharine his wife releaſed all their right in this maner to the ſaid Harpur (g).

Margaret, wife of Sir Baldwyn Straunge, held a third part, of Richard Duke of York, of his maner of Raleye. She dyed in 1427.——Elizabeth, wife of Robert Molineux, was her daughter and heir (h).

Thomas Hethe, who had a moiety of this maner, and the Advowſon of the Chapel, paſſed them by fine, in 1457, to John Harpyr of Rapſhale Eſq; and Alianor his wife, in tail. And Cecily Joſſelyn, widow, who had a moiety of this maner, together with another moiety of the ſame in the tenure of William Harper, departed this life 7 July, 1503, leaving——Nicolas Joſſelyn her ſon and heir (i).

Joane, wife of Thomas Smith, that dyed 14 Auguſt 1536, held a moiety of a moiety of this maner, and the Advowſon of the Free Chapel of St. Nicolas in Weſt Tilbury, of the King as aforeſaid, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. Her ſiſter——Elizabeth, wife of Edward Smith, Gent. was her heir (k).——Thomas Smith alienated the 4th part of this maner, 5 Novemb. 1560, to

John Throgmorton (l). This eſtate was next in

Richard Jenoure Eſq; of Bigods in Great Dunmow. [See in the other Volume, p. 425.] He dyed in 1548; and Wiburga, his widow, was remarried to Sir Richard Weſton, one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas; who, in her right, held one meſſuage; a moiety of this maner, with appertenances, and of 300 acres of marſh, and 60 s. rent, in Weſt and Eaſt Tilbury, Chaldwell, Greys and Little Thurrock; and the moiety of the Paſſage or Ferry, and alſo the moiety of the Advowſon of this Church.——Sir Kenelm Jenoure, Bart. ſucceeded his grand father: and at the time of his deceaſe, 20 Auguſt 1629, had this maner, and the Paſſage called Weſt-Tilbury Ferry (m); which he gave to his daughter

Anne, firſt married to——Dell Eſq; Secretary to Archbiſhop Laud, and afterwards to Sir Richard Hatton, ſon of Robert Hatton Eſq; Serjeant at Law. Sir Richard dying 28 January 1677, without iſſue, his brother——Sir Robert ſucceded him, and dyed 13 May 1684. He married Anne, daughter of Sir John Garrard Bart.——Thomas, his ſon and heir, had to wife Mary, daughter of Thomas Lambert of Sevenoak in Kent, Eſq; [N]. He ſold this eſtate to

Mr. John Kellaway, who dying 17 September 1737, his widow Elizabeth had it after him, and ſold it to

Richard Mickelfield Eſq; late an Eaſt-India Captain. From whom it is come to his nephew

Richard Hunt Eſq;

The Maner of CONDOVERS.

The manſion houſe ſtands on a Green, near the Parſonage.

The firſt mention we find of this maner is in the time of K. Henry VIII.

Edward Baker Eſq; who dyed 3 April 1535, beſides the maner of Bowres-Gifford, &c. held one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 100 of paſture, 200 of marſh, with appertenances called Condovers, in Eaſt, and Weſt, Tilbury, of Sir John Mordaunt, of his maner of Weſt Tilbury, by fealty and rent of 13 s. 4 d. per ann. being of the yearly value of 10 l. His ſon——James Baker Eſq; (n) at the time of his deceaſe, 6 January 1569, alſo held the maner or meſſuage of Quindovers, alias Condovers, with appertenances, in Eaſt, and Weſt, Tilbury, and Mucking, of William Strangman Eſq; and Joane his wife, as of the maner of Goſhalmes in Eaſt Tilberry, in free ſocage, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 4 d.——Henry Baker, his ſon and heir, was 22 years old (o).

The eſtate was afterwards in Philip Howard who ſold it to John Brewſter, and it deſcended from him to

John Brewſter Eſq; of the Curſitors Office, whoſe grandfather was Francis, fourth ſon of Francis Brewſter of Wrentham-Hall in Suffolk, Eſq; [See above, p. 8.]

The Fort was built at firſt by K. Henry VIII. being then only a kind of Block-houſe (p). After the Dutch had come up the river in 1667, and burnt our Ships at Chatham, K. Charles II. cauſed it to be much enlarged, and made a regular fortification. It has a Governor, and a number of matroſſes.

When the Spaniſh Armada was alarming our Coaſts in 1588, and threatning deſcents in various places, Qu. Elizabeth had a Camp here in order to ſecure this coaſt and the city of London againſt their attempts. The Camp was where the Wind-mill now ſtands, and there are ſome traces of it ſtill viſible. That truly great Heroine's behaviour upon that occaſion, like another Boadicea, and her excellent Speech to her Troops, may be ſeen in the Account of the Spaniſh Invaſion which I drew up, in order to accompany Mr. Pine's Engravings of the Tapeſtry of the Houſe of Lords, p. 19. and in Cabala, p. 373. See alſo Thameſis Deſcriptio, in Pine.

Within the lands belonging to the Maner of Weſt-Tilbury a famous Medicinal Water was diſcovered, in 1727, by Mr. John Kellaway, who made there a Well in 1734. The ſprings lie about 12 feet deep from the ſurface of the ground, which is a Hill at leaſt above 30 feet above the marſhes, in a hard gravel. About the depth of 13 feet there is a bed of ſand at leaſt 30 feet deep, which lying between the Spring and the marſhes prevents any communication that way, and the Well is within 40 yards of the extreme point of the hill (q). The Virtues of this water made it come into great Reputation from abundant Experience. It has been found beneficial in all kinds of Hæmorrhages, in Diabetes, Scurvy, and Loſs of Appetite. It will bear carriage to the Eaſt-Indies and home again; and is the only Alterative Water of its kind found in this part of England.—Dr. John Andree of London, has publiſhed a Treatiſe of Experiments made by himſelf and Mr. White, by appointment of the Royal Society; to which he has added a Hiſtory of Patients relieved by it, as given by themſelves, with the Method of uſing the Water. Printed in 1740.

Experiments on Tilbury-water by Chr. White.

1. The Tilbury-water was found much heavier than the Thames or any other Spring-water he had tryed. 2. It lathers very indifferently unboiled; much better when boiled, better than ſpring-water, yet no ſo well as river-water. 3. When boiled, it turns milky; a fourth part of Mountain-wine fines it immediately; a very ſmall proportion of vinegar will do; alſo juice of limons and other acids ſooner according to the ſtrength. 4. Oyl of tartar per deliq. poured into the water when boiled, makes a white precipitate; a little oyl of vitriol, ſpirit of ſalt, or any ſtrong acid, makes it as clear as the water was at firſt. 5. Spirit of ſalt armoniac, hartſhorn, and ſal volatile oleoſ. poured into the water cold, gives a white precipitate. The afore-mentioned Acids make them all clear again. 6. The water cold turns ſyrup of violets green in about a quarter of an hour; when warmed in a leſs time; when boiled hot, in about one minute. 7. The water being boiled and put into a glaſs, in one night's time there will fall to the bottom a whitiſh ſubſtance. When the liquor is decanted from it, you diſcern a ſaline taſte; and it turns ſyrup of violets green as ſoon as the boyled water. 8. The water being boyled with an equal quantity of milk doth not curdle. 9. The water does not tinge with galls any more than with common water. Put in a little ſolution of galls on the water, it gives in a little time a yellow precipitate.

Experiments on the Salts.

1. Two pounds of Tilbury water being put into a retort and diſtilled to a dryneſs, there was left behind 60 grains of ſubſtance of a colour like unto Jeſuits bark, of a ſaltiſh taſte. After the water is half diſtilled, it appears in the retort as if ſome drops of oil were floating on the ſurface. 2. What was left in the retort was two parts ſalt, the third an inſipid earth of the colour of yellow ocre, the ſalt much whiter than before it was ſeparated. The ſalt being put on a burning charcoal cauſed a very ſmall hiſſing: what was left on the charcoal was of an aſh colour, taſting as hot and fiery as ſalt of tartar on fixed nitre. 4. Spirit of vitriol, ſpirit of ſalt, aqua fortis, and other acids, poured on the ſalt, cauſe an ebullition. 5. Oyl of tartar per deliq. and other alkalies being put to the ſalt make no ebullition. 6. The ſalt turns ſyrup of violets green. 7. The ſalt put to ſal armoniac finely powdered opens the body of it in a ſmall degree, ſo as to diſcern it has a little volatile ſmell. 8. A ſtrong ſolution of the ſalt in ſpring water immediately precipitates mel ſaturni of a pale yellowiſh colour. 9. Neither the ſalt nor water will precipitate ſolution of ſublimate.

This ſalt comes neareſt of any thing to a ſalt Mr. White formerly got from diſtilled crabs claws, and oyſter ſhells, which he takes to be compounded of ſea-ſalts with a ſmall quantity of fixed ſalts.

The Church, dedicated to St. James, ſtands pleaſantly at the end of a Green, on a riſing ground that affords a large proſpect towards the Thames and the Channel. Both Church and Chancel are tiled. At the weſt end is a wooden Frame with a ſpire ſhingled, in which are five Bells. Here was formerly a Tower of ſtone, very high, which ſerved for a Sea-mark, till it fell down.

(p) Lambarde's Topographic. Dictionary.

(q) From a Letter of Mr. Kellaway's to Smart Lethieullier Eſq;

On the north ſide of the Church was an aiſle; which, upon rebuilding of the Church, was omitted, except ſo much as makes the north Porch. In that aiſle lay a Grave-ſtone, in the ſhape of a coffin, with croſſes on it; made now a ſtool to one of the windows.

This Rectory was at firſt appendent to the Maner.

July 1 1345, John de Poulteney obtained the King's licence to give the Advowſon of it to the Maſter or Warden of the Chantry founded by him to the honor of Corpus Chriſti, in the Church of St. Laurence in Candlewick-Street London, and to the twelve Chaplains. They preſented only once, in 1384; The Crown has had the Patronage ever ſince.

WEST-LEE-CHAPEL

Stood where the Fort is now. There was another at Langdon, called Eaſt-Lee Chapel. Why called Lee does not appear; unleſs it was from the Saxon ley, paſture, or unploughed ground. This Chapel was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; the founder is not known, but ſuppoſed to be of the Family of Tilbury.

Sir Thomas Vaughan, who dyed in 1362, held the maner of Weſt-Tilbery, with the Free Chapel there, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, in which one Chaplain was to officiate for ever for the ſouls of the King's predeceſſors, and for his anceſtors ſouls; to receive out of the ſaid maner 112 s. 8 d. rent: Which Chapel was founded in the time of St. Thomas the Martyr. [See under Hockley.] Sir Thomas Vaughan had preſented, in 1335, Nicolas de Hall to this Chapel (r).

The return in the Book of Chantries ſaith, that this Chapel was a mile and more from the Pariſh Church. The yearly value was then brought in but 53 s. 4 d. not half what it once was.

Five acres of land were given for two Obits in this Church: And one acre and a half for a Lamp; now unknown.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 625 l.

18. EAST-TILBURY.

This pariſh lies, as the laſt, by the river Thames, againſt Tilbury Hope.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to one freeman: At the time of the Survey, Tedric Pointel, and his under-tenant Hunald, held it [O]. And though it made then but a ſmall appearance, and contained only one Maner, it was afterwards branched out into theſe five Maners. 1. The maner of Eaſt-Tilbury. 2. . . . that of St. Clere's. 3. The maner of Gobyons. 4. . . . that of Southall. 5. . . . that of Goſſalms.

The maner of EAST-TILBURY.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church, on the Weſt.

This eſtate was, in the reign of K. Henry III. in the Kameſeck, or Kewſeck, Family; which had alſo the maners of Camſeys, and Great Sandford in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 417, 418. and 525, or 526.]

There was a fine, in 1258, between Edmund Camek, plaintiff, and Margery, wife of Henry Kemeſek, petent, about the allotment of her dowry in Ixning in Suffolk, and Tillebury in Eſſex. She had the Paſſage here and the Advowſon of the Church. Edmund complained ſhe had too much (s).

This Edmund Kemſeck, or Kewſeck, dyed in 1288. He held in Tilbury one meſſuage, 72 acres of arable, 16 of meadow and paſture and marſh, and 10 l. rent-aſſize, of the Earl of Hereford in capite by the ſervice of a knight's fee;——Edmund was his ſon and heir (t), who held it, and after him ——Joane his widow. She preſented to this Living in 1321, and 1327 (u).

At the time of her deceaſe in 1331, ſhe held here in capite, of the Earl aforeſaid, 1 meſſuage, 36 acres of arable, and 29 of marſh and paſture, 47 s. rent aſſiſe, and a Paſſage. Her next heir was

William ſon of Philip de Welle (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 525.] At the time of his deceaſe in 1349, he held the maner of Eſt-Tilbery, with the Advowſon of the Church, and the Paſſage there, of the Counteſs of Hereford, Joane was his daughter and heir (x). She was married to Sir Henry de Coggeſhale, and brought him the eſtate at Gr. Sandford, but we hear no farther of them here. Sir Henry preſented to the Living of Tilbury in 1368, and 1371.

This eſtate was purchaſed, together with Sabury-hall, as an endowment of the Rectory of St. Anne at Lime houſe, with 3500l. granted for that purpoſe, in 1729, by act of Parliament; the Church of Lime-Houſe, being one of the Fifty new Churches in and about London.

The Maner of ST. CLERES

was ſo named from its ancienteſt owners upon record.

In 1266, William de Sancto Claro, or St. Clere, held in the village of Eſt-Tilbury 140 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, a marſh for feeding 200 ſheep, 50*s.* 2*d.* rent aſſize, and a wind-mill. In 1301, Robert de Sancto Claro held one fee in Eſt-Tilbery; and Ralph de Rothing another fee there, under Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex (y). [Concerning this Family of St. Clere ſee more in the other Volume p. 28.]

It ſeems to be one of the three knights fees in this pariſh holden under Humfrey Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1372 (z).

This maner was afterwards in a Family ſurnamed Muſle or Moſeley. For, in 1457, John Muſle of Berking, Gent. ſon and heir of John Muſle and Chriſtina his wife, granted to John Shopman, citizen and upholder of London, and to Margery his wife, for life, their maner called Sencleres in Eaſt Tilbury (a).——Robert Moſele, who dyed in 1475, held the maners of Seynt Clers and Oldhall, 500 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 200 of wood, in Eaſt and Weſt Tilberry, Coringham, and Stanford le Hope, of Anne Ducheſs of Buckingham, ſeparately, as of her maner of Writtle; —— Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Broket, was his couſin and heir, as being daughter of Elizabeth ſiſter of Chriſtina mother of John Moſele, who was father of the ſaid Robert. Thomas Brockett Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe in 1477, held the maner of Eſt-Tilbery called Seint-Cleres, and 1 meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, and 6 marks of rent, in this and pariſhes adjoyning, of the Prioreſs of Aſhby yielding a red roſe, on St. John Baptiſt's day. ——Edward Broket, his brother and heir, was 50 years old (b).

Next; Sir John Scott, at the time of his deceaſe, 18 October 1484, held the maner of St. Cleres, alias Eſtylburye; in Eaſt-Tilberye, Coringham, and Stanford in le Hope, of the Prior of Gatle.——William, his ſon and heir, was then aged 26 years (c). He, or his ſon, dyed 22 January 1588 poſſeſſed of the ſame, leaving—— William, his ſon and heir. The Queen at this time was lady of the maner of Eaſt-Tilbury; and this was holden of that maner, by fealty, and rent of 30s. per annum (d).

Sir Charles Inglefield had it ſome years ago and ſold it to

Thomas Grant; and Grant in 1716 to Sir William Humphreys of Berking, Bart. in whoſe Family it now is or lately was.

The Maner of GOBYONS of which the manſion houſe ſtands a mile north from the Church, near the river, was ſo named from a knightly Family, which have left their name to ſeveral places in this County. [See above, p. 63. and in the other Volume, p. 96. 361. 369.]

Sir Thomas Gobyon held a knight's fee in Eaſt-Tilbury under the noble family of Bohuns, Earls of Hereford and Eſſex, holden afterwards by Edm. Kemeſek (e).

Sir Richard de Sutton who dyed in 1395, held the maner of Gobyons of Joane Counteſs of Hereford (f).—Sir Richard de Sutton, and Ralph Aynell Parſon of the Church of Little Ocle, in 1387 conſtituted Richard Heyns and Peter Weſtwoode their Attorneys, to deliver to Thomas Byrdeford of Hertford the full poſſeſſion and ſeiſin of the maners of Pelham-Furneux and Thedriſham, with the Advowſons and Collations of the Chantries; to have them in exchange for the maner of Eaſt-Tilbury, and for the marſhes and other lands and tenements formerly Thomas Bedeford's (g). The name of Sutton is not mentioned by Sir Henry Chauncy, nor that of Byrdeford, ſo that neither of them was at Pelham for any conſiderable time. An Epitaph in this Church, proves one William de Bardefolde to have been here; which moſt probably meant the ſame as Byrdeford and Bedeford; and this eſtate of Gobyons ſeems to have gone for ſome time by his name, or ſomething very near it; as appears by the Clauſe rolls in 1445 [P]: wherein John Kendall releaſed to John Somerſet, Sir William Drury of Suffolk, and others, all his right in the tenements and lands called Berdevyles in Eſt Tilbery, formerly belonging to Walter Scarlet. And, the next year, John Scarlet of London Peyntour, Son of Walter, releaſed to Somerſet, Drury, Shopman, and Petard, &c. all his right in Berdevyles in Eaſt-Tilbury. We need not wonder at the variety in writing Byrdeford's name, if we obſerve that almoſt in the ſame line here we meet with Kendall written Kendale.

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, at the time of his deceaſe 10 March 1512, held this maner of Gobyons; and ſo did his brother—— John, the 14th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 14 July 1526 (h).——Edward the 17th Earl, moſt probably ſold it, as he did the greater part of his eſtates.

Edward Lawrence Eſq; who dyed 8 April 1606, held the maner of Gobbions in Eaſt-Tilbury and Mucking, of the King of his Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of one knight's-fee. ——John his ſon held it alſo of the ſame Honor, and dying 17 December, 1617, left——John, his ſon and heir (i).

This eſtate was lately in Champion Branfill of Upminſter-Hall, Eſq; and is now in his ſon.

The Maner of GOSSALYNE, or GOSSALME.

The manſion houſe is about three quarters of a mile north-weſt from the Church.

This maner took its name from an ancient Family mentioned above under Ging-Ralph, or Ingrave, p. 215.

Richard Goſſalyne, and Alice his wife held in the villages of Eſt, and Weſt, Tilbury, one meſſuage, 150 acres of arable, 120 of marſh, and 100*s.* yearly rent, of William Barentyne, William de Welde, Hugh Fitz-Simon, the Prior of Okeborn, and William de Vaughan [Q].——Richard ſucceeded his father who dyed in 1332 (k). And in 1354, ——Robert, ſon and heir of Sir Richard Goſſalm, releaſed to John Merlawe and his heirs, all his right in lands and tenements in Weſt and Eſt-Tilbury and Mokkynge, which Maud de Attewell formerly held after the death of John de Attewell, as of her inheritance (l).

Before that, Robert Godſalme, and Margery his wife, had granted ſome lands in Eſt and Weſt Tilbury to John de Marton, and John de la Pole; which Marton releaſed his right in to De la Pole in 1341 (m).

We hear no further of this eſtate till the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign, when William Strangman and Anne his wife held it by the name of Goſhalmes.

Sir Thomas Wiſeman held it in 1635 of the Honor of Mandeville.

The Maner of SOUTHALL, is in the ſouth part of this pariſh. The Pound belonging to it ſtands near the Church; but the Maner Houſe was a great way off, in the marſhes: It is now down.

Edmund ſon of Simon, held a knight's fee in Eaſt-Tilbury of the Earl of Hereford, who dyed in 1372 (n). Whether this be that fee, nothing ſhews; but as it was holden of the Earl of Hereford, it ſeems to have been once in the Gobyon Family, as well as the former.

This eſtate goes now to the Repair of Rocheſter Bridge: when, and by whom given, we do not find.

The following perſons have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh. Mr. Thomas Crump; William Towers; Edward Skinner; William Fordham; Henry Hide, &c.

A gift of twenty ſhillings a year for ever to the Poor, out of a farm here called the Folly, is diſtributed amongſt them at Chriſtmas and Midſummer.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Catharine, conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle, all which with the Chancel is tiled. At the upper end of the aiſle there is an incloſure to all appearance for a Chantry, which we ſhall preſently mention. The Tower, which was of ſtone, and embattled, ſtood on the ſouth ſide near the weſt end of the Church. In our wars with the Dutch in the laſt century, ſome of their Ships-guns beat it down; its height having given them offence. There is now an humble wooden Frame, with two Bells.

This Church was originally a Rectory, and a Sine-cure; with a Vicar under it as early as the year 1325, The Patronage of the Rectory being in the Lords of the Maner of Eaſt-Tilbury, viz. the Families of Kemſek, Wells, and Cogeſhale; and the Rector preſented to the Vicarage, till the year 1389. Then, John Lord Cobham got it appropriated to his College at Cobham by authority of a Bull from Pope Urban VI. to maintain two Chaplains to ſay maſs daily for the ſouls of Sir John de la Pole and his lady Joane, daughter of Lord Cobham, for Sir William de la Pole and his lady Margaret, for John Lord Cobham and his lady Margaret, &c. The Biſhop of London got then for his See from the College a penſion of 6 s. 8 d. and 40 d. for the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and for the Archdeacon 40*d.* (o).

K. Richard II. gave the Lord Cobham licenſe to appropriate the Rectory to the Maſter and Chaplains of his ſaid College at Cobham; and they continued Patrons of the Vicarage till their ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

A Chantry was founded in this Pariſh [R] about the year 1328 by Sir Thomas Gobyon;

[Q] What he held of William Barentyn was 1 meſſuage, 30 acres of arable, 20 of marſh, and 60 s. rent, by the ſervice of 10 s. a year:——of William de Welde, 7 acres of arable, 15 of marſh, and 15 s. rent, by the ſervice of 9 s. a year:——of Hugh Fitz-Simon, 30 acr. of arable, 10 of marſh, and 9 s. rent, by the ſervice of 12 s——of the Prior of Okebourne, 83 acres of arable, 60 of marſh, and 61 s. rent, by the ſervice of 25 s. a year: and of William de Vaughan, 15 acr. of marſh, and 5 s. rent by the ſervice of 6 s. a year. Inquiſ. 6 Edw. III.

[R] It doth not plainly appear, whether this Chantry was in the Church, or adjoyning thereto. For in the Book of Chantries it is ſaid, that the 'Preiſt was to ſay divine 'ſervice in the Chapple of Eaſt Tilburye, . . . and that it 'was no Pariſh Church, but there was divine ſervice in the 'ſaid Chapple. In the London Regiſtry it is ſtyled, 'Cantur' 'in Eccleſia de Halywell in Capella Gobyon infra parochiam 'de Eaſt Tilbury.'

who endowed it with a meſſuage, 20 acres of arable, and 30 of marſh, in Eſt-Tilbery, for one Chaplain to perform divine ſervice daily at the Altar of St. Catharine in this Church. At the ſuppreſſion of Chantries it was valued at 12 l. 4s. 4d. yearly: And the lands belonging thereto were granted to Thomas nephew of the Lord Chancellor Audeley (p).

Here was another Chantry, valued at the ſuppreſſion 3 l. 6s. 8 d. per annum: and the endowment belonging to it was granted to William Sholdham, Gent.

In this Pariſh was the ancient Ferry over the Thames. The famous Higham Cauſeway from Rocheſter by Higham, yet viſible, points to the place of the old Ferry. And this is with great reaſon ſuppoſed to have been the very place where the Emperor Claudius croſſed the river Thames in purſuit of the Britans; as related by Dion Caſſius, l. 60.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 967 l.

19. MUCKING.

This pariſh borders, as the two laſt, Southward upon the river Thames.

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records Mocking, Mokking, Muchinga, and Mucinga: and ſeems to be derived from the Saxon words Mucᵹ, an heap, or Mucel, great, and inᵹ, meadow, or paſture.

Before and after the Conqueſt this Pariſh belonged to the Nunnery of Berking [S].

The Celereſſe of that Nunnery was to receive ‘of the Collector of Mocking, at Michaelmaſs and Eaſter, 4 l. And alſo of the fermes there, at the ſaid two termes, 50 s.’ (q).

At the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, the ſtate and value of this eſtate was thus.

‘Humfrey Tirrell Fermer of Mucking-Hall, and two water-mills, one in Corringham, and the other in Mucking, paid 5 l. and 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. for other lands there. Rent-aſſize of the free and cuſtomary tenants, 16 l. 1 s. 3 d. Rents of moveables 6 s. 8 d. Perquiſites of Courts 10 l. 13 s. 1 d. ſum of all the allowances and 26 l. 16 s. 1 d.’ (r).

This Lordſhip was early divided into two Maners: 1. that of Mucking-hall, which ſeems to have remained in the hands of the Nunnery till K. Henry the VIIIth's reign. 2. . . . that of Waltons.

As to the latter, it was as early as the reign of K. Edward III. in a Family ſurnamed de Walton. For, in 1341, there was a Fine paſſed between John, ſon of John de Walton, and Margery his wife, plaintiffs, and Griffin de Sutton, and Richard at Doune, Parſons of the Churches of Tendring and Theryton, deforc' of two mills, 540 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 17 of wood, 160 acres of marſh-land, 120 s. worth of land in Mokking, Eſt-Tilbury, Purle, &c. and the Advowſon of the Church of Stowe near Fambrigge; the right of the ſaid Griffin and Richard; who granted the premiſſes to John Walton and his wife, and their heirs (s). Hence aroſe the maner of Waltons in this pariſh and Purley.

The Maner of WALTONS, belonged afterwards to the noble Family of Vere Earls of Oxford. For John de Vere, the 13th of Oxford, who dyed 10 March 1512, held the maner of Waltons in Mocking of Elizabeth Abbeſs of Berking, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and yearly rent of 10 ſhillings; ſuit at the Court of the ſaid Abbeſs's maner of Mocking-hall; and payment after the death of every tenant that dyed ſeized thereof, one of the beſt beaſts for an Herriot.——John, ſon of his brother Sir George, was his next heir, and ſucceſſor. He dyed 14 July 1526, holding this eſtate by the ſervice of one knight's fee, paying 100 s. 1 d. per ann. to the Lady Abbeſs of Barking, and by the reſt of the like ſervices as above (t).

Of the ſame Abbeſs were holden in this pariſh, by the Shaa, and Browne Families, lands and tenements called Frodmans, Brokis and

After the ſuppreſſion of religious Houſes, K. Edward VI. in 1547, granted the maner of Mocking, alias Mocking-hall, with appertenances, lands there called Waltons, and Formanſland, and the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Church of Mucking, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their ſucceſſors (w).

Mucking-hall ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

Tillington, and other parcels of land in this pariſh, belonged to Philip Travers, in 1636 (x).

Within this pariſh in the way leading from Orſet to Stanford le Hope, in a bottom, is a large Houſe called Jenkins; that belonged to Mr. Price, of Horndon on the hill.

Elizabeth Clovile, who lyved in happy matrimonye with 4 ſeverall huſbandes; namely Eugenius Gatton, Thomas Gill, Denſil Hartridge, and Francis Downes, all kind and loving Gentlemen; and dyed 30 January 1607; gave yearly for ever to the Church and Poor of this pariſh 20 nobles; to the Poor of Horndon 20 s. and to the Poor of Stanford le Hope 20 s. (y).

The Church, dedicated to St. John Baptiſt, is tiled, as is the Chancel: There is a ſouth aiſle to the Church, leaded. At the weſt end, a Stone Tower, with a ſhingled Spire.

This Vicarage was always appendent to the Maner of Mucking-hall; and, as ſuch, in the gift of the Abbeſs and Convent of Berking, afterwards of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

Mucking pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 709 l.

20. STANFORD LE HOPE

lies eaſt of the laſt deſcribed Pariſhes and of Orſet; bordering ſouth-ward on the Thames. The name of Stanford hath been explained above on Stanford-Rivers: p. 153: and was probably occaſioned by a ſtone, or paved, Ford, where is now a Bridge; over the Rivulet which is chiefly a boundary to Stanford, Mucking, and Horndon on the Hill. Half the Arch north and ſouth is maintained by Stanford, the ſouth-weſt quarter by Mucking, and the north-weſt by Horndon.

Le Hope is added, to diſtinguiſh this Pariſh from that other Stanford; and is the Bay or Reach at the winding of the River, where Ships often ride, whether inward or outward bound. Seamen have given it the Name of Hope, becauſe they find it a ſafe anchoring Place, after they are paſſed the Dangers of the Goodwin and other Sands near the Thames mouth; and can here ſafely caſt their Anchor, which with the Cable they call in their Sea-terms the Anchor and Hope.

We have not hitherto met with any other ſatisfactory Account of that name [T].

This pariſh ſeems to conſiſt of lands anciently in two diſtinct vills, one named Stanford, the other Haſſingbroke. That it is ſo, is the more probable, becauſe here was, beſides the pariſh church, a Free Chapel, the Advowſon of which went along with Abbots Maner, the eſtate belonging to Waltham Abbey.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, ſixteen Freemen; Lefſtan, another Freeman; and Alric, and Uluuin, were the poſſeſſors of the lands in this pariſh: At the time of the Survey, thoſe that held them, were Odo, biſhop of Bayeux; Suene of Eſſex: whoſe under-tenants were Turold, and Turold's ſon [V]. And Saſſelin held the part which had belonged to Alric and Uluuin.

The lands were divided afterwards into theſe three Maners. 1. . . . . that of Haſſingbroke. 2. . . . Cabourne's. 3. . . . Abbots-hall.

'We remember no ſuch word now uſed in 'the North in that ſenſe, and are therefore willing to believe 'that Mr. Camden, notwithſtanding his mother was related 'to one of the beſt families in Cumberland, in this caſe took 'the Saxon þ for a p. and indeed they are not eaſily to be diſ'tinguiſhed in ancient writings. The Maner of HASSINGBROKE is the chief Maner in this pariſh ; ſo named from the Brook running by.

Haſſingbroke-hall ſtands about three quarters of a mile north from this Church, and is an old ſtately edifice, built by Cuthbert Fetherſton Eſq; in the reign of K. James I.

After Turold, and his ſon, the next poſſeſſors of this eſtate upon record, were the Montchenſy family, more particularly mentioned, under their capital Maners of Haningfeilds, and Halſted; in the other Volume, p. 35. 253.——William de Montchenſy had it about the year 1255. And there was an extent of this maner of his in 1267 (z). His ſiſter Joane was married to William de Valence Earl of Penbroke. He left a ſon named——William de Montchenſy, who dyed without iſſue: and a daughter Dionyſia, wife of Hugh de Vere, ſecond ſon of Robert, the 5th Earl of Oxford, who in her right was Baron of Swainſcamp in Kent; and had a charter for Free Warren in his maners of Haſſingbroke and Phanges in 1299. Both he and his Lady dyed in 1313, without iſſue. Whereupon Adomare de Valence, ſon of the Lady Joane de Valence, her couſin and next heir, and Earl of Penbroke, juſt mentioned above, came into her eſtates. At the time of his deceaſe 23 July 1323, he held this maner of Haſſingebroke of the King in capite: with the advowſon of the Church of Stanhowe, and the advowſon of the Church of Fange, which was a member of Haſſingbroke (a). Though he had three wives, namely, Beatrix daughter of Ralph de Nele, Conſtable of France; . . . a daughter of the Earl of Bar; and, Mary daughter of Guy de Chaſtillion, Count of St. Paul; yet he dyed without iſſue 23 June 1324. [See in the other Volume, p 138. 342.] His laſt wife, who had this maner in dowry, enjoyed it many years, till 1376 (b), having continued a widow 53 years.

Iſabel, one of her huſband's ſiſters, was married to John de Haſtings, Lord Bergavenny. And Elizabeth, another ſiſter, to Gilbert Talbott. Their poſterity inherited ſucceſſively this eſtate.

John de Haſtings, Lord Abergavenny, dyed in 1324.——Laurence, his ſon, Earl of Penbroke, in 1348.——John, his ſon in 1375. And——John de Haſtings, Earl of Penbroke, in 1389, being the firſt of this family that enjoyed Haſſingbroke after the death of Margaret of St. Paul. He dying wihout iſſue in January 1389 [W], this maner of Aſſingbroke in the Hope came to Sir Richard Talbott (c); who had ſummons to Parliament from 1383 to 1393. He dyed 7 Septemb. 1396, poſſeſſed of this maner, leaving——Gilbert, his ſon and heir; that departed this life 19 October 1419, having only one daughter——Ankaret: and She dyed 11 December 1421 (d). [See in the other Volume, p. 35. 138. 226, 227. 342. 514.].

It ſeems after this to have come to Reginald de Grey, of Ruthyn, ſon of Reginald, ſon of Elizabeth, daughter of John de Haſtings and Iſabell, Siſter of Adomare de Valence above mentioned. [See in the other Volume, p. 138. 514.] [X].

And, like Wallbury in Great Hallingbury, was in Richard Rede, and Alice his widow in 1434. And, in 1436, in——John Rede; then in——Robert, ſon of Philip, brother of the ſaid Richard, father of John (e).

Next, in 1457, William Wetenhale, citizen and Alderman of London, held the maners of Haſſingbroke and Fanges, with the Advowſon of the Churches, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of one ſilver Needle of the price of 2 d. ob.——William, was his ſon and heir. They held alſo Wallbury (f).

Roger de Roſs, the King's Taylor, held Wallbury in the reign of K. Henry III. by the like ſervice. [See in the other Volume, p. 514.]

In 1488, William Wetenhale had a licenſe to alienate this maner and that of Fange, to James Crowner and others. But this ſeems not to have taken effect, becauſe in 1520 leave was granted to William Wetenhale and Reginald Peckham Eſq; to alienate them to Sir George Nevill. Whether this was for a ſettlement or otherwiſe, does not appear, but after this the eſtate was in Wetenhale; for George Whetenhale Eſq; had licence, 30 March 1554, to alienate the premiſſes to Richard Champion and Margaret his wife, for which a Fine was levied (g). This Richard was ſon of Richard Champion of Godalming in Surrey; citizen and draper, and Sheriff of London in 1530, again in 1558, and Lord Mayor in 1565; knighted in 1565, and dyed 30 October 1568 (h).—He is buried at St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt, with an Epitaph; by which it appears that he left no child.——Richard his nephew ſucceeded him, and dyed 27 January 1599: He ſeems to have had a ſon——Richard, becauſe one of that name was Patron of the Living in 1618; and a mutilated Epitaph mentions ſuch a man [Y].

It was next in the Fetherſton Family, deſcended from Cuthbert Fetherſton who ſprung from the Fetherſtons of Hetherye-Cleugh in the pariſh of Stanhope in the Dioceſe of Durham: They were of great antiquity in the north of England. Cuthbert was, for 35 years, uſher and cryer of the King, in the King's court before his Majeſty wherever he was in England [Z]. He built Haſſingbroke-hall, where was his effigies as big as the life in the habit of his office, but now mutilated. Having lived above forty years in wedlock with his wife Catharine, he departed this life 10 December 1615, in the 78th year of his age, and ſhe in November 1622, aged 85, and were buried in the Church of St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt, London; leaving three ſons; Ralph, who dyed in 1631, without iſſue; Henry; Edward: and one daughter, Mary, wife of Francis Hutton.——Henry Fetherſton Eſq; the ſecond ſon and heir, had no iſſue by his firſt wife, Mary, daughter of Mr. Gaynes Newman: but by his ſecond, Catharine, daughter of Michael Heneage of London Eſq; he had, Grace, married to William Barker, Eſq; and ——Heneage, his ſon and heir, born in 1628; who during the civil wars adhered to the Royal cauſe, and was created a Baronet 4 Decemb. 1660, being ſtyled of Blakeſware in Hertfordſhire; which maner he purchaſed, and ſold again to Sir Thomas Leventhorp (i). He was Sheriff of this County in 1666, and by his wife, Mary, eldeſt daughter of Sir John Bennet of Babraham in Cambridgeſhire, had three ſons [A], and ſix daughters. Having lived together in Wedlock about 60 years, ſhe dyed 12 June 1710, aged 77 years, and he 23 Octob. 1711, 84 years old; and were buried in this Church. —— Sir Henry Fetherſton, his ſecond but eldeſt ſurviving ſon, ſucceeded. He married Anna-Maria, ſole daughter of James Williamſon of London, Merchant, but ſhe dyed 6 March 1689, leaving no child. Sir Henry continued a widower till his deceaſe, 17 October 1746, in the 92d year of his age: And having no iſſue, he bequeathed his large poſſeſſions, which were ſaid to amount to 400,000l. to Matthew Fetherſton-haugh, of Fetherſton Haugh in Northumberland Eſq; a deſcendent from the ſame Family: One of whom, Sir Timothy, loſt his life in the ſervice of K. Charles II. Sir Matthew was created a Baronet 3 January 1746-7, and is the preſent poſſeſſor [B].

The Maner of CALBOURNE, or Canvers, belongs to the ſame Family. This ſeems to be what John de Newenton, in 1342, held in Staneford near Horndon, being 1 meſſuage, and 100 acres of arable, of Hugh Fitz-Symon, in free ſocage, by the ſervice of 4 marks yearly: And of the Counteſs of St. Paul 80 acres of arable &c. (k).

In 1465, Richard Walſh, and Richard Pigge, Gent. releaſed to William Henifey, of London, grocer, all their right in this maner of Cabournes with appertenances. And in 1607, this maner of Canvers, alias Camborne, belonged to Reginald Hallingworth, Eſq; (l).

was ſo called becauſe it belonged to Waltham-Abbey. Abbot's-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands about a mile north-eaſt from the Church.

This Maner is what Alric, and Uluuin, and afterwards Saſſelin, held by the name of Stantmere, and Winthelle [C].

William de Septem Molis, or Semeles, gave it to Waltham Abbey, with the Advowſon of a Chapel here, but the grant in the Chartulary of Waltham hath no date. And Jonn Ayleward gave the paſture of his Marſh of the fee of William de Septem Molis, which paid him 6*d. per ann.* and this 6*d. per ann.* was by Septem Molis given to the Abbey; but Roger de Beauchamp, lord of the fee, oppoſed the gift, till the Abbot agreed to pay a relief to Roger and his heirs. And in compenſation of the detriment which the ſaid Roger might receive by loſs of wardſhip, the Abbot and Convent gave him 40 marks of ſilver, for the increaſe of his eſtate, and the bettering of his condition.

At the ſuppreſſion, this eſtate was farmed by Robert Pake at 20l. a year. The rents of aſſiſe were 5l. 6s. 3d. ob. Perquiſites of Court 40s. 3d.

In 1543, K. Henry VIII. granted this, by the name of the maner of Stanford Hoope, to Waltar Farr, alias Gillingham, and his heirs.

K. Edward VI. made a grant of the ſame to Robert Curſon, and his heirs (m). But Walter Farr remained in poſſeſſion, till his deceaſe 30 April 1590. He had ſecured this maner, by licenſe dated 1 January 1574, to——Richard Farre; who dyed poſſeſſed of it 3 July 1595, leaving——Henry, his ſon and heir, 16 years old (n). And he had it alſo at the time of his deceaſe 15 December 1608, leaving——Henry his ſon (o). [Concerning this family of Farre' ſee above, p. 197, and in the other Volume, p' 50.]

This eſtate was afterwards in Thomas Aleyn, D. D. Rector of this pariſh, who dyed 3 January 1677. He left it to his ſon——John Aleyn, Eſq; whoſe daughter and heir brought it in marriage to William Aſhby, of Breakſpear in Harefeild in Middleſex, Eſq; William Aſhby Eſq; had it in 1736. After that it came to the Rev.

Thomas Aleyn, Vicar of Cookham in Berkſhire. [See above, p. 85.] [D].

In this Maner was a Free Chapel, dedicated to St. Nicolas, endowed with Fourteen acres of glebe, and with the tythes of Abbots-hall, and of Cory, or Curr, marſh. Here I believe once ſtood the Church of Stanford diſtinct from that of Haſſingbroke, which the Monaſtery of Waltham, in whoſe patronage this Chapel was, for their own convenience named a Free Chapel, though we find it endowed with glebe and tythe as a Pariſh Church. However, in 1548, Novemb. 12, the meſſuage and tenement called St. Nicolas Free Chapel, with all the premiſſes, were granted to Thomas Golding and Walter Cely (p) [E].

The original grant is now in the Chapel of the Rolls, which determined a law-ſuit, begun in 1712, between the leſſee of St. Nicolas Chapel, who claimed tythes from other farms in this pariſh than thoſe ſpecified in the Grant, and the Rector of Stanford, when the latter recovered the right upon producing this Authority.

This free Chapel, with appertenances, lately belonged to John May; who, jointly with his wife, paſſed them by Fine, in Trinity-term 1744, to William Bland of Wenington.

Mr. Alexander Maſter; and Mr. Joſeph Wotton, have alſo ſome lands here.

In 1413, William Sautre held divers lands and tenements in this pariſh, of John Earl of Hereford.

And, in 1476, Sir Thomas Tyrell held here, 1 meſſuage called Bottons, and 100 acres of land called Sherman, of Richard Boteler, in right of Elizabeth his wife, as of their maner of Caprons, by fealty, and 12 d. rent (q).

A Field in this Pariſh, called Horndon-Field, as lying next to Horndon on the Hill, has been judged in that pariſh, and tythable to the Church of St. Paul; but, upon a diſpute, given up to Stanford.

Charities.

To the Poor of this pariſh, a tenement and orchard in Fobbing, lett at 3 l. per ann.

From Earls-Hope-Marſh in the maner of Cabourns, 20 s. per ann. to the Church, and 20 s. to the Poor.

Well-Houſe and half an acre of land lett to the Officers for their penſioners at 40 s.

Ten ſhillings a year to the Poor out of Old-Jenkins, and 10 s. out of New-Jenkins, both in Mucking. Theſe ſums go to thoſe who are induſtrious and not penſioners.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground, being a Green where ſeveral ways meet.

It conſiſts of a body and two aiſles; the body, north aiſle, and Chancel, are tiled; the ſouth aiſle leaded. On the north ſide of the Church ſtands the Tower, in which are 5 Bells. This ſituation of the Tower is not common; the like is at Weſt Thurrock.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Haſſingbroke.

In Stanford le Hope was formerly a Chapel called St. Mary's Chapel; whether adjoyning to the Church or not, we cannot find. However it was for a Chantry: and granted, as well as St. Nicolas's Chapel, to Thomas Golding.

In the windows of this Church were ſeveral Coats of Arms, in the laſt century [F].

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 978 l.

21. CORRINGHAM.

This pariſh lies eaſt of the laſt, abutting ſouthward on the Thames.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Currincham, and Curringham. Ing, ſignifying a meadow, or paſture ground; and ham a habitation, are well-known Saxon words. From whence Corr, or Curr, the firſt ſyllable is derived, I am not able to determine. Sigar, a freeman, was owner of this pariſh in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey, it belonged to the Biſhop of London, and his under-tenant William. Odo, the Biſhop of Bayeux, had taken away from it half a Hide [G]; which probably he joined to his maner of Haſſingbroke in Stanford.

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into three Maners, namely, 1. The maner of Corringham, and Dungefyll. 3. . . . that of Oldhall. 3. . . . Coggars.

The Maner of CORRINGHAM.

Corringham-Hall ſtands near the Church, and hath a pleaſant proſpect over the Thames into Kent. The Family of Baud are the firſt poſſeſſors we find here under the Biſhop of London. Verſtegan obſerves, that though the name of Baud be now of ill ſignification, and given to the promoters of diſhoneſt matches (r), or rather of lewdneſs, yet it had not originally that meaning; and was the ſurname of a noble Family, of Bade, or Baden, in Germany, from whence probably theſe were derived: We find them at Corringham as high as K. John's reign. And I am apt to believe the William, mentioned in Domeſday-book was one of the Bauds, becauſe we find likewiſe in the ſame Record, one William holding under the Biſhop at Hadham in Hertfordſhire: Now Baud held both theſe maners under the Biſhop of London; nor have we any poſſeſſor to be found by name at Hadham-Hall, till Baud in the time of K. Henry III.

The firſt of the ſurname of Baud we find mentioned, was Simon de Baud, a valiant Knight, who took on him the croſs and dyed in the Holy land in 1174.

The next was—— Nicolas de Baud a famous Knight, who fought againſt the Saracens in Spain, and dyed in Gallicia in 1189 (s).——Sir Walter de Baud his ſucceſſor if not his ſon, dwelt at Corringham, and dyed there, about the year 1216.——Sir William, his ſon and heir, dyed here in 1270.

To—— Sir Walter his ſon, K. Henry III. granted free-warren in his lands in Hadham; which his father had purchaſed. He was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1307, and departing this life in 1310, was buried here with an Epitaph in French, now imperfect. His ſon,——Sir William de Baud, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1328, and in half of the year 1334. He dyed here in 1343.——Sir John de Baud attended K. Edward III. in his expedition to Gaſcogne in 1346, and dyed there [H].——Sir William de Baude was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1372, Knight of the Shire for the county of Hertford in 1373, and departed this life in 1375, at his maner houſe in Hadham, being the firſt of the Family who fixed his reſidence there.—— Walter, or Thomas Baude Eſq; dyed 13 January 1420. His ſon——Thomas Baude Eſq; of Corringham, was Sheriff of the two Counties in 1446, 1447. and dyed at Hadham in 1449 [I]. At the time of his deceaſe he held this maner of Coringham of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and the maner of Dungefyll, of others. He was ſucceeded by his ſon——Ralph Baud, Eſq; (t) who ſerved the office of Sheriff for the two Counties in 1470; and, at the time of his deceaſe in 1483, held, jointly with his wife Margaret, the maner of Coringham of the Biſhop of London as of his maner of Stortford; and the maner of Bawds, alias Downſells, in South-Weald——Thomas, his ſon and heir, was then 13 years old (u). He was afterwards knighted, and preſented to this living in 1502, and 1506 (w). The time of his death doth not appear.——John Baude Eſq; dyed at Corringham in 1550. And another of the ſame name preſented to this living in 1558, 1563, and 1599; being, as far as we can find, the laſt of this Family here [K].

[H] This Sir John de Baud obtained a grant of a Fair and a Market, and free Warren, in his Maner of Corringham.

[I] In the Church of Little Hadham are Grave-ſtones, three of them defaced, one of which is ſuppoſed to have been for Sir William who dyed in 1375; becauſe two Epitaphs that are legible are ſaid to be for his ſons Walter, and Thomas. Walter ſucceeded Sir William, and dyed 4 Febru. 1420. Thomas, I preſume the ſon of Thomas ſecond ſon of Sir William, ſucceeded upon Walter's dying without iſſue; becauſe in the infeoffment of lands and woods called Plantings, in the pariſh of Stortford, ſettled by this laſt Thomas, for a Prieſt to ſing in the Chapel of Hadham-Hall, theſe only are named to have their Souls prayed for, Sir William Baud, and Alice his wife, and Thomas Baud the elder, and Mary his wife; which Mary's name is mentioned in the ſame Epitaph with Thomas. She dyed 15 Auguſt 1422, and her huſband Thomas 3 March 1430. We have not one word of Walter, who therefore, as is preſumed, was uncle and not father.

[K] Arms of Baud. Originally, Gules, 3 eagles claws or. Afterwards, gules, 3 cheveronels, argent. Creſt. A Blackmoor's head couped at the ſhoulders, proper, with a pair of dragons.

In 1375, Sir William le Baud granted to the Dean and Canons of St. Paul's in London, a fat Doe, and a fat Buck, yearly, as a conſideration for 12, or 22, acres of their Lordſhip of Weſtlee, adjoyning to his Park, which they gave him leave to incloſe within the ſame. The Buck and Doe were offered at the high Altar of St. Paul's Cathedral, with very particular ceremonies (x) [L].

Though perſons of the name of Baude continued patrons of this Rectory till 1599, yet the Maner ſeems in the mean time to have been in other hands. For George Blaverhaſſet Eſq; was poſſeſſed of it in 1540 (y).

John Birde in 1555. John Brewode Eſq; in 1559 (z).

Sir Henry Anderſon, who dyed 13 April 1605, held this maner of Curringham, alias Corringham, and 500 acres of land thereto belonging; and the Advowſon of the Church.——Richard Anderſon Eſq; was his ſon and heir (a).

Sir Edward Spencer Kt. had it in 1637, and preſented to the Church in 1644.

It came ſoon after into the Family of Bidolph, or Biddulph, of Ledbury in Herefordſhire; who have preſented to the Rectory ever ſince the year 1669; namely, Robert; Antony; Robert.

The Maner of Old-Hall.

The manſion houſe, which ſtands about a quarter of a mile from the Church, was new-built ſome years ago. Richard Welles, in right of Agnes his wife, enjoyed it in 1476. . . . . . Thomas Fiſher was owner of it in 1508. And

All that we find further concerning this eſtate, is, That, in 1553, a Fine paſſed between Thomas Docra, plaintiff, and William Scot, deforc'. of the maner of Old-hall, and lands in Curringham, Fobbing, Eaſt-Tilbury, Stanford le Hope, and Chadwell. In 1554, Thomas Docwray, and Mildred his wife, paſſed the ſame by Fine, to Thomas Crawley (b): who held a Court here 15 October 1573.——Francis Crawley; Gent. had it in 1607.

William Moxon Gent. Secretary to Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York, was owner of it afterwards.

The Maner of Coggars.

The Houſe ſtands by the ſide of the road leading from Corringham to Stanford le Hope.

Sir Thomas Tyrell, who dyed in 1476, held this maner, of Richard Welles above-mentioned, as of his maner of Old-hall, by fealty, and yearly rent of 4 d.——Sir Robert Tyrell, at the time of his deceaſe 1 July 1508, held this maner, and Daniells land, of Thomas Fiſher, Gent. by fealty, and rent of 20 s. per ann. (c).

George Peale had it afterwards. His ſon——William married Elizabeth Pocher, by whom he had, George; William; and other children. ——George, the eldeſt ſon, by Rebecca his wife, daughter of Tobias Moore of Fobbing, had his ſon and heir——George.

Marſhes here called Swilneſſe, Hanford, Wadewick; Southland wic, and great Ilward, belonged to John Petre Eſq; in 1622.

A tenement and marſh, here alſo called Oſe, alias Warwick, was alienated by William Badley to William Cooke, and others, by licenſe dated 20 May 1567. It belonged in 1622 to John Petre Eſq; (d).

Forty acres of marſh called Borrifatts, alias Baddifatts, and the Royalty of fiſhing and fowling of half Ruggard Creek in this pariſh, were ſold 29 April 1687, by Thomas Foſter to Eraſmus Norwich of London, merchant.

There is an Almſhouſe here for two dwellers, endowed with about two acres of land.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands on a Green, and conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle. The Chancel hath a north Chapel, for a Chantry. The north aiſle of the Church is leaded, all the reſt tiled. In the Tower, which is a large low building with a Spire ſhingled, are 3 Bells.

The Patronage of this Rectory was many years in the Family of Baud. From 1391, to 1408 Sir Thomas Morwell, and his widow Alice, preſented; by what right doth not appear. Except a few turns, it hath been ever ſince in the lords of Corringham-hall.

[L] The Doe was offered, January the 25th the day of the Converſion of St. Paul; and the Buck June the 29, the day of the Commemoration of St. Paul; in the following form. The Buck, and Doe, were brought on theſe ſeveral days, by one or more of the fitting ſervants of the Family, and not the whole Family, at the hour of proceſſion, and through the midſt thereof, and offered at the high Altar; after which the perſons that brought the Buck received of the Dean and Chapter, by the hands of their Chamberlain, 12 d. ſterling, for their entertainment, but nothing when they brought the Doe. The Buck being brought to the ſteps of the high Altar, the Dean and Chapter apparelled in copes and proper veſtments, with garlands of roſes on their heads, ſent the body of the Buck to be baked, and had the Head and Horns fixed on a pole, born before the Croſs in their proceſſion round about the Church, till they iſſued out at the weſt Door; where the Keeper that brought it blowed the death of the Buck; and then the Horners that were about the City, anſwered him in like manner: For which they had each of the Dean and Chapter 4 pence in money, and their dinner: And the Keeper, during his ſtay, meat, drink and lodging, and 5 s. in money at his going away, together with a loaf of bread having on it the picture of St. Paul. This ceremony continued till Qu. Elizabeth's days. See Dugdale's Hiſt. of St. Paul's, p. 17, &c. Camden's Britannia, in Middleſex. Stow's Survey, edit. 1720. Vol. I. book. 3. p. 164, 165.

A Chantry was founded in this Church by William le Baud, about the year 1328, the endowment of which was, 1 meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, and 30 s. rent in Coringham, Fobbing, Stanſted [or Stanford] Eſtlee, and Weſtlee; holden of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of bringing at the high Altar of the Church of St. Paul's London, one buck, and one doe yearly (e).

lies north-eaſt of Corringham; having the Thames on the ſouth, into which opens a Creek called Fobbing-Creek, the mouth of which is called Hole-haven, near Shell-haven, and Ridham-gap.

The name is otherwiſe written Phobinge; but, except the well known termination ing, I cannot account for the name.

Brictmar, a Thegn of Edward the Confeſſor, was, in his time, poſſeſſed of this Maner; After the Conqueſt it was one of the many lordſhips given to Euſtace Earl of Bologne. Turold had taken from it 30 acres, and added them to Odo's fee. And Ingelric had made a conſiderable addition to this maner [N].

The Maners in this Pariſh are two. 1. The maner of Fobbing. 2. . . . that of Hawkeſbury.

The Maner of FOBBING.

Fobbing-hall ſtands near the Church.

The oldeſt account that we have after Domeſday-book, is that Thomas Camvill held of the Honor of Bologne two Fees in Fobbing, and Senefeld, out of which he was to pay 20 l. to the Monks of St. Winer; and afterwards, by the King's command, to Euſtace the Monk [O].

In 1204, a Fine paſſed between Richard the Monk, petent, and William de Clovile, tenent, for 100 acres of marſh, with appertenances, in Fobbing.

The Camvill family ſeems to have made over their right to K. Edward I. For, in 1279, a Fine paſſed between that King, and Alianor his Queen, plaintiffs, and Robert de Camvill deforc', of the Maners of Fobing and Shynefeild in Eſſex; the right of the King and Queen. Hugh Fitz Otto held the laſt Maner for term of years (f).

Afterwards, it was in the noble Family of Bohun, Earls of Hereford and Eſſex. [See above, p. 193.]

Humfrey de Bohun, who dyed in 1298, held the maner of Fobbing of the King in capite, of the Honor of Mandeville, by knight's ſervice (g). So did——Humfrey de Bohun, the 7th Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, at the time of his deceaſe in 1372 (h).——Joane, his widow, enjoyed it after him.

Elianor, their eldeſt daughter and coheir, wife of Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter, inherited this Maner among other great eſtates. Their eldeſt daughter,

Anne, at length ſole heir to a main part of the Bohun eſtate, had this, upon partition with K. Henry V. it being then valued at 43 l. 14 s. 5 d. ob. By her marriage with Thomas, and Edmund, ſucceſſively Earls of Stafford, ſhe brought the maner of Fobbing into that family (i).——Humfrey, ſon of the latter, created Duke of Buckingham 14 Septemb. 1444, was ſlain at the battle of Northampton 27 July 1460, fighting on the part of K. Henry VI. Anne his widow, daughter of Ralph Nevill of Weſtmoreland, had this maner, among others, for her dowry: She was remarried to Sir Walter Blount, Lord

She was remarried to Jaſper Tudor, ſurnamed of Hatfeild, half-brother to K. Henry VI. Earl of Penbroke, and Duke of Bedford. After the acceſſion of K. K. Henry VIII. 24 April 1522, granted this maner and the Advowſon of the Church, to Sir Thomas Bullen, and his heirs male (l). He was created afterwards Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond. His ſon——George being beheaded 17 May, 1537, this eſtate was given to the Lady

Mary, afterwards Queen, who had it in 1549; and Qu. Elizabeth after her (m).

George Tyrell was poſſeſſed of this maner in 1559, and 1565 (n).

In the reign of K. Charles I. the Maner, and Demeſne Lands were ſeparated.

After that, Sir George Whitmore, Kt. Alderman of London, purchaſed the Maner. He ſold it, about 1682, to

Sir Thomas Davall ſenior, who dying in 1712, left it to his ſon——Thomas Davall Eſq; knighted 19 June 1713: but he departed this life in April 1714. He married Lydia-Catharine Van-Hattem, by whom he had two ſons that dyed in their infancy. She was remarried to Henry, Duke of Chandos, and dyed 18 November 1750. By virtue of a marriage-ſettlement ſhe had her whole jointure of 800 l. a year allowed her for ever: Part of which was this Maner of Fobbing, and eſtates at Greys-Thurrock, Vange, and Buers-Gifford. As far as we can learn, this belongs to

Sir John Van-Hattem. [See above, p. 95, 96.]

The Court is kept at the Hall, but upon courteſy.

As for the Demeſne Lands of this Maner, they belonged in the laſt century to John Wood; then to . . . Lawſon; and next to John Goſſe. The latter ſold them to Henry Saunders, who farmed the Hall. He married Sarah, daughter of John Tomlins of Upminſter, Gent. and had by her, John, and Samuel, that dyed without iſſue: and 3 daughters, Sarah, wife of Peter Willoughby, of South Okendon; Mary, wife of Beretinus Chadwick; Judith, of Nathanael Biſby, of London. Mr. Willoughby bought the ſhares of the others.

This eſtate was purchaſed afterwards by Mr. Robert Johnſon, of Low-Leyton. He dyed in 1749.

The Maner of HAWKESBURY

Did belong to the Abbey of Berking: and, at the ſuppreſſion, the farm of it was 10 l. 14 s. 2 d. and the rent of aſſiſe 22 s. 9 d. ob.

K. Henry VIII. 9 June 1544, granted it to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and their ſucceſſors for ever in pure alms (o). They have enjoyed it ever ſince.

Some Trees here have been a Sea-mark, called Hawkſbury-buſh.

Mr. John Green; George Unwin; John Boſworth; William Stratford, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground, from whence is a large proſpect over the marſhes to the River. There is a ſouth aiſle belonging both to Church and Chancel; all tiled. And a ſquare Tower of ſtone embattled with 5 Bells.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Fobbing-hall; and continued in it till the attainder of Edward Duke of Buckingham, when it came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Bullen; but, upon his deceaſe, it reverted to the Crown, in which it hath remained ever ſince.

23. FANGE, or VANGE, ſtands north of Fobbing; and up to it runs a Creek out of the Thames.

The name ſeems to be derived from the Saxon Fang, a taking; but what ſhould give occaſion to it, we cannot even gueſs. Unleſs the Creek there ſhould have been a receptacle for the captures and booty taken upon the inhabitants of theſe parts by the pirating Saxons or Danes.

It is written in records theſe other various ways, Fang, Fange at Noke, Fanges, Fangy, Fenge, Fung, Fhanges, Phenge, Vunge, Wyinge.

The lands of this Pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to three Freemen: At the time of the Survey, they were divided into two parcels, or maners; Odo, biſhop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Turold's ſon, held what had belonged to two of the Freemen: and Ralph Peverell, with his under-tenant Serlo, held the Maner that had belonged to the third Freeman [P].

They were very early united into ONE MANER.

Vange-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands about half a mile north from the Church; and is pleaſantly ſituated on a Hill.

This Eſtate for many years went along with Haſſingbroke in the neighbouring Pariſh of Stanford-le Hope: and from about the year 1280 to 1577, was in the Families of Montchenſy, Vere, de Valence Earl of Penbroke, Haſtings alſo Earl of Penbroke, Rede, and Wetenhale (p). To avoid repetition, we ſhall beg leave to refer the Reader to Stanford-le Hope, p. 239.

What Adomar de Valence, Earl of Penbroke, held here in 1323, was 1 meſſuage, 70 acres of arable, 4 acres of meadow, . . . paſture, or marſh, and 33 s. 2 d. rent of free and cnſtomary tenants (q).

Thomas Wetenhale, ſon of George, had licenſe in 1577 to alienate this maner to

Thomas Newman, of Quendon, Gent. who dyed poſſeſſed of it 19 Febru. 1585, leaving ——Anne, his only daughter and heir (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 581.]

In the mean time, we find, in 1565 and 1572, William Tanfield Eſq; mentioned as lord of the Maner of Fange at Noke, and Fange-hall (s).

John Baker Eſq; who dyed 13 April 1606, held the maner of Vange-hall, alias Vange at Noke, in the pariſhes or fields of Vange, Fobbing, Baſildon, and Pitſey, of the King, as of his maner of Berking, in free ſocage, by fealty only.——Sir Richard Baker was his ſon and heir (t). This latter is recorded to have been poſſeſſed of the maner of Vange at Noke in 1625. At the ſame time

Charles Tooker, who dyed 26 Auguſt that year, is ſaid to have then held the maner of Fange, alias Vangehall, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of this Church, of the King in capite. And he held of Sir Richard, as of his ſaid maner of Vange at Noke, Merrick Barnfeild, Butt-mead, Apes-croft, Staves acre, or Kenes croft, Foxborough, Little London, Goſpel Buſh feild, Morris acre, Drivers, Salt marſh, and 40 acres more, in this pariſh, Eaſt and Weſt Tilbury, and Hadley.——Robert Tooker was his ſon and heir (u). He preſented to this Living in 1639, and Chriſtiana Tooker in 1668, and 1669.

Hereby it appears that the Maners here were then ſevered.

Paul Viſcount Banning had the maner of Vange at Noke in and compounded with the Crown for the diſafforeſting of it, together with a tenement called Paprills thereto belonging, and the lands &c. containg 280 acres, rented at 100 l. a year.

This eſtate is now parcelled out. Two thirds of the maner and advowſon came from the Tookers to——Godfrey Thacher Eſq; He ſold the ſame to——James Marrener, who by will gave it to his wife Ann for life, and then to his two daughters, Anne married to John Wingfield; and Rebecca to Charles Smith Eſq; of Croydon, in Surrey: He purchaſed Anne's part.

The other one third is, or lately was, in William Aylett, of Stifford.

Felton Neville Eſq; and Mr. Richard Barnard, have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, ſtands on a riſing ground, and is one of pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a wooden Frame, with a ſhingled ſpire, there is one Bell.

This Rectory was always appendent to the Maner. Only, after Wetenhale it was for one turn in John Oſborne in 1557; and in William Wiſeman in 1581, and 1609; by what right doth not appear.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 392 l.

LANGDON.

North of Fange, and of Corringham and Horndon on the Hill, are two contiguous Pariſhes named Langdon. The name Lanᵹ ðun, ſignifies Long-hill, the chief part of theſe two Pariſhes ſtanding high; nay ſome have fancied that this is the higheſt ſpot of ground in this County. But the ingenious Mr. John Lee of Danbury, having ſurveyed it, found that it is not ſo high as Danbury by a pretty many feet. The reaſon of Langdon Hill's being thought ſo high, is partly owing to a deception not well obſerved by every body; for on the north ſide leading to it the aſcent is eaſy, and not much perceived, but to the ſouth, ſouth-eaſt, and ſouth-weſt, it opens with ſuch a deſcent into ſo fine and large a Vale that extends quite up to London, being twenty miles or more; affording a noble Proſpect of that great City, with the River Thames, and all its ſhipping and craft of every ſort, and Tilbury Fort; as alſo all the coaſt of Kent to the Medway, if not further, and is from eaſt to weſt near 40 miles, perhaps more: So that Eſſex, all things conſidered, may juſtly boaſt here of the grandeſt Proſpect in England.

The common name of theſe two Pariſhes is otherwiſe written in records, Laingdon, Laindon, Laundon, Langenduna, Legniduna, Leienduna.

24. LANGDON-HILLS

is the moſt ſouthern of the two. By way of diſtinction from the other, the word Hill's is addeded, ignorantly, by thoſe who knew not that don ſignifies the ſame. But it is by a like redundancy as Merſea-iſland. The moſt ſignificant diſtinction is that of Langdon with the Church of Weſtley.

Alric, a Thegn of K. Edward the Confeſſor, had this Langdon before the Conqueſt: Suene of Eſſex, and his under-tenant Walter were poſſeſſed of it at the time of the Survey [Q].

Suene's grandſon, Henry de Eſſex, loſt all his poſſeſſions through his cowardiſe, as is related above, p. 156. and more particularly under Raley:

We find this pariſh afterwards divided into the Maners, 1. . . . of Langdon. 2. . . . of Gouldſmiths.

The Maner of LANGDON.

The manſion ſtands near the Church, on the ſide of the hill.

After Suene's grandſon, the next poſſeſſors of this eſtate were a Family ſurnamed de Langedon. For, in K. Henry the Second's reign, John de Langedon held one fee in Langedon, of the Honor of Reyleye (w).

But the knightly Family of Sutton ſeems to have been lords paramount. For Robert de Sutton gave in frank marriage with Margaret his daughter, among other things, the ſuit of all his Lands at Langedon, with the Advowſon of that Church, to William, ſon of Hugh Bigod, firſt of that Chriſtian name, Earl of Norfolk; which grant was confirmed by K. John in 1209 (x).

John Ewell, the King's Eſcheator, ſeized into the King's hands, the maner of Langedon, by reaſon of the death of John de Langedon without iſſue, about the year 1382 (y). Which ſhews how long perſons of that ſurname continued, and when they ceaſed, here.

Since this Pariſh has been united with Weſt-Lee, what was held here from the Church of St. Paul is reckoned into that maner.

The Maner of GOLDSMITHS.

The manſion houſe of this ſtands higher than the former Maners, and on the other ſide of the Church towards the ſouth.

It was ſo named, I preſume, from ſome owner, and ſeems to have gone for ſeveral years with that of Malgraves in Horndon, to which it is contiguous.

John Malgreff, in 1320, held 50 acres of arable in the vill of Langedon of the Prioreſs of Hegham, by the ſervice of 11s. a year.——Richard Malgrave, at the time of his deceaſe in 1445, held the maners called Langedon and Orſet of the King in capite by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee;——Thomas his ſon and heir, at the time of his deceaſe in 1459, is ſaid to hold Malgraves maner lying in the vills of Hordon, Langedon, and Orſet (z).

Semper ii carucate in dominio, & iii carucate hominum, & v villani. Tunc IV ſervi, modo IV & I hida ſilve. Paſtura c ovibus. Tunc v animalia, & x porci, LX oves. modo x porci, XL oves. Tunc valuit c ſolidos, modo VI libras. Lib. Domeſd. fol. 42. a. Tit. 24.

Afterwards we find this eſtate in Tyrell, as Malgrave's was. Sir John Tyrell held the maner of Gouldſmiths with appertenances in Langdon; and 2 tenements called Stone-place, and Leyſings; and a meſſuage named Malgraves, and Stony-hill; in Langdon, Horndon, and Fobbing, of the Biſhop of London, and of the King. He dyed 28 February 1540, leaving ——John Tyrell Eſq; his ſon and heir 26 years old (a).

Edward Archer Eſq; had alſo this eſtate, as well as Malgrave's.—Then——Thomas Andrews Eſq; whoſe daughter

Anne was married to Thomas Cotton Eſq; and their only daughter and heir, Frances, brought it in marriage to

Dingley Aſkham Eſq; [See above, p. 218.]

WEST LEE a pariſh about a mile from Langdon towards Vange, was united to Langdon in 1432. The poverty of both Places was alledged as a reaſon for the Union, and the people of Weſt Lee have ever ſince reſorted to Langdon Church, their own being down (b). Where it ſtood, is at preſent quite unknown.

Weſt-Ley, ſignifies the weſt paſture, which it was in reſpect of another called Eaſt-Ley in the other Langdon.

This Weſt Ley belonged, at the time of the Survey, to the Canons of St. Paul's Church in London, and hath continued in them ever ſince. It was held in Edward the Confeſſor's reign by Edeva [R].

Weſt-ley-hall is ſituated on the ſide of a Hill, about three quarters of a mile from this Church.

K. Edward II. in 1313, granted to this maner the following immunity, That no purveyor of the King's ſhould take any corn within its precincts (c).

Fletchers, and Nightingales, two farms in this pariſh belong to John Henniker Eſq;

Here are alſo two Farms ſettled by Thomas White D. D. as an endowment for the Profeſſorſhip of Moral Philoſophy at Oxford, founded by him in 1621; being 100 l. a year. He gave beſides, out of theſe farms, to 5 Scholars, or Exhibitioners, of Magdalen-Hall in Oxford 8 l. a year a-piece: and 4 l. per ann. to the Principal of that Hall (d). This munificent perſon was the founder of Sion-College in London.

Mr. Harry Blunt hath alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All Saints, ſtands on the weſtern ſide of the hill; and is of one pace with the Chancel, except that the Chancel hath a north Chapel; they are both tiled. A wooden Belfrey, with a ſpire ſhingled, contains 2 Bells.

The Patronage of the Rectory of Langdon-Hills was in Bileigh-Abbey till 1432. Then, upon the union of this Church with that of Weſtley, the Abbey reſerved to themſelves two turns, and the third was allowed to the Church of St. Paul's. But, ever ſince the diſſolution, the whole right of patronage hath been in the Dean and Chapter of the ſaid Church.

25. LANGDON with BASILDON is north of the other. By way of diſtinction from it 'tis called Langdon-Clay, ſuch being the nature of the ſoil.

In this Pariſh are two Maners. 1. The maner of Langdon. 2. . . . that of Gobions.

The Maner of LANGDON

belonged, before the Conqueſt to a certain woman named Alfered; and, at the time of the Survey, to the Biſhop of London [S], and hath ever ſince continued in his ſee.

One Ralph held a part, which Ulmar had poſſeſſed in Edward the Confeſſor's reign.

In 1290, K. Edward I. confirmed to the Biſhop of London a view of Frank Pledge in the maners of Leyndon, Orſette, and Chelmsford. The year after it was certified, that the Biſhop had incloſed his Wood in Leyndon called The Fryth, with the demeſne lands adjacent, and had made a Park, within the bounds of the Foreſt of Eſſex (e).

The maner houſe, is about a mile weſt from the Church, near Dunton.

In 1334, Thomas Gobyon jun. and Elizabeth his wife, held 20l. in land and rents in Langedon, of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice (f).——John Gobyon held, in 1396, the maner of Leyndon of the Counteſs of Stafford, as of her maner of Fobbing by knight's ſervice. And the maner of Sturmynes of the Biſhop of London as of his maner in Leyndon by the ſervice of 1 d. a year.

Charitable Gifts.

John Puckle of this pariſh, by Will dated 6 May, 1617, gave all his Copy-hold lands for maintenance of a School-maſter to teach a competent number of poor Children of Baſildon and Langdon.—This was revived by a Commiſſion for Charitable Uſes. The farm is there ſaid to be 16 l. per ann. Ten pounds to the Maſter.—40 s. to the Poor of Great-Burghſted;—13 s. for a Sermon on St. John Baptiſt's day;—the reſt to the Poor.

Sept. 11 1703, the Officers of the Pariſh, by virtue of her Majeſty's Commiſſion for Charitable Uſes, had a full hearing againſt John Dod and Thomas Gray, concerning the gift of 4 l. per ann. from Lands lying in the pariſh of Fobbing, and recovered the right by Decree of theſe Commiſſioners; Sir Ch. Tyrrell, H. Everard, Barts. J. Comyns, W. Bramſton, R. Cary, R. Rogers.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, ſtands on a riſing ground, and conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle; but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. It hath a ſteeple of timber, with a ſpire ſhingled.

This valuable Rectory hath been all along in the collation of the Biſhops of London.

The Parſonage-houſe lies in a bottom, betwixt Langdon-Church and Baſildon; and, by the form of the chimney, ſeems to be a very ancient building.

A well-endowed Chantry was founded in this Church, in 1329. That year, K. Edward III. granted licence to Thomas de Berdefeild, to give one meſſuage, ninety-five acres of arable, and 13 s. 4 d. rent in Leyndon and Eſt-Ley, to a Chaplain to celebrate maſs for his ſoul for ever, at the Altar of the Virgin Mary and St. Thomas the Martyr in the Church of Leyndon.—Theſe were held of Thomas Gobyon, Richard de Goſhalme, and Thomas de Vere (h). In the Book of Chantries the yearly value is 8 l. 11 s. 8 d. Rents reſolute to divers lords above-mentioned 14 s. 7 d. and to the Biſhop for copyholds 2 s. 4 d. which ſhews it to have been in this Langdon.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 768 l.

is a large Hamlet belonging to Langdon. When it was was firſt united to it we cannot find.

The name of it is written in records theſe various ways, Bacclesdon, Barthesdon, Bartleſdon, Bartſdon, Batlyſdon, Beleſduna, and Berleſduna.

In this Hamlet are the following three Maners. 1. The maner of Bardeſtaple, or Barſtaple-hall. 2. The maner of Beleſdun, or Botelers. 3. . . . that of Bartleſdon, or Battleſwick. To which add Eaſtlee.

BARSTAPLE-HALL

lies about half a mile from Baſildon-Church towards Fange.

There is a Tradition ſubſiſting in this place, that an old Town ſtood hereabouts, or at leaſt within this Hamlet. In a paſture field near the Church called Townfield, Foundations of Buildings have been ploughed up, whence the country-people infer that the Town ſtood there. Quantities of human Bones have alſo been dug up in the Garden belonging to the Parſonage [].

[] In 1418, K. Henry V. granted to Thomas Breſyngham a place called The Halle of Bealſtaple with appertenances in Eſſex. Rot. pat. Norm. 6 Hen. V. Whether it was any publick Building here, we are not able to determine.

That the Hundred took its name from this Barſtable-Hall, is what I have obſerved above, p. 190.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, a Freeman was poſſeſſed of this Maner; which, at the time of the Survey, belonged to Odo biſhop of Baieux, and the ſon of Turold was his under-tenant [T].

The preſent Maner-houſe of Barſtaple-Hall is a forlorn weather-beaten edifice on a riſing ground, deſerted for another houſe in a lower ſituation with good water, where the Farmer now dwells.

After thoſe mentioned in Domeſday-book, we meet with no owner's name here till K. Edward the Third's reign; and after that time, very often, the lord of this maner held alſo the Hundred under the King. Edmund of Woodſtock, Earl of Kent, ſeems to have been lord here. For, Humfrey Waldene held the maner of Berdeſtaple of Edmund Earl of Kent, who was beheaded 19 March 1330, as of his maner of Swanſcamp, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.

And under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1399, Humfrey de Walden held half a fee, and Saykina de Berdſtaple another half-fee, in Berdſtaple (i).——John Walden, at the time of his deceaſe in 1401, held jointly with his wife Elizabeth, the maner called Berdeſtaple-hall in Leyndon, partly of the Counteſs of Kent, part of the Biſhop of London, and part of John Gobyon.——Sir Alexander Walden, his ſon, dyed in 1408.——John Walden, dying in 1419, without iſſue, was ſucceeded by his two ſiſters, Catharine, wife of John Barle, jun. and Margaret wife of Henry Langley (k). [Concerning the Walden Family, ſee more in the other Volume, p. 497. 570. 582, 583.] Henry Langley held this maner, and 400 acres of land in Bertleſden, Leyndon, Eaſtlee, Newingdon, Fange, and Shenfield, of the King as of his Dutchy of York. And ſo did his wife Catharine, who dyed 18 October 1511. They left an only daughter

Catharine, wife of John Marſhall, born in 1475 (l). She held this maner of Barſtaple-hall of the King, as of his maner of Swanſcombe, by fealty and rent of 6 s. a year. She departed this life 15 February 1517, as did her huſband 19 February 1520. They had only two daughters, coheirs, namely, Elianor, wife of Henry Cutt, ſon of Sir John Cutt of Thacſted: and Mary, wife of John Cutt, ſon of Richard Cutt (m). This Mary, at the time of her deceaſe 14 July 1521, is ſaid to have held this maner of Berſtaple, and lands in Brydleſden, by the ſame tenure as above.——Peter Cutt, her ſon and heir, was then 21 years old (n).

Elianor aforeſaid dyed 20 June 1537, at which time ſhe is recorded to have alſo held the maner of Barſtaple, alias Barſtaple-hall, by the ſame tenure as above; which maner is ſaid to have extended into the Vills or pariſhes of Bertleſden, Lyendon, Eſtleigh, Newendon, Fange, Shenfeild, and Fobbinge [U]. Her ſon, Henry Cutt jun. was then 4 years. But her huſband enjoyed this eſtate till his death 14 January 1573,——Henry, their ſon and heir, was afterwards knighted, and dyed 12 December 1603, without iſſue (o).

Peter Cutt Eſq; above-mentioned dyed 22 October 1547, poſſeſſed of this maner of Barſtable, and of a marſh in Fobbinge; and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Richard, who, at the time of his deceaſe 4 April 1607, held a moiety of this eſtate——William, his brother and ſucceſſor was then 46 years old. For a more particular account of this family ſee the other Volume, p. 583. 589, 590.

It belonged lately to Coleman, of Iſtleworth Eſq; and now to Charles Brown, Gent.

Little Barſtable is mentioned as a maner in this pariſh; which William Sandell held in 1562, of the maner of Swaneſcombe: He held alſo a meſſuage and lands here called Bacons, of the maner of Barringtons: and Longlande, alias Waldens, of the maner of Fobbing (*).

The Maner of BELESDUN, or BOTELERS.

Suene of Eſſex held this maner, and the adjoyning one of Battleſwick, at the time of the Survey: Botelers had belonged in Edward the Confeſſor's reign to Leſſtan, and the other to one Goda, a freeman [W].

The manſion houſe of Botelers ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church, and is moated round.

From the Dutchy-rolls it appears, that this maner conſiſted of one capital meſſuage, or farm called Butlers in Bartleſdon, a capital meſſuage called Edgcotts in Crayes; and meſſuages called Onvants, Somers, and Reames, holden of the Honor of Mandevill by knight's ſervice.

The moſt ancient accounts we have, make both theſe eſtates to have been in the Family of De Vere. In the Fines that have been paſſed, one of theſe, or both, have been called the Maner of Langdon, which makes it impoſſible to ſhew regularly the ſeveral owners.

As to Botelers, the Feodary of the Honor of Caſtle-Hedingham ſhews, that Wido de Bertleſdon held it in the time of K. Henry III. Then Adam de Bertliſdon; and William, his ſon and heir, in 1274.

Robert Travers, and his heirs, held it under John de Vere Earl of Oxford, about the years 1350, and 1358. After Thomas de Vere, who dyed in 1370 (p), it came to the Family of Cornwallys. John Cornwall, or Cornwallys, who dyed in 1536, held of the Biſhop of London as of his Caſtle of Stortford, by knight's ſervice, one meſſuage called Bertelſden, which was formerly Robert Travers's, and now called Botelers. ——Thomas Cornwallys, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1484, held, of the Biſhop of London, as aforeſaid, by the ſervice of 18 d. per ann. this maner of Botelers in Batlyſden, with other lands and tenements thereto belonging in Leyndon, Newingdon, Rameſden, and Fobbinge. ——John, his ſon, held alſo of the Biſhop this maner of Bertleſden, and 200 acres of arable, 200 of paſture, and 40 of meadow, with appertenances, in the pariſhes above-mentioned; and tenements of Somers and Battellond, Onyfaunts, Tylers, Wyndells, &c. [X]. He departed this life 17 Septemb. 1506, and was ſucceeded by his brother and heir —— Edward Cornewallis, 40 years old (q).——Sir Thomas Cornwallis, at the time of his deceaſe 27 Decemb. 1559, held this maner of the Honor of Mandeville, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, by knight's ſervice, leaving——Sir William his ſon and heir.

Sir Charles Cornwallis ſold it to

Sir Robert Wroth, who, at the time of his deceaſe 27 January 1606, held the reverſion of the maner of Barthleſdon, alias Battleſdon, or Baſteden, with appertenances in Bartleſdon and Crayes.——Sir Robert his ſon and heir ſold it to

Henry Atkins M. D. from whom it came to Martin Bowes late of St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, Eſq; and afterwards to his three Daughters, one of which was married to Philip Broke Eſq; was anciently called Bartleſdon, though the names are often confounded.

The Maner of BATTLESWICK

The manſion houſe ſtands not far from the Church.

The owners of this alſo are traceable only from the Feodary of the Earls of Oxford. Thomas de Fering held half a fee in Langedon which Humfrey de Welde held afterwards of the Honor of Hadley and Raleigh.——Ralph de Gynges held half a fee in Bartleſdon and Langdon.

John de Vere who dyed in 1421, held the maner of Langdon of the Honor of Raleigh, by knight's ſervice. He held alſo lands and tenements called Amys, in the ſeveral pariſhes of Leyndon, Bartleſden, Dunton, Bulfann, Eaſt and Weſt Horndon, and Ramſden Cray, of the Counteſs of Stafford, as of her maner of Fobbyng.——John de Vere Earl of Oxford, ſon of Richard de Vere brother of the ſaid John, was his next heir (r). This Family being deprived of their noble eſtates by act of Parliament in 1472, for their adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter (s), K. Edward IV. gave them to his brother Richard Duke of York, afterwards K. Richard III. who, in the firſt of his reign, granted to John Howard Duke of Norfolk the maner of Langdon, that had been the Earl of Oxford's who was attainted. But K. Henry VII. having reinſtated that Family into their eſtates, —— John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, dyed poſſeſſed of the maner of Batteleſwick in 1512 (t).

Theſe two laſt Maners hold no Courts.

EAST-LEE, or LEY, ſo called in contradiſtinction to Weſt-Ley in the other pariſh, is about a mile from Langdon Church.

It was formerly called a Maner, and belonged to the Bohun family, but is now only a Farm houſe ſituated on a riſing ground.

This is a diſtinct place, and pays no tithes either to this pariſh or Langdon-hills.

We find very little account of it in records. Only, that Sir Brian Tuke, who dyed 26 October 1545, held the maners of Eaſt-Lee, and of Thorpe and Thorpe-hall in South-Church, and the Advowſons of Churches, Vicarages, Chantries, Chapels, and other eccleſiaſtical Benefices to the ſame Maners belonging, to hold of the King as of the maner of Writtle, in ſocage, by fealty and rent of 18 d. per ann.

[X] Somers and Battellond were then held of the Prior of the new Hoſpital without Biſhopſgate; Onyfaunts of the Prior of St. Johns of Jeruſalem; Tylers of the Biſhop of London; and Wyndells of the Prior of Tobye—But in 1559, Sir Thomas Cornewallis held the meſſuage called Onvaunts, of the maner of Purfleet, in ſocage, by the yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d.—The meſſuage called Somers, partly of the maner of Duddinghurſt, in ſocage, by the rent of 8 s; and part of the maner of Hutton-hall by the rent of 3 s. 9 d.——The meſſuage of Edgcotts, partly of the maner of Crayes by the rent of 8 s. 8 d. part of the maner of Blunt-walls by the rent of 4 s. and part of the maner of Whights by the rent of 6 d. And the meſſuage of Reams in Layndon and Fobbing, partly of the maner of Fobbing by the rent of 9 s. part of the maner of Little Barſtable by the rent of 3 s. and part of the maner of Great Barſtable, by the rent of 3 s. 4 d. per annum: and all the above in ſocage. Inquiſ. 22 Hen. VII. & 2 Eliza.

Qu. Elizabeth granted, in 1591, the maner of Eaſtlee, with appertenances, and advowſons there, to Henry Beſt, and John Wells.

John Lord Petre, who dyed 11 Octob. 1613, and John Petre Eſq; who dyed 2 January 1622-3, held the maner, lands, and tenements called Eaſt-Lee (u).

It belonged lately to William Petre, of New-Houſe, in Writtle Eſq;

Here was anciently a Chapel, now demoliſhed, but the ſite of it is ſtill viſible. It was either built originally for a Chantry, or one was founded there afterwards.

The return of this Chantry, in the Certificate of Chantries given in K. Edward the VIth's reign, is, That ' lands and tenements were here ' put in feoffment by divers perſons to the main- ' tenance of a Preiſt, the ſaid Preiſt to ſing maſs ' in a certain Chaple called Eaſt Lea Chaple, in ' Laindon, diſtant from the pariſh Church a ' mile and more.—The yerely Value of the ' ſame doth amount to the ſome of 4l.'

July 11 1548, K. Edward VI. granted to Clement Siſley this whole Chantry, and a meſſuage and tenement called Grumſbeys in Newendon; a meſſuage, tenement, and lands called Cuttelers in Childerdich, and other lands in the ſame pariſh; a parcel of land called Dycks in Horndon on the Hill; nine acres of land in Eſt Tilbury, [given by Sir Richard Sutton;] meſſuages and lands called Fancrofts and Turks in Bulvan and Orſett; all belonging to this chantry; and which ſhew what the Endowment of it was; to hold of the King, as of the maner of Eſt Greenwich, by fealty only, in free ſocage (w).

John Petre Eſq; above mentioned held this Chapel, and 10 acres of land, and all the Tithes belonging to this Chapel, and the Tithes of a mill (x). [Concerning him, and his deſcendents, ſee the other Volume, p. 65. 80. 460.]

Pierce Galliard Eſq; and a few others, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this place.

The Chapel of Baſildon is a Chapel of eaſe to Langdon. It ſtands on a riſing ground about two miles from the mother Church; a valley lying betwixt them, in which the Parſonage-houſe is ſituated.

This Chapel is a neat building, and in good repair, of one pace with the Chancel; all tiled. It hath a Tower embattled, with a ſhort ſpire, in which are Bells.

Baſildon is rated to the land-tax at 456l.

Here is a Fair on Holy-rood day, September 14, and one day more, to which is great reſort; and it is ſaid, that one much more conſiderable has dwindled to this.

26. NEWENDEN.

This pariſh lies in a bottom, which is the reaſon of the latter part of the name, ꝺen, ſignifying a valley: and the firſt part is derived either from the Saxon word Neƿe, New; or, according to W. Lambarde, from Nipel, low.

If the Saxons firſt ſettled in this part of the country, this might be one of the New Settlements wherewith they enlarged their quarters.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Neutenden, and Nezenden.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the lands in this pariſh were in three parcels, belonging to Aluuard Dore; Tovi, a freeman; and to Aluuin, under the name of Lohou. At the time of the Survey, Roger Mareſchall held the firſt; Haghebern the ſecond; and R. . . . . the third [Y].

There are in this pariſh two Maners. 1. The maner of Newenden, or Little Bromford. 2. . . . that of Frerne, or Fryern.

The Maner of Bromford, of which the manſion ſtands near the Church, is reckoned the chief in this pariſh, and ſo named probably, from ſome owner: for here is no Ford, from which it could derive its name. We have ſeen in the neighbouring pariſh of Downham a Fine levied in 1209, to which one Richard de Browford was a party (y), who held the Soke of Downham.

We find it firſt mentioned by the preſent name of Bromfords in 1419, when John Sumpter of Colcheſter delivered to John Tyrell, John Cornwallys, and others, a moiety of the Maner of Bromfords in Neuenden, with the Advowſon of this Church [Z]. And it ſeems at this time to have been divided in order to ſettle Part of it upon the Hoſpital of St. Mary without Biſhopſgate, in which it continued till the Diſſolution; but at what time, and by whom granted, is not known.

Sir Lodowick John who dyed in 1442, held the maner of Bromfords, with the Advowſon of the Church, of Humfrey Stafford Earl Stafford, by the ſervice of 8 s. per ann. and other lands in this pariſh.——Henry Fitz Lewys Eſq; his ſon (z), at the time of his deceaſe in 1480, held the maner of Bromfords in the pariſh of Newingdon, and the moiety of 800 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, and 12 of wood, in this pariſh and Wickford, with the Advowſon of the Church of Newingdon; and Okefeild, Short-croft, and other parcels here; and 70 acres of arable, and 60 of meadow and marſh, in Vange, called Bigewody's. —— Mary, wife of Antony Widevile Lord Rivers, was the daughter and next heir of the ſaid Henry, fifteen years old (a).

A Fine paſſed, in 1485, between Robert Cornwallys and Robert Smyth plaintiffs, and Richard Fitz-Lewes and his wife deforc', of the maner of Brumfordys, and the Advowſon of the Church of Newyngdon, and of lands in Newyndon and Wykford.

In 1522, William Fitz-Lewes, and Anne his wife, paſſed this eſtate, by Fine, to William Berdeford; being deſcribed as the maner of Little Bromfordys with appertenances, and 2 meſſuages, 2 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 140 acr. of meadow, 100 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 4l. rent, in this pariſh, Ramſden Cray, and Belhouſe, and Wykford.

And again, in 1537, by fine it paſſed from Ralph Symonds and Elizabeth his wife, to Sir John Mordant (b).

Ela, daughter, or ſiſter, of John Fitz-Lewes Eſq; and wife of Sir John Mordant, at the time of her deceaſe, 2 June 1543, held a moiety of this maner of Bromfords, and other lands and tenements with appertenances, in Neuendon, of Thomas Audeley Eſq; as of the monaſtery of Prittlewell, by fealty only —— Lewis Mordant, her ſon and heir, was 5 years old (c).

The Sheriff's accounts in 1607, ſhew that John Lord Mordant then held the maner of Bromefeld or Bromford; in Newingdon. [Concerning the Families of Fitz-Lewis, and Mordant, ſee above, p. 213. and in the other Volume, p. 349. 558.]

Richard Robotham, Gent. was lord of this maner in 1610 (d).

Thomas Blackmore of Little Brumford Gent. was buried in this Church 22 May 1679, with an Epitaph; and his daughter Elizabeth 15 December 1690. Mr. Blackmore's mother, who had for her firſt huſband. . . . Alexander of Mountney's-ing, purchaſed this eſtate.

It belongs now to Joſhua Blackmore Eſq;

The Maner of FRERNE, or FRYERNE.

This ſeems to have been taken out of Bromfords about the time of K. Henry V. as obſerved above; and given to the Hoſpital. After its diſſolution, K. Henry VIII. granted, 13 January 1546, the maner of Frerne in Newenden, part of the poſſeſſions of St. Mary's Hoſpital without Biſhop's-gate, and all the lands, meadows, paſtures &c. thereto belonging in Downham, Ramſden, Runwell, and Wikeford, to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, to be held of the King of his maner of Greenwich, in free ſocage by fealty (e). It did not continue long in them. For, 2 June 1563,

William Dunch and Henry Coddenham had licence to alienate the maner of Frerne in the Pariſh of Newenden, parcel of the late new Hoſpital of St. Maries Spital without Biſhop's-gate, to Sir William Petre: who, at the time of his deceaſe, 13 January 1571, held this eſtate by the name of the maner of Great Bromfords (f). His ſon——John Lord Petre held alſo, at the time of his deceaſe 11 October 1613, this tenement and farm of Bromfords; and lands and tenements called Fryerne, and Waſketts, of the King, in capite.——Thomas Petre Eſq; had it next (g). By the preſentations to the Living it ſeems to have been in the Families of Wakefield, and Hoare, from 1662 to 1678.

This eſtate was afterwards in Joſhua Galliard, of Thavies-inn, Gent. and is now in his ſon——Pierce Galliard, Eſq; Counſellor at law.

Mr. Thomas Milbank; and Abraham Bell, have alſo ſome lands here.

The Chantry, Chapel, or Hoſpital, of Melton, or Milton, near Graveſend in Kent, had the chief of its endowment in this pariſh. It was conſiderable, and granted by K. Henry VIII. 1 Auguſt 1524, to Sir Henry Wyatt [A]. John Dygon Maſter of that Hoſpital, dyed 6 March 1524.

Pat. 16 Hen. VIII. 1 pars. & Inquiſ. 16 Hen. VIII.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled: In a little wooden Belfrey there is one Bell.

This Rectory is ſaid to have been appendent to the Maner (b): Upon examination it appears to have been at firſt appendent to the Maner of Little Bromfords, and never to that which belonged to the Hoſpital. But, ſince the year 1574, it hath been in the gift of the lords of the Maner of Great Bromfords, or Frerne.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 324l.

27. WICKFORD

lies in a nook of this Hundred between Newenden and Downham; and is bounded on the north by part of Chelmsford-Hundred, and on the eaſt by part of Rochford's.

From a Ford here through the river Crouch, near a Wic, [a Saxon word ſignifying a caſtle, village, dairy-farm, or the winding of a river,] is the name derived.

It is otherwiſe written in records, Wiceford, Wickfort, Wikford, Wygeford, Wykeford.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Wicford comprehended no leſs than four Maners; beſides four other parcels; which were poſſeſſed by Leſſtan, freely; Bricteva, a freewoman; Godwin, a King's Thegn; Dot, a freeman; Godric, a freeman; Eduuin Grut, freely; and ſeven other Freemen, not named. At the time of the Survey, the land-holders in this place, were Suene of Eſſex; Odo biſhop of Bayeux; William, ſon of Odo; Mainard; Moduin; and Ilbodo [B].

There was afterwards a great alteration in theſe eſtates, and ſome of them muſt have been united to the neighbouring Pariſhes: For now here are only two conſiderable eſtates; namely, 1. Wickford-hall. 2. Stilemans. The latter holds courts, but the former doth not.

Wickford-Hall

ſtands near the Church.

This was part of Suene's lands, and the ſubſequent tenants accordingly held this of his Honor of Raley.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, Suene's grandſon, Wiceford remained in the Crown, till K. Richard I. granted it to Uric, or Ulric, Baliſtarius, commander of his croſs-bow-men (i). In his poſterity, called Urric, Urry, and ſometimes Orric, it remained till about the year 1307 [C].

Richard Orric, at the time of his deceaſe in 1247, held in Wickford 320 acres of arable, 35 s. rent of aſſize, the rent of Kenedon or Kewdon 46 s. one pound weight of cummin-ſeed, and the work of the men of Wickford, 15 acres of meadow, 12 of paſture, and Wickford mill. Item, A grove of two acres, paſture for 280 ſheep in Kenedone marſh: The ſaid lands, tenements, rents, marſh, and homage were held in capite of the King, by the ſervice of the third part of one knight's fee;——Iſabel and Maud were his ſiſters and heirs; and between them was this eſtate divided. Maud ſeems not to have married; for in the Inquiſition taken after her death ſhe is called Maud de Urry; and the part ſhe had of this eſtate was 160 acres of arable, paſture, and meadow, worth 15s. 4d. a year: rent of aſſiſe in Wickford and Kanedon 65s. 5d. from the work of the villans 11s. 4d. ob. a year, the moiety of a mill; holden of the King by a quarter and a half of a knight's fee.——Iſabell, her ſiſter and heir, was 40 years old. She took the ſurname de Wykeford, as did her ſon John. The part ſhe had, was 130 acres of arable, 5 acr. of paſture, three and a half of meadow, 2 and a half of wood, and half of the mill. And ſhe gave her ſon, out of her ſiſter Maud's ſhare that had deſcended to her, 150 acres of arable, 12 acr. of paſture, and 5 of wood, the half of the mill, 10 hens rent, and out of the frank-pledge 12d. yearly (k).

[C] They were ſurnamed Arbelaſter, from the French word Arbaleſte, croſs-bow; and there are ſtill ſome Families ſurnamed Arbaleſtier. Their ſurname appears in the following record. Will. filius Willmi de Bemflet petiit per relevium terr' de Wicfort &c. que capta in manu Dnī Rs pro ejus defectu verſus Urric de Arbelaſter. Placita apud Weſtm. 6 Ric. I. rot. 4. Symonds's Collect. Vol. III. fol. 505.

They ſeem to have dropped the ſurname of de Wykeford, or elſe the eſtate came into another branch of the Urry Family. For Gilbert Urry, who dyed in 1300, held two parts of this maner of the King in ca. by the ſervice of three parts of a knight's fee.——Nicolas, his ſon, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Nicolas, who at the time of his deceaſe in 1307, held here, of the King, in ca. a Hall with other houſes, 105 acres of arable, 2 acres and a half of meadow, 16 of paſture, 4 of wood, the half of a wind-mill, 9d. rent of aſſize, with view of frank-pledge.

. . . Rodland, ſon of Robert Rodland, was his couſin and heir (l). He was of Merlaw.

John Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, who dyed in 1352, had the fourth part of a fee in Wykford, called Dernhall, which William Derſham then held (m).

In whom this eſtate was after this till the reign of K. Henry VIII. we do not find.

Elizabeth, widow of Sir John Pound, that dyed 14 Auguſt 1511, held the maner of Wikford, with appertenances, of the King as of his Honor of Rayleigh late parcel of the Dutchy of York, by the tenth part of a knight's fee.——William her ſon and heir, was then aged thirty-ſeven years. He departed this life 5 July 1525, leaving,——Antony, his ſon and heir, twenty-three years old (n) [D].

This eſtate was next in Sir Henry Radcliffe, and Honora his wife, who alienated it to Arthur Harrys Eſq; and the latter, by licenſe dated 5 April 1566, alienated it again, by the name of the maner of Wickford, and 20 meſſuages, 200 acres of land, &c. to——Chriſtopher Harris (o). At the time of his deceaſe 26 December 1571, he was ſucceeded by——Edward; and he by —— Sir William Harrys of Shenfield in Margaret-ing. [Concerning this family ſee more in the other Volume, p. 54.]

In the laſt century, Edmund Godwin of Hooks-Hall in Surrey, Eſq; ſold this eſtate to

is the other conſiderable eſtate in this Pariſh.

The manſion houſe ſtood about half a mile north weſt from the Church, on the north ſide of the River, near Runwel; but hath been taken down about 36 years. Here Courts Leet are kept, and near it ſtands a Pound. At the Court they chuſe two Conſtables.

Which of the above eſtates mentioned in Domeſday-book This was, we cannot with certainty affirm: Neither have we any account of its owners till of late.

Mr. Robert Cheſter gave this eſtate to

Mr. John Moore his ſiſter's ſon, who married Frances daughter of Capt. Craven, and had by her Cheſter Moore, and Sarah, wife of Jehu Hall of Poplar, Gent.——Cheſter Moore Eſq; the ſon and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Thomas Stephens of Lee, Chirurgeon [E], and had by her Cheſter Moore, and Elizabeth that dyed young. In caſe of his ſon's dying without iſſue, he ſettled this eſtate by will on his ſiſter's ſon Jehu Hall, Gent. Elizabeth his widow was remarried to the Rev. John Pulley, Rector of Fordham.——Cheſter Moore Eſq; the ſon and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter of Admiral Aylmer, and leaving no iſſue, this eſtate came to the Hall family, in purſuance of the ſettlement.

Jehu Hall above-mentioned, by Sarah Moore his wife had ſeveral ſons, Jehu, Henry, John, Thomas, and William.——Jehu, the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded his couſin Moore in this eſtate: and by Martha his wife, one of the daughters and coheirs of Richard Brittridge of New-houſe in Sutton Eſq; had——Cheſter-Moore Hall, Eſq; Counſellor at Law, the preſent poſſeſſor: and Martha, unmarried [F].

A Maner in Wichford, part of the poſſeſſions of Henry de Eſſex, was granted by K. Henry III. in 1226, to Hubert de Burgh, when he created him Earl of Kent (p). But who had it after him, and in whom it is now, I cannot learn.

[E] Mr. Stephens had two other daughters; namely, Anne wife of Sir Edward Whitaker, Kt. Admiral, and Mary wife of Samuel, a brother of Sir Edward.

And, in the reigns of K. Henry VII, and VIII, Robert Sharpe, Thomaſine Hopton alias Louſeworth, Richard Allen, and Thomas Bonham Eſq; had lands of conſiderable extent in this and pariſhes adjoyning (r).

Mr. Levi Bell; and Richard Wiſe, &c. have lands in this pariſh, beſide the Eſtates abovementioned.

The CHURCH, ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a wooden Belfrey, with a ſpire ſhingled, are 2 Bells.

This Church was given by Robert de Eſſex, ſon of Suene, to the Priory of Prittlewell, founded by him [G].

The Priory preſented to this Rectory, (except at ſuch times as their Revenues were ſeized by the Crown as belonging to a Priory alien;) and continued poſſeſſed of the Advowſon till their diſſolution. K. Edward VI. granted it away before the year 1551; and, through ſeveral mean conveyances, it is come to the lords of the maner of Stilemans.

Wickford is rated to the Land-tax at 558 l.

Belonging to this Pariſh are two Geldables. They are joined in the Taxes with Wickford, and bear a third part in the King's Tax; which they pay to the Collectors of this Pariſh. One third part of the Conſtables rate is alſo paid to them; and they have nothing further to do with this pariſh. The Geldables extend into the neighbouring pariſhes of Rawreth, Runwell, and South-Haningfeild.—The word Geldable ſignifies liable to pay tax or tribute, from the Saxon word Ᵹelð, tax: And is thought to be that land or lordſhip which is under the diſtreſs of the Sheriff's Court. What quantity of land theſe Geldables contain I find no where ſpecified: But Rawreth Hamlet is rated to the land-tax at 134 l. and Runwell Geldable at 98 l.

28. PITSEY.

This pariſh abuts ſouth on the river Thames, which running up the land in two arms forms here a kind of Iſland, or peninſula; and in the weſtern branch is Pitſey-Creek. This ſituation gave occaſion to the latter part of the name, the Saxon iᵹ, or ea, ſignifying an iſland, or water. And the firſt ſyllable may be derived from Pit, a pit, or Pic, pitch; for, beſides Pitſey and Pitſea, the name of this place is uſually written in records Picheſea, Pecheſeye, Picheſeya, Picheſeye, and Pycheſeye. As for the name of Picheford given to it in the Monaſticon only, it is a miſtake [H].

Ulueva, wife of Phin, had this eſtate before the Conqueſt, and no other poſſeſſor is named in the general Survey [I].

Soon after, it belonged to Eudo Dapifer, Steward to William the Conqueror, [mentioned particularly under Colcheſter, and in the other Volume, p. 95. 568. 572. 581. 588.] He made it part of the Endowment of his Abbey of St. John's at Colcheſter: Excepting out of the Grant, in Picheſ' the Fee of Ralph de Mundon, and the Lands of Ailwin the Sokeman, and one Marſh formerly belonging to Lille Cherche, then adjoying to Picheſ' [K]. What he gave St. John's Abbey was afterwards The Maner of Pitſey-hall: And the part he excepted, was undoubtedly The Maner of Chalvedon.

[H] That unuſual name, which is given to this place as I ſay in the Monaſticon only, p. 892, 893, is plainly a miſtake. I could not account for it, till, through the Favor of the Hon. Philip Yorke Eſq; now the Right Hon. Earl of Harwick, I had, in 1747, the peruſal of the curious Regiſter-book formerly belonging to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, from whence the Foundation-Charter printed in the Monaſticon was copied. There I obſerved that the name of this Pariſh was written more than once Picheſ, and never Picheford. The unſkilful tranſcriber taking the ſ for an f, and imagining it muſt be an abbreviation of ford, made of it that uncouth and unuſual name Picheford.—The like miſtake he made in Mundon, as I ſhall ſhew under that pariſh.

PITSEY-HALL,

The manſion houſe of this, lies down at the bottom of the hill below the Church, towards the Channel. A Creek comes up to the door. Near it ſtands a Pound.

In the exemption Charter of K. Henry II. this is ſtyled, 'In the Hundred of Bardeſtable 'ſix hides in Picheſeya.'

The Abbot and Convent held this Maner in pure alms (s); till the general Diſſolution of Monaſteries.

In the Valuation of that Abbey's Revenues, the State of this Eſtate ſtood thus. Rent of aſſize, 21 s. 4 d. Rent of ſuch as held by copy of Court-roll 6 l. 12 s. 1 d. ob. The Farm of the demeſne lands 39 l. 6 s. 8 d. Sum of the allowances and liveries, 7 l. 6 s. 8 d.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted, among many other things, the maner of Picheſey, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (t). Upon whoſe attainder, in 1540, they reverted to the Crown, and were aſſigned and appointed for the maintenance of the Princeſs Mary, afterwards Qu. Mary I. before ſhe aſcended the throne.

The 12th of February 1562, Qu. Elizabeth granted this maner of Pitheſay, alias Pitcheſey: and all Lez Hopes lying in the ſame part of Wells Pit, one called Knolfoote, the other Anteleche, and the third Willes Pit, in this place and Canwey; and a tenement or parcel of land called Holfeild, to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk (u). Upon his execution in 1572, this eſtate deſcended to his eldeſt ſon by his firſt Lady Mary daughter and heir of Henry Fitz-Alan Earl of Arundel, namely to——Philip Howard, Earl of Arundel. He by licenſe dated 12 March 1581, did alienate Pitſey-Hall maner, with appertenances, and 30 meſſuages, 30 tofts, one mill, two dove houſes, 30 gardens, 500 acres of arable, as many of paſture, 60 of meadow, as many of wood, 200 of furze and heath, 400 of marſh, 9 l. 10 s. 6 d. with the Advowſon of the Church, to Roger Townſhend Eſq; and Edward Cook Gent. Roger had licence, 1 Febr. 1582, to alienate the premiſſes to Edward Cooke and Bridget his wife; and two years after, Philip Earl of Arundel, Thomas Lord Howard, and William Lord Howard, all three ſons of the late Duke of Norfolk, joined in conveying the eſtate to the ſaid Edward and Bridget, by licenſe 2 January. Sir Edward Cooke Kt. held the maner of Pitſey in 1618; and preſented to the Living in 1629 and 1630.

We find the eſtate afterwards in Mr. Samuel Moyer, an eminent merchant, who preſented to the Rectory in 1664. His ſon——Samuel Moyer Eſq; a rich Turkey merchant, was Sheriff of this County in 1698, and created a Baronet 25 March 1701. Departing this life 27 April 1716, he was buried in the Church of St. Stephen's Walbrook, of which pariſh he had been an inhabitant 40 years. He married Rebeccah, ſiſter of Sir William Jolliff Kt. It was this Lady that founded the Lecture called by her name. They had only two daughters, Mary, wife of Charles le Barre, of Northamptonſhire Eſq; and Elizabeth married to . . . Jennings Eſq;

Laurence, brother of Sir Samuel Moyer, was of Low-Leyton, and alſo a merchant. By Martha his wife, daughter of William Boothby of Tottenham High-croſs Eſq; he had two ſons, Benjamin; and John, who married Frances, daughter of Edward Brewſter Eſq; alſo three daughters, Martha, wife of Thomas Thorpe Eſq; Lydia, of Peter Hartop Eſq; and Catharine. —— Benjamin Moyer Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded his uncle Sir Samuel in this eſtate [L].

The Maner of CHALVEDON, or CHANDEWELL, is otherwiſe called in records Chalverton, Chaluton, Celdon, and Chelvedon, hall.

The manſion houſe is old and large, and lies in the bottom between Pitſey-ſtreet and Newenden.

This ſeems to have been the land excepted out of Eudo's Grant to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter. The firſt account to be found of it is in 1284, or 1285 (w). After that, we find, that the Prior of St. Mary's Hoſpital without Biſhops-gate held the moiety and fourth part of a fee in the Vill of Chalvedon, under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328. And——Walter Lord Fitz-Walter held the ſame eſtate, at the time of his deceaſe in 1386, which the ſaid Prior held (x).

It does not appear how much, or whether all of it was in the Prior of Biſhops-gate, and ſo forfeited at the Suppreſſion.

K. Henry VIII. granted this maner of Chalwedon, alias Chaluedon, with the other, to Thomas Lord Cromwell.

After his attainder it reverted to the ſame King, who aſſigned it as part of the maintenance of his daughter the Princeſs Mary before ſhe came to the Crown.

In 1562, Febr. 12. Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner and lordſhip of Chalvedon and Pitcheſey, with appertenances; and alſo the ſite, farm, and capital meſſuage, of this maner; and an acre of wood in South-Bemflete called Priors-hill, to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, above-mentioned

But 9 October 1601, ſhe gave it to his ſon by his ſecond Lady, namely —— Thomas Lord Howard, under the name of Chaluton, alias Chalvedon-hall: And K. James I. confirmed it to him by the name of Chalverton-hall; to hold by the ſame tenure as before (z). He was created Earl of Suffolk, 21 July 1603, and held this eſtate in 1618 by the name of Chandwell-hall.

It came afterwards into the Preſcot Family of Thoby-Priory in Mountney's-ing, of which be pleaſed to ſee an account in the other Volume, p. 46.

This is a noble eſtate.

Mr. Heaman Preſcot; and Benjamin Powell, have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, ſtands high; and ſo do moſt of thoſe which are dedicated to that Archangel. From thence is a delightful proſpect. It is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. A Tower of ſtone, with a Spire ſhingled, contains 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Pitſey-hall: many years in the gift of St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter; and ever ſince of thoſe who have enjoyed that Maner.

29. BURES, or BUERS, GIFFORD.

This pariſh is diſtinguiſhed by the name of its ancient owners, the Giffards, from the other Buers in Lexden-hundred in this County, called Mount Buers.

It is otherwiſe written in records Bura, and Bowers.

The lands of this Pariſh were in ſeveral hands before and after the Conqueſt; namely in St. Peter's Weſtminſter; in Aleſtan, a freeman; &c. at the time of the Survey, in Ralph Piperell, or Peverell; in Walter the Deacon; and Grime, the Sheriff, or Bailiff [M].

Theſe Lands ſeem to have been all in one hand, at leaſt for ſome ages, firſt in Leyborn, then in Sutton, then in Bigod, then in Giffard.

Afterward, they were divided into the Maners, 1. . . . of Buers-Giffard. . . . of Earl's, or Eagle's, Fee.

The account we have of them, whilſt united, is as follows.

In the reign of K. Henry II. Robert de Liburne held Bures, and Robert de Sutton under him, by the ſerjeancy of ſcalding the King's hogs (a). This Robert de Sutton gave in frank marriage with Margaret his daughter, to William, a younger ſon of Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, all his lands in Sutton, and in Bures, with the Advowſon of this Church; as alſo the Serjeancy of the Hundred of Berſtaple, and ſuit of all his lands at Langedon, with the Advowſon of that Church; which grant was confirmed by K. John, in 1209 (b). And, in 1227, Roger de Layborn paſſed by fine to William Bigod, and Margaret his wife, the Advowſon of this Church, and the Marſh of Shepehope Ritherneſſe in Bures, the right of the ſaid Margaret (c). This William Bigod was found to hold, jointly with his wife, the vill of Bures, by the ſerjeancy of the Eſchauderie, the ſaid vill, or town, being then worth 100s. And the Hundred of Barſtable of the King in capite, by 18 l. a year payable into the Exchequer (d). [See above, p. 190.] —— Hugh Bigod ſucceeded William (e).

Under them it came, about this time, to be held by the ancient family of Giffard, deſcended from Walter Giffard, ſon of Oſbern de Bolebec, and Aveline his wife, ſiſter to Gunnora Ducheſs of Normandy, great grandmother to the Conqueror; and created by him Earl of Buckingham (f).

In 1253, a Fine paſſed between Roger, Abbot of Meldon, plaintiff, and William Giffart and Gundreda his wife, of the Advowſon of the Church of St. Margaret de Bures (g).

In the Pleas at Chelmsford in 1255, the Jurors found, That William Gyffard held to himſelf 100 s. of land in Bures, by the ſerjeancy of making the King's lard, or bacon, wherever he was in England.—That he held this Hundred of the King for 16 l. and 1 mark, and uſed before to pay to the King 18 l.—That William Gyffard, the Abbot of Weſtminſter, and all the Sheriffs of Eſſex, for the time being, held pleas of Naam unlawful.—And farther, that the Biſhop of London, the Abbot of Weſtminſter, and Nicolas le Butiller, would not ſuffer the King's Bailiffs to enter their lands to ſeize for the King's debts (h).

In 1281, K. Edward I. in exchange for the Bailyſhip of the Hundred and a Half of Berſtaple, confirmed to William Giffard, and Robert his ſon, and Gundred wife of the ſaid Robert, in fee, his maner of Bures, quit and exempt of the ancient fee farm: Reſerving view of frankpledge and other liberties in the ſame; reſerving alſo to the ſaid Robert the Fairs and profits of his Market of Horningdon and of his tenants there; with ſome other exemptions; and freewarren (i) [N].——Gundred Gifford dyed in 1300.——Robert Giffard, her ſon and heir, held, among other things, a certain maner called Bures in the Hundred of Berdſtaple of Hugh Bigot, by the yearly ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs. This Robert had free warren in North-Beamflete, Pycheſeye, and Bueres near Picheſey (k). ——John Gifford, the laſt that we meet with of the family, had a Park at Buers; and held this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, with lands of Up-hall, and the Marſhes ofAtteſcote and Utwyke, of the Warden and Chaplain of Thele [O], by the rent of 10 l. per ann. He held alſo Shephop marſh of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the ſervice of 10 s. per ann. and homage and fealty: And the marſh of Weſt-ſheplop, with part of Horſhell marſh, of Richard de Dover; by the ſervice of 20 s. a year; the other part of the laſt marſh he held of the Prioreſs of Clarkenwell, by the ſervice of 40 s. per ann. And the marſh of Stepneſh, with 50 acres of arable, he held of the Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs of the value of 6 d. yearly. He dyed in 1348, and William Brygod, ſon of Thomas Brygod of Fange, was his next heir (l).

The Gifford family failed here ſoon after.

For John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, ſeized 50 acres of arable, 1 marſh, and rents, in Bures Gifford, for want of heirs after the death of John Gifford of that place, who held them of the ſaid Earl as of his maner of Gelham, or Yeldham, by knight's ſervice (m). And Thomas, the 8th Earl, who dyed in 1370, had here 40 acres of arable, and a marſh called Tympenaſſe, that had eſcheated to him after the death of Robert Lord (n), mentioned in Note [N].

So that the Earls of Oxford were Lords paramount here.

The two Maners were divided ſome years before. We firſt find mention of the Maner of in Bures Gilford, about the year 1346.

It appears by the Feodary of the Earls of Oxford, that Robert Travers held it in 1347, and ——John Gerard from 1349 to 1351. By the London Regiſtry we find, that a Family named St. Nicolas preſented to the Living, or ſome other acknowledging ſo to do in right of St. Nicolas, from the year 1392 to 1463. Then Henry Baker preſented in 1494; and the right of Preſentation continued in the Baker Family till the time of K. James I. when the Eſtate went away amongſt female heirs. It is obſervable in the Regiſtry, that the Earls of Oxford preſented twice, in 1537, and 1541, by reaſon of Guardianſhip, during the minority of James Baker, which ſhews Baker to have held under thoſe Earls the Maner of Buers-Gifford, to which the Patronage was appendant.

Henry Baker, Gent. who dyed 10 June 1510, held this maner of Bowreſhall of John Earl of Oxford, by the 4th part of a knight's fee.——John, his ſon was then 17 years old.——Edward Baker, at the time of his deceaſe 3 April 1535, held alſo this maner of Bowresgifford; and the maner of Condovers in Weſt-Tilbury; with other lands in Great Bemflete, and Wakering, Hockley, Shobery, &c. (o).——James, his ſon and heir, then aged upwards of 20 years, held afterwards this eſtate of Edward Earl of Oxford as of his Honor of Hedingham caſtle; and one meſſuage with divers parcels of land here containing 340 acres, called Grynſteeds and Weſt Chepe-hopes: alſo one meſſuage with ſeveral parcels of land called Garrardes, Prowdes, and Antiloppes, of the maner of Pitſey-hall, with other very conſiderable eſtates in neighbouring pariſhes [P]. He dyed 6 Janu. 1569.——Henry Baker Eſq; his ſon and ſucceſſor (p), held this maner of Elizabeth, Counteſs of Oxford, as of her Honor of Hedingham. But he very much diminiſhed his patrimony, having at the time of his deceaſe 8 April 1611, beſides this maner, only the maner of Kents in Shobery, and Blunts and Palmers in Hockley. By Abigail his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Saltonſtall of Ovington, Kt. he left three Daughters, coheirs; Abigail, 10 years old; Judith, 8; and Anne, 4 (q), amongſt whom his inheritance was divided, 30 November 1631, and each was to have their turn in the patronage of the Living, according to ſeniority.

Abigail, the eldeſt, was married to William Boughton of Lawford in Warwickſhire Eſq; created a Baronet 4 Auguſt 1641. She dyed 21 February 1635, leaving three ſons, Sir Edward; Sir William, and Humfrey.

Judith, the ſecond daughter, was wife of Thomas Boughton, of Bilton in Warwickſhire, Eſq; brother to Sir William. He preſented in 1641 Edward Clark to the Rectory. And, at the Reſtoration K. Charles II confirmed Dr. Clarke in the Living, which is in the Regiſtry ſaid to have been vacant by lapſe.——Thomas Boughton, ſon of the laſt mentioned Thomas Boughton who had married Judith, gave 10 Decemb. 1652, his third part of the Advowſon of the Rectory to his younger brother, Richard; having only one daughter Lucy, wife of George Wale of Radwinter in this County, Gent. Richard, by will, 7 November 1678, gave to William, his brother all his real and perſonal eſtate, who was ſucceeded by ——William Boughton, his ſon and heir.

Anne, the youngeſt daughter of Henry Baker, was married to Sir Thomas Bendiſh of Steeple-Bumpſted, Bart. from whom Edward Cockain of London purchaſed one turn of the Advowſon.

Sir Edward Boughton, Bart. ſon of Sir William aboveſaid, on the 17th of October 1662, for the ſum of 3000l. and upwards, ſold Bowers-Giffard-hall, with appertenances, and the third part of the Advowſon of the Rectory to Edmund Lewen Eſq; And he, by will dated 5 Auguſt 1681, deviſed the premiſſes, and a third part of the Advowſon, to his younger ſon——Martin Lewen, of Gray's-inn Eſq; City-Marſhall. He ſold them to John Slaughter, or Slater, of Eaſt-Smithfield, London, who thought he was purchaſing the whole Advowſon, when it was only every third Vacancy. At his deceaſe he left this eſtate to his wife for life, [who was remarried to Mr. Richard Meakins, wine-merchant,] and, after her deceaſe, to his ſon——John Slaughter, Gent. It is an eſtate of about 160l. a year.

Buers-Giffard-hall, the maner houſe, ſtands near the Church. It is a new timber-houſe erected for the tenant, in the room of the old one, which was large, and moated round.

Earls-Fee

was ſo much of this Pariſh as remained the Fee, or Eſtate, of the Earls of Oxford, after they had granted Part of it to under-tenants.

The manſion houſe, which is far better than Buers-hall, lyes down in the Marſhes, a quarter of a mile below the Church, on a Creek where veſſels of good burthen may come up.

The Earls of Oxford had this eſtate as early as the reign of K. Edward III. But it is not mentioned in records by the name of Erlesfe, or Earls fee, till 1513 (r). Alberic de Vere the 10th Earl of Oxford, held here, in 1399, fifty two acres of land, and marſh, of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice. And——Richard, the 11th Earl of Oxford, held alſo of the King, 40 acres of arable and 100 acres of marſh, in Bures Gifford (s); which was undoubtedly this eſtate. ——John, the 13th Earl, held in 1512, the maner of Erlesfe, with appertenances, of Sir Roger Wentworth (t), who had married Anne daughter of Humfrey Tyrell, of Little Warley Eſq; [See above, p. 114.] And——John de Vere, the 14th Earl, held alſo the ſame, in 1526 (u).

Alberic de Vere, ſecond ſon of John, the 15th Earl, was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1569; for James Baker Eſq; then held of him, as of his maner of Egles fee, by the ſervice of a clovegilly flower, 1 meſſuage, and 1 marſh called Horſwell or Orcell, with appertenances in this pariſh (w).

It was next for above a hundred and thirty years in the Read Family. John Reade, who dyed 23 November 1627, held the maner and farm of Earls-Fee and 37 acres of Land called Earls-Croft, alias Earls-Fee, with appertenances in Buryes-Gifford, otherwiſe Bowers Gifford, of the heirs of Roger Wentworth: and of the King, in capite, a marſh of 180 acres called Northſtines.—— Roger was his ſon and heir, whoſe poſterity enjoyed the eſtate till 1747, when ——Henry Reade ſold it to George Montgomery Eſq; (x).

Muſſells an eſtate here of about 120l. a year, belongs to Jaſpar Kingſman Eſq;

In Hockley, Blunts 130 acres; and Palmers, 15 acres. In the two Shoberies, Much and Little Napiltons; Kents, &c. In Canvey-iſland, ſeveral marſhes. Inquiſ. 12 Eliz. nu. 33.

The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. The Steple, which hath a ſpire ſhingled, contains 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Buers-hall. It was at firſt in the gift of the ancient lords, the Giffards. Afterwards it was in the gift of the Fitz-Nicolas Family from 1392 to 1463; and in that of Baker from 1494 to 1631, when the Right of Preſentation was divided between the three coheireſſes. The right of the eldeſt is now in the lord of Buers-Giffard-hall. The right of the ſecond was purchaſed by John Laws, who ſold it to Francis Clark L L. D. that gave it to his ſiſter, wife of Joſeph Mayer. And the right of the third paſſed from Edward Cockaine of London, Chirurgeon, to Jaſpar Kingſman Eſq; is the name of two contiguous Pariſhes here, lying North and South from each other; and ſo diſtinguiſhed.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 731 l.

BEMFLET

It is otherwiſe written in records Beanflet, Benflet.

Bem the firſt part of the name is derived from the Saxon Beam, a beam, a tree, a poſt, or ſtock; the place being, when firſt diſcovered and ſettled, woody [Q]: Or elſe it might be derived from Bana, a murderer, or Bena, a beggar; and fleot, a bay, or gulf: This being an uſual landing place for the pirating Danes, when they infeſted theſe coaſts in the ninth century. Hæſten, the Daniſh rover, built, about the year 893, a Caſtle, or Fortification, at Beam-fleet, wherein he uſed to lay up his plunder, and kept a large garriſon [R]. But, in 894, K. Ælfred drove away the garriſon, demoliſhed the Caſtle, and took Hæſten's wife, and two ſons, priſoners, with all the booty, and carried them to London. They alſo broke up, or burnt, moſt of the Daniſh ſhips which they found there; carrying the reſt to London and Rocheſter (y).

Theſe two Pariſhes were not then divided, but went by the common name of Bemflet.

30. North Bemflet

belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Earl Harold, afterwards King; to one Freeman; and to Aluuin another Freeman: At the time of the Survey, the chief part was in William the Conqueror's hands, and kept for him by Ralph brother of Ilger; and the other part was in two parcels [S].

Beſides North-Bemflet, it is ſometimes called Little Bemflet.

It was divided, in proceſs of time, into theſe three Maners. 1. The Maner of North Bemflet. 2. . . . that of Cockſales. 3. The Maner of Berdfelds.

The Maner of North Bemflet.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church.

This Maner is what belonged to Earl Harold, and at the Survey to the King. The other part that was then held by Suene, and afterwards under him by a Family ſurnamed Cockſale, or de Coggeſhall, made up The Maner of Cocksales, or Coggeshalls, which hath been long ſwallowed up in the other, now called The Maner of North-Bemflet, alias Coggeshalls.

The earlieſt account we have of its poſſeſſors, after the King, was in the reign of K. Henry III. when it was in a Family ſurnamed de Bemflett.

In 1263, Alexander Bemflett held in Bamflet of the gift of St. Martin le Grand one hidate of land.——John was his brother and heir (z).

But the chief part was then in a Family ſurnamed de Plumberg, of the neighbouring pariſh of Hockley. Barbata daughter of William Garrey held of the King in capite in Bemflete, 200 acres of arable, 20 of wood, 4 of meadow, and ſix marks and a half of rent; and of the Fee of the Abbot of Weſtminſter, 46 acres of otherwiſe called Bradviles, Boadvills, and now Browfords.

The account we have of this maner is but imperfect.

Richard Lee Eſq; who dyed 26 September, 1497, held the maner of Bardfeilds with appertenances in North-Bemfleete, of the maner of Coxſale, by rent of 17 s. per ann. And a tenement called Lewes: Alſo Bloſoms-mead, and 30 acres called Pickerells in Newindon; and Bigwoods in Vange.——Richard Lee his ſon and heir was then 24 years old (h).

Thomas Wiſeman, of North-end in Great Waltham Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 15 July 1584 held the maner or farm of Boadvills, alias Bradviles, with appertenances in North-Benfleete, Neuington, and Wickford.——Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiſeman, were his daughters and coheirs (i). [See in the other Volume, p. 88.]

In 1615 George Pomfret held the maner, or lordſhip, of Bradfeild, alias Beardfeild, with appertenances, of Sir Henry Appleton Kt. and Bart. as of his maner of North Bemflet; and ſome lands in Great Dunmow, parcel of the maner of Newton-hall. He dyed 3 April that year, leaving——Thomas his ſon and heir (k).

Fan-hall, another Maner here, about a mile north from the Church, belongs to John Ruſſel Eſq; of Stubbers in North-Okendon. See above, p. 103. and in the other Volume, p. 573.

The Right Hon. Ralph Earl Verney, and Mr. William Bavin, have alſo ſome lands here.

In 1286, Richard de Tany had licenſe to give to the Abbey of St. John's in Colcheſter 260 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, 14 of paſture, 100 of marſh, and 3 s. 6 d. rent in Benflete, Neuendene, and Bures, holden of Sir David de Flettewyk. And, in 1336, Warin att Welle, and William de Brone obtained licenſe to give to the ſame Abbey 64 acres of arable and 2 acres of meadow, in Little Bemflete and Picheſye (l).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, all tiled. The Belfrey, which is of timber with a ſpire ſhingled, contains 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of North Bemflet.

31. SOUTH BEMFLET

lies ſouth of the other, as the name imports; being parted from Canvey-iſland by a Creek, which from its paſſing by Hadley is called Hadley Ray, the latter being derived from the old French word Rie, or Rive, i. e. ſhore, coaſt, or bank.

It is otherwiſe called Great Bemflet.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, part of this pariſh belonged to St. Mary at Berking; but William the Confeſſor took it from that Nunnery, and gave it to Weſtminſter-Abbey [U]. Another part, which Aluuin a freeman had poſſeſſed in the Confeſſor's reign, Suena held at the time of the Survey [W].

From theſe aroſe afterwards three Maners. 1. The Maner belonging to Weſtminſter-Abbey. 2. The Maner of South Bemflet. 3. . . . that of Jarvis.

The Maner of The ABBEY had an addition to its demeſnes by ſeveral donations.

In 1353, licenſe was granted to John Peche to give 100 acres of marſh in Bemflete; to Roger Baſſet of Sutton, to give 32 acres of arable, in this pariſh and Raurethe; and to Richard de Rok, to give ſome leſſer parcels; to the Abbot and Convent of Weſtminſter, which lands were held of the ſaid Convent by the ſervice of 5 s. 10 d. per ann. and fealty.—And, in 1392, John Thurſton, Thomas Aſton, and Simon Barton, Chaplains, had licence to give to the ſame Abbey one meſſuage, and 142 acres of arable, in South-Bemflet and Thunderſle, and forty of marſh in Great Benflet within the Iſle of Canewe; holden of the Abbey by the ſervice of 6 s. rent, as part of the revenues of this maner, and by ſuit of court (m). Theſe three laſt ſeem to have been feoffees to ſettle ſome private man's benefaction to the Convent.

This Maner and demeſnes continued in that Abbey till its ſuppreſſion, when they came to the Crown.

And when it was converted into a foundation for a Dean and Prebendaries, K. Henry VIII. made the maners of Bonvyles and Benflete, alias South Beymflete, part of their endowment (n): Which, notwithſtanding the ſucceſſive alterations in that Church, have continued in it ever ſince. Qu. Elizabeth confirmed to them, 21 May 1560, the Maners of Benflete, alias South Benflete, Monkeflete, Shereſwicke, Hoppeſwicke, and Sanderſwicke; adding, at the ſame time, the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage (o).

Dr. Francis Clerke had a Leaſe from the Dean and Chapter.

The Maners of SOUTH-BEMFLET, and JARVIS, are that part of the pariſh which was Suene's.

Theſe have been frequently in the ſame hand, but are not known to have been conſtantly ſo. And the owner of theſe alſo held part of the eſtate of the Abbey of Weſtminſter as tenant.

South-Bemflet-hall ſtands on the north ſide of the Church; and Jervis-hall about a mile north of the ſame. The latter was anciently called North-mayes, alias Jervis-hill, it being ſituated on a hill.

The ancienteſt owners of this eſtate after Henry de Eſſex, were a family ſurnamed de Woodham. William de Woodham, who dyed in 1280, held the maner of Great Bemflete, in theſe ſeveral parcels; viz. of John de Baton' 1 meſſuage with edifices, and 30 acres of arable, by the ſervice of 12 s. and 10 d. and half of an acre of wood by the ſervice of 1 d. and he received 4 s. 7 d. of rent of aſſiſe, and a pound of pepper. We hear no more of this Family here: They held alſo in Chigwell a Hall, and ſome lands of the maner of Barringtons.

The next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record, was John de Coggeſhall, mentioned in the laſt pariſh, and in the other Volume, p. 162. 372. &c. He held of the Abbot of Weſtminſter in ſocage, 106 acres of arable, and 13 s. rent of aſſize; alſo, by the ſervice of 19 s. 8 d. per ann. and ſuit of court at this maner of Great Bemflete, 47 acres of arable, 10 of paſture, and 1 of meadow; and 40 acres, with 42 s. 2 d. rent, in Hadleigh: And of John de Bohun, by the ſervice of 8 s. 2 d. a year, 18 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow: And of Thomas Woodham by the ſervice of 20 s. yearly, 30 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 2 of paſture, and 6 s. 8 d. rent. Alice, the ſecond, was married to Sir John Tyrell of Heron's. [See above, p. 208. Joice, daughter of Sir Robert Tyrell, brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband Thomas Appleton Eſq; Their ſon——Sir Roger Appleton, of Bemflet, at the time of his deceaſe 26 February 1557, held, in this pariſh, of the Queen, as of the maner of Chalwedon-hall, one meſſuage; another meſſuage called Eſtmans, with 140 acres of arable meadow and paſture, and 100 of wood; another eſtate called Redes containing 80 acres of land; and Morſes tenement, with 20 acres of wood: Of the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter he held the following tenements; Hadley Corſes, and 30 acres of land; Bloſſhams, and 8 acres of land; North-mayes, and 20 acres of arable and paſture, and 100 of wood; North-howſe, alias Boynes, and 80 acres of land; Bartholomews, and alſo 80 acres with it; Adgors, Weſt-croft, and the Downes, 12 acres: And of Henry Earl of Suſſex, as of his maner of Norton in that County, the following tenements; Connons, and 30 acres; Hopes, and 30 acres; Hooles crofts, 12 acres; and Mennes. In 1563, Sir Henry Appleton Knt. Roger Appleton M. D. and William Appleton LL. D. had the following lands diſafforeſted, in conſideration of 500*l.* paid to the Crown. The Maner of Jarvis-Hall, containing ſix thouſand ſix hundred and ſixty acres; Jarvis-Hall park, North-Moyes park, South-Bamflet park, Jarvis-Hall demeſne lands, Jarvis great woods, Jarvis high woods, Jarvis ſprings, Thunderſley great woods, Hadley great woods, Garrens woods, Goldenly ſprings, Hick-Hawkes woods, Mawlings woods, Temple woods, Dawes woods, Dawkins woods, and ſo beyond Dawes heath, Buſhey Lees Great woods, Hartley groves, Church woods, Hovell thick woods, Philips ſprings, Philax groves, Acley bottoms, Hopes green, Reads hills, Boyſes, Mullers, Bacons, North, South, Eaſt, and Weſt-Downs, with divers Marſhes in Canvey-Iſland, containing three thouſand, eight hundred acres, or thereabouts, called by the name of Monks-Wick, North-Wick, Father-Wick, Caſtle-Wick, Chafleet, Shores-Wick, Hopes-Wick, Leighbeck, Scarhouſe, Woolſpit, Antleahs, Shouldry, Runtiſward-Marſh, Darlet, Lymeyard, Waterſide, Newinins, Lubbyns, Great-Ruſſels, Little-Ruſſels, Seachurch-Marſh, Hadley-Marſh, Southwick-Marſh, Weſt-Stanes-Wick, and the Feedings, Fiſhing, Water-courſes from Timons-Beacon, Wodeham-Horſe, Sea-Horſe, Creetens-Pool and Creetens-Reach, Cliff-Hill, Holly-Haven, and Bemflet-Ray, ſo all round the whole iſle of Candy or Canvey, as far as Hadley-Ray &c. And alſo the Maner of South Bemflet, containing three thouſand acres, or thereabouts. Alſo the Farm of Leigh-Park with the woods and under-woods, containing one hundred and eighty acres, with ſeveral other meſſuages and tenements.

Peter Day Eſq; Mr. Robert Matthews; Robert Lowten; Samuel James; Nicolas Cooper, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Rich-marſh here, ſince called Richneſſe, was the endowment of a Chantry founded in the Cathedral of St. Paul 2 July 1239, by Martin de Pateſhull, Dean of that Church. After the ſuppreſſion, it was granted, in 1549, to John Hulſon, and Bartholomew de Brokeſby, who alienated it the ſame year to John Preſton (x).

We find mention of a Maner here called Le White Halle, and lands and tenements ſtyled Poynantes, which Robert Bloſme releaſed to William Truſbit Eſq; in 1412 (y).

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, ſtands in the ſtreet on a riſing ground, and is a handſom and lofty edifice, conſiſting of a body and two aiſles; with pillars of the Tuſcan order: The aiſles are leaded, and all the reſt tiled. The Tower is of ſtone, with a ſpire ſhingled, containing 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, to Weſtminſter-Abbey, by William the Conqueror, as hath been mentioned above. The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to that Abbey, and a Vicarage ordained, of which they continued Patrons till their Suppreſſion; when they came to the Crown. But they were both granted by Qu. Elizabeth to the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter; in whom they have continued ever ſince.

Dr. Francis Clerke, Leſſee here of the Eſtate of the Church of Weſtminſter, who dyed 31 October 1734, paved handſomly the Chancel of this Church with marble; and ordered by his will an Organ to be erected, with a ſalary of 30 l. a year for an Organiſt. He is to be nominated and appointed by the Corporation of the ſons of the Clergy.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 824 l.

32. THUNDERSLEY

is the laſt pariſh in this Hundred, abutting on the eaſt upon that of Rochford.

There is another pariſh in this County, very nearly of the ſame name; viz. Thunderley, now united to Wimbiſh in Utlesford Hundred.

The name, derived from the two Saxon words, Ðunꝺeꞃ, and leẏ, denotes Thunder's paſture-ground; but what the occaſion of it was, we cannot diſcover.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Godric one of the King's Thegns was owner of this lordſhip; which, at the time of the Survey, was part of Suene's large poſſeſſions [Y].

Afterwards it was divided into theſe two Maners. 1. The maner of Thunderſley. 2. . . . that of Buſches.

The Maner of THUNDERSLEY.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north from the Church.

Upon the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, as mentioned before, p. 156, this eſtate became veſted in the Crown.

About the reign of K. Henry II. it was in a Family ſurnamed Fitz-Barnard. For then Ralph Fitz Barnard, or the ſon of Barnard, held a fee in Tuneresley of the Honor of Rayleye (z). —— John Fitz-Barnard, who dyed in 1260, held the maner of Tunderſley of the King by the ſervice of one knight's fee, of his Honor of Reyley; and thirty acres of Chriſtian de Plumbergh, by the 40th part of a fee (a). He was preſented, as holding this maner by the ſervice of keeping one of the King's goſhawks; but he pleaded he did not (b) [Z].——Robert Fitz-Barnard, who dyed in 1299, held the maner of Thundriſley of the King in capite of his Barony of Reyle, by homage, and the ſervice of coming twice a year, once at Hadley, and once at Prittlewell, to the Court of the ſaid Barony (c).

In 1313, Thomas le Fitz-Bernard paſſed this eſtate by Fine to Bartholomew de Baddleſmere (d). And the latter gave it to K. Edward II. in exchange for the maner of Bourn in Suſſex [A].

K. Edward III. in 1329, granted this maner to John Le Sturmy, and his heirs for ever, by the ſervice of half a quarter of a knight's fee. He enjoyed it at the time of his deceaſe in 1343. And held alſo a meſſuage called Pyeſneſt, with 140 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 12 of wood, in Waltham-Holy-croſs, of the Abbot. —— Robert de Sturmy his ſon and heir (e), held 2 parts of this maner, with the reverſion of the 3d part of the ſame after the death of Maud widow of Sir John Sturmy, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee: and dying in 1345, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Donewald Sturmy (f), afterwards knighted. In 1361, he conveyed by deed, to K. Edward III. and his heirs, this Maner of Thunderle, with a Park. And, in 1367, Iſolda his widow releaſed to the King all her right in the ſame (g) [B].

The Crown ſeems to have purchaſed this, or given ſome equivalent for it, for the ſake of laying it to Raleye-Caſtle then in the Royal Family, for which this Park lay commodious.

In 1390, K. Richard II. granted in ſpecial tail to Edmund Duke of York 5th ſon of K. Edward III. and his heirs male the Honor, Village, Fair, and Market of Rayley, the Maner of Tunderle, and the maners of Eſtwood and Newport. He held them at the time of his deceaſe in 1401;——Edward his ſon ſucceeding him in Thunderſley maner and Park, during his life. Then Philippa, his Dowager, held the third part of it in dowry till her death, in 1422 (h).

This Eſtate continued in the Crown till K. Edward VI. granted the diſparked Park of Thunderley to William Parre Earl of Eſſex and Marquis of Northampton; who was attainted for taking part with the Lady Jane Grey.—But before his Attainder he granted away this Park to Edward Bury and Kenelm Throckmorton Eſq; ——Throckmorton, by licence dated 26 April 1550, conveyed it to Thomas Geſting (i), and ——Richard Geſting, probably ſon of the laſt, at the time of his deceaſe 1 July 1612, held the Park of Thunderſley in capite, leaving—— Nicolas his ſon and heir, ſixteen years old (k).

As to the Maner of Thunderſley, it continued in the Crown from 1422 till 1553, when K. Edward VI. granted it to Suſan Tonge, widow of Thomas Tonge, Clarencieux, and her heirs. Qu. Mary I. to whom ſhe was firſt Lady of the Bed-Chamber, ratified the grant of this Maner, and of a wood called Caverhill, Bowdons grove, Kingſwood and Sopers grove: adding the Advowſon of this Church, to which ſhe preſented in 1554 and 1558 (l). [See above, p. 195, and in the other Volume, p. 41.] Her nephew and heir

George White, of Hutton Eſq; who dyed 13 June 1584, held the maner of Thunderſley of the Queen in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee, and the Advowſon of this Church. ——Richard White his ſon, and Catharine his widow, 2 April 1595, alienated Thunderſley-hall maner, and 2 meſſuages, 2 gardens, 2 orchards, 120 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 20 of wood, and 20s. rent to

Francis Fitche, Gent. (m). Who were the ſubſequent owners for ſeveral years we do not find: But, if we can judge by the preſentations to the Living, it was Robert Wiſeman Eſq; in 1619. —— Robert Smyth Eſq; in 1644, and 1646. —— Thomas Dawling, Gent. from 1676 to 1689. and—— John Dawling Eſq; in 1700.

Edward Montgomerie Eſq; He dying 18 January 1746-7, was ſucceeded by his elder brother ——George Montgomerie Eſq;

The Maner of BUSCHES, otherwiſe Burſhes, was ſo named probably from William Buſch, whoſe wife Lettice, that dyed in 1309, held in Thunderſley, of Alice Beamond, forty acres of land by the rent of 1*d. ob.* toward the Hidage;——Beatrix, daughter of the ſaid Lettice, and William Martyne, her nephew, were her next heirs (n).

It appears by a Charter, that in 1267 William Saundon, the King's Cook, had free Warren in Thunderſley, probably in this Maner, becauſe the chief maner was in the hands of other great men.

This Maner of Burſe did afterwards belong to the new Hoſpital of St. Mary without Biſhopſgate; and, upon the ſuppreſſion, coming to the Crown, was granted, with 16s. rent, to John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, and Dorothy his wife, 9 April 1545, to hold by the tenth part of a knight's fee (o).

John Warner, Gent. who dyed 21 September 1552, held the maner of Burces, alias Burches, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the 40th part of a knight's fee, and 16s. rent. ——Henry, his brother and heir, was then aged 60. Upon whoſe death, 4 March 1556, this eſtate went to

Thomas Newdigate, ſon and heir of Anne Warner, and to Elizabeth Thomas, and Margaret Thomas, daughters of Thomaſine Warner (p). Robert Kemp and Thomas Newdigate ſold it to

Henry Songar Gent. and Elizabeth his wife, 20 May 1557, and they, with Thomas Philips, ſold it 4 April the next year, to Bartholomew Averell Gent. He dyed poſſeſſed of it 14 May 1562, leaving Mary wife of Sir John Sammes; Grace; and Elizabeth, his daughters and coheirs (q).

It was ſince in Capt. Crowder, of Goodman's-fields, London.

Mr. William Solby; Michael Collinſon; James Hardy; and John Muzzard, have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, ſtands on an eminence, from whence there is a fair proſpect. It conſiſts of a body and two aiſles; but the Chancel is only of one pace: the whole tyled. In a Spire ſhingled are 2 Bells.

This Rectory belonged to the Priory of Prittlewell till its ſuppreſſion. It then coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. preſented in 1537, and K. Edward VI. in 1550. Qu. Mary I. granted the Advowſon with the Maner to Suſan Tonge in 1554: and they have ſince paſſed together to the Families of White, Wiſeman, Smyth, Dawling, Ange, Turner, and Montgomerie.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 445l. 2s. 0d.

iſland, lies againſt Bemflet and Hadley, being encompaſſed by branches of the river Thames. There is a paſſage to it over the Strand at low water. It is about 5 miles in length and 2 in breadth, and contains 3600 acres. Of itſelf it is no Pariſh, but pays Taxes and Tithes to the following Pariſhes, South, and North-Bemflet, Bures-Gifford, Pitſey, Fange, Langdon with Baſildon; and to theſe three Pariſhes within the Hundred of Rochford, Lee, Prittlewell, and Southchurch. There are about 50 dwellings in the iſland.

Mr. Camden juſtly ſuppoſes this Iſland to be the Convennos, or Κωουνος, mentioned in Ptolemy's Geography.

The ancient poſſeſſors of Lands in this Iſland upon record, were, Edward Baker Eſq; who in 1543, held of Nicolas Wentworth Eſq; three Marſhes in Canweye, called Knightwyke, Southwyke, and Attnaſhe. In 1569,——James Baker Eſq; held 500 acres of Salt marſh here (r).

In 1557, Sir Roger Appleton held in this iſle, a marſh called North-marſhe, alias Northwicke, containing 400 acres of arable and paſture; and a marſh called Weſt-marſhe, alias Weſtwicke, containing 300 acres. In another place, it is ſaid, that he held of the maner of Bowchiers-hall, a marſh of 300 acres called Chaflett, by the yearly rent of 13s. 4d. And of the maner of Cockſalls in Little Bemfleete, a marſh called Fatherwicke containing 200 acres (s). His great grandſon, Sir Henry Appleton, beſides the above, held here, in 1604,

This Iſland being ſubject to be overflowed by high Tides, Sir Henry Appleton, and others then owners of the lands here, agreed by Deed dated 9 April 1622, to give one third of the lands in fee ſimple to Joas Croppenburgh, a Dutchman ſkilled in the making of Dikes, in conſideration of his ſufficiently inning and recovering this Iſland, then uſually overflowed at every ſpring tide [C], at his own coſts and charges. This agreement was by conſent made a decree of the Court of Chancery 27 February 1622-3. The third of theſe lands now goes to the repairs of the Sea-walls.

A timber Chapel was built here for the uſe of the Dutch inhabitants employed in draining the iſle. It being decayed, another was built at the charge of Mr. Edgar, an officer in the Victualling Office, and conſecrated 11 June 1712. This being alſo decayed, a new one was built about the year 1745, partly by a contribution of the inhabitants, but moſtly by a benefaction of the late Daniel Scratton Eſq; owner of conſiderable eſtates in Prittlewell. He alſo gave part of the Tithes to truſtees, to pay ten pounds a year to the Vicar of Prittlewell, the better to enable him to perform divine ſervice here: And ten pounds a year more to the Miniſter or Curate, duly appointed, to preach twenty Sermons in St. Catharine's Chapel in this Iſland. About 17 l. a year is paid to the ſaid Miniſter, by the Incumbents of the Nine Pariſhes that receive Tithes out of this place.

Here is a Fair on the 25th of June.

[C] It is ſtill ſubject to inundations at ſome particular high tides. One of the moſt remarkable was 16 February 1735-6, when about half of the Cattle were drowned. A cow and five hogs then happening to ſtand on a dunghill, were carried with it near a mile over a deep creek, and luckily preſerved from being driven into the rapidity of the ſtream, by the dunghill's being ſtopped by a high bank.

THE HUNDRED OF ROCHFORD

IS bounded on the Weſt by that of Barſtable; on the South by the mouth of the River Thames, and the Sea; on the Eaſt by part of of the German Ocean; and on the North by the river Crouch.

In its greateſt length from weſt to eaſt it is about eighteen miles long; and from north to ſouth where broadeſt about nine miles wide.

It takes its name from the Town of Rochford: that ſtands about the center of the Hundred. 'Tis one of thoſe that have been ſtigmatized with the denomination of The Hundreds, Dengey being the other: But the Country being greatly cleared of the woods that obſtructed the free circulation of the air, and the lands thoroughly cultivated, they are leſs unhealthy than they formerly were; bating the unavoidable ſteams and damps that ariſe in the parts near the water. The worſt circumſtance, is a ſcarcity of good Springs; which the Rains in ſome meaſure ſupply, but with no ſmall inconvenience towards the end of the ſummer. The land is tolerably fruitful, and much improved of late years by manuring with chalk rubbiſh, which they have eaſily by water-carriage. It bears good Wheat, and other Grain, except Barley; ſo that they are forced to get their Malt chiefly from other parts.

This Hundred was originally in the King's diſpoſal, and granted to Suene. Upon the forfeiture of his grandſon Henry de Eſſex it reverted to the Crown; and continued in it, till K. Henry III. granted it to Hubert de Burgh Chief Juſtice of England, whom he created Earl of Kent 11 February 1226 (u). He dyed in 1243. His laſt wife —— Margaret, ſiſter of Alexander II. King of Scotland, had this Hundred at the time of her deceaſe in 1260. She dying without heirs, —— John de Burgh, Earl of Kent, her huſband's ſon by his firſt wife, ſucceeded (w). But, in 1274, he paſſed it by fine to K. Edward I. with the maners of Rayley, and Eſtwood (x). In 1340, K. Edward III. granted it to——William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and the heirs male of his body. He dying 16 September 1360, it deſcended to his ſon—— Humfrey, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 15 January 1372, leaving only daughters, it reverted to the Crown (y). Thomas de Staple, who dyed in 1372, held for life the Baylyſhip of the Hundred of Rochford, paying 23l. a year into the Exchequer. In 1380, K. Richard II. granted the Bailywick of this Hundred to ——Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life; upon condition that he ſhould, at his own coſts and charge, keep up the fences and lodges of the King's Parks of Reyleigh, Hadeley, and Thunderſley, in repair.——Edmund de Langley, Duke of York, 5th ſon of Edward III. ſucceeded him in 1400, having the remainder in fee-tail (z). —— Edward, Duke of York, his ſon, had it after him in 1402. and he departing this life in 1415,——Philippa, his widow, held the third part of it in dower (a).——Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, father of K. Edward IV. nephew of Edmund of Langley, had it next. By that means it came again to the Crown.

Richard Lord Rich obtained a Grant of it from K. Edward VI. and, at the time of his death 12 June 1566, held the Hundred of Rochford, Turn, Court, and Liberties within the ſame, of the Queen, in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee: as did his ſon —— Robert Lord Rich, who dyed 27 February 1580-1 (b). In that noble Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued till 1673.

I. ROCHFORD.

This being the chief Town in this Hundred, and what gave name to it, and to the Deanery, I therefore begin with it, according to my uſual method. It ſtands by a little ſtream, that runs into the great Creek which opens into the river Crouch. Here being a Ford is what occaſioned the latter part of the name. As to the firſt ſyllable Roch, it was moſt probably from the fiſh Roche, [Saxonice, hꞃeoce] which abounded in this water. It could not well be from the French Roche, Rock, becauſe it bore that name before the Norman Conqueſt, and this place is not rocky. I ſhall not diſpute whether it might not come from Rodesford, or Radesford, being the principal Road of the Hundred. The name is written in Domeſday-book Rochefort, according to the French pronunciation.

This Town is 40 miles from London; hath a Market on Thurſday; and two Fairs, on Eaſter-Tueſday, and the Wedneſday after September 29.

It giveth a Title to the Naſſau Family. See under St. Oſith.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, a Freeman was poſſeſſed of this Lordſhip: At the time of the Survey, Suene held it, and under him one Alured, a Saxon by the name [D].

Of Suene I ſhall give a particular account under the next pariſh of Raley, which was his chief Seat and Barony. His grandſon Henry de Eſſex forfeited this, with the reſt of his eſtates, through his cowardiſe.

In this pariſh are the following Maners. 1. The Maner or Honor of Rochford. 2. The Maner of Greſted.

The Maner of ROCHFORD.

Rochford-Hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands near the weſt end of the Church. It is a large and ſtately building, and for ſome time the ſeat and place of reſidence of the Families of Rochford, Boteler Earls of Ormond and Wiltſhire, Sir Thomas Bullen, and Richard Lord Riche; but is now much decayed. It had a large Park.

K. Henry II. gave this Maner and eſtate to a Family, ſurnamed from hence de Rochford; of which we find the following pedigree. Euſtace the Norman had three ſons, Euſtace; Pagan; and William de Say.——Euſtace, the eldeſt ſon married, firſt, the heireſs of the Barony of Haulton in Cheſhire; and, to his ſecond wife, the heireſs of Veſci, Baron of Malton and Alnwick in Northumberland. From Richard Fitz Euſtace his eldeſt ſon deſcended the Earls of Lincoln of the ſurname of Lacy; and the Lords of Warkworth in Northumberland, and of Clavering in Eſſex.——Pagan, the ſecond ſon was lord of Ewyas in Wales in 1136. His ſon——Guy de Rochford was father of —— Pagan, who living in 1204, had two ſons, Guy, and John.—— Sir Guy de Rocheford, the eldeſt ſon and heir, had a Market and a Fair at Rochford, in 1247 (c).

At the time of his deceaſe in 1274, he held of the King in capite, as of the Eſcheat of the Barony of Reyley in the town of Rochford, one meſſuage, with a garden, 168 acres of arable; 120 of marſh in Foulnes called Neſſewyk; a Park containing 32 acres of wood; 5 l. 12 s. 8 d. rent of aſſize, 7 acres of meadow, with the Advowſon of the Church of Rochford. And he held of John de Burgh, in the Hundred of Rochford, three marſhes in Foulnes, and a wind-mill in the town of Rochford. He held alſo the Maners of Elſenham and Berden.——John Rocheford, ſon of Maud, ſiſter to Guy, was his couſin and heir (d). He held this maner, with the marſh of Foulneſſe call Eſtwood-wick, and departed this life 1309 (e).——Robert, his ſon and heir, preſented to this Living in 1321, and 1324. He held, jointly with Iſolda daughter of William Fitz-Warin, probably his wife, the maners of Rochford and Berden, and 1100 acres of marſh in Rochford, with the Advowſon of this Church, of the King as of the Honor of Reyle, by the ſervice of three knights fees, and 6d. yearly to the hidage; and by ſuit to the Court of the Barony of Reyle from month to month, and ſuit to the Hundred of Rocheford from three weeks to three weeks. He held alſo for life, a tenement in this pariſh called Uphalle, of Sir John Nevill, by the ſervice of three pounds of pepper, and 7d. to the hidage of the Honor of Reyle.——Sir Thomas de Rocheford was his ſon and heir [E]. In 1342, he releaſed to [E] John de Rocheford ſucceeded his Uncle Guy. He was ſummoned by a Quo Warranto to appear before the King's Juſtices Itinerant at Chelmsford in 1285, to ſhew, by what Right he claimed Wreck of Sea, tumbrell, emendation of Aſſiſe of bread and beer, broken &c. in Rochford &c. He appeared and anſwered, As for wreck of ſea; That one John de Burgh ſenior granted to Guy de Rocheford his Uncle, whoſe heir he was, All his Marſhes with the appertenances, (excepting to the ſaid John and his heirs the collation of the tythes of the ſaid marſhes which he had in Fughelneſs in the Hundred of Rochford, tam forinſecos quam intrinſecos) together with all his Marſhes as well within the Wall as without, To have and to hold the ſaid Marſhes with all the appertenances in waters, ſands or waſhes, ſhoves, wrecks of the ſea, wayes, pathes, drifts, warrens, and all other liberties to the ſaid Marſhes appertaining, which Grant Edw. now King of England by his Charter confirmed, which Charter he then produced. As for tumbrell, emendation of Aſſiſe of bread, and beer, broken &c. He ſaid, King Henry, Father of the King that now is, granted and by his Charter confirmed to the aforeſaid Guy de Rocheford and his heirs, one Market at his Maner of Rochford, every Week upon Tueſdays, and one Fair yearly

John, ſon of John de Newington, all his right in thoſe lands which he had in the Hundreds of Rochford and Berdeſtaple of the inheritance of Joane, formerly his wife, the youngeſt daughter and common heir of Peter de Suth-Cherche (f).

The Heir-general of this Family failing, K. Edward III, in 1340, granted this maner to William de Bohun Earl of Northampton; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1360, held the maners of Rochford and Foulneſs of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyle, by knight's ſervice.—— Humfrey his ſon and ſucceſſor, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton, Baron of Brecknock, and High Conſtable of England, dyed 17 January 1372. Joane his widow, daughter of Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, preſented to this Living in 1395, and 1397. They had only two daughters, Elianor married to Thomas of Woodſtock, and Mary to Henry Earl of Derby. [See above p. 203. and in the other Volume, p. 453. 460.] (g). The ſhare of Thomas de Woodſtock fell to the Crown, upon his being declared guilty of treaſon; that of the Earl of Derby was incorporated into the Duchy of Lancaſter.

Joane, widow of Humfrey de Bohun above-mentioned, having had for her ſecond huſband William de Beauchamp, Lord Begavenny, took for her third James Boteler 4th Earl of Ormond; and had by this laſt 3 ſons, James, John, and Thomas. She dyed 7 April 1434 (h).—— James, the eldeſt ſon, 5th Earl of Ormond, was created, 8 July 1449, Earl of Wiltſhire; and being ſtrongly attached to the Houſe of Lancaſter, obtained this eſtate, and preſented to the Church in 1454 and 1455. But being taken after the battle of Towton, he was beheaded 1 May 1461, and his eſtates were confiſcated to the Crown. His next brother —— John, the 6th Earl of Ormond, was indeed reſtored in blood, and to moſt of the eſtates, but not to the Maner and Hundred of Rochford (i).

For, K. Edward IV. gave it to his ſiſter Anne, Ducheſs of Exeter; and ſhe preſented to the Church from 1462 to 1468. His father-in law, Richard Widvile, Earl Rivers, appears poſſeſſed of it in 1469. And, after his tragical death in 1469,

Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet, ſon in law to K. Edward IV. and then his brother——Sir Richard Grey (k). Upon that King's demiſe,

Thomas Boteler, next brother to the laſt Earl of Ormond, petitioned K. Richard the third for theſe eſtates: There being ſome defect in the petition, it was ſet right by that King's Writ of Right, or Charter of pardon [F]. The Earl of Ormond's attainder being reverſed upon the acceſſion of K. Henry VII. Thomas Earl of Ormond recovered this eſtate, and enjoyed it till his deceaſe 8 Auguſt 1515; being ſummoned to the Engliſh Parliament, 14 October 1495, by the title of Sir Thomas Ormond de Rochford. He left only two daughters, coheirs, Anne, wife Sir James St. Leger, and

Margaret, wife of Sir William Bullen, of Blickling in Norfolk. Theſe had an only ſon and heir——Sir Thomas Bullen, who attained to great honors. He was employed in ſeveral Embaſſies, and Affairs of conſequence; conſtituted Treaſurer of the King's Houſhold; Lord Privy-Seal; Knight of the Garter; created VISCOUNT ROCHFORD, 18 June 1525, and Earl of Wiltſhire to the heirs male of his body; as alſo Earl of Ormond to his heirs general, 8 December 1527. He dyed in the year 1538, having had, by Elizabeth his wife daughter of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, George, Viſcount Rochford, who was beheaded 17 May 1535, falling a ſacrifice to K. Henry's jealouſy; Anne Bullen, ſecond Queen of the ſame brutiſh tyrant, who was ſacrificed to his luſt; and Mary, married, firſt, to William Carey Eſq; and, afterwards, to Sir William Stafford. She departed this life 19 July 1543, leaving, by her firſt huſband,—— Henry Carey, Eſq; then 17 years, 15 weeks, and 5 days old. At the time of her deceaſe, ſhe held the Maner, or Barony, of Rocheford of the King, in capite, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. Alſo the maners of High-Roding, Great Holland, Leghehall, Wakering, Hawkewell, DOCCETTS, alias Doggetts, Upwyke, COMBES near Rochford, Baggotts marſh, Pakelſham, Eſt-hall, Southall, Foulnes, and Rochford; and divers lands, hereditaments &c. (l) in thoſe ſeveral pariſhes, and places [G].

The Carey Family was originally of Cockington in Devonſhire. William Carey of that place Eſq; by his firſt wife, Anne daughter of Sir William Paulet, had a ſon from whom deſcended the Carey family of Cockington. By his ſecond wife, Alice daughter of Sir Baldwin Fulford, he had——Thomas, who left two ſons, Sir John; and——William. Sir John had iſſue

Elizabeth, was knighted by her, ſoon after her acceſſion to the Crown; advanced to the title of Baron Hunſdon 13 January 1558; and employed in offices of the greateſt moment. By Anne his lady, daughter of Sir Thomas Morgan, he had four ſons, George; John; Edmund; Robert, created Earl of Monmouth: and three daughters, Catharine married to Charles Howard, Earl of Nottingham; Philadelphia to Thomas Lord Scrope; and Margaret to Sir Edward Hoby, Kt. Departing this life 23 July 1596, aged 71, he was buried in Weſtminſter-Abbey. Henry Lord Hunſdon, his great grandſon, was created Earl of Dover 8 March 1627-8 (m).

But Henry the firſt Lord Hunſdon very early parted with this Maner and eſtate, though he kept the neighbouring one of Raley. For, Richard Lord Riche had the Maner of Rochford in 1555, and 1558 [H]: and reſided at Rochford-hall, where he dyed 12 June 1566, holding that Maner, then valued at 90l. 11s. yearly; and the ſame lands and demeſnes as lady Mary Carey, or Stafford, enjoyed at the time of her deceaſe, as ſet down above: all which premiſſes the Lord Rich held of Henry Lord Hunſdon, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (n).——Robert Lord Riche, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 27 February 1580-1 (o). As did his ſon ——Robert, created Earl of Warwick 6 Auguſt 1618: and his deſcendents——Robert,——Robert, and——Charles, ſucceſſively Earls of Warwick. [For a more particular account of this noble Family, ſee the other Volume, p. 101. 418.]

After the death of Charles, the laſt Earl, in 1673, and of his Lady in 1678, the great Eſtates of the Warwick Family being divided among the coheirs, the Maners of Rochford, Hadley-caſtle, Leigh, Prittlewell, Aſſingdon, Packleſham and Weſt-hall, were allotted to

Sir Henry St. John, Bart. who had married Mary, niece to Charles the laſt Earl of Warwick; and was created 2 July 1716, Baron of Batterſea, and Viſcount St. John. His eldeſt ſon ——Henry, created Viſcount Bolingbroke, July 1712, ſold this eſtate to or CRISTELL-HALL, ſtands about a mile weſt from this Church.

Sir Richard Child, afterwards Earl Tilney; and it is now in his ſon ——John Earl Tilney.

GRESTED

All we find concerning this eſtate, is, That Roger Darcie, who dyed 3 September 1508, held the maner of Greſted hall, with appertenances, of the Earl of Ormond, as of his maner of Rochford (p). [See under Canewdon, and in the other Volume, p. 24. 28.]

William Harrys, in 1556, held this maner of Criſtell-hall of the Lord Riche, as of his Maner or Honor of Raylegh, by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee (q).

DOGETT, or DOCCET, another reputed Maner here, took its name from an ancient Family.

In 1305, Robert Dogett and Alice his wife held here, 1 meſſuage, and 26 acres of arable, purchaſed by Beatrix Dogett; and 60 acres purchaſed by John Rocheford; holden of the King, as of the Honor of Reylie, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. And John de Rocheford held 20 acres, of the ſame Honor, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (r). We find mention of Great and Little Doggett.

COMBES is alſo mentioned as another Maner near Rochford; and belonged to Mary Carey above-mentioned.

Doggetts, Combes, Upwicke, and other parcels, belonged to Robert Earl of Warwick, in 1619, as appears by the Inquiſition then taken.

Mr. John White; John Renneſon; Daniel Dale; William Watts; Thomas Warner; Arthur Tooke &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

AN HOSPITAL,

or Alms-houſes of brick, for ſix poor People, ſtand pleaſantly at the lower end of this Town. They were built by Robert Rich, the firſt Earl of Warwick of that family; who, in his will dated 15th September 1617, and proved 8 May 1620, ſets forth, That, according to the intention of his father and grandfather, he had built a Manſion and a place convenient for certain poor Alſmen and poor people for ever; viz. Six poor people, of which five ſhall be aged poor lame or impotent, and ſuch as have lived painfully and orderly, and ſhall by age, or otherwiſe by the hand of God, become unable to live of themſelves: and the ſixth to be an ancient poor woman, fitt and able to attend and keep the others as well in ſickneſs as in health. He wills that ſixty pounds per annum be diſtributed and diſpoſed to the ſaid Almſmen and poor people in manner following; viz. To each of them three ſhillings and four pence every week; and twenty ſhillings and eight pence yearly againſt Chriſtmaſs upon a Gown for their wearing. And he further wills, that every one of the ſaid Almſmen and poor people ſhall every year for ever have two good loads of wood out of

is a whimſical Cuſtom in this pariſh, of which the origin is unknown.

It is kept at King's-hill about half a mile north-eaſt of this Church, in the yard of a Houſe once belonging to . . . Crips, Gent. and afterward to Robert Hackſhaw, of London, merchant; and to Mr. John Buckle. Here the Tenants kneel, and do their homage. The time is, the Wedneſday morning next after Michaelmaſs-day, upon the firſt cock-crowing; without any kind of light but ſuch as the heavens will afford. The Steward of the Court calleth all ſuch as are bound to appear with as low a voice as poſſible, giving no notice when he goeth to execute his office; howſoever he that gives not an anſwer is deeply amerced. They are all to whiſper to each other. Nor have they any pen and ink, but ſupply that office with a Coal; and he that owes ſuit and ſervice thereto, and appears not, forfeits to the Lord double his rent every hour he is abſent. A tenant of this maner forfeited, not long ago, his land for non-attendance; but was reſtored to it, the lord only taking a fine. The Court is called Lawleſs, becauſe held at an unlawful or Lawleſs Hour, or quia dicta ſine lege: the Title of it runs in the Court-rolls to this day according to the form below (s) [I]. There is a tradition, that this ſervile attendance was impoſed at firſt upon certain tenants of divers maners hereabouts for conſpiring in this place at ſuch an unſeaſonable time to raiſe a commotion (t). This Court belongs to Robert Briſtow, Eſq;

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a large ſtately fabrick, about half a mile from the Town, near the Hall; It has north and ſouth aiſles, and the Chancel a north Chapel, leaded; all the reſt of the Church and the Chancel tiled. At the weſt end is a lofty Tower with one Bell. The Tower or Steeple is ſaid to have been built by Lord Riche, but Boteler's Arms being upon the Stones, give reaſon to believe that the Family of Ormond erected it: Moſt likely, the Lord Riche repaired it, and added to its hight.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

In 1219 a Vicarage was inſtituted here, but remained happily ſo a very little time; and hath ever ſince been a very good Rectory.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 940 l.

2. RALEY

is the next conſiderable Town in this Hundred, and formerly was the moſt conſiderable, being the Head of a great Honor or Barony: to which belonged great privileges.

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Regeneia, Ragheleia, Ragley and Ragleigh, Ralegh, Raylee, Raylegh, Raylil.

It ſeems to be derived from the two Saxon words Raa, a roe-buck, or wild goat; and ley, paſture.

This Town is 35 miles from London, and conſiſts of a handſom wide ſtreet; but is grown much ruinous and decayed. The Market is on Saturdays [K], and here is a Fair on Trinity monday.

It is one of the fifty five Lordſhips which Suene had in this County at the time of the general Survey [L]. He held it then in demeſne, together with another Maner, which did belong to a Freeman in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. Suene had built a Caſtle here [M].

This Suene was ſettled in England before the Conqueſt, (his father having the maner of Eaſtwood,) and is by ſome called a Saxon, but ſeems to me by the name to have been of the Daniſh breed; and retaining ſome of the natural antipathy that had prevailed between the ancient Saxon inhabitants and the Daniſh invaders, He therefore readily joined the Norman invader William the Conqueror, who either confirmed him in the poſſeſſion of his lands, or reſtored them to him. This lordſhip is reaſonably ſuppoſed to have been part of thoſe lands, becauſe no former poſſeſſor is mentioned in Domeſday-book, as is univerſally done. Suene's father was named Robert, [ſee above, p. 155, note H,] and his grandfather Wimarc.——Henry de Eſſex ſucceeded him. He is called his ſon and heir; but it is more probable that ——Robert de Eſſex was his ſon, and Henry his grandſon. However, this Henry being hereditary Standard-bearer to K. Henry II. in an expedition made by that King into Wales about the year 1163, this man behaved himſelf ſo unworthily; that throwing down the Standard royal, and running away, the Welſhmen were thereby animated, and the Engliſh ſo diſcouraged, through a ſudden apprehenſion of the King's being ſlain, that the whole army preſently fell into confuſion, and was utterly routed. For which high miſdemeanor being charged with treaſon by Robert de Montford, and in a ſolemn tryal by battle clearly vanquiſhed, he ought to have ſuffered death by the law; but the King ſpared his life, and cauſed him to be ſhorn a Monk, in the Abbey of Reading, the combat having been performed in that town. His mother's name was Cecily; and by his wife Alice, ſiſter to Alberic de Vere the firſt Earl of Oxford, he had two ſons, Henry, and Hugh (u).

This moſt valuable inheritance being thus forfeited through Henry de Eſſex's cowardiſe, came to the Crown.

It was an Honor, that is a more noble Seigniory or Lordſhip on which other Lordſhips and Maners depended by performance of ſeveral cuſtoms and ſervices. For an explanation of that word, and an account of the chief Honors in England, ſee in the other Volume, p. 106. note [D].

What a great number of Knights Fees depended upon this Honor and Lordſhip, or were held of it, appears by the Liſt of them below [N], given in about the year 1210; 12 and 13 of K. John.

By an inqueſt or extent taken of this Honor, and of the Maners of Reyleigh and Eſtwood in 1340, it was found, That there were belonging to this Honor divers Frank Pledges holden in ſeveral places, and a certain Court kept at Reyleigh from month to month, belonging to the ſaid Honor. The following Knights Fees belonged to this Honor: The heirs of Ralph Perot held half of the maner of Hakewell by the ſervice of one knight's fee. Edward St. John held the maner of Prittlewell, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. John de Nevill held lands and tenements in Little-Wakering, by one knight's fee. Petronilla de Banyſted held in Great-Stambridge, lands and tenements, by one knight's fee. William de Bohun Earl of Northampton held the maner of Rochford, by one knight's fee and a half. This account ſhews where the lands lye that held of the Barony of Rayleigh. And, by the very great Extent of them, and the large Number of Vaſſals and Dependents belonging thereto, one may judge of the great Power which the ancient Barons had; ſuch indeed as, when united, was able to make head againſt the Crown.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, as abovementioned, this Lordſhip remained in the Crown till K. Henry III. granted it to Hubert de Burgh Lord Chief Juſtice, whom he created Earl of Kent: The Knights Fees given him as belonging to this Honor, were, Hadlee, Watlee, Mereſle, Kenewode, Oſwode, Wichford, and Purle; and the Hundred of Rochford: The Maner of Haganet, with the conſtablery and knights fees thereof. He fell into the King's diſpleaſure, and was ſtript of the greateſt part of his eſtate: However, the reverſion of this was in his eldeſt ſon.

After his death, which happened in 1243, Margaret, his widow [O], Counteſs of Kent, held the maner of Reyle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and the Hundred of Rochford, and maner of Eſtwood. She dyed in 1260, without heir of her body [P], and was ſucceeded in the Hundreds of Rochford, and in the maners of Reyle and Eſtwood, by her huſband Hubert's eldeſt ſon——John de Burgh (w). He ſometimes bears the title of Earl of Kent (x). In 1274, he granted to K. Edward I. in fee, the Maners of Raleigh, and Eſtwode, with the Hundred of Rochford, in Eſſex; the maners of Whateley in Nottinghamſhire; Le Weylond (Nayland) in the Counties of Eſſex and Suffolk; Cauſton in Norfolk; Soham in Cambridgeſhire; Camel and Kingeſbury, with the Hundred, in Somerſetſhire; Wynford in Dorſetſhire; Banſted in Surrey, except 100*s.* worth of land given to Anſelm de Gyſe; and Crumpton in Warwickſhire. In lieu of theſe Lordſhips, the King granted him for term of life, the Cuſtody of the Tower of London, and of the Caſtle of Colcheſter, and Hundred of Tendring. A Fine paſſed between the King, plaintiff, and John de Burgh ſen. deforc' of the Maners of Eſtwood and Reley, and the Hundred of Rochford, the right of the King; who, in the room of them, releaſed him from a debt of 1200*l.* and gave him, beſides what is mentioned above, the maner of Middleton in Kent (y). By Hawiſe, daughter and heir of William de Lanvally, he had John, who dyed in 1280; without iſſue male, leaving only two daughters; Hawiſe married to Robert de Grelle, and Devorgill to Robert Lord Fitz-Walter. Thus this Lordſhip and Maner came again to the Crown.

Out of the great MANER OF RALEY there ſeem to have been erected, about this time, the Three other Maners of HARBERGES, WHATLEYS, and DOWN-HALL.

The Maner of RALEY

continued in the Crown, till 1340, when K. Edward III. granted the maners of Eſtwood, and Reyleigh, with the Honor of Reylegh, and Hundred of Rochford, to William de Bohun Earl of Northampton, and the heirs Male of his body: He dyed 16 September 1360, leaving one only ſon——Humfrey, Earl of Eſſex, Hereford, and Northampton, and Conſtable of England, who dyed 15 January 1372; As he left only daughters, the eſtate devolved to the Crown again (z). For a more particular account of this noble Family of Bohun, ſee in the other Volume, p. 62. 83. 451, 452.

In 1380, K. Richard II. granted to Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life, the Honor, Fee, Fair, and Market of Raleigh, with the profits of the herbage of Raleigh Park, and the maner of Eſtwood. He dyed poſſeſſed of them 23 April 1400. But the ſame King, in 1390, had granted the reverſion of them to Edmund Plantagenet, or de Langley, Duke of

The Maner of HARBERGES

Lies toward Rawreth: The manſion houſe is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

It took its name from the ancient owners, the Harberge, or Haverburgh family, and is ſometimes called Harberts.

In 1284, William, Son of Warine, and William de Haverburgh, held one fee of the King, in capite, in the town of Reylegh, of his Honor or Barony of Reylegh (g). William de Hareburgh, who married Helen, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir John Hardel, held here, in 1304, of the King, as of his Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of 4d. per ann. to the King's hidage, one capital meſſuage, forty acres of arable, and two of meadow;——Adam was his ſon and heir. He, and Iſolda de Belhous, in 1340 held lands and tenements in Releigh by the ſervice of one knight's fee of the Honor of Reyleigh (h). This Adam Haverberge, at the time of his deceaſe in 1372, held one meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of wood, and 3*s.* 4*d.* rent in Reylegh, of the King as of his Honor of Reylegh, by the ſervice of three parts of a knight's fee; and they were parcel of lands called Lieftane-Stone Fee, that owed ſuit at the Hundred Court; John was his ſon (i).

John Baud Eſq; who dyed in 1422, held this meſſuage of Haverberge, with the ſame quantity of land, but the rent was only 2s. 3d. He

He had alſo Beches in Raureth, lands in Hokkeley, South-Fambridge, and Aſſyndon, South-Church, Prittlewell, and Mark-hall in Latton.——William, his ſon and heir, was married to Elizabeth, daughter of William Rokeſburgh of Stanſted-Abbots (k).

Afterwards, lands in Rawreth and Hockley were annexed to this Maner, which increaſed the number of acres. For

Thomas Lawrence of Tolleſhunt Knights, who dyed 20 December 1551, held the Maner of Harbards in Rayleigh, Rawreth, and Great-Hockley, of the Honor of Raylegh, conſiſting of one meſſuage, one cottage, 300 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 40 of wood, and 4*s.* 4*d.* rent.——John was his ſon (l). [See the other Volume, p. 204.]

John Wincoll Eſq; who dyed 24 Decemb. 1576, held the maner of Harberts, lately Thomas Lawrence's, of the Lord Hunſdon of his Honor of Railegh; He had alſo Twinſted maner. [See the other Volume, p. 271.]——Iſaac was his ſon and heir (m).

Thomas White, D. D. had it in 1623.

Of Thomas Clutterbuck Eſq; Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. purchaſed this maner 29 May 1719.

The Maner of WHATLEY.

The manſion houſe of this ſtands about half a mile north-weſt from the Church.

It is now divided into Great Whatley, which is about 86 l. a year, and Little Whatley about 50 l.

This maner belonged to John de Burgh, above-mentioned. He granted it to Sir John Hardel, who gave it in free marriage, with his daughter Alice, to William Fitz-Warin, then Valectus, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, to K. Edward I. [R].

Sir John Hardel married the Lady Alice Beaumont, and had by her two daughters, Alice and Helen; Helen was married to William de Hareburgh, as we have ſeen; Alice was wife of William Fitz-Warine, who had by her Iſolda and Alice, co-heirs. Alice was wife of Sir John Dagworth, and had Nicolas, who dyed without iſſue; Iſolda, the eldeſt daughter, was wife of Sir John Belhous of Stanway. They had two ſons, Sir Thomas Belhous, who dyed without iſſue; and ——John. This latter, by Alice Baynard his wife had—Sir Thomas, his ſon and heir, and—Iſolda.

Sir Thomas married Alice daughter of John Berners, but dyed in 1375; as did his daughter Joane ſhortly after.

Iſolda, heireſs to her brother, became the wife of

John Caſtelayn Eſq; They had one daughter

Margaret, who was married to Robert Knivet Eſq; ſecond ſon of Sir John Knivet, Lord Chancellor. He held this maner of Whatelegh in the town of Reylegh of the Abbot of St. John's in Colcheſter [S]: alſo that of Dounhall: and 20 acres of arable, and 12 of wood in Thunderſley of Richard Duke of York, by the ſervice of finding one bayliff to ſerve ſummons and attachments for the Court of the Honor of Reylegh: and departing this life in 1419, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Knivet Eſq; then 24 years old (n). He married, firſt, Elianor daughter of John Doreward; and afterwards . . . . a daughter of . . . Flemingles. By the firſt he had John; and by the ſecond Robert, who dyed without iſſue; and Margaret wife of . . . Tey. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1458, he held this maner of Wetle, and that of Dounhall, and the reſt as above.——John, his eldeſt ſon and heir (o) held alſo this maner of Wheteley of the Abbot of St. John's in Colcheſter; that of Downhalle of the King as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the ſervice of 40 d. per annum; &c. and dyed in 1480 (p). He married . . . daughter of . . . Baynard and had by her——Thomas Knivet Eſq; his only ſon, who, by Elizabeth ſecond daughter and coheir of William Lunsford, had, Edward; and two daughters, Thomaſine, married to Sir William Clopton of Suffolk; and Margaret, to Thomas Roydon, whoſe only daughter, Elizabeth, became wife of John, ſon and heir of the ſaid Sir William Clopton. —— Edward Knivet Eſq; ſucceeded his father in this maner of Whetley, and dyed 4 February 1500. He married Catharine, ſiſter to Henry Lord Marney of Layer Marney, by whom he left Elizabeth his daughter and heir, eleven years old. She held the maner of Whatley, with appertenances, of the Abbot of St. John's Colcheſter, and was married to Sir John Rainsford, but ſhe dyed 4 February 1507, without iſſue:

Elizabeth Clopton, aged 18 years; Thomaſine Clopton, aged 40 years; and Catharine Roydon 15, were her next heirs (q). But Catharine Knivet, mother of the ſaid Lady Rainsford, remarried, after her huſband Edward Knivet's deceaſe, to Thomas Bonham, and John Barnabee, Eſquires, of Stanway, held this eſtate till her deceaſe 28 June, 1535, when the three coheireſſes above-mentioned ſucceeded (r).

Thomaſine aboveſaid was ſecond wife of Sir William Clopton;——William Clopton Eſq; dyed 17 Auguſt 1562, poſſeſſed of the maners of Whetlie, and Downe-hall, leaving his ſon and

This eſtate was afterwards in Antony Bramſton Eſq; who ſold it to

Thomas Cheke Eſq; and his grandaughter,——Anne Lady Tipping, ſold it again, 14 March 1718, to Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart.

The Maner of Down-hall lies, as well as Hardeberges, towards Rawreth; and the manſion houſe is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

It doth not appear at what time This was ſevered from the capital Maner; nor by whom; whether by William de Bohun; or John de Burgh; or by a grant from the Crown. 'Tis moſt probable that it was done by John de Burgh, becauſe he erected here the foregoing Maner of Whatley, which he granted to Sir John Hardel.

This was at firſt, as well as that, in the Belhous family. Sir Thomas Belhous, who dyed in 1375, had rents and tenements in this pariſh, which he held of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Reyley, as parcel of the maner of Dounehalle; the whole maner being holden of the King, as of the Honor aforeſaid, by knight's ſervice.——Joane, his daughter and heir, was then only three years old (t): and ſurvived him but a little while.

Iſolda, his ſiſter and heir, had by John Caſtelayn Eſq; an only daughter

Margaret, who brought this eſtate to her huſband Robert Knivet Eſq; together with Whatley-hall. He held it, in 1419, of Richard Duke of York, as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (u). And by Thomaſine Knivet it came into the Clopton Family. In 1514, there was a Fine between Thomas Alen, plaintiff, and John Clopton, and Elizabeth his wife, deforc' of the Maner of Down-Hall in Reyly, Hadleigh, and Thunderſley; when it was agreed, that John Haſtings Eſq; ſhould hold this maner for life; the reverſion to the ſaid Elizabeth, and her heirs (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 190, 191.]

Some years ago it belonged to Mr. Downes, an Attorney in London, of whom it was purchaſed, 22 March 1719, by

Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. [See above, p. 4.]

Rayley-Castle

is a famous piece of antiquity, erected by Suene before the Conqueſt, as appears from Domeſday-book. It ſtands at the entrance into the Town from London; and is partly natural, and partly artificial. The top of it is very lofty, and yields an agreeable proſpect all over the country. It is ſurrounded with a deep Ditch; and all of earth, as Caſtles were in the times of the Saxons and Danes. If there was any fabrick of ſtone, with a mixture of brick, on the top of it, all is gone. It comprehends ſome acres; and belongs to Cheſter-Moore Hall Eſq;

A large Park belonged to this Caſtle and Honor: and the Park-keeper had a very good Salary.

The Park, and lands diſparked, and a capital meſſuage called The Great Lodge, were held by Edward Bury, who dyed in February 1583.——Robert Strangman was his heir.——Bradford called Gilbert, alias Bury, Gent. had licenſe, 2 May 1590, to alienate this eſtate to Edward Rawlins, and Thomas Rawlins (x).

The Honor of Rayley had its peculiar Stewards, that were perſons of note.

In 1285, William Fitz-Warin held 24 acres here, by the ſerjancy of finding a man to keep the Court of the maner of Reylegh (y). In 1370, Geffrey de la Rokele was Steward of the Honor of Rayleigh and Hundred of Rochford. In 1373, Geffrey de Derſham was Steward of this Honor, and of all the King's lands within the Hundred of Rochford (z).

Some lands were holden by the following Tenure, That the owners provided a Bayliff, to attend at the Court of this Honor to ſerve ſummons, attachments, and executions, &c.

William Leyre, who dyed in 1366, held of the King in capite as of his Honor of Reyle, one meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, and ſix of wood in Reilegh, for the term of his life, jointly with John ſon of John de Belhouſe deceaſed, by the ſervice of finding one Bayliff to ſerve all executions in the Court of Reileigh: and 40 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 3 of wood, and 5 s. 6 d. ob. rent, of the King, by the 16th part of a knight's fee, for which he paid ſuit every three weeks at Rochford Hundred Court; alſo 1 meſſuage, 180 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 15 s. 9 d. ob. rent, by the ſervice of three pence ſcutage, when levied in England; and 30 acres of the Abbot of Colcheſter and Robert de Teye, by the ſervice of 6 s. 4 d. per ann.——Thomas, ſon of John de Belhous, was his next heir (a).

Robert Knyvet Eſq; who enjoyed Whatelegh and Down-Hall, held 20 acres of arable and 12 of wood in Thunderſley, as juſt mentioned above, by the ſervice of finding a Bailiff to ſerve ſummons and attachments at the Court of this Honor (b).

A Lawleſs-Court was anciently kept here, and divided into Great and Little Lawleſs Court: the Quit-rents of which appear, by the account of George Dearſlie in 1647, to have been thus.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a ſtately building on a riſing ground at the upper end of the Town. It conſiſts of a body and two aiſles, the length both of Church and Chancel. The body of the Church and Chancel is tyled, the aiſles leaded. At the weſt end there is a lofty Tower, with a Spire ſhingled, and a ring of 5 large Bells. The South Chapel of the Chancel is repaired by the owner of the Caſtle [T].

This Rectory being appendent to the capital Maner, was given by Robert de Eſſex, ſon of Suene, to the Priory of Prittlewell of his foundation; in whoſe gift it continued till the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries. Then it coming to the Crown, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Henry Lord Hunſdon, who preſented in 1593. His younger ſon Henry conveyed it with the Maner, in 1621, to Robert Riche Earl of Warwick. From him it paſſed to his ſucceſſors Earls of Warwick: and then to one of the coheirs, Daniel Earl of Nottingham; who ſold both Maner and Advowſon to Robert Briſtow Eſq;

Here was a Chantry, of which we have this account in the Certificate of Chantries: 'Lands 'and Tenements there put in feoffment by 'divers and ſundry perſons to find a Prieſt to 'ſing maſſe and to help ſerve the Cure there, 'and to teach a Free-ſchool, and to inſtruct 'yowth; which ſaid Town of Raileigh ys a 'very great and populous Town, having in it 'about the number of three hundred houſeling 'People, and far from the Church: Yerely 'valew 10 l. 12 s. 2 d. ob.'

There was a Chapel in this Pariſh, but where I find not; by K. Edward the Sixth's Grant of the lands belonging thereto, it ſeems to have been alſo for the uſe of the Chantry Prieſt: The contents of the Grant were, The ſite of the Chapel of Raleigh; four acres of arable and paſture in Eſtwood belonging to that Chantry; meſſuages and lands called Potters, alias PottersÁroghouſe, Holmans, Bromſons, Emeris-mead, Yongs, Mountlovers, Gromvynes-grove, and other meſſuages, with appertenances. K. Edward VI. granted them in 1549 to Edward Bury, and his heirs (e).

HADLEY

lies between Raley and the Thames.

The name ſeems to be derived from the Saxon words, head, high, raiſed, and leẏ paſture.

It hath borne the name of Hadley ad Caſtrum, or Hadley-Caſtle, ever ſince the reign of K. Henry III. when Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, with the King's leave [U], built a Caſtle here. The ruins of it ſtill extant ſhew its ancient grandeur. It is a little mile ſouth from the Church, and about three quarters of a mile from the road, facing the Channel, or Canvey iſland. As it is ſituated on the brow of a ſteep Hill, there is from thence a delightful proſpect a-croſs the Thames into Kent. It is built of ſtone, almoſt of an oval form: The entrance is at the north-weſt corner, between two Towers; and there are alſo two Towers at the ſouth-eaſt and north-eaſt corners, which are embattled, and have loop-holes on the ſides. The walls in the bottom of the Towers are nine feet thick, and the reſt five feet. And, on the north and ſouth ſides, the Walls are ſtrengthened with buttreſſes. The cement, or mortar, which is almoſt as hard as the ſtones themſelves, hath in it a mixture of ſhells of Sea-fiſh &c. At the entrance, the earth lying very high near the Towers, a very deep ditch is cut behind them, which runs along the north ſide of the Caſtle. The ruins are now greatly over-grown with buſhes (f).

There was a Park belonging to this Caſtle, or elſe to Hadley-bury, which lyes near. And lands were held by the Serjeancy of keeping up the fences and lodges of this Caſtle, as well as thoſe of Reyle and Thunderſle Caſtles (g).

As Hadley is not mentioned in Domeſday-book, nor in the Red Book of the Exchequer, it was moſt probably comprehended in Raley; and then Raley pariſh extended to the Ray or Water of Hadley.

The large Park belonging to the Honor of Raley might take up the greateſt part of what is now Hadley, except the Foreſt and Waſte Ground that belonged thereto.

Hadley going along with the Maner and Honor of Raley, which, as we have ſeen above, belonged to Suene; his grandſon Henry de Eſſex forfeited both to the Crown, through his cowardiſe.

K. Henry granted it with Raley, and we preſume as a part of it, to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent: who built the Caſtle here. From that time it is mentioned in records as the Caſtle and Park of Hadley, and not for a while as a Maner.

Upon Hubert's diſgrace, in 1232, this eſtate was again ſeized by the Crown: and granted at different times to the greateſt Perſons.

By an Inqueſt taken, in 1250, of what lands and tenements appertained to the Caſtle of Hadleigh, it was found, that there were belonging to this Caſtle 140 acres of arable ground; and paſture for 180 ſheep; and a water-mill (h).

In 1268, K. Henry III. committed the government of this Caſtle to Richard de Thany (i). [Concerning this very conſiderable Family of Tany, or Thany, ſee above, p. 179, and in the other Volume, p. 79. 487.]

Hugh le Parker of this pariſh held four ſhillings rent here, in 1284, by the Serjeancy of keeping the Park of Haddelegh (k) [W].

In 1299, K. Edward I. aſſigned to his Queen Margaret the Caſtle, village, and Park of Hadlegh, with appertenances, then valued at 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. (l).

In 1327, Roger de Eſtwyke, and Alice his wife had 12 acres of land in this pariſh, together with the Cuſtody of the Park, of the inheritance of the ſaid Alice, and of the gift of Geffrey de Pertico and Maud his wife, formerly lords of the Caſtle and village of Hadley: Which land and cuſtody were holden of the King as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of keeping the Park aforeſaid (m).

Albrey de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 23 April 1400, held for his life, of the gift of K. Richard II. the Caſtle and Maner of Hadlye, with appertenances, and a water-mill, in capite; reverſion of the ſame to the King and his heirs (n).

Edmund Plantagenet, Duke of York, had the premiſſes at the time of his deceaſe 1 Auguſt 1402, but only for life (o).

In 1452, K. Henry VI. granted to his uterine brother Edmund of Hadham, Earl of Richmond, the Caſtle, and Lordſhip, or Maner, of Hadley, with all letes, courts, rents, ſervices, mills, fiſheries, and other appertenances whatſoever; the Advowſon of the Church; and a Market here on Wedneſday in every week; and the return of all writs and precepts, and executions on the ſame (p).

After that, They remained in the Crown, till K. Henry VIII. granted them in 1539, to the Lady Anne of Cleve, his forſaken Queen, for her maintenance (q).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. gave the Maner and Park of Hadleigh ad Caſtrum; and the farm there called Hadleigh, with a ſeparate Fiſhery, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Richard Lord Riche, and his heirs; To hold by the 40th part of a knight's fee. And, in 1553, he got from the ſame King the following Marſhes

From him they paſſed to his noble Deſcendents the Earls of Warwick, as Rochford, Raley, Lees Priory &c. [See above, p. 275. and in the other Volume, p. 101, 102. 418, 419.]

Upon the partition of the Warwick eſtates between the ſix coheirs, This fell to the ſhare of Henry St. John, Eſq; afterwards a Baronet, and Viſcount St. John. See under Rochford.

His eldeſt ſon——Henry, Viſcount Bolingbroke, ſold this eſtate to

Sir Francis St. John, of Longthorp in Northamptonſhire Bart. whoſe daughter and coheir, Mary, brought it in marriage to her huſband

Sir John Bernard, of Brampton in Huntingdonſhire Bart. He was ſucceeded by his ſon ——Sir Robert Bernard, Bart. Knight of the Shire for the County of Huntingdon.

Here formerly reſided a Family of good account, ſurnamed Strangman. They had lands in this pariſh, and maners at Pagleſham, Hawkſwell, and other parts of this County. William, the firſt that we meet with, lived in the reign of K. Edward III. His ſucceſſors were——William, who dyed in 1410.—Richard in 1480.—William, married Alice, daughter and heir of Thomas Hooe, and had by her——John, who by . . . . Fauntby, his wife, had——John, that married . . . daughter and heir of . . . Sandford, and had by her three ſons, John; Thomas, of Rayley; and Edward: and Anne wife of Henry Boad. Edward had a ſon Francis, who dyed 6 Auguſt 1557 [X], leaving 6 daughters, Mary wife of John Cooke; Jane wife of John Blyatt; Philippa wife of Lewis Whetnall; Joane wife of John Bode; Margaret, of John Biggen; and Alice, of John Pilborowe (s).——John Strangman Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, by Mary his wife, daughter and heir of Robert Ingow, left, William; John; and three daughters.——William Strangman Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married, firſt, . . . daughter of Sir William Kempe; ſecondly, Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Barnardiſton. By the former he had only Thomaſine; and by the latter he had Bartholomew; James: Anne, wife of William Latham; and Martha, wife of George Wiſeman of Felſted. He dyed 8 Decemb. 1573, leaving——Bartholomew his ſon and heir, who dyed in 1580, and was ſucceeded by Robert, and James. This James was a great Collector of Antiquities for this County, to whoſe diligence and ſagacity are owing many diſcoveries mentioned in this Work. There was a Volume of his writing depoſited in the Cottonian Library, relating chiefly to Monaſteries [Y].

Mr. Reginald Heber; John Armſtrong; and the heirs of the late Mr. John Spurdan, &c. have alſo lands here.

The Church, dedicated to St. James, is of one pace with the Chancel; tyled. The eaſt end of the Chancel is ſemicircular, as that of Copford. In a ſpire ſhingled is one Bell.

This Rectory was all along in the gift of the Crown, till K. Edward VI. granted it to Richard Lord Riche; from whom it deſcended to his poſterity: But hath been ſold, and is now in unknown hands.

4. LEE.

This pariſh is eaſt of Hadley, and the Town lyes in a bottom near the Thames.

It is otherwiſe written in records, Lega, Legra, Legh, Leighe, Lighe, Lye, Lygh: and is derived from the Saxon leaᵹ, or leah, otherwiſe leᵹh, and leẏ, ſignifying The Paſture, or The Place, by way of eminence.

If it was at any time part of Raley, it was parted from it before the Conqueſt, and poſſeſſed by one Freeman: At the time of the Survey it was held by Ranulph Piperell, or Peverell [Z].

Here is but one Maner.

The manſion-houſe, or Hall, ſtands near the Church on the top of the Hill, whence is a fine proſpect of the Channel; the Town lies below.

Except the entry in Domeſday-book, we find nothing upon record concerning this Place till the reign of K. Edward II. and then it was in Apton, of Apton-hall in Canewdon.

In 1316, there was a Fine between Ralph de Cokthorp, Parſon of the Church de la Leghe, and Adam Sar, plaintiffs, and John de Apton of Legh, deforc' of the Maner of de la Legh, and of the Advowſon of the Church of this pariſh (t). De Cokthorp, and Sar, I preſume were truſtees acting for the family of Apeton. John de Arpeton preſented to this Church, as Lord of Lega, in 1326. 1329. and 1331 (u). In the old Regiſter of Biſhop Baudoke, he is ſtyled de Dippetone. Of the ſame John de Apetone, lord of the maner de la Legh, John Haddock of this place, who dyed in 1327, held 12 acres with one meſſuage, and a certain marſh in common with his partners, by the ſervice of 2 s. ob. per ann. and ſuit at the court of the maner aforeſaid (w).

From the year 1337 to 1673, it appears to have been in the ſame hands as the Maner of Rochford; namely, in the Families of Rochford, Bohun, Boteler, Bullen or Boleyn, and Riche.

Robert Rochford, at the time of his deceaſe in 1337, held jointly with Iſolda, daughter of William Fitz-Warin, the maner of la Legh, and the Advowſon of the Church, of Sir John de Peyton and Elianor his wife, by the ſervice of 6 lb. of ſilver per ann.——Sir Thomas Rochford, his ſon and heir, dyed without iſſue, and the eſtate came to the Crown (x).

K. Edward III. in 1340, granted this Maner, with that of Rochford &c. to

William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton; He departed this life in 1360.——Humfrey his ſon and heir, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton, Baron of Brecknock, and High Conſtable of England, at the time of his deceaſe 17 January 1372, had the reverſion of this Maner of Lye, which Laurence Ware held of him for the term of his life (y). By Joane his wife, daughter of Richard Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, he left two Daughters, coheirs, Elianor, married to Thomas of Woodſtock ſixth ſon of K. Edward III. Earl of Buckingham, and Duke of Glouceſter; and Mary, to Henry Earl of Derby, ſon of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter, afterwards K. Henry IV. What was the ſhare of Thomas of Woodſtock, fell to the crown upon his tragical end.

Joane Counteſs of Hereford, and Northampton, widow of Humfrey de Bohun aboveſaid, married to her ſecond huſband William de Beauchamp Lord Bergavenny; and ſurviving him, married to her third huſband James Earl of Ormond, whom ſhe outlived, and had by him three ſons, James, John, and Thomas. She dyed 7 April 1434. Her eldeſt ſon, James Boteler, 5th Earl of Ormond, preſented to this Living in 1451, having been created Earl of Wiltſhire 8 July 1449. But being beheaded, 1 May 1461, on account of his attachment to the Houſe of Lancaſter; This Eſtate was confiſcated to the Crown.

K. Edward IV. granted it to Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet, his ſon-in-law, whom his Queen had by Sir John Grey her firſt huſband; and he preſented to this Rectory in 1480.

Sir Thomas Boteler, of Ormond, brother to James, petitioned K. Richard III. in 1484, for reſtitution of the Maners called de Ly alias de la Legh, Rochford, Foulneſs, and Packleſham; but it doth not appear that they were granted him. Upon the acceſſion of K. Henry VII. he was reſtored to his Eſtates, and to the title of Earl of Ormond. He left only two Daughters coheirs, Anne wife of Sir James St. Leger, and

Margaret, wife of Sir William Bullen of Blickling in Norfolk; who had by her Sir Thomas Bullen, created Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk, he had George his ſon, Viſcount Rochford, and two daughters, Anne, Queen to K. Henry VIII. and

Mary, who on the beheading her brother and ſiſter became ſole Heir to her father. She was firſt married to William Carey of Devonſhire Eſq; by whom ſhe had Henry her ſon and heir, afterward Lord Hunſdon. Her ſecond huſband was Sir William Stafford. This Family preſented ſeveral times to the Rectory (z). [See above under Rochford.]

Henry Lord Hunſdon alienated this eſtate, as well as Rochford, to Richard Lord Riche; who, at the time of his deceaſe 12 June 1566, held the maner of Lighe, alias Lighe-Hall, and the Advowſon of the Church (a). It continued in his poſterity the Earls of Warwick; and, upon the partition of their eſtates, it came to

Henry St. John, Eſq; afterwards Lord Batterſea. Of his ſon,——Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke, it was purchaſed by

Francis St. John Eſq; from whom it deſcended, as Hadley, to —— Sir Francis St. John Bart. His daughter and coheir Mary was married to

Sir John Bernard, Bart. who had this eſtate, and Hadley, in her right; in which he was ſucceeded by his ſon

Sir Robert Bernard, Bart.

A maner, or meſſuage, in this pariſh, called Lieth and Triggs, with lands holden of the maner of Leighe-hall, belonged to William Harrys Eſq; in 1556. He held alſo here, a wood and paſture called Burned-oke, and divers lands called Somers, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of South-Church-hall (b).

And John Cock held here, in 1574, lands called Beltons, Jennett Miſters, and other meſſuages and lands, of the maners of Leigh, and Chalkwell (c).

Mr. William Johnſon; Robert Auſtin; David Harwich; Iſaac Rolfe; Wilmer Willet; John Spurgeon, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Charities.

Captain Lawrence Moyer of Milton-Shore in Prittlewell, ſon of James Moyer of the ſame place, in commemoration of a deliverance from Shipwreck in Leigh Road, his ſhip being driven on the flats and ſands, gave 100 l. to pay Five pounds per ann. for ever to the Town of Leigh; viz. to Twenty poor ſeamens widows on Auguſt 6, on which day a Sermon is preached and 20 s. paid for it. This 100 l. was left to the Maſters of the Trinity-Houſe, to ſee it paid, but on their refuſal his deſcendents ſee it conſtantly paid.

Mr. James Moyer, who lies buried in this Church, gave fifty pounds to the Poor of this pariſh.

Sir Samuel Moyer, Bart. erected a Free-ſchool in this Town for inſtructing Children in the Principles of the Chriſtian Religion.

Here is a Fair on the ſecond Tueſday in May.

Mr. Camden call this a pretty little Town, ſtocked with luſty Seamen (d). And it is ſtill much frequented with them, ſtanding ſo conveniently as it doth near the mouth of the river Thames.

The Church, dedicated to St. Clement, is pleaſantly ſituated on the top of an hill, facing the Channel called Lee-road. It is ſpacious; the Church and Chancel conſiſting of a body, and north and ſouth aiſles, all tiled. In the Tower, which is pretty lofty, are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was from the firſt appendent to the Maner; and in the gift of the Families of Apeton, and other Lords above-mentioned. Upon the partition of the Warwick eſtates it came to Daniel Earl of Nottingham; and he gave it, with Prittlewell, to the Biſhops of London, in exchange for the Vicarage of Okeham in Rutlandſhire within which pariſh his ſeat of Burley on the Hill ſtood; and which Vicarage belonged to the See of London. See Statute 9 of William.

In this Church and Church-yard are more Monumental inſcriptions than in all the Hundred beſides; and moſtly of Sea-faring people; particularly of the Haddock, Whitaker, and Salmon families.

5. EASTWOOD lies between the laſt deſcribed pariſh of Lee, and thoſe of Rochford and Raley. It received that name on account of its ſituation with reſpect to the Woods and Parks of Raley and Thunderſley.

Suene's father was poſſeſſed of this lordſhip in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and at the time of the Survey, it was one of the many Eſtates Suene had in this County [A].

His grandſon, Henry de Eſſex, forfeited it to the Crown in K. Henry the Second's time, as is more particularly related under Raley.

The firſt to whom it was granted after that, was a Family which from thence took the ſurmame de Eſtwood. For, in 1210 and 1211, Robert de Eſtwood held one fee of the Honor of Raleigh (e).

It coming again to the Crown, K. Henry III. granted it in 1226, to Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, with the Hundred of Rochford, and Honor of Raley. [See above, p. 275.] Margaret his widow, Counteſs of Kent, dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1260, and was ſucceeded by ——John de Burgh (f); who, in 1274, granted it to

K. Edward I. as is related above under Raley (g).

It continued in the Crown till 1340, when K. Edward III. granted it to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and the heirs male of his body. He dyed poſſeſſed of it 16 September 1360, as did his ſon——Humfrey, Earl of Eſſex, Northampton, &c. 15 January 1372. And leaving only two Daughters, this Eſtate devolved again to the Crown (h).

In 1380, K. Richard II. gave it to Alberic de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, for life. But, before his deceaſe, which happened 23 April 1400, the ſame King granted the reverſion of it to his uncle, Edmund de Langley, Duke of York, in ſpecial tail (i). He had it at the time of his death, which happened 1 Auguſt 1402: as had alſo his ſon——Edward Duke of York, that was killed at the Battle of Azincourt 25 October 1415. ——Philippa, his widow, enjoyed the third part of it till her deceaſe in 1431 (k).

Richard Duke of York, nephew of the laſt Edward, and father of K. Edward IV. is ſaid to have had it afterwards; by which means it came to the Crown.

There it remained, till K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted the maner of Eaſtwood-bury, alias Eaſtwood, to EAST-WOOD-BURY, the Maner houſe, ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

BARROW-HALL,

otherwiſe named Breg-hall, is another Maner in this pariſh. The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north from the Church.

It is called Weſt Barrow-hall in contradiſtinction to the other Barrow-hall in Great Wakering.

A Family ſeems to have taken their ſurname from this place. For Stephen de Berwes held, in 1279, 1 meſſuage and 80 acres of arable in Rocheford &c. of Sir John de Rocheford (m).

This Sir John de Rocheford held, in 1297, half a fee at Berghes, of Richard Fitz-John (n); juſtly ſuppoſed to be this eſtate.

Philip Perdriz, of Sutton, who dyed in 1313, held, in Eſtwood, a capital meſſuage, 80 acres of arable, 3 acres of meadow, and 3 acr. of wood, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Reilie, by the ſervice of the eighth part of a knight's fee; and ſuit at the Hundred of Rocheford and at the Barony of Reylie.

John Heveningham was his heir (o).——Philip de Heveningham, who dyed in 1321, held 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 6 acr. of meadow, and 13 s. rent, in Eſtwood, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Reyley, by the 6th part of a knight's fee, ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford, and ſuit from month to month at the Court of the Honor of Reyley, &c.——John was his ſon and heir (p). He was afterwards knighted, and at the time of his deceaſe in 1374, held 2 meſſuages and a carucate of land in Eſtwood, and Sutton, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyley, and one ſuit at the Court of Reyley from month to month. Joane his widow held the ſame till her death in 1394.——John, their ſon, born in 1359, ſucceeded (q). He dyed in 1425, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, leaving——Sir John Heveningham his ſon and heir (r); who held this maner of Breghall of the King, as of the Honor of Raylie. [See under Sutton, and Goldhanger.] Departing this liſe 10 May 1499, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Heveningham, or Henningham, Eſq; then 40, or 50 years old (s).——Sir John Heveningham, who dyed 4 Auguſt 1536, held alſo two meſſuages, and one carucate of land in Eſtwood.——Sir Antony, his ſon and ſucceſſor, then aged 29 years, is ſaid to have been poſſeſſed at the time of his deceaſe 22 November 1557, of this maner of Weſt Barrow hall, with appertenances, which he held of the Honor aforeſaid, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and rent of 6 s. 8 d. and 6 d.——Henry was his ſon (t). But Sir Antony before his death, namely in 1547, had paſſed this eſtate by Fine to Richard Smart, of Ipſwich; and likewiſe Flete-Hall in Sutton. This Richard, had both theſe eſtates at the time of his death 28 Auguſt 1560.——William was his ſon (u).

Thomas Emery, Gent. who dyed 3 July 1618, held this maner of Barowe-hall, and 230 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, and wood in Eaſtwood, Lee, Hadley, Aſhden, Showberry, Hawkwell, Canewdon, and Rochford, of the Honor of Raileigh, by the 40th part of a knight's fee: Alſo Alford naſhe marſh, containing 180 acres, in Wallet iſland within this pariſh. He had likewiſe the maner of Ruffehams, and other lands and tenements in Little Badow, Danbury, &c. [B].——Thomas was his ſon (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 25.]

Afterwards this Eſtate was in Mr. Perkins, who reſided here. His ſon ſold it in parcels; namely Barrow-hall to Mr. Gilbert Macmordy, of Rochford: and what lay in Wallet, or Wallaſea, iſland, to Mr. Ralph Coker, of Burnham.

Wallaſea-iſland partly belongs to Edward Codd, of Maldon, Gent.

Eaſt-wood-Lodge ſtands on a hill, about two miles weſt from the Church.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence and All-Saints, conſiſts of a body and two aiſles; and the pillars are of the Tuſcan order. The Chancel is only of one pace. In the Tower, which hath a Spire ſhingled, are 4 Bells [C].

This Church is ſuppoſed to have been given to the Priory of Prittlewell by its founder Robert ſon of Suene. At leaſt, they were poſſeſſed of it in K. Henry the Second's reign; at which time this Church was only called a Chapel to Prittlewell. However, it ſoon became a Rectory, preſentative by the Prior and Monks of that Houſe. About the year 1390, they procured the Pope by his apoſtolical authority to appropriate it to their Houſe; But it being done without the King's conſent, or the knowledge of the Biſhop of the Dioceſe, they were forced to obtain a licenſe from K. Richard II. in 1394, to appropriate the Churches of Eſtwood, and North-Shoebury, to their own uſe; and, by way of compoſition with the Biſhop of London, to agree, 2 December 1398, to pay him and his ſucceſſors 6s. 8d. yearly (x). The great Tithes of this pariſh belonged to Sir John Spencer, Alderman of London, who dyed 3 March 1609 (y).

The Abbey of St. German de Flay, in the Iſle of France, had a portion of Tithe corn, out of the aſſarts of the whole fee of Margaret Counteſs of Kent in this pariſh. That Abbey gave this portion, in 1246, to the Biſhop of London, to diſpoſe of as he pleaſed: and the Biſhop and Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, lett them, in 1248, to the Rector of this pariſh and his ſucceſſors, in perpetual farm, for 24 s. a year: which was reduced to 20 s. in the reign of K. Edward I. This ſum is ſtill paid from the lands anciently belonging to the Counteſs of Kent in Wallaſea-iſland, lying within this pariſh. Mr. Perkins, whilſt he had that eſtate, and the owners of it ſince, have been yearly ſerved with a ſummons out of the Exchequer to pay this 20 s.

Eaſt-wood is rated to the land-tax at 1047l.

6. RAURETH.

This pariſh is the north-weſt Corner of this Hundred; bounded on the weſt by Wicford; by Raley on the ſouth; the river Crouch on the north; and Hockley on the eaſt: and is of conſiderable extent. Battle-bridge over the river Crouch, is partly in it; and further eaſt is Hullbridge.

Beſides Raureth, and Rawreth, the name of it is written in records Ragel, Raree, Raurehith, Raurere, Ragerin. From whence it is derived cannot be eaſily determined. The Saxon word Raa ſignifies a roe-buck, and wild-goat; ꞃaꝼe, ſmall roots; ꞃaꞃan, to roar, or bray: but how applicable to this place I do not perceive: As for the latter part of the word, it is from hæð, heath, contracted to eth. It might poſſibly be derived from Ravengar, the Saxon owner of Beches, qu. Ravengar's-heath.

In Domeſday-book no mention occurrs of Raureth, from whence ſome have been led to imagine, that it was erected into a Maner after the general Survey, by Odo biſhop of Bayeux. He had lands on both ſides, at Wicford, and Beches; and we find ſeveral inferior lords mentioned in Domeſday-book under Wicford, who muſt have held of Odo, becauſe the reſt are expreſsly ſaid to hold of Suene. The lands of theſe inferior lords it is probable he made bold with, as we have ſeen him do in many places. For he was a man eminent in the practice of Partition, which is, adding to the ſtock of the great ones by robbing the little ones. He, or whoever elſe erected this Maner, choſe for ſome reaſon to transfer his power hither, perhaps from the neighbourhood of Suene, two ſuch Great Men not having elbow-room enough in the ſame Pariſh of Wicford.

Whenſoever it was erected, we find it diſtinct in K. John's reign; who granted it to Hugh de Bernevall, by the name of 15l. in land. And ——Henry de Barnevall had free warren in Ragerin, anno 1253 (a).

So likewiſe had William Sanndon, the King's Cook, in 1266 (b).

RAURETH-HALL,

the Maner-houſe, is about three quarters of a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

William Gofford, or Gifford, in 1284, held one fee in Raree of the King, in capite, of the Barony of Raylegh (c).——Gundred, widow of Robert Gifford, at the time of her deceaſe in 1299, held 120 acres of arable, 4 acr. of meadow, 2 of wood, and 8 s. rent, in the vill of Raurere, of the King as of his Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and was ſucceeded by her ſon——Robert (d). [Concerning this Gifford family, ſee more under Bures Gifford, above, p. 258.]

K. Richard II. in 1385, confirmed to John Doreward, ſon of William, and to Catharine his wife, in general tail, remainder to the ſaid John, this maner of Raureth with appertenances, to hold of the King by knight's ſervice [E]. The Doreward family was poſſeſſed of this maner before that year; for Infemia de la Beche held the other maner here partly of William Doreward, in 1361 (e). John Doreward, abovesaid, at the time of his deceaſe, 12 November 1420, held the maner of Raureth-Hall of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and two tenements called Delamares, and Borells, with 200 acres of land belonging to them in that village; Borells took its name from William Borel, attainted for felony in 1352, who held a garden, and one croft of land containing three acres of arable, in Wickford, called Weſterneſt-Croft of the fee of Sandones in Raureth, by the ſervice of 2 s. per ann. (f). ——John Doreward Eſq; ſucceeded his father; and by his marriage with Blanch, eldeſt daughter of Sir William de Coggeſhall, obtained a conſiderable addition to his eſtate. He was Speaker of the Houſe of Commons in 1413, and departed this life in 1462. or 1465. leaving four ſons, and one daughter.——John, his eldeſt ſon had this eſtate after him; and dying in 1476, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John, who dyed in 1480, without iſſue: Whereupon his uncle——William Doreward Eſq; inherited. He had a ſon named——John, who at his death, in 1495, left no iſſue [F]: and a daughter

Elizabeth, married to Thomas Fotheringhay, Eſq; Theſe had three daughters, that became coheirs to the Dorewards Eſtates; namely, Margaret, wife of William Beaupre; Elena, firſt wife of Henry Thurſby Eſq; and next of Thomas Paleman Eſqrs. and Chriſtian, wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (g). [For a more particular account of the Doreward family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 147. 192. 384, 385.]

Margaret Beaupre, the eldeſt daughter, is recorded to hold this maner at the time of her deceaſe 10 February, 1513, and —— Edward Beaupre was her heir (h).

But this maner ſeems to have been parcelled out. For Elena, and her ſecond huſband Thomas Paleman Eſq; held a moiety of this maner in 1519, Chriſtian, the youngeſt ſiſter dying without iſſue (i).

Andrew Edmonds Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 23 June 1523, held alſo a moiety of this maner.——Chriſtopher, his ſon and heir was but a year and a half old (k).

Of Mr. John Edmonds, or his executors, this moiety was purchaſed, in 1525, by St. John's College in Cambridge, with money left by Mr. Hugh Aſhton a private founder [G].

How any part of this eſtate came to the Crown, we do not find. But K. Henry VIII. in 1525, granted the maner of Rawreth, among many others, to Cardinal Wolſey (l), upon whoſe præmunire, it reverted to the Crown. Though this is called in the grant, The Maner, it could be only a moiety.

George White of Hutton, Eſq; was poſſeſſed of this moiety, at the time of his deceaſe 15 June 1584. —— Richard was his ſon and heir (m). This moiety was purchaſed ſome years ago, for the uſe of private foundations, by St. John's College in Cambridge, which hath now the whole Maner.

The Maner of BECHES lies near the river Crouch. The manſion houſe is about a mile north-eaſt from the Church, between Battle-bridge and Hull-bridge: It is moated round, and part of it ſeems very ancient.

Bacheneia, from whence Beches came to be formed, was the name it bore at the time of the Survey: It then belonged to Odo, and before him to one Ravengar [H].

From that time we have no account of this maner till the reign of K. Edward III. It then belonged to a Family ſurnamed De la Beche. Edmund de la Beche married Eufemia, one of the two daughters and coheirs of Edmund Cowyn. She had by him a ſon that dyed without iſſue, and a daughter Elizabeth. After his deceaſe, ſhe was remarried to John de Walkefare, who, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1345, held a certain tenement called La Beche in Raurethe, of Richard le Chamberleyne, by the ſervice of 7 d. per ann. (*). Eufemia herſelf, at the time of her deceaſe, in 1361, held 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 10 of wood in Raurethe, of Henry de Coggeſhall, William Doreward, Roger Hendeman, Hugh de Peyton, and Richard . . . . . by the yearly rent of 12 s. 6 d.

Elizabeth abovesaid, her daughter and heir, was then wife of Richard Elmerugge. The next year they ſettled it by fine (†). See in the other Volume, p. 315. 624.

John Baud Eſq; mentioned above under Raley, p. 275. and in the other Volume, p. 488. held this eſtate by the law, or cuſtom, of England, after the death of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Sir William Berland [I]. He dyed in 1422 (n),——William his ſon ſucceeded him.

It was afterwards in William, fifth ſon of Sir

John Tyrell, of Heron, by Alice Coggeſhall above-mentioned, p. 208. We do not find the time of his death. He married two wives, namely Anne, daughter of William Fitz-Simon; and Philippa, daughter of John Thornbury. By the firſt he had, John; and by the ſecond, Jaſper.——John, the eldeſt ſon and heir, held this maner of Beches, with a certain rent in Rawreth and Thunderſley, called Colman-rent, of the Honor of Raley: He had alſo the maners of North-Bemflet, and Scotts in Canewdon; and divers lands in Hockley. By Catharine his wife, daughter of John Walden, Alderman of London, he had two ſons, Edward, and William: Departing this life 25 October 1494, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Edward, then 18 years old (o). He married Alice Clovill [K], but dying 16 June 1541 without iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his brother——William Tyrell, Eſq; then above 54 years old; who had to wife Elizabeth daughter of William Cromer of Kent: but he dying 28 September 1543, alſo without iſſue male [L],——Edward, or Edmund Tyrell, Eſq; ſon of his uncle Jaſper above-mentioned, by Anne, daughter of . . . Goring, inherited this and the reſt of the Eſtates (p), among the reſt, paſtures called Stonedon, and Styſted, in this pariſh; Beaches wood in Hockley and Rayley; and lands called Gowles and Ruſſells in Leigh &c. He dyed 8 November 1576, and was buried in the ſouth aiſle of this Church, with a monument. Having married Suſan, daughter of . . . Cooke of Geddy-hall, he had by her four daughters; Mary, wife of John Church; Margaret, wife of John Daniel; Thomaſine, wife of William, ſecond ſon of Sir Henry Tyrell, remarried to William Playter; and Suſan, wife of Charles Cutler (q). See above, p. 204.]

This maner belonged next to Thomas White, D. D. the munificent Founder of Sion College in London; who ſettled it upon that foundation, in which hath continued ever ſince. He dyed 1 March 1623-4 (r).

Beke-hall is mentioned as a maner in this pariſh. It is on the left hand ſide of the road from Raley to Wicford.

The firſt mention we find of it is in 1526, when a Fine paſſed between John Baker, John Wyſeman, and others, plaintiffs, and John Sandys and Elizabeth his wife deforc' of the maner of Beke-hall, with appertenances, one meſſuage, 40 acres of arable, 60 of paſture, 10 of meadow, and 5 of arable, in Rawreth and Thunderſlye, the right of Richard Wyſeman.

Sir Edward Boteler, Kt. at the time of his deceaſe, 1 November 1627, held this maner called Beake-hall, with appertenances, of George Foſter, by fealty only (s).

Trindehay is another maner, or hamlet, in this pariſh. In 1210, and 1211, Robert de Trindeho held one knight's fee of the Honor of Raleye, that had been Henry de Eſſex's (t). A view of frank pledge was here in the reign of K. Edward I.

In 1300 Robert Giffard, of Bures, enfeoffed Peter Savery, and Margery his wife, in this maner of Trindehey, deſcribed as one meſſuage, with a cloſe, 120 acres of arable, 3 acr. of meadow, 1 of paſture, 1 of wood, and 17 s. 10 d. ob. rent, holden of the King in capite, of the Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee; payment of 2 s. 6 d. a year to the King for hidage; and ſuit at the foreſaid Honor, and at the Court of Reylie. And, in 1305, John de Arderne enfeoffed the ſame Peter in 10 acres of wood in Reylie, belonging to this meſſuage (u). He dyed in 1305, leaving——William Savery his ſon and heir.

Roger Darcy Eſq; of St. Clere's in Danbury, held this maner of Tyndhay at the time of his deceaſe 3 September 1508.——Thomas was his ſon and heir (w). [See under Canewdon, and in the other Volume, p. 24. 28.]

Robert Trapps held alſo this maner of Tryndas, in 1571, then lett for 20 l. a year clear. —— Robert was his ſon and ſucceſſor (x). Through whoſe hands it hath ſince paſſed we do not find.

In Bp. Andrew's funeral ſermon, at the end of his Works, it is ſaid, That 'he was born 'in London of honeſt and godly parents; who, 'beſides his breeding in learning, left him a 'ſufficient Patrimony and Inheritance, which 'deſcended to his heir, at Rawreth in Eſſex.' What that was I have not been able to diſcover.

Chicheſter's-hall, a farm in this pariſh, belongs to Thomas White, Gent.

The Church, dedicated to St. Nicolas, hath a ſouth aiſle belonging to the lord of Beches maner, who is to keep it in repair; the Chancel is tiled, the Church leaded. In the Tower are two Bells.

This Rectory was in the gift of Prittlewell Priory, to whom it was undoubtedly given by their founder Robert de Eſſex; till it was ſeized for belonging to a Priory alien, that of Lewes. But thoſe Priories being naturalized by ſtatute 47 Edw. III. the Priory recovered this Advowſon: and it continued in them till the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, when it came to the Crown.

K. Edward VI. 28 March 1550, granted the Advowſon of this Rectory to Richard Fermor (y). See in the other Volume, p. 585. It was obtained next by Dr. Lancelot Andrews, ſcholar, and afterwards fellow, and maſter of Pembroke-hall in Cambridge, and biſhop of Wincheſter, who gave it to the Maſter and Fellows of that Hall; beſides 1000 l. for founding two Fellowſhips. The patronage hath remained in them ever ſince.

Raureth pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 431 l. and Raureth-hamlet at 132 l. beſides the Geldables mentioned under Wicford.

7. HOCKLEY

lies eaſt of Raureth. In records it is divided into Great and Little Hockley; and is written theſe other different ways, Hacheleia, Hocheleia, Hockele, Hokkele, Hokeley, &c. Which name ſeems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Hoc, mallows, and ley, paſture.

It is alſo called Hocklie ſuper montem, on account of its high ſituation.

Berking Nunnery had, before and after the Conqueſt, the capital Maner in this pariſh. Robert ſon of Wimarc had another, which belonged at the time of the Survey to Suene; with another here. And William de Warenn held then a parcel of land, that had been the property of a Freeman. So that here were then three Maners; parcelled out afterwards into four or five; namely, 1. The Maner of Hockley; and, ſubordinate to it, 2. . . . the maner of Blunts; and 3. . . . that of Bawdwyns. 4. Lower Hockley-hall. 5. The maner of Plumberow.

HOCKLEY-HALL,

the maner-houſe of the firſt, ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church, on high ground.

This eſtate continued in the Abbey of Berking [M] till the Suppreſſion, when it came to the Crown. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted it to Thomas Lord Cromwell; upon whoſe attainder reverting to the Crown, Qu. Mary, 4 July 1557, granted it to

Sir Richard Riche (z). And, in his poſterity, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the death of Charles Earl of Warwick in 1673, when it was allotted to one of the coheirs; namely

Daniel, Earl of Nottingham: who ſold it to Robert Briſtow Eſq; and from him it hath deſcended to——Robert Briſtow Eſq; the preſent owner.

Under this were two Eſtates, called alſo Maners, namely, Blounts, and Bawdewyns, both probably named from ſome ancient occupiers: One of them, but it does not appear which, might be Burſigni's, which was holden under the Abbeſs.

BLOUNTS.

The manſion houſe of this is about a quarter of a mile from the Church.

We find it firſt mentioned in 1453, when Richard Pakeleſham, lord of Pakeleſham-hall, held the maner of Bluntes in Great Hokkele, of the Abbot of Berking (a). See under Pakleſham.

James Baker Eſq; who dyed 6 January 1569, held this meſſuage with 130 acres of land called Blunts, by the yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. and 15 acres called Palmers, by the rent of 2 s a year; all of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Hockley, by fealty, and ſuit of court.——Henry Baker Eſq; his ſon and heir, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe, 8 April 1611, and left three Daughters coheirs (b). [See above, under Bures Gifford.]

BAWDEWYNS.

The manſion houſe lyes in a bottom by Hullbridge, above a mile north of the Church.

Of this the name firſt occurrs in 1500, when Robert Yngoe Gent. who had lands alſo at Hawkſwell, held one meſſuage and lands called Bawdewyns in Hockley of the Abbeſs of Berking; by fealty, and yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d.

Mary, wife of John Strangman of Hadley, was his heir (c).——William Strangman Eſq; their ſon, held the maner or meſſuage called Bawdwyns, containing 100 acres of arable, and as many of marſh, of the Lord Rich, as of his Maner of Hockley, by fealty, and yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. worth 12 l. a year.——Bartholomew his ſon and heir, left——Robert Strangman Eſq; and James (d). [See above, under Hadley, p. 280.]

Dudley Forteſcue Eſq; dyed 12 Septemb. 1604, poſſeſſed of this meſſuage called Bawdens, alias Bawdwins, in Hockley, leaving——Daniel, his ſon, aged 14 years (e).

It belonged afterwards to——Richard Hopper and then to Thomas Holt, Eſq; and now to his nephew

Thomas White Gent.

LOWER HOCKLEY-HALL,

So named from its ſituation, to diſtinguiſh it from the other Hockley-hall, ſtands about half a mile north eaſt from the Church.

This was one, or rather two, of the Maners which Suene had in this pariſh; and which Pagan, and two Frenchmen named Godbold and Odo, held under him at the time of the Survey [N].

Suene's grandſon, Henry de Eſſex, through his cowardiſe forfeited his Eſtates to the Crown, as I have frequently obſerved, and This among the reſt.

Who had it firſt after that, I do not find; unleſs it was John de Kokeham. For he held, in 1274, of Amabilia, wife of Thomas Fitz-Aucher, 360 acres of arable and marſh in Hokele, in fee-farm, by the ſervice of 6 l. and 40 s. rent of aſſiſe, and ſuit at the Hundred-court of Rochford, and 18 d. yearly for hidage.——Laurence de Hardell was his couſin and next heir. He held here 30 acres of arable of John de Sandon; by the ſervice of a clove gilliflower; and of Ralph de Eſtling, 180 acres of arable, 3 acr. of meadow, and 10 of paſture, in Hockle, by a fee-farm of 9 marks —— Nicolas was his ſon (f).

Johanna Ingaldſthorpe, at the time of her deceaſe, 21 June 1495, held this maner of Hokeley, of the King by the ſervice of the 7th part of a knight's fee. Iſabella her only daughter and heir that was dead before her, left five daughters, who were her coheirs (g). See above, p. 77, 78.

Elizabeth Scrope, married firſt to Thomas Lord Scrope, and afterwards to Sir Henry Wentworth, had this eſtate at the time of her deceaſe 30 September 1515. Her heirs were her two ſiſters Margaret Mortimer, and Lucy Browne; and Anne wife of Adrian Forteſcue, and John Huddleſton (h).

This was one of the Eſtates which K. Henry VIII. aſſigned to his caſt-off Qu. Anne of Cleve for her maintenance (i).

Sometime ago it belonged to . . . Thickneſs, and came among his five daughters, one of whom was married to the Rev. Mr. Hotchins of Romford.

It belongs now to Robert Briſtow Eſq;

The Maner of PLUMBEROW, otherwiſe named Plumbergh, and Little Hockley, is another Maner, and a conſiderable Hamlet or Village in the ſouthern part of this pariſh.

Plumberow-hall ſtands on the left hand ſide of the road leading from Rochford to this Church: and is commonly ſtyled Plumberow-mount, being ſituated on a riſing ground.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, theſe lands belonged to Robert ſon of Wimarc, and to one Freeman: At the time of the Survey, they were held by Suene, and William de Warenn [O].

An ancient family, reſiding here, took from hence the ſurname de Plumberg. In 1210 and 1211, Thomas de Plumberg held two fees in Plumberg and Sutton, of the Honor of Raleye (k). Theſe two fees comprehended 410 acres of arable, 10 s. rent of aſſiſe, 2 marſhes, 8 acres of wood; beſides which, he held at the time of his deceaſe in 1247, the marſhes of Great-Rugeward, de Beken, and Lovedon, and the wood of Langleigh; —— Laurence his ſon and heir, at the time of his deceaſe in 1253, held in the vill of Plumbergh, of the heirs of William de Schobery, 80 acres of arable, and 12 s. 4 d. rent of aſſiſe; of the fee of Richard de Riely, 110 acres, and 3 s. 6 d. rent of aſſiſe; and of the King, in capite, 180 acres: wherein he was ſucceeded by his brother Thomas's ſon——John de Plumbergh (l).

John de Stodham, who dyed in 1264, beſides the maner of Great Sutton, held in the vill of Plumbe 67 acres of arable, and 12 of wood; —— Roger, his brother and heir, held the ſame in 1268; and alſo half a knight's fee, being 120 acres, in Plombergh, of Luke de Habindon. —— Thomas was his brother and heir (m).

In 1304, William Coſyn and Emma his wife are recorded as holding this Maner. But two years after, John de Stodham enfeoffed

John Abell, and Margaret his wife in this maner of Plumberoe, which was holden of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, payment of 2 s. to the hidage, and ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford, and court of Reyley (n). He had three daughters, Joane, Margaret and Catharine.

Joane was married to William Le Vaghan, who, in 1350, had two parts of this maner in her right: and the third part was paſſed to him by fine in 1357, he being then a knight (o).——Sir Thomas Vaughan, at the time of his deceaſe in 1362, held this maner of Plumbergh, of the King as of the Honor aforeſaid, by the ſervice of one knight's fee——Hamo, his ſon and heir, was then but 44 weeks old. He dyed in 1394, leaving —— Alianor, his daughter, 6 years old (p).

In the mean time the maner of Plumb-hall in Rochford Hundred, ſuppoſed to be this, was in Reymond Heryng; who, at his death in 1373, left——Robert, his ſon and heir, a minor, and the King's ward; and he dying in 1384, his ſiſter——Margaret Heryng, then 20 years old, became his heir (q).

Sir John Cutt, ſufficiently mentioned under Thaxted in the other Volume, p. 439. held this maner of Little Hockley, at the time of his deceaſe 4 April 1520, wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon——John Cutt Eſq; who dyed 1 July 1528 (r). They held it of the King, as of the Honor of Raley.

Next, Edmund Tyrell of Beches Eſq; held this maner of Plumberowe with appertenances, in Hockley and Hackwell, of the Lord Hunſdon, as of his Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of two knight's fees. Edmund Church his eldeſt daughter's ſon, and his three other daughters, were his coheirs (s). See above, p. 286.

It belonged afterwards to George Cheveley, of Roxwell, Gent.

Thomas Sly, Eſq; Mr. Charles Phillips; Robert Hurſt; John Stonard; William Webb; &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

An Alms-houſe for two dwellers ſtands near a houſe called Whitebreads, but hath no endowment.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, ſtands on a hill, the moſt conſpicuous part of the pariſh. It conſiſts of a body, and a north aiſle, between which are pillars of the Tuſcan order The Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. In the Tower, which is octogon, and topped with a ſhingled Spire, are 4 Bells.

This Church belonged to Berking-Abbey, and they preſented to it as a Rectory till about 1384; when the great tithes being appropriated to them, they preſented to it as a Vicarage, and continued to do ſo till their ſuppreſſion; and then both Rectory and Vicarage came to the Crown. Decemb. 22, 1606, K. James I. granted the great Tithes to Edmund Newport, and others, to hold of the maner of Greenwich (t). Soon after, the Advowſon of the Vicarage was given to Wadham-College in Oxford, who firſt preſented in 1619.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 962 l.

8. HAWKSWELL

lies between Hockley and Rochford. The name of it is otherwiſe written in records Hacwell, Hachewell, Hackwell, Hechwell, Heckwell, Hawkewell, Hawkeſwell: derived moſt probably from the two words Hawk, and well, or ſpring.

Ulmar, a freeman, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign was poſſeſſed of this pariſh; which, at the time of the Survey, Eudo, and his under-tenant Pirot, held: and Suene had alſo lands here, which were contiguous to his maners of Rochford, or Hockley [P].

In this pariſh are now two Maners. 1. The maner of Hawkſwell. 2. . . . that of Clements.

HAWKSWELL-HALL,

the maner-houſe of the firſt, ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

Pirot's name and ſucceſſors continued at this place as low as the year 1340. For, in that year, when an Eſtimate was taken of the knight's fees belonging to the Honor of Reylegh; Ralph Perot held a moiety of the maner of Hakewell by the ſervice of one knight's fee (u).

Sir Robert de Bayouſe preſented to this Living in 1323, and Sir Richard in 1330, but no other proof of their having lands here is ſeen.

Sir John de Coggeſhall, who dyed in 1360, held the maner of Hakewell of the King of the Honor of Reylegh.——Henry, his ſon, departing this life in 1375, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir William de Coggeſhall (w), who dyed in the beginning of K. Henry the Sixth's reign, leaving four daughters coheirs, Blanch, Alice, Margaret, and Maud. [See above, p. 263. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 373. falſly printed 371.]

Blanch the eldeſt daughter, brought this eſtate in marriage to John Doreward, of Bocking Eſq; She dyed in 1460, and he 30 January 1462, or 1465. Their eldeſt ſon and heir——John, was ſucceeded by his ſon — John Doreward Eſq; who at the time of his deceaſe in 1480, held the maner of Hakewell, with the advowſon of the Church, of Thomas Bourchier, Cardinal, and Archbiſhop of York, and his joint feoffees. Having no iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his uncle——William Doreward Eſq; (x) that had a ſon John, and Eli- zabeth wife of Thomas Fotheringhay Eſq;—— John the ſon and heir, held this maner of the King as of the Honor aforeſaid, in fealty, and by the yearly rent of 2 s. but dyed in 1495, without iſſue; whereupon the three daughters of his ſiſter

Elizabeth Fotheringhay inherited the large eſtates of the Doreward family. They were, Margaret wife of Richard Beaupre; Elen wife of Henry Thurſbie; and Chriſtian, of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (y). [See above, p. 284. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 385.]

Margaret, widow of the laſt John Doreward, was remarried to John Hobart Eſq; who preſented to this living in 1502, and ſeems to have enjoyed the maner in her right (z).

But, for want of male heirs, it fell to the Crown, and was granted to Thomas Boteler Earl of Ormond, who preſented to the Rectory in 1506; and dyed 8 Auguſt 1515. From Margaret, one of his daughters and coheirs, wife of Sir William Bullen, it deſcended to her ſon,

Sir Thomas Bullen, Viſcount Rochford, and Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond, who dyed in 1538, [of whom ſee a more particular account above, p. 270.]

Mary, his then only ſurviving child, was married firſt to William Carey Eſq; and afterwards to Sir William Stafford. They jointly conveyed this Maner, by licenſe dated 16 April 1541, to William Nevill (a).

It was afterwards in Richard Lord Rich, and deſcended to his ſucceſſors co-heirs, one of which was wife to

Daniel Earl of Nottingham, who ſold both maner, demeſnes, and advowſon, to the grandfather of Robert Briſtow Eſq; preſent owner.

The Maner of CLEMENTS, took its name from a Family ſurnamed Clement, to which it belonged.

The manſion houſe ſtands half a mile weſt from the Church.

In 1440, Philip Clement, enfeoffed in this eſtate Robert Darcy Eſq; and John Breton, who granted the reverſion, after the ſaid Philip's death, to Henry Fylongley and others (b). The daughter and heir of Philip Clement was married to John Ingoe, who with her had this eſtate.——

Nicolas Ingow his ſon and heir, was father of ——Robert: that dyed 8 December 1500, and held this maner of Clements, with appertenances, and meſſuages in Hawkwell, called Wallfletes, Chippryam, Adgors, and Fowlers, of the Prior of Prittlewell, by the rent of 2 s. 4 d. together with Bawdewyns in Hockley, and ſeveral other eſtates (c) [Q]. He married Johanna, daughter of Richard Durward of Berking; and had by her

Mary Ingow his daughter and heir, wife of John Strangman of Hadley-Caſtle, Eſq; to whom ſhe brought this eſtate. They had two ſons, and three daughters.——William Strangman Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir [R] dyed 8 December 1573, as did his ſon —— Bartholemew the laſt day of February 1580. They both held a moiety of this Maner of the Lord Hunſdon as of his maner of Raleigh. [For a more particular account of this Family, ſee above, p. 280.]

In 1562, the maner of Clements with appertenances in Hackwell, and 11 acres of arable, and 11 acres of meadow in North Shoebury, parcel of the maner of Barbers, were granted to Ralph Wiſeman Eſq; and others (e).

Dudley Forteſcue Eſq; who dyed 12 September 1604, held this maner with appertenances, and divers lands, ſervices, and hereditaments thereto belonging, in this pariſh, Hockley, Rochford, Aſſingdon, Canewdon, and Packleſham: and Walfleets and Chibbornes, containing 54 acres, &c.——Daniel was his ſon and heir (f).

This eſtate came afterwards by purchaſe into the noble Family of Rich Earls of Warwick: And of their coheirs it was purchaſed by Richard Hopper, of Raley Eſq; His only daughter and heir, Pentecoſte, brought it in marriage to her huſband Ezekiel Hall of Fenchurch-ſtreet London, merchant. She had by him three ſons, Ezekiel, John, Richard; and two daughters, Pentecoſte, and Hannah. After their mother's deceaſe, they jointly ſold this eſtate to

Thomas Holt Eſq; who dyed 2 February 1745-6. It belongs now to his nephew, Thomas White, Gent. who hath beſides in this Hundred, the maner of Butlers in Shopland and Sutton; Bawdewyns in Hockley; Chicheſtershall in Raureth; Hally-tree houſe in Raley, &c.

Mr. Malden Laſwell hath alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a little wooden belfrey, with a ſpire ſhingled, are 2 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Hawkſwell-hall. It was united to the neighbouring one of Aſſingdon in 1429; but ſeparated again from it on or before the year 1457.

Hawkſwell pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 340l.

SUTTON.

This pariſh lies ſouth ſouth eaſt from Hawkſwell and Rochford; and may upon that account have received its name of Sutton, quaſi South-town; as might alſo the neighbouring pariſh of South-Church, with reſpect to ſome other Church.

This is called Great Sutton, in oppoſition to Sutton in Prittle-well, ſtyled otherwiſe Little Sutton, and Temple Sutton.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign the lands in this pariſh belonged to two Freemen, and to Robert the ſon of Wimarc: At the time of the Survey, they were held by Suene, whoſe under-tenant for part was Aſcelin, and for the other part Aluid, an Engliſh-woman; and one Roger.

SUTTON-HALL

is what was holden by Aſcelin [S]. The manſion houſe ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

Sir Hamond de Sotton, who lived in Edward the Iſt's reign, ſeems to have had his ſurname from this place [T].

It was very early in the Plumbergh Family, that had alſo the maner of Plumberow in Hockley. In 1210 and 1211, Thomas de Plumbergh held at Sutton and Plumbergh two knights fees of the Honor of Raleigh: They contained 410 acres of arable, 10 s. rent of aſſiſe, 2 marſhes, and 8 acres of wood. He dyed in 1247.——Laurence, his ſon and heir, held of the King in ca. in the vill of Sutton, 280 acres of arable, 20 of wood, and 12 s. rent of aſſiſe; and dying in 1253, was ſucceeded by his brother Thomas's ſon——John de Plumbergh (g). This eſtate was next in the Stodham Family.

John de Stodham, at the time of his deceaſe in 1264, held of the King in ca. in Great Sutton, 1 meſſuage, 119 acres of arable, 6 of wood, 47 s. 6d. rent of aſſiſe, with the Advowſon of this Church.——Roger his brother and heir, held alſo this maner of Sutton, at the time of his deceaſe in 1268, as did his brother——Thomas de Stodham in 1285 (h).

In 1304, William Coſyn, of London, and Emma his wife held the maner of Great Sutton, and the Advowſon of the Church, of the King, of the Barony of Reiley, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and ſuit at the Court of Reiley, and at the Hundred of Rochford. He had alſo Plumberwe-hall (i).——Peter Coſyn, probably his ſon, who dyed in 1334, held this maner of Qu. Philippa, by knight's ſervice.——Henry, his ſon, then aged 16, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1362 (k).——William, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held, jointly with his wife Joane, this maner and advowſon in 1381, when he dyed: and——William is ſet down as his ſon and heir. But he dyed young, for when the ſaid Joane departed this life in 1397, Roſe was found to be her only daughter and heir (l). She was married to Thomas Flemyng Eſq; of Flemyngs in Runwell, [See in the other Volume, p. 42.] who held this maner and advowſon in her right; and dying in 1425, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Thomas Flemyng, then 24 years old. He held, jointly with his wife Margaret, the premiſſes, at the time of his deceaſe in 1464, leaving——John, his ſon and heir, aged 15 years (m): He dyed on or about 1476, without iſſue; and his three Siſters, Conſtantia, Blanch, and Ann were his coheirs. Whether any of them was married to William Covert I do not find: But this Maner was now parcelled out.

William Covert, who dyed 20 September 1494, held the third part of the maner of Sutton, divided into three parts.——John, his ſon and heir was then 22 years old (n).——George Covert Gent. ſon I believe of John, preſented to this living in 1536, and 1538, and had the maner of Little Sutton in 1556 (o). He, and John Bilney, had licenſe, 11 April 1562, to alienate this third part of the maner, and of the advowſon of the Church, to Richard Lord Riche: who dyed poſſeſſed of them, 12 June 1566 (p).

In the mean time, the two other parts of this maner belonged to John Barrett, of Belhouſe Eſq; For, at the time of his deceaſe, 4 October 1526, he held two parts of the maner of Great Sutton, with appertenances, and 6 meſſuages, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 100 of wood, and 40 s. rent divided into three parts, in Great and Little Sutton, and Prittwell; and the Advowſon of this Church, of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice.——Edward Barrett Eſq; his grandſon, then 5 years old, was his heir (q). [See above, p, 79.]

William Wyatt Eſq; who dyed 20 September 1532, held theſe Two parts of this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, of the King, of his maner of Rayleigh, then in the King's hands.——Thomas was his ſon and heir, who left——Frances, that preſented to this Church in 1553, as did——Iſaac Wyatt in 1575 (r).

Thomas Hobſon Gent. was poſſeſſed of this whole Maner afterwards; and preſented to the Church in 1629. His ſon——Charles Hobſon Eſq; ſold this eſtate to

The Maner of FLETE-HALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north from this Church, near the Flete or arm of the Sea that comes up towards Rochford.

This belonged to Suene as well as Sutton-hall, and Alvid an Engliſh-woman held it under him [W].

About 1210, Serlo de Flete held this by the ſervice of three quarters of a knight's fee, that had been Henry de Eſſex's.

John Perdix held at the ſame time the ſixth part of a knight's fee (s).

It commonly went along with the neighbouring Maner of Barrow-hall in Eaſt-wood, and was for many years, like that, in the Families of Perdriz, Heveningham, and Smart.

Philip Perdriz, who dyed in 1313, held in Great Sutton, of the Honor of Rayley, 1 meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, 4 acres of outer marſh, and a wind-mill, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and ſuit at the ſaid Honor &c.

John Heveningham was his heir.——Philip de Heveningham, probably his ſon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1321, held in Sutton 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, one wind-mill, and 15s. rent, by the ſame tenure as above (t).——John, his ſon and ſucceſſor, afterwards knighted, held 1 carucate of land in Eſtwood and Sutton, at the time of his death in 1374, as did his widow——Joane, who departed this life in 1394 (u). Their ſon——John Heveningham dyed in 1425, poſſeſſed of this maner of Great Sutton; holding it of the Honor of Reyley &c. (w). And his ſon——Sir John Heveningham, held this maner of Flethall, at the time of his deceaſe 10 May 1499.——Thomas was his ſon and heir (x).——Sir John Heveningham, held it under the name of two meſſuages and one carucate of land in Eſtwood and Sutton: and his ſon——Sir Antony held it by the name of the maner of Flete-hall with appertenances, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayley, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and ſuit at the Court of that Honor. Sir John dyed 4 Auguſt 1536, and Sir Antony 22 November 1557 (y). But the latter had paſſed by Fine, in 1557, the reverſion of this eſtate to Richard Smart; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 28 Auguſt 1560, held this tenement called Flete-hall, of the Honor of Rayley, by the third part of a knight's fee.——William, his ſon and heir, was then 30 years old (z).

It belongs now to Mr. Bailey, of Romford.

Bradewerde-marſh in this pariſh hath belonged to John and Thomas Owdeby, Gent. to Thomas Pynchon Eſq; and to John Pritewell (a).

The CHURCH is ſmall, conſiſting of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. At the eaſt end there is a Tower of ſtone, with a Spire ſhingled, in which are Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Great Sutton.

Sutton pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 312 l.

lies by the Thames ſide between Lee and South-Church. It is otherwiſe written in records Prittewella, Pritwell; and ſeems to be derived from the Saxon words, Pꞃæꞇe, pretty, leah, or ley, place, or paſture, and Welle, a well, or ſpring: There being a fine one at the Priory, which feeds ſeveral fiſh-ponds, and is accounted the beſt in this Hundred.

The capital Maner in this pariſh, named Priors, ſeems to have belonged to Suene before the Conqueſt, there being no former poſſeſſor mentioned in Domeſday-book. A freeman had one part, which Tedric Pointel held at the Survey: and the Church of the Holy Trinity at Canterbury had another conſiderable ſhare, ſtyled Mildentun. From thence aroſe theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. Priors-hall. 2. The maner of Earls-fee, with Poleſted-wic. 3. Temple-Sutton; with other inferior and ſubordinate Maners. 4. Milton-hall. 5. The maner of Chalkwell-Hall.

The Maner of PRIORS, was ſo named, becauſe it belonged to the Priory in this pariſh [X], of which we ſhall give an account a little lower. The ſite and remains of this Priory, now the Maner-houſe, are about a quarter of a mile north of the Church.

Robert de Eſſex, ſon of Suene, made this maner, with very large demeſnes, part of the endowment of the Priory which he founded here. It continued in that Houſe till the ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown.

In 1527, K. Henry VIII. granted to Thomas Audeley, brother of Thomas Lord Chancellor Audeley, and his heirs male, the Priory of Pritewell, alias Pritlewell, the Priors Maner, and the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, to hold in capite, by the 10th part of a knight's fee (b). By licenſe dated 1 April 1551, Thomas Audeley Eſq; conveyed the ſite of this Priory, the Priors maner, the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage; and woods called Horſley wood, Southbirch wood, Weſtbirch wood, Northbirch wood, and Shobury-grove, here and in Eſtwood, Hadley, and Lee, to

Robert Riche, and others: and a Fine paſſed for the ſame (c). This Robert was eldeſt ſon of Richard Lord Riche, who, for greater ſecurity, got alſo a grant of this eſtate from the Crown in 1551, and a confirmation of the grant in 1554, and 1557 (d). The father, Richard Lord Riche, appears to have been poſſeſſed of this maner, and of all the reſt of the premiſſes, at the time of his deceaſe 12 June 1566. And then it came to his ſon——Robert Lord Riche, aforeſaid, who dyed 27 February 1580; and who had alſo in this pariſh and Eaſtwood three farms called Colemans, Deres, and Laſhbornes (e). In his poſterity, Earls of Warwick it continued till after 1673. And then, upon the partition of the great Eſtates of the Family, This came to

Daniel Earl of Nottingham. Of him it was purchaſed by

Mr. Daniel Scratton, then of Billerca, but born at Belſted in Suffolk, who had raiſed a conſiderable fortune between the years 1640 and 1660. He bought alſo Milton-hall, and other eſtates hereabouts to the amount of about 1000l. a year, which he left to his nephew,——Daniel Scratton, of Bromfield, Gent. This latter dyed without iſſue, and inteſtate, 2 June 1744; whereupon a conteſt aroſe among his relations, which of them was the next of kin. And at the ſummer-aſſizes at Chelmsford in 1745, a verdict was given, by a jury of Gentlemen of this county, in favor of —— Daniel Scratton, of Harkſted in Suffolk. He is ſince dead, and the Eſtate is in his ſon and Family.

The Maner of EARLS-FEE, with Polſted-wic.

Earls hall, the manſion houſe, is about a quarter of a mile north of the Church, on the oppoſite ſide of the road from Priors. Near it is a large waſte called Polſted-Common. This maner belonged for a while to the De Veres, Earls of Oxford, from whence it received the name of Earls-fee. There is another of the ſame name in Bures-Giffard.

This was part of Suene's demeſnes, and of what he had in this Hundred under the title of Puteſeia [Y], from whence ſome derive the name of Polſted &c. (e).

A family ſurnamed de Poleſtude, or Polſted, had this eſtate in the reigns of K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. John.

Hugh de Poleſtude held four fees of the Barony of Raly, in Henry the Second's time, that had been Henry de Eſſex's: and one fee of the Honor of Hagenet (f). In 1243,——Hugh de Powleſted held of the King in ca. as of the Honor of Rayle, the maner of Powlſted by the ſervice of four knights fees. And, in 1284, Hugh de Polſted held, of the ſame Barony, Polſted in Prytewell, by the 4th part of a knight's fee (g).

This eſtate was divided ſoon after; one part being in a Family ſurnamed de South-Church, And another part in the noble Family of de Vere, Earls of Oxford, from whom it took the name of Earls-fee.

Richard de Southchurch, who dyed in 1294, held of the King in capite of the Honor of Raylie, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, in Pritelwell and Sutton, certain lands and tenements called Polſteds-Lands, viz. 160 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 36*s.* of rent, and a wind-mill; —— Peter his ſon and heir, dyed in 1309, leaving Alice and Joane his daughters and coheirs (b).

Hugh de Vere the 4th Earl of Oxford was poſſeſſed of the Maner of Earls-Hall, alias Earls-Fee, which is called the Maner of Pritlewell; and he had the grant of a Market and a Fair here (i). He dyed in 1263, leaving——Robert his ſon and heir, the 5th Earl, who married

Alice, daughter and heir of Gilbert Lord Samford Chamberlain to Queen Elianor, by whom he had——Robert his ſon and heir, the 6th Earl, and a daughter named

Joane. She was married to William, ſon and heir of John Earl of Warren and Surrey, who had with her, among other eſtates, the maner of Prittlewell, which he held of Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford (k) [Z]. He dyed before his father 15 December 1286, leaving his wife great with her ſon——John de Warren, afterwards Earl of Surrey, born the 30th of June following. His mother Joane departed this life 21 November 1293; and he himſelf, 30 June 1347, without legitimate iſſue. This maner he had given, with ſeveral other lordſhips, to his ſiſter and heir

Alice, wife of Edmund Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel; and the grant was confirmed by K. Edward II [A], to whom he gave the inheritance of moſt of his other eſtates (l).

This Edmund Earl of Arundel had the misfortune of being beheaded 9 October 1326, by the procurement of Qu. Iſabel, and her favorite Mortimer,——Richard Fitz-Alan, his eldeſt ſon and heir, was reſtored in Parliament 1329, and dyed 23 January 1375, leaving, by Elianor his ſecond wife, daughter of Henry Earl of Lancaſter, and widow of John Lord Beaumont, ——Richard his eldeſt ſon, who fell a ſacrifice to the reſentment of K. Richard II. being beheaded in that King's preſence, and led to execution by his own ſon-in-law Thomas Mowbray Earl Marſhall, 21 September 1397. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, he had three ſons, Thomas; two others who dyed young; and four daughters.

Elizabeth, the eldeſt was married, 1. to William, ſon of William de Montacute Earl of Saliſbury. 2. to Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marſhall, and of Nottingham, and Duke of Norfolk. 3. to Sir Robert Gouſhull. 4. to Sir Gerard Ufflet (m).

Upon the Earl of Arundel's execution his lands were given by K. Richard II. to Thomas Mowbray aforeſaid Duke of Norfolk; and to Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, and Duke of Surrey. And though Thomas, eldeſt ſon of Richard Earl of Arundel, was reſtored in blood, in 1399 [B], and the Duke of Norfolk dyed miſerably the next year, yet this eſtate did not return into the Arundel family, but continued in Elizabeth, ſiſter of the late Earl of Arundel, and wife of Thomas Duke of Norfolk; which Duke held this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe in 1400; as did her third huſband Robert Gouſhall Eſq; in 1403, in her right, this being part of her dower. She held it till her deceaſe in 1424 (n). [See above, p. 65. and in the other Volume, p. 53. 463. 554.]——John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, her ſon, ſucceeded her; having been reſtored to that Dukedom in 1416. He held this maner of Richard Duke of York, as of his Honor of Reyley, and dying 19 October 1432, left——John, his ſon and heir (o), who alſo held this maner at the time of his deceaſe, 6 Novemb. 1461. His ſon——John Mowbray, the laſt Duke of Norfolk of this family, at his death in 1477, left an only daughter and heir ——Anne (p), married afterwards to Richard Duke of York, ſecond ſon of K. Edward IV. but had no iſſue.

Whereupon the large inheritance of the Mowbrays came to the Families of Howard and Berkley, heirs at law, as deſcended from Margaret and Iſabell, the two daughters of Thomas Mowbray the firſt Duke of Norfolk; whereof Margaret was married to Sir Robert Howard, and Iſabell to James Lord Berkley, [ſee in the other Volume, p. 555.]

Sir Robert Howard's ſon was——John, ſummoned to Parliament 12 Edw. IV. and created Duke of Norfolk, and conſtituted Earl Marſhall 28 June 1483; but ſlain at the battle of Boſworth, fighting for K. Richard III. and attainted in Parliament 1 Hen. VII. But his ſon——Thomas was reſtored in blood 4 Hen. VII. and dyed 21 May 1524.——Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, his ſon, dyed in 1554.——Thomas, his grandſon, held this maner of Earlshall, in 1559 (q). He ſoon after ſold this eſtate to

Richard Lord Riche, who, at the time of his deceaſe 12 June 1566, held this maner of Erleshall, alias Erles fee, in Prittwell, of Henry Lord Hunſdon, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (r). In that noble Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued, till upon the diviſion of their large inheritance, This was allotted to

Daniel, Earl of Nottingham. He ſold it to

Mr. Werge, and . . . Lomax; and they ſold it again to Robert Briſtow Eſq; and Mr. John Chambers, of London, ſcrivener, whoſe daughter Mary was wife of Mr. John Dorrell.

It belongs now to Mrs. Rebecca Briſtow, and to Winthrop Baldwin Eſq; and Mary his wife.

The Maner of Polſted belonged in 1494 to John Prior of Pritlewell; for John Tirrell then held of him, as of that maner, lands here called Parkers, Mawgers, Shoberyes, Perfeild, and Clayhawke (s). Probably it was given to the Priory, upon the forfeiture of the Duke of Norfolk.

From theſe capital Maners of Suene ſprung up three other ſubordinate, or reputed, Maners.

Botelers was one, ſo named from an ancient owner.

In 1260, William le Botyller held of the King in ca. 80 acres of land in Pritlewell, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. ——Hugh le Botiller held in Pritelwell, in 1278, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reilie 1 meſſuage, and 75 acres of land, by the 4th part of a knight's fee, ſuit at the Hundred, and Barony of Reilie, and payment of 3 d. to the hidage: and of the heirs of Hugh de Polſted, 20 acres of arable by the yearly rent of 8 s. (t).—William his ſon and heir, being under age, was then under the wardſhip of his mother, who had given to the King for that, and his marriage, 11 marks. He dyed in 1328, leaving——John his ſon (u); after whom we hear no more of the family here. See under Shopland.

Thomas de Staple who dyed in 1372, held a meſſuage and 90 acres of arable called Botelers-Hamſtal, in Prittlewell, of the Honor of Reyle; ——Richard was his ſon and heir; who, I ſuppoſe, dyed childleſs, for Margery his mother, remarried to Sir John de Chanceux, when ſhe dyed in 1389, had no other heirs but theſe two, viz. Elizabeth, wife of John Pritelwell; and Joane, daughter of John de Sutton by Alice his wife another of the daughters of the ſaid Thomas Staple and Margery (w). See under Shopland.

Afterwards this was in R. Bury: for in 1548, a tenement and 100 acres of paſture, with appertenances in Prittlewell, called Butlers-Hampſtalls, were alienated by Richard Bury to John Webb Clerk, by licence.

William Harrys Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 21 Septemb. 1555, held lands and hereditaments here called Johns, Hampſtalls, and Palgraves; and Cokes, Brennings, and Wants, of the Lord Riche, as of the Priory of Prittlewell (x).

Edward Baſhe, who dyed 2 May 1587, held this eſtate, leaving —— Edward his ſon and heir (y).

Serlesland, was ſo named from Serlo, ſon of Philip, who dyed in 1280, and held of the Barony of Reley, one meſſuage and 122 acres of arable in Prittlewell, of the King in ca. of the Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of the ſixth part of a knight's fee;——Philip was his ſon and heir, who dyed in 1312, leaving——Richard his ſon and ſucceſſor. The heirs of Richard Serle held it in 1340 (z).

John Baud Eſq; who dyed in 1422, held 1 toft and 40 acres of arable called Serleſland, of the Honor of Reyley, by the 30th part of a knight's fee (a).

Berlands and Blake, a maner, or capital meſſuage, and divers other lands, tenements, &c. in Pritwell, belonged once to J. Baud, then to J. Webb, and were purchaſed of Edward Baſhe by Richard Lord Riche, who held them at the time of his deceaſe of the Honor of Rayleigh by the 6th part of a knight's fee (b). They paſſed as the reſt of the Warwick eſtates in this pariſh.

Derys, being 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 6 of wood, in Prittlewell and Eſtwood; and 150 acres in South-Church, called Hamſtall; both holden of the Duke of York: alſo 100 acres of arable and marſh, called Palgraves land, holden of the Prior of Pritelwell, belonged, in 1453, to Richard Pakeleſham (c). Deres belonged in 1575 to Thomas Shaa of Terling, who conveyed it, 23 October that year, with two other Farms called Colemans and Laſhborns, to Robert Lord Riche. They were purchaſed with the other eſtates by Mr. Scratton.

Temple-Sutton,

another Maner; of which the manſion Houſe is in this pariſh, but a conſiderable part of the demeſne lands extends into the adjoyning pariſh of Great Sutton; was ſo named becauſe it belonged to the Knights Templars, or Hoſpitallers. It was alſo called Little Sutton, in contradiſtinction to the other.

The maner-houſe ſtands near a mile north-eaſt from Prittlewell Church; and is ſaid to have had a Chapel, or Oratory.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, a Freeman was poſſeſſed of this maner, under the name of Suttuna: At the Survey it was held by Tedric Pointel, whoſe under-tenants were, Grimbold, Hunold, and Robert [C].

Some time after, it was given to the Præceptory of Creſſing-Temple in this County, but by whom is not mentioned. They had it as early as the year 1280; for then Alice le Deſpencer, daughter and heir of Philip Baſſet, held the maner of North-Weld ſome time of the Caſtle of Benyngton, by the ſervice of 5 knights fees, whereof the Knights Templars of Creſſing held two knights fees in Sutton, in the Hundred of Rochford (d).

In 1292, John Beneſtedd made an addition to the Knights-Templars revenues, by giving them 5 acres of land in Little Sutton and Pritlewell: As did, at the ſame time, Henry de Bluntesdon 1 meſſuage, and 8 acres of land in Rochford; and Thomas le Blakiere 1 meſſuage and 4 acres of land in Great Sutton (e).

Joane, widow of Sir John Gray, who dyed in 1425, held, among other things, one knight's fee in Temple Sutton, which William de Cuſance lately held;——Henry her ſon and heir, was ſeven years old (f).

The Eſtate continued in the Knights-Templars, or Hoſpitallers, till their Diſſolution.

In 1541, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Sutton-Temple, &c. to George Harper and his heirs. He, by licenſe dated 24 June 1543, ſold it, with appertenances in Sutton-Temple and Fulnes iſland, to

Sir Richard Riche (g). In whoſe Family, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the failure of iſſue male (h): and when the Eſtate was divided amongſt the coheirs, this came to the ſhare of

Henry St. John Lord Bolingbroke, in right of his mother Mary Rich. [See in the other Volume, p. 101, 102.] He ſold it in 1714, or 1715, to Sir Richard Child, Bart. afterwards Viſcount Caſtlemain, and Earl Tilney; and it is now in his ſon——John Earl Tilney.

The Maner of MILTON-HALL is the Southern part of this pariſh. Milton-hall, the maner-houſe, ſtands half a mile ſouth from this Church, about the Middle between Lee and South-Church; which occaſioned the name. In records it is written Middletun, and Mildentun, contracted ſince into Milton.

This Hamlet is ſaid to have been anciently a diſtinct Pariſh; and had a Church, or Chapel of eaſe, of which the remains were viſible not long ago, at low-water mark. On this ſhore is a good nurſery for oyſters [D].

The Prior and Monks of the Holy Trinity at Canterbury, before the Conqueſt, had this Lordſhip [E]; which was granted or confirmed to them by K. Edward the Confeſſor [F].

This eſtate continued in the Monaſtery till 20 March 1539, when the Priory of Chriſt-Church was diſſolved, and all its revenues came to the Crown.

The 26th of May 1542, K. Henry VIII. in the room of the Prior and Monks, having placed a Dean and twelve Canons here, he endowed them with the maners of Middleton, alias Milton, South-Church, Lawling, Borleigh, Styſted, and Bockyng in Merſy, with appertenances (i). They remained poſſeſſed of them but a little while: For, 23 November 1545, that King made an exchange with them, wherein it is to be ſuppoſed he would not be refuſed: And of them he had the maners of Styſted, Lawling, Midleton, valued at 27 l. and South-Church, Borley, the College of Canterbury, and the Almery-houſe in Canterbury. In conſideration of which, the King diſcharged them from the yearly ſum of 200 l. paid by them for finding of Scholars in Oxford and Cambridge, and gave them the maner and parſonage of Godmerſham in Kent, valued at 80 l. 11 s. ob. A few weeks after, namely 20 January 1545, he granted the maners of Middleton alias Milton, South-Church, Lawling, and Stiſted, with appertenances, to

Sir Richard Rich Lord Rich, and his heirs, to hold by the fortieth part of a knight's fee (k). From the heirs of the Earls of Warwick it came by purchaſe to Mr. Scratton, who left it, with Prior's maner, &c. to his nephew Daniel Scratton of Bromfield, Gent. It is now in his heirs above-mentioned.

This Hamlet having belonged to the Church of Canterbury, is one of the Peculiars belonging to that See; ſubject in Spirituals to the Dean of Bocking. And the inhabitants chuſe a Churchwarden and Conſtable of their own.

CHALKWELL-HALL, was undoubtedly ſo named from ſome famous Chalk-well belonging to it, or near.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half ſouth-weſt from this Church.

This reputed Maner, was holden of Milton-Hall by knight's ſervice and the annual rent of 23 s. 3 d. for all ſervices, and three of the beſt living creatures for heriots.

In 1488, . . . Cobham, of Berneſton Eſq; was lord of this maner: For, Henry Maldon, who dyed 9 January that year, held a parcel of Marſh in Lalling of . . . [D] The Oyſters are brought hither ſmall from the ſouthern coaſt of this iſland, particularly from the coaſt of Suſſex and Dorſetſhire, where the dredgers employ the poor people to pick them in baſkets, in the months of February, March and April, and putting them in their veſſels ready to receive them, ſail back here, and lay them in the water, till they come to their proper growth; which is in about 7 or 8 months. It is obſervable, that thoſe which lie with the concave part uppermoſt, thrive as well as the reſt which lie in what we think their proper poſture. The owners of the Oyſters here have their proper limits ſtaked out; and have an advantage over the reſt of the dredgers of this County, in being ſo much nearer London; but in a froſty ſeaſon, the oyſters here, from the ſhallowneſs of the water, are more liable to be killed by the ſeverity of the weather; the ſhore being even, and dry when the tide is out, and not having the conveniency of the pits and layings about Colcheſter and Maldon, which are repleniſhed with new water almoſt at every tide.

Charles Tyrell of Rochford Eſq; had it in marriage with a daughter of Mr. Lamb. They had a ſon, who dyed without iſſue, leaving a widow.

It belongs now to Edmund Tyrell of Saxmundham Eſq;

In 1340, Edward St. John held the maner of Pritewell of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. And Richard de Havering held alſo then, of the ſame Honor, lands and tenements here by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee (n). But which maner it was, and what lands, we cannot aſcertain.

A Family had the ſurname de Pritewell from this place. In 1388, John Pritewell granted to Robert Aſſch Vicar of Pritelwelle, and his heirs, one cottage, with a moiety of a grange, and 2 acres of Maydeſtones croft near Tipiſlane, and 2 acres called Cartereſlond, and a toft and 7 acres, and half a croft called Palmereſlond, all in this pariſh (o).

Mr. William Speed; Thomas Burgeſs; Iſaac Pledger; John Remnant; Francis Ennīver, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

THE PRIORY

was pleaſantly ſituated about a quarter of a mile north from the Church. Only ſome of the outhouſes now remain.

This Priory was founded in the reign of K. Henry II. by Robert de Eſſex, ſon of Suene, for Monks of the Order of Clugni, and dedicated to St. Mary. It was a cell to the Alien Priory of Lewes in Suſſex, and naturalized in the time of K. Edward III. The Endowment and Revenues of it, beſides the Maner and demeſnes here, and the Church of Prittlewell, were; the Churches of Eaſtwood, and Sutton, called at the time of the foundation only Chapels to Prittlewell: the maner of Great Shoebury; lands in North Bemflett, and Hadley; Kytcot-marſh in Canvey, with all the tythes of that iſland; the tythes of Foulneſe-iſland; and tythes in Packleſham, Great Wakering, Great Warley, and Wethersfield. The Churches, or Rectories, and Advowſons of the Vicarages of Canewdon, Clavering, Eaſtwood, North and South Shoebury; in this County; and of Stoke-Neyland in Suffolk: the Advowſons of the Rectories of Great Horkſley, Eaſt Merſey, Raley, Raureth, and Wickford. At the time of their diſſolution they had the following rents of aſſiſe; In this pariſh, of the free and cuſtomary Tenents, 18 l. 6 s. 4 d. ob. In Eaſtwood, 32 s. 3 d. Foulnes, and Walet, 6 s. Hakewell, 5 s. 6 d. Packleſham, 10 s. 10 d. Gr. Shobury, 26 s. 5 d. North Shobury, 8 s. 7 d. Shopland, 7 s. 11 d. Rents of lands and tenements in this pariſh, 31 l. 17 s. 2 d. in Hadley and Canvey, 5 s. ob. Hockley, 3 s. Raley, 7 s. 10 d. Ramſden Belhous, 28 s. 4 d. Steple-hall, and Kelington, 43 s. 4 d. And the following Penſions and Portions; out of Prittlewell-Church, 10 s. the Vicarage of Clavering, 18 d. Berking Abbey, for a portion of tithes out of their maner of Plumberow, 20 s. Hatfeild-Regis Priory, for a portion of tithes out of their lands in Bumſted, 4 l. And of the following Rectors; of, Great Horkeſley, 20 s. Eaſt Merſey, 4 l. North-Bemflet, 13 s. 4 d. Raley, 33 s. 4 d. Raureth, the ſame. Great Shobury, 2 s. Thunderſley, 10 s. Great Warley, 20 s. Wickford, 53 s. 4 d. (p).

At the ſuppreſſion it was valued at 155 l. 11 s. 2 d. ob. Dugdale, 194 l. 14 s. 3 d. ob. Speed. And there were in it only ſeven monks. See a Liſt of the Priors in Newcourt (q).

It was granted to Sir Thomas Audeley in 1537, and paſſed from him through the ſame hands as the Maner of Priors above-mentioned (r).

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands pleaſantly in the ſtreet, and is the largeſt and faireſt Church in this Hundred. Both Church and Chancel have a ſouth aiſle, almoſt as large as the reſt of the building. The great Chancel, and the aiſle belonging to it called the Little Chancel, are leaded, and the remainder tiled. The Tower, which is of ſtone, is lofty, with pyramids at the corners: 'Tis a ſea-mark. In it are   Bells.

The great Tithes of this pariſh were appropriated to the Priory here, and a Vicarage appointed, which continued in their gift till the ſuppreſſion. Then they were granted to Thomas Audeley Eſq; who preſented to the Vicarage in 1539. He conveyed them, in 1551, to Robert, ſon of Richard Lord Riche; in whoſe poſterity Earls of Warwick they continued, till upon the failure of iſſue male they came among the coheirs. Daniel Earl of Nottingham having them allotted to him, made an exchange of the Vicarage with the Biſhop of London, in 1698, for the Vicarage of Okeham. [See above under Lee.] It hath been ever ſince in the gift of the Biſhops of London.

About 500 l. a year land in Canvey iſland pay great tithes to the Impropriator of this Church, and ſmall tithes to the Vicar.

In K. Edward the fourth's reign, lands and tenements were put in feoffment here, by 2 wardens, 1 maſter, 1 prieſt, and certain brethren, to find a prieſt called Jeſus Prieſt; which Chantry was worth at the Suppreſſion, 7 l. 17 s. 0 d. and in the Certificate it is ſaid, that this was a populous town, having 300 houſeling people.

This pariſh is rated to the land tax at 1317 l. and Milton-hamlet at 417 l. 2 s. 0 d.

11. SOUTH-CHURCH

This pariſh lies near the moſt ſouthern point of this Hundred; and when the Church was built, and ſo named, was undoubtedly the moſt South of any in the Hundred. But the two Shoberies lie now nearly upon the ſame line. It is ſo near the Sea, that it might well be called Sea-Church. In the Synod of Cloveſho, it is ſtyled Sudmynſter.

This Church and Maner were given to Chriſt's Church at Canterbury on or before the year 824 [G]. Edward the Confeſſor confirmed theſe to them among others of their poſſeſſions [H]: And that Church, then dedicated to the Holy Trinity, held them at the Survey [I].

Ealdbhirt, a Saxon Earl, and his ſiſter Selethryth, gave to the ſame Church Lands here: which gift was canvaſſed or ſcrutinized in a Council held at Cloveſham in the year 824, but the affair was determined in favour of the Church, and the lands were confirmed to Archbiſhop Wlfred, and to his ſucceſſors [K].

Beſides the Maner of South-Church; there are in this Pariſh The Maners of South-thorp, and North-thorp.

SOUTH-CHURCH-HALL,

the manſion-houſe of the firſt, is about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church. It is moated round, and hath a fine ſpring of very good water near, always running over.

This Maner continued in the Prior and Monks of Canterbury, till their ſuppreſſion.

A conſiderable Family that dwelt here, and from hence took the ſurname de South-Church, held this eſtate under the Church of Canterbury.

Richard de South-Church, at the time of his deceaſe in 1294, held here, of the Prior and Convent of Chriſt's Church in Canterbury, one meſſuage, 640 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 2 marſhes, 30 acres of wood, a wind-mill, and 4*l.* 16*s.* rent, with the work of the cuſtomary tenants (s). He held alſo Northorp, as we ſhall ſee preſently. And, by grant of K. Henry III. had free-warren in Suth-cherche, Prittlewell, North-Cray, and La-Leigh (t) [L].——Peter de South Church, his ſon, held the ſame eſtate of the Prior aforeſaid, at the fee-farm of 20l. a year. He dyed in 1309, leaving Alice, and Joane, his two daughters and coheirs (u). Joane was married to William La Flete, who had a moiety of this maner in her right. And William Carleton, who moſt probably married the other daughter, conveyed all his right in the ſame, to them, and to the heirs of the ſaid Joane (w).

In 1342, John de Newenton held this maner of the Prior by the like fee-farm of 20l.——John was his ſon. He ſeems to be the ſame perſon who occurrs in records by the name of John de Pritewell of London, Spicer, and releaſed all his right in the maner of South Chirche, in 1350, to

William de Derſham, of Offeton, and his heirs (x). This latter made over the reverſion of the ſame after his own life, to Robert Caſpar, parſon of Wortham, and to Alexander Hanekyn, of Canterbury; to have and hold to them and their ſucceſſors for ever: This maner being held of the ſaid Prior by the ſervice of 20l. a year; except lands and tenements in the ſame, holden of the fees of Polſted, and Nortrop (y).

On the ſuppreſſion of Chriſt's Church Priory in 1539, all its revenues came to the Crown. In 1542 upon appointing a Dean and twelve Canons for the government and ſervice of Canterbury Cathedral, he made this Maner, with that of Milton in the foregoing pariſh, &c. part of their endowment. But 23 November 1545, he took them away again from them, giving them others in exchange: And, 20 January 1545, he granted this eſtate among others to

Richard Lord Riche (z). In his deſcendents, Earls of Warwick, it continued till the failure of iſſue male, when the eſtate came to be divided among the coheirs. This was part of the ſhare of the Rt. Hon. Daniel Earl of Nottingham who ſold it to George Aſſer Eſq; He dyed 28 November 1738, aged 63 years, and was buried at Barling.

Ceolwolf indeed lived about that time, but as he had nothing to do in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons, and the Eaſt-Saxons themſelves were made a Province by Egbert King of the Weſt Saxons before this Date, we muſt interpret it, that Ceolwolf gave them ſomething in his own Kingdom, or was a Witneſs to Lifſtan's Grant, if the barbarous Latin of thoſe Times will allow that Senſe to dedit.

[K] This implies, that lands could not then be given to religious bodies, without the examination and conſent of a great Council of the nation, or Wittenagemot. . . . The original Council of Cloveſham, from whence the above is extracted, is now in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Aſtle Eſq; among other curious Originals, one of which is K. Withred's Charter, A. C. 693, to Liminge monaſtery, for 4 plough-lands in Wighelmicnetun, now Wilmington. Ex archiv. Eccl. Chriſti Cant.

[L] The grant of Free-warren was renewed, in 1364, by K. Edward III. to the Prior of Canterbury and his ſucceſſors, in all their demeſne lands in Kent, Suſſex, Surrey, Eſſex, Norfolk, Suffolk, Oxfordſhire, and Devonſhire; namely in Middleton, Southchurch, Lalling, Bonytone, Styſtede, and Bocking.

His only ſurviving child,——Elizabeth, was then the wife of the Rev. John Davies, Vicar of Barling. She dyed 22 Auguſt 1739, aged 42 years, as did her huſband Mr. Davies in 1750. They left an only child and heir, named Elizabeth-Aſſer. She was married, in May 1746, to Thomas Drew Eſq; by whom ſhe had a ſon, named George-Aſſer Drew, and a daughter of the name of Frances-Aſſer Drew. The ſaid Elizabeth dyed in 1761; and her huſband enjoys this Eſtate, and alſo the maners of North Shobury, Kents, the Leaſe of the demeſnes of Barling, &c.

South-Church Wic belongs alſo to Thomas Drew Eſq; The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north-eaſt from the Church. From it there is a moſt delightful proſpect over the iſlands of Canvey, Greane, Shepey, Thanet, the Nore, up the Medway, and up and down the Thames.

The Maners of Northorp, and Southorp, are now united, but were formerly two. One belonged to Godric a Thegn of K. Edward the Confeſſor; and after that King's death, to Robert ſon of Wimarce, by the name of Torpeia. The other, under the name of Thorpe, belonged to Inguar. At the time of the Survey, Suene held the former; and Ranulph ſon of Ilger the other: And Odo was under tenant to both [M].

Suene's part held of the Honor of Raley; and the other afterwards of the Honor of Liſle.

The Saxon word þoꞃpe ſignifies village, ſo that theſe two might formerly be diſtinct villages, or hamlets.

Thorp-hall is near the Thames, or rather the ſea, about a mile from the Church.

As to Southorp: Robert de Brus who dyed in 1276, held lands in Suthorp in the vill of South-Churche.——John de Brus was his ſon. Of him, in 1282, John de Nevyll held the maner of Thorpe by one knight's fee (a).——Sir John de Nevill of Eſſex, who had this eſtate for life, granted it to John de Clopton in exchange for the maners of Chikenhale-Tany and Zoyn, which the ſaid Clopton had for life [N]. But the remainder or reverſion of Southorp was in William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 79.] He dying 16 September 1360, and his ſon——Humfrey Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton 16 January 1372, before Alice Lady Nevill, widow of Sir John, which had a life-eſtate in this, and whoſe death did not happen till 1394 (c), therefore it did not come till 1394 to the Bohun Family; namely to the two daughters and coheirs of Humfrey, viz.

Elianor, wife of Thomas of Woodſtock; and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV. Upon the partition of the Bohun Eſtates, in 1421, between Anne, Counteſs of Stafford, daughter of Elianor, and K. Henry V. this was allotted to the ſaid Counteſs, being then valued at 22 l. a year. Her ſon——Sir John Bourchier had both the Thorps, as we ſhall ſee preſently.

As to the maner of Northorp in particular: In 1267, William de Glouceſter held this maner of Northrope, in capite, of Henry de Thorndone, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, whoſe father John Thorndone held it, before him, of the heirs of William ſon of Richard de Stanbregg (d).

In 1294, and 1309, Richard de Southchurch and his ſon Peter, above-mentioned, who held the maner of Southchurch of the Convent of Canterbury, are found alſo to have held of the heirs of Henry de Thorndon, the 6th part of a fee in Northorp, being 214 acres of land (e).

William de Derſham had the ſame in 1350, of the gift of John de Pritelwell (f).

In 1362, Mary widow of Thomas de Brotherton, Counteſs Mareſchall, had two fees in Thorp, which Paul de Theydon held under her. And, in 1432, John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, held the ſame by the name of two fees and a half (g).

Theſe two Maners ſeem now to have been united.

Sir John Bourchier Lord Berners, who dyed in 1474, held the maners of Southorp and Northorp, of the Queen of England;——John, ſon of Humfrey his ſon, was his heir (h).

This eſtate came again into the Stafford family; and was in Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, upon whoſe arraignment and condemnation, in 1521, it fell to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. in 1528, granted the maners of Thorpe, and Thorpe-hall, and Salſtell, with appertenances, to Brian Tuke Eſq; and his heirs male; to hold in fealty (i). At the time of his deceaſe, 26 October 1545, he held, the maners of Thorpe, Thorpe-hall, and Eaſt Lee, and the Advowſons of the Churches, Vicarages, Chantries, Chapels, and other eccleſiaſtical benefices belonging to theſe maners, of the King, as of the maner of Writtle, in ſocage by fealty,

[See an account of this family under Layer-Marney.] In 1591, Peter Tuke, and Elizabeth his wife, ſold Thorpe, and Thorpe-hall, alias Southorpe and Northorpe, otherwiſe Thorpe-Nevill, Little Thorp, and Eaſt Lee maners; 8 meſſuages, 8 gardens, 8 orchards, 500 acres of arable, 140 acres of meadow, 500 of paſture, 100 of heath and buſhes, 200 of marſh, and 10 s. rent to

Robert Petre Eſq; and a fine was levied for the ſame in Trinity-term. Afterwards, 5 February 1593, Qu. Elizabeth granted a ſpecial livery of them to——Sir John Petre (l), created 21 July 1603 Lord Petre. He held theſe maners at the time of his deceaſe 11 October 1613, having bequeathed Eaſt-Lee to his ſecond ſon——John Petre Eſq; ſeated at Weſt-Haningfeild; and the maner of Thorpe to his third ſon——Thomas Petre Eſq; of Cranham-hall. Thoſe two greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe, got a grant, in 1590, among many other things, of the maners of Thorp and Thorp-hall, and the Advowſon of the Rectory (n). But they got grants of many things, of which they could not get poſſeſſion. And they were granted the ſame year to Gilbert Wakering; to hold in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.

It might poſſibly be ſome of thoſe lands and tenements in the maner of South-Church, which were of the Fees of Polſted and Northrope, and that William de Derſham had for life, in 1354 (o).

Beſides the eſtates above-mentioned, Mr. William Waltham hath alſo ſome lands here.

The ſhore againſt this pariſh; which is flat, and where the tide ebbs and leaves it dry for two or three miles from high water-mark; is a very good Nurſery for Oyſters, as well as the adjoyning Milton-ſhore: a quality which was diſcovered accidentally about the year 1700 [* N].

The CHURCH, and Chancel are of one pace; and of equal ſize and bigneſs: both tiled. On a Tower of ſtone, containing Bells, is a Spire ſhingled. The Porch, at the entrance into the Church, is indented, which ſhews its antiquity. This Church hath been lately new pewed, cieled, and beautified: and a gallery was erected at the weſt end, in 1756, at the charge of Thomas Drew Eſq; and Elizabeth his wife. Their arms are in the front.

This Rectory is one of the Peculiars of his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's, and in Spirituals under the juriſdiction of the Dean of Bocking. For though this Maner was conveyed to K. Henry VII. by way of exchange, yet the Rectory was not; but hath been all along in the Archbiſhops collation.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 788 l.

SHOEBURY.

This is a name common to two contiguous Pariſhes; anciently but one diſtrict, lying cloſe to the Sea, againſt the Nore. The moſt ſouthern point is a ſmall promontory called Shoebury Næſe, or Neſs, from the Saxon Næꞅe, noſe; for the Britans and Saxons deſcribed their hills and other parts of the country from their ſimilitude to the parts of the human body [O].

The name of Shoebury is formed from the two Saxon words, Sceo, a ſhoe, and byꞃiᵹ, a town or city; or buꞃᵹ, a fort, or caſtle: probably from the imaginary likeneſs of the fort here to a ſhoe. In records it is otherwiſe written, Eſſobiria, Seabirig, Scobrih, Shobery, Shoobery, Showbery, Sobury.

The firſt mention we find of this place was in 894: K. Ælfred being employed and detained by the Danes in the Weſt of England, two troops of thoſe rovers gathered together at Sceobyrig in Eſſex, and there made a fort or caſtle [P]. This Fort was undoutedly an earth-work, with [* N] One Outing having been out at ſea in his hoy or boat, and having on board ſome ſmall Oyſters more than could be uſed, he threw them over-board on this ſhore. About a year after, being accidentally here at low water, and ſeeing thoſe Oyſters, he opened ſome, and found them much improved in ſize and fatneſs. He got more Oyſters, and tryed the experiment again, and found it to anſwer. Upon that, he went to Mr. Aſſer, and took a leaſe of this Shore at a low rent; the method of improving Oyſters by laying them here not being known. By this trade Outing got a great deal of money; and built a Houſe near the ſea, now inhabited by a dredger. From that time advantageous Leaſes have been granted of this ſhore, and a great trade in Oyſters here carried on.

This account I had from Thomas Drew Eſq;

[O] As from Pen, the head, the Britans formed the names of Pengethly, Penmenmaur, Penryn; and the Saxons.

a trench and a mount, as moſt of their haſty fortifications were in thoſe times; and hath been ſince either levelled, or waſhed away by the Sea.

Mr. Camden does too great honor to this place when he calls it a city: for it doth not appear ever to have been ſuch [Q].

Shoebury was even before the Conqueſt divided into two Pariſhes, South and North Shoebury, ſo named on account of their ſituation with regard to one another.

12. South Shoebury lies near the Thames, or rather the Sea. It is otherwiſe called Great-Shoebury.

Robert ſon of Wimarce held this after the death of Edward the Confeſſor: At the time of the Survey it belonged to Suene [R].

Here is only one Maner, with which goes another eſtate called Muſtal Grondage: The ſite of this laſt could not be diſcovered upon the beſt enquiry.

Shoebury-Hall,

the Maner houſe, ſtands on the South ſide of the Church.

This lordſhip was given to the Priory of Prittlewell (p) by the founder, Robert Fitz-Suene, together with the Advowſon of the Church; and continued in that Monaſtery till the Suppreſſion. It was then lett to William Frend for 30 years, at the rent of 40l. (q).

In 1537, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Great Schobury and Muſtall Grondage &c. thereto belonging, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Sir Richard Riche, and his heirs, to hold in capite, by the tenth part of a knight's fee. He was poſſeſſed of this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe 12 June 1566 (r). In his poſterity, Earls of Warwick, it continued [S], till upon the failure of iſſue male their great Inheritance fell among the coheirs: And this came to the ſhare of

Daniel Earl of Nottingham, in right of the Lady Eſſex his wife. He ſold it to Robert Briſtow Eſq; and it is now in his grandſon——Robert Briſtow Eſq;

Dangers, a meſſuage in this pariſh, by the right hand ſide of the road from this Church to North Shoebury; and of which ſome of the land is waſhed by the Sea; ſeems to be the ſame as was anciently called Dawes, and belonged to the Baker family. In 1534, Edward Baker held this meſſuage, and 60 acres of arable, 40 of paſture, and 20 of marſh, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Great Shobery. His ſon——James Baker Eſq; who dyed 6 January 1569, held this Dawes tenement, and other lands in this and the next pariſh (s).——John Baker Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 13 April 1606, had the reverſion of this tenement called Dangers, and lands called Dangers, Harpes crofts, Staplers, Southcroft, Northcroft, Papparells, Adamſayes, Mariſcrofts, Gilberts, and other lands adjoyning, in South-Shobery.——Richard was his ſon and heir (t). [Concerning this family, ſee under Eaſt-Tilbury, Bures-Gifford, Hockley, &c.]

It belonged to the late Sir Henry Fetherſtone, Bart.

A family of note took their ſurname de Shobery from this place.

In 1210, William de Shobie held a knight's fee of the Honor of Ralegh (u).

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Tower is built of flints, and hath a Spire ſhingled, with 3 Bells.

The arch over the paſſage from the Church into the Chancel is wreathed.

This Church was at firſt a Rectory, then a Vicarage, then a Rectory again; after that preſented to eight times as a Vicarage; then again as a Rectory, and ſo it continues to this day.

The Advowſon of this Church belonged to Prittlewell Priory till the diſſolution; and then was granted by K. Henry VIII. to Sir Richard Riche, from whom it paſſed, as the Maner to Robert Briſtow Eſq; (w).

13. NORTH-SHOEBURY

ſtands North of the other, as the name imports. It is otherwiſe called Little Shoebury, though the names of Little and Great are promiſcuouſly uſed in the preſentations to the Church, as Mr. Newcourt hath obſerved (x).

At the time of the Survey, Suene, and his under-tenant Walter, held this Pariſh; which had belonged in Edward the Confeſſor's reign to a Freeman [T].

Afterwards it was divided into theſe two Maners. 1. The Maner of North-Shoebury, or Weſt-hall. 2. . . . that of Kents.

1. The Maner of NORTH-SHOEBURY, had alſo the name of WEST-HALL given to it about the reign of K. Edward IV. But we do not find that there is an Eaſt-hall near, to occaſion that diſtinction.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

A Family ſurnamed de Wodeham, of Wodeham-Ferrers, had this eſtate about the year 1265, as appears by the curious Plea inſerted below [U].

William de Woodham held, in 1271, of the King, in capite by reaſon of his Barony of Raileigh, in Little Sobiri one meſſuage, 90 acres of arable, half an acre of paſture; one free Tenant who held 15 acres of arable; and two Villanes who held 30 acres of arable, under him (y). At the time of his deceaſe in 1280, he held the maner of Shobyri of the King in ca. of the Barony of Reylie by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and payment of 12 d. at the Hundred of Rochford for hidage, and ſuit at the Court of the Baron of Reylie. He held alſo 4 acres of marſh, of the fee of Agnes de Abindon, by payment of 2 s. 8 d. per ann. And of the heirs of John de Briche 50 acres of wood and heath, by the ſervice of one half penny. And of William de Shobyri two marſhes containing, i. e. having ſufficient feed, for 500 ſheep, by the yearly rent of 5 marks and a half, for one marſh, to the Prior of Merton; and to William de Shobyri, for the other marſh, 2 marks and a half, and one quarter of rye and one of wheat. He held alſo of Reginald de Ginges one marſh containing 500 ſheep, by the ſervice of 5 s. He had alſo South Bemfleet. [See above, p. 263.] And of the Counteſs de Ferrers he held in Woodham Ferrers 1 meſſuage, 240 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 16 of wood, by the ſervice of 9 s. per annum. ——Thomas his ſon and heir being but 7 years old, the wardſhip and marriage of him was granted by the King to John de Lovetot. At the ſame time, the heirs of Stephen de Langedon held two knights fees in Little Subir and Nucel, of the King, in capite; and Agnes de Subyr and Henry de Gyng held one knight's fee in Little Sobie of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reylegh (z). In 1304, Thomas de Woodeham, and Agnes his wife, held 160 acres of arable, 1 acre of meadow, and 20 s. rent in this pariſh, of the King, of the Barony aforeſaid, by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee. At the time of his deceaſe in 1328, he held here 140 acres of arable, and 3 s. 3 d. rent of aſſiſe, of the King, of the Honor of Reylie.——William was his ſon (a). [See under South Bemfleet.] Then—— Edward, ſon probably, or brother, to William ſucceeded, and, jointly with Agnes his wife, held 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 1 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 20 s. rent in Little Shobury, North-Bemfleet, and Hadley; he dyed in 1381.——John was his ſon and heir (b). In 1419,——Edward, ſon of Edward Wodeham of Little Shober granted to Nicolas Fitz-Symond and his heirs all his right in all thoſe lands and ſervices called Barbours, and in all thoſe lands which formerly belonged to Edward his father and Agnes his wife, in the villages of Shober aforeſaid, South-Cherche, and Wakering (c).

The Fitz-Simon family had been ſeveral years before poſſeſſed of eſtates in this pariſh; at leaſt as early as 1294 (d). All the account we find of them, is this. Sir John Fitz-Simons had four ſons, Adam, Hugh, Edward and Richard.——Adam had iſſue —— Edward, who, by Anne daughter of . . . Havering, had——John, who married Alice daughter of —— Lord Fitz-Walter, and had by her——Philip, father of ——John, that had, by Mary Chambers his wife, two ſons Robert, and John.——Robert, by Catharine daughter of Robert Manfeild had Joane his daughter and heir, married firſt to Robert Tymperley; and afterwards to Henry, ſecond ſon of Sir Roger Wentworth of Codham-hall in Wetherſfield, and had by him Nicolas Wentworth Eſq; who married Jane daughter of John Jocelyn.

Adam, ſon of Sir John Fitz-Simon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1328, held in Little Schobery, 1 meſſuage, 243 acres of land, and 40 s. rent of aſſiſe, of the King as of the Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford and Court of Reyle. He had ſeveral other leſſer parcels near.——Edmund, his ſon, held, in 1362, the third patt of this maner, and Barflete and Shelword marſhes, of the Honor aforeſaid, leaving ——John, his ſon and heir (e).——Robert Fitz-Symon, who dyed in 1474, held the maner of Weſt-Hall in North-Shobury, the firſt time we find it ſo called in records, and the maner of Mokking in Barling, and 200 acres of marſh in Pakeleſham and Little Wakering, of the Honor of Railegh, by homage and fealty only; —— Joane, then wife of Robert Tymperley, was his daughter and heir: She was afterwards married to Henry Wentworth: as juſt obſerved above. His ſon—— Nicolas Wentworth Eſq; had this maner in 1522 (f).

. . . . . Aſton Eſq; held this maner about 1574.

Thomas Collins of London, vintner, left this Eſtate, by will, to his wife, who was remarried to

Charles Ruſſel Orange-merchant. After his death, ſhe ſold it, in 1722, to George Aſſer of South-hurch-Hall, Eſq; And it now belongs, as well as that, to

Thomas Drew Eſq;

The Maner of KENTS, was undoubtedly ſo named from an owner not found upon record. The manſion-houſe is old, formerly much larger than now, and moated round: It ſtands between the two Shoburies, and the land lies in both pariſhes.

It ſeems to have been detached from the capital maner in or before the Reign of K. Edward I. for, in 1328, John Fitz-Simon, held lands in Little-Shobury; As did Adam his ſon, and Edmund his grandſon, as obſerved under the foregoing Maner.

After this, Robert Fitz-Simon came into the grand Maner, as appears above. And it is probable this went with the other to Tymperley; but nothing ſhews it.

In 1501, a fine was levied by which the maner of Kentys was paſſed from Truſtees, as they ſeem to be, to Jaſper Tyrrel and Margaret his wife: And another the ſame year from Jaſper to Henry Baker and others (g).

For ſeveral deſcents it continued in the Baker family, which lived at South-Church and Bures-Giffard. Edward Baker Eſq; who dyed 3 April 1535, held this capital meſſuage or tenement called Kent, and 100 acres of arable, and 40 of paſture in this pariſh, of the King as of the Honor of Ralegh, by the third part of a knight's fee.——James Baker, his ſon, held alſo the ſame; and lands and tenements called Much and Little Napiltons, Noldes, Jacomyns, Bromeſhoke, Porters, Kytchen croft, Pettyſhotten, Kettells marſh, Cocokes, Manwey, Dawes tenement, Beremans, Mabell, Brownes, John Woodhams tenement, and Waving, in North and South-Shobery, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of South-Shobery in free ſocage, by fealty, ſuit of court, rent of 35s. 4d. and one heriet after the death of each free-tenant (h).——Henry his ſon and heir, who dyed 8 April 1611, held alſo this maner of Kents in North and South-Church, of Sir John Carey, Lord Hunſdon, of his Honor of Ralegh, by one knight's fee, and ſuit of court, paying 16 d. yearly for hidage; worth, beyond repriſes 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. He left three daughters his co-heirs, Abigail, Judith, and Anne (i). See above, p. 258.]

It was purchaſed by George Aſſer Eſq; and now belongs to Thomas Drew Eſq;

Mr. Richard Dawes; Richard Kennet, &c. have alſo ſome lands here: as had the late John Lodwick Eſq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Tower hath on the top of it a ſpire ſhingled, and contains 2 Bells.

This Church belonged to the Priory of Prittlewell, till its diſſolution when it came to the Crown, and hath continued in it ever ſince.

It was a Rectory untill about the year 1423, when the great Tithes were appropriated to that Priory (k), and a Vicarage inſtituted here. In 1719 this Vicarage was augmented by Bp. Robinſon with 200l. to which were added 200 l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Qu. Elizabeth, 27 Janu. 1591, granted the Rectory of North-Shobury to Henry Beſt and John Welles. K. James I, however it came again to the Crown, granted it, 17 September 1603, to Robert Cary, to be held of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich (l). This was perhaps no more than a licence to alienate.

This pariſh is rated to the land tax at 508 l.

WAKERING.

Two contiguous Pariſhes of this name, with the two Shoeburies, are the South-eaſt corner of this County, bounded by the Sea.

They are diſtinguiſhed from each other by the names of Much or Great, and Little. Beſides Wachering they are ſtyled in records Wacheling.

From whence the name was formed is not plain, unleſs it was from Wachel, or Walcher, a Saxon owner; and inᵹ, meadow, or paſture. There is ſuch a word as ƿacoꞃ, ſignifying viler, of leſſer value; and watching; but neither of them ſeems to be applicable to this place.

14. GREAT WAKERING

is the largeſt of the two Pariſhes, as the name imports.

This Pariſh belonged, at the time of the Survey, and even before, to Suene of Eſſex [W], no former owner being mentioned.

In this pariſh are two Maners, 1. The maner of Great Wakering. 2. . . . that of Barrow-hall with Adam's Fee.

The Maner of GREAT WAKERING.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, as mentioned under Raley, and elſewhere, this Lordſhip came early into the noble and numerous family of Nevill, fully mentioned in the other Volume, p. 371. under Wethersfield. Hugh de Nevill forfeited it, for being in arms with Simon de Montfort againſt K. Henry III. But it was reſtored to him again, in 1266, upon giving up his caſtle and maner of Stoke-Curcy, and other valuable eſtates (m) [X]. His ſon ——John de Nevill, who dyed in 1282, had this maner; which Robert de Brus held under him for life by the ſervice of one knight's fee (n). It was a very conſiderable eſtate; namely then no leſs than 80 l. a year.——Hugh de Nevill, his ſon and heir, being under age, the Wardſhip of him was committed by the King to Henry le Waleys, and Thomas de Weylond had at the ſame time both the Wardſhip and Marriage of him (o). He was afterwards a Knight, and at the time of his deceaſe in 1335, held this maner of the King in capite, as of his Crown, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. Ida his widow had the third part of it for her life. Their ſon—— Sir John de Nevill was found poſſeſſed of the two other parts at the time of his deceaſe 25 July 1358; and, after the death of his widow Alice, and of his mother Ida, the remainder and reverſion of the whole was in William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and his heirs for ever (p). But he dying 16 September 1360 [X*], and his ſon——Humfrey, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton 16 January 1372, before Alice Lady Nevill aforeſaid, which had a life-eſtate in this, and whoſe death did not happen till 1394 (q), therefore the whole did not come till then to the Bohun family; namely, to the two daughters of Humfrey, viz.

Elianor, wife of Thomas of Woodſtock; and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby afterwards K. Henry IV. Upon the partition of the Bohun eſtates in 1421, between Anne Counteſs of Stafford daughter of Elianor, and K. Henry V. ſon of Mary, This was allotted to the ſaid Counteſs, being then valued at 80 l. 6 s. 7 d. ob. with a wood. It came after her into the family of her third huſband William Bourchier, Earl of Eu (r).

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, at the time of his deceaſe, 4 April 1483, held the maner of Great Wakering by the ſervice of 22 s. and the maner of Little Wakering by the ſervice of 12 d. a year, both of the Honor of Raley. William his ſon being dead before him, he was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Henry, Earl of Eſſex (s): who being killed by a fall from his horſe 13 March 1540, it came to his only child

Anne, married to William Parr, Baron of Kendal, and Marquis of Northampton: though ſhe was divorced from him, yet ſhe enjoyed this eſtate till her deceaſe 26 January 1570 (t). [See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255. and more under the next pariſh.] [Y].

It then came to her heir at law,

Walter Devereux, Viſcount Hereford, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, and Earl of Eſſex, grandſon of Sir John Devereux by Cecily Bourchier his wife, aunt to Henry, the laſt Earl of Eſſex. His ſon —— Robert, Earl of Eſſex, ſold it, 18 May 1594, to [X] He had, at the time of his deceaſe, two parts of two parts of this maner: But his ſon Humfrey is not recorded to have had any part of it, only certain lands and tenements in both the Wakerings and Shoebury, which were before Sir John Peiton's, and Land-marſh and Littleboremead. Inquiſ. 34 Edw. III. & 6 Ric. II.—Alice Lady Nevill had the third part of two parts of the maners of Great and Little Wakering. Inquiſ. 18 Ric. II.

Pat. 50 Hen. III.

[Y] In 1430, a fine paſſed between Humfrey Duke of Glouceſter 4th ſon of K. Henry IV. and others, plaintiffs, and Anne Counteſs of Stafford, deforc' of the maners of Great and Little Wakering and Southorp, the right of William Newbold. And, in 1431, William releaſed to Duke Humfrey, and others, all his right in thoſe maners, and 6 meſſuages, 380 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 160 of paſture, and two fleets of water. Clauſ. 9, & 10 Hen. VI.

Sir John Cope Kt. and Bart. had the reverſion of both the Wakerings.

They were afterwards in the family of Higham, whoſe reſidence was at Boreham: John Higham Eſq; of Sir Hughs in Great Badow, married Sarah, daughter of Edward, younger ſon of Sir William Harris of Shenfield, in Margareting; whoſe ſon,——John Higham Eſq; dyed poſſeſſed of it 26 November 1735, leaving two daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, and Sarah, one of whom was married to John Tyrell Eſq; of Hatfeild-Peverell, a near relation of the late Sir John Tyrell Bart. and the other to Captain Richardſon.

The Maner houſe hath been long demoliſhed: It ſtood by Pales Pitt at the coming into the ſtreet. The Courts are kept at Little-Wakering-hall.

The Maner of BARROW-HALL is the next conſiderable one in this pariſh. The manſion houſe ſtands half a mile weſt from the Church. In old records this Maner is written Berrewera, and Villa de Berwe. It takes in a great part of this pariſh, and the demeſne lands extend into Little Wakering.

Phindac was poſſeſſed of it before the Conqueſt; and at the time of the Survey Richard ſon of Earl Giſlebert [Z].

The ancienteſt poſſeſſors after that upon record were Families ſurnamed Coleman, and de Berwe.

In 1289, Gilbert Coleman, held a marſh called Sandfleet, in Rochford Hundred, containing 100 acres (u). We ſhall find this mentioned afterwards as parcel of this maner.

William de Barwe, who dyed in 1366, held the Maner of Barwe, jointly with Joane his wife deceaſed, of Sir Walter Fitz-Humfrey. ——James his grandſon, was his heir.

Maud, wife of John Coleman, held it in 1374, of John Welde, by knight's ſervice, with lands in Pritelwell, and Sandfleet-marſh, containing 100 acres. ——James de Barowe was her ſon and heir. She had been married firſt to William Malden (w).

It was afterwards in the Family ſurnamed de Pritelwell. For John Pritelwell granted to John Wakeryng, Clerk, and others, a meſſuage, one mill, 256 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 146 of wood, 140 of marſh and 50s. 4d. rent, in Barwe, Little Wakering, and Thunderſleigh, which they conveyed to John Pyncherne in 1407. And to Thomas Pynchon and Alice his wife, in 1426, Robert Warenor, and others, granted their maner of Barwe-hall.—In 1458, Thomas Pynchon ſon of the laſt mentioned, and Elizabeth his wife, granted this maner, and lands and tenements called Colmans, with Doveyerd marſh, and Sandflete, in Prittlewell, Canvey-iſland &c. to William Lawſell, Gent. The ſame year, Thomas Spencer &c. granted their maner of Barrow-hall, with one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 2 of wood, and 500 of marſh, in Little Wakering, Pritelwell and Eſtwood. And, in 1482, John Brigge releaſed all his right in this maner, and in Colmans, Doveyerd-marſh, and Sandflete, to William Lawſell, and James Adſere, Gent. and to Richard Shadwell, Eſq; (x). Concerning the Pynchon family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 65, 66.

It was next in the Shaa family of Horndon on the hill. Sir John Shaa, at the time of his deceaſe in 1503, held this maner of Barowe-hall, with appertenances, and 300 acres of arable, 300 of paſture, 100 of meadow, and 400 of wood, in Little Barowe, Colmans, both the Wakerings, Prittwell, Eaſtwood, Leigh, Reyleigh, Thunderſley, the two Shoberys, Shopland, Sutton, Hadleigh, and Stanbridge, of the King, as of the Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of 16d. a year. His ſon——Edward, or Edmund, Shaa, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 24 March 1532, leaving an only daughter and heir

Alice, then four years old (y). She brought it afterwards to her huſband William Poley Eſq; a branch of the Poleys of Wormingford in this County, and of Boxted in Suffolk. [See above, p. 217. and in the other Volume, p. 233. 484.]

But, in the mean time we find, that Thomas Shaa Eſq; dyed 22 May 1546, poſſeſſed of the maners of Barrowhall and Colmans, which he held of the King, as of his Honor of Rayleigh; and left——Thomas his ſon ten years old (z), who probably dyed young; for it centered in the Poley family.

Alice Poley aforeſaid dyed 7 March 1558, and her huſband William Poley 17 Decemb. 1587, holding this maner of Barrow-hall with Aldams fee, of the Honor of Raileigh.——John Poley Eſq; their eldeſt ſon and heir, afterwards knighted, at the time of his deceaſe 7 December 1593, held this maner, with Aldams fee; and two marſhes called Barrow gore, and Dovyerd, and two woods named Great and Little Wybornes &c. and Samuells farm in South-Church.——William his brother and heir was then 24 years old (a). It continued in this family till 23d Auguſt 1720, when Mr. Poley ſold the maner and demeſnes, with Samuells farm, to

Robert Surman Eſq; Deputy-Caſhier of the South-Sea Company, for the ſum of 4749 l. 8 s. 2 d. Upon the forfeiture of his eſtates, This, then valued at 133 l. a year, being ſold, 14 December 1723, by the South-Sea Company, was purchaſed, for the Sum of 2950 l. by

Samuel Ruſh Eſq; of the Park in Southwark. He dyed 13 March 1724-5, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——John Ruſh Eſq; whoſe ſon——John Ruſh of Benhall-hall Eſq; enjoyed it: and it continues in that family. [For a further account of them, ſee the other Volume, p. 300.]

There is another Barrow-hall in Eaſt wood, and Berwes in Little Thurrock.

Adams Fee, ſo named from Adam Fitz-Simon, otherwiſe Aldams Fee, and vulgarly Aldermans, a reputed Maner that goes with Barrowe-hall, is only a Farm of about 20 l. a year. Nothing belongs to it but ſome free-hold tenements. It abutteth on the road leading to the Church.

Lovetotes, is a conſiderable Eſtate lying in the two Wakerings, and pariſhes of Shopland, Great Stambridge, Little Shobery, South-Church, Ley, Raley, Bemfleet, and Stanford; and holden of the Honor of Raley by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee.

It took its name from the Lovetot family, and is ſuppoſed to be the carucate of land, which Walter de St. John held in 1259. He had a ſon, Walter, who dyed without iſſue; and a daughter

Margery, married to Edward Shardlow. In 1276, they paſſed this eſtate by fine; being 140 acres of arable, and 160 of marſh; to John de Lovetot (b).

William de Brianzon, who dyed in 1310, held this tenement, comprehending a capital meſſuage, 244 acres of arable, paſture, and wood, and 7 l. 4 s. rent. And of Adam Fitz-Simon he held 10 acres of arable called Wanelockes-land.——John was his ſon and heir.

John Bluet, and his wife Alianore, held it about the year 1348. and we find it then deſcribed as one capital meſſuage, a dove-houſe, 130 acres of arable, 60 acr. of wood. Littlebingſworth marſh, belonging to it, held of the Honor of Bologne, by the like ſervice (c).

The ſaid Alianore had for her firſt huſband William Brianzon; and her own and her huſbands Bluet's heirs, were, Sir Peter de Duſaunce, ſon of Margaret one of their daughters; and Alianore, another of their daughters (d). They gave name to a nominal Maner called Bluets; which belonged in 1372 to Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford, and Thomas de Staple held then of it 14 acres of land in this pariſh (e).

Richard Allen, who dyed 23 June 1517, held 600 acres of marſh called Small-goore and Temple-goore, in this pariſh and Fulnes, by fealty.

A meſſuage here called Goodens, and a Marſh called New marſh, belonged in 1543 to Edward Baker Eſq; (f).

From this pariſh a Family of note took their ſurname De Wakering. John Wakering of Wakering-place, living partly in the reigns of K. Edward III. and K. Richard II. had two ſons, William; and John, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter.——William, the eldeſt ſon, was father of William; and of John, that was Maſter of the Rolls, and Keeper of the Privy Seal in the time of K. Henry V.——William, eldeſt ſon and heir, had two ſons named John. One was Archdeacon of Canterbury; conſecrated Biſhop of Norwich 31 May 1416; a perſon eminent for wiſdom and learning, and one of the Engliſh Divines ſent to the Council of Conſtance; alſo a benefactor to Benet, or Corpus-Chriſti-College Cambridge. He had Canewdon and other lands in this County, and dyed 9 April 1425 (g).——John, the other ſon, ſold, in 1427, all his right in Wakering-place to Robert Darcy. He had two ſons, Ralph and John.——Ralph was father of——Richard; and he of——Edmund; who by his firſt wife, Margaret daughter of John Aucher had James; Gilbert, a knight, who dyed 24 Decemb. 1616; and Richard, that dyed in 1583. By his ſecond wife he had Ralph, father of Gilbert, and John.——James Wakering, the eldeſt ſon and heir, lived at Kelvedon; and by Margaret daughter of John Bird had——John, his ſon and heir, of Lincolns-inn, and of Church-hall in Kelvedon in 1634. He married Mary, eldeſt daughter and coheir of Dionyſius Palmer of Felſted Eſq; and had by her Dionyſius; and Mary, wife of Thomas Wilcox of Tottenham Eſq;——Dionyſius Wakering Eſq; the ſon and heir, was one of the Knights for this County in Oliver Cromwell's parliaments in 1654 and 1656.

Mary, his ſole daughter and heir, was the firſt wife of Francis St. John, of Langthorpe in Northamptonſhire, Eſq; (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 150.] [A].

Mr. James Cownden; Robert Harriſon; Richard Baker; Abraham Beard &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Here are Alms houſes for ſix people, but without endowment.

Through this pariſh is the paſſage into Foulneſſe-iſland.

And here is a Fair July 25.

The Church, dedicated to St. Nicolas, ſtands pleaſantly in the ſtreet, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In the Tower, which hath a Spire ſhingled, are 4 Bells.

This Church was given to Bileigh-Abbey near Maldon, and was a Rectory in their gift till 1283, when Richard de Graveſend, Biſhop of London, by his act dated at Copford, appropriated the great Tithes to them; reſerving the Collation of the Vicarage to himſelf and ſucceſſors, Biſhops of London, in whom it hath continued ever ſince.

Upon the ſuppreſſion of Bileigh-Abbey, the Rectory of this Church was granted, in 1538, to Richard Mabott, Cl. Maſter of the Hoſpital of St. Thomas the Martyr, in Southwark, and his ſucceſſors. But upon the ſuppreſſion of that, it was granted, in 1551, to John Greſham, and his heirs (i). John Southcott paſſed it by fine, in 1556, to Sir John Ayliffe, who had it at the time of his deceaſe 20 October 1556 (k).

It was lately in Capt. Leonard Kilham, and now in his heirs.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1167 l.

15. LITTLE WAKERING

lies north of the laſt.

A freeman was poſſeſſed of this in Edward the Confeſſor's time, and after his death Robert the ſon of Wimarce. At the Survey it was part of the large poſſeſſions of Suene of Eſſex [B].

Here is only one Maner.

Wakering-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands a little way north-eaſt from the Church.

This Maner was in the ſame hands, as that of Great Wakering. Namely, after the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, in John de Nevyll, who held it of John de Brews [C], by the ſervice of 1 d. Hugh de Nevyll, who held it of the King as of the Honor of Reyle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and ſuit of Court, &c. John Nevill, of Eſſex (*).——Humfrey de Bohun (†).——Henry Bourchier Earl of Eſſex (l).——Henry, his ſon.——Anne, his daughter and heir, married to William Parr, Marquis of Northampton. Under him, Thomas Shaa, who dyed 22 May, 1546, held one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 400 of marſh, &c. in Little-Wakering, Shopland, and Sutton, called Shelford, and Bradeworth (m).

And when the ſaid Anne Counteſs of Northamptom dyed, 26 January 1570, ſhe held the maners of Great and Little Wakering, with appertenances, and 100 meſſuages, 40 cottages, 100 gardens, 60 orchards, a water-mill, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 1000 of paſture, 3000 of freſh Marſh, and 2000 of ſalt marſh, . . . s. rent, free fiſhery, wrec of the ſea, and a Beacon; in Great and Little Wakering, Eaſtwood, Lee, South Bemfleet, North and South Subery, Barling, Fulnes, South-Church, and Pacleſham; and free-warren in thoſe pariſhes; of the Honor of Raleigh, by knight's ſervice, then worth 60 l. a year (n).

This eſtate came afterwards into the Devereux Family Earls of Eſſex (o); and to ——Sir John Cope; &c. and deſcended as Great Wakering to John Tyrell Eſq; Landwic, a large farm; and Oldbury, and Jaques, in Great and Little Wakering, belong to John Henniker Eſq; ſee above, p. 17.

Lovetots, deſcribed under Great Wakering, lies partly in this pariſh.

The Grapenel family, of Lachindon, had ſome lands here in 1298 (p).

John Pritelwell had in this pariſh Barmesfletemarſh, and land and tenements called Peverels, in 1420 (q).

Hugh Oldham, Biſhop of Exeter, held in this pariſh, in 1519, of Henry Earl of Eſſex, 226 acres, and 60 acr. of arable land, by the ſervice of 10 s. per ann. (r).

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Tower hath a ſpire ſhingled. On the right hand ſide of the Belfrey door are the Arms of Biſhop Wakering, A pelican with a mitre in chief. Probably he was at the charge of building the Tower. On the left hand ſide, the Arms of France, England, and Bohun, quarterly.

This Church belonged of old to the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew near Weſt-Smithfeild, London, to which the Rectory or Great Tithes were appropriated, and they continued patrons of the Vicarage till their Suppreſſion, when they came to the Crown. K. Henry VIII. refounding that Hoſpital, granted, 13 January 1546, among other things, the Rectory and Church of Little Wakering, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, and Shernewarles marſh in this pariſh, to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London (ſ), Governors of that Hoſpital.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 784 l.

The Priory of Stoke in Suffolk had a portion of tithes of 32 s. given to it, moſt probably by Ralph Wakering [D].

[C] In 1281, a Fine was levied between Lettice de Toydon, plaintiff, and John de Briwes, tenant, of 19 l. rent in Little Wakering and South Bemflet, the right of John Briwes. Fine 9 Edw. I.

[D] For that Ralph, ſon of John Wakering, who ſold Wakering-Place in Great-Wakering to Darcy, diſpoſed of his lands in Eſſex, by reaſon of the Wars between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, in K. Edward the IVth's time, and betook himſelf to the College of Stoke near Clare; giving lands to that College in this pariſh, from whence tythes were due and rented by the Abbey of Bileigh. This is moſt probable, but not quite certain.

or Berling. The name ſeems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Baꞃ, a boar, and inᵹ, a meadow, or paſture; with the addition of l in the middle.

This pariſh lies north of the Wakerings, near a Creek that communicates with the Rochford-Stream, adjoining to Potten-iſland.

It belonged to the Crown in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, who gave it to the Cathedral Church of St. Pauls in London, as appears by his Charter (s) [E].

At the time of the Survey it was found to belong to the Canons of St. Paul's [F]: And, in 1181, this Maner had in demeſne 480 acres of arable land, each acre worth 6 d. a year; 18 acres, ſometimes ſown ſometimes paſture, each worth 8 d. and 100 acres of marſh, worth each, one year with another, 3 s. And in the marſh and common or mowing ground, was feed for 300 ſheep with weathers. The mill anſwered weekly for one buſhel of corn ground free. There was keeping for 6 cows, the profit of each of which was 2 s. a year (t) [G].

BARLING-HALL,

the Maner houſe, ſtands about half a mile north-eaſt from the Church.

This Eſtate continues in the Cathedral Church of St Paul's, which hath granted it upon renewable leaſes to ſeveral perſons. George Aſſer Eſq; held ſo the demeſnes of the Maner, and a Marſh; and from him they deſcended to

Thomas Drew Eſq; who married his grand-daughter. [See above, p. 298.]

is another ſmall Maner in this pariſh, ſo named from an owner or occupier. We find in records, That one John de Mockyng, who dyed in 1362, held land in Horndon (u).

The manſion-houſe is half a mile weſt from the Church.

It belonged to a Freeman in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, to Odo biſhop of Bayeux [H].

We have no account of it after that till K. Edward the IVth's reign. Then Robert Fitz-Symond held the maner of Mokkyns within the Hundred of Rochford; —— Joane, wife of Robert Tymperley, was his daughter and heir (w): See above under North Shoebury.

Thomas Wiſeman, Gent. at the time of his deceaſe 22 Novemb. 1580, held this maner of Mucking-hall, with a parcel of land called Taylors in Barling. —— John, ſon of his ſon William, was his heir (x). [See above under N. Bemfleet.]

In 1630, Dionyſius Palmer held in fee the maner of Mucking-Hall in Barling, Shopland, Great and Little Wakering, and Fulneſs; —— Mary, wife of John Wakering, and Catharine, wife of John Wiſeman, were his daughters and coheirs (y). By this maner's extending into other Pariſhes, one might have gueſſed, Odo Biſhop of Bayeux had been hereabout, who was an excellent improver of demeſnes.

This Eſtate belonged afterwards to Sir Francis St. John, Bart. and then to Sir John Bernard, who had married his daughter, now to his ſon —— Sir Robert Bernard, Bart.

In 1253, Henry de Cornhill, Dean of St. Pauls, purchaſed a marſh of Radulphus Cementarius for ten marks. This marſh is leaſed out with the reſt of the maner's demeſnes.

In 1254, Abſolon, ſon of Richard de la Weylate, gave lands in Barling to the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls. We find a family of Le Waleys or de la Weylate, alſo in Shopland, perhaps ſo named from their reſidence near the Sea-walls, or in Wallet iſland.

In 1322, the Church of St. Pauls came to a compoſition with Adam, ſon of Simon de Barling, whereby the ſaid Adam and his tenants obliged themſelves to raiſe a wall on his own grounds to keep out the inundation of the ſea or river, and a perch of wall upon the demeſne lands of the Dean and Chapter; in conſideration of which he and his heirs were to have the entire profit of the Fiſhery of the upper part of the Stream for ever (z).

Dame Jane Sith Lewes gave Bolles croft of 4 acres, and Stones croft of 1 acre, probably for an Obit (a).

Here are no charitable Gifts; but only near the Church is an Ale-houſe, the rent of which is applied to the reparation of the Church.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace, tiled. The Chancel, and a ſouth aiſle belonging to it, are leaded. At the eaſt end ſtands the Tower, with a Spire ſhingled, containing 4 Bells.

This Rectory hath belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls ever ſince the reign of K. Edward the Confeſſor: They are not only Patrons but alſo Ordinaries of the place; which is ſubject wholly to their peculiar juriſdiction.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 716l.

17. SHOPLAND

lies between Barling, Sutton, South-Church, and Prittlewell.

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Schopland, Scoland, Shopeland, Shupeland, Scopeland. From whence it is derived, we cannot with certainty ſay: There is ſuch a Saxon word as Scol, a ſchool, and Scop, a poet; and land is a common word: but how applicable to this place, we ſubmit to the reader's judgment.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, a Freeman, and afterwards Ingelric, were poſſeſſed of Scopeland; Euſtace the great Earl of Bologne held it at the time of the Survey [*H].

There are two Maners in this pariſh. 1. The Maner of Shopland. 2. . . . that of Botyllers, or Butlers.

SHOPLAND-HALL,

the maner-houſe of the firſt, is ſituated near the Church.

This Maner belonged early to the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

By a certificate, in K. Henry the third's reign, of the knights fees of Robert Fitz-Walter belonging to his Barony of Baynard, it appears, that Philip de Cantelough held under him the fifth part of a fee in Scoland (b).

In 1289, Henry le Waleys held this maner of Scopland of the Barony of Bologne, by ſuit at Wyham Court from month to month (c).—— Walter Fitz-Robert, i. e. ſon of Robert the firſt of the Fitz-Walter family, left it to his ſon ——Robert Lord Fitz-Walter; and to him was granted a Charter of free-warren through all his demeſne lands in Shopland and Shenefend (d). This Lord enfeoffed in this maner Robert de la Ward, who married his daughter Ida, or Idonea; and in 1307, they held it jointly of the King in capite as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (e). By this Ida Robert had one daughter and coheir,

Margaret; but by a former wife had another daughter and coheir, named

Joanna, married to Hugh de Meynill [I]. In 1333 theſe two, Hugh and Joanna, held a moiety of the maner of Shopland of the King, in ca. by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee, and two ſuits yearly, at St. Martins le Grand London, and at the Court of the Honor of Bologne at Wytham from month to month, for the whole maner (f). We hear no further of Meynill, or Meignill as he is ſome time called, or his heirs, in this pariſh: ſo that probably they dyed without iſſue.

Ida was remarried to Hugh de Nevill, and at the time of her deceaſe in 1361, held this whole maner, which her father had given her for her life (g).

As to Margaret, or Margery, the other coheireſs, ſhe was married to Thomas de Staple Eſq; And they two held jointly in her right, a moiety of this maner, and of Heghwerd marſh; and 6 acres more in this pariſh; of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne. They held alſo jointly, 3 meſſuages, 300 acr. of arable, 3 of meadow, 5 of wood, 500 of marſh, 30s. rent, and a pound of pepper and of cummin, in this pariſh, and in Pritelwell, Hadleigh, Raureth, and Great Wakering, partly of the Honor of Bologne, and partly of that of Raley. Likewiſe they held, in this pariſh, Talteſacre of Thomas att Cock, by the ſervice of 2 s. And 10 acres of Henry Coc, by the ſervice of 3 s. a year.—Moreover Apetonhall in Canewdon. This Thomas was Serjeant at arms to K. Edward III. had the Bailyſhip of Rochford Hundred; and dying in 1372, was buried in this Church, with an Epitaph, being ſucceeded by his ſon——Richard. [See above, p. 268.] (b). Margery, widow of Thomas de Staple, was remarried to Sir John Chanceaux, and at the time of her deceaſe, in 1389, held 2 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 5 of wood, 300 of marſh, &c. as above. (i). [See more under Prittlewell, and Hockley, p. 287. 295.]

[I] This account we have from records. " Shupland manerium in Com' Eſſex datum per Robertum Filium Walteri cum Ida filia Roberto de la Warde, tentum in capite de Honore Bononie. Idonea illa fuit uxor ſecunda predicti Roberti per quam Margareta filia & coheres. Per primam uxorem habuit Johannam filiam & coheredem nuptam Hugoni de Meynill.

Shopland maner remained ſeveral years divided into two Moieties.

In 1381, Thomas att Coke, and Catharine his wife, held a moiety of the maner of Shopland; a moiety of Heyward-marſh excepted; of the gift of Edward de Wodeham. [See under North-Shobury.]——Thomas was his ſon and heir (k).

In 1488, Robert Maudeſley confirmed to Thomas Burgoyne and John Sygar of London a moiety of his maner of Shopeland; and his maner of Botillers (l). We have no account how Maudeſley came into either.

Margaret, wife of Richard Churchyard, which dyed 16 November 1498, held a moiety of this maner; and left——James her ſon and heir (m).

Sir Thomas Darcy was the next poſſeſſor of this maner, and ſold it in 1535 to William Harris Eſq; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 21 September 1555, held it of Richard Lord Riche, as of his Honor of Reyleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and then worth 20 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year.——William his ſon ſucceeded him (n) ——Chriſtopher Harrys Eſq; held alſo Shopland-hall of the Honor aforeſaid, at the time of his deceaſe 2 September 1569, but his ſon——Chriſtopher did not (o).

Darcy's and Harris's poſſeſſion muſt be underſtood only of a Moiety of this Maner. For, in 1561, Richard Lord Riche purchaſed a Moiety of the maner of Shopland-hall of Roland Clerke, and Elizabeth Fane, widow, by a fine levied: for which they had the Queen's pardon, 4 Novemb. 1562 (p). The Lord Riche dyed poſſeſſed of it, 12 June 1566, as did his ſucceſſors Earls of Warwick (q). Upon the partition of their eſtates this came among the coheirs. The quit-rents of this maner in 1651, were 28 s. 4 d.

It belonged afterwards to William Gillingham, of Kent, Gent. who had ten children——Iſaac, his eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded him.

It is now in Edmund Tyrell, of Stowmarket Eſq;

The Maner of BOTYLLERS, was originally a diſtinct Hamlet; being ſtyled in records Butlers and Shopland; and the Maner, and Advowſon of the Church, of Butlers.

The manſion-houſe lies on the right hand ſide of the road going from Barling to this Church.

It took that name from ſome ancient owners. William le Botyller, who dyed in 1261, held of Robert de Tybetott 102 acres of arable, and one marſh, in Shopland, by the rent of 36 s. per ann. ——Hugh was his ſon and heir. This is the family which gave name to Butlers-Hamſtalls at Prittlewell; and had alſo 40 acres of arable and marſh in Wakering (r).

As the maner of Shopland-Hall went with a daughter of Robert Fitz-Walter to de la Ward, another daughter might be married to a Botyller; but of this I have no evidence. Hugh le Botiller aforeſaid, at the time of his deceaſe in 1279, held, by the ſame payment as above, this eſtate, of the heir of . . . Scopland (s); which is a hint that Botyllers was derived from the Hall maner. ——William Botiller, his ſon and heir, dyed in 1328. He held in Shopland one meſſuage, with 150 acres of arable, of Hugh de Nevyle, in ſocage, by payment of 24 s. per ann. and ſuit at the Court of Shopland every three weeks;——John was his ſon and heir (t); of whom we do not hear any further here, nor of his family.

In 1448, Robert Maudeſley confirmed to Thomas Burgoyne, and John Sygar abovementioned, his maner of Butlers in Shopland (u).

James Keloun, and Editha his wife, paſſed this eſtate by fine, in 1501, to Hugh Oldham, made Biſhop of Exeter in 1504. At the time of his deceaſe, 25 June 1519, he held a moiety of the maner of Shopland, 300 acres of arable and paſture, and 3 l. rent here, of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.——Ralph, ſon of his elder brother John, was his heir (w).

In 1562, Richard Lord Riche, and Thomas Franke Eſq; purchaſed this maner, with the moiety of the maner of Shopland-Hall, of Roland Clerke, and Elizabeth Fane widow, by fine, for which they had the Queen's pardon (x). Richard Lord Riche was poſſeſſed of this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe; and ſo was his ſon —— Robert. His grandſon —— Robert, Earl of Warwick, who dyed 24 March 1619, held the maner of Butlers with appertenances, and a moiety of the maner of Shopland-hall, and 20 meſſuages, 10 cottages, 10 tofts, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 60 of wood, 160 of marſh, 100 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent in Butlers, Shopland, Sutton, Pritwell, Leigh, Hadleigh, Great Wakering, Shobery, Rochford, Hawkwell, Rawreth, and Crekeſheth; and the Advowſons of the Churches of Butlers and Shopland (y). In 1651, the rent of the moiety of the maner of Shopland, and of Butlers farm, was 120 l. a year.

Upon the partition of the Eſtates of the noble Family of Warwick, this was purchaſed by Richard Lord Viſcount Caſtlemain, afterwards Earl Tilney, who ſold it again to his Steward

Thomas Holt, Eſq; whoſe nephew

Thomas White, Gent. enjoys it now.

Berney Brograve, Eſq; Mr. Thomas Carr; John Martin &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

In this ſmall pariſh, there were, in 1721, but four Farm houſes, a Vicarage-houſe, and one cottage, though formerly more. Nor was there any Ale-houſe, nor Poors-rate. There are in it no copyhold-lands, nor other lands paying to any maner whatſoever.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel; and the whole tiled [K].

This Church was given to the Abbey of St. Oſith in this County; and to it the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated, and a Vicarage ordained about the year 1237. Of this Rectory, and of the Advowſon of the Vicarage, the Abbot and Convent remained poſſeſſed till their diſſolution. They then came to the Crown, which preſented to the Vicarage from 1550 till 1583 (z). Bp. Bonner had it in 1557 (a), but it was ſoon taken from him. In 1587, February 9, Qu. Elizabeth granted this Rectory and Church of Shopland, with appertenances to Edmund Downing, and Miles Dodding, &c. to hold of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in ſocage, and by payment of 3 l. 6 s. 8 d (b). The 9th of July following, they conveyed the premiſſes, by Indenture, to

Thomas Tyrell, citizen of London; and they have continued ever ſince in his Family, being now in Edmund Tyrell of Stowmarket Eſq;

This ſmall pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 313 l.

The Vicarage is of ſo ſmall value that not being worth the Charge of Inſtitution, it was held many years only by ſequeſtration.

18. PAKELESHAM is a kind of peninſula, having on the eaſt Wallaſea-iſland.

The name is otherwiſe written in records, Pacheſham, Padeſham, Pageſham, Paggleſham, Pakeleſham, Pakleſham, Pateleſham.

Ham, the latter part of the name, ſignifies houſe, farm, or village; as for Pakel, or Pagel, it ſeems to have been the name of ſome ancient Saxon owner.

In this pariſh are four Maners, or reputed Maners. 1. The Maner of Pakleſham, or Church-hall. 2. Eaſt-Hall, and 3. . . South-hall. 4. Weſt-hall.

CHURCH-HALL

ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church, which occaſioned the name.

Ingulf gave this Maner to the Church of St. Peter at Weſtminſter, 29 December 1066, and the grant was confirmed by K. Edward the Confeſſor (*). That Church held it at the time of the Survey [L], and remained poſſeſſed of it till the diſſolution of Monaſteries.

Under the Abbey it was holden by Families ſurnamed de Maldon, and Warner.

William de Maldon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1368, held the maner of Cherche-Hall in Pakeleſham, of the Abbot of Weſtminſter in ſocage, by the rent of 9 l. per ann. (c).——John, his ſon, or grandſon, held it in 1428, for the rent of 10 l. Then it came to

John Warner of Warners-Hall in Great-Waltham, Eſq; ſon of Joane ſiſter of Maldon. He held it in fee-farm in 1439. and his ſon——John Warner, in 1444; being then ſucceeded by his ſon——John Warner; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1473, held this maner of Pakeleſham, alias Chirche-hall, and 200 acres of arable, 100 acr. of ſalt-marſh, 100 of paſture, 8 of wood, and 40 s. rent of the Abbot of Weſtminſter (d).—— Henry Warner held it alſo at the time of his deceaſe 21 March 1504, by the ſervice of 9 l. a year (e): being the laſt who held it of the Abbot.——John, his ſon, held it of Richard Lord Riche as of his maner of South-Bemflete, by fealty and yearly rent of 9 l. He was ſucceeded in 1552, by his brother——Henry (f). [For a more particular account of the Warner family, ſee the other Volume, p. 84, 85. 250.]

In 1554, Henry Warner paſſed this eſtate by fine to Antony Browne, Eſq; afterwards knighted, with the Advowſon of Packleſham-Church (g).

If Browne bought the Advowſon, he ſeems to have been over-reached, for no private perſon preſented after the Abbey but Sir Robert Southwell, in 1545, and that is ſaid to be for that one turn. And Qu. Mary granted the Advowſon, 3 March 1554, to Edmund Bonner, Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors. Sir Antony Browne dyed 16 May 1567, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, as did his great nephew——Wiſtan Browne Eſq; 1 Auguſt 1580. And Wiſtan's uncle and next ſurviving heir——John Brown Eſq; 26 February

1585 (b) [M]. It continued in this Family till about the year 1661, when Sir Antony Browne ſold it to

Sir Francis St. John. But it belongs now to John Butler Eſq; of Warminghurſt in Suſſex, Knight of the Shire for that County.

The Maners of EAST-HALL, and SOUTH-HALL.

I join them together, becauſe they were for ſeveral years in the ſame poſſeſſors. Eaſt-hall was known at firſt only by the general name of The Maner of Pakleſham, and Pakleſham-hall.

They are ſtyled Eaſt-hall, and South-hall, on account of their ſituation with regard to the Church, from which each of them is diſtant about half a mile.

Theſe lands belonged, in Edward the Conſeſſor's reign, to two Freemen: At the time of the Survey they were holden by William de Warren; and Robert ſon of Corbucion [N].

The ancienteſt poſſeſſors after them upon record, were the Families of Coggeſhall, and Sutton. Ralph de Coggeſhall, who dyed in 1305, held the maner of Pakeleſham of Sir Drugo de Barentyne, by the ſervice of 2 marks a year, and ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford from three weeks to three weeks. In which maner there was a tenement called Rogwerd, a member of the ſame, with 150 acres of land, holden of the heirs of Thomas de Stodham, by the ſervice of one pound of cummin.——John de Coggeſhall, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held alſo this maner of Pakleſham, in 1339, of Drogo Barentyne, one of the heirs of William de Blamſter of Childe Canefeild, by the ſervice of two marks; which Drogo held the ſaid maner of Adomar de Valence, by knight's ſervice, and ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford; and 2d. for Ward-penny, and 6d. for hidage.——John de Coggeſhall, at the time of his deceaſe in 1361, held alſo this maner of Pageſham of Warin Truſſel, by the ſervice of two marks, and the maner of Rogherd of the Prior of Leghes.——Henry was his ſon and heir (i). We hear no more of the Coggeſhall Family here. See more of them in the other Volume, p. 162.

In 1340, Hugh de Naunton held in Pakkeſham lands and tenements of the Honor of Raley; by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (k): but which of theſe maners it was, is not more particularly ſpecified.

Sir Richard Sutton granted, in 1373, to Robert Fitz-William of Newendon a moiety of the maner of Southalle in Pakleſham, and a moiety of Talward marſh in Great Stambridge. And a moiety of the ſame was releaſed, in 1387, by Robert de Teye, to William, ſon and heir of the ſaid Robert Fitz-William. Again, in 1417, John Fordham Eſq; releaſed to Lewis John Eſq; and others, all his right in the maner of Southalle, and in Talward marſh (l).

Theſe maners were ſoon after united, in the poſſeſſion of the Pakeleſham family; ſome of whom held them under James Boteler Earl of Wiltſhire. In 1438, Thomas Pakeleſham releaſed to John Broke and his heirs, all his right in one meſſuage, 12 tofts, 240 acres of arable, and 12s. rent, in this pariſh, and in Great Stambridge, and Canewdon. And Richard Pakeleſham, who dyed in 1453, held this maner of Pakeleſham-hall of James Ormond Earl of Wiltſhire. —— Thomas, his ſon and heir, was then 36 years old (m). [Concerning this Pakeleſham family ſee more under Hockley, Prittlewell, Shobery, &c.]

Thomas Bullen, Earl of Wiltſhire, had this eſtate afterwards; and then his younger daughter

Mary, married firſt to William Carey Eſq; and afterwards to

Sir William Stafford: She held, at the time of her deceaſe, 19 July 1543, Baggotts-marſh, Pakelſham, Eſt-hall, Southall, and divers lands, tenements, &c. thereto belonging. —— Henry Carey, afterwards Lord Hunſdon, was her ſon and heir (n). He ſold theſe maners of Eaſt-hall, and South-hall, with appertenances in Pakelſham, to Richard Lord Riche, who had them at the time of his deceaſe 12 June 1566, they being then 41 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year (o). They continued in that family, Earls of Warwick; and in 1651 Southall was lett for 180 l. a year: and the ſite and demeſnes of Eaſt-hall for 110 l. The quit-rents of this were 8 l. 8 s. 8 d. but Southall kept no Court.

Upon the partition of that noble Family's eſtates, this fell to the ſhare of Sir Henry St. John; and his ſon —— Henry, Viſcount Bolingbroke ſold it to

Sir Francis St. John; from whom they have deſcended to Sir John Bernard; and to——Sir Robert Bernard, Bart. with ſeveral other conſiderable eſtates mentioned before.

The Maner of WEST-HALL was ſo called on account of its ſituation with regard to the Church; from which the manſion houſe is diſtant about a mile weſt.

This maner belonged to a Freeman in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, to Ralph Bainard [O].—— Geffrey, his ſon and ſucceſſor, was father of——William Baynard; who for joining with William Malet, Helias Earl of Maine, and others, in a conſpiracy againſt K. Henry I. was deprived of his Barony, and eſtates: and that King gave them to his Steward,

Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, progenitor of the ancient Earls of Clare, from which Robert deſcended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter. [See in the other Volume, p. 427. 539.]

In 1214, Ralph de Genges held half a knight's fee in Eſſex, in the Hundred of Ratheford (Rochford), of the Barony of Baynard, of Robert Fitz-Walter (p). And, under Robert Fitz-Walter, in 1328, the heirs of Hugh de Bromford held likewiſe half a fee, in the vill of Pakleſham.

The heirs of Robert Fitz-William held the ſame under Walter Fitz-Walter, that dyed in 1386 (q).

Truſbut, married firſt to Thomas Colt Eſq; and afterwards to Sir William Parre, held, at the time of her deceaſe in 1475, the maner of Pateleſham of the Priory of Prittlewell. —— John Colt Eſq; her ſon and heir alſo held the maner of Weſt Hall of the Priory of Prittlewell: and departing this life 22 October 1521, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Sir George Colt (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 485. 491.]

In 1573, William Strangman, held the maner of Weſt-Hall in Pakeleſham of the Lord Rich of his maner of Eaſt-Hall; and dying 8 December that year, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Bartholomew, then 33 years old. He held this maner or tenement called Weſt-hall or Pakelſham-place, and a tenement called Dawes and Michill yard, of Robert Lord Riche as of his maner of Eaſt-hall, by knight's ſervice and payment of 26 s. a year.——Robert was his ſon and heir (s). [See above. p. 280. 287.

William Wiſeman Eſq; of Gr. Badow Park, at the time of his deceaſe 12 October 1622, held this maner, or farm, of Weſthall, with appertenances, of Robert Earl of Warwick, by the foreſaid rent of 26 s. And 43 acres, parcel of the ſame, of John Goldſborough Eſq; of his maner of Church-hall, in ſocage, by the yearly rent of 22 s. 6 d.——William, his ſon and heir, was then 11 years old (t).

It hath paſſed, as the foregoing, from Sir Francis St. John to Sir John Bernard, and Sir Robert Bernard, Barts.

William Kerſteman, Gent. Mr. Nehemiah Brooks &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

In 1473, Robert Fitz Symond held 200 acres of marſh, in this pariſh, and Little Wakering, of the Honor of Railegh (u).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, ſtands low, and is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In the Tower are 3 Bells.

This Rectory was given, with the capital Maner, to Weſtminſter-Abbey, by Ingulf abovementioned, and continued in the gift of that Monaſtery till its ſuppreſſion. When it was turned into a Biſhopric by K. Henry VIII. 17 December 1540, this became part of its endowment. Upon its diſſolution 1 April 1550, K. Edward VI. granted the Rectory of Pagleſham, with others, to Nicolas Ridley, Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors. And Qu. Mary, 3 March 1553, confirmed it to Edmund Bonner, Biſhop of London, and his ſuccceſſors (w).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 741 l.

19. CANEWDON, is next to Pakeleſham, being bounded on the north by the river Crouch.

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Cannedon, Canondon, Canvedon, Canvidon, Canudon, Canwedon, and Carendun. Dun in Saxon ſignifies a Hill, or high ſituation, as the chief of this pariſh is; and the firſt part of the name might be taken from Canute, or Cnut.

It is certain, that the Danes very much infeſted theſe parts. And if ſome one of their chiefs, called Canute, fixed his ſeat or habitation at the Hall here, it might give riſe to the name [P].

It is certain, that it was the Habitation of ſome Romans during their continuance in Britain. For, about 1712, in opening a gravel-pit in a field near the Hall, twelve Urns were found; and, the year after, upon a further ſearch, about 14 or 18 more. They were ſo thin and tender; that, notwithſtanding the utmoſt care, only two could be taken up whole. One was near ſix inches in diameter, the other ſomewhat more.

[P] How much Suene, and his ſon Cnute, infeſted theſe parts, may be ſeen in the Saxon Chronicle, from p. 143. to p. 151. J. Weever ſays, it was ſo called from King Canutus the Dane, who kept his court here; qu. Canuti domus. Fun. Monum. p. 408. But the latter part of the name was certainly from dun, a hill.

In one of them were aſhes and pieces of bone: the reſt were filled with undiſtinguiſhable mould. There were not two exactly alike, but they differed either in the ſubſtance, or ſize, or ſhape, or colour, figures, &c. This account was given by the Rev. George Wheatley, Curate here in 1721; a learned and ingenious perſon, well ſkilled in the Saxon language, who had tranſlated into Engliſh Gregory's Paſtoral, from King Alfred's verſion.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas Pocock, Rector of Danbury, dug here about ſix years after, and found many Urns of ſeveral ſorts of clay, and different ſizes, which immediately fell to pieces; So that he could not preſerve one entire, and they had nothing in them. They lay upon a ſtratum of gravel about eighteen inches from the ſurface of the ground.

This was a place proper enough for an Officer under the Comes Littoris Saxonici, to have an eye upon the Pirates, as he might have acceſs to it either by ſea or by land.

This was one of the Lordſhips belonging to Suene, who moſt probably had it before the Conqueſt, as no former poſſeſſor is mentioned in the Survey [Q].

After the forfeiture of his grandſon Henry de Eſſex, frequently mentioned before, eſpecially in p. 273. this large Pariſh was divided into five Maners. 1. The maner of Canewdon. 2. The maner of Apton-hall. 3. . . . that of Scottys. 4. . . . that of Lamborn-hall. 5. The Hamlet, and maner of Puteſeia.

The Maner of CANEWDON.

Canewdon-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands on the north ſide of the Church. It hath been a ſtrong fortified place, in the manner of a Caſtle, doubly trenched and fenced after the oldeſt faſhion (x): the remains of the Moates are ſtill viſible.

The ancient poſſeſſors upon record after Henry de Eſſex was a Family ſurnamed de Cancellis, in French Chanceaux.

In 1289, John de Cancellis and Joane his wife, held the maner of Canewedon of the King in capite of his Honor of Raleigh, by the ſervice of three parts of a knight's fee.——Joane, his widow, held alſo the ſame, at the time of her deceaſe in 1306.——Sir Giles de Chanceus, their ſon, held it in like manner: and departed this life in 1317 (y).——John Chanceaux, his ſon and heir, was poſſeſſed of this eſtate, and of a marſh here called Le Norde; and of lands in Pakleſham, Rochford, Wakering, and Hockley (z). We have no account of the time of his death, nor of his iſſue. But it ſtill continued in the Chanceaux Family. For, Alianor, daughter of Margery Chanceaux, that dyed in 1370, held one toft, and 10 acres of land in Canewdon, formerly parcel of this maner, by the ſervice of the 30th part of a knight's fee.——John de Chanceaux, her uncle, was her heir.——Margery, wife of Sir John de Chanceux at the time of her deceaſe in 1389, held this maner, and the maner of Poteſhethe (Pudſey) in this pariſh: She had no iſſue by Chanceaux, unleſs it was Alianor abovementioned: But by her firſt huſband, Thomas de Staple, ſhe had Elizabeth, wife of John Pritelwell, and Alice wife of John de Sutton (a). [See above, p. 310.] Some of the Family of Chanceaux have Epitaphs in this Church [R].

We have after that no account of the owners of this eſtate till the year 1485, when it was in the Darcy family. Thomas Darcy who dyed 23 September that year, held the maner of Canewdon, with appertenances, of the King, as of his Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. And the maners of Shernewards, and Loſtmans, holden of this maner.——Roger, his ſon and heir, at the time of his deceaſe 3 September 1508, held alſo the ſame, and the maners of Apeton-hall, and Pudſey-hall, in this pariſh. He had alſo great eſtates at Shopland, Maldon, Little Badow, South-minſter, and other parts in this County.——Thomas Darcy Eſq; his ſon (b), ſold this maner, with lands in this pariſh, Hakewell, Aſſingdon, Pakleſham, Stanbridge, and Wakering, to Thomas Armiger, Eſq; and a fine was levied in 1553. He dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame 3 November 1558, leaving——Thomas his ſon and heir 25 years old (c).

Sir Nathan Wright, of Cranham-hall, Bart. dyed poſſeſſed of this eſtate 16 October 1727. His widow, remarried to Herbert Tryſt Eſq; enjoyed it till her deceaſe 7 December 1741. Sir Nathan's only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth, is married to General Oglethorp, who enjoys this eſtate in her right. [See above, p. 105.]

This Maner being called in Domeſday-book Carendun, is what made Weever ſay that here was a Clarendon-hall. See him, p. 408.

[R] This ſeems to be a branch of him who came in with William the Conqueror from Chauncy or Chanceau near Amiens in Picardie, to be found in the Roll of Battel-Abbey, from whom Sir Henry Chauncy of Hertfordſhire derived himſelf; a Gentleman highly deſerving of his Country, who ſpent near half a life in the laborious ſearch of its Antiquities, and hath left a collection, for its uſefulneſs, ſurpaſſed by none but Sir William Dugdale's Warwickſhire.

name to, a Family ſurnamed de Apeton. William de Apetone, who dyed in 1268, or 1269, held in the village of Canewdone one meſſuage, 200 acres of arable, 35*s.* 7*d.* in homages and ſervices, and a corn-mill, by the ſervice of one knight's fee;——John, his ſon and heir, held in Canewdon and Rochford 280 acres of arable, 10s. rent, and feed in the marſh for 200 ſheep; and left——William his ſon and heir (d).

Another——John Apeton, who dyed in 1321, held a meſſuage with a garden, 240 acres of arable, in this pariſh, 6 acres of wood in Hakewell, and 22 s. rent of aſſize, of the Honor of Reyle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and 8 d. rent to the hidage, ſuit of Court &c. and one marſh in Canefr called Lymwerd, of Peter de Heveningham;——John was his ſon and heir (e).

Thomas de Staple of Shopland, Eſq; dyed in 1372, poſſeſſed of this maner except Acrefleet-marſh, and it went, as Canewdon Maner, to his female heirs.

Roger Darcy had it in 1508.——Sir Thomas and Geffrey Darcy in 1550. and——Anne Darcy, widow in 1558.——Thomas ſon of Geffrey was her heir (f).

In 1583, Edward Dier Eſq; ſold it to Thomas Smith.

Sir Arthur Harris, who dyed 9 Janu. 1631, held the maner of Apton-hall;——Sir Cranmer Harris, his ſon, had it after him (g).

It was next in Mr. Joſeph Fiſhpoole of Billerca, who by a daughter of Mr. Prigmore of Kelvedon, left——Joſeph his ſon and heir. He married Rebeccah, daughter of Nicolas Blackwell of Bradwell, near the Sea, Gent. and had by her, Joſeph, and Thomas, who dyed young; John; and Anne married to Henry Abbot of Earl's Colne, Gent.——John Fiſhpool, of Billerca, Gent. was Sheriff of this County in 1749.

The Maner of SCOTTYS, an eſtate of about 360 acres, took that name from ſome of its ancient owners ſurnamed Scott.

The manſion houſe is about a mile ſouth from the Church.

This, according to Weever (h), was once called Breamſtons, probably Briancons, from the ancient family of Brianzon mentioned above, p. 77. It appears, that in 1320 John de Brianzon held of the inheritance of John de Coggeſhall, as of the maner of Bemflete, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; in the vill of Canewdon, the moiety of a meſſuage, and 127 acres of arable, 13 of meadow, 19 of paſture, and 30 s. 6 d. rent; and the marſh of Ringworth, containing 150 acres: the moiety of the ſaid meſſuage he held of the King as of the Honor of Reilie, by the ſervice of 20d. a year to the hidage, and ſuit at the Hundred of Rochford. He held alſo of John de Chanceux 20 acres of the land called Crikſeth, by the ſervice of 4s. a year. ——Bartholomew was his ſon and heir (i).

This maner was afterwards in the family of Tyrell of Beches in Raureth. Under John Tyrell Eſq; William Hanningfield, who dyed in 1427, held this maner called Scottys; except the tenements &c. called Crixeth-hall, otherwiſe the Brome, in this pariſh, and Ryngewerd, and Gore, marſhes, with ſix weres and ſix leynes (k). ——John Tyrell, Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 25 October 1494, held the maner of Beches in Rawreth, and that of North-Bemfleete, and the maner of Scotts with appertenances, and two in Canewdon, one called Ringwerd, and the other Gore, with the weres and leynis; of the King of his Honor of Raghley;——Edward his ſon and heir, held the ſame; and dying 16 June 1541, was ſucceeded by his brother——William Tyrell Eſq; who departing this life 28 September 1543, his nephew——Edward, or Edmund, ſon of Jaſper Tyrell his father's younger brother, came into theſe eſtates (l). He dyed 8 November 1574, and having no iſſue male, his four daughters, or their iſſue, became his coheirs. They were, Mary, Margaret, Thomaſine, and Suſan (m) [S].

Thomaſine was married, firſt, to William, ſecond ſon of Sir Henry Tyrell, and afterwards to William Playters of Sotterley in Suffolk Eſq; who enjoyed this maner in her right. She dyed 5 June 1578, and he 6 June 1584, leaving——Thomas Playters his ſon and heir (n). He conveyed it to . . . Cannon, of Rettenden, who was poſſeſſed of it in 1598.

John Scott, who dyed 8 December 1616, held this maner with appertenances, in Canwadon, alias Cannondon, and pariſhes adjoyning——William was his ſon and heir (o).

Afterwards Alderman Kiffin of London had this eſtate. It was purchaſed by John Evans of Wanledge in Wiltſhire Eſq; who ſettled it upon his daughter Elianor, wife of John Lance of the Inner-Temple, and her children. After her death they ſold it to

Nehemiah Bennet of London, Merchant, of whom it was purchaſed by the Rev. Thomas Juſon late Rector of Wanſted, together with Barringtons in Raleigh, which has for ſome time been bought and ſold with Scottys. He dyed 18 March 1749-50, leaving by Catharine his wife daughter of William Churchman Eſq; only ſon of Sir John Churchman of Illington in Norfolk Kt.—The Rev. Thomas Juſon his ſon, and heir.

It appears by the Court-rolls that this Maner has held Court leet as well as Baron.

The Lord of Scottys-Hall is one of thoſe concerned in the Lawleſs or Whiſpering Court at Raleigh.

The Maner of LAMBORN-HALL.

The manſion houſe is a full mile South-eaſt from the Church, open to the Marſhes, near Wallaſea-iſland.

It was ſo named from a Family that came or took their ſurname from Lamborn in Ongar Hundred. Robert de Lamborne of that place paid ſcutage for an eſtate in Eſſex from the year 1199 to 1213 (p).——William de Lamborne, who dyed in 1300, held the maner of Lamburn once of the inheritance of Philip Burnell then a minor, and the King's ward, by the ſervice of two knights fees;——James was his ſon and heir (q).

A family ſurnamed de Lamborne had the maner of Copisfoldeal, or Copewold, in Margaretting. See in the other Volume, p. 53.

We have no account for many years of the poſſeſſors of this eſtate. In K. Henry the VIIth's reign, it was in Thomaſine daughter of John Barrington of Raley Eſq; She had three huſbands; 1. William Lunsford, or as he is called in the Inquiſition Louſeworth. 2. William Sidney of Stoke Daubernon in Surrey, Eſq; 3. John Hopton Eſq; At the time of her deceaſe, 16 January 1497, ſhe held the maner of Lamborne-hall of the maner of Rochford, by the ſervice of 5 s. And the maner of Crixhethall of Thomas Darcye Eſq; as of his maner of Canindon. And 40 acres of arable, 30 of paſture, 253 of marſh, 66 of wood, with appertenances, in Canweydon, Raleigh, Rochford, Hockley, Winkeford, Dunham, the two Ramſdens, Maldon, &c.——William Louſeworth, or Lunſforthe, her ſon and heir, who dyed 3 May 1531, held the maner of Lamborne-Hall with appertenances, and Le Caſtell Marſh, lying in Canondon, of the King, and by ſuit of the Court called Le Lawles Court in Raleigh, and yearly rent of 3 s. 4 d. He held alſo a parcel of land called Mompleyers, of the maner of Canondon-hall, and Bramblefeild of the maner of Apton-hall.——John his ſon and heir ſucceeded him (r) [T].

This eſtate afterwards came into the Campion family. William Campion ſen. who dyed 10 December 1615, held the maner of Lamborn-Hall with appertenances in Canondon, Crixhith, Burnham, and Hockley, lately Lunsford's lands;——William Campion Eſq; was his ſon and heir (s).

It hath ever ſince continued in that family, and is now in——Henry Campion of

The Hamlet of PUTESEY.

Pudſey-hall, the maner houſe, lies near the river Crouch, about half a mile weſt from the Church.

Two freemen were poſſeſſed of this Village in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. The great Suene held it, at the time of the Survey, by the name of Puteſeia: and his under-tenants were Aſcelin, and one John [U].

It is otherwiſe called in records Podehele, Podeſeth, Poteſthete, Pudſhall, and Pudſithe.

The noble Family of De Vere Earls of Oxford were Lords paramount of this maner.

In 1322, John Chanceaux above-mentioned held 20 acres of marſh in Podereth, and 90 acres, and 1 meſſuage and 160 acres of land, and 5 l. 3 s. 11 d. rent there, of the Earl of Oxford, in capite, by knight's ſervice. Under John, the 7th Earl, in 1358, the heir of——Hugh de Chanceux held one knight's fee in Podeſethe. And under Thomas the 8th Earl, in 1370, one Walkefare held one knight's fee in Podeſeth.——John de Chanceaux held, about the year 1372, the maner of Podehele in Canewdon.——Margery Chanceaux, at the time of her deceaſeaſe in 1389, held the maner of Poteſhethe in Canewdon.

Then this eſtate came to Thomas Darcy, abovementioned, who dyed poſſeſſed of it 23 Septemb. 1485.——Roger, his ſon and heir, at his deceaſe, 3 September, 1508, left it to——Thomas Darcy Eſq; his ſon; who by fine, in 1554, paſſed it to Bartholomew Averel, Eſq; He dyed 14 May 1562, poſſeſſed of this maner of Pudſithe, alias Pudſey-hall, with appertenances, in the pariſh and fields of Canewdon, Little Stambridge, Aſſingdon, Hockeley, Hawkewell and South-Fambridge; which he held of the Lord Hunſdon, as of his Hundred of Rochford, in ſocage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 18 d. He left three daughters coheirs,

Mary, then, wife of John Sammes, aged 19 years; Grace, 11; and Elizabeth, 8 years old (u). [See above, p. 112, and]

Elizabeth was married to Edward Waldegrave of Lawford Eſq; being his firſt wife.

This eſtate belonged afterwards to Sir Samuël Moyer, created a Baronet 25 March 1701, and ſtyled of Pudſey-hall.

It now belongs to John Luther Eſq; one of the Knights of the Shire for this County.

LOSTMANS, or Loughtmans, and Shernewards, are mentioned above as two Maners ſubordinate to that of Canewdon; and in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Darcy Eſq; in 1485: The latter being 40 s. a year, and Loſtmans 7 l. In 1508, Sherwards was 11 l. a year, and the other 3 l. (w). The name and memory of Shernewards are loſt.

The lands of Mr. Brograve of Norwich called Inglewoods, Chymners, le Parke, Edwel-Croft, le Twelve-Acres, le Buſh-Croft, by decree in Chancery in 1556, ſtand charged with a yearly rent of 52 s. 2 d. payable to the Vicar for the uſe of the Poor of this pariſh. Upon non-payment, the Vicar has a right to enter. Theſe were originally given by William Totham (x).

Here was anciently a Fraternity of St. Anne, that had an eſtate for Lights and Lamps, the over-plus to be diſtributed in beans and herrings to poor people in Lent. Now given by the officers for the time being to the moſt indigent, that have been well brought up.

Here was alſo a Gild of St. Margaret, that had lands in this pariſh, and Hempſted and Elmſted, which were granted, in 1592, to William Tipper, and Robert Dawe (y).

The Poor of Wigan in Lancaſhire have in Pudſey an eſtate of 18 l. per ann. called The Poors Land of Wigan.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, ſtands on a hill, from whence there is a very extenſive proſpect. It conſiſts of a body and a north aiſle, 62 feet long, and 36 broad. The Chancel hath alſo a Chapel, or Veſtry, on the north ſide, in length 36 feet, and 19 in breadth. In the Steeple, which is 74 feet high, are 5 tunable Bells [W].

This Church was given to Prittlewell Priory by the founder, Robert de Eſſex ſon of Suene; as appears by the following record. In 1241, a Quo warranto was brought againſt the Prior, to inquire by what authority he held the Advowſon of Kanewdon Church, parcel of the lands of Henry de Eſſex eſcheated to the King? He anſwered, That this right was confirmed by Henry II, the King's grandfather. He produced the Charter of Henry de Eſſex, of Gilbert Foliot Biſhop of London, and of Giles de Chanceaux (z). About the year 1231, the Prior and Convent impowered Roger Niger, Biſhop of London, to ordain a Vicarage; which he did, and endowed it well, reſerving the Nomination of the Vicar to himſelf and his ſucceſſors Biſhops of London.

Indeed Qu. Elizabeth, who loved to finger Biſhops lands, granted, 18 March 1587, the Advowſon of the Vicarage to Edward Downing and Miles Dodding: They granted it to Auguſtin Steward Eſq; and he preſented once (a). The nomination of a Vicar continued after that in the Biſhop, though the preſentation came to the Crown after the ſuppreſſion of Prittlewell Priory. No claim of late having been made to preſent, the Biſhop collates.

This Vicarage hath a Glebe of 60 acres.

The great Tithes belong to Thomas Sly Eſq;

Canewdon pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1485 l.

The ſame carved on the pillars that ſupport the north Iſle, with theſe Arms; . . . Lozenges, 2, 3, and 1. This coat is on the Steeple of Much-Hadham in Hertfordſhire, and in the Chancel of Little-Hadham.

On the outſide of the ſteeple are the Arms of France and England quartered, and other Shields of Bohun, Mowbray, and Warren.

In the year 1711, when the Church was beautified, a figure of St. Chriſtopher, painted on the right ſide of the door, appeared, which had been covered over.

STANBRIDGE.

Two Pariſhes of this name, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great, and Little, lie between Canewdon, Pakelſham, Rochford, Aſſingdon, &c. They were undoubtedly at firſt but one.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Stanbruge, Stamberg, Stambreg, Stambrugg; formed from the Saxon word Stan, ſtone, and brugg, or bridge; here being anciently a Stone-bridge over the little River that runs by Rochford.

20. GREAT-STANBRIDGE .

is two thirds bigger than Little Stanbridge, according to the rental.

The Lands in this pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Oſuuard, and one Freeman: At the time of the Survey, Odo, Biſhop of Bayeux, and Suene under him, held one part. Suene, and Wiard under him, held the other part [X].

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Stanbridge. 2. . . . and that of Hampton-Barnes. 3. The maner of Bretton, or Barton-hall.

The Maner of GREAT STANBRIDGE.

The manſion houſe, Stanbridge-hall, ſtands a little way eaſt from the Church, near the River.

After the forfeiture of Henry de Eſſex, grandſon of Suene, for cowardiſe, as frequently mentioned before, Richard Fitz-William, or ſon of William, had this, among eight knights fees, holden of the ſaid Henry, as of the Honor of Raley (b).

Under this Richard, the ancient Family of Muſters held lands here in K. John's time [Y] [Z].

William, ſon of Richard Fitz-William, at the time of his deceaſe in 1260, held two carucates of land in Stanbreg; the ſame quantity in Stapleford-Tany; and one carucate in Elmſted, of the fee of Reyle.

Margery, his only daughter and heir, brought theſe Eſtates to her huſband, Richard de Tany (c). We have given a pretty full account of the Tany Family, above, p. 179. and therefore ſhall only take notice of ſuch of them as are mentioned in records, that were poſſeſſed of this eſtate.

This Family gave Name to Stapleford Tany, Chignall Tany, or St. James, and Latton, now called Mark-hall;——Richard de Tany, his ſon and heir, held this maner of Great Stanbregg, of the King in capite, of the Honor of Reylegh: He dyed in 1296, leaving, by Julian his wife,——Roger Tany his ſon, 18 years old (d). For a further account of the Exploits of the Tany Family; ſee T. Walſingham; and Sir William Dugdale (e).

Two years after, it was in another Family. Henry de Grapenell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1298, held the maner of Great-Stanbrigge of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. His four daughters, Petronilla, Margery, Joanna, and Margaret, were his coheirs. Petronilla, the eldeſt, was wife of John Fitz-John: and Joanna of Adam Fitz-John (f).

Petronilla Fitz-John had for ſecond huſband Sir John de Benſted, who held this eſtate, in her right, of Philippa Queen of England, as of the Honor of Reyley. He dyed in 1323 (g).——John de Benſted, at the time of his deceaſe in 1362, held two parts of this maner: as did his ſon——John de Benſted, in 1376.——Edward, brother of the laſt ſucceeded him (h).——Petronilla, widow of John Benſted, but ſurely not the Petronilla above-mentioned, held in 1378 part of the demeſnes of this maner in dower (i). ——John, their eldeſt ſon dying the King's ward, without iſſue,——Edward ſecond ſon ſucceeded, and departed this life in 1433. His ſon ——Sir Edmund Benſted, at the time of his deceaſe in 1439, left——Sir John Benſted who at the time of his death in 1471, held this maner of the Duke of York, as of his Honor of Clare; leaving——William his ſon and heir (k). [For a more particular account of the Benſted Family; ſee above, p. 35. and the other Volume, p. 495.] William Benſted Eſq; conveyed the Maner and Advowſon, by truſtees, to

Thomas Stillington, who, 12 June 1490, paſſed it, to

Sir Reginald Bray, and other truſtees; and a fine was levied of the premiſſes in Michaelmaſs-term 1491 (l): But, according to the Inquiſition, William Benſted had it at the time of his deceaſe, in September 1485. [See the other Volume, p. 495.]

It was afterwards in the Clopton-family: For John Edmondes Eſq; who dyed 23 June 1544, held divers lands, tenements, rents, and ſervices, in Great-Stambridge, of Francis Clopton Eſq; as of his Maner of Stambridge-Hall (m).

Sir John Shaa, Alderman of London, was next poſſeſſor of the maner of Much-Stanbridge, with

In 1604, Thomas Lawſon alias Edmonds, ſold the premiſſes to

The free and cuſtomary Rents are 12 l. 4 s. 2 d.

South-Minſter, Cold Norton, Stambridge, Little-Hallingbury, and Little-Wigborough, Maners, were all diſafforeſted by letters patent of K. Charles I. in 1638, for which Privilege the Governors of the Charter-houſe gave 500 l.

At the Court kept 4 October 1670, before Albery de Vere Earl of Oxford, Chief Juſtice of the King's Foreſts, the Governors of the Charter-Houſe claimed within this maner, Court lete, and view of frank-pledge, of all their tenants dwelling and reſiding within the precincts of the ſame; and fines, and amerciaments, and other profits; aſſize of bread, and other victuals, wine, beer, &c. the examination of weights, and meaſures; choice of Conſtables, and other Officers; pillory, tumbrel, and gallows; ſufficient fire-bote, houſe-bote, cart-bote, for the tenants of the maner, in their own woods, without view of the Foreſters.

The Maner of HAMPTON-BARNES.

The manſion-houſe is in the marſhes, near the Creek, half a mile from the road to Pakleſham. This was detached from Odo's Maner in after-times, perhaps not before the reign of K. Richard III. for William Lawſell who dyed 1 May 1485, held lands, tenements, woods, meadows, &c. called Hampton Bernis, in Great Stanbrigge, of Robert Stillington Biſhop of Bath and Wells, who was feoffee for Thomas Stillington above-mentioned (p).

In 1549, Richard Townſhend, and Catharine his wife, paſſed this maner by fine to Richard Smart of Ipſwich, who held it of Thomas Shaa Eſq; as of his maner of Great Stanbridge, by fealty, and yearly rent of 17 s. He held alſo here a tenement called Godboultes. Dying 28 Auguſt 1560, he was ſucceeded by——William his ſon and heir (q). See above, p. 283. 292.]

It is now in Mr. Scratton of Bromfeld, who has Prittlewell Priory.

Maner of BRETTON, or BARTON-HALL.

The manſion-houſe ſtands on the ſame ſide of the Channel with Hampton-Barnes.

This is the part that Suene, and Wiard under him, held at the time of the Survey [A].

This Eſtate takes its name from Hugh Brito, that held a fourth part of a knight's fee of the Honor of Henry de Eſſex of his Honor of Raley (r).

Robert Rochford, who dyed in 1337, held for his life, a certain tenement called Breton in Great Stanbrigge, of the maner of Rochford (s).

Joane Counteſs of Hereford had, in 1379, the maner of Bretton, as parcel of her maner of Rochford (t).

Sir Thomas Darcy, by fine, in 1526, paſſed this maner of Bretton, alias Bretton-hall or Barton hall, and 5 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 50 of meadow, 300 of paſture, the ſame quantity of marſh, 100 acr. of alder, 200 of furze and heath, 100 of wood, and 3 l. to

John Lucas Eſq; And, in 1550, John Lucas, and Elizabeth his wife, paſſed it to Bartholomew Averell (u), who held it of the Queen in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. He dyed 14 May 1562; his three daughters, Mary wife of John Sams, Grace and Elizabeth being his heirs (w).

The latter brought it to her huſband Edward Walgrave of Lawford, Eſq;

John Gleane Eſq; ſecond ſon of Thomas Gleane of Harwick-hall in Norfolk Eſq; was poſſeſſed of it at the time of his deceaſe 15 February 1670 (x). Afterwards, it was purchaſed by

Sir Iſaac Shaarde of Southwark, Kt. and deſcended to his ſon

In 1348, Alianor wife of John Bluet held a a marſh called La Pole in Great Stanbrigge, containing 500 acres, of the Earl of Northampton, as of the Honor of Reyle, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee (y).

21. LITTLE STANBRIDGE

lies north of the laſt.

Part of this pariſh belonged, before and at the time of the Survey, to the Church of the Holy Trinity in Canterbury, for the maintenance of the Monks. Another part belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to one Freeman, which Tedric Pointel unjuſtly ſeized afterwards [B].

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The maner of Little Stanbridge-hall. 2. . . . that of Combes.

Little Stanbridge hall ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

Though this pariſh is ſmall, it belonged to the great Families of Fitz-Walter, Fitz-John, Hardell, Baddleſmere, Tibetot, Le Deſpenſer, &c.

Ralph Baignard held this maner of the Church of the Holy Trinity. His grandſon——William Baignard, loſt it for ſiding againſt K. Henry the Firſt's enemies, and that King gave it to Richard Fitz Giſlebert, lord of Brion in Normandy (b).

John de Kokeham, who dyed in 1275, held of John Fitz-John one meſſuage, 182 acres of arable in Little Stanbrigge, with the Advowſon of the Church, and 29 s. 8 d. rent: and of the Lord Robert Fitz-Walter, 142 acres of arable, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and 7 acres of meadow, 10 acres of paſture, and 24 s. rent of aſſiſe.——Laurence de Hardell was his next heir (c). He held theſe eſtates at the time of his deceaſe in 1285 (d).

Bartholomew de Baddleſmere, a nobleman of Kent, was the next poſſeſſor; and obtained in 1315, a Charter for free-warren in all his demeſne lands in Little Stanebregge, Aſſendon, Canewdon, Hockle, Thackſted, &c. but was beheaded about 1322, for joining Thomas Earl of Lancaſter (e). He held the maner of Little Stanbrigge, and the advowſon of the Church of William de Burgh, Earl of Ulſter, as of the maner of North-Fambrigge, by the ſervice of 1 d. a year, called ward-penny; and about the ſame quantity as above, of Robert Fitz-Walter. ——Giles de Baddleſmere, his ſon and heir, held alſo this maner of the King of his Hundred of Rochford, by the ſervice of 12 s. and 56 s. 8 d. per ann. Having no iſſue, his four ſiſters were his coheirs; namely, Maud, wife of John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford; Elizabeth, married firſt to Edmund de Mortimer, and afterwards to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton; Margaret, wife of Sir John Tipetot; and Margery, of William Lord Roos (f). Among them was this eſtate divided; For

Sir Robert Tibetot, ſon of Sir John, at the time of his deceaſe in 1372, held this maner of the King in ca. as of the Hundred of Rochford, by the ſervice of 12 d. per ann. to the hidage of that Hundred; except the third part of this maner, that was holden of Sir Walter Fitz-Walter, by the ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs. Eighty acres belonging to this maner lay in Aſſingdon. Margaret, Milicent, and Elizabeth, were his daughters. The two eldeſt were married to Roger, and Stephen, the ſecond and third ſons of Richard Scroope, Lord Treaſurer of England; and Elizabeth to Philip le Deſpenſer (g).

Sir Philip le Deſpenſer had this eſtate; and the ſtate of it then was, that there were within the ſite of the ſame divers houſes, 214 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 10 of wood, 40 of paſture, 20 of marſh, and 4 l. rent of aſſiſe, holden of Richard Duke of York as of his Honor of Reyley. And about 164 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, wood &c. holden of the heirs of Walter Lord FitzWalter, the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, and the heirs of Sir John Chanceaux. He dyed in 1423, or 1424.

Margery his only daughter, was married, firſt, to John Lord Roos, and afterwards to Sir Roger Wentworth (h). At the time of her deceaſe in 1478, ſhe enjoyed this eſtate. Philip her ſon being then dead, his ſon——Henry Wentworth ſucceeded her (i).——Sir Richard Wentworth held this maner at the time of his deceaſe, 17 October a reputed Maner, is now only a ſmall Farm of about 60 l. a year. The Houſe is moated round, but ſeems mean, and hath been much larger. Very little is ſaid of it in records. It belonged lately to Henry Lord Bolingbroke, and now to Earl Tilney.

Mr. William Stock hath alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tiled. At the weſt end ſtands a ſpire ſhingled, in which there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the maner: and, as ſuch in the gift of Bartholomew de Baddleſmere. After his death, his widow Margaret Dumfrunvill, Lady de Baddleſmere, preſented to the Living in 1328 and 1333. By Elizabeth, one of his daughters, married to Edmund de Mortimer, it came into the Mortimer Family. Richard Nevil, Duke of York, preſented in 1434, and 1445. He being ſlain at the battle of Wakefield in 1460, his ſecond ſon Edward Earl of March afterwards K. Edward IV. inherited this among the reſt of his poſſeſſions. From which time it hath remained in the Crown (m).

22. ASSINGDON

lies north northweſt of the two Stanbridges, and north of Rochford. The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Aſſinden, Aſſindon, Aſſandum; and the origin of it is undoubtedly Aſſan-dun, i. e. Aſſes-hill.

Mr. Camden thought this to be the place where the Battle was fought between Edmund Ironſide, and Cnut, in 1016 (n). But it was at Aſhdon near Bartlow. [See in the other Volume, p. 539.]

This was part of Suene's poſſeſſions at the time of the Survey: After his grandſon Henry de Eſſex's forfeiture, this Eſtate appears to have been in the ſame hands as Hawkſwell, namely in the Families of Bayouſe, Coggeſhall, Doreward, Bullen, Rich, &c.

The Hall ſtands near the Church.

Very little occurrs in records concerning this pariſh. It appears only that here are two MANERS, which extend into ſome of the adjoyning Pariſhes.

We find ſome mention of under-tenants, and juſt the name of thoſe they held of; Laurence de Hardell who dyed in 1285, held in Aſſindon 50 acres of arable of Philip Manſell by the ſervice of one garland of roſes; and in Aſſindon and Rochford 80 acres of arable and 3 of wood, and 8*s.* rent, of John de Rochford, by the ſervice of 2 d. to the hidage, and by the 6th part of a knight's fee. —— Nicolas was his ſon. He had alſo eſtates in Little Stanbridge, Canewdon, Hokeley, &c. (o).

In 1340, Reginald Garrey held lands and tenements in Aſſindon of the Honor of Raley, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (p).

Sir Robert Tibetot held of the King the maner of Little-Stanbridge, and 80 acres of arable in Aſſingdon, which belonged to the maner of Stanbrigge, and were holden of the King in capite, as parcel of the ſaid maner: He dyed in 1372, leaving three daughters co-heirs; Margaret, Milicent, and Elizabeth (q). See under Little Stanbridge.

We have no mention after that for ſeveral years of the maner of Aſſingdon: but in K. Henry VIIIth's time a conſiderable eſtate is mentioned here under the name of Beckney.

Richard Alen, who dyed 23 June 1517, held one meſſuage, 300 acres of paſture, and 200 of marſh, called Beckney, in Aſſingdon, Hockley, and South-Fambridge, of the Prior of Colne, by fealty.——John was his ſon (r).

William Harrys Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 21 September 1555, held the maner of Beckney, with appertenances, in Aſhindon, South-Fambridge, Hockley, and Sutton, of the Lord Riche, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee.—— William Harrys Eſq; was his ſon and heir (s). —— Chriſtopher Harrys Eſq; of Shenfeild, in Margareting, held this maner, or meſſuage, called Beckneys in Asſhendon of the Lord Hunſdon, by the third part of a knight's fee; and alſo Criſtell-hall in this pariſh, and Rochford; and dying 2 September 1570, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Chriſtopher; who living only till 26 December 1571, was ſucceeded by his brother ——William, near three years old (t). He was knighted afterwards, and at the time of his deceaſe 15 June 1634, held this maner, capital meſſuage, or farm, known by the name of Beckney, of Robert Earl of Warwick, of his Honor of Raileigh, by knight's ſervice. —— Chriſtopher was his couſin and next heir (u). [Concerning this family of Harrys, ſee more above, p. 310. and in the other Volume, p. 54.]

From the Earl of Warwick this eſtate came to Henry Viſcount Bolingbroke, and was purchaſed of him by Richard Lord Viſcount Caſtlemain, afterwards Earl Tilney.

In a late account I have ſeen of this maner, the demeſnes are ſaid to be 240 acres.

In 1285, Richard le Chamberlayn held half a fee in Aſſindon, of the King, in capite: Hence came the maner, or farm, called Chamberlains in this pariſh (w).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, ſtands on the top of a hill, from whence is an extenſive proſpect over Dengey-Hundred, as far as Maldon. It is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. Between the Church and Chancel there was formerly an arch. In a Tower of ſtone is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was in the gift of the families of Bayouſe, Coggeſhall, Doreward, Bolein or Bullen; and by purchaſe came into the noble family of Rich, Earls of Warwick. Upon the diviſion of their eſtates, Henry Lord Viſcount Bolingbroke had it; and ſold it to William Arnold.

In 1429, this Church was united to that of Hawkſwell, on account of the ſmallneſs of both livings, and nearneſs of the Pariſhes; but they were ſoon diſunited again. See above, p. 290.

As for the Miracles reported to be done by an Image here, ſee Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 19.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 269 l.

There are two Pariſhes of this name within this County; one in this Hundred, and the other in the Hundred of Dengey; parted from each other by the river Crouch. A bridge formerly ſtood here which occaſioned the latter part of the name; and Fam is taken from the Saxon word Fam, or fæm, foam, or froth: the river being undoubtedly rapid and foamy here, while the Bridge ſtood. Now here is a Ferry.

23. SOUTH-FAMBRIDGE, is that which lies in this Hundred, on the ſouth ſide of the River. It is otherwiſe written in records Phenbruge.

Edward the Confeſſor gave this maner to Ely-Monaſtery; but, at the time of the Survey it was in the King's hands, and holden under him by Rainald Baliſtarius [D]. Probably it had been taken from the Monks on account of their harbouring William's enemies, in 1071.

Here is but ONE MANER, and the Hall ſtands about half a mile north from the Church, on a riſing ground.

The Monks recovered this Eſtate again afterwards. For, in 1166, Reginald de Fambridge held a knight's fee in Fambridge, under Nigel Biſhop of Ely (x).

About the reign of K. Henry III. this lordſhip became part of the poſſeſſions of the ancient family ſurnamed de Brianzon, owners of Weſt-Thurrock [E].

Bartholomew de Brianzon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1286, held Little Fambregge, of the inheritance of Joane his wife (y); —— William his ſon and heir, who dyed in 1310, held the maner of Fambregg of the Biſhop of Ely by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; Alianor his widow, remarried to John Bluet, had it by way of dower; and her ſon —— John de Brianzon, confirmed it to her, and her huſband Bluet for their lives: ſhe dyed in 1348 (z). [For a further account of the Brianzon family, ſee above, p. 77. 91.]

William de Bohun Earl of Northampton at the time of his deceaſe in 1360, held this maner of South-Fambregge of the Biſhop of Ely.——

[E] Mr. Newcourt has been led into a miſtake, by an error of ſome tranſcriber, to make Bartholomew Lord Badleſmere hold this eſtate, which by his daughter came to the Bohun Family. This is true of Little-Stambridge, where he mentions it, but not of this Place, Humfrey, his ſon, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex &c. (a), and left two daughters coheirs, the eldeſt of whom, Alianor, was married to Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter. [See in the other Volume, p. 452.]

In 1395, Sir John Cobham, Sir John Harleſton, and others had licenſe to give this maner of South-Fambregge to the Maſter, Wardens, and Chaplains of Pleſhey-College: the ſaid maner being holden of the King as of the Honor of Reylegh, by the ſervice of 18 d. for hidage; payable on the feaſts of St. John Baptiſt, and St. Andrew, to the Bailiff of Rochford-Hundred (b). Pleſhey-College was founded by Thomas of Woodſtock, and this endowment might be by his direction. [See in the other Volume, p. 453.]

Upon the ſuppreſſion of Religious Houſes, Pleſhey College becoming veſted in the Crown, K. Henry VIII. on the 36th of December 1546, granted the maner of South-Fambrige, to

John Gate Eſq; (c). [For a particular account of this Family, ſee the other Volume, p. 146, 454, 457.] His eſtates becoming forfeited, upon his arraignment and condemnation 19 Auguſt 1553, for eſpouſing the Lady Jane Gray's intereſt, this, among the reſt, came again to the Crown; where it remained till 3 January 1560, when Qu. Elizabeth granted it, with the Advowſon of the Church, &c. to

Peter Oſborne Eſq; (d) And in that family it continued till very lately. They are ſaid to have come out of the north, and Peter Oſborne reſided at Purley in this County in 1442,—— Richard, his ſon, left,——John, and Richard: The latter was ſeated at Tyled-hall, in Lachingdon in this county; and had two ſons——John; and——Peter, born in 1521; a man of great underſtanding, and very active and zealous for the Reformation. He was keeper of the Privy Purſe to K. Edward VI. who granted him and his heirs the office of Treaſurer's Remembrancer in the Exchequer. A great friend he was to Sir John Cheke, who dyed at his houſe. In Qu. Elizabeth's reign he was one of the High Commiſſioners for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, —— Sir John Oſborne, Kt. his ſon was Treaſurer's Remembrancer, and Commiſſioner of the Navy, in the reign of K. James I. By Dorothy, daughter of Richard Barlee of Elſenham in Eſſex, Eſq; he left four ſons; [Francis, the youngeſt, wrote the Eſſays or Miſcellanies, one of which is, Advice to a Son.] Sir John Oſborne, Kt. the eldeſt ſon, ſettled at the Nunnery of Chickſands in Bedfordſhire, a moſt delightful ſituation; and dyed in 1628——Sir Peter, his eldeſt ſon, was 28 years Governor of Guernſey. By Dorothy daughter of Sir John Danvers of Dauntzey in Wilts, he had ſeven ſons and two daughters. The eldeſt ſon—— Sir John, the firſt Baronet of the Family, ſo created 11 February 1660, was Gentleman of the Privy-chamber to K. Charles II; and Treaſurer's Remembrancer. He married Alianor Danvers, niece to Sir John Danvers of Dauntzey; and dying in 1699, was ſucceeded by his only ſon ——Sir John Oſborn, Bart. who by his firſt wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Stroud of Barrington in Somerſetſhire, Eſq; had John. By his ſecond wife, Martha daughter of Sir John Kelyng he had ſeven ſons and four daughters, ——John, the eldeſt ſon, married Sarah, daughter of George Lord Torrington, and dyed in 1719, in his father's life-time,——Sir Danvers Oſborn, ſon of the ſaid John, ſucceeded his grandfather in 1720, and ſome time after ſold this eſtate to

John Stephenſon Eſq; who married a daughter of Jonathan Forward, merchant in London. [For a more particular account of the Oſborn Family, ſee the Baronetage, edit. 1741. Vol. III. Part 1. p. 225.]

A meſſuage here called Ferſters, and 160 acres of arable, and 10 of marſh, belonged in 1422 to John Baud; and in 1447 to Robert Darcy (e).

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is little and low, and ſtands in a bottom about half a mile from the Creek and the Ferry. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, tiled. At the weſt end there is a little wooden turret, but no Bell.

This Rectory is appendent to the Maner; and, after it was granted to Pleſhey, the Advowſon continued in the noble Families of Stafford &c. heirs of Thomas of Woodſtock: and then came to the Oſborn family.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 220 l.

The Bridge that gave name to this and the oppoſite pariſh, hath been down many years: but here is a noted Ferry; at which a very bold Love-adventure is ſaid to have happened [E]. Two meſſuages, and lands called Ferry-lands, with the Paſſage or Ferry, and Betts, belonged in 1556 to William Harrys Eſq; who held them of the Lord Rich, as of the Honor of Rayley, by the 20th part of a knight's fee; and were then worth 21 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year (f).

[F] Mr. Malden of Rayne, Servant to the Earl of Warwick, gave this relation, which was taken in writing; 'The 'Earl of Warwick going from Leighes to Rochford-Hall 'was attended by Capt. Cammock, who courted his daughter: He carried her off upon a horſe, and came to Fambridge 'Ferry, where the Boat was on the other ſide, and the tide 'violent; they found themſelves purſued, and had no ſhift 'but to ſwim over: The Captain adviſed her not to venture; 'but ſhe ſaid ſhe would live and die with him, and took the 'water. When they were half over, the Earl's ſervant came 'to the water-ſide, and his horſe neighed; upon which, the 'horſe that carried the Lovers turned round, and with much 'difficulty was brought to keep his courſe. They rode to 'Maldon, were wedded and bedded; and the Earl ſaid, 'ſeeing ſhe had ventured her life for him, God bleſſe 'em.'

At the eaſt end of this Hundred are the following SIX ISLANDS.

1. FOULNESE. 2. WALLASEA. 3. POTTEN. 4. NEW-ENGLAND. 5. HAVEN-GORE. 6. RUSHLEY.

FOULNESE ISLAND

is the eaſtern-moſt, and the largeſt, of the ſix Iſlands.

The name of this iſland is formed from the two Saxon words, Fuȝel, a fowl, and næꞅe, a promontory; that is the Promontory of Fowls, or birds (g). It is otherwiſe written in records, Fughelneſs: but the ancienteſt name is ſaid to have been Eoulꝼneꞅꞅe (h).

This Iſland is computed to be above twenty miles in circuit, without reckoning the Saltings toward the ſea, which are not incloſed by a Wall as the reſt is. It is ſaid to contain about four thouſand five hundred acres, lying in different Farms; the Houſes ſtanding ſeparately, for convenience of the occupiers. Two thirds of the Lands at leaſt belong to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Winchelſea, who is Lord of the Maner, and holds Court Leet and Baron pro libitu. The ſoil is fruitful, producing good corn of all kinds; but the water brakiſh, being impregnated by the ſalt in the earth: They have none perfectly freſh but rain-water, preſerved in ciſterns. The fences are only ditches, which every tide fills. Over theſe, as in other marſhes, what they call Wolves are laid, upon which their gates are fixed. Eight hours in twelve there is paſſage for a horſe to Wakering. The Houſes are all of wood, which ſoon decay, through the inclemency (as the inhabitants ſay) of the air. To the ſame cauſe they aſcribe the ill thriving of their fruit trees: The latter ſeems owing to the abundant ſalt with which the ſtaple is loaded; and perhaps the firſt may be attributed to the ſame ſapping quality. If the air were chargeable with all this, the people could not bear it ſo well as they do.

Foulneſe-hall ſtands near the Church.

This Eſtate was originally in Suene, and upon his grandſon's forfeiture came to the Crown: It was granted to Hubert de Burgh, with the Honor of Raley; and his ſon——John gave it to Guy de Rochford, from which time it commonly went along with the maner of Rochford.

Sir Guy de Rochford, dyed in 1274, and, beſides the maners of Rochford, Berden, and Elſenham, held 120 acres of marſh in Foulnes, called Naſſewyk.——John Rochford, ſon of Maud, ſiſter of the ſaid Guy, was his next heir (i). This John de Rochford, at the time of his deceaſe in 1309, held the maner of Rochford, with the marſh of Foulneſs, called Eſtwodwick, of the King in capite of the Barony of Reylie, by the ſervice of one knight's fee;——Robert was his ſon and heir (k).

Sir Thomas de la Ryvere releaſed in 1343, to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and Elizabeth his wife, and his heirs, all his right in Middlewyk-marſh in Foulneſs (l). From William de Bohun, who dyed in 1360, the maners of Rochford and Foulneſſe paſſed to his ſon——Humfrey de Bohun; and then to his daughter Alianor, wife of Thomas of Woodſtock; upon whoſe tragical death it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VI. granted it to James Earl Ormond; From whom it paſſed to the Families of Bullen, Stafford, Rich; and to the female heirs of the Earl of Warwick, one of which brought it to

The Rt. Hon. Daniel Earl of Nottingham, whoſe ſon and heir, the Rt. Hon. Earl of Winchelſea and Nottingham, is the preſent poſſeſſor. [See above under Rochford.]

In the Steward's Account of Robert Earl of Warwick in 1651, the quit-rents of the maner of Foulneſs amounted to 8 l. 17 s. 10 d. Fowlneſs-Hall, viz. New-Hall and Old-Hall, were 150 l. per ann.

Here are Nineteen Farms; thirteen of them belong to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Winchelſea: The late George Aſſer Eſq; now Thomas Drew Eſq; Edward Hawker, of Great Badow Eſq; Mr. Weldon of London; Mr. Samuel Filmer, of Staple-hyrſt, in Kent; Mr. Peter Moorbeck, of Foulneſe; and Mr. Kealy, have, or lately had, the Six others.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, St. Thomas the Martyr, and All Saints, is a wooden fabrick, about the middle of the Iſland, of one pace, forty-ſeven feet long, and twenty broad. It was at firſt no more than a Chapel.

This iſland was originally no diſtinct Pariſh; but the Tithes of it belonged to the neighbouring Pariſhes of Rochford, Sutton, Little Wakering, Shopland, Little Stanbridge, and Eaſtwood, whoſe inhabitants had peopled the ſame.

In the place where the parochial Church now ſtands, was a Chapel inſtitutive, preſented to by the Lady Joane de Bohun in 1386, and from that time by lords of the maner. This Chapel being ſlenderly provided for, and the Curate little reſident, a Chantry was founded and endowed in 1408, by the ſame Joane, Counteſs of Hereford, &c. The Charter is in the London Regiſtry, recited by Newcourt (m). The Chantry Prieſt was to perform all offices for the inhabitants, who, by reaſon of the ſwelling of the water, could not always reſort to their proper Pariſh Churches of Rochford, Sutton, Little-Wakering, Shopland, Eaſtwood, and Little-Stanbridge. This was by authority of Richard Giffard Biſhop of London, and conſent of all parties concerned. The Glebe then was ſettled, and this Chaplain was to have all the Tythes, Oblations, and ſpiritual profits here belonging to the Miniſters of the Pariſh-

Churches above-mentioned payable from the inhabitants of this Iſland. The right of Patronage of the ſaid Chantry was in the Archbiſhop, the Counteſs, and the reſt of the lords of the ſaid maner, or iſland of Foulneſs, and they all preſented jointly in the year 1408 (n).

The reſpective lords of this Maner preſented to the Chapel from 1408 to 1547.

Chantries being diſſolved, this Chapel was erected into a Rectory, and as ſuch preſented to firſt in 1554, and ever ſince.

Richard Lord Rich had a grant of the maner in 1546 [* F], and, I preſume, with it of the Advowſon, becauſe it went in his Family.

In 1595, Qu. Elizabeth granted a meſſuage and marſhes called Burward, containing eighty acres, and 160 acres of ſalt-marſh in Foulnes, formerly belonging to a Chantry ſituate near the maner of Foulnes, &c. to John Wells and Henry Beſt, to hold in ſocage. This was gleaning, after the grant to Rich (o).

The Terrier of Rochford Rectory, dated in 1610, after mentioning the home-ſtall and Glebe, goes on to mention the tithes of theſe grounds following lying in Foulneſs, viz. of Prieſt-Mead, 160 acres; of Mokyng-Bernes, 196 acres; of Small-Pots, 186 acres, all Marſh; of Lanes-Tenements, four acres; and of Morecocks, ſix acres.

Dr. T. Fuller tells us (p), That in 1648, an army of mice neſting in ant-hills ſhaved off the graſs at the bare roots, which withering to dung, was infectious to cattle. The March following, numbers of owls flew hither and deſtroyed them. If this be true, ſtarving might be the diſeaſe.

The Rt. Hon. Daniel Earl of Nottingham improved this Rectory by annexing to it the great Tythes of Braintree. The ſettlement was in the time of Mr. George Dell.

Here is a Fair July 10.

WALLASEA, WALLET, or WALLIS, is the next largeſt Iſland, lying between Pakleſham, and the river Crouch. 'Tis now a peninſula, joined to the firm land by a ſhort cauſeway, made and kept up by the iſlanders and pariſhes adjoyning.

It is about four miles in length, and where broadeſt ſomething more than a mile and a half: and was undoubtedly ſo named from the Sea-Walls, which ſecure it againſt innundations.

The water of this place is not fit for the kitchin. The inhabitants fetch it a-croſs the Creek. And there is ſuch a mixture of ſalt-water in the Ponds, that their Horſes will not thrive, till they have been accuſtomed to it ſome time; therefore they buy them in autumn, to inure them by degrees.

The chief Eſtates in this Iſland are,

Acresfleet-marſh; This was formerly called a Maner, and belonged in 1395, to Sir Henry Grey of Wilton; afterwards to his widow Elizabeth; and, in 1441, to his ſon Sir Richard Grey (q). —— Sir Francis Jobſon had it in 1577; and —— Ralph Pratt Eſq; in 1612 (r). It was holden of the Honor of Raley.—Mr. Thomas Cruſh of Roxwell was ſometime ago owner of it, and afterwards — Mr. Vicars of London.

Gore-marſh, belonged to Sir Henry Fetherſton, Bart.

Ringwood-marſh, the property of the heirs of the late Juſtice Hare of Lee.

Caſtle-marſh, Henry Campion's Eſq; lord of Lamborn-hall.

Sherwoods-marſh.

Tile-barn, part of the eſtate of the late Sir Thomas Davall's heirs.

> Theſe ſix marſhes belong to the pariſh of Canewdon, and pay Tithes to it, and all other dues.

Pool-marſh, 500 acres, belongs to Charles Weſtern Eſq;

Tillet's-marſh, is Mr. Henchman's.

This maner was then 73 l. 18 s. 8 d. clear per ann. He had alſo two meſſuages, 600 acres of freſh marſh, and 200 acres of ſalt marſh, called Shelford, and Bradworth, in the Iſle of Fowlenes, Little Wakering, Shopland, and Sutton; holden of the Honor of Raley. Inquiſ. 17 Jaco.

These two belong to Great Stanbridge.

Hilly-maſh, the higheſt ground in the iſland, more properly called Eaſt-Grapnells, is the eſtate of Nehemiah Bennet Eſq; Weſt-Grapnell's, otherwiſe Richmonds, belongs to Mr. William Webb.

These two belong to Packleſham.

Cockley-lay, or Cockſey-lay, otherwiſe Little Marſh; was the late Mrs. Cruſh's, now I believe Edward Codd's Gent.

This belongs to Little Wakering.

Coker's-marſh, ſo named from Mr. Ralph Coker of Woodham-Mortimer, the owner. It formerly belonged to Prittlewell-Priory; and, after the diſſolution was granted to Biſhop Bonner, who gave it in marriage with his daughter to . . . Perkins Eſq;

This is in Eaſt-wood-pariſh.

POTTEN-ISLAND

lies ſouth of the laſt. There is in it a farm of 600 acres, arable and paſture, called Great Pottens.

HAVENGORE

abuts ſouth-eaſt on the Sea, near Orwell-beacon.

Havengore-marſh is rated to the land-tax at 70 l.

NEW-ENGLAND, and RUSHLEY, have nothing remarkable [G].

THE HUNDRED OF DENGEY,

IS parted on the South from that of Rochford by the river Crouch; abuts upon Chelmsford-Hundred on the Weſt; has the German Ocean on the Eaſt; and is divided, on the North, from the Hundreds of Witham and Thurſtable by the river Chelmer, and Blackwater River and Bay. It is almoſt a peninſula.

The Danes were long in poſſeſſion of this Diſtrict, which from them, or at leaſt a capital Pariſh where the Hundred Courts were held, took the name of Danes-ig, that is Danes iſland. It is otherwiſe called Witbricteſhern, and ſo univerſally written in Domeſday-book; which name was undoubtedly taken from ſome Saxon Thegn, or Lord, named Witchbrict, and heꞃn, or hyꞃn, corner, or horn.

We find it firſt ſtyled Daneſei about the reign of K. Henry II.

In a rhyming Charter, or pretended grant of the cuſtody of this Hundred, by K. Edward the Confeſſor to Randolph Peperking, it is called Dancing [H].

This Hundred is about ſixteen miles long from weſt to eaſt, and ten miles broad, where wideſt: which is at the two extremities.

It is in the diſpoſal of the High-Sheriff of this County for the time being.

With regard to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, the Hundred and Deanry of Dengey are in the Archdeaconry of Eſſex.

In this Hundred are twenty three Pariſhes, which I treat of in the following order.

Maldon, in which are two Pariſhes.
Woodham-Walter.
Woodham Mortimer.
Haſeley.
Purley.
Cold-Norton.
Stow-Mary's,
Fambridge-North.
Lachingdon, with Lawling.
Snoreham.
Mundon.
Steple, with Stansgate.
Mayland.
Althorn.
Crickſea.
Burnham.
South-Minſter.
Aſheldham.
Dengey.
Tillingham.
St. Laurence.
Bradwell.

1. MALDON

is one of the two ancienteſt Towns in the County of Eſſex.

The name of it is derived from the two Saxon words Mæl, a croſs, and ꝺun, a hill; qu. Croſs-hill. It is otherwiſe written in records, Maudone, Maudine, Mealdona, Meaudone, Maldun, Meldun.

Some have imagined, that it was the Colonia-Camulodunum mentioned in Antonine's Itinerary. But as that Colonia was 52 miles from London, very nearly the meaſured diſtance from this great City to Colcheſter; and Maldon is only 38 miles from London; therefore I have placed the Colonia-Camulodunum at Colcheſter, in my Hiſtory of that Town, p. 12. &c. and have not ſince found any reaſon to alter my opinion.

Whether this was a Roman Settlement I am not able to determine. Here was found a fine Gold Coin of Nero and Agrippina, which is reckoned ſo valuable a treaſure, that it is always in the keeping of one of the Bailiffs for the time being. On one ſide are the Heads of Nero, [H] This Charter is as follows.

Iche Edward Konyng
Have geven of my Foreſt the keping
Of the Hundred of Cholmer and Dancing
To Randolf Peperking and to his kindling;
With Heort and Hynd, Doe and Bock,
Hare and Fox, Cat and Brock,
Wild Fowell with his Flock,
Partridge, Feſant hen and Feſant Cock,
With green and wyld ſtob and ſtock
To kepen and to yemen by all her might,
Both by day and eke by night,
And Hounds for to holde
Gode, and ſwift and bolde,
Four Greyhounds and ſix Braches
For Hare and Fox and Wildcats,
And: hereof iche made him my Book;
Witneſs the Biſhop Wolſton,
And bock ycleped many one,
And Sweyn of Eſſex our brother,
And to ken him many other,
And our Stiward Howelyn,
That byſought me for him.

T. Blount's Antient Tenures, p. 103, 104.

A perſon of the leaſt knowledge, or penetration, muſt immediately diſcover this rhyming Charter to be a forgery. In the firſt place, it is extremely doubtful whether Ralph Pevetell was in England before the Conqueſt, when he came in with K. William. Then, in Edward the Confeſſor's time Saxon was the common language; whereas the ſtyle of this pretended Grant is that of the fourteenth century. So that it is the invention of ſome idle poetaſter about the reign of K. Edward I. or II.

and his mother Agrippina; and round them, Nero Clavd. Divi F. Caes. Avg. Germ. imp. tr. P. Cos. Upon the reverſe, the Emperor is repreſented ſitting in a carr drawn by four Elephants, holding in one hand a haſta pura: By him ſits his mother holding a Legionary enſign; with this legend, Agripp. Avg. divi Clavd. Neronis caes. Mater. ex s. c. I had the like Medal in ſilver, found at Colcheſter.

A Coin of Veſpaſian hath been alſo found here, with this legend, Salvs Avgvsti.

On the weſt ſide of this Town are the remains of a Camp, through the middle of which is the road to Chelmsford. Three ſides of the Fortification are viſible, being a ſquare or oblong incloſing about 22 acres, the reſt is built upon and defaced. Juſt without it, on the north ſide, is a fine Spring, which improved the ſituation. Whether this is a Roman, Saxon, or Daniſh Work, I am not able to determine.

This Town ſtands on an eminence, or ſide of a hill, ſouth of the river Idumanum, or Blackwater-bay. It conſiſts of one wide ſtreet extending, from weſt to eaſt, near a mile; which is croſſed near the top by another wide ſtreet; much in the ſame form as Colcheſter: From theſe ſtreets branch out ſeveral lanes.

I do not find that it ever was incloſed with Walls.

The Bay makes a convenient harbour for Ships, and the merchants carry on a conſiderable trade in coal, iron, deals, corn, &c. By an act of parliament paſſed in   the Chelmer is to be made navigable from this place to Chelmsford.

The firſt mention we find of this Town in Hiſtory, is in the year 913, when K. Edward the Elder came, with ſome of his forces, into Eſſex, at Mældune; and encamped there, whilſt a Town was building and fortifying at Witham: and a great part of the people that had been under the Danes government, ſubmitted to him (s). The ſame King, in 920, came to Mældune, and rebuilt and fortified the Town, before he went from thence (t). In 921, a great army of Danes beſieged Mældune, till forces came to its relief, and killed great numbers of the enemy (u). In 993, Unlaf the Dane, with numerous forces, attacked Mældune, and having killed Earl Byrhtnoth who came to oppoſe them, remained maſters of the place; and peace was forced to be made with them (w).

At the general Survey, Meldune was ſtyled a Half-Hundred, and the ſtate of it ſtood thus. The King had in it one Houſe, paſture for 100 ſheep, and one Socheman: He had alſo 180 Houſes, which the Burgeſſes held of him; and a Hall. Suene, and his under-tenant Guner, had lands here; which were charged with aſſiſting in providing a horſe in the King's army, and building a ſhip. Ralph Piperell; and Hugh de Montfort, had alſo lands in Meldune. And St. Martins le Grand in London held an eſtate under Euſtace Earl of Bologne [I].

Theſe were divided afterwards into the following Maners. 1. The maner of Great Maldon. 2. The maner of Little Maldon. 3. Jenkins; and other leſſer ones.

We ſhall firſt treat of theſe Maners, and then give a particular account of the Borough.

The Maner of Great Maldon.

The diſtinction into Great and Little Maldon began about the reign of K. Henry II. Great Maldon comprehends the Town, and Little Maldon that part where Bilegh-Abbey ſtands.

The Maner of Great Maldon contained what was in the King at the time of the Survey; and what eſcheated to the Crown upon the forfeiture of Suene's grandſon, Henry de Eſſex.

It remained chiefly in the Crown; and for want of proper authorities, we find it impoſſible to give a perfect account of its Lords.

K. Stephen is ſaid to have granted the Seigniory of Maldon to the Earl of Bologne. This is what is called by way of eminence the Maner of Great Maldon; which doth belong, and hath belonged time out of mind, to the Corporation of Maldon. They have alſo a Court-lete: And hold by Charter a Court of View of Frank-pledge.

But, beſides this Borough, Lordſhip, or Maner, of Great Maldon; it appears by records, that there was another ſtyled alſo which hath uſually gone along with the Maner of Little Maldon.

The Maner of GREAT MALDON,

About 1274, Thomas de Preyers held a moiety of this Maner, of the King, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee. —— Margaret, his only daughter and heir, by her marriage with Robert de Bourchier, Lord Chancellor, brought it into the Bourchier Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 285.] But as they were very much attached to the Houſe of York, K. Henry VI. took it from them, and gave it to [K]

Thomas Darcy Eſq; one of his ſervants. [See in the other Volume, p. 28.] It returned again into the Bourchier family: For

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, who dyed 4 April 1483, held the maners of Great and Little Maldon of the King in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's-fee. William, his eldeſt ſon, being dead before him, he was ſucceeded by his grandſon —— Henry, Earl of Eſſex (x): who was killed by a fall from his horſe 13 March 1540, and left

Anne, his only child and heir, married in 1541, to Sir William Parr, Baron of Kendal, afterwards Earl of Eſſex, and Marquis of Northampton [L]. At the time of her deceaſe, 26 January 1570, ſhe held the maners of Great and Little Maldon, with appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, 10 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, 600 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 400 of paſture, 200 of wood, 500 of furze and heath, 60 s. rent; and free fiſhery, wreck of the Sea, and a crane or wharff, in Great and Little Maldon, Woodham, Walter, and Mortimer, and Purley; and free-warren in thoſe pariſhes, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Peverell, by knight's ſervice (y). See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.] Her heir at law,

Walter Devereux, Viſcount Hereford, and afterwards Earl of Eſſex, obtained, the ſame year, a grant of theſe maners. But he had them not at the time of his deceaſe 22 September 1576 (z). In 1590, Qu. Elizabeth granted the maners of Great and Little Maldon to

Thomas Gardiner, to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (a). He dyed 20 April 1590, and was ſucceeded by his ſon—— Thomas, then 20 years old, afterwards knighted (b); who ſold this maner of Great Maldon, and that of Little Maldon, to

Robert Sprignell Eſq; He was poſſeſſed of them at the time of his deceaſe 25 July 1624.—— Richard Sprignell, his ſon and heir, then aged 22 years (c), was created a Baronet 14 Auguſt 1641, being ſtyled of Coppenthorp in Yorkſhire. His brother —— Sir William Sprignell, ſold this eſtate to

Captain Zachary Taylor, of Stratford; who, by Elizabeth daughter of Captain Warren of Wapping, left two daughters coheirs; ——Elizabeth, married to

Mr. William Swan, of Friday-ſtreet, linnen-draper; and——Jane to

Mr. Richard Davenport, ſon of John Davenport, of Ironmonger-lane, tobacconiſt: And between them was this eſtate divided.

Anne, daughter of Mr. Richard Davenport, enjoys this eſtate at preſent. She was married, firſt, to James Froſt, Gent. afterwards to Thomas Freman, of Chelmsford, Gent. After her deceaſe, John Froſt, Gent. ſon of her firſt huſband, is to ſucceed her.

The Maner of LITTLE MALDON

comprehends not only Little Maldon-hall, with its demeſnes and appertenances, but alſo that part where Biley-Abbey ſtands. It is what Ralph Piperell, or Peverell, held at the time of the Survey, on which account it was holden afterwards of the Honor of Peverell.

The next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record after Ralph Piperell, was Robert Mantell, founder of the Monaſtery here; who had a grant of free-warren. And in 1210, Mathew de Montell, or Martell, held half a knight's fee in Little Maldon, of the foreſaid Honor (d).——Cecilie, wife of another Matthew Mauntell, at the time of her deceaſe in 1289 held in Little Maldone 20 acres of arable, 33 of wood, and the third part of a mill in Little Maldon.

Thomas Filioll, her couſin and next heir, enfeoffed ſome perſons in parcels of this maner (e).

Roger Baynard, who dyed in 1295, held in Little Maldon, of the King in ca. by the ſervice of one knight's fee, 1 meſſuage, 250 acres of arable, 18 of meadow, 9 of paſture, 73s. rent, and 100 acres of wood, with the third part of a mill. And he had granted to Henry de Cobham, and his heirs, part of this maner, viz. 70 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 7s. yearly rent, and the third part of a mill. His nephew ——

[K] Thomas Darcye held the maner of Maldon in 1485, but it is not ſaid whether it was that of Great or Little Maldon: He held it of the Honor of Peverell. Inquiſ. 1 Hen. VII.

[L] John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, held the maner of Maldon of the Earl of Eſſex: as did John the 14th Earl; and John the 16th Earl of Oxford. Inquiſ. 5, & 18 Hen. VIII. & 5 Eliz.

Thomas Baynard, ſon of his brother Richard, was his heir. But he had not this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe in 1344 (f). [See in the other Volume, p. 176.]

William Amory held this maner in 1341, wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Edmund (g).

It came afterwards, as well as the Maner of Great Maldon, in the Bourchier family. Bartholomew, Lord Bourchier, was poſſeſſed of it in the reign of K. Henry IV.——Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her two huſbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart (h). [See in the other Volume, p. 253.] But ſhe dying without iſſue, it deſcended to her heir at law——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, and Eſſex; who, at the time of his deceaſe 4 April 1483, held both the maners of Great and Little Maldon (i). His grandſon——Henry, Earl of Eſſex held the ſame; and then his only daughter and heir

Anne, Marchioneſs of Northampton. Her huſband William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, did indeed alienate it, by licenſe dated 12 October 1540, to William Wriotheſley, and others (k). But, notwithſtanding that ſhe dyed poſſeſſed of it 26 January 1570 (l). The ſame year Qu. Elizabeth granted it to

Walter Devereux, Viſcount Hereford, and afterwards Earl of Eſſex: And, in 1590, to

Thomas Gardiner, with the maner of Great Maldon (m). His ſon——Sir Thomas Gardiner Kt. ſold them, as I have juſt before obſerved to Robert Sprignell Eſq; They paſſed together from Sprignell to——Taylor,——Davenport, ——Froſt, &c.

The Maner of IENKINS, commonly called Jenkin-Maldon. Only part of the land lyes in Maldon, the Houſe is in Haſeley, about two miles ſouth from this Town.

This is now only a nominal Maner. It belonged anciently to the Hoſpital of St. Giles in Little Maldon, and was the chief of its endowment.

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. in 1538, granted lands called Tillinghams, and Byleigh-wick, Byggys, Lambornes, Weſtfeild, Holfrith crofts, Smalmerſh, commonly named Jenkin Maldons, in the pariſhes of Hayſelfleigh, Purleigh, Woodham Mortimer, and St. Mary's and St. Peter's in this Town, to Thomas Dyer, and his heirs. He had licenſe, 15 November 1546, to alienate them to Roger Heigham, and his wife (n). At the time of his deceaſe, 29 Auguſt 1558, he held the maners of Jenkyn and Maldon, and the reſt of the premiſſes, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 54 s. 3 d.——William, his ſon and heir was then 19 years old (o).

Edward Bellingham was poſſeſſed of it in 1595, and dying 31 March 1605, left his ſon and heir——Edward, aged upwards of 29 years (p).

It belonged lately to Sir John Smith, Bart. then to his ſon——Sir John Smith, Bart. now to his two Siſters, Mary, widow of Dormer Parkhurſt Eſq; and Elizabeth Smith.

SAYERS, or SEYRES, and SOUTHOUSE, are mentioned as other Maners in Maldon; now only a grazing farm, in the pariſh of St. Mary's.

Sir Richard Grey, of Wilton, held theſe maners, and le Hide, in 1441. of the King, by knight's ſervice, as parcel of the maner of Purle; And ſo did——Margaret, his widow, that dyed in 1451.——William was their ſon and ſucceſſor (q).

In 1506 Hugh Dennys Eſq; obtained a pardon for his intruſion on the maners of Purle, Maldon, Sayers, Snodham, &c. And, at the time of his deceaſe 17 September 1558, he held the maners of Sowthowſe and Sawiers of the Queen as of the Honor of Raleigh.——Henry, his ſon and heir, was 13 years old (r).——John Dennis Eſq; 20 January 1576, ſold Sowthouſe and Sawyers, lying in the pariſhes of Maldon, Munden, and Purley, to Thomas Emeley, Gent. In the recovery, they are deſcribed as one meſſuage, one garden, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of paſture, 20 of wood, 300 of furze and heath, 200 of marſh, and 100 acres of land under water (s). He dyed 29 March 1608, leaving——Maximilian his ſon and heir (t).

This eſtate belonged ſome time ago to Richard Lockwood, and Oſmond Beauvoir, Eſqres. afterwards to Mr. Charles Philips merchant.

Northey-iſland, near Maldon, which hath been reputed a Maner, was alſo in the ſame hands.

NORTHPITT, and NORDMASHE, are alſo mentioned as Maners here. Thomas Darcye held them at the time of his deceaſe 23 September 1485 (u). They are now unknown.

William Twyddie Eſq; who dyed 21 June 1605, held the maner of Maldon, alias Earles Maldon in Maldon, with all its rights, members, and appertenances; and a meſſuage, ſtable, curtilage, and orchard thereto adjoyning, late in the tenure of William Mounſon. Alſo theſe ſeveral parcels of land, Hawke-downe-hills; fourteen acres; Birdeſcrofte; Great and Little Melfeild; Banfeild; Redleis, or Fryerfeild; Nold Nouldgrove; Smythfeild; le Harpe mead; Milkwell; Culver crofte; and Tillerſhills: all in the three pariſhes of Maldon; holden of the King in free ſocage, and not in capite, nor by knight's

What Maner was meant by this, I am not able to diſcover.

The Borough of Maldon comes next under our conſideration.

This Borough belonged originally, like moſt others, to the King; and, at the time of the Survey, the Houſes were lett to the Burgeſſes, at a certain rent.

In K. Henry the Firſt's reign, Robert Fitz-Richard was lord of the Borough of Maldon (w).

It was afterwards in the hands of K. Henry II. and he granted it to Partridge, a Norman, who gave a moiety of it to an Hoſpital in Normandy; the Maſter whereof did afterwards exchange with the Biſhop of London, for ſome lands the Biſhop had in Normandy [M]. How the Biſhop came by the other moiety does not appear, but probably by grant from the Crown, becauſe Biſhop Robert Braybroke, Lord-Chancellor, with his Chapter of St. Paul's, granted it to this Corporation in 1403: By virtue of which grant, they enjoyed a Cuſtom, called Landcheap, which is, that all perſons purchaſing any freehold lands within the Borough, ſhall pay to the uſe of the Borough 10 d. out of every mark of the purchaſe-money (x).

This ancient cuſtom, with ſome other rents and profits ariſing from a moiety of the town of Maldon, ſeems to be what Hamo le Parker, and Anne his wife, held about the year 1301, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's Fee. There were certain Tenants, who paid a yearly rent of aſſize for the Stalls of the Market 16 s. There was a certain toll from Ships and Lighters coming here, worth 8 s. per ann. with a moiety of the Pleas of the Court of the ſaid Town (y).

In 1422, Henry Teye held a moiety of the lordſhip [dominii] of the Town of Maldon, of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice, as of the Honor of Peverell (z).

At the requeſt of William de Mandevill, Earl of Eſſex, K. Henry II. gave a very ample Charter to the Burgeſſes of Maudone; whereby he granted and confirmed to them, and their ſucceſſors, all their Lands, Poſſeſſions, and Tenements, as they held them of him, within and without the Burgh, as far as the bounds of the Banlieu of the ſame; namely Haylſpett, Morisbroke, Limborne, Billimbroc, Buherne, Cravenho, Elmecrofte: To have and to hold for ever, free and quiet with ſac, ſoc, &c. and all their Liberties and free Cuſtoms, peaceably, freely, quietly, fully, and honorably, in lands, waters, houſes, revenues, in all places and matters appertaining to their tenements aforeſaid; by the ſervice of free Burgage. He alſo exempted them from Aids, Amerciaments, &c. uſually levied by Sheriffs, Foreſters, &c. Moreover he exempted them from Danegeld, Hydage, Carriage, Summage, Scutage, Tallage, Stallage, Laſtage, and Toll, in every market, and fair, and at the Paſſage over bridges, and along roads belonging to this Kingdom; of working at the building or repairs of Caſtles, Bridges, Cauſeways, and the fencing of Parks &c. And from all foreign Service, except the finding for forty days at their own expence one Ship, for the King's uſe, whenever He ſhall be obliged to go perſonally, or to ſend an Army, for the Kingdom's ſervice; being firſt ſummoned by the royal letters to a certain day and place. See this Charter at length in the Note below [N].

Geffrey de Mandeville had a grant of the whole Barony and Lands of William Peverel, and undoubtedly of what Ralph Piperell held here at the time of the Survey; which induced his ſon William to procure this Charter. See Dugdale's Baron. Vol. I. p 202.

Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the Burgh of Maldon, and their ſucceſſors for ever, that they ſhould be one perpetual Body corporate and politic, and one perpetual Community, conſiſting of two Bailiffs, ſix Aldermen, eighteen capital Burgeſſes, and the Commonalty of the Burgeſſes of Maldon. But not having named in that Charter the Bailiffs, and other Officers, nor given the Burgeſſes any power or autority to nominate, conſtitute, and elect any of their own body to be Bailiffs &c. Therefore ſhe and her conſort K. Philip, 25 February 1554, granted them a new Charter, whereby they incorporated the Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the Burgh of Maudon, alias Maldon, and their ſucceſſors; to conſiſt of two Bailiffs, ſix Aldermen, eighteen capital Burgeſſes and the Commonalty of the Burgeſſes of Maldon; to be one perpetual Body corporate and politic in fact and in name, and to have perpetual ſucceſſion.—They were impowered to purchaſe and receive maners, lands, tenements &c. provided, they did not extend to the clear yearly value of 40 l. beyond repriſes, and were not holden in capite, or by knight's ſervice.—They were alſo impowered to hold, before the Bailiffs, in the Court of their Motehall, all manner of Pleas, real and mixt, concerning any lands and tenements within their Burgh, Liberty, and precincts of the ſame; and alſo perſonal Pleas for any ſum or kind; and to compel the defendants, in real Pleas, to anſwer by proceſs of law from fortnight to fortnight; and in perſonal Pleas from week to week; and to arreſt and attach their bodies, and chattles within the Burgh, and commit their bodies to priſon; and to hear and terminate all ſuch Pleas. Likewiſe, to hold Pleas of aſſiſe, novel diſſeiſin, mort d'anceſtor, rediſſeiſin, attaints, debt, accounts, treſpaſs, and all other perſonal Pleas whatſoever, ariſing, within this Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct; that were moved or to be moved within any of the Courts, of Chancery, the Common Bench, Exchequer, and before the Juſtices itinerant, or any other Juſtices and Officers; and to determine the ſame.—The Bailiffs were alſo empowered to hold in the Motehall a Court of View of frank-pledge, and View of frank pledge, concerning all tenants, and inhabitants of this Burgh, and the ſuburbs, twice a year, viz. within one month after Eaſter, and within one month after Michaelmaſs:—And the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and the reſt of the Corporation, and their ſucceſſors, to have a Priſon within their houſe of the Mote-halle, of which the Bailiffs for the time being ſhould be keepers.—Alſo within their Burgh, or Liberty, tumbrel, pillory, and gallows.—To have a Market within their Burgh every Saturday for ever.—To conſtitute and appoint a Clerk of the Market.—And Coroners of their own.—To hold Courts of Admiralty, and have the fines, amerciaments, and other emoluments thence ariſing.—To them were given Felons cattle, eſcapes, and other goods and chattles, forſeitures, fines, and amerciaments, for their own uſe.—They were to have one Common Seal: and the Return of all writs and Precepts and executions of the ſame, provided it was not about felony or treaſon:—and the aſſiſe of bread, wine, beer, and of all kinds of victuals; of meaſures, weights, &c.—The Bailiffs, Aldermen, and capital Burgeſſes, or the greater part of them, to make reaſonable Ordinances and Conſtitutions for the good of the Burgh, and put them in execution, provided they were not repugnant or contrary to the Laws and Statutes of the realm.—To aſſeſs reaſonable Tallages, or Taxes, upon the goods of all perſons, and of all Burgeſſes, dwelling within the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct, as well within Liberties as without, according to every one's ability, upon the rents, trades, and merchandiſes, or otherwiſe, as ſhall ſeem to them beſt, and to levy them by reaſonable diſtreſs; committing ſuch as refuſed to pay, if neceſſary, to priſon, and keeping them there till they paid.—The Bailiffs for the time being, and ſome Lawyer, and two Burgeſſes; choſen the ſame day, and in the ſame manner and form as the Bailiffs; to be jointly and ſeverally Keepers of the Peace within the Burgh.—In ſupport of their ſervice aforeſaid, of finding one Ship for ſorty days, as they did in the time of K. Henry I. and other Kings of England, this Charter granted them all fines, iſſues, compoſitions, amerciaments, forfeitures, for felonies, and other crimes, outlawries, waifs, ſtrays, happening within the Burgh, banlieu, and precincts, without account.—It alſo confirmed their Liberties contained in the Charter of K. Henry II. namely Exemption throughout England, and the ports of the ſame, from ſcot, paſſage, murage, picage, &c. as they enjoyed it from time immemorial. And if any one took toll or cuſtom from any of the Burgeſſes, the Bailiffs and other members of the Corporation ſhould go and take out of that city, burgh, or town, where cuſtom was ſo taken, or of the goods of him that took the toll, to the amount of what was taken from their fellow-burgeſs; or the treſpaſſer ſhould come to Maldon, and prove by due courſe of law that he owed nothing.—This Charter granted likewiſe to the Bailiffs, Aldermen, Burgeſſes, and Commonalty of Maldon their Fiſhery within the Liberty and Precincts of their Burgh; and the Cuſtoms of the water and of the banks whoever had lands adjoyning, and the uſe of the Creeks and of their wharfs, and cranes.—Moreover, it granted them, and their ſucceſſors, three Fairs, yearly forever; to laſt four days, namely the vigil and day of St. Giles, and the day following; [Auguſt 31. and September 1.] and the vigil and day of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, and the two days following; [September 8, 9, 10.] with all their liberties and free cuſtoms.—Next, it exempted the Bailiffs and other members reſiding within the Burgh, and their ſucceſſors, from being impannelled out of the Burgh, againſt their will, upon any Jury, or Aſſize; or to be appointed aſſeſſors or collectors of tenths, fifteenths, and other tallages, ſubſidies, &c. or put into any other office whatſoever, without this Town and Liberties.—And it granted to the Bailiffs, Aldermen, Capital Burgeſſes, and Commonalty of this Burgh, and their ſucceſſors, and ordained, That whenever a Parliament was ſummoned, they ſhould have power and autority to chuſe and nominate two diſcreet and honeſt Men to be Burgeſſes in Parliament for their Burgh, as they were accuſtomed to have from time immemorial; and that the ſaid Burgeſſes ſhould have two votes in Parliament, &c.—It directs, that the Aldermen and capital Burgeſſes, for the time being, or the greater part of them, yearly for ever, on the Friday next after the Epiphany, in the Burgh of Maldon, chuſe two of the more diſcreet and ſufficient Aldermen, for their Bailiffs, to continue in their office for one year, and to be ſworn in the ſame before the two other ſenior Aldermen.—None of them to be choſen Bailiff again, till three years after having ſerved the office.—This Charter confirms alſo to the Corporation all their Bounds and Limits, namely Hayleſpett, Moryſbroke, Lumborn, Billingbroke, Buherne, Cratenha, and Revank, with the waters and banks or ſhores within thoſe bounds, as they had enjoyed them from time immemorial: And that none ſhould fiſh, or erect cranes and wharfs, from the Hethe to Revanks, without the licenſe of the Bailiffs &c. nor preſume to ſell or buy within the Water unleſs at the Hethe of this Burgh, upon pain of forfeiture.—All their ancient Cuſtoms, Liberties, Privileges, Franchiſes, Rights, granted to them at any time before by any former Charters, are finally confirmed by this in the ampleſt and fulleſt manner.

Under this Charter the Corporation has acted ever ſince, it being their laſt Charter. In purſuance of it, they have Two Bailiffs annually choſen, Six Aldermen, Eighteen capital Burgeſſes; and of other Burgeſſes who have votes at Elections, about 1000.

This Burgh hath ſent Burgeſſes to Parliament ever ſince 1329, the 3d of K. Edward III. but with ſome chaſms, as appears by the Liſt of them inſerted in the Introduction to this Hiſtory after the Liſt of the Knights of the Shire.

This Town was anciently divided into three PARISHES. 1. ALLSAINTS. 2. ST. PETER'S These two have been long united together. 3. ST. MARYS.

ALLSAINTS

Pariſh, is in the higheſt part of the Town: and the Church is the chief in this Borough. It is a ſpacious edifice, conſiſting of a body, and north and ſouth aiſles: the ſouth one is called Darcy's aiſle, or Chapel. On the top of the Tower is a Spire, built in the form of an equilateral triangle, which is very uncommon. Here are 5 Bells.

This Church was given by Robert Mantell to Bileigh-Abbey, founded by him in Little Maldon, of which we ſhall preſently give an account. The great Tithes were afterwards appropriated to it, and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Abbot and Convent continued patrons till their ſuppreſſion.

The ſmallneſs of the Profits of this Vicarage, and of the neighbouring one of St. Peter's, occaſioned them to be united in 1306, and they have remained ſo ever ſince.

Upon the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. granted this Church and Rectory, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to John Gate Eſq; He, by licenſe dated 17 September 1546, alienated them to William Marche (a). Afterwards they came into the——Franke family, which preſented to the Vicarage from 1561 to 1620—and then into that of Ingram (b).

Bartholomew Bludworth, of London, merchant, was poſſeſſed of them next. His widow, ——Utricia Bludworth, of Bevitree in Devonſhire, preſented to the Vicarage in 1710: and their ſon——John Bludworth Eſq; in 1715 and 1730.

Dr. Thomas Plume, whom we ſhall have occaſion to mention more particularly a little lower, gave 400l. to augment the Vicaridge of All-Saints in Maldon, by buying impropriate tythes, or ſo much glebe as might be had for the ſame, for which the Incumbent ſhall be reſident, and take care for daily prayers.

Lands and tenements in Maldon were put in feoffment by divers perſons, to the intent that the Wardens of St. Catharine's Gild ſhould find a Prieſt to ſing maſs in All Saints Church, and help to ſerve the Cure. In the Certificate it is ſaid, that this Pariſh had then in it by eſtimation 200 of houſeling people. At the ſuppreſſion, the yearly value of it was 46s. K. Edward VI. 26 September 1548, granted to John Welles all the meſſuages, lands, meadows, and paſtures belonging to this Gild or Fraternity (*).

Robert Darcy of Danbury Eſq; founded three Chantries in this Church; in the reign of K. Henry IV: and the ſouth aiſle, or Chapel, is called Darcy's aiſle, or Chapel, undoubtedly becauſe it was built by him for the uſe of his Chantry-Prieſts. Several of that family were buried in this aiſle, as appears by the Epitaphs. See a further account of the Family under Danbury, and St. Oſith.

ST. PETERS.

This Pariſh ſtands in the heart of the Town. The Church was given by R. Mantell to Bileigh-Abbey, and united to All Saints, as I have obſerved above.

Of the Church, only the Tower is now ſtanding. The body of it being down, Dr. Thomas Plume erected upon the ſite of it a handſom brick edifice, the lower part of which is the Grammar-School, and the upper part a Library, which he furniſhed with his own Books. For a more particular account of this generous perſon's Benefactions to this Town, ſee below under the article Charities and Benefactions.

Ralph Breeder may be called the firſt Founder of the Grammar-School, he having left 300l. for that uſe. Mrs. Anaſtatia Wentworth added thereto. See below among the Benefactions, and in the other Volume, p. 134.

In this Pariſh there was a Gild in honor of the Virgin Mary, founded by licenſe of K. Henry V. for a Prieſt to ſing maſs in the Church, and to keep a ſchool. In the Certificate of Chantries it is ſaid, that the Pariſh of St. Peter's was 'a very great pariſh, having in yt the number 'of 240 of houſeling people.' The endowment of this gild, was, a tenement called the Starr; nine tenements and meſſuages, and a gate-houſe; and a ſtall in the market: four meadows in Maldon; and one in Langford called Stokehope: two crofts of land, and one garden. All then valued at 9l. 5s. 9d. ob. They were granted, with St. Catharine's gild, to John Welles.

ST. MARY'S

pariſh ſtands in the lower part of this Town, near the Channel. It is what St. Martins held under Euſtace Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey. The profits of it were aſſigned for finding lights in St. Martin's Church.

K. Stephen granted that Collegiate Church free-warren in all their lands in Mealdon.

The Church of St. Mary's was anciently a Sea-mark, and had on the top of the Tower a Beacon. The Tower being decayed, fell down and demoliſhed part of the Church; for the repairing of which a Brief was granted by K. Charles I. 18 July 1628.

Upon the diſſolution of the College of St. Martins London, this Church was given to the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter; and the perpetual Curacy hath continued ever ſince in their gift, being of their peculiar juriſdiction.

Thomas Knipe, M. A. was the perpetual Curate of it; and now
Samuel Horſmanden, L L B. Rector of Purley.

In this, as well as in the two other Churches, formerly was a Gild, or Fraternity: This was in honor of St. George. Lands and tenements had been put in feoffment by divers perſons, to find a Prieſt called St. George's Prieſt to ſing maſs in the pariſh of St. Mary's, and alſo to help ſerve the cure. The particulars of the endowment were, lands and three meſſuages and tenements in Maldon; a meſſuage, lands, and hereditaments called Boies, in Salcote and Tolſhunt-Knights; meſſuages, lands, &c. called Sampſons, Widowe lands, Hunger londs, Tabor, Oſbornes croft, and Swete Maggotts in Tolleshunt-Darcy; and lands &c. called Smythes in Dengy. All then of the yearly value of 6l. 11s. And in the Certificate it is ſaid, That the pariſh of St. Maries was a great pariſh, having in it about the number of 280 of howſeling people. The revenues of it were granted, with thoſe of the two others, to John Welles (c).

There were, before the Reformation, Three Religious Houſes in and about this Town. 1. The Abbey of Bilegh. 2. A Priory of Carmelites. 3. St. Giles's Hoſpital.

The ABBEY of BILEGH,

The Monks, or Canons, placed in it, were brought from Great Parndon. [See in the other Volume, p. 494.]

Their firſt poſſeſſions conſiſted of the lands they had before in Parndon; the ſite of their Houſe here, with appertenances, two virgates of land in Maudone, and two little iſlands called Rucholm, and Hardholm; and the third part of Strode-wood; a field called Alicedune; and all the land which Rob. Mantell had given them at Totham, and Goldhangre; the Churches of St. Peters, and All-Saints, in this Town; of St. Laurence in Daneſey; and half the Church of St. Margaret of Bures: And of the gift of Roeis wife of Rob. Mantell, one meſſuage in Mamnelane, London. Alſo, of the gift of Ralph de Marci in Lagefare [Laver] all the land which was Felleden's, and panage for fifteen hogs every year in the wood there. Of the gift of Beulceline, wife of Roger de Langeford, at Blacheham all the land which Walter the Cook held of her (d).

In 1285, Hugh Fitz-Otto gave them a marſh called Coleurde in Bradwell near the ſea: And, in 1290, Hugh de Nevill lands in Great Wakering, with the advowſon of that Church: As did, in 1299, Robert Fitz-Walter the advowſon of the Church of Ulting (e). In 1392, John Doreward, Robert Rikedon, and William Dannebury, gave them 46 acres of arable in Maldon (f).

At the diſſolution, their Revenues conſiſted, of the Maners of Byleigh, and of Cannons in Great Parndon; Moynes, in Aſheldham and St. Laurence; Lands in Bocking and Pannefeild; Colleward in Bradwell; Muntes-ferm in Woodham-Walter, and Mulſham in Chelmsford; Tollyfants in Goldhanger; Weymarſh, Eſt marſh and Weſt marſh, in Goldhanger and Faltey; Lands, tenements, and rents in Hayleſleigh, Purleigh, Woodham Mortimer, and Norton; Rents in St. Laurence, Steeple, and Cryxeheth; Meſſuages, tenements, and land in London; Rents of ſeveral lands and tenements in Maldon, and of Spittle-lands there; Muntes-ferm in Purleigh, Frerne and Jakeletts, Bennetts, Dodwere, and Wymark land, in the ſame pariſh; Gorewell, and Prentyſe in Tolleſbury; Muntes-ferm in Tolleſhunt Darcy, Tolleſbury, Goldanger, and Little Totham; Rents in Great and Little Totham, Goldanger, and Salcott; Frerne in Great Totham; Rents in Ulting, Woodham-Walter, Sandon, Widford, and Chiggenhall St. James; Rents in Great Wakering; Bowres in Woodham-Walter: The Rectories, or great Tithes, of All-Saints and St. Peter's in Maldon, and of Ulting, and Great Wakering; and the Advowſons of thoſe Vicarages; and the Advowſon of the Rectory of St. Laurence (g).

They had alſo very extenſive lands and demeſnes near their Houſe, and in Maldon, and other places, particularly ſet down below [O]. The yearly amount of all their Revenues, was, according to J. Speed, 196l. 6s. 5d. or 157l. 16s. 11d. qa. according to Dugdale; out of which were maintained nine Canons.

Only part of this Abbey remains, the reſt lying in ruins.

This eſtate was next in Thomas Francke Eſq; of the Riſe &c. in Hatfeild Broad-oak. [See in the other Volume, p. 507.] He held the ſite of this Monaſtery, and the maner of Belight, and Belight grange, and 5 meſſuages, 1 dove-houſe, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, and 200 of paſture, in Maldon &c. Mrs. Sarah Clifton. It belongs now to Dr. Forteſcue, a Phyſician at Bampton in Oxfordſhire.

Some of the aboveſaid poſſeſſions of the Abbey were diſmembred from the reſt. For the Spittle-lands, in St. Peter's Maldon, formerly belonging to St. Giles's 'Spittle, or Hoſpital; with Bond-feild, the Grange-houſe, a garden, the Ox-houſe, and a Garner, belonging to Bileigh-Abbey, were granted by K. The PRIORY of CARMELITES was founded about the year 1292, by Richard Graveſend biſhop of London, and Richard Iſelham, a prieſt, for Carmelite or White-Monks [P].

Thoſe mendicants not being capable of poſſeſſing lands, the revenues of this Houſe were valued at the Suppreſſion but at 26 s. 8 d. For the ſum of 21 l. 6 s. 8 d. in Speed is a miſtake (r).

The 14th of January 1537, William Harris had a leaſe of the Friers Carmelites at the ferm rent of 8 d.

K. Henry VIII. October 8, 1546, granted this Houſe to George Duke, and John Sterre, and their heirs; to hold in burgage and free ſocage, by fealty only (s).

Thomas Mildmay Eſq; by deed dated 6 October 1563, conveyed this capital meſſuage called the Friers in Maldon to

Vincent Herris, Gent. and his heirs; From him they paſſed to his eldeſt ſon——Sir Thomas Herris; who by fine and recovery ſettled it on himſelf and Cordelia his wife for life, and after their deaths to the uſe of——John his eldeſt ſon. He having no iſſue, his brother——Thomas Herris Eſq; inherited: and he by feoffment and livery conveyed it to Bartholomew Brickwood, Gent. and his heirs for ever. He was deſcended from Thomas Brickwood of Evington in Leiceſterſhire, and ſon of Samuel Brickwood, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Henry Symons of Maldon, Gent. Bartholomew married Anne, daughter of . . . . Hewet of London, Gent. and by will, 20 March 1673, gave her this eſtate for life, remainder to his eldeſt ſon——John, and the heirs of his body; and in default thereof to the iſſue of his other ſons, Samuel, and Benjamin, as John ſhould by will appoint. He, by his will dated 9 February 1693, gave it to his younger brother——Benjamin, and his heirs for ever. The latter bequeathed it by will, 22 October 1707, to his nephew——Henry Brickwood, Gent. who, 14 March 1707-8, ſold it to

Thomas Richmond Eſq; one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for this Burgh in the third Parliament of Qu. Anne. His brother——Jonathan Richmond had it after him; whoſe daughter Suſannah brought it in marriage to her huſband Mr. Thomas Cooke of Southwark. She was re-married to Mr. Hill, and is now a widow.

This little Convent was honoured with ſeveral great Scholars; namely Thomas Maldon, who dyed in 1404. Richard Acton, in 1446. Robert of Colcheſter, in 1465; and Thomas Hatfeild (t).

The HOSPITAL of ST. GILES

ſtood in Little Maldon. The remains of it are built of a mixture of ſtone; and of bricks and tiles that have the appearance of Roman. It is now converted into a Barn. One of our Kings is ſaid to have been the founder (u). And the deſign of the foundation, was for the relief of ſuch Burgeſſes of this Town as ſhould have the Leproſy. For the maintenance of it, the Maſter or Warden was to have all forfeitures for bread, beer, fleſh, and fiſh not good or fit to be eaten. If the Warden did not duly diſcharge his truſt, the Hoſpital was to come to the Crown. Upon the male-adminiſtration of Robert Mansfeld, Maſter; who for three years had neglected his office, having during that ſpace neither maintained a Chaplain, or any leprous perſon; therefore K. Henry IV. took this Hoſpital into his own hands, but reſtored it again. So that preſentations were made to it by ſeveral perſons after Mansfeld's death, from 1422 till 1480. But Henry Bourchier Earl of Eſſex, Iſabell his wife, and others that had preſented the then Maſter, having obtained the King's licenſe 18 February 1480; they did by writing under their hands and ſeals, 17 May 1481, give to Thomas Scarlet, then Abbot of Bileigh, and to the Convent and their ſucceſſors, this Hoſpital of St. Giles; the patronage of the ſame, and all the lands thereto belonging, about 90 acres, for their better maintenance and ſupport. And Thomas Kemp, Biſhop of London, did unite and appropriate this Hoſpital, with all its fruits, profits, &c. to the Abbot and Convent of Bileigh and their ſucceſſors (w).

The chief of its revenues were the Maner of Jenkin-Maldon, of which we have given an account above.

A liſt of the Wardens may be ſeen in Newcourt.

This Hoſpital belonged to the late Lieutenant-General Montolieu; now to his ſon——Col. Charles Lewis Montolieu.

[P] They were one of the four mendicant Orders, and founded in the year 1122, by Albert patriarch of Jeruſalem, who gathered together a few Hermits that lived on mount Carmel, and gave them the rule of St. Baſil. This Order was brought into England about the year 1265.

Samuel Bedell of Bilegh-Abbey gave 40 l. to the ſame uſe.

Thomas Cammock of Maldon, Eſq; gave Cromwell-Water to the Town.

Mrs. Anaſtatia, widow of Henry Wentworth Eſq; and ſole daughter and heir of William Hale of this Town Gent. that dyed 4 June 1634, gave 23 l. per ann. to the Free-ſchool, out of a farm at Hatfield-Peverell: She alſo gave two Houſes of about 9 or 10 l. per ann. to this School.—Beſides this, 3 l. per ann. was given out of rents of Houſes in this town to the ſaid School.

But the greateſt Benefactor to this Town was Dr. Thomas Plume.

"The farm of Iltney in Munden having been (as he had credibly heard) a Chantry-land given to Maldon (*), but alienated by K. Henry VIII. he now reſtored, and gave for ever to the town of Maldon for the uſes following: 1. To keep in good repair the ſchool and library-room for ever. 2dly. To maintain a weekly Lecture from Lady-day to Michaelmas for ever, allowing the ſeveral neighbouring Miniſters of Dengy, or Rochford-Hundred, that ſhall be choſen to preach it, Ten ſhillings for their Sermon, and two ſhillings for his own and his friends dinner, if the Truſtees order it, upon Wedneſday or Saturday, as they ſhall agree, in the Upper Church at Maldon. But upon the firſt Wedneſday or Saturday in Auguſt he allows twenty ſhillings out of Iltney-lands towards the dinner of them that ſhall there meet, and take the accounts of the tenants, let and ſet the farm, conſider the repairs of the houſes &c.—Allowing the Sexton ten ſhillings for each of the two quarters for tolling the bell for the Lecture, to be paid 10 s. upon Midſummer-day, and 10s. at Michaelmaſs. And likewiſe 10 s. at each of the ſaid quarter-days to be divided among the moſt godly indigent poor of Maldon that repair to this lecture, prayers, and ſermon moſt conſtantly. Further, out of the profits of Iltney-lands he orders the Truſtees to keep ſix, or ten poor Boys out of Maldon or Munden, and allows the Maſter 20 s. per ann. towards their clothing. And he allows the Miniſter of All Saints pariſh, or whoſoever reads the Prayers before the Lecture and at other times, 20s. per quarter, out of Iltney eſtate for ever, for conſtant reading morning Prayer daily about eleven o'clock and five at night, or ſooner in winter. The Truſtees he nominated, were the two annual Bayliffs of Maldon (if they communicated with the Church of England) and the Miniſters of All-Saints pariſh Maldon, the Curate of St. Maries there, the School-maſter, the Library-keeper, and alſo the Miniſters of Woodham-Walter, Purleigh, Munden, Heybridge, or Curates for ever, or any five of them.

As to his Library juſt mentioned above,

He gave to this Library all his Books and Pictures, (except his own Picture in Mr. Pond's houſe) together with his large Map of the world. And deſired all his manuſcript Papers, of his own hand, to be carefully preſerved in the ſtudy of the ſaid Library. He directed that the keeper of his Library ſhould be a Scholar that knows Books, M. A. and in holy orders; and may be ſome Miniſter that has a neighbouring living, and can and ſhall reſide in Maldon: or the School-maſter himſelf, or any other of good learning and life, that will be ingaged to attend every morning and afternoon (except Sundays) two hours in the Library-room, or in his houſe near to it, in all four hours per diem; that any Gentleman, or Scholar, who deſires, may go into it, and make uſe of any book there, or borrow it, in caſe he leaves a vadimonium with the keeper for the reſtoring thereof fair and incorrupted within a ſhort time, or elſe therewith to buy another of the ſame kind and goodneſs. He ſhall ſuffer no ſtranger to be there alone without a voucher for his honeſty, and his own promiſe not to carry away, or deface any book. The Library-keeper is to give 200 l. bond at leaſt not to imbezzell his books, nor to lend them out without ſufficient pawn to his Truſtees at Maldon, to buy the ſame again. The Governors of Sion-college London for the time being are to take account thereof, for which he left that college 20 s. per annum out of Iltney eſtate for ever. And becauſe new Books are daily printing, he wills that twenty ſhillings per ann. be paid out of his Iltney eſtate yearly for ever, to buy any that ſhall be moſt deſired by the Library-keeper.—His Salary is forty pounds a year, and a dwelling houſe near the Library.

Two thouſand pounds that he had in the Eaſt-India Company he ordered to be imployed for making good his Charities as to the Work-houſe for the poor of Maldon, Munden, and neighbour pariſhes, and other Charities ſpecified in his will.—Having bequeathed in it before 200 l. and all the reſidue of his perſonal eſtate not diſpoſed of, for purchaſing and providing Tenements, and a Stock for ſetting the Poor of Maldon, and ſome of the Poor of Munden, to work. And what remained of his perſonal eſtate in the Exchequer, towards erecting a Work-houſe for the poor of Maldon and neighbouring villages."

This munificent perſon was born in Maldon, and baptized in All-Saints Church 7 Auguſt 1630; educated in Chelmsford-School, and at Chriſt's College in Cambridge: afterwards Vicar of Greenwich, and Archdeacon of Rocheſter. He dyed in the beginning of November 1704, and was buried in Longfield Church-yard in Kent, with an epitaph ordered by himſelf [Q]. Beſides his Charities to this Town, he left great WOODHAM.

Two pariſhes ſo called ſtand in the north-weſt corner of this Hundred; between Maldon and the Hundred of Chelmsford; in which laſt Hundred there is another ſtyled Woodham-Ferrers, ſo near theſe as to have been once part of the ſame diſtrict. The name is from the two words, Wood; and ham, habitation or village; i. e. the village in the Wood: of the ſame meaning as Waltham. The two Woodhams in this Hundred are diſtinguiſhed by the addition of Walter, and Mortimer, two noble Families to which they anciently belonged.

3. Woodham-Walter took that name from its lords, the Fitz-Walter family.

Levena was poſſeſſed of it in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey, Ralph Baignard, and his under-tenant Pointell [S].

Here is but one Maner; the manſion houſe of which, once the ſeat of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, ſtood about half a mile from the Church.

Ralph Baignard was one of K. William's attendants in his Conqueſt of this Kingdom; and ſo high in his favor, that he rewarded him with 25 lordſhips in this County, and many more elſewhere. [See in the other Volume, p. 427.] Baynard's caſtle in London was his capital manſion, and the head of his Barony. He was ſucceeded by his ſon——Geffrey; and he by his ſon —— William Baignard, or Baynard; who for joyning in a Conſpiracy againſt K. Henry I. was deprived of his Barony and eſtates (y), which that King gave to

Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert progenitor of the Earls of Clare; from which Robert deſcended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter, ſeated here, of which we ſhall briefly deduce the ſucceſſion, referring to the Peerages for a more particular account of their actions, intermarriages, and their ſeveral children. This Robert, ſurnamed Fitz-Richard, dyed in 1134, leaving by Maud his wife daughter of Simon de St. Liz, Earl of Huntindon, his ſon and heir ——Walter Fitz-Robert, who married firſt Maud eldeſt daughter of Richard de Lucy, with whom he had the lordſhip of Diſc, or Diſs, in Norfolk, ſecondly Margaret de Bohun. By the firſt he had——Robert Fitz-Walter [T], which ſurname deſcended from him to his poſterity. He held Wodeham by the ſervice of 15 knights [R] He was a man ſo extremely fat, and of ſuch an uncommon bulk and weight, that there are very few, if any, ſuch inſtances to be found in any country, or upon record in any books. At the age of 12 years and a half he weighed 10 ſtones and 4 pounds horſe-man's weight, i. e. 144 pounds. He increaſed in bulk as he grew up, ſo that in Seven years more he weighed 336 pounds. He went on increaſing, and probably in pretty near the ſame proportion: For the laſt time he was weighed, which was about thirteen months before he dyed, his neat weight was 41 ſtones and 10 pounds, or 584 pounds. At the time of his death, as he was manifeſtly grown bigger ſince the laſt weighing, if we take the ſame proportion by which he had increaſed for many years upon an average, viz. of about 2 ſtones a year, and only allow 4 pounds addition for laſt year, on account of his moving about but very little, this will bring him to 44 ſtones or 616 pounds neat weight.—As to his meaſure, he was 5 feet 9 inches and a half high. His body round the cheſt juſt under the arms meaſured 5 feet 6 inches, and round the belly 6 feet 11 inches. His arm in the middle of it was 2 feet 2 inches about, and his leg 2 feet 8 inches. After his death, ſeven men were buttoned in his weſtcoat without breaking a ſtitch, or ſtraining a button. He dyed 10 November 1750, aged 29.

fees belonging to his Barony (z); and dyed in 1235. By his firſt wife Gunnora, daughter and heir of Robert de Valoines, he had his ſon—— Walter Fitz-Robert, or Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1258. His ſon and heir——Robert Fitz-Walter, born in 1258, was knighted in 1274. The year following he paſſed away the inheritance of Baynards-caſtle to Robert Kylwardby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who tranſlated there from Holburn the Dominican or Black-Friers. In 1285, he had licenſe to encloſe 100 acres of heath, to enlarge his Park at Woodham (a): and from 1294 to 1325 was ſummoned to Parliament. His firſt wife was Alianor, daughter of William Earl Ferrers, of Groby, and his ſecond Dervorgil, one of the daughters and coheirs of John de Burgh. [See under Lexden.] Departing this life in 1326, he was ſucceeded by——Robert, his ſon and heir by his firſt wife. He dyed in 1328, being then poſſeſſed of the maners of Woodham-Walter, Burindon, or Burnham, Reyndon, Little Dunmow, Henham, Wymbiſhe, Great Teye, and Lexden; all which, with his other maners in Norfolk and Suffolk, he held of the King in capite, by an entire Barony, and by the ſervice of three knight fees (b) [U]. Having married Joane, eldeſt of three daughters and coheirs of John Moulton of Egremond, he left by her——John Fitz Walter, his ſon and heir, born in 1315, who dyed 18 Octob. 1361. He had ſummons to parliament from 1341 to 1360; and beſides the aboveſaid maners enjoyed thoſe of Aſton and Shering. By Alianor his wife, daughter of Henry Lord Percy, he had ——Walter, born in 1345; who did very great ſervice in Eſſex, againſt the rebels under Jack Straw; and was ſummoned to parliament from 1369 to 1385. He departed this life in September 1386 (c), having had two wives, Alianor; and Philippa, daughter and coheir of John de Mohun, lord of Dunſter, widow of Edward Plantagenet, Duke of York. By this laſt he had——Walter his ſon and heir, born in 1368; who had ſummons to parliament from 1390 to 1403. He dyed in 1408 (d), leaving by Joane his wife, daughter of Sir John Devereux, and ſiſter and heir to her brother John, two ſons, Humfrey, who dyed young; and—— Walter Fitz-Walter his ſucceſſor, who had ſummons to parliament in 1428 and 1430; and dyed in 1432 (e). He married Elizabeth . . . that enjoyed this maner of Woodham Walter till her deceaſe 14 June 1464; and leaving no iſſue male, their heirs were found to be Elizabeth; Anne, then wife of Thomas Rattclyff Eſq; and Joane daughter of the ſaid Elizabeth by her ſecond huſband William Maſſy, wife of Sir Robert Fenys (f). Sir William Dugdale is miſtaken in his account of this Family [W]. Thomas Ratclyff Eſq; dyed about the year 1440; having never been poſſeſſed of this maner and eſtate, which his mother-in-law Elizabeth Lady Fitz-Walter enjoyed during her life, together with thoſe of Burnham, Henham, Little Dunmowe, Wymbiſhe, Sheryng, Lexden, and Ultynge (g). Their ſon and heir ——John Ratcliffe Eſq; obtained a pardon of intruſion, in 1460, for entring upon the lands of his inheritance without livery (h). In 1485 he was ſummoned to parliament by the title of Lord Fitz-Walter, being then Steward of the Houſhold to K. Henry VII. But engaging in a conſpiracy to ſet Perkin Warbeck on the throne, in 1494; he was convicted of high-treaſon, and carried to Calais, where he was ſoon after beheaded. Upon his attainder, this Maner, with the reſt of his eſtates, became forfeited to the Crown. ——Robert Ratcliffe, his ſon, was reſtored to the Honor of Lord Fitz-Walter, Egremond, and Burnel, 3 November 1505. And not only the attainder was reverſed in 1509 by act of parliament; but he was alſo created, 18 July 1525, Viſcount Fitz-Walter, and 28 December 1529 Earl of Suſſex. He dyed 27 November 1542. By his firſt wife Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Stafford Duke of Buckingham, he had three ſons, Henry; George; and Sir Humfrey, of Elneſtow in Bedfordſhire. —— Henry, his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, was Knight of the Bath, and Knight of the Garter; and married, firſt, Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, by whom he had Thomas, Henry, and Francis: by his ſecond wife, Anne, daughter of Sir Philip Calthorp, he had Egremond, and Frances married to Sir Thomas Mildmay of Moulſham. Departing this life 17 February 1556, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon —— Thomas, Earl of Suſſex, "a goodly "Gentleman, and of a brave and noble nature, "true and conſtant to his friends and ſer"vants (i);" Lord Deputy of Ireland; a brave ſoldier; and employed in ſeveral embaſſies and other affairs of great conſequence. In his time the ancient Family Seat in this pariſh began to be neglected. For, having obtained a grant of New-Hall in Boreham, he made it the place of his reſidence. [See in the other Volume p. 15.] He dyed without iſſue 9 June 1583 [X], and was buried in the Chapel adjoyning to Boreham-Church. Frances his widow, aunt of Sir Philip Sidney, was Foundreſs of Sidney-Suſſex College in Cambridge. —— Henry, his next brother and heir, departed this life 9 December 1593, and was ſucceed by his only child —— Robert Earl of Suſſex; who dying without iſſue, 22 September 1629, —— Sir Edward Ratcliffe, ſon of Sir Humfrey of Elneſtow, above-mentioned, became his heir (k) [Y].

Mr. Robert de Reddeſwell 4 parts and 16 parts in Pentelow and Chelmeſton.—He had alſo the Advowſons of the Churches of Great Teye, Wimbiſhe, Lexden; and of the Priory of Dunmowe.

[W] He ſays, that Sir John Ratcliffe, Knight of the Garter, married Elizabeth daughter and coheir of Walter Lord Fitz-Walter, and had by her John his ſon and heir, ſummoned to parliament in 1485. Vol. II. p. 285. Whereas the father of this laſt John was Thomas, who married Anne, ſecond daughter of Walter Fitz-Walter, as appears by the Inquiſition 4 Edw. IV. and as Sir William himſelf hath it right in his firſt Volume, p. 223. By following him too implicitly, I was led into his miſtakes in the other Volume, p. 500. and 567. Sylvanus Morgan has the like miſtake, book IV. p. 57. & Milles, p. 665.

This Eſtate was next in the Fytch family; a branch we ſuppoſe of the Fytches of Lindſell and Little Canfeild. [See in the other Volume, p. 445. 463.]

Sir Barrow Fytch Kt. preſented to this Living in 1670. How long before he had been poſſeſſed of the eſtate doth not appear. His ſon —— William Fytch Eſq; married Mary daughter of Robert Cory D. D. by Mary his wife relict of John Mildmay Eſq; which brought him Danbury place, where the Family hath reſided ever ſince; this William having taken down Woodham Walter-hall, the ancient ſeat of the noble Families of Fitz-Walter and Ratcliffe. He left two ſons, —— William, Captain of a man of war, who dyed unmarried. —— Thomas Fytch Eſq; Sheriff for this County: and ſome daughters, one of whom is married to Samuel Bennet Eſq;

Mr. John, and Benjamin, Dawſon; Thomas Shynn; John Nevill; Robert Royſe; Jarvis Moſs; James Brown; Shadrach Naſh, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, being very ruinous, and ſtanding at a great diſtance from the village, ſo that it was very inconvenient for the Pariſhioners to reſort thither for divine ſervice; Thomas Earl of Suſſex having obtained a licenſe from Qu. Elizabeth, 26 June 1562, to build a new Church where he ſhould think proper, he accordingly erected the preſent one; and it was conſecrated 30 April 1564. In the Steeple are 3 Bells.

The Advowſon of this Rectory was given by Walter Fitz-Robert, about the reign of K. Richard I. to the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, who preſented from that time till 1517 (l). In 1548, K. Edward VI. granted this Advowſon to Thomas Wriotheſly Earl of Southampton, in exchange for ſome lands. He alienated it, 20 June the ſame year, to Henry Ratcliffe Earl of Suſſex (m); from whoſe heirs it came to the Fytch family, in which it ſtill continues.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 920 l. 2 s. 0 d.

It took the additional name of Mortimer from ſome of its ancienteſt poſſeſſors.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Siward held this pariſh; as did Ralph Peverell at the time of the Survey [Z]. It is there written Odeham.

This eſtate belonged to the Honor of Peverell of London, of which it was holden in capite, by the ſervice of half a fee, or a whole knight's fee. K. Henry II. gave it to the father of Robert de Mortimer in marriage (n). He was grandſon to Ralph de Mortimer, who came over with William the Conqueror. The ſaid Robert held Little Wudeham in 1210, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (o). He married Margery daughter and heir of Hugh de Say, lord of Ricards-caſtle in Herefordſhire; [remarried to Hugh de Stutevill] and dying about the year 1216, was ſucceeded by his ſon and heir—— Hugh de Mortimer; who departing this life in 1275, left——Robert, his ſon 22 years old: He dyed in 1287, leaving by Joyce his wife —— Hugh his ſon and heir, that had Summons to parliament in 1297, and 1299.

This laſt, at the time of his deceaſe in 1304, left by Maud his wife two daughters coheirs, Joanna twelve years old, and Margaret eight (p).

From henceforward it appears by records, that this Maner was ſometimes in one hand, and ſometimes in two or three, according as it happened to fall among coheirs; till at laſt it came to be divided into two Maners. The manſion-houſe of the chief is called WOODHAM MORTIMER PLACE, and of the other WOODHAM-MORTIMER-HALL.

Maud, widow of Hugh Mortimer, dyed in 1307. Margaret her youngeſt daughter was married to Geffrey de Cornwall (q), and probably had no iſſue, for we hear no further of any of them here.

Joanna, the eldeſt daughter of Hugh and Maud Mortimer was married, firſt, to Thomas de Bykenore, by whom ſhe doth not appear to have had any iſſue. Her ſecond huſband was Richard Talbot, a younger ſon of Richard Lord Talbot of Eccleſwell in Herefordſhire, by Sarah daughter of William Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick (r). He dyed poſſeſſed of this maner in 1355, as did Julian his widow, in 1361, and were ſucceeded by their ſon——Sir John Talbot, who departed this life in 1375, as did Catharine his wife in 1380. They had two ſons—— Richard, that dyed young in 1382: and his brother and heir——John dying alſo at the age of 15 years, 3 July 1388, his three Siſters and coheirs inherited his eſtates. They were, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Warine Leicekeden, or Archdekne; Philippa wife of Sir Matthew Gurnay; and Alianore, that dyed unmarried in 1390 (s). But Sir Gilbert Talbot, who had a life-eſtate in this maner enjoyed it till his deceaſe, and preſented to the Rectory from 1382 to 1393 (t). And Sir Matthew Gourney, and Warine Archdeken preſented in 1399.

Elizabeth, held a moiety of this maner, and of the Advowſon of the Church, of the King as of the Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's feee: and dying in 1407, or 1408, left three daughters coheirs; viz. Alianor, wife of Sir Walter Lucy; Philippa, wife of Sir Hugh Courtenay of Baunton; and Margery, or Margaret, wife of Thomas Arundel (u).

Sir Matthew and Philippa Gurnay had a daughter

Philippa, wife of Sir John Tiptoft, who at the time of her deceaſe in 1417, is recorded as holding the maner of Woodham-Mortymer, by which muſt be meant a part of it: Alianor, wife of Sir Walter Lucy; Elizabeth, and Joane, daughters of Philippa late wife of Sir Hugh Courteney; and Margery wife of Thomas de Arundel, were her couſins and heirs (w).

Sir Hugh Courtney, at the time of his deceaſe in 1424, held the third part of this maner, by the law of England after the death of his wife Philippa, as of the Honor of Peverell. Edward was his ſon: and Joane and Alianor were the daughters and heirs of Philippa (x).

So it is in the Inquiſition; but, inſtead of Alianor, it is a queſtion whether it ſhould not be Elizabeth.

Sir Walter Lucy, by his wife Alianor Archdeken, had a ſon, William, who was a knight; and two daughters, Alianor, wife of Thomas Hopton Eſq; and Maud, wife of Thomas Vaux Eſq; Sir William Lucy married Margaret . . . but dyed without iſſue. His widow held the maner of Woodham Mortymer of the Abbot of Walden at the time of her deceaſe in 1466. Thomas Hopton had by his wife Alianor, William that dyed without iſſue, and Elizabeth, married firſt to Sir Roger Corbet of Morton Corbet in Shropſhire; afterwards to John Tiptoft, Earl of Worceſter; and thirdly to Sir William Stanley brother of Thomas Earl of Derby. She held a moiety of this maner, and dyed 2 June 1498 (y).

William Vaux had by his wife Maud a ſon named William; who with Elizabeth then wife of John Earl of Worceſter, were found heirs to this eſtate in 1466 (z). But the Vaux family doth not ſeem to have been intereſted long in the eſtate. For, at the time of Elizabeth Lady Stanley's deceaſe, who by her firſt huſband had Richard Corbet Eſq;

Robert Corbet Eſq; ſon of the ſaid Richard, was found to be her ſole heir. He was then 21 years old (a); afterwards knighted, and dyed 11 April 1512, holding this maner of the King in capite by knight's ſervice; wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon. —— Roger, 12 years of age (b). He departed this life 20 December 1538, leaving——Andrew his ſon and heir 16 years old (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 109.] The latter obtained a licence, 6 Auguſt 1561, to alienate this maner to

Leonard Sandell: of Hatfeild Peverell, who, after having kept it only about three years, had licenſe, 6 May 1564, to ſell it to

John Churche, of Little Sandford, and Margaret his wife (d) [A]; the conſideration money being 1000 l. He held the maner of Woodham Mortimer with appertenances, and 10 meſſuages, 6 cottages, 1 dove-houſe, 500 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 500 of paſture, 300 of wood, 200 of heath and furze, and 12 s. rent in Woodham Mortimer, and Walter, Purleigh, Haſeleigh, Studley Greene, Ronſell, Danbury, Bicknaker, Boreham, and Little Badow; and the Advowſon of Woodham-Mortimer Church, of the Queen as of the Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. At the time of his deceaſe, 14 January 1564, he left his ſon —— Richard, or Rook, Churche, only one year and ſixteen days old (e). The 14th of April 1592 he ſold the premiſſes to

Henry Smith, and Giles Greene, who by licenſe, 2 March the year following, conveyed the ſame to Arthur Harris Eſq; (f) He dyed poſſeſſed of them 18 June 1597. This Arthur was third ſon of William Harris of Southminſter in this County, and grandſon of Arthur Harris of Prittlewell. [For a more particular account of the Family ſee Crickeſea where their ſeat was, and in the other volume, p. 54.] Arthur, at the time of his death, beſides the maner, and demeſnes, had Darcy's grove; a tenement and lands called Seaven wells, alias Sewells, Fuller's tenement, and Eaſt Graffnell mead, in this pariſh, and Woodham Walter; and Newhall in this pariſh, Haſeleigh, and Purleigh, which had been his father's; holden of the maner of Lawling-hall (g). He married Dorothy daughter of Sir William Waldegrave of Small-bridge, by whom he had——William, his ſon and heir, who ſucceeded him in theſe eſtates: and dying in 1616, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John: whoſe ſon and heir——Sir Arthur Harris Kt. inherited the ſame (h) He departed this life 9 January 1632, leaving ——Cranmer, his eldeſt ſon then 22 years old (i); and John. Cranmer was knighted 21 June 1629, and marrying Martha daughter and coheir of Daniel Holford of Weſt-Thurrock, left by her two daughters coheirs, Martha, and Mary.

Martha brought Woodham-Mortimer Place maner, with the Advowſon of the Church, to her huſband Charles Mildmay Eſq; youngeſt ſon of Sir Henry Mildmay brother to Sir Thomas of Moulſham-hall. They had an only daughter and heir

Martha, that was married to Sir Charles Tyrell of Heron Bart. In this Family the Eſtate and Advowſon continued till the late Sir John Tyrell ſold them to

The Rt. Hon. Lucius Carey Lord Viſcount Falkland, the preſent poſſeſſor.

The Maner-houſe, called WOODHAM-MORTIMER-PLACE, ſtands about a mile South-weſt from the Church.

WOODHAM-MORTIMER-HALL ſtands near the Church; and is ſaid to have been built by Sir Cranmer Harris for one of his daughters. It belongs to the other reputed maner, which is ſtiled a Maner of itſelf, but holds no Court, nor hath any tenants.

Peter Chamberlen M. D. purchaſed it of the Harris family. He was born 8 May 1601, and dyed 22 December 1683. By his firſt wife Jane Middleton he had 11 ſons, and 2 daughters, and among them 45 grand-children, and 8 great grand-children; whereof were living at his death three ſons, viz. Hugh, Paul, and John, and his two daughters, and 20 grand-children, and 6 great grand children. By the ſecond wife, Anne Harriſon, he had 3 ſons, and 2 daughters, whereof only Hope was living at his death (k). His grandſon Hugh Chamberlen, an eminent phyſician and man midwife, dyed 17 June 1728. It ſeems, Hope the youngeſt ſon of Peter had this eſtate, and ſold it, about 1715, to

Mr. William Alexander, of London, wine-merchant, who left it to the Wine-Coopers Company in London. [See in the other Volume, p. 55.]

Robert Latham, who dyed 3 March 1520, held a maner called Hide-parke, with tenements thereto belonging, of Roger Corbett, as of his maner of Woodham-Mortimer (l). It lay partly, if not chiefly, in Purley. See under that pariſh.

About 100 acres of land in this pariſh was anciently called Mortimer's-fee; and to the ſouth or ſouth-eaſt of it lyes Twitty-fee, now called Canterbury, alias Runſell-fee.

Mr. Samuel Brickwood; John Lorkin; John Wiggins; William Shepherd; Robert Wilſon; &c. have ſome lands in this pariſh, beſides thoſe above-mentioned.

One Hardekyne held 115 acres of land here, by the remarkable Serjeancy of keeping one of the King's young Hounds whenever the King ſhould ſend it to him to keep; and to take care of him till he was able to run, or hunt [B].

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, is of one pace with the Chancel, all tyled. At the weſt end, in a little boarded Belfrey, with a ſhingled Spire, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner, and now to that of Woodham-Mortimer-Place.

It is obſervable in the London Regiſtry, that Thomas Kemp Biſhop of London, 21 Auguſt 1465, collated, to this Rectory, with the Church or Chapel of Hayleſley for its ſmallneſs thereto annexed. We have no traces of any conſolidation Haſeleigh was then in the Patronage of Thomas Legh Eſq; nor was it at this time void: which gives room for a conjecture, that it is meant of the Chapel of Little-Haſeleigh, the lands of which, probably, the Abbey of Bilegh had got; and theſe amongſt the reſt might be granted by K. 4. HASELEY.

This little pariſh lyes ſouth-eaſt of Woodham-Mortimer. The name is formed from the two Saxon words Hæꞅl, a haſle-nut-tree, and ley paſture. It is otherwiſe written in records Haileſhei, and Haileſlei.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Serlo; and Ailmar a freeman; were poſſeſſed of this pariſh: At the time of the Survey it belonged to Ralph Peverell; and the ſaid Serlo held under him the ſame part as he was maſter of before. Godric held the other part [C]. Theſe two parts are called in the Survey two diſtinct maners; and as mention occurs of Great and Little Haſeley, it is probable that one of them was taken into the adjoyning pariſh of Woodham-Mortimer; or elſe it might be what was called afterwards Jenkins.

Here is now reckoned but one MANER, and the manſion houſe ſtands a little way ſouth-eaſt from the Church. This eſtate was holden of the Honor of Peverell.

We have but very little account of its owners. In 1210, and 1211, Alice de Haileſle held the fourth part of a knight's fee: And Richard, the ſon of Ranulph, had one fee in Great-Haileſley, which Mathew Mantel held of him (n). A Charter of K. Henry III. in 1260, grants free-warren in Brightlingſay and Hayleſley to John de Munuirun, or Muntviron, who by that ſeems to have been lord here (o).

Willam de Horewold and Cecily his wife, ſeem alſo to have enjoyed this eſtate in 1339. He preſented to the Church in 1328 (p). The eſtate was longeſt in the Families of Leigh, and Alleyn.

John de Legh, who dyed in 1421, held the Maner of Hailleſle of the King in capite as of his Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Thomas, his ſon and ſucceſſor, then 16 years of age, dyed alſo poſſeſſed of this maner, and of that of Shelley, in 1438, leaving——Thomas Leigh his ſon and heir but half a year old (q). Beſides this maner, and the Advowſon of St. Nicolas Chapel thereto belonging, he had alſo the maners of Shelley, and of Olives and Garnetts in Margaret Roding. [See in the other Volume, p. 473.] Henry his ſon dyed before him 25 November 1494. He himſelf departed this life 23 April, and Joanna his wife 24 Auguſt 1509, and were ſucceeded by their grandſon——Giles Leigh, of Walton Leigh Eſq; then 18 years old (r); who, at the time of his deceaſe, 7 Auguſt 1538, left two daughters coheirs;

Mary, married to John Alleyn; Agnes, to Chriſtopher Alleyn; brothers to Sir John Alleyn Lord-Mayor of London, ſons of Richard Alleyn of Thaxted. Theſe had Livery, in 1539, of Leigh's lands in Eſſex, viz. the Maners of Halyſlegh, Garnets, and Olyffs, with appertenances; the Advowſon of the Church of Margaret-Rothing; and the Chantry of St. Nicolas in the Church of Halleſlegh.

Agnes obtained Halyſligh for part of her ſhare, and ſeemed by the Inquiſition to have had not only that, but Garnetts, and Hatfeild maner and Priory. By her huſband Chriſtopher ſhe had three ſons, Giles, Antony, and Ralph. She dyed 1 February 1553.—— Giles Alleyn Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, then 21 years old, inherited (s). He married Mary daughter of John Skory Biſhop of Hereford, by whom he had, Samuel; Iſaac; Rebecca, wife of Thomas Nevill of Stock, Gent. Mary, wife of William Coys of North-Okendon; and Anne, of Henry Chauncy, of Yardley in Hertfordſhire, Gent. He departed this life 27 March 1608.——Samuel, the eldeſt ſon, then upwards of 42 years of age, dying 5 June 1614, without iſſue, —— Iſaac the next brother ſucceeded; being 30 years old (t). He married, firſt, Mary daughter of John Pake of Bromfeild, and had by her Giles, John, and Anne. By his ſecond wife, Anne, daughter of Henry Leigh of Ruthall in Staffordſhire, he

Henry Mildmay, of Graces in Little Badow Eſq; He gave it to his ſecond daughter, Lucy, wife of Thomas Gardiner, of Bourchier's Hall in Tolleſbury, Eſq; Of them it was purchaſed by Sir John Smith, of Iſtleworth in Middleſex, Bart. and he dying 16 Auguſt 1726, was ſucceeded by his ſon—— Sir John Smith, Bart. It belongs now to his two Siſters.

We find mention of a Maner of LITTLE HASELEY. Probably it was taken into Woodham-Mortimer by Ralph Peverell, who was lord of both.

In the Inquiſition upon the death of Agnes Alleyn, above-mentioned, in 1553, it is ſaid, ſhe held the Maner of Halyſligh, in Woodham-Mortimer and Purleigh. And we find in another, taken in 1573, for John Alleyn jun. who ſeems to be a collateral branch, or a grandſon of Agnes; and dyed 22 June 1557, leaving Edmund his ſon and heir, 20 years old; That he held the Maner of Hayleſlight, in Woodham-Mortimer and Purley, and the Advowſon of a Free Chapel of St. Nicolas (w). The confuſion which is in theſe Inquiſitions may be attributed to the uncertainty where Little Haſeley properly lay.

Joſeph Harwood hath alſo ſome land here.

The Maner houſe of Jenkins Maldon ſtands within this pariſh, as I have obſerved above, under Maldon.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of timber, and plaiſtered. On the weſt end ſtands a ſmall turret, in which formerly was 1 Bell, now none.

This Rectory hath been always appendent to the Maner. It was for above 100 years preſented to as a Chapel, that is till the year 1390, when it was preſented to as a Rectory or Free Chapel.

Haſeley is rated to the land-tax at 291 l.

5. PURLEY.

This pariſh ſtands ſouth of Haſeley and Maldon, and part of it high, which renders it the more healthfull. Whether it was ſo called from the two Saxon words Pep, a pear, and ley, paſture, I cannot certainly ſay.

I ſhould take, according to Norden, this name to have been from the Purlieu or Pouralle, which was the ancient border of a Foreſt, in which the King's rangers were obliged to hunt out the deer, and the owner of the land had a right, under ſome reſtrictions, to kill them; if I could think it no other than a Norman term, and introduced upon the Conqueſt. Two things may be offered to juſtify this conceit; the one, that Edward the Confeſſor, who ſpent ſome time in Normandy, had brought home with him ſome of the ſporting Foreſt terms, and might call this part of the Foreſt Purlieu, in the Privileges which he granted. The other is, that Reginald de Grey, who dyed in 1307, with this Lordſhip, enjoyed the privilege of Purlieu, which might have been an appendage to the Maner from the Saxon times: He had Purlieu within this whole lordſhip of any Deer or Foreſt wild Beaſt. Beſides Purley it is written in records Purlai and Purle.

There are many entries in Domeſday book under Purlay, and many diſtinct Maners have been ſince, yet it is not poſſible to trace to which the more modern ones did anciently belong, except in one or two of the moſt inconſiderable.

The owners of the lands here, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, were Edeva; Gudmund, a freeman; ten other freemen; Algar, a freeman; Leuuin; Leuuin Cilt; and Grime. At the time of the Survey, they were holden by Euſtace Earl of Bologne; Hugh de Montfort; Robert Gernon; Walter the Deacon; and Ralph Baignard [D].

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into the following Maners. 1. The Maner of Purley hall. 2. . . . that of Gibbecrake. 3. The maner of Waltons and Netherhall. . . . Frerne, and Jacklets, partly in Mundon; and Lachindon-Barns, alias Purley-hall, are alſo ſometimes ſtyled Maners in records, but not reputed now to be ſuch.

The Maner of PURLEY.

Purley-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

This eſtate was early in the noble family of Grey of Wilton. John de Grey held Purle in 1220; and alſo in 1243; for, that year, a grant was produced at the Pleas of the Foreſt at Chelmsford, from K. Henry III. to John de Grey, of Free-warren in Purlai, Gybbetrake, Lechendon, and 11 other of his maners; in which alſo was contained licence to hunt and take, in all the King's Foreſts in England, fox, hare, and cat, except in the King's demeſne warrens, provided he did no damage to the King's hunting [E]. He dyed in 1266.——Reginald de Grey, his ſon and heir held, in 1285, one knight's fee here, in capite, of the King, worth 20 l. a year (x). And, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1307, held the ſame knight's fee by the name of the maner of Purle with the Hamlett of Gibbecrake: His ſon and heir —— John de Grey (y), held this maner, and that of Gibecrake which was a member of the ſame, by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee; and dying in 1323, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry (z). This latter held not only the Maner of Purle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; but alſo a Park called le Hyde Parke in Purle of the Prior of Chriſt's Church in Canterbury by the ſervice of 4 s. a year: lands called Eyres or Sayers, and Southous, of the Dean and Chapter of St. Martin's le grand, by the ſame ſervice; Mareſchaleſland of Ralph de Ufford, as of his maner of Fambregg, by the ſervice of 2 s. per annum; Halereſland, with Tryndeheye grove, of the Abbot and Convent of Bylegh, by the ſervice of 4 s. a year. He departed this life in 1342 (a). His ſon ——Reginald de Grey de Wilton upon Wee, held this maner, with the Hamlet of Gedecrake; 1 meſſuage, and 100 acres of arable, and 40 of marſh, of the Earl of March; 2 meſſuages, 160 acres of arable, and 20 of marſh, of the Dean of St. Martins; and about 90 acres more, of whom unknown. He dyed in 1370 (b)—— Sir Henry, his ſon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1395, held this maner of Purle; and a Park, in which there was a meſſuage called Gibbecrake-halle, and 50 acres adjoyning to the Park, in Purle and Sandon; alſo Lachyndon barns; Heyrons, and South-rowe in Danbury; Lollers in Great Leghes; the maner of Snoreham; and that of Acresfleet in Canewdon. His ſon, —— Sir Richard Grey held the ſame, except what lay in Danbury and Leghes; and dying in 1442, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Reginald, then 21 years old (c). He was ſucceeded by his ſon——John; and he by his ſon——Edmund, who alienated this maner. They had alſo Weld-barnes in Debden. See the other Volume, p. 563. For a more particular account of this noble Family of the Lords Grey of Wilton, ſee Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. I. (d). They had ſummons to Parliament from 23 Edw. I. 1295, to 43 Eliza. 1601.

Sir Giles Capel had this maner in 1519 (*).

The next poſſeſſor of this eſtate was Hugh Dennys. At the time of his deceaſe, 17 September 1558, he held the maner of Purle, alias Purlegh-hall, of the Queen, in capite, by knight's ſervice; and South houſe and Sawiers in Maldon, of the Honor of Raley.——Henry, his ſon, held the ſame; and dying 8 April 1569, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John, who departed this life 30 July 1609, leaving——Henry, his ſon and heir (e).

It was afterwards in Sir Alexander Cowyns; and now in

James Bonnel Eſq;

The Maner of GIBBECRAKE

went along with that of Purleigh-hall, till Edmund Lord Grey, and Florentia his wife, alienated it, 27 June 1504, to John de Vere Earl of Oxford.

We find it deſcribed in 1323, as 1 meſſuage, with a garden and dove houſe, 180 acres of arable, a wind-mill, a water mill, 80 acres of wood, and another wood of 16 acr. called Gibcrack-hoo; holden of the heirs of Robert Mantell, by the ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs.

After the death of John Earl of Oxford, in 1512, it was ſtyled 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 800 of paſture, 100 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent, in Purle, Danbury, Sandon, and Eſt Hanningfeild, holden of Thomas Tyrell (f). But this deſcription undoubtedly comprehended alſo Waltons, which that noble Family likewiſe had.

It continued in the four ſucceſſive Earls of Oxford, of the name of John, and came to Edward. He, 16 February 1577, alienated it to

John Mabbe, of London, goldſmith; who, 26 May 1584, ſold it to

Edward Glemham, of Benhall in Suffolk Eſq; The next year

George Wolmer, of Broxholm in Lincolnſhire, Eſq; ſold it to

Sir Michael Sondes, of Throwley in Kent; who, 24 March 1601, conveyed it to

Robert Clarke, Eſq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer, knighted 23 July 1603. He gave it to his ſecond ſon——Jeremiah Clarke, of Stebbing Eſq; who ſold it, 1 October 1638, to

William Lord Maynard. His ſon, —— William, Lord Maynard, alienated it again 4 May 1652, to

Robert Abdy Eſq; created a Baronet 9 June 1660. He deviſed it by will to his ſon —— Sir John Abdy Bart. who ſold it, 28 January 1679, to Edmund Wiſeman Eſq; afterwards knighted. Sir Edmund conveyed it, 24 September 1687, to Henry Collins Eſq; of the Middle-Temple, and his heirs for ever. His ſon——Henry, enjoyed it after him; and was ſucceeded by his ſon—— Antony Collins Eſq; who dyed 13 December 1729. He was twice married. By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Walter Wrotteſly, he had no iſſue. But by his firſt wife, Martha, daughter of Sir Francis Child, he had Henry; Antony; and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Martha. Henry dyed young; and Antony 20 December 1723, aged 21, but ſingle.——Elizabeth was married to Walter Carey Eſq; and Martha to Robert, brother to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Fairfax. Martha dying without iſſue, Walter Carey Eſq; in right of his wife, became entitled to the whole, and alſo to the maners of Hatfeild-Bury, and Sandon. See in the other Volume, p. 26. 130.

It now belongs to Lovebond Collins Eſq;

The Maner of WALTON's and NETHER-HALL, was ſo named from its owner, John Walton, mentioned preſently; and Nether-hall from its ſituation.

This I take to be what was Hugh de Montfort's [F].

The earlieſt poſſeſſors upon record after Montfort, were the Battaile Family; who gave name to a maner at Stapleford Abbot, and another at Bradwell near the Sea, and by Marriage it came to John Walton.

In 1211, Aumaricus Battaile held one knight's fee in Purle, of the Honor of Hagneth (g). Montfort's lands were likewiſe holden of the ſame Honor [G].

This Aumaric, or Emeric Battaile, died in 1252, and John de Aketon, and Petronill his wife, mother of Emeric, held in dower, of the inheritance of the ſaid Emeric, 100 acres of arable, with one meſſuage in Purle, by the ſervice of three parts of a knight's fee, of the fee of William de Houbrigge;——Saer his ſon and heir, then 10 years old: at the time of his deceaſe in 1292, held 1 meſſuage in Purle, of Edmund, ſon of Thomas de Purle, by the ſervice of a clove-gilly flower; and 100 acres of the Lady Joane de Huntingfeld, by the 4th part of a knight's fee, and ſuit at the Hundred of Daneſey; and ſo this maner of Purle was worth 33s. 10d. (h).——Edmund Bataile his ſon and heir, who dyed in 1333, was poſſeſſed of a capital meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 3 of paſture, and 3 of wood, in Purle; of which, the meſſuage, and 30 acres were holden of the Biſhop of Norwich, by the ſervice of 15*d. ob.* every thirty weeks for warding the Caſtle of Norwich, 20 acres of arable, and 3 of wood, of the heirs of Moneron, by the ſervice of 7s. per ann. 24 acres of arable of the Prior of Chriſt's Church Canterbury, by the ſervice of 4s. and 26 acres of arable of Walter Tillyngham, by the ſervice of 6d. a year.

Margaret, or Margery, was his ſiſter and heir (i). She was married to Sir William de Sutton, whoſe ſucceſſors were, —— Sir John de Sutton; another —— Sir John; whoſe daughter, and at length ſole heir, Margery, brought it in marriage to her huſband

John Walton Eſq; [See above, p. 175, 176, and in the other Volume, p. 187.] They had two children, Richard, and Joane. —— Richard Walton Eſq; the ſon and heir, dyed in 1408, or 1409. He then held three meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, ten of meadow, 20 of paſture, eight of wood, and 18s. rent, in Purle, Mundon, and Hayleſle, of the Lord Grey of Wilton. Leaving no iſſue, his Siſter

Joane, wife of Sir John Howard jun. inherited his eſtates (k). Their only daughter and heir

Elizabeth, brought them in marriage to her huſband John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. He being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, they became forfeited to the Crown; and K. Richard III. gave this maner to . . . Percy (l). Upon K. Henry VIIth's acceſſion to the throne, the noble Family of Vere being reſtored to their Honors and Eſtates,——John, the 13th Earl——John, the 14th Earl ——John, the 15th——John, the 16th and —— Edward the 17th Earl, enjoyed this (m). The latter ſold it, 1 March 1559, to

George Golding Eſq; He dyed 24 November 1584, poſſeſſed of the maners of Waltons and Nether-hall; and of Jackletts, Fanbridge, and Amys land.——Arthur Golding, his brother and heir (n), ſold this eſtate, 1 March 1595, to Thomas Mildmay Eſq; eldeſt ſon of William Mildmay of Springfield-Barnes Eſq; (o). He dyed 15th Decemb. 1612, holding the maner of Waltons, with Jacklets, and Fambridge land; and other lands adjoyning. He had been knighted [H]. [G] It may be preſumed, that William Ayermyn, at that time Biſhop of Norwich, Lord Keeper, and Lord Treaſurer, obtained of the King ſome Honor or Maner paramount to the Lords here; I do not find that it went to his Succeſſors. It was what Thomas de Purle, whoever he was, held before.

[H] Beſides this maner of Waltons, and other lands above ſpecified, Sir Thomas had the maners of Springfield Bars, Downehall in Bradwell near the Sea; Bacons in Dengey; Langdon-hills; Naſhall in Ongar: and the following lands in Springfield; the Marſh, Much and Little Perryfeild, Melfeild, the Hoppetts, Little Pullyns, Upperſton-hill, Netherſton-hill, Kingſtons garden, and theſe three crofts Mattot-cotts, Pyes, and Milcroft; alſo Southfeild, Bulmersfeild, the Arbor, Oxſtall, Hornes, Colvil alias Powers: and Bileigh-mill &c. The Maner of BARONS was ſo named from the Baron family.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Parſonage.

By the deſcription ſet down a little lower, this ſeems to have been much the ſame as the foregoing one of Waltons, or at leaſt to have been originally in the ſame family. When they were ſevered doth not plainly appear. As Margaret Baroun had an eſtate at Bradwell near the ſea, with this; and that Edmund Bataile had alſo the ſame jointly, both holden of the ſame perſons, we may ſafely affirm, That ſhe was the ſiſter and heir of the ſaid Edmund, mentioned under Waltons; married firſt to Sir William de Sutton, and afterwards to Baroun, whoſe ſon Robert Baroun had in her right part of this eſtate. However it be,

Margaret Baroun, who dyed in 1339, held in the vill of Purle 1 meſſuage with a garden, 80 acres of arable, and 3 of wood; of which, 30 acres of arable and 3 of paſture, were holden of the Biſhop of Norwich, by the ſervice of 15 d. ob. every thirty weeks; and 16 acres of arable, and 3 of wood of William Horewold and Cecily his wife, by the ſervice of 7 s. yearly; 20 acres of the Prior of Chriſt-Church in Canterbury, by the ſervice of 8 s. and 18 acres of Walter de Tyllingham, by the ſervice of 6 d. per annum. ——Robert Baroun, her ſon (q), at the time of his deceaſe in 1349, held in this pariſh 3 parts, or the third part, of one meſſuage with a garden, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, and 5 of paſture, of the Biſhop of Norwich, by the ſervice of 3 s. 6 d.——John ſon of Emma Wyburne, one of the ſaid Robert's ſiſters; Alice, wife of Thomas, ſon of Reginald at Hoo, another of his ſiſters; and Johanna le Smythes his third ſiſter, were his heirs (r). Of theſe, I preſume, Giles Breanſon purchaſed this maner of Barons. For, at the time of his deceaſe in 1363, he held a meſſuage and one carucate of land in Purle, of the Biſhop of Norwich, paying 21 d. to the ſaid Biſhop, every thirty weeks, for his caſtle guard at Norwich.——John, ſon of John, and grandſon of Robert, brother of the ſaid Giles, was his next heir (s).

John de Haſtings, Earl of Pembroke, who dyed in 1374, held one knight's fee in Purle that Bruencius Brianſon held (t). He ſettled his eſtates on his mother's ſiſter's ſon, William de Beauchamp, a younger ſon of Thomas, Earl of Warwick. [See in the other Volume, p. 35.] In conſequence of which——Joane, widow of this William, at the time of her deceaſe in 1435, held half a fee in Purle, which Brian Brianſon formerly held; and another half fee formerly John de Purley's. Their ſon, Richard de Beauchamp Earl of Worceſter, dying in 1422, left an only daughter Elizabeth, married to Sir Edward Nevill, fourth ſon of Ralph Earl of Weſtmoreland, who in her right became Lord Bergavenny, and ſucceeded to her eſtates. He departed this life 18 October 1476, leaving——George his ſon and heir, Lord Bergavenny (u).

Robert Latham, who dyed 3 March 1519, held the maner of Baron-Hall of George Lord Bergavenny, as of his maner of Southall.——William was his ſon and heir (w).

William Strangman held it of Sir Richard Rich; at the time of his deceaſe, 8 December 1573 (x). [See above, p. 280. 287.]

In 1604, Dudley Forteſcue Eſq; held the maner or tenement of Barons in Purley with appertenances, of Sir Thomas Mildmay, as of his maner of Terling. [See above, p. 287. 290. and in the other Volume, p. 120.]

This eſtate now belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Counteſs of Suffolk, remarried to the Rt. Hon. Lucius Carey, Viſcount Falkland.

FRERNE, otherwiſe FREME, and IACKLETS, is part of what belonged to Walter the Deacon, at the time of the Survey [I]. His ſon,——William Maſcherell, founder of Wikes Nunnery in this County, ſettled this land upon that Houſe; and is undoubtedly the knight's fee that the Prioreſs of Wikes held under John de Haſtings, Earl of Penbroke, in 1374.

The Priory remained poſſeſſed of it till the Suppreſſion of the leſſer Monaſteries, in 1525, when Wyks was granted, among many others, to Cardinal Wolſey.

Upon his præmunire they all falling to the Crown; K. Henry VIII. leaſed this eſtate 1 December 1536, for 20 years at the rent of 11 l. 11 s. And in 1538 granted it to

Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk (y); who, by licenſe 20 January following, alienated it to

John Stonard: and —— Francis Stonard had leave, in 1575, to alienate it to William Bode (z). At the time of his deceaſe 17 June 1591, he held this maner of Freerne, alias Freme, and Jacketts, with lands and tene-

This eſtate now belongs to the Charter-houſe in London.

The Hon. the Governors of the Charter-houſe hold a Court every year, about the cut round Buſh in the middle of the road.

LACHENDON-BARNES,

otherwiſe Purley-Barns, is another reputed Maner in this pariſh. Why ſo called we cannot find, unleſs becauſe it was formerly reckoned part of the neighbouring pariſh of Lachendon, or Lachingdon.

By the name of Barns, one would think it belonged to ſome Ciſtercian Monaſtery.

It is one of the parcels that belonged to Hugh de Montfort at the time of the Survey, and were holden under him by Gudmund, Humfrey, and Ulmar [L].

Of the ſucceeding owners of this eſtate we have no account, till we find it in the noble family of Grey of Wilton above-mentioned. John de Grey, who dyed in 1323, held in Lachindon one Barn, 140 acres of arable, and 60 acres more; 4 acr. of meadow, 6 of paſture, and 20 of marſh; The ſaid 60 acres being holden of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulſter (b). His ſucceſſors were —— Henry, —— Reginald, —— Sir Henry: The latter is recorded particularly to have held in the vill of Purle, of the Earl of March, 1 meſſuage, 102 acres of arable called Lacyndon barnys, and 24 acres of marſh (c). His ſon——Sir Richard Grey, who dyed in 1442, and his widow Margaret, in 1451, held alſo the maner of Lachingden, or Lachington, bernes (d) [M].

Robert Latham, owner of the maner of Barons, held alſo this maner of Lachingdon-Bernes of Sir Giles Capel as of his maner of Purley: and dying 3 March 1519, was ſucceeded by his ſon ——William (e). This eſtate belonged afterwards to

Henry Aſhurſt Eſq; who ſold it in 1671, to Henry Mildmay Eſq; and of him it was purchaſed by

Mr. Charles Coe, of Maldon, who gave it to his ſon —— Thomas Coe, M. D. from whom it deſcended to his ſon——Thomas Coe Eſq;

Callow-green, a hamlet in this pariſh, is under the peculiar juriſdiction of the Dean of Bocking: and is undoubtedly what is mentioned above to have been holden of the Prior of Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury.

Flanders-wic, and Sparrows-wic, belong to Cornelius Dutch, Gent.

Mr. William Belcham; Iſaac Watſon; Thomas Sewell; John Wyatt; William Gladwin, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh: Whether any of them is a farm of 150 acres, called Little Cannas, I am not able to ſay for certain.

Here is a Fair on Whitſun-Tueſday.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is a large handſom building, conſiſting of a body, and two aiſles, tyled: In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was given to the Priory of Horton in Kent by Robert de Vere, ſon of Bernard, founder of that Priory (f); and the Advowſon continued in the Prior and Monks till their ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown. It remained there till about the end of K. James the 1ſt's reign, and then was granted to the Horſmanden family of Kent [N].—This Rectory hath a glebe of   acres.

of his Barony and eſtates, as related more particularly above, p. 338. and in the other Volume, p. 21, 135, 427; K. Henry I. gave them to Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, from whom deſcended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

This pariſh was divided afterwards into theſe two Maners. 1. The maner of Cold-Norton-hall. 2. . . . that of Weſt Whetenham.

Cold-Norton-Hall, the manſion-houſe of the firſt, ſtands a little way ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

Under the Fitz-Walter family it was holden by that of Aunblie. In 1290, John de Bathon, or of Bath, enjoyed the maner of Norton by the law of England, becauſe he married Elianor, daughter and heir of Sir Geffrey de Aunblie; who held this maner of the Lord Robert Fitz-Walter of Wodeham, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and the Lady Joane, wife of Sir John de Bohun was his next heir, being Daughter of Elianor; who was wife of John de Bathon. John de Bohun dyed poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1316, leaving—— John his ſon and heir (h).——Oliver de Bohun held it under Robert Fitz-Walter, in 1328. He preſented to the Living in 1329, and 1334 (i). It paſſed from the noble family of Bohun, Earls of Hereford and Eſſex (k), into that of Stafford; and then into that of Bourchier.

Anne Counteſs of Stafford, one of the coheireſſes of the Bohun family upon the partition of their Eſtates between her and K. Henry V. had for part of her ſhare this Maner, then valued at 24l. and ſhe preſented to the Living in 1427 and 1433. Her fourth ſon——Sir John Bourchier, Kt. B. and by marriage Lord Berners, preſented to the ſame from 1446 to 1467 (l). [For a more particular account of theſe noble Families, ſee above, p. 128, and the other Volume, p. 62. 254. 453. 503.] Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham was poſſeſſed of it; upon whoſe attainder, in 1521, it coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1522, to

Sir William Tyler (m). But, after Tyler's deceaſe, 12 November 1527, the ſame King granted it to

Robert Ratcliffe, Viſcount Fitz-Walter, and his heirs male (n). And Qu. Elizabeth, 2 February 1598, granted all remainders and reverſions of the ſame to his nephew——Robert Earl of Suſſex (o). The 13th of the ſame month, the Earl conveyed the maner of Norton, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Thomas Sutton Eſq; And in the licenſe of alienation the premiſſes were ſtyled, the maner of Norton with appertenances, 16 meſſuages, 2 mills, 1 dove-houſe, 16 gardens, 16 orchards, 600 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 20 of wood, 40 of furze and heath, 10 of more, 40 of marſh, free-warren, and free-fiſhery, view of frank-pledge, and 12l. rent (p).

Mr. Sutton made it part of the endowment of his rich foundation at the Charter-houſe; and both Maner and Advowſon have ever ſince remained in the Hon. the Governors of that Houſe.

The Maner of WEST WHETENHAM [P], and FLAMBARDS, was derived from the other Maner, but when particularly we do not find.

Flamberds, the manſion-houſe of its owners, for a while, is above a mile and a half north-weſt from the Church.

The firſt mention we find of it in records is in 1486. Margaret Alley, widow, ſiſter of Richard Alley, held then the maner of Weſt-Whetenham and Flambards, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of paſture, and 20 of wood, with appertenances, in Norton, Stowe, and Wodeham Ferrars, of the maner of Cold-Norton: The maner of Weſt-Whetenham, was then worth 3l. 13s. 4d. and that of Flambards 3l. 6s. 8d. which ſhews that they were reckoned diſtinct Maners. The ſaid Margaret dyed 25 November 1486.—Her heirs are not mentioned (*).

The next poſſeſſor of this eſtate was Sir John Browne, Lord Mayor of London in 1480, ſon of John Browne of Okeham in Rutlandſhire. He held, at the time of his deceaſe 1 January 1497, the maners of Weſt-Wettenham and Flambardes; and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of paſture, and 20 of wood, in Norton, Stowe, and Woodham Ferrers, of Sir John Bourchier, Lord Berners, as of his maner of Cold-Norton. By his firſt wife, Alice, daughter of Sir John Swinſted, he had Robert, father of Robert Browne of Walcot in Northamptonſhire Eſq; and by his ſecond wife, Anne, daughter of . . . Belwood, he had ——William Browne Eſq; born in 1467 (q), one of the Sheriffs of London in 1504, and Lord Mayor in 1513 being then a Knight. He married, firſt, Margaret daughter of Edmund Shaa, by whom he had William; Anne, wife of Richard Farmer; and Julian, wife of Sir John Munday. By his ſecond wife, Alice daughter of Henry Keble Lord Mayor of London, he had John, ſeated at Horton in Kent; and Anne, wife of John Tyrell of Heron Eſq; The ſaid Sir William Browne, their father, departed this life 23 June 1514, holding theſe two maners of the Lord Berners, and lands and tenements called Sparradowne, Beredown, Wettenham Weſtcroft, Launcecroft, Horſehoke, Whetenham South-croft, Potterſland, Thurſtons, Jennett, Robynes, Spakemans Jakes Attwood, Brodefeild, Tylefeild, Pleyns, Al-

He married . . . daughter of Ralph Dormer, Lord Mayor of London, and had by her, Thomas; John; and Elizabeth, wife of Stephen Beckingham, of Tolleſhunt.——Thomas Browne, Eſq; his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, born in 1526, held much the ſame eſtates as his father, and departed this life 2 May 1567, leaving, by Jane his wife, daughter of Sir Giles Allington, of Horſheath in Cambridgeſhire, John; and two daughters, Helen wife of George Fitch, of Braſonhead; and Anne, of Thomas Bridges of Weſt-Haningſeild.——John, the ſon and heir, then aged 7 years (t) afterwards knighted; married twice. His firſt wife was Catharine, daughter of Henry Botiller of Hatfeild-Woodhall in Hertfordſhire; and the ſecond, Cecily, daughter of Sir John Croke, one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench. By this laſt he had no iſſue: But, by the firſt, he had 8 ſons, and 4 daughters; Giles, William, Thomas, John, Humfrey, Henry, Edwin, Robert: Elizabeth, wife of Nicolas Marſhall; and Mary; Juliana; Franciſca. He dyed 18 May 1619.——Giles, his eldeſt ſon, then upwards of 35 years old (u), took to wife Mary, daughter of Sir William Harris, of Crickſea, Kt. and had by her——Arthur Browne Eſq; living in 1664, who married Anne, daughter of John Aylmer, of Mugdon-hall Eſq; and had two ſons,——Giles, and Arthur [Q].

William Godſave Eſq; Mr. Joſeph England; Thomas Jones &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is tyled as is alſo the Chancel. In a wooden frame boarded, with a ſpire, are 2 Bells.

7. STOW-MAREYS

lies ſouth-weſt of Norton. The Saxon word Stoƿ ſignifies Place; and the addition of Mareys was to diſtinguiſh this from ſome other Stow, but we know none with that appellation in this County, except Waltham-Stow. Marys might be thought to have been taken from the dedication of the Church to St. Mary, if we did not find a family ſurnamed Mareys ſettled here. It is ſometimes written Stow-Mariſh, and Stow-Marſh.

No pariſh of this name occurrs in Domeſday-book, and therefore it is juſtly ſuppoſed to be what is ſet down there under the appellation of Eiſtanes, which belonged to Dodinc in the Confeſſor's reign, and at the ſurvey to Walter the Deacon; and Hametuna, or Haintuna, which Suene then held; but had belonged before to Godric, and another Freeman, and to Robert ſon of Wimarce: Galter, Garner, and one Ralph, were the under-tenants [Q].

Eſtates, lying moſtly in the adjoyning Pariſhes, appear by records (w), to have extended into this; but here were two Maners, 1. The maner of Stow-Mareys. 2. The maner of Hayes.

The Maner of Stow.

Mareys, the manſion-houſe of this, ſtands about three quarters of a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church [R].

It belonged anciently to the noble Family of Bohun; and was held under them by the Mareys family. Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1372, had two knights fees in Stow-Marys, holden by John Mareys (x). By the preſentations to the Living it appears to have continued in the Mareys family till 1389. Then it was in——Conand Aſke,, or his feoffees, in 1433.——John, and——Richard, Hammond, from 1453 to 1488 (y).

William Willford, and Agnes his wife, were poſſeſſed of this maner in 1548 (z).

It was afterwards in the Maxey family of Bradwell near Coggeſhall. Antony Maxey Eſq; who dyed 12 September 1592, held the maner of Stowe, alias Stow-Maris, with a moiety of the Church, in Stow, Great and Little Hayes;

What makes me conclude, that this is the Place called in Domeſday-book Eiſtanes, is, firſt, becauſe Walter the Deacon held it, who had maners in the neighbouring Purley; next, that a maner here was called Hayes, which had an alternate in preſenting to the living. I would therefore ſuppoſe the ancient name to have been Eaſt-Hayes.

[R] In 1294 John de Wytenham held of Philip Burnell, in Wytenham in the pariſh of Stowe, one carucate of land, by the ſervice of one knight's fee and a half. Inquiſ. 22 Edw. I.

Having no iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his brother——Sir William Maxey, Kt. (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 156, 157. 410. 411.]

The Maner of HAYES

is ſuppoſed to have derived its name from Hainetun, mentioned in Domeſday-book. It is ſometimes called Abbot-Hayes, and mention is made of Great and Little Hayes.

The manſion-houſe of Hayes ſtands about the ſame diſtance, ſouth, from the Church, as Mareys.

This maner ſeems to have anciently belonged to the family of Sutton: For half of the Advowſon of the Church, and the alternate Preſentation to it, belonging to them, in right of this Maner, it was ſettled by fine, in 1341, on John, ſon of John, de Walton, and Margery his wife, daughter of John de Sutton, and their heirs. And they preſented from 1321 to 1390 (c).

Joane, heireſs of the Walton family, brought it in marriage to her huſband Sir John Howard; and their only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth, brought it to her huſband John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford; who preſented to the Living in 1488, and 1511. At the time of his deceaſe 10 March 1512, he held this maner of Hayes in Stow, and was ſucceeded by his nephew——John de Vere, the 14th Earl of Oxford (d): and from him it deſcended to his ſucceſſors Earls of Oxford, till ——John, the 16th Earl, or——Edward the 17th Earl, alienated it to ſome of thoſe that preſented afterwards alternately, Cooper, or Goodwyn. [See above, p. 156, 176, and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Hogwills, and Potters, in this pariſh, belonged to William Browne Eſq; in 1549 (e).

William Bragg Eſq; Mr. Joſeph Dunkley; Joſhua Sheppard; Duncan Ewing; Joſeph Stringer &c. have alſo ſome eſtates here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is leaded, but the Chancel tiled. In a wooden frame tiled, there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory is alternately in the gift of the Lords of the Maners of Mareys and Hayes.

8. NORTH FAMBRIDGE, is the ſouth-weſt corner of this Hundred. It ſtands on the north ſide of the river Crouch, over againſt South Fambridge. The name is explained under that other pariſh.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Godric, a freeman, was owner of this Fanbruge: But Tedric Pointel held it at the time of the Survey [S].

Here is but one MANER.

The Hall ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

After Pointel we have no certain account of the poſſeſſors of this Maner [T] till the year 1328, when it belonged to William de Burgh Earl of Ulſter. At the time of his deceaſe in 1333, he held this maner of North-Fambrigg of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, leaving,

Elizabeth, his daughter and heir, one year old (f); afterwards married to Lionel third ſon of K. Edward III. She dyed in 1363, having had by the ſaid Edmund an only daughter Philippa, wife of Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, and Lord of Wigmore, who in her right became Earl of Ulſter, and Lord of Clare, Conaught, and Trim. Among other great eſtates, he held the maner of North-Fambregge, as parcel of the Earldom of Glouceſter; and departing this life in 1381, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon —— Roger Mortimer, Earl of March and Ulſter; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1398, held this maner (g).

Anne, his eldeſt daughter, and at length Heir, was married to Richard of Coningſborough, Earl of Cambridge; ſecond ſon of Edmund of Langley, fifth ſon of K. Edward III: He was beheaded in 1414, for entering into a Conſpiracy againſt K. Henry V. and his eſtates were undoubtedly confiſcated to the Crown. [See in the other Volume, p. 339.]

[T] In 1276, John Fitz-John held the maner of Fambregg, with the advowſon of the Church, of Sir Robert Fitz-Bernard, in capite. And in 1297, Richard Fitz-John held the maner of Fambregge of Robert Fitz-Walter in ca. by the ſervice of 5 fees and a half, belonging to his maner of Shiringe. Inquiſ. 4, & 25 Edw I. It is not ſaid which of the two Fambridges; but it appears to have been this. One of Richard's coheireſſes, Joane wife of Theobald le Botiller, had this maner afterwards. See Dugdale Baron. Vol. I. p. 707, 708.

Warwick (i), obtained this eſtate for a while, I cannot affirm: But, if they had any thing here, it was only the Advowſon of the Rectory.

More certain it is, that this Maner was given by K. Edward IV. to his own Queen's ſiſter, Anne, third daughter of Richard Widvile Earl Rivers; married firſt to William Bourchier, ſon of William Earl of Eu and Eſſex, by whom ſhe had Henry, afterwards Earl of Eſſex; and Cecily married to John Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley. The ſaid Anne's ſecond huſband was George Lord Grey, Earl of Kent. At the time of her deceaſe, 30 July 1489, ſhe was poſſeſſed of this maner, which deſcended to her ſon —— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex (k). He being killed by a fall from his horſe 13 March 1540, it came to his daughter,

Anne, and her huſband William Parr, Earl of Eſſex, and Marquis of Northampton. At the time of her deceaſe, 26 January 1570-1, ſhe held the maner of North Fambridge, with appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, 10 cottages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, 200 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 400 of freſh marſh, 500 of ſalt marſh, 40 of wood, 40 s. rent, North-Fambridge-Ferry, in this pariſh, Norton, Stowe, Purley, Lachendon, and South Fambridge; free-warren in thoſe pariſhes; and the Advowſon of North-Fambridge Church. Her heir was Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley (l). [See above, p. 203, and in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.]

But Qu. Elizabeth, in 1591, granted the maner of North-Fambridge, with appertenances, to Chriſtopher Oſborne; to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (m).——John Oſborne, Gent. ſon, as we ſuppoſe, of Chriſtopher, dyed 18 March 1605-6, poſſeſſed of this Maner with appertenances; and of two parts in three of the In and Out Marſh called South-marſh, in this pariſh and Purley.——John, his uncle, was his heir (n). It continued till lately in the Oſborne family.

Elizabeth Oſborne, ſole heireſs, brought it in marriage to her huſband Temple-Fotherly Whitfield Eſq; who dying in January 1729 left it to his nephew——Ralph Whitfield Eſq; a Major in the Army. He departed this life in 1744, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Thomas Whitfield Eſq; one of the Filazers of the Court of Common-Pleas.

Thomas Coe Eſq;

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a ſmall building near the Ferry, new-built with brick, and tyled. Near the weſt end there is a ſmall boarded frame tyled, but no Bell.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the Maner; and the Advowſon of it belonged in 1296 to Richard Fitz-John (o). Maud his eldeſt daughter and coheir brought it into the Beauchamp Family, Earls of Warwick, in which it continued till 1445; when it came by Anne, a female heir, to Richard Nevil, Earl of Saliſbury and Warwick; and to his ſon, Richard Earl of Warwick, who being ſlain at Barnet-field in 1471, it fell to the Crown; and was granted away with the Maner. But ſince the attainder of Robert Devereux, Earl of Eſſex, in 1601, it hath remained in the Crown.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 476l.

9. LACHINGDON with LAWLING, is a large Pariſh, extending from that of Mundon to the river Crouch.

Lachingdon is otherwiſe written in records Lacendun, Lachindon, and Leſſenduna: And Lawling, is alſo called Lallinge. Whether Lachingdon is derived from the Saxon words Lacan, Lach, and inᵹ; or Læcinᵹ; and ðun, I am not able to judge: As for Lawl, or Lal, the firſt ſyllable of the other name, it is not eaſy to gueſs from whence it can be derived, unleſs it ſhould be from lah, or laᵹa.

There were ſeveral Maners in this pariſh at the time of the Survey. Thoſe in Lawling were more numerous and conſiderable, than thoſe in Lachingdon.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Aluuin, a freeman, held Lachingdon, or Leſſendun: And Leuuin, another freeman; as likewiſe eight other freemen; held lands in Lacendun. Theſe ſeveral parcels were in the King's hands, at the time of the general Survey [U]. Phin, a freeman, had alſo a Maner in Lacendun. And the Church of Canterbury had a Maner at Lachendun, beſides that of Lalling.

What is under the name of Lainge belonged before the Conqueſt partly to the ſaid Church of Canterbury; and to Brun a freeman: Uluric Caſſa, and Ralph Peverell, and Eudo Dapifer, were ſeized of the two laſt, in 1087.

We ſhall firſt treat diſtinctly of what is mentioned under the name of Lachingdon; and then of what is ſet down under the title of Lalinge.

The ſeveral Maners ſet down as in Lachindon, were The King's Maner; The Church of Canterbury's;

The King's MANER.

We have no account of the tenants under the Crown for ſome years.

The owner of this eſtate in the time of K. Henry III. had taken his ſurname from the place, or ſome of his anceſtors before him. William de Lacindon was preſented in 1254, for having a knight's fee, and yet not being made a Knight; therefore he was amerced.——Hugh de Lethendon, or Lachyndon, who dyed in 1294, held of the King, in capite, in Lachindon, of the Honor of Han-nett, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, 1 meſſuage, 300 acres of arable, 1 marſh, 3 acres of meadow, 4 of paſture, 13 s. 8 d. rent, and a yearly rent of 10 s. to the Caſtle of Dovor (q).——William de Lachindon, his ſon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1312, held of the King, as above, 1 meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, and 11 s. 7 d. in the vill of Lachindon, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and by the ſame rent to the Caſtle of Dovor, and ſuit at the Honor of Hagenett. He held alſo 80 acres of marſh here, of the Abbeſs of Berking, by the ſervice of one clove-gilly-flower per annum.——Hugh, his brother and heir, who dyed in 1316, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hauley, by the like ſervices, a capital meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 8 of paſture, and 9 s. rent of aſſiſe. ——John de Lachindon was his ſon and heir (r). We have no further account of this family.

In 1328, William Moton, and Johanna his wife, held 50 acres of arable in Lachindon, of the King, in ca. by payment of 10 s. to the Caſtle of Dovor.

John Heyroun, who dyed in 1343, held 50 acres of arable, 30 acr. of incloſed marſh, and 2 of paſture, in Lachendon, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hagenett, by the ſervice of 2 d. a year; but charged for the Lordſhip of Hagenett with the payment of a ſec rent of 10 s. per annum, on the 15th day of Auguſt (s).

William Sayer, of Coppeford, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1348, held 50 acres of arable, 30 of marſh, and 2 of paſture, in the vill of Lachindon, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Hugenet, by the payment of 10 s. as above. And 6 or 7 acres of incloſed marſh of the Abbeſs of Berkyng, by the ſervice of a half-penny a year.——John Sayer, his ſon, held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe in 1350; as did——Richard his ſon, who dyed in 1368; and theſe lands were then charged with a yearly rent of 4 l. of Silver to Sir Richard de Havering, and his heirs for ever.——John Sayer was brother and heir of Richard (t).

This eſtate was next in the noble Family of Bourchier. For Sir John Bourchier, who dyed 21 May 1400, held 1 meſſuage and 100 acres of arable and marſh in the vill of Lachindon, of the King, as of the Honor of Dover, by the ſervice of 10 s. per annum:——Bartholomew, his ſon and heir, at the time of his death 18 May 1409, held the maner of Lacyndon, of the King, as of the Honor of Hagenet, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; As did——Idonea his widow, that held it in dower till her deceaſe on 12 September 1410 (u). And then it came to the next heir,——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Eſſex, who dyed 4 April 1483; being ſucceeded by his grandſon——Henry, Earl of Eſſex (w). [For a fuller account of this noble Family, ſee above, p. 203. and in the other Volume, p. 253. 255.]

Henry de Grapenell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1298, held in Lachindon of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Dover, 60 acres of arable, by the yearly payment of 10 s. to the Caſtle of Dover (x). See under Tyled-hall.

John Cok of Lachyndon, who dyed in 1404, held 150 acres of arable and marſh here of the King, as of the Honor of Dovor.——Peter was his ſon (y).

As far as we can obſerve, this Maner was parcell'd out with Tiled-hall, and other Maners in this pariſh.

TILED-HALL, is the Maner that belonged to Phin, and afterwards to his wife Ulueua [W].

The manſion houſe ſtands a little way eaſt from the Church.

After Phin and Ulueua the ancienteſt owners upon record were the Grapenell family, mentioned above, p. 318. Henry Grapenell, who dyed in 1298, held here of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Dover, 60 acres of arable, by the ſervice and payment of 10 s. to the Caſtle of Dover.——Petronilla, wife of John Fitz-John; Margery, married afterwards to William Inge; Johanna, to Adam Fitz-John; and Margaret, to Nicolas Havering, were his four daughters and coheirs (z).

William Inge held, by the law of England, in Lachindon 60 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of paſture, and 24 of marſh, of the King, in ca. by the yearly payment at Michaelmaſs of 10 s. for the guard of Dover-caſtle; and dying in 1321, left——Joanna his daughter and heir married to Ivo or Eudo de la Zouche. Eudo held this maner in Lachindon called Teyled-hall, of the inheritance of his wife, in 1326, and the land is called in the records 50 acres (a).

Margaret, wife of Nicolas Havering, had 4 l. a year rent, in 1335, out of divers tenements parcel of the maner called Tyled-hall in Lachindon.——Richard de Havering was her ſon and heir (b).

We have no account from this time of the owners of Tyled-hall till 1553. Then, John Oſborne, Gent. who dyed 19 April that year, held the maner of Tyled-hall, with appertenances; and lands, meadows, and paſtures called South-Wallett, Coles, and Wallett-marſh, in Lachendon, of the Lord Riche, as of his maner of Lallinge, by ſuit of Court only. He held alſo land called Battell-hill, parcel of this maner, of the King, as of the Caſtle of Dover, by the abovesaid rent of 10 s. And Tyled-hall-marſh, of Thomas Barnardeſton as of the maner of Chalkwell-hall. —— Richard Oſborne Gent. his ſon and heir, then aged 10 years, dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame, 14 September 1595, leaving—— Richard, his ſon and heir, alſo 10 years old (c); who departing this life 11 November 1612, was ſucceeded by his brother —— John, aged 21 years (d). He left only daughters coheirs,

Elizabeth, one of them, brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband Richard Betenſon Eſq; They had iſſue, Richard; Peter; and Edward, of Colne-Engaine.——Richard, the eldeſt ſon and heir, had by Catharine, daughter of George Tuke of Layer-Marney Eſq; Richard, and Thomas.——Sir Richard Betenſon Kt. the eldeſt ſon, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Monyns, Bart. by whom he had——Sir Richard, created a Baronet 6 February 1666, and —— Edward. [See under Layer de la Hay.] The latter ſold this eſtate, in 1718, to

Sir George Markham, Bart. who, in 1736, gave it by will to

Bernard Wilſon, M. A. Vicar of Newark upon Trent. Of him it was purchaſed, in 1748, by Samuel Trew Gent. and he conveyed it, the ſame year, to Edward Codd, Gent. together with South-Wallett, and Peverells.

A Maner in LACHENDON belonged to the Church of Canterbury, beſides that of Lalling [X].

By whom it was granted to them doth not appear; but as they were poſſeſſed of it before the Conqueſt, it is highly probable that it was given them by the heroick Brithnoth Earl of Eſſex, who gave them the maner of Lawling.

The perſons that held this Maner under the Church of Canterbury, in different parcels, were, the Burnels; Grapnells and their heirs; Heyroun &c.

Philip Burnell, who dyed in 1294, held in Lachindon and Lallyng of the Prior of Canterbury; by the yearly rent of 26 s. 8 d. to the Treaſurer of Canterbury, and of 22 s. to the Prior; 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 4 of paſture, 1 marſh, and 17 s. 3 d. rent of aſſiſe. He held other parcels of different perſons.—— Edward was his ſon (e).——Sir Nicolas Burnell, at the time of his deceaſe in 1382, held this maner of Lachyndon of the Archbiſhop and Church of Canterbury, by the ſervice of 2 s. ——Sir Hugh Burnell, held the ſame, in 1420, of the Archbiſhop, in fealty. Joyce, wife of Thomas Erdyngton jun. Catharine Burnell; and Margery, wife of Edward Hungerford, were his couſins and heirs (f). [For a further account of this family ſee the other Volume, p. 12. 92.]

In 1298, Henry de Grapenell held in Lachindon, of the Prior of Canterbury, 1 meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, and 8 s. rent, by the ſervice of 8 s. 6 d. a year.——William Inge, who married Grapenell's daughter Margery, held the ſame in 1321, by the ſervice of 8 s. per ann. and by the ſervice of one ploughſhare, and ſuit at the Prior's Court in Lalling from 3 weeks to 3 weeks. —— Eudo de la Zouche, who married Inge's daughter Joanna, held this land alſo, in 1326, by the like ſervices, with the addition of one bederepe in autumn (g).

John Heyroun held it likewiſe, in 1343, and ——Chriſtiana wife of John Faunteloun was his ſiſter and heir (h).

Next William, John, and Richard, Sayer, mentioned above under the King's Maner, held this of the Prior and Convent of Chriſt's Church in Canterbury, in 1348, 1350, and 1368 (i). The ploughſhare was to be of the price of 6 d. (k).

We hear no further of diſtinct Tenants of this Maner, which we may ſuppoſe was, after this, incorporated into the Convent's larger Maner here.

LALLING, or LAWLING, appears anciently to have been the largeſt part of this Pariſh, though afterwards reckoned only a Hamlet.

The three Maners that lay in it, belonged before the Conqueſt to the Cathedral Church of Canterbury; to Brun, a freeman; and to Uluric Caſſa. Canterbury Church and Priory remained poſſeſſed of the firſt at the time of the Survey; Ralph Peverell, and Eudo Dapifer, held then the two others.

LALLING-HALL,

the Maner-houſe of the firſt, ſtands two miles, north north-eaſt, from Lachingdon-Church.

This eſtate was given to the Church of Canterbury, in the year 991, by Brithnoth [Y] the

The Prior and Convent of Chriſt-Church, or Holy Trinity, in Canterbury, (for it went under both thoſe names) remained poſſeſſed of this eſtate till the diſſolution of Monaſteries [Z].

In 1542, K. Henry VIII. granted it, with the Maners of South-Church, Milton-hall, Stiſted, Bocking-hall in Weſt-Merſey, and Borleigh, to the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral of Canterbury.

They remained in poſſeſſion of them but a little while: for 23 November 1545, they were fain to exchange them with that King for other eſtates. The 20th of January 1545, K. Henry granted this Maner, with the reſt, to

Sir Richard Riche, and his heirs (m). [See above, p. 296. 298. and in the other Volume, p. 21. 390.] He dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1566, ſo did his ſon——Robert Lord Rich, in 1580 (n); and after him his deſcendents Earls of Warwick; ſo often mentioned under Rochford-Hundred. Of the coheirs of——Charles, Earl of Warwick, it was purchaſed by Thomas Weſtern Eſq; and hath deſcended to ——Charles Weſtern Eſq; For a more particular account of this Family ſee the other Volume, p. 147, under Rivenhall, where is their chief Seat.

Lalling has a court-leet kept at Lalling-Hall, the title of which is Lawling with Snoreham; and to it belongs Leigh-How in the pariſh of Purley, and Runſell Hamlet in Danbury.

The Maner of LITTLE LACHINDON, alias SNOREHAM, was erected out of the lands of the Church of Canterbury.

John de Grey, who dyed in 1323, held in Lachindon one grange, or barn, 140 acres of arable; and 60 acres beſides holden of Richard de Burgh Earl of Ulſter, by the ſervice of 7 s. a year: and 4 acres of meadow, 6 of paſture, and 20 of marſh (o). His ſucceſſors were——Henry de Grey, who dyed in 1342, and——Reginald in 1370 (p).——Sir Henry de Grey, ſon of the latter, held this eſtate by the name of Snoreham, of the Prior of Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury, in 1395.——Elizabeth, his widow held the ſame in 1401 (q). And ſo did their ſon —— Sir Richard Grey, alſo by the name of the maner of Snoreham, in 1442, and —— Margaret, widow of Sir Richard, that dyed in 1450 (r). [See above under Purley.]

The lands of this Maner are, in the ſubſequent accounts, ſo intermixed with thoſe of the neighbouring pariſh of Snoreham, that they are not eaſily diſtinguiſhed. Here, therefore, we ſhall only obſerve, that Roger Grome, clothier, who dyed 24 November 1561, held the maner of Snoreham, with appertenances, in Snoreham and Lachindon, of Richard Lord Riche, as of his maner of Lawling-hall, by the yearly rent of 12 s. 6 d.——Thomas Grome was his ſon and heir (s). Next,

Arthur Harris Eſq; held this maner of Snoreham, or Little Lachenden, at the time of his deceaſe 18 June 1597, and after him his ſon ——Sir William Harris, who dyed in 1617. and ——Sir Arthur, ſon and heir of Sir William (t). [See under Crickſea.]

Then it paſſed to Mr. Argal, and to Nathanael Green Eſq; as Snoreham.

We have obſerved above, that in Lallinge, beſides the two Maners laſt deſcribed, Ralph Peverell held one, that had belonged before to one Brun [A]. This was called afterwards

PEVERELLS.

It appears to have gone along with Tyled-hall. Richard Betenſon Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 12 July 1624, was poſſeſſed of this maner of Peverells, and divers other lands in Lachendon and Althorn, holden of the King as of his Dutchy of Lancaſter (u). With Tyled-hall it was conveyed to Edward Codd, Gent.

Eudo Dapifer, Lord of the adjoyning pariſh of Mundon, held alſo a Maner in Lallinge, which belonged before to Uluric Caſſa [B]. This is what was called afterwards

She dyed 26 Janu. 1570. The ſame year Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Stamfords to Walter Devereux, Viſcount Hereford (y).

Theſe two Maners, or reputed Maners, of Hill-houſe, and Uleham, went afterwards together. Roger Grome, above-mentioned, held in 1561, the Maner of Hell-howſe, and that of Ullams, with appertenances, in Lachindon, of the Queen, in capite, as of her Honor of Hagenett. —— Thomas, his ſon and heir, then 18 years old, ſucceeded him (z). —— William Grome, Gent. brother it ſeems of Thomas, by licenſe dated 7 September 1580, alienated a moiety of this maner, and the moiety of one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 100 of marſh, in Lacendon to Arthur Harris Eſq; (a) At the time of his deceaſe, 18 June 1597, he held, of the maner of Lawling-hall, in free ſocage, the Maner, capital meſſuage, or farm, called Hill Howſe, alias Hell houſe; with appertenances; in Lachingdon, Lawlinge, and Althorne: And the Maner of Ullams, in Lachindon: together with divers tenements, lands, marſhes, &c. occupied with thoſe two Maners. —— Sir William Harris his ſon and heir, held the ſame of Robert Lord Rich: and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Sir Arthur Harris, or Herris (b).

Theſe have paſſed with the Maner of Snoreham.

Here is a Fair on the 2d of June.

The CHURCH, and Chancel are tyled. No ſteeple, but a wooden frame, in which hangs 1 Bell.

This Rectory hath been all along in the collation of his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Near Lalling-hall anciently ſtood a Chapel, built for the Eaſe and Conveniency of the Inhabitants of that part of the Pariſh, which were diſtant two miles from the mother Church. Part of the foundations are ſtill viſible in the orchard belonging to Lalling-hall. The Rector of Lalling was obliged to officiate in that Chapel.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1142 l. and Runſell Hamlet at 195 l.

10. SNOREHAM

is a very ſmall Pariſh, not mentioned in Domeſday-book, and taken ſince that time out of the adjoyning Pariſhes of Lalling and Purley [D].

Speed and Norden omitted it in their Maps; and in others, it is ſet down only as a Manerhouſe by the name of Snore-ham-hall; but in the latter Maps it is right.

The greateſt part of the lands belonged to the Church of Canterbury, and have been already deſcribed under the Maner of Snoreham alias Little Lachingdon; the reſt came moſt probably out of Purley.

John de Grey, of Wilton, beſides 140 acres in the foregoing maner of Little Lachindon, and 60 acres of land under the Earl of Ulſter; held in Snoreham, one Grange, and a heath, and 160 acres of arable, 6 of paſture, and 4 l. rent; of which, 120 acres were holden of the Prior of Chriſt's Church in Canterbury, by the ſervice of 13 s. 4 d. per annum. If the Prior had all the Pariſh, there was no reaſon for any diſtinction. Afterwards he is ſaid to hold, by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee, all the tenements in Snoreham of William Gernon (e), whom I alſo ſuppoſe lord of the Grange, becauſe Gernon had a maner in the neighbouring pariſh of Purley; and John de Grey held the maner of Purley of the King, and Hyde-Park there, of the Prior, as well as the Maner of Lachendon Barns, now reckoned into Purley. [See above, p. 348.] And Leigh-How, in the pariſh of Purley, is, in the title of the Maner of Lawling cum Snoreham, ſaid to belong to that maner.

That ſome of theſe lands came out of the pariſh of Purley is the more probable, becauſe Lachingdon and Snoreham are in two diſtinct juriſdictions, the former being an Exempt to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and a Peculiar ſubject

Of what age this Pariſh is, nothing ſhews above the year 1326; then Sir Henry de Grey of Wilton preſented to the Rectory, and his Family down to the year 1496, as the London Regiſtry ſhews.

But John de Grey had in 1323 the eſtate in this pariſh juſt mentioned before.——Reginald Grey, Lord of Wilton. —— Sir Henry Grey —— Sir Richard.——Sir Thomas, and——Sir John, had alſo the ſame; and preſented to the Church (f).

By the preſentations, it appears to have been after that in Sir Giles Capel, in right of his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Roos; in——Hugh Dennis Eſq; in —— Thomas Grome, Gent. in—— Arthur Harris Eſq; and,

Thomas Argall Eſq; and his heirs. This Family was ſeated at Great Badow. About the end of laſt century,——Thomas Argall Eſq; married Anne, daughter of Sir William Wyld Kt. and Bart. one of the Judges of the King's Bench, and had by her two daughters, Jane, wife of William Godwin; and Mary, wife of . . . Heyman, of Town-Malling, in Kent. Neither of them having any iſſue, this eſtate was ſold, under a decree in Chancery, to

Nathanael Green Eſq; He dyed in 1725, leaving Lucy, married to Raphael Courteville Eſq; and Catharine, and Elizabeth, Nuns. Mr. Courteville and his wife having ſuffered a recovery, conveyed this eſtate to

Mr. John Strutt, of Biley-mills, in 1743.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, was undoubtedly built by ſome of the noble Family of Grey of Wilton, the patrons. It is quite ruinous, there being only ſome ſmall remains of it near the Hall-yard. The inhabitants reſort to Lachingdon-Church, as being the neareſt, and are there baptized and buried, and contribute to all parochial duties. However, this is ſtill a Rectory preſentative.

There are not above ſix or ſeven houſes in this pariſh; which is rated to the land-tax at lies between Lalling and Maldon-river, or Blackwater-bay; abutting north towards Northey-iſland.

The name is derived from the two Saxon words, Munꝺ, ſecurity, defence, mound; and ꝺun, a hill; here probably having been ſome kind of fortification.

This belonged to Goduin, a King's Thegn, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. Eudo Dapifer held it at the time of the Survey [E], and gave both Maner and Advowſon of the Church to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, of his foundation (g) [F].

After the ſuppreſſion of that Abbey, K. Henry VIII. in 1539, granted this Maner of Mondon, and the appropriate Rectory, or great Tithes, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy Seal, and his heirs (h).

Upon his attainder it reverted to the Crown: and Qu. Mary I. 15 April 1558, annexed Munden-hall, with ſeveral other lordſhips, to the Dutchy of Lancaſter (i).

Sir Thomas Wiſeman bought this Maner, to hold of the King in fee-farm: and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir William.

Thomas Weſtern Eſq; of Rivenhall purchaſed it; and it hath deſcended to his heirs. [See in the other Volume, p. 147.]

Mundon-hall, the Maner houſe, ſtands a little way north from the Church. It hath very large demeſnes.

Eltney, or Iltney-farm, near the Channel, was part of St. John Abbey's demeſnes in this pariſh (k). In 1556, William Harrys Eſq; held this meſſuage called Iltney, in Mondon, and divers lands, tenements, meadows, paſtures &c. of the Queen, as of her maner of Mondon.

Ralph Breeder had it in 1608 (l).

It belonged afterwards to Dr. Thomas Plume, who ſettled it upon his foundations at Maldon. [See under Maldon, p. 337.]

The Lords Fitz-Walter had a moiety of a fee in Mundon; which John Oliver held in 1386. and——James de Bures afterwards (m).

Robert Teye held, in 1426, 1 meſſuage, 80 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 6 of marſh, [F] We have taken notice above, p. 255, of the corruption of the name of Pitſey into that of Ficheford. The like corruption appears in the ſame Charter, of Mundon into Mundover. In the original it is, Mundon', which is an abbreviation of Mundonia. But the unſkilful tranſcriber taking the final n in Mundon for an u', and imagining it muſt be a contraction of uer, made of it that uncouth and unuſual name Mundover.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is tyled, and ſo is the Chancel. The Belfrey is framed of timber, and plaiſtered; octangular below, above four ſquare, boarded and tyled. In it are 3 Bells.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to St. John's Abbey; and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Abbot and Convent remained patrons till the Suppreſſion, when they came to the Crown, and have continued in it ever ſince.

12. STEPLE with STANSGATE lies eaſt of Mundon, having on the north Maldon-river. And the adjoyning Iſle of Ramſey is in this pariſh.

It appears from Domeſday-book, that the ancienteſt name of this place was Ulfwineſcherche, which being too long for the inhabitants of this Kingdom, that delight in ſhort Names and Monoſyllables, was changed into that of Steple, taken undoubtedly from the Church, which had a Steple and the other neighbouring Churches had not.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the owners of the lands here, were Aluric, a freeman; four freemen in Uluuines-Cherch; one Norman; and Bondi, a freeman. At the time of the Survey, Aluric's part belonged to the King; Tedric Pointell claimed what was in Uluuine's Cherch, as an exchange; and Henry de Ferrers had Bondi's part [G].

Here are at preſent two Maners. 1. The maner of Steple. 2. The maner of Steple-Grange.

The Maner of Steple-Hall.

The manſion houſe of this is on the north ſide of the Church.

After the Survey the earlieſt account of it we have was in 1282. Then Hugh Fitz-Otto held the maner of Steple by purchaſe from Sir Americ Peche, in capite, by the fourth part of a fee. And in the ſame village, of John de Cantilupe, one marſh, of the yearly rent of three marks: And of Roger le Taylur, 40 acres of arable, and 40 of marſh, by the ſervice of one clove-gilliflower: And 30 acres of arable of Robert Berners. Joanna was his daughter and heir (o).

It appears by a copy of an Indenture dated 15 January 1362, that Sir John de Aſpale and Elizabeth his wife, were then poſſeſſed of the maner of Steple in Eſſex, which went to two Daughters; one of them, —— Catharine de Hemenhale had this lordſhip. Margery wife of Sir George Felbrigge was the other daughter (p).

We hear nothing more of this Maner till 1477. John Feild, who dyed that year, held the maner of Stepyll, alias Stepyll-hall, and 300 acres of paſture, and 100 acres of arable, 5 of wood, 5 of meadow, and 60s. rent, in the pariſh of Stepyll, of the Prior of Bicknacre, in ſocage, by fealty and rent of 1 d. per ann.——Dorothy was his daughter and heir (q). Who gave this to Bicknacre nothing ſhews, but they had it in the beginning of K. Edward the IIId's reign; for then they preſented to the living, and had an alternate preſentation with the Priory of Stanſgate (r) [H].

Agnes Morton, widow, who dyed 6 April 1517, held the maner of Stepill, with appertenances; and other lands called Cokes payes, Mutcheſt, or Great and Little Stuckes, Ferrors, Dickles, Chapmans, and Morris; of the Prior of Bicknacre, by fealty, and yearly rent of 1 d.——Robert Morton, her ſon and heir, then 44 years old, ſucceeded her.

Dorothy Filoll, widow, held this maner at the time of her deceaſe 1 October 1537, of the Priory of Bicknaker, then annexed to that of St. Mary Spittell, by fealty.

Anne Willoughby was her daughter and heir, aged 40 years (s). —— Thomas Willoughby, moſt probably her ſon, was alſo poſſeſſed of this maner, and dying 16 Auguſt 1559, was ſucceeded by his brother——Francis Willoughby (t).

Sir Henry Billingſley was lord of the maner of Steeple-hall in 1604 (u).

About the beginning of this century it belonged to Elizabeth, Dutcheſs dowager of Montague. [See in the other Volume, p. 15.]

It is now in St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, London.

[H] The revenues of Bycknacre Priory extended into the pariſhes of Woodham-Ferrers, Danbury, Steple, Mayland, Purle, Burnham &c. See in the other Volume, p. 34.

This is what belonged, at the time of the Survey, to Henry de Ferrers [I].

As Ralph de Ferrers, lord of Tiltey, confirmed the foundation of that Abbey, he unqueſtionably became alſo a benefactor thereto [K]. [See in the other Volume, p. 436.]

In 1538, The maner, or grange, called Steple-Grange, was granted by K. Henry VIII. to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk; who, the ſame year, ſold this maner, ferm, or grange to John Stonard (w). From him it came to——

George Stoneard, Eſq; who dyed 31 Decemb. 1558, and, according to the Inquiſition, held the maner of Steple-Grange, part of the poſſeſſions of the Priory of Tiltey. ——John Stoneard, then aged 36 years, ſucceeded his father (x). He dyed 16 October 1579. This eſtate was afterwards in——Clement Stonard; then in——Francis, who held it, at the time of his deceaſe, 13 September 1604, leaving —— Clement Stonard his ſon and heir, 46 years old.

It is ſaid in the record to lye in the ſeveral pariſhes, vills, or fields, of Steeple, St. Laurence, Woodham-Mortimer, Woodham-Ferris, and Shobery (y).

Mr. Jonathan Boulier, of London, had it lately. It belongs now to

James Roffey Eſq;

STANSGATE

is a Hamlet in this pariſh, near the water, being a kind of peninſula.

The name ſignifies a Stone-gate, but what gate could occaſion that name doth not appear at preſent. It might be a landing-place from the water.

Siuuard was owner of Staneſgate in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. At the time of the Survey, Ralph Fitz-Brien held it under Ralph Peverell [L].

About 1110, this Ralph Fitz-Brien founding a Priory for Canons of the Order of St. Auguſtin at Great Briſete in Suffolk, made the Church of Staneſgate, with the third ſhare of the Tithes of his lordſhip, and ſome lands, part of its endowment (z). Richard de Belmeis, Biſhop of London, confirmed this grant; and mentions particularly all the Tithes both great and ſmall out of the whole demeſnes of the lord of Steple, and out of Henry Foliot's: And all the Tithes of Ramſey-iſland; and out of Aylewelond, and Foteſlond, and Raylewayle's.—But only half the Tithe of Earl Maurice's and Wintun's lands, of the Fee of Steple: and the like of all the lands of the pariſhioners of Steple (a).

A PRIORY

for Cluniac Monks was founded here before the year 1176, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, and a cell to the Priory of Lewes (b).

The poſſeſſions belonging to it, beſides the ſite &c. were, the Maner of Staneſgate, the Priory maner of Staneſgate, a water-mill, and ſeveral meſſuages, lands, and tenements in Staneſgate, Steple, Rameſey, Woodham-Mortimer, Tillingham, Maldon, Great and Little-Totham, Tiptree, Meſſing, Tolleſhunt Darcy, and Tolleſhunt Major [M]: the great Tithes of Staneſgate, Steple, and Raynham; and the Advowſons of thoſe Vicarages.

In 1525, this Houſe was ſuppreſſed, with other ſmaller Monaſteries, and granted to Cardinal Wolſey, for endowing his two Colleges (c). The revenues of it were then, in Spiritualities, 5 l. 0 s. 3 d. and in Temporalities, 38 l. 8 s. 3 d.

Upon the Cardinal's fall in 1529, this coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted, in 1536, all the premiſſes, and the oblations &c. belonging to the pariſh Church of Steple; the Vicar's poor pittance only excepted; to the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, by way of exchange (d). And Sir Thomas, Prior of St. John's, granted, 28 June 1533, the maner of Stanſgate to Thomas Cocke, and Richard Cocke (e).

After the ſuppreſſion of St. John's Hoſpital, K. Henry VIII. granted, in 1543, the maner of Stanneſgate, with appertenances, and the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage of Steple, to Edmund Mordaunt, and his heirs. He, by licenſe dated 1 June 1544, alienated them to Sir Richard Riche, Lord Riche (f). He enjoyed them at the time of his deceaſe in 1566, and they paſſed to his deſcendents Earls of Warwick (g).

Charles Hoſkyns Eſq; of Croydon, is ſaid to be the preſent poſſeſſor of Stanſgate maner.

Stanſgate-Wic belongs to Shaw King, Eſq; Ramſey-iſle is parcel of the maner of Stanſgate.

The Rev. Thomas Cooch [*M], and Thomas Sweeting, have alſo ſome lands in Steple.

The Church, or Chapel, of Stanſgate is down.

The Church of Steple, dedicated to St. Laurence, is tyled. The Chancel is in ruins. At the weſt end, in a wooden frame boarded and tyled, are 2 Bells.

The great Tithes of Steple and Stanſgate were divided between the Priory of Great Briſet, and that of Stanſgate. After the ſuppreſſion, the Rectory of Steple, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, were granted to Edmund Mordaunt; who alienated them to Richard Lord Riche (b). By Advowſon of the Vicarage, muſt be underſtood the alternate preſentation: for the Priories of Stanſgate and Bicknacre preſented alternately (i). With Bicknacre was granted the Advowſon of Steple to Henry Polſted in 1539. He ſold them together to Sir Walter Mildmay: and Humfrey Mildmay Eſq; who dyed 9 Auguſt 1613, was poſſeſſed of them (k). Henry Mildmay, of Graces Eſq; preſented in 1678. One of his daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Waterſon had it laſt.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, of Stanſgate were purchaſed of the Earl of Warwick's heirs by Mr. King; and are now in Shaw King Eſq; His mother preſented to the Vicarage of Steple with Stanſgate in 1750.

13. MAYLAND

lies ſouth of Steple. In records it is written Meilanda.

If the Saxons had uſed the name of May for one of the months, that might have been employed in the name of this pariſh: but Trimilki, thrice milking, was the name they gave to that agreeable month. The firſt ſyllable May, therefore I think, was derived from Mæðe, paſture; land is well known.

In Domeſday-book no ſuch name occurrs as this. Probably it was one of thoſe articles that could not be traced out, and which for that reaſon I have placed together in a note at the end of this Hundred.

There are two Maners in this pariſh. 1. The maner of Mayland. 2. The maner of Knipſhoe, and Dredgers.

The Maner of MAYLAND.

Mayland-hall, the manſion-houſe of this, ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church.

This was part of the endowment of St. Oſith-Monaſtery in this County, given to it undoubtedly by the founder, Richard de Belmeis, Biſhop of London. That houſe was poſſeſſed of it at the time of the Suppreſſion, being then lett for 22 l. and alſo of the Rectory of Mayland.

In 1525, K. Henry VIII. granted this Maner, and Rectory, among many others, to Cardinal Wolſey (l). Upon his præmunire it coming to the Crown, the ſame King granted it, in 1539, to Sir Richard Riche (m). It continued a while in his poſterity, Earls of Warwick, ſo often mentioned before (n).

Robert Wiſeman Eſq; had it in 1635. Some years ago this Maner was given to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, London, by the munificent Edward Colſton Eſq; together with the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage.

The Maner of KNIPSHO and DREDGERS appears to have belonged to the Family of Gernon, mentioned above, p. 13. 16. 55. 158. 176. and in the other Volume, p. 179. 576. Under John Gernoun, Thomas Baynard, who dyed in 1344, held in Maylond, 1 toft, 80 acres of arable, and one marſh, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's-fee. Joane, his widow, at the time of her deceaſe in 1349, held this maner of Knepeſho.——John Baynard was their ſon and heir (o).

It was next in the noble Family of Bourchier. Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, who dyed 18 May 1409, held the maner of Knypeſho in Maylond, of the King as of the Honor of Peverell.——Idonea, his widow, held in 1410, 160 acres of arable, and 40 of marſh, called Knipſho, of the ſame Honor (p).——Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, married, firſt, to Sir Hugh Stafford, and afterwards to Sir Lewis Robeſſart, held the ſame (q). She dyed 1 July 1433. And, to conclude all that relates here to this noble Family, ——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, held the maners of Knypſo and Legates, in 1483 (r): And, in 1570.——Anne Lady Bourchier, Marchioneſs of Northampton, held the maner of Knipſoe and Dredgers, and 2 meſſuages, 2 cottages, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 50 of paſture, 10 of wood, 40 of marſh, in Knipſoe Dredgers and Mayland, and fiſhery, wrec, and free-warren (s).

But, in the mean time Richard Baynard, who dyed in 1473, is ſaid to hold the maner of Knybſo, alias Baynards, in the vill of Maylond, of John Payton, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. —— Grace, his only daughter and heir, married firſt to Thomas Langley, and afterwards to Edward Daniel, held the maner of Knibſoe, at the time of her deceaſe 2 January 1508, of Sir Robert Payton. —— John Daniell Eſq; her ſon and heir, held this maner of Knibſoe, alias Baynards, of William Ayleff Eſq; as of his maner of Braxſtede: and dying 5 September 1566, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Edmund Danyell Eſq; who alſo held the ſame of William Ayloffe Eſq; and departed this life 16 December 1570, leaving —— John, his ſon and heir (t). [For a more particular account of this Family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 176.]

I ſuppoſe it was only part of the Maner that the Baynards and Danyells held.

John Baker Eſq; was owner of this maner, or tenement, in 1635.

Bovells lands ſo called, in this pariſh and Southminſter, part of the endowment of Darcies Chantries in Maldon, were granted to Sir Francis Jobſon; who alienated them to Francis Bode (u).

Little Bicknacre, alias Bicknacre-Barns, in Mayland, were granted, in 1589, to Robert Wroth, and William Wiſeman (w).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Barnabas, is tiled, and ſo is the Chancel. In a wooden frame, boarded, with a ſpire ſhingled, are 3 Bells.

It belonged originally to the Abbey of St. Oſith; and afterwards was given to the Church of St. Paul's; but by an exchange made by Gilbert Foliot, Biſhop of London, in the time of K. Henry II. became again part of St. Oſith's poſſeſſions. The Rectory, or great Tithes, were then appropriated to that Abbey; and a Vicarage ordained; both which continued in St. Oſith's till the diſſolution of Monaſteries.

In 1525, K. Henry granted the Rectory to Cardinal Wolſey; and, after his fall, to Sir Richard Riche in 1539, together with the Advowſon of the Vicarage. From 1593 to 1639 they were in the Wiſeman Family: and from 1664 to 1671, in R. Duncomb Eſq; in right of his wife (x).

St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital purchaſed them with the Maner: and, in 1723, augmented the Vicarage with 100l. added to 100l. of Mr. Colſton's benefaction, to which were joined 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 702 l. 2 s. 0 d.

ALTHORN,

otherwiſe written Alderne, and Aletherne, was ſo named, either from the ground being there All covered with Thorns; or from Alð, old, and ðoꞃn, here being ſome remarkable large Old Thorn. For many places have taken their names from ſuch things, as might be proved by inſtances.

This is ſuppoſed to be what is entered in Domeſday-book under the appellation of Altenai, and Eltenai. The former, Leſtan enjoyed as free, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: and Suene, and his under-tenant Ralph, held it at the time of the Survey. The other, ſtyled Eltenai, had belonged to Ingelric, and at the time of the Survey to Euſtace Earl of Bologne.

Theſe were divided afterwards into three Maners.

The Maner of ALTHORN is what belonged to Suene [N].

Althorn-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands a little way ſouth from the Church.

The earlieſt account we have of this eſtate, after Suene, was in 1203, when a Fine paſſed between Euſtace Fitz-Thomas, pet' and William de Pontefract, tenent, for one carucate of land, with appertenances in Alethorne (y).

Before the year 1303, the Abbot and Convent of St. Oſith were poſſeſſed of this Maner, given them undoubtedly by their founder. For, in that year, Richard de Graveſend held lands in Alethorne of the Abbot of St. Oſith, as we ſhall ſhew more particularly under the next maner.

In 1360, Robert de Naylingherſt and John de Illeford gave 1 meſſuage, 254 acres of arable, 15 acr. of meadow, 30 of paſture, a ſmall marſh, and 10 s. rent in Althorne, Adburghton, and the ſuburbs of Colcheſter, to the Abbot and Convent of St. Oſith and their ſucceſſors for ever: Of which, 134 acres were holden of the ſaid Convent, by the ſervice of 9 s. 4 d. a year; and 6 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and the marſh, by the ſervice of 12 d. per ann. And 46 acres of arable of John de Stoke, by the yearly ſervice of 9 s. 4 d. (z).

To whom theſe lands were particularly granted at the ſuppreſſion, I do not find.

There is at preſent no ſuch acknowledged Maner as that of Althorn-hall: But the lands are in three parcels. One part goes with Mayland-hall, and belonged to —— Robert Wiſeman Eſq; afterwards to —— George Nelthorp Eſq;

A ſecond part belongs to South-minſter: And a third part to the Maner of Cage in the ſame pariſh. Theſe two were part of the eſtate of ——Thomas Brograve Eſq; now of Berney Brograve Eſq;

The Maner of STOKE-HALL was ſo named from its owner Edmunde de Stok; living in the time of K. Edward I.

This is what belonged to Euſtace Earl of Bologne [O].

Richard de Graveſend, who dyed in 1303, held certain lands in Aletherne called Hungeſland, containing 120 acres of arable, and 4 s. rent, of Edmund de Stoke, and of the Abbat of St. Oſith, by the ſervice of 31 s. 6 d.——Richard was his ſon and heir (a).

Alphonſus de Vere, in 1328, held a meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of paſture, 30 of marſh, and 6 s. 8 d. rent in Allethorne, of William de Baud, as of his maner of Corringham, by the ſervice of the eighth part of a knight's fee;——John was his ſon (b).

This Alphonſus was a younger ſon of Robert the 6th Earl of Oxford: his ſon John here mentioned was the 7th Earl.

The Maner of Stokes appears next in the Darcy Family. Robert Darcy, Eſq; was poſſeſſed of it in 1508. For Roger Darcy, who dyed 3 September that year, held lands and tenements, in Althorne, Mayland, &c. of Robert Darcy Eſq; as of his maner of Stokys (c).

William Harrys, who dyed 21 September 1556, held the maner of Stokes and Luthyrnes in Althorn, Mayland, and Crixſetts, of the Biſhop of London as of his Caſtle of Stortford (d).——Edward Harrys Eſq; was poſſeſſed of it in 1574 (e). And——Sir William Harrys, Kt. at the time of his deceaſe 14 November 1616, held of the Biſhop of London, the maner of Stokes, Lutherns, Bykers, John Davis, Allgatts, Dykers, Davyes, and Butts, with appertenances; and lands and tenements called Culver-houſe land, Margaretts Crofts, and Wells, and divers other lands &c. in Alderne, alias Altherne, Maylond, Croxſey, otherwiſe Crixſeth, &c. belonging to this maner.——Sir Arthur Harrys Kt. his ſon, ſucceeded him: and was ſucceeded by his ſon ——Sir Cranmer Harrys, Kt. (f). A particular account of the Harrys Family will be given under the next pariſh of Crickſea.

The Maner of HAYRONS, is the third Maner in this pariſh: Derived probably from that of Euſtace, and ſo named from an owner.

There were Maners of the ſame name in Danbury and High Eſtre. See the other Volume, p. 28. 456.

We have but a ſlender account of this eſtate.

Antony Higham Eſq; had it in 1540 (*).

Bartholomew Averell, Gent. mentioned above, p. 112. 266. 316. &c. held this maner called Herons Counteſbridge, and a tenement named Kings and Widdow-croft, in Althorne, Mayland, and Lachindon, of the maner of Coryngham-hall, in fealty, by ſocage, and rent of 13 s. 4 d. Alſo a meſſuage called Chamberlaynes, in Althorne, of John Lord Darcy, as of his maner of Southminſter-hall, in fealty. He dyed 14 May 1562, and Mary Sammes; Grace; and Elizabeth, Averell, were his three daughters, and coheirs. In another place it is ſaid that he dyed 14 May 1564, leaving —— Bartholomew his ſon and heir (g).

Benjamin King, is the next poſſeſſor upon record. He held the maner of Counteſbridge, alias Herons, with appertenances, in Althorne, Mayland, and Lachingdon, of the maner of Coringham: and departing this life 16 May 1628, was ſucceeded by his ſon ——John King, who dyed 14 July 1634, leaving——Thomas King Eſq; his couſin and next heir (h).

Althorn-Barns, which we ſuppoſe is this eſtate, was purchaſed by Mr. Thomſon of London, Turkey-merchant. He had three ſons, Chriſtopher, of Halſted and Wethersfield; John; and Adam: to the two youngeſt he left this eſtate, and to their heirs.—John, ſon of John, ſold his moiety to Mr. Harris, Sollicitor in Chancery.—Stephen Thomſon, as far as we can learn, is the preſent poſſeſſor. The Houſe ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

Butts-cliffs; and Bridge-marſh, are in this pariſh.

John Stephen held, in 1574, meſſuages and lands here called Gibbes or Piggells, Margaretts croft, Capells, Normans, Sampſons, Saltpreſs, Kings, Beavys, Steers, Webbs, &c. (i).

Here is a Fair June 5.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. In a ſmall ſpire ſhingled are 3 Bells.

This Church did anciently belong to the Cathedral of St. Paul's; but, after the foundation of the Monaſtery of St. Oſith, Gilbert Foliot, biſhop of London, transferred it, by agreement, as well as that of Mayland, to the ſaid Monaſtery. And K. Henry III. confirmed the agreement, by a Charter dated 11 September, 1268. The Rectory being appropriated to that Houſe, a Vicarage was ordained and endowed between the years 1222, and 1228; and the Rectory, with the Advowſon of the Vicarage, continued in St. Oſith's Monaſtery, till its diſſolution. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted both to Sir Richard Riche (k). In his Family they remained till about 1593, when they came to the Wiſemans of Mayland, then to Duncombe, and to Samuel King, Gent. Next to George Nelthorp Eſq; adjoins on the South to the river Crouch; and is ſuppoſed to have been ſo named from the two Saxon words Cꞃecca a creek, and ꞅæ, the ſea; it lying near the creek of the ſea at the mouth of the ſaid river, for which reaſon Norden ſtyles it Chrouchefee.

15 CRICKSEY,

It is otherwiſe written in records, Cricchefeia, Crickſey, Crixſey, Crixheth, Crixſeth, Chrikſea, Crickeſley, Crykeſey, Croxſey, Crekeſhuth, and Kryxhithe.

The owner of this place in Edward the Confeſſor's reign was Aluuard: It was held by Moduin at the time of the Survey [P].

Here is only one Maner.

Crickſea-hall is near the eaſt end of the Church; and Crickſea Place about three quarters of a mile ſouth-eaſt of the ſame.

After Moduin we have no account of the poſſeſſors of this eſtate till 1320, when John de Brianzon held of John de Chanceux 20 acres of the land called Crickſeth, which had been William le Smyth's; by the ſervice of 4s. a year. And of William Senaunt 15 acres (l).

In 1375, the Lord Walter Fitz-Walter held the maner of Crixeth of the King as of the Honor of Reyleigh by knight's ſervice. And he held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1386. As did his ſon —— Walter Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1407, or 1408 (m).

Next, in 1498, Thomaſine Hopton held the maner of Crixhethall of Thomas Darcye Eſq; (n) as of his maner of Canindon; and Robert Darcye, at the time of his deceaſe 24 April 1516, held the maner of Crykeſey, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the King, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (o).

It continued longeſt in the Harris Family; who had a large brick Houſe here, in a pleaſant Park, well ſtored with timber. They were deſcended from William Harris of Prittlewell in this County. He married Anne, daughter of . . . Jernegan, and had —— Arthur Harrys of Prittlewell; who, by Joanna his wife, daughter of Thomas Percy, ſecond ſon of Henry Earl of Northumberland, had —— William Harrys of South-minſter, that held the maner of Crixſettshall of the Lord Riche, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and ſuit at the Court of the ſaid Honor from month to month; beſides many other eſtates (p) [Q]. He dyed 21 September 1555; having had three wives; 1. Joanna, daughter and coheir of John Smyth, of Norton. 2. Joanna, daughter of . . . Cooke, of Bocking, 3. Anne Rutter. By the firſt he had William his ſon and heir, and Vincent, of Maldon. By the ſecond, he had Arthur Harrys, of Woodham Mortimer and Crickſea. William the eldeſt ſon is not recorded to have enjoyed this maner, but only 23 acres of arable and paſture, and 20 of wood, called Cryxſeth-hide; a meſſuage called the New houſe, and three acres of land, in Crixſeth: and the great houſe in Pritwell; a tenement in Rochford ſtyled Stebbyns; and other eſtates in Hockly, South-Fambridge, Leigh; eſpecially in Southminſter, 23 acres parcel of the maner of Rattleborough, 102 acres of paſture named Sheepcote and Lodgelades, and 128 acres of meadow and paſture called Highfeild (q). The other ſon, —— Arthur Harrys Eſq; of Woodham Mortimer and Crickſea, above-mentioned, held the maner of Crickſey, alias Crickſetts, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of this Church (r). See above, p. 342. He married Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Waldegrave of Smalbridge, and dying 18 June 1597, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Sir William Harrys, or Herris, who held the maner of Crixſey, alias Crixſeth, with all its rights, members, and appertenances, and divers meſſuages, lands, &c. in this pariſh, and Althorn, and Burnham; and the Advowſon of this Church; of the Lord Hunſdon, as of his Honor of Raleigh. Departing this life 14 November 1616, he left, by Alice his wife daughter of Thomas Smyth of Weſthanger in Kent, —— John, his ſon and heir, and 4 daughters. John had 3 ſons, Arthur, of Crickſey; William, of Lincolns-inn; Thomas: and Alice, wife of Sir Henry Mildmay of Graces. —— Sir Arthur Harrys, the eldeſt ſon, married two wives; 1. Anne ſole daughter and heir of Robert Cranmer of Charſted in Kent. 2. Anne, ſole daughter of Sir Nicolas Salter of Enfield in Middleſex, widow of Sir Henry Bowyer of Denham, Kt. By the ſecond he had Salter Harrys, father of Edward, of Southminſter. And by the firſt he had Cranmer, and John. He departed this life 9 January 1632, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Sir Cranmer Harrys Kt. aged 22 years (s). He married Martha, daughter and coheir of Daniel Holford, of Weſt-Thurrock Eſq; and had by her two daughters, Anne, and Mary [R].

It was afterwards purchaſed by Thomas Weſtern, of Rivenhall, Eſq; and is now in his deſcendents. [See in the other Volume, p. 147.]

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. There is no Steple, nor any Bell, unleſs one.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner: and as ſuch in the gift of the Families of Fitz-Walter, Darcy, Harrys, Bowyer, and Weſtern.

16. BURNHAM

is the South-eaſt corner of this Hundred, adjoyning to the river Crouch, where it diſcharges itſelf into the ſea: and that gave riſe to the name; the Saxon word Buꞃn, or Bẏꞃn, ſignifying a torrent, a violent ſtream, and ham, a village, or habitation.

Aluuart, a freeman, was owner of this pariſh in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. At the time of the Survey, Ralph Baignard held it in demeſne, with other lands that had belonged before to ten freemen [S].

In this pariſh are now two Maners. 1. The maner of Burnham, with Mangax. 2. The maner of Eaſtwick and Weſtwick.

The Maner of BURNHAM.

Burnham-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands a little way north from the Church.

How the poſterity of Ralph Baynard loſt his Barony, which was given to Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Gilbert, is ſeen above, p. 313. 320. and in the other Volume, p. 36. 427. 539.

This lordſhip came, as Dunmow to Fitz-Walter, to Radcliffe, then to Sir Henry Mildmay.

In 1285, Robert Fitz-Walter held the maners of Woodham-Walter and Burnham, in capite, of the King, as an appertenance to his Barony, which was worth 100l. a year (t). In 1386, ——Walter Fitz-Water held this maner in capite, as parcel of the Barony of Fitz-Water (u).——Elizabeth, widow of Sir Walter Fitz-Walter, held this maner for life; ſhe dyed in 1465; and Anne, her ſecond daughter and coheir, brought this eſtate to her huſband, Thomas Ratcliffe, Eſq; (w). From whom it paſſed to his deſcendents, Viſcounts Fitz-Walter, and Earls of Suſſex.

Frances, daughter of Henry Earl of Suſſex, marrying Sir Thomas Mildmay, of Moulſham-hall, Kt. it came in her right, after the death of Robert Ratcliffe, Earl of Suſſex, in 1629, to Sir Henry Mildmay, and next to——Benjamin, and——Charles, Barons Fitz-Walter, and to——Benjamin, created Viſcount Harwich, and Earl Fitz-Walter. The latter dying 29 February 1756, without iſſue, left this, among his other conſiderable Eſtates to his kinſman

William Mildmay, Eſq; now Sir William Mildmay Bart. of Moulſham-hall. [See in the other Volume, p. 2.] This is the only part of the ancient Lords Fitz-Walters Eſtates, which he hath.

Mangax, alias Mangapp, is ſaid to be the maner-houſe, where the Court is called, and adjourned thence to Burnham-Hall.

In the Court-rolls it is ſtyled Burnham with Mangapp; and Burnham Canons [T].

The Royalty of the River, about 18 miles in length, and a mile over, belongs to Sir William Mildmay.

Under Robert Lord Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, Sir Thomas Barnard, or Baynard, held 3 parts of a fee in Burnham. And, beſides that, at the time of his deceaſe in 1344, he held of John Lord Fitz-Walter an incloſed marſh by the ſervice of the ſixth part of a knight's fee.——Joane his widow held the ſame marſh in 1349.——John Baynard was their ſon and heir (x). But what Baynard held is not a Maner.

The Maners of EASTWICK and WESTWICK belonged to the Priory of Dunmow, and were undoubtedly given to that Houſe by the foundreſs Juga Baynard, or ſome of the Fitz-Walter family. By name they do not occurr in Domeſday-book, but are reaſonably ſuppoſed to be what is entered there under the appellation of Weneſwic [U]; and belonged to Geffrey de Magnaville. They are ſtyled in records ſometimes half a fee; and ſometimes one fee and three quarters. For inſtance, In 1328 the Prior of Dunmow held half a fee in Burnham under Robert Fitz-Walter: and, in 1392, one fee, and 3 parts of a fee under Walter Fitz-Walter (y).

After the diſſolution K. Henry VIII. granted theſe Maners, in 1543, to Sir Richard Riche (z) [W]. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1566, he held the maners of Weſtwick hall, Eaſtwick-hall, and Baynards and other lands and tenements in Burnham, of the Queen, in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. His grandſon——Robert, Earl of Warwick, who dyed 24 March, 1618, held alſo the ſame (a). After the death of Charles Earl of Warwick in 1673, they came to one of his coheirs,

The Rt. Hon. Robert Earl of Mancheſter. Of his ſon——Charles, Earl of Mancheſter, the Maner was purchaſed by the Rt. Hon.

Benjamin Lord Fitz Walter. And the demeſnes of Weſtwick, alias Coney-hall, by Mr. Skynner, of White Chapel, apothecary: and thoſe of Eaſtwick by Platt Diſbrow, of Downham Eſq; They both belong now to Sir William Mildmay.

Here is another Maner, called

The Maner of Warners, alias Holywell, which belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Earl Tilney.

The Court is called under a tree. It was ſtyled Hallywell marſh, and Twyſelworth-marſh in Burnham, and granted to Sir Richard Riche, in 1539 being 600 acres (b).

Iſaac-Martin Rebow Eſq, Mr. Jeremiah Rowley; Jacob Hughs; John Gowlet, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The Town of Burnham is near the water, about a mile ſouth from the Church.

In 1348, John Fitz Walter had the grant of a Market at his maner of Burnham upon the Tueſday every week; as alſo one Fair yearly upon September 13, 14, 15, 16 (c). The Fairs now are April 25. and September 4.

Charities.

About Forty two pounds a year in charities are ſaid to belong to this Town.

A Farm of 90 l. a year belongs to a free-ſchool in Kent.

Hide-Croft, worth 10 s. a year, was given to ſome religious uſe; but not known what.

Daniel Williams, D D. founder of the Library in Red-Croſs-Street, London, gave by will, 26 June 1711, all his Houſes in Burnham, to Robert Mecham Senr. for the uſe of the Preſbyterian Meeting Houſe.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body tyled, and north and ſouth aiſles leaded. It had the loftieſt Tower in this Hundred, with ſix Bells, but blown down in the great wind: It was a ſea-mark. 'Tis ſince rebuilt, and hath only 5 Bells.

This Church was given, in 1155, by Walter, Fitz-Robert, ſon of Richard Fitz Richard, and grandſon of Richard Fitz Gilbert, to the Priory of Dunmow. A Vicarage was erected before the year 1243, for then its rights were confirmed by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's (d).

At the Diſſolution, the Rectory; and Advowſon, of the Vicarage, which had been in the Priory, were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1536, to Robert Ratcliffe Earl of Suſſex (e). So that they returned to the ſame family from whence they originally came out.

They now belong to Sir William Mildmay, Bart.

17. SOUTH-MINSTER

lies north of Burnham, and South of Tillingham and Dengey: and, on account of the Church's ſituation with regard to theſe two laſt Pariſhes, may have received the name of South-Minſtre, i. e. South-Church. It is otherwiſe written Sudmanſtra, and Sudmynſter.

Before, and after the Conqueſt, this was the Biſhop of London's land, or eſtate. Fifteen freemen held part of it under him. K. Cnute took away this Maner, but William the Biſhop recovered it in the Conqueror's time [X].

This Pariſh was divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The Maner of South-minſter. 2. The Maner of Cage.

The Maner of SOUTH-MINSTER.

South-minſter-hall ſtands a little way eaſt ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

This lordſhip continued in the See of London, till 1550, when Dr. Nicolas Ridley, then Biſhop, paſſed it to K. Edward VI. who granted it, 16 April the ſame year, with Lullingtons and Writtells, to

The latter Thomas Lord Darcy by licenſe dated 3 May 1585, ſold the maner, of South Minſter, and 200 meſſuages, 100 cottages, 100 tofts, one wind-mill, ſix dove-houſes, 20 gardens, 4000 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 2000 of paſture, 500 of wood, 1000 of Moor, 4000 of marſh, 5 l rent. and a moiety of the Church, to Thomas Sutton Eſq; (h) who ſettled them upon his rich and uſeful foundation of the Charter-houſe. The leaſe-hold rents of this Maner were then 921 l. 3 s. 4 d. and the cuſtomary rents 38 l. 8 s. 3 d. a year (i).

The Maner of CAGE.

Is derived from the Biſhop's, and ſeems to have been what the fifteen Free-men held.

The manſion-houſe is near a mile weſt from the Church.

This maner was ſeveral years in the Fitz-Walter family. Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, held in the village of Suthminſtre, of the Biſhop of London, 100 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 15 of paſture, and 6 l. rent of aſſize, paying the Biſhop 18 s. per ann. (k). This went in the Family of Fitz-Walter, down to the reign of K. Henry V. Namely in Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1375, and 1386. in——Walter, who dyed in 1407. in——Humfrey, &c. (l).

Next, Roger Darcy Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe, 3 September 1508, held the maner of Cage of the Biſhop of London, as of his Caſtle of Stortford.——Thomas, his ſon and heir, was but two years old (m).

This Eſtate was next in the Harrys Family.

William Harrys, who had the maner of Cage [Z], dyed 21 September 1555, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——William Harrys Eſq; (n). One of his ſons,——Edward Harrys held it in 1574 (o). He married, firſt, Elizabeth daughter of Sir Francis Barrington; and to his ſecond wife, Anne daughter of Henry Joſceline, of Torell's hall, widow of Sir Robert Lee. By this laſt he had, Arthur, who dyed 1 June 1588, and Anne. By the firſt he had——Sir Francis Harrys, of Southminſter, whoſe wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Sulyard of Flemyngs in Runwell: and by her he had one daughter, married to . . . Laurence, M. D.

Sir John Leman, Kt. born at Sallingham in Norfolk, and Lord Mayor of London in 1616, was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate. He held the maner of Cage, alias Cages, and 4 meſſuages, 4 gardens, 4 orchards, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 250 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 7 l. rent, ſaid to lye in this pariſh, Aſheldham, Mayland, Althorn, Steple, Burnham and Dengey, of the Biſhop of London, as above, by the yearly rent of 4 s. and departing this life March 26, 1632, aged 88, was ſucceeded by his couſin and next heir——William Leman Gent. (p).——Mrs. Mary Leman, daughter of Mr. Robert Leman, citizen of London, was lady of this maner in 1635; the demeſnes and quit-rents were then 80 l. per ann.

About the beginning of this century, this eſtate was in Thomas Renda, Eſq; of Wallingford-Caſtle, Repreſentative in Parliament for that Burgh in 1700, 1701, 1702. 1708. 1710. and 1713. He had one daughter married to

Richard Bigge Eſq; Repreſentative alſo in Parliament for that Burgh in 1713. He lived at Bear-court in Pangborn in Berkſhire; and left one daughter married to John Cottingham, of Wallingford Eſq; who dyed 4 November 1745.

Mr. Robert Johnſon, corn-factor in London, bought it ſoon after: He departing this life in 1749, it came to his ſon.

The RAY, a meſſuage and marſh in this pariſh, belonging to St. Oſith, or ſome other Religious Houſe, was granted, in 1539, by K. Henry VIII. to Thomas Lord Cromwell (q). On the 30th of January 1540, it was aſſigned by the ſame King to his forſaken Queen Anne of Cleve.

Ray-wic, part of it we ſuppoſe, belongs to the Charter-houſe. And Mr. Ham Stacey; James Wilkins; Samuel Mullings; John Woer, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Plumborough-Marſh, is part of the endowment of Chelmsford-Free-School. See in the other Volume, p 5]

Richard de Graveſend held it in 1304, of Nicolas de Wokingdon, by the ſervice of one pound of Cummin (r).

Mr. Knewſtub, Rector of Cockfield in Suffolk, ſometime Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, gave an Annuity of 11 l. per ann. out of lands, called Squires-lands, in Southminſter and Steeple, 20 s. to the College, and 10 l. toward the Exhibition of two poor Scholars.

Belmeis, his nephew, Biſhop of London, in 1151, by advice of Theobald Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and other Biſhops, and with conſent of his Chapter, aſſigned this Church to the Treaſurer of St. Paul's and his Succeſſors (s), which was confirmed by K. Henry II. But Gilbert Foliot, Biſhop of London, transferred it again to the Abbey of St. Oſith. A Vicarage was erected and endowed by William de Sancta Maria Biſhop of London in 1219; the Advowſon of which, together with the Rectory or great Tithes, continued in the ſaid Convent till the ſuppreſſion.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted the Rectory of Southmynſter, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to Sir Richard Riche (t). His ſon, —— Robert Lord Riche alienated them, 2 September 1575, to Edward Heron Eſq; and Francis Albany, Gent. (u). The 1ſt of January 1598, William Wiſeman Eſq; conveyed the Rectory, or Parſonage, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, to Thomas Sutton Eſq; who ſettled them upon his foundation of the Charter-houſe.

Here are three Fairs, viz. 3 days before Eaſter, 9 days before Whitſunday, and September 29.

18. ASHELDHAM, lies north of Southminſter. The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Aſſeldham, Aſsheldham, Aſhelden, Asſheden, Aſhdon, Aſheldon, Aſhildham, Aſſildeham, Axildeham, Eſſeldeſham, Heſſildeſham. It ſeems to have been taken from a perſon's name, and ham, habitation, or village.

No ſuch name as Aſheldham occurrs in Domeſday-book, and therefore I take it to have been what is there ſtyled Acleta. It had belonged to Modinc, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and, at the time of the Survey was holden by Eudo Dapifer, and his under tenant Richard [A].

In this pariſh are three Maners. 1. The maner of Aſheldham. 2. . . . that of New-hall. 3. Bodenyks maner.

The Maner of ASHELDHAM.

Aſheldham-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands a little way ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

We have no account of the poſſeſſors of this eſtate till the year 1332, when it was in the Family de Horkeſleigh, of Little Horkeſleigh, more particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 234. William de Horkeſleigh, who dyed in 1332, and Emma his wife, held the maner of Aſſeldham, and certain tenements in Wermedford, viz. 1 meſſuage, 90 acres of arable, 1 acr. of meadow, 6 of paſture, 24 of wood, and 40s. rent, called le Woodhall, of the King in capite, as of the Honor of Reyley, by knight's ſervice. His heir was his nephew

John de Roos (w), grandſon of Robert de Roos and Aleſia daughter and heir of Sir Robert Aſheldham. [See in the other Volume, p. 234. 536.] Sir John de Roos dyed in 1373, and Aleſia his wife in 1375 (x). He and Aleſia his wife, beſides their ſon John who dyed before them, had a daughter named Elene, which became heir to her nephew. She brought this eſtate in marriage to Sir Geffrey de Brockhole; and departed this life in 1419, leaving two daughters coheirs, Joane, and Margery (y).

But, before that, this Eſtate was in the Bourchier Family. For Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, who dyed 18 May 1409, held the maner of Aſheldham of the Counteſs of Hereford, as of the Honor of Mandeville, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee. —— Idonea, his widow, held the ſame at the time of her deceaſe, 12 Septemb. 1410, of the King as of the Honor of Reiley (z). —— Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two huſbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart. She dyed 1 July 1433 (a). Then it came to —— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Eſſex. He held it of the Biſhop of London (b). From his grandſon —— Henry, Earl of Eſſex, it deſcended to —— Anne, Marchioneſs of Northampton, wife of Sir William Parr, and only daughter of the laſt Henry. [See in the other Volume, p. 254, 255.]

In 1571, Novemb. 25. Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Aſheldham-hall, and Coots Marſh in Aſheldham, to Walter Devereux, Viſcount Hereford, heir at law to Anne Marchioneſs of Northampton (c). See above, p. 203.

Heſter Conham, widow, was lady of this maner in 1635.

It belonged lately to Mr. James Marrener, a ſtationer in Fenchurch-ſtreet, London. He dyed 1 March 1745-6. Before his death he ſold this eſtate to George Wegg Eſq; of Colcheſter.

This belonged, as well as the former, to Sir Geffrey de Brockhole; and deſcended to his two daughters and coheirs, Joane, and Margery.——Joane had three huſbands, Philip Kedington, Thomas Aſpall, and Robert Armburgh, but no iſſue by any of them. She dyed in 1443, poſſeſſed of the maner of Newhall in Aſhildham. ——Margery was married to John Sumpter, of Colcheſter, Gent. and had——John Sumpter, her ſon and heir. He held a moiety of the maner of Newhalle in Aſhildham, of the Honor of Reyley; and departed this life in 1425, many years before his aunt Joane, leaving Criſtina, and Elen, his daughters and coheirs (d).

The next poſſeſſor upon record was Sir Ralph Warren, Lord Mayor of London in 1536, and one of the Sheriffs in 1528. He was grandſon of William Warren, of Fering; and, beſides this, had the maners of Low Leyton, Great Eaſton, Newport Pond, and Claybury, in this County. [See above, p. 7. 23. and in the other Volume, p. 434. 585.] He had two wives, Chriſtian, and Joane (e). Departing this life 11 July 1553, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Richard Warren, who, as well as his father held this maner of the King and Queen as of their Hundred of Denſey, in free ſocage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 4d. Probably he had no iſſue; for, at his deceaſe, 25 March 1597, he was ſucceeded by his ſiſter Johanna's ſon, Oliver Crumwell, or Cromwell, of Huntingdon, Eſq; (f).

The 20th of April 1598, he ſold it, with Great Eaſton, to Henry Maynard Eſq; created a knight 7 May 1603. [See in the other Volume, p. 431, 432.] At the time of his death 11 May 1610, he held this maner of John Lord Hunſdon, as of his Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and the ſeventh part of another, and homage, fealty, &c. (g). ——Suſanna, Lady Maynard, and her ſon, William Lord Maynard, 27 April 1621, conveyed this eſtate to

Sir Henry Mildmay, of Graces Kt. who dyed 9 October 1639. By his will, dated 8 May 1637, he gave this maner to his ſon——Henry Mildmay Eſq; and the heirs male of his body. He built a good houſe here, in which he reſided: and departed this life 13 December 1692, leaving four daughters coheirs. ——Frances, the third daughter, wife of Chriſtopher Fowler, had this eſtate. [See in the other Volume, p. 25.] She and her huſband ſold it about the year 1705.

It belongs now to George Wegg Eſq; another maner in this pariſh, was ſo ſtyled from John Bodenyk, who had an eſtate here in 1399 (h). This was undoubtedly taken from one of the two others, upon the diviſion between the heireſſes of Brockhole.

BODENYKS,

In 1537, Sir Thomas Bedingfeild, ſon and heir of Edward, held in capite the maner of Bodnek, with appertenances, in Aſheldon, alias Aſheden. Thomas Bedingfeild, Cl. was his brother and heir (i).

Roger Higham Eſq; who dyed 29 Auguſt 1557, held the maner of Bodnecke, of the Queen, as of the Honor of Rayleigh, worth 18l.——William was his ſon and heir. He held alſo 2 meſſuages, and 170 acres of arable, and 10 of marſh, called Forſters, lying in South-Fambridge, and Aſſingdon; and Jenkin Maldon (k). [See above, p. 330.]

Sir Peter Vanlore was owner of this eſtate in 1635.

Heſter Conham, widow, had it afterwards. She had 2 daughters, one married to . . . Poore Eſq; of the Inner Temple; the other to . . . . White.

It belongs now to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital.

A tenement here called Moynes was granted, in 1543, to John Wiſeman, and his heirs (l). It belonged to the Abbey of Bilegh. See above, p. 334.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Laurence, was given by Robert ſon of Godebold to the Priory at Little Horkſley in this County (m). The great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained of which the Biſhop of London reſerved the Collation to himſelf, and it hath continued in his ſucceſſors ever ſince.

The Rectory and great Tithes were given, upon the Suppreſſion, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who are now the Impropriators.

In the Church are two Bells, or only one.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 415l.

lies near the Sea-coaſt between South-minſter and Tillingham. Danes-ig, or Danes-iſland, was the origin of the name, as I have ſhewn above, p. 327.

Siric had this eſtate in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; at the time of the Survey it was held by Odo Biſhop of Bayeux, and a Knight, or Soldier, under him [B]. And other lands here belonged to the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy.

Dengey-hall ſtands near the weſt end of the Church.

Odo's eſtates being forfeited, [as is related at large, above, p. 196.] this, among the reſt, became veſted in the Crown.

When, and by what King, after the forfeiture, and to whom, this Eſtate was at firſt granted, doth not appear; but in K. Henry the IId's time, Roger de Cramavill held two parts of a knight's fee in Daneſie of the Honor of Peverell of London (n).——Henry de Cram'avile, moſt probably his ſon, had this lordſhip in 1284. He dyed in 1298, and held the maner of Daneſey, and Advowſon of the Church, in capite, by the ſervice of one Serjeancy to the Caſtle of Dover, yearly payment of 10s. the ward of it, and ſuit at the King's Hundred Court at Daneſey, from three weeks to three weeks: And thirty acres in the ſame vill, called Writheſland, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of 4*s. per ann.*——Ela was his ſiſter and heir (o).

But his widow, Joanna de Cram'avill, held a third part of it in dower, namely 30 acres of paſture and marſh, of Nicolas at More, till her deceaſe in 1314 (p).

John de la Mare, who moſt probably married Ela aforeſaid, dyed in 1313 poſſeſſed of the maner of Dangey, which he held of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of paying for the ward of Dover-caſtle one mark every 20 weeks. He held alſo of this maner, lands in Bradewell called Pilton, by the ſervice of 3s. a year (q). Elianor, moſt probably a miſtake for Ela, wife of John de la Mare, held this maner of Daneſey, with the member of Pilton, by the ſervice aforeſaid, at the time of her death in 1324. Her daughter

Florence, wife of Philip de Orby, was her next heir (r). She was afterwards remarried to Nicolas Fraunceys, and held the maner of Daneſeye of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Hagenet, by the ſervice of ward at Dover-caſtle, till her deceaſe in 1344.——Sir John de Orreby, her ſon by her firſt huſband, was her heir. He held, jointly with his wife Margaret, this maner of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Dover: and, at the time of his deceaſe in 1353, left John his ſon and heir, then 3 years old; who dyed young, or without iſſue; and a daughter named

Joanna. Margaret, her mother, dyed in 1369 (s). Joanna was married to Henry de Percy, ſenior, and had an only daughter

Mary, married to Sir John de Roos, of Hamlake. She dying 25 Auguſt 1394, without iſſue, this eſtate came to

John de la Mare, citizen of London, deſcended from William, brother of John de la Mare above-mentioned (t). But it ſeems the Crown had ſeized this eſtate upon the Rebellion of the Percies in 1403. For John of Lancaſter, Duke of Bedford, third ſon of K. Henry IV. at the time of his deceaſe, 14 September 1435, held the maner of Dange-hall, and a tenement called Dangebrigge, which the King his father had granted him in 1404, being lands forfeited by Henry de Percy for Rebellion (u).

By the preſentations to the Living this maner appears to have been in the Woodvile family from 1445, to 1459.

This Eſtate was next in the family of Gate. Sir Geffrey Gate, who dyed in 1477, held the maner of Dangehall, in Dange, or Danſey, and Bradwell, of the King, as of the Barony of Peverell, which was parcel of the Honor of the Caſtle of Dover, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee.——William was his ſon and heir. He departed this life 28 September 1485, leaving——Geffrey, his ſon, knighted afterwards (w). [See in the other Volume, p. 146. 454. 456.]

How it came again to the Crown, doth not appear. But K. Henry VII. founding the Hoſpital of the Savoy, in the Strand, London, endowed it with the maner of Dengey, and Advowſon of the Church, and the Maſters and Chaplains of the Hoſpital preſented to the Living from 1504 to 1535.

The Hoſpital was ſuppreſſed by K. Edward VI. in 1551, and this maner granted by him, with other lordſhips in this County, firſt to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and afterwards, in 1553, to the Mayor and Commonalty of London. Qu. Mary reſtored it to the Savoy Hoſpital, 3 November 1556 (x). But it was ſuppreſſed again, and fell to the Crown.

Qu. Elizabeth granted it, 23 January 1560, to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; His Family have remained poſſeſſed of it ever ſince: namely the Rt. Hon. Thomas, and Charles, Viſcounts Fanſhaw, Simon Fanſhaw Eſq; &c. The Fanſhaw Family are originally of Dronfield in Derbyſhire, where many of them lye buried.

Out of this eſtate is paid 20l. a year to the Savoy. [See above, p. 4.] [C].

[C] Mr. Jekyll found this eſtate in Francis Witham, and in William, ſon of Francis; then in William Smith of Creſſing-Temple, Eſq; who, with Thomas Smith, preſented to the Living in 1613: But the London Regiſtry ſtiles them only farmers of the Maner. See Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 212.

This is the part that belonged to the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy [D].

Gilbert Bacon, from whom it took its name, was poſſeſſed of it in 1282, holding it moſt probably under the Abbey. That year he obtained a licenſe from Henry de Crem'avile, lord of the capital maner, and patron of the Church, to build a free Chapel here. —— Dunefrid Bacon, ſon of Gilbert, granted in 1302, this whole maner, with the Advowſon, or Portion, of the tythes belonging thereto, to

Ralph Bygood. And, in 1378, Henry Folvill releaſed to——Walter Bygood, the ſaid maner, and the advowſon of a certain Chantry there. Walter held, jointly with Iſabell his wife, this maner; and the advowſon of the Chantry, of the Abbot of Bileigh, by the ſervice of 16d. a year. He dyed in 1398.——William Bigod, was his ſon and heir. But we hear no more of him (y). Iſabell his mother, widow of Walter aforeſaid, was remarried to John Doreward, who kept a Court here 22 February 1399. She dyed in 1417, holding this maner of the Prior of Takele, by fealty, and ſervice of 10 marks per annum. Her heirs were,

Catharine one of her daughters, then wife of Robert Hunt; and Iſabella, daughter of another daughter of hers named Margaret (z).

Iſabella, was married to Thomas Darell, or Dayrell, Gent. In the mean time, Richard Fox, who dyed in 1434, held the third part of this maner, by what right doth not appear, and left a daughter, named Anne. His widow Joane, remarried to John Hotoft, held this third part at the time of her deceaſe in 1445 (a). [See in the other Volume, p. 192. 426.]

To return to Hunt and Darell. In 1441, the former covenanted, by indenture, with the latter not to alienate or diſcontinue the maner of Bacon, and the third part of the Advowſon of a Free Chapel, or Prebend, in the Church of Danſey: And, in 1445, they, and their wives, demiſed this maner, excepting Bacons portion, to Richard Pinder.

In 1465, June 29, Simon Harevy, or Hareby, kept his firſt court here: As did Iſabell his widow 21 September 1473. And in 1481, Richard Baxter enfeoffed Iſabell Harvey, and others, in a moiety of this maner, with the Advowſon of the Chapel, or Chantry. Iſabell was remarried to Thomas Daniell, or Darrell, and, at the time of her deceaſe, 20 February, 1489, held this maner of Bakons, with appertenances, in Danyſey, of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice, then worth 20l. a year. —— Thomas Darrell, her ſon and heir, was 48 years old (b). He dyed 1 June 1491, holding this eſtate of the King, as above: But——Thomas his ſon and heir, held this maner, and Advowſon of the Chapel or Chantry of the Prior of Takeletheth, as in right of his Priory. He dyed 1 June 1498, leaving, by Chriſtian his wife, two daughters, Beatrix, ſeven years old, and Anaſtatia two. —— Chriſtian, their mother, was remarried to Roger Bottyll Eſq; who kept a Court here 2 April 1500. She dyed 17 April 1508 (c). Of her two daughters, who had for their guardian Thomas Jermyn Eſq;

Beatrix was married to Robert Jermyn Eſq; third ſon of the ſaid Thomas Jermyn of Ruſhbrook Eſq; and Anaſtatia to Francis Jermyn Eſq; the ſecond ſon of the ſame: But neither of them had any iſſue. Francis granted his right in this maner to his brother, Robert, and Martin Boulton, Gent. 21 January 1514. On the 14th of April 1551, Robert Jermyn, brother and executor of Francis then deceaſed, in purſuance of his will, enfeoffed his kinſman —— Sir Ambroſe Jermyn in a moiety of this maner. And, 26 June 1552, Martin Bolton conveyed by deed his right in this maner to the ſaid Sir Ambroſe; who kept a Court here 12 May 1559. His ſecond ſon ——Ambroſe Jermyn Eſq; kept his firſt Court here 2 September 1577. By licenſe dated 2 September 1605 he alienated the maner of Bacons, with 12 meſſuages, to

Sir Thomas and Sir Henry Mildmay Kts. Sir Thomas, of Springfeild, at the time of his deceaſe 15 December 1612, held this maner, and lands and tenements in Danſey alias Dangie, Southmynſter, Aſheldame, and Tyllingham, of the King, in capite, by knight's ſervice. His grandſon——Thomas, the ſon of his eldeſt ſon William, was his heir (d). But his ſecond ſon——Sir Henry Mildmay, of Graces Kt. had this eſtate; and held Courts here 22 April 1617, and 22 September 1629. He dyed 9 October 1631. aged 61. His ſon——Henry Mildmay Eſq; commonly called Col. Mildmay, had it after him, and departed this life 3 December 1692, in the 73d year of his age. [See in the other Volume, p. 25.] He left five daughters coheirs, Mary, Lucy, Elizabeth, Frances, and Catharine. Before his deceaſe, in 1689, upon the marriage of Frances the fourth daughter with Chriſtopher Fowler, of London, merchant, the ſaid Henry Mildmay, and Mary his wife, and Mary and Frances, the daughters, conveyed this eſtate to Chriſtopher Fowler. In 1705, he conveyed it to

John Walter, and his heirs. And Walter, in 1707, to

Thomas Foulerton Eſq; of whom it was purchaſed in 1716 by

Mr. George Wegg, and it now belongs to his ſon——George Wegg Eſq;

BACONS PORTION.

We have ſeen above, that, in 1282, Gilbert Bacon obtained a licenſe from Henry de Crem'a-vile to build a free Chapel here, called in writings by the ſeveral names of Free Chapel, Chantry, and Prebend. He endowed it with a portion of the tithes ariſing from his eſtate, namely from Bacons farm, Hide, Landwic, Sherle, Eaſtware, and Moyle; for which the Portioniſt was to do part of the duty in the mother Church. The Portioniſt hath ſometimes received 10 l. a year; but by a Compoſition 16 April 1542, it was ſettled at 4 l. 8 s. a year; upon condition, that the Rector of Dengey ſhould adminiſter the Sacraments, and perform all eccleſiaſtical rites to the perſons holding thoſe lands (e). It is preſentative and inſtitutive, which is a great hardſhip for ſo ſmall a thing. The lords of the maner of Bacons are patrons.

20. TILLINGHAM

lies north of Dengey, along the Sea-coaſt. Part of the pariſh, eſpecially about the Church, ſtands high, and the roads are good, as is alſo the water, a thing not common hereabouts.

The name ſeems to be derived from the two Saxon words, Tilunᵹ, the ſame as tilling, huſbandry, and ham.

Theſe lands Æthelbert King of Kent gave to the Church of St. Paul's in London, which he had founded [E]. There is not the leaſt improbability in his having lands in Eſſex to give away; ſince according to Bede, 'that moſt potent 'King had extended his dominions as far as 'the great river Humber, by which the Southern 'Saxons were divided from the Northern [F].' And, indeed, the poor little Kingdom of Eſſex was too often ſwallowed up by its ambitious neighbours.

However, at the time of the Survey, the Church of St. Paul's held this maner [G], and it hath continued in it ever ſince.

Tillingham-hall is on the north ſide of the Church.

PAKKARDS is another Maner, of which the Houſe ſtands in this pariſh, but the greater part of the demeſnes are in Bradwell. William Felton, Gent. who dyed 23 December 1493, held this eſtate of the maner of Eaſt-hall in Bradwell. ——Edmund, his ſon, held the ſame in 1519, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Edmund, who departed this life 16 September 1570, leaving ——Thomas, his ſon and heir.

With it hath commonly gone a tenement named PERIE, ſometimes ſtyled a Maner.

William Haningfeild held it under the title of a Maner, in 1426, of the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls, London. The Felton family had it afterwards. And Sir Arthur, and Cranmer, Harris (g). [See above, p. 315. and in the other Volume, p. 36. 282. 323.]

TILLINGHAM-GRANGE is near two miles ſouth-eaſt from the Church, in the marſhes. In 1553, Thomas Cawſton held the maner of Grange and Mowicke, with appertenances in Tillingham and Dengey, of the Queen immediately, in capite, by knight's ſervice, worth 30 l. a year. He was burnt for hereſy (h), i. e. for being a Proteſtant. . . . Mowick ſeems to have been what is now called Midlins, about half-way between this and the Church. They belonged to the Fanſhaw family, and afterwards to Mr. Hollingſworth.

Merks, is a farm that belonged lately to Mr. Joſeph Franklin.

The Corps of the Prebends of Reculverland, and Wildland, lye in this pariſh. The firſt about a quarter of a mile from the Church; the other full half a mile. They have Court lete and Court Baron.—Two eſtates of 40 l. a year belong to that of Reculverland; And eſtates of 18 l. 14 l. 12 l. and 8 l. per ann. to the other.

The Corps of Eldland was alſo in this pariſh, if not loſt.

will dated 14 March 1652, ordered an Almſhouſe for four dwellers to be built in this pariſh, each of them to be ſingle, and to receive 5 l. a year. Lands tyed for the payment of it, are Midlins, 80 l. Samſoms, 20 l. Whotts marſh 20 l. and in Fryerning 30 l. a year. The feoffees are, the Vicar, who hath two votes, and eleven others, officers and chief inhabitants of this pariſh. The Almſhouſes ſtand behind the Hall-yard. He alſo gave to the Poor a bullock worth 5 l. at Chriſtmaſs, and another at Eaſter.

The Church, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of one pace with the Chancel, and neat. It had a ſouth aiſle, which being decayed occaſioned the rebuilding of the Church, in 1708, by a pound rate on the inhabitants. 'Tis handſomly pewed, and hath a gallery at the weſt end. In a ſtrong ſtone Tower are 5 Bells.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, are appropriated to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who are Ordinaries of this place it being of their peculiar juriſdiction, and alſo Patrons of the Vicarage.

Dr. William Clark, Dean of Wincheſter, and Vicar of Stepney, who had a Leaſe from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, of Tillingham-hall with the demeſne lands, and of the great Tythes, and the marſhes called Hellwick, Middlewick, and Weatherwick, by his will, dated 22 April 1679, deviſed the clear profits of that Eſtate for Augmenting Ten ſmall Vicarages, or other Eccleſiaſtical benefices with cure; to pay unto the Incumbents of each of them thirty pounds a year; and the Augmentations to be in ſuch pariſhes where the Impropriations are in the hands of lay-men, and if it may be in market towns, or populous pariſhes. The Benefices he himſelf named, were, the Vicarage of Buckingham, the Rectory of the Abbey Church of St. Albans, ſome convenient Church in Maldon, and Stony-Stratford in Buckinghamſhire. Dedham, and Hatfeild Regis, have been ſince added by the truſtees, and ſome other Churches. But by the Leſſors having much raiſed their fine, and through other loſſes, the rents are much ſunk.

Sir William Mauduit, for himſelf and Amabil his wife, and for his heirs and the ſouls of all his anceſtors, gave four acres of land in Weſtfeild in this pariſh to the Church of St. Paul; and Geffrey de Luci, then Dean, and the Chapter, granted him leave, conſidering the difficulty of acceſs to the pariſh Church in the winter time, to build a Chapel in his Court of Colverſhyde, for his own uſe, under ſuch conditions as private Chapels are wont to be built (i).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 126 l. 2 s. 0 d.

21. St. LAURENCE, is weſt of Tillingham, having on the north Maldon-river, or Blackwater-bay.

The dedication of the Church to St. Laurence gave name to this pariſh.

It doth not occurr by that name in Domeſday-book, but only under the general one of Niuueland; divided afterwards into Weſt Newland, and Eaſt Newland.

The Priory of the Holy Trinity, or Chriſt's Church, in Canterbury, held Weſt New-land before and after the Conqueſt. Ingwar was poſſeſſed of Eaſt Newland, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, and Ralph brother of Ilger held it at the time of the Survey.

Theſe were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of St. Laurence-hall. 2. The maner of Weſt Newland. 3. . . . that of Eaſt Newland.

The Maner of St. Laurence.

St. Laurence-hall ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

The ancienteſt owners upon record of lands in St. Laurence, as a Maner, were Robert Fitz-Walter, William Gernon, and the heirs of Tolleſhunt-Tregoz. For Roger Baynard, who dyed in 1295, held in St. Laurence, of Robert Fitz-Walter, 30 acres of arable, by the rent of 2 s. 8 d. and 13 s. 4 d. rent of aſſiſe; and of William Gernoun, 30 acres; and of the heirs of Tolleſhunt Tregoz, 60 acres of arable, and 1 marſh. His nephew——Thomas Baynard was his heir (k).——Joane, widow of Thomas, held of John Fitz-Walter, by knight's ſervice, the reverſion of the maner of St. Laurence, which Roger Baynard, and Alice his ſiſter, enjoyed for their lives (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 176.]

The next poſſeſſor upon record was Sir John Shaa, Lord Mayor of London in 1501. At the time of his deceaſe, in December 1502, he held the maner of St. Lawrence-hall, with appertenances, and 2 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 30 of marſh, and 13 s. 4 d. rent, in St. Lawrence-hall, and Bradwell, which had been Thomas Baynard's and Thomaſine's his wife, of the Priory of Bicknacre, by fealty, and yearly rent of 3 s. 4 d.——Edmund, or Edward, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held alſo the ſame: and dying 24 March 1532, left

Alice, his only daughter and heir (m). [See above, p. 88. 217. 305. 318. and in the other Volume, p, 484. 488.]

Richard Weſton, one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench, who dyed 6 July 1572, held this maner of St. Laurence-hall.——Sir Jerom was his ſon and heir, but it doth not appear he had this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe, in 1603 (n). [See in the other Volume, p. 71.]

Sir Robert Clarke, had it in 1606, and——Robert was his ſon and ſucceſſor (o). [See in the other Volume, p. 453. 459.]

Sir John Leman Kt. mentioned above under Southminſter, held, in 1632, this maner and capital meſſuage of St. Lawrence-hall, alias Baynards, in St. Lawrence and Bradwell, of the heirs of Robert Earl of Suſſex, as of his maner of Burnham, by fealty and rent of 1 s: and lands and marſhes called Robimans, of the maner of Bradwell, by the yearly rent of 5 s.——William Leman, Gent. was his ſon and heir (p).

Through whoſe hands it ſince paſſed we do not find till it came to Theodoſius-Joſeph Maſon, Eſq; who had it in 1745.

The Maner of WEST-NEWLAND-HALL belonged, before and after the Conqueſt, to the Priory of the Holy Trinity, or Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury [H].

A family ſurnamed de Tillebury held it under the Priory. For Robert Ledett, who dyed in 1276, held 60 acres of land in the vill of St. Laurence, of Richard de Tilbery, by the yearly payment of 10 s. under the name of ſocage, in lieu of all ſervices.——Wichard was his ſon and heir (q).

It was afterwards in the Crown, and ſettled by K. Edward III. upon his Abiſhag, Alice Perrers. For it was found in 1377, that ſhe received the iſſues and profits of two parts of this maner of Weſt-Newland in St. Laurence and Steple, which William Aucy, couſin and next heir of Robert de Havering, granted to Clement Spice after the death of Lora wife of Sir John de Havering; ſince which grant the ſaid William Aucy and two women pretended to be the next coheirs of the foreſaid Robert de Havering, for two parts, and after the death of Lora for the third part (r).

Sir William de Wyndeſore, who had married Alice Perrers (s), alienated before his deceaſe 2 parts of the maner of Weſt-Newland, with the reverſion of the 3d part after the death of Lora aforeſaid, to William Beauchamp, Hugh Segrave, and William Coſyngton, Kts. William Cary, and others; which two parts, and reverſion, were granted to him by the King. This maner was holden of the Prior of Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury, by the ſervice of 20 s. a year to their maner of Hallyng; of the Earl of Hereford, by the ſervice of 2 s. and of the Earl of Norfolk, by the ſervice of 14 d. per annum. Criſtina, wife of Sir William Morers; Margery, wife of John Duket; and Iſabella, were his ſiſters and coheirs (t).

Robert Rocheſter held, in 1508, this maner of Weſt-Newland of the Earl of Eſſex, as of his maner of Haſhingdon-hall: and was ſucceeded by his ſon and heir——William Rocheſter, who held five parts of the ſame of Sir Richard Riche, as of his maner of Lawling-hall, by fealty, ſuit of court, and rent of 20 s. And the ſixth part of Thomas Newman, as of his maner of Quendon-hall by the rent of 4 s. per ann. He dyed 31 Auguſt 1558, leaving——John his ſon and heir (u). [See more concerning this family in the other Volume, p. 127.]

William Auſten Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 16 January 1633, held the maner of Weſt-Newland of Robert Earl of Warwick, as above.

A moiety of this maner was in the Rev. Benjamin Slocock, M. A. one of the Chaplains of St. Saviour's Southwark. . . . John Hill, and his wife being poſſeſſed of the other moiety of this maner of Newlands, otherwiſe Weſt-Newlands, or Upper and Lower Weſt-Newlands, they conveyed the ſame by fine, in Eaſter-term 1744, to Mr. Slocock.

The Maner of EAST NEWLAND.

This is what belonged to Inguuar in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; and to Ranulf brother of Ilger, and his under tenant William, at the time of the Survey [I].

St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter had it afterwards, but of whoſe gift doth not appear (w).

After the ſuppreſſion it was granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell. Upon whoſe attainder it reverting to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1541, to

George Cely, and his heirs: to hold in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee. The ſame year, he had licenſe to alienate it to John Coker (x).——John Coker junr. dyed 30 March 1551, poſſeſſed of this maner, meſſuage, tenement, or farm, leaving——Robert Coker his brother and heir 24 years old (y).

Ralph Breeder, alias Browninge, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 2 March 1608-9.——Richard Browninge ſenr. aged 56 years was his brother and heir (z).

In Trinity term 1745, Antony Dean, of Harwich Gent. paſſed by fine the maner of Eaſt Newland, and 200 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, and 200 of paſture to John Nicholſon, Gent. And, in 1750, Antony Dean ſold this maner to Arthur Dabbs, of Hatfeild-Peverell, Gent. who dyed 5 February 1750-1, having bequeathed by will this eſtate to Samuel Trew Gent.

A tenement called Gaynes, in this pariſh and Aſheldham, was granted in 1543 to John Wiſeman, and his heirs (a).

Mr. Robert Wood; Thomas Smith, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is tyled as well as the Chancel. At the weſt end there is a wooden frame boarded and tyled, but no Bell; or only two.

This Church was given to the Abbey of Bilegh by Robert Mantell the founder, and confirmed to it by K. Richard I. 7 December 1189 (b). The Monks got the Rectory appropriated to themſelves, and a Vicarage ordained; but in 1438 the appropriation was diſſolved, and the Church again made a Rectory. The Advowſon remained in the Abbot and Convent till their diſſolution, when it came to the Crown, in which it hath continued ever ſince.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 614 l.

22. BRADWELL

is the north-eaſt part of this Hundred, bounded on the eaſt by the German Ocean, and on the north by Blackwater-bay, or Fluvius Idumanius.

Whether there was here a Broad Well from whence it might take its name, I cannot learn: Or, whether it took it from the Saxon words Bꞃaꝺ Ƿall, broad-wall; which is moſt probable. For ' on this ſhore, as Mr. Camden obſerves, the ' country people are hard put to it with great ' Banks and Walls of mud to keep the ſea out ' of their fields.'

In order to diſtinguiſh it from Bradwell near Coggeſhall, it hath the addition of juxta Mare, and juxta Tillingham, near the Sea, and Tillingham.

We do not meet with the name of this Pariſh in Domeſday-book, under this Hundred, but have Effeceſtre; formed from Eth or Effe, a contraction from the word Othona, with the addition of Ceſtre, which the Saxons generally affixed to places, where there had been Roman Caſtra, camps, or ſtations. For, that here ſtood Othona, we have the authority of the beſt Hiſtorians, particularly of Mr. Camden. ' Higher up [than ' Tillingham] toward the northern ſhore, ſtood ' once a flouriſhing city, called by our anceſtors ' Ithanceſter. For thus Bede, and Ralph Niger ' monk of Coggeſhall, tell us.' " Cedd built " Churches in ſeveral places, ordaining prieſts " and deacons, to aſſiſt him in the word of faith " and miniſtry of baptizing; eſpecially in the " city which in the language of the Saxons is " called Ithanceſtir (c): which ſtood upon the " bank of the river Pant, that runs near Maldon " in the Province of Dengy; but that city hath " ſince been ſwallowed up in the river Pant." ' I cannot, adds Mr. Camden, exactly point out ' the place; but that the river Froſhwell was ' heretofore called Pant, I am pretty confident, ' becauſe one of its ſprings ſtill keeps the name ' of Pant's-Well, and the Monk of Coggeſhall ' ſpeaking of it uſes the ſame appellation. Some ' think this Ithanceſter to have been ſeated in the ' utmoſt point of Dengy-Hundred, where ſtands ' at preſent St. Peter's on the Wall. I am en' clined to believe, that this Ithanceſter was the ' ſame as Othona, the Station of the Band of the ' Fortenſes with their Provoſt, in the declenſion ' of the Roman Empire; who were placed here ' under the Count of the Saxon ſhore, to ſecure ' the Coaſt againſt the pirating Saxons. For ' Othona might very eaſily paſs into Ithana; and ' the ſituation in a creek at the mouth of ſeveral ' rivers, was very convenient for ſuch a deſign ' (d).' Philemon Holland informs us, that here were the remains of a huge ruin of a thick wall, near which many Roman Coins had been found.

Upon theſe good grounds therefore taking this to be Effeceſtre, I ſhall obſerve, that it belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to two freemen, Turchill, and Ingulf: At the time of the Survey, the Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy had one part; and Hugh de Montfort, and his under-tenant Ulmar, the other part [K].

In this pariſh are the following Maners. 1. The maner of Bradwell, with Pilton-fee. 2. . . . that of Battails. 3. The maner of Doun-hall. 4. Eaſt-hall.

The Maner of BRADWELL.

Bradwell-hall, the manſion houſe, lyes near the Brook of Tillingham; a mile and a half ſouthweſt from the Church.

The part which was Hugh de Montfort's being afterwards in the Crown, K. Henry II. granted it to his brother William, who gave it to Thomas Bardulfe, to hold by the ſervice of one knight's fee: and Thomas gave three parts of it in marriage with his three Daughters, married —to Robert de St. Remy—to William Bacon—and—to Baldwin de Thony.

The ſaid Thomas retained half of this fee, viz. the fourth part which Baldwin de Thony and Thomas de Borfore held, and a fourth part which Simon Cook held in this village: And when the Normans loſt their lands in England in K. John's reign, the King gave the two parts of Robert de St. Remy, and of William Bacon, to Thomas Fitz-Barnard. [See in the other Volume, p. 179.]

Thomas Bardolf left the Advowſon of this Church, with the fourth part of the Lordſhip to Doun Bardolf his ſon, who married Beatrix, daughter and heir to William Warren Baron of Wormgay in Norfolk (e), with whom that Lordſhip came to him.——Agnes, wife of Thomas Bardolf, who dyed in 1357, had in dower two knights fees, in Bradwell, which Joane wife of John Orreby held under her; and alſo the advowſon of the Church, worth 40 marks per annum. (f).——William Bardolf held in Bradwell one knight's fee, and the advowſon of the Church; and 13 s. rent, with other parcels (g). The ſucceſſion of this noble Family of Bardolf, which had ſummons to Parliament from the 22 of Edward I. to the 5th of Henry IV. (h) was as follows. Thomas Bardolf.——Doun Bardolf, who dyed in 1276.——William.——Hugh, departed this life in 1304.——Thomas in 1329.——John 3 Auguſt 1371.——William in 1384. Thomas. This laſt joining in a conſpiracy againſt K. Henry IV. and being wounded at Haſelwood in Yorkſhire, dyed of his wounds in 1403, and being attainted, his lands were confiſcated. He left two daughters, Anne, married to Sir William Clifford; and Joane, to William Phelip Eſq; For a more particular account ſee Dugdale's Baronage (i).

Under the Bardolf family the following perſons held part, or the whole, of this eſtate.

John de la Mare held, in 1313, the maner of Bradewell, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee [L].——Elianor, his widow, held the ſame in 1324. So did——Florence, their daughter, wife of Philip de Orby in 1344 (k). And their ſon ——Sir John de Orreby in 1353. As alſo Margaret his widow.——Joane their only ſurviving child was married to Henry Percy, and had by him an only child,——Mary, a little more than a year old, at the time of her grandmother Margaret's deceaſe (l).

During her minority K. Edward III. granted this maner to Alice Perrers (m).

Mary de Percy was married to Sir John Roos of Hamlake, and held this maner; but dyed 25 Auguſt 1394, without iſſue (n).

Thomas Lord Bardolf being attainted, as above ſaid, and his lands forfeited, K. Henry IV. in 1404, gave this to his third ſon, John, Duke of Bedford (o). He dyed 14 September 1435, poſſeſſed of this maner of Bradwell, and one tenement in Hockley and Peliton; and alſo of one tenement called Bardolf's fee, and the Advowſon of the Church (p). As he dyed without iſſue, this eſtate reverted to the Crown.

In 1485, K. Henry VII. aſſigned this maner, among many others [M], to Qu. Elizabeth, widow of K. Edward IV. during her life. And in 1504, leaſed it to William Wyatt, for 40 years, at the rent of 75 l. (q).

K. Henry VIII. in 1539, granted it to his caſt off Queen Anne of Cleve. And, 15 April 1558, Queen Mary annexed it to the Dutchy of Lancaſter (r).

The 12th of November 1604, K. James I. granted it to Walter Mildmay, to hold of the maner of Enfield, by ſealty, in free ſocage. Not long after, he ſold it to Thomas White D. D. who held his firſt Court here 9 July 1609, and ſettled it, with Pilton fee, in the manner we ſhall ſhew preſently.

This Pilton-fee was formerly diſtinct, but is now part of the Maner of Bradwell. In 1286, William de Montchenſi held the maner of Pilton of Henry de Cram'avyle, by the yearly rent of 3 s. and ſuit at the Court of Daneſey (s).

John de la Mare, above-mentioned, held lands and tenements in Pilton, in Bradwell, of the maner of Dangey, by the ſervice of 3 s. per ann. And lands and tenements in Pylton and Hockele, of Thomas Bardolf; and lands of John Cook, by the ſervice of 9 s. a year.——Elianor, his widow, held the ſame. And their daughter, Florence, wife firſt of Philip de Orby, and afterwards of Nicolas Fraunceys, held the tenement called Pilton, in which were 40 acres of arable, and 20 of marſh: and the tenement called Hockleye, containing the ſame quantity of land (t).——Sir John de Orreby, their ſon, held in 1353, this eſtate, of John Cooke ſenr. by the ſervice of 9 s. being then ſtyled 3 meſſuages, 120 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, 200 of marſh, and 40 s. rent (u).

Alice Perrers had it with the maner of Bradwell; and the maners of Hokkele, Pilton, and Daneſeye, which were parcel of the maner of Bradewell, contained 2 meſſuages, 260 acres of arable, 260 of marſh, and 28 s. rent (w). After this it went with Bradwell hall, and John Duke of Bedford held them together.

Theſe eſtates were given by Dr. White to the City of Briſtol, where he was born, for an Alms-houſe; and to Sion College, of which he was founder: He dyed 1 March 1623-4. Beſides 3000*l.* to purchaſe and build the College, he gave 160*l.* per ann. for maintenance of the Alms-

Emeric Battaile, who dyed in 1252, held of the King, in capite, 68 acres of arable in Bradewell, and 1 meſſuage, paſture for 50 ſheep, rent of aſſize from the free-tenants 23 s. 3 d. ob. the work of two villanes; 8 acres of the King's fee, 100 days work: all which he held by the ſervice of one knight's fee, payment of 10 s. to the ward of Dover-caſtle, and ſuit at the Court of Hagle.——Saer, his ſon and heir, was 10 years old. This maner was then worth 78 s. 6 d. ob. per ann.——Edmund was his ſon (x). But, in 1298, Anne daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Battail, and wife of Peter de Taleworthe, had this eſtate in purparty. Edmund dyed in 1333, poſſeſſed of a capital meſſuage, 20 acres of arable, 40 of ſalt marſh, and 10 s. rent of aſſiſe, holden of the King, as of the Honor of Hawle, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. His ſiſter——Margaret was his heir (y). [See more concerning this family, above, p. 175. 346. and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Henry Carter, who departed this life 27 March 1629, held this maner of Battell, with appertenances, and 40 acres of land called Hidehill; and Keyhaven-marſh, and Keyhaven-creek, of the King, in capite: and of the Warden and Fellows of New College, as of their maner of Eaſt-hall, theſe lands, and marſhes freſh and ſalt, Helgate-marſh, Smithes-marſh, Skinners-marſh, and Dunnyngs marſh, all lying in Bradwell, Dengey, and Tillingham.——Henry Carter, his ſon and heir, was upwards of 20 years old (b).

It belongs, or lately belonged, to Theodoſius-Joſeph Maſon Eſq;

The Maner of DOUNHALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north from the Church.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Modinc, and three freemen, were owners of this eſtate: At the Survey, it was held by Eudo Dapifer and his under-tenant Richard, and by Ralph Peverell [N].

Henry de Tipetot held in Bradewell, in the reign of K. Henry III. 30 acres of paſture, a water-mill, and 40 s. rent, by the ſervice of carrying one lance in the King's Army (c).

And, in 1284,——Thomas de la Donne, moſt probably his ſon, held a tenement in Bradewell, worth 6 marks a year, by the ſerjeancy of finding one lance for the King, whenever he ſhould happen to go with an army into Wales (d). EAST-HALL is another Maner in this pariſh, the manſion houſe of which lies above a mile north-eaſt from the Church.

It belongs to New College in Oxford. In 1627, Sir Edward Pincheon held of this maner lands and marſhes called Helgats, Dunnyngs, Smythes alias Skinners, and Blayvers (l).

Margaret Baroun had, in 1339, a meſſuage and ſome lands here. [See above, p. 347.]

Brockſey-ſands, were formerly Brockſey-Park, or Marſh; above 3 miles from Bradwell-hall, nearer Tillingham to the South-eaſt, parted from Tillingham by a Channel of three fathoms water, about half a mile over. 'Tis the ſame I preſume, which Sir John de la Mare had licence to encloſe. He granted leave to the Prior of St. Valery, in 1308, to have a way through it, to their marſh, called Gurmonds, for cattle, when the height of the tide hindered their paſſage. This Brockſey ſeems named from the Brook riſing near St. Laurence's, into which the ſea flowed.

The Abbey of Bilegh had a marſh here, called Coleward. Here were Tythes belonging to Bacon's Portion in Dengy. The Prior of Hatfield-Peverell received the Tythes of Roger de Hakeney in this Pariſh, worth 40 s. per ann.

Mr. George Malden; Charles Elliot; William Batt; James Gilder; William Smith; Joſeph May, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

There is a tradition at Bradwell, that formerly a man might go from thence on horſes heads to Merſey, where now a man of war may ride. This will meet with little credit from him that reads the Hiſtory of the Daniſh Invaſions, and Edward the Elder's lying at Maldon to oppoſe their landing.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Thomas, was new-built in 1706. Both Church and Chancel are tyled. The Steeple, which is of ſtone, hath a high Spire ſhingled, and in it are 8 Bells.

This large Rectory was at firſt appendent to the Maner of Bradwell-hall; and, as ſuch, in the gift of the noble Family of Bardolf, and of their ſucceſſors, lords of that maner, till the forfeiture of Thomas Lord Bardolf in 1403. It then came to the Crown, and continued in it till 1555, when William Herbert, Earl of Penbroke preſented. Sir Edward Pinchon preſented in 1611, and Francis Lord Newport, and Jerom Earl of Portland in 1662. Since that it hath paſſed through various hands, and been ſold over and over again [O].

This Living hath a glebe of 184 acres.

On that ſpot, which is now the north-eaſt point of this Hundred, ſtood a Chapel, anciently called Capella de la Val, or St. Peter ad Murum. This was dependent on Bradwell, and a Chapel of eaſe to it, whoſe Rector did find a Prieſt to officiate in it on Sundays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays. A Jury found, in 1442, that it had a Chancel, Nave, and ſmall Tower with two Bells; that it was burnt, and the Chancel was repaired by the Rector, and the Nave by the Pariſhioners: When it was founded, and by whom, they knew not. It is now in ruins.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 179 l.

THURSTABLE,

IS bounded on the South by the River Pant, and Maldon-river or Blackwater-bay; on the Weſt and North-weſt by Witham Hundred; on the reſt of the North by that of Lexden; and on the Eaſt by the Hundred of Winſtree.

In its greateſt length from weſt to eaſt it is about eleven miles; and from north to ſouth where broadeſt about ſix miles.

The name ſeems to be formed from Ðoꞃ, Thor, a Saxon deity, and ſtable, explained above under Barſtable, p. 190 [Q]. In records it is written ſometimes Tureſtapla.

This Hundred is in the diſpoſal of the High Sheriff for the time being, who puts in and out what Bailiffs he pleaſes.

With regard to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, it is in the Archdeaconry of Colcheſter.

At the time of the Survey, the King was poſſeſſed of this Hundred, and had in it four Salt-works in the cuſtody of the Sheriff; and 3 men that held 10 acres [R].

In this Hundred are ten Pariſhes, which I treat of in the following order:

Heybridge.
Langford.
Wickham-Biſhops.
Totham-Great.
. . . Little.
Goldanger.
Tolleſhunt-Beckingham.
Tolleſhunt Knights.
Tolleſhunt Darcy.
Tolleſbury.

Theſe Pariſhes have right of Commonage upon Tiptree-heath. See in the other Volume, p. 141.

1. HEYBRIDGE

lies at the South-weſt corner of this Hundred, on the north ſide of the river Pantor Blackwater, oppoſite to Maldon. It is otherwiſe written in records Haybridge, Hebregg, Hebrugge, and Heybrug.

The ancient name of this place was Tidwaldinton, Tidwalditune, Tidwoldenton, Tidwoldinton, or Tidwolditune, undoubtedly from a Saxon owner called Tidwold, and ꞇun; and was uſed in records till the reign of K. Edward I. The preſent name ſeems to have been taken from the High-Bridge here; conſiſting of five arches, and which ſeems to be very old. In records it is ſometimes called Wall-Bridge; and it is reaſonably ſuppoſed, that the main ſtream, now running under the new Bridge called Fulbridge, had its courſe under this High-bridge, or elſe there would not have been occaſion for ſo many arches.

Tidwalditune was one of the 13 lordſhips wherewith K. Athelſtan endowed the Cathedral Church of St. Paul (s): whereof five were in this County [S].

It was poſſeſſed of it at the time of the general Survey [T], and hath been ſo ever ſince.

This was one of the Maners belonging to the Canons of St. Paul, to which this immunity was granted, That no purveyor of the King ſhould take any corn within their precincts (t).

There were formerly many Houſes in this pariſh, now down; nay it is ſaid that there were ſome all along Potley, or Potman, marſh.

The Cauſey between Maldon and this place muſt have been raiſed at a very great expence: and was worthy of the care of K. Edward II. who ordered, in 1324, a Survey of it to be taken (u).

(s) Dugdale's Hiſt. of St. Paul's. (t) Ibid. (u) Lett. pat. 18 Edw. II. pars 1.

[Q] Norden thought, that Thurſtable was a corruption from Staple-hurſt, i. e. Staple-wood; which Staplehurſt is a place ſo called, on Tiptree-heath, weſt of the Priory. Introduct. to the Hiſt. of Middleſex, p. 22.

[R] Willelmus Rex habet IV ſalinas in iſto Hundredo, quas cuſtodivit Vicecomes, & iii homines de x acris; Et val' xx denarios. Lib. Domeſd. There were at this time ſeveral Salt-pits, or works, in this Hundred; which is remarkable.

[S] Namely this; Belcham, and Wickham, St. Paul's; Runwell; and Edulfeſneſe, or Walton. The words of his Charter were, . . . 'Et octo manſas apud Tidwalditune.'

[T] Terra Canonicorum Sancti Pauli. Hund' de Tureſtapla. Tidwolditunam tenet ſemper Sanctus Paulus pro VIII hidis & pro i manerio, ſed Radulfus Baignardus tenet dimidium hide, & Hundredus neſcit quomodo eam habuerit. Semper XVI villani, & IV bordarii, & IV ſervi. Tunc ii carucate in dominio, modo i & dimidium. Tunc VIII carucate hominum, modo iii. Silva LX porcis, XXX acre prati. Paſtura CLX ovibus. Semper i molendinum, & i ſalina. i runcinus, VIII animalia, XII porci, CL oves, iii vaſa apium. Semper valuit VIII libras. Lib. Domeſd.

There is only one Maner in this pariſh; and Heybridge-hall ſtands about half a mile ſouth ſouth eaſt from the Church. This Maner hath been all along held by leaſe under the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and longeſt by the family of Freſh-water, originally come from Tolleſbury.

Richard Freſhwater of Heybridge-hall Eſq; who dyed 11 October 1617; by Bridget his wife one of the daughters of John Brand of Boxford, had four ſons, John, Richard, Thomas, and Edward; and three daughters, Frances, Bridget, and Mary. —— John, the eldeſt ſon, married Elizabeth, one of the daughters of John Wiſeman, of Stiſted-hall Eſq; by whom he had Richard, John, Thomas, Iſaac, and Edward; and three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, and Clemence. He departed this life 7 October 1657, aged 56, years; and his wife 25 February 1681, in the 87th year of her age. John, Thomas, and Iſaac, dyed unmarried.——Richard, the eldeſt ſon, by Mary his wife, daughter and coheir of John Studley of Denton in Wiltſhire, had Elizabeth, and Mary [U].

Elizabeth was married, firſt, to William Aylet, of Great Totham, who dyed in 1749, having had by her, William; Thomas, who departed this life 8 February, 1736; and Elizabeth, wife of . . . Savage. The ſaid Elizabeth had to her ſecond huſband, Edmund Percivall, of Lincolns-inn Eſq; and dyed 28 December 1690, aged 32.

Edmund Percivall having in her right the Leaſe of this eſtate, took to his ſecond wife Anne Fitz-James, widow, whoſe maiden name was Hering. She enjoyed this eſtate many years, and bequeathed it to her nephew, the Rev.

Julins Hering, of Clatford, near Marlborough, in Wiltſhire; who enjoys Heybridge-hall, and the demeſne lands, by Leaſe from the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

Fifty two ſhillings a year are payable to poor Widows of this pariſh, out of an eſtate called Longs and Londons, lying in Great and Little Totham, and Goldangre. See under Great Totham. The like ſum is paid to poor Widows of St. Botolph's and St. Giles's Colcheſter. See The Hiſtory of that town, p. 167.

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Steeple is fallen, or taken down. This Church lyes on the Strand, over againſt Maldon, the Sea at high tides coming up to the Church-yard.

It was founded and dedicated between the years 1160 and 1181.

This Church is of the peculiar juriſdiction of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; who are lords of the maner, Ordinaries of the place, proprietors of the Rectory or great Tithes, and patrons of the Vicarage.

A Vicarage was here ordained and endowed by the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's 15 August 1243 (w).

In this Church was formerly a Chantry, in the patronage of the Biſhops of London.

Robert Hay, is the preſent Vicar.

2. LANGFORD.

This pariſh lies along the ſide of the river Pant or Blackwater, and the Long Ford here is what occaſioned the name. Lang in Saxon is the ſame as Long. It is otherwiſe written in records Langeford.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Gola and Agelmar were the poſſeſſors of this Eſtate; At the time of the Survey, it was held by Ralph Baignard, or Baynard [W].

Here is only one Maner.

Langford-hall ſtands a little way north from the Church.

William Baynard, grandſon of Ralph, forfeiting his Barony and lands for joining in a conſpiracy againſt K. Henry I. as is more fully related above, p. 338. and in the other Volume, p. 427, that King gave this Maner to Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, anceſtor of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter.

Geffrey de Ambli had it in the reign of K. Henry II.

Afterwards it was in the Family of Preyers of Sible-Hedingham, and by the marriage of Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas de Preyers, to

Robert de Bourchier, Lord Chancellor, came into that noble Family. [See in the other Volume, p. 253. 285.] Sir John de Preyers, ſettled it by fine, in 1320, upon John de Bouſſer ſenior, and his heirs: but Preyers was to receive 40l. a year during his life (x). —— Robert Lord Burghcher, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1349, held the maner of Langford, with the Advowſon of the Church, of Oliver de Bohun, as of his maner of Norton, by the ſervice of 4s. 2d. a year (y). His ſon —— John, Lord Bourchier, had alſo the ſame, and dying 21 May 1400 was ſucceeded by his ſon ——Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, who held one moiety of this maner of the King by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and the other moiety of the Lord Fitz-Water, by the like ſervice. ——Idonea, his widow, held it till her deceaſe, 12 September 1410, one half of Henry, Earl of Hereford, as of the Honor of Mandevill, and the other half of the Lord Fitz-Walter (z).

Elizabeth, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two huſbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart. But ſhe dying without iſſue 1 July 1433, it came to her kinſman, Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu, created Earl of Eſſex 30 June 1461 (a). At the time of his deceaſe, 4 April 1483, he held this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, of the Prioreſs of Clerkenwell (b). It came next to his grandſon ——Henry, Earl of Eſſex, who, at his death, 13 March 1540, left Anne, his only daughter and heir, married, in 1541, to William Parr, afterwards created Marquis of Northampton. [For a more particular account of this Family ſee the other Volume, p. 254, 255.] He having forfeited all his eſtates for eſpouſing the cauſe of the Lady Jane Grey; Qu. Mary, 8 Auguſt 1558, granted him this Maner, with others [X], to hold of the maner of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty only, in free ſocage (c).

This maner was next in the Smyth family of Creſſing-Temple; concerning which ſee the other Volume, p. 113.

Thomas Smyth Eſq; who dyed 10 March 1563, held the maner of Langford, with appertenances, of the Queen, in free ſocage. —— Clement, his ſon, who alſo held the ſame, departed this life 16 December 1590; and was ſucceeded by his brother—— Henry, then 30 years old (d). He dying 17 April 1612 without iſſue ſurviving, his next brother——Sir John Nevill, alias Smyth, Kt. then 59 years old, inherited this and other eſtates. ——William Smyth Eſq; departed this life 12 February 1631, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, and his next heir was his brother——Sir Thomas Smyth, alias Nevill, then upwards of 70 years of age (e).

Some of the Sammes Family lived at Langford-hall; but whether as tenants or proprietors we cannot learn.

Matthew Harvey, Eſq; ſixth ſon of Thomas Harvey of Folkſton in Kent, and brother to the moſt eminent Phyſician Dr. William Harvey, was the next poſſeſſor of this Eſtate; and preſented to the Church in 1637. 1662. and 1667. He left it to his nephew——Sir Eliab Harvey, of Chigwell, Kt. who ſold it in 1680, to Nicolas Weſcombe Eſq; He dyed in 1696, and his widow, Sarah, remarried to Mr. Bateman, enjoyed it till her deceaſe in March 1740-1. Her eldeſt ſon——Nicolas Weſcombe, of the Inner Temple, Eſq; ſucceeded her, and departed this life 16 December 1744. It is now in Nicolas Weſcombe, of Cheverills Green in Hertfordſhire Eſq;

Stock-hall, in this pariſh, was holden, in 1319, of the Lord John de Bohun, and John Preres, by John de Ulting. He held it, in 1328, of Robert Fitz-Walter, as the ſixth part of a fee in Stockhall, and Langford. And his ſon Nicolas Ulting held it, in 1386, of Walter Fitz-Walter (g).

Sir Hugh Stafford held, in 1421, of the heirs of John Prayers, a tenement called Stokhall, containing 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 30 of paſture (h).

Mr. Henry Glaſscock hath ſome land here, beſides what hath been already mentioned.

Sarah Hall, by her will dated 8 November 1680, gave her cuſtomary cottage, in the Street here, called Foſters Gardens, for the uſe of the poor of this pariſh for ever; and 40s. for reparation of the ſame. It conſiſts of three dwellings for poor people.

The Church-clerk hath alſo a Houſe to live in.

The Church dedicated to St. Giles, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. In a ſpire, ſhingled, are 3 Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

Thomas Langford, a Dominican Frier, author of an univerſal Chronicle, who flouriſhed about the year 1320, was a native of this place (i).

3. WICKHAM-BISHOP's.

There are two Pariſhes named Wickham in this County; namely This, and another in Hinckford-Hundred.

This is ſtyled Wickham-Biſhop's, becauſe the Biſhops of London have been from time immemorial, even before the Conqueſt, lords of the Maner [Y], and patrons of the Rectory: As the other has the addition of St. Paul's, becauſe it belongs to the Dean and Chapter of that Cathedral.

The Saxon word Ƿic ſignifies a Caſtle, or fortreſs; and though there are no remains of any, here might have been a temporary fortification againſt the incurſions of the Danes, who much infeſted this neighbourhood. A Beacon ſtood in the higheſt part of this pariſh, upon the edge of Tiptree-heath. As for the word ham, it ſignifies a village, or habitation.

Here is only one Maner,

and moſt of the lands in the pariſh are holden of it by copy of court-roll.

Wickham-hall is about half a mile ſouth from the Church.

There were many Coats of Arms in the old Houſe [Y]. Some years ago it was taken down, and a neat Houſe of brick erected for a Farm-houſe.

Formerly it was the reſidence of the Biſhops of London; and, in 1375, William Courtney, then Biſhop, obtained a licenſe from K. Edward III, to impark 300 acres of land in his maner of Wickham (k).

The demeſnes of this Maner are held by Leaſe from the Biſhops of London. Lord Maynard formerly had the Leaſe, and one of the Family parted with it to Henry Parſons Eſq; brother to Humfrey Parſons Eſq; Alderman of London. He having alſo purchaſed the ſite of an old Water-Mill, in the pariſh, erected there a fine and ſpacious Mill. Adjoyning to which, he built a handſom and commodious Seat, with fine Gardens, Fiſh-ponds, &c. He left the premiſſes to his wife's daughter, Mrs. Frances Marſton, married ſince to Philip Burlton Eſq;

Other Eſtates in the Pariſh are,

Part of the lands belonging to Bennington-hall, and to the late Mr. Lingard's farm; of which the Houſes are in Witham.

The Biſhop of London hath alſo large Woods in the Pariſh.

Moſt of the Houſes in this pariſh are above a mile eaſt from the Church, near Tiptree-heath.

The Church is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, tyled. On the weſt end there is a ſmall wooden Turret, with a ſpire ſhingled, in which is 1 Bell.

This Rectory is in the collation of the Biſhop of London, and wholly ſubject to him, being exempt from the Archdeacon of Colcheſter's juriſdiction. There belongs to it a Glebe of above 100 acres; but a great part of it is gravelly and poor. The Parſonage-houſe ſtands a full mile eaſt from the Church, on the top of a hill, near the edge of Tiptree-heath; from whence there is an extenſive proſpect. The greateſt part of it was rebuilt with brick by a late Incumbent, the Rev. Mr. Ley, but in a ſlight manner, ſo that it was rather a Dilapidation.

TOTHAM.

Here are two contiguous Pariſhes of this name, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great and Little. The name is otherwiſe written Toteham, and ſeems to be formed from the two Saxon words, Tote, a man's name, and ham, habitation.

4. Great Totham,

the largeſt of the two, lies eaſt of Wickham and Langford.

Turbert was owner of it in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: and Hamo Dapifer held it at the time of the Survey [Z].

GREAT TOTHAM.

In this pariſh are two Maners. 1. The maner of Great Totham. 2. . . that of Gibbecrake's. And a capital meſſuage, or reputed maner, called Frevills.

The Maner of GREAT TOTHAM.

Toteham-hall, the manſion-houſe ſtands a little way eaſt from the Church.

Hamo Dapifer left his great eſtate to the children of his elder brother Robert Fitz-Hamon, Lord of Caerdiff, and Tewkſbury, whoſe eldeſt daughter and coheir Mabel brought it in marriage to William natural ſon of K. Henry I. created Earl of Glouceſter in 1109; and who dyed in 1147. His eldeſt ſon —— William, Earl of Glouceſter, gave this lordſhip to

Richard de Lucy. Concerning whom ſee more above, p. 125. 128.—— Maud de Lucy was given in marriage by K. John, in 1213, to Richard de Rivers, who had this eſtate, and the Honor of Ongar, in her right. Of this Richard,

John de Nevyll held, in 1281, the maner of Totham by the ſervice of one knight's fee (l). His father —— Hugh de Nevill held it before him, viz. in 1210, of the Honor of Hagenet, it conſiſting of 3 knights fees [A]. —— Sir Hugh Nevill, ſon of John, at the time of his deceaſe in 1335, held, jointly with his wife Ida, this maner of Great Totham of Elizabeth de Burgh, Lady of Clare, by the ſervice of 1 knight's fee. His ſon and heir —— Sir John Nevill of Eſſex departed this life 25 July 1358, without iſſue; having ſettled, after his, and his wife Alice's death, the maners of Great Totham, Thorpe, Wetherſfield, Little Halingbury, Chigenhale Zoyn and Tany, Langham, Peldon, Great and Little Wakering, on William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton. Alice, Lady Nevill, widow of Sir John, did not dye till 1394 (m). [For a more particular account of the Nevill Family, ſee above, p. 304. and in the other Volume, p. 79. 371. 515.]

From the Nevill family this Pariſh obtained the name of Totham Nevill.

William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton to whom Sir John Nevill had left the reverſion of this eſtate, dyed 16 September 1360, and his ſon, —— Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton, 16 January 1372. So that neither of them enjoyed this eſtate; but, in 1394, it fell to the two daughters and coheirs of Humfrey, viz.

Elianor, wife of Thomas of Woodſtock, and Mary, wife of Henry Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV. [See above, p. 304.] Elianor had this eſtate for her purparty.

Anne, her only daughter and heir, was married firſt to Thomas, and then to his brother Edmund, ſucceſſively Earls of Stafford, and afterwards to William Bourchier, Earl of Eu. [See above, p. 304, and in the other Volume, p. 80. 371.] She lived till 1438.

Sir John Bourgchier held this maner of Earl Stafford, in 1399.—— Bartholomew Lord Bourgcher, his ſon, held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe 18 May 1409; as did —— Idonea, his widow, who dyed 12 September 1410. She held it of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (n).

Elizabeth Bourgchier, their only daughter and heir, brought it to her two huſbands, Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart. She herſelf held it of Earl Stafford, at the time of her deceaſe 1 July 1433 (o). Leaving no iſſue; her kinſman —— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu and Eſſex; and his grandſon —— Henry, Earl of Eſſex, ſucceſſively enjoyed this eſtate (p).

Anne, daughter and ſole heir of the laſt, and Marchioneſs of Northampton, was poſſeſſed of it (q): And her huſband —— William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, having forfeited all for eſpouſing the Lady Jane Grey's intereſt, this Maner was granted to him, with a few others, for his maintenance (r).

Having ſo often mentioned this noble Family, we ſhall beg leave not to enlarge upon it more here, but for a fuller account to refer to p. 304. 307. above; and to the other Volume, p. 80. 254, 255.

This Maner was next in the Beriff family, who had the maner of Shawes in Colcheſter, and the King's Head inn; and lands alſo in Aldham. William Beriff, Gent. who dyed 21 November 1594, held this maner of Great Totham, alias Totham-hall, with all its rights &c. of the Queen, as of her maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, by fealty only, in free ſocage: And lands and paſtures here, called Shinbornes, Roſe Shinbornes, Oſey lands, Walcrofts, and Haywards; Likewiſe a meſſuage and lands near Totham-hall, called Ongham's tenement. —— William, his ſon and heir, was 48 years old (s).

In 1599 Thomas Wylde Eſq; held theſe maners of Great Totham and Gibcracks, and dying 21 June that year, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Thomas, that departed this life 21 June 1606, leaving —— Edmund his ſon and heir (t). The ſecond Thomas married Elizabeth daughter of Richard Coke Eſq; by Elizabeth his wife daughter of John Pilborough Eſq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer. She dyed 24 December 1606 (u).

Thomas Martin Eſq; a Banker in London, was the laſt poſſeſſor of this eſtate.

The Maner of GIBBECRAKES

The manſion houſe lies about half a mile ſouth from the Church.

This was taken from the other capital Maner; but When, we do not exactly find: Only we may gueſs by the following record. On, or about, the year 1226, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter, purchaſed of Sir John de Rivers, lord of Ongar, 3 knights fees which Hugh de Nevyll held under him [B]; and this unqueſtionably was one of thoſe knights fees.——Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, was poſſeſſed of thoſe three knights fees in 1398 (w).

We do not find this mentioned by the name of Gippecrake till the year 1414. And that name it either gave to, or took from, a conſiderable ancient Family. Richard de Gybbecrake was witneſs to a deed of Alyne la Deſpenſere, Counteſs of Norfolk. And, to a grant of Agnes Mercy, Prioreſs of Clerkenwell, of lands in this pariſh, Robert Gypecrake, Roger de Oveſeye, &c. were witneſſes. Both thoſe deeds were without date, and probably as ancient as Richard I. or K. John.

There are eſtates named alſo Gibbcraks, at Purley, and other parts of this County.

To return to this eſtate: In 1414, Sir William Marny, of Layer, held a maner called Gippecrake, in Great and Little Totham, and Hebregge, of the Biſhop of London.——Thomas was his ſon and heir (x).——Henry, Lord Marney, who dyed 24 May 1523, held this maner, of Henry Earl of Eſſex, as of his maner of Totham-hall, by fealty and rent of 9 s. 4 d. His ſon——John, Lord Marny, had alſo this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe, 27 April 1526 (y). He left two daughters coheirs.——Catharine married to George Ratcliffe; and ——Elizabeth to Thomas Lord Howard, ſecond ſon of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, created Viſcount Howard of Bindon, 13 January 1558.

Sir Brian Tuke purchaſed it with Layer-Marney-hall &c. and dyed poſſeſſed of it 26 October 1545, leaving——Charles Tuke Eſq; his ſon and ſucceſſor (z). [For a fuller account of theſe two Families ſee under Layer-Marney.]

It came afterwards, with the former, into the Family of Wylde; and then to

Thomas Martin Eſq;

FREVILLS

We have a very imperfect account of this eſtate. Only, that Edward Nalinghurſt, a lunatic, held, in 1551, a maner called Frevells, lying in Great Totham, with lands and tenements in the two Tothams, Goldanger, Tolleſbury, and Tolleſhunt Darcy and Major (a).

FRERNE, or Ferne, lands ſo called in this pariſh, were given by Robert Mantel to Bilegh-Abbey, founded by him. Upon the ſuppreſſion of that Houſe they fell to the Crown, having been lett, 11 July 1525, to John Church for 41 years at the yearly rent of 4 l. 7 s. 4 d. (b). In 1544, K. Henry VIII. granted them to——William Butts and his heirs. He had licenſe, 22 March following, to alienate them to——John Page. In 1556,——John Alleyn Eſq; held them in capite. And, in 1574,——Richard Durant, jun. dyed poſſeſſed of them, and of Barrowhills and Barrowmarſh, and was ſucceeded by his brother——William, who had livery of them that year, and of other lands belonging to the ſame Monaſtery (c).

Robert ſon of Sewin gave to the Nuns of Clerkenwell 140 acres of land in Hangre de Totham, which Malcolm King of Scotland and Earl of Huntendon, had granted to him; and half a wood; and 4 dead trees in his wood of Totham; and paſnage for 10 hogs; they paying to him one mark of Silver at Michaelmaſs (d).

Which of theſe two was granted to Cardinal Wolſey in 1525, under the title of the maner of Great Totham (e), I cannot aſcertain.

LOFTES, or Loughes, is a capital meſſuage on Broad-ſtreet Green in this pariſh, wherein John Bullock Eſq; and his ſucceſſors lived before Sir Edward purchaſed Falkborn-hall. John Bullock Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe, 10 February 1595, held this meſſuage; and other meſſuages called Fowchers, and Lendons, Inhams and Croſhouſe, of John Sammes Eſq; as of his maner of Little Totham; and of Edward Wild, of his maner of Gipcrake; leaving——Edward Bullock his ſon and heir (f).——Sir Edward was his grandſon. [See in the other Volume, p. 118.]

One of the Wright family of Cranham purchaſed this eſtate.

In 1555, John Sammes, yeoman, held in this pariſh lands called Greyhow, Woodland, Squyers and Cookes alias Dyxley; Garlands; Taylers; Fabyans alias Smythes and Howletts; Wheelers, and Southfeild; Cockerells, and Pynkys (g).

In 1559, John Church of Maldon held here a tenement and lands called Sawens: which were afterwards Thomas Beckingham's (h).

John Goddeſhalfe gave a Houſe and Lands, of about eight pounds a year, out of which 10 s. is paid for Lord's rent, and 1 s. 8 d. to the King; the remainder for reparation of the Church.

For the moſt part it ſeems to have gone along with the capital maner; and eſpecially to have been in the Bourchier family.——Sir Hugh Stafford, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, and dyed in 1421, held the maner of Oveſeye of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, at the time of his deceaſe, 4 April, 1483, held the maner of Totham-Oveſeye, of the King, as above (i).——Anne, Marchioneſs of Northampton, the laſt of this Family, held this maner, or iſle, of Oveſey, and 6 meſſuages, 2 cottages, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 200 of marſh, free fiſhery, and wrec of the Sea, and free-warren, in Oveſey, Great Totham, and Goldanger (k).

It deſcended to her heir at law, Walter Devereux, Earl of Eſſex; and was purchaſed of him by Thomas Wiſeman Eſq; of Great Waltham; who held it at the time of his deceaſe, 15 July 1584, by the name of one tenement, Iſle, or land ſurrounded with water, in Great-Totham, called Awſey, alias Oveſey, of the Queen, in capite, by knight's ſervice.——Elizabeth, wife of Richard Jennings, and Dorothy Wiſeman, were his daughters and coheirs (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 88.]

This Iſle was purchaſed by the late Mr. Charles Coe of Maldon, and is now in his heirs. It is ſaid to contain 200 acres of land.

Within the pariſh of Totham, upon the ſhore, are many Tumuli, or Mounts of earth, called Borough-hills, which ſeem to be the Graves of Saxons and Danes ſlain in aſſaulting and defending England. They are juſt ſo far down the Stream as the Colliers now come up to unload, which makes it probable that the Daniſh veſſels drew much the ſame water.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. In a wooden Belfrey, with a Spire leaded, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given by Maurice de Totham, and Hugh de Nevill, to the Nuns of Clerkenwell (m). The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to them in the reign of K. Richard I. and a Vicarage ordained, of which the Prioreſs and Convent had the patronage till their ſuppreſſion, when they came to the Crown.

K. Edward VI. 8 July 1550, granted them to William Morrice, and Edmund Iſaack (n).

Since that they were longeſt in the Families of Aylet, Freſh-water, and Percival, of Heybridge (o).

This Vicarage was augmented in 1719, by Bp. Robinſon with 200l. to which were added 200l. of Queen Anne's Bounty, wherewith an Eſtate was purchaſed.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 716l. 2s. 0d.

5. LITTLE TOTHAM, lies between Great Totham and Goldangre, to which laſt pariſh it is united. Though it is ſmall, and not in the beſt air, the two conſiderable Families of Heveningham and Sammes choſe it for the place of their reſidence.

There are in it two Maners. 1. The maner of Little Totham. 2. . . that of Rokhall.

The Maner of LITTLE TOTHAM.

The maner-houſe, which ſtands near the Church, is a neat brick Edifice, built by Sir John Sammes: It had a Park of about 80 acres.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the demeſnes were in two hands; Cola, and afterwards one Richard, had the chief part; and Gunner the other: At the time of the Survey, Hugh de Montfort held the former, and Suene the latter which Gunner was permitted to enjoy under him [D]; a caſe not very common: the former owners being commonly quite diſpoſſeſſed.

To this Maner that of Goldanger is united, and they both have only one Court, which is kept at Little Totham-hall.

Under Henry de Eſſex, lord of the Honor of Raley, Henry de Mailler, Mayloch, or Maleche, for by thoſe ſeveral names he is called, held 4 knights fees in Totham, with Iſabell Franchevill (p), an heireſs, to whom he was guardian. This Mailler was probably a deſcendent from Hugh ſon of Malger, the tenant at the Survey, under Hugh de Montfort.

In the reign of K. Henry III. this Maner and that of Goldangre came to be veſted in a family ſurnamed Jarpenvil, or Charpenvil; from whom this pariſh received the appellation of Totham Jarpenvil (q). An heireſs of the Jarpenvil Family brought it into that of Heveningham; from whom it came by purchaſe into that of Browne; and then of Sammes, in which laſt it continued till of late.

And ſeeing the Families of Heveningham and Sammes had their ſeats and reſidence here, it will be proper to give a particular account of them.

The Heveningham Family deduced their pedigree from Walter lord of Heveningham in Suffolk before the Conqueſt. The firſt that we find ſettled here, was Philip, in the reign of K. Edward I. We ſhall therefore only ſet down the Names of his predeceſſors, as they occur in the pedigree, without their intermarriages. And they were Walter—Walter—Robert—Robert—Ralph—Sir William, who was with K. Richard I. at the ſiege of Acon, where he overcame and ſlew Sapher, the governor of the caſtle there, who had challenged him to a ſingle combat.—Reginald—Richard—Peter—William—Andrew.

Philip de Heveningham, in the reign of K. Edward I. married Maud, daughter of Roger Jarpenvile, and had by her Roger, Philip, Richard; Elizabeth: —— Roger, married, firſt, Cecily, daughter of Robert Lord Morley, by whom he had Richard, Walter, John, Roger, Philip; Margaret, Catharine, Cecily Philippa. His ſecond wife was Alice, remarried to William de Maldon. —— Richard was father of —— Sir John, who married Joane daughter of . . . . Roſſiter, and had by her John, Philip, Robert, Richard, Chriſtopher; Cecily, Catharine, Iſabell. —— John, the eldeſt ſon, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Rodiſham, by whom he had John, Robert, Geffrey, Roger; Cecily, Anne.——Sir John, the eldeſt ſon, married, firſt, Alice daughter of Sir John Davall, and had by her Thomas, Alice; Joane, and Elizabeth. His ſecond wife was. . . . Brown; and by her he had George, that had to wife Catharine, daughter of John Burgoigne.——Thomas Heveningham Eſq; was returned for one of the Gentry of this County in 1433 (r). He married Anne, daughter and heir of . . . . Yarde, and had by her John, Robert; Anne, and Audrey.——Sir John, the eldeſt ſon, married Alice, daughter of Sir Ralph Shelton, by whom he had, Antony, Edward, John, Francis, Eraſmus; Elizabeth, and Anne. ——Sir Antony, his eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, married, firſt, Catharine daughter of Sir Philip Calthorp, and had by her Henry; Jane, Anne, and Mary. By his ſecond wife, Mary Shelton, he had Arthur, Brigitta, Anne, Mary.——Henry, the eldeſt ſon, had two wives, Anne daughter of Sir Edmund Windham, and Anne daughter of Thomas Eden, but left no iſſue by either.——Arthur Heveningham Eſq; the ſurviving ſon and heir, married Mary, daughter of Thomas . . . and had by her, John, Thomas, William, Arthur, Henry, Charles, Antony, Arthur, Robert; Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Gilbert, of Finborough; Abigail, of Sir Auguſtin Pettus of Norfolk; Mary, Anne, and Barbara.——John, the eldeſt ſon, married, firſt, Catharine daughter of Lewis Lord Mordaunt; and, next, Bridget, daughter of Chriſtopher Paſton of Norfolk; but what iſſue he had is not mentioned [E].

As to the Sammes family. John Sammes Eſq; lord of the maner of Little Totham, dyed 18 October 1606, aged 74 years (s) —— Richard, his ſon and heir, was father of Thomas, and John.

Thomas married——daughter of . . . Jeffrey of Weſt-Haningfield, by whom he had, Mary wife of Richard Thornton; and ſeven ſons. Richard; William, of Marks-Tay, [See in the other Volume, p. 203.] Thomas; John, of Hatfeild-Peverell; [See alſo in the other Volume, p. 133.] Henry; Edward; and Peter. Henry, the 5th ſon, of Great Totham, married, firſt, . . . daughter of . . . Hale, of Maldon, and had by her, Henry, of the Inner Temple, and William, both of whom dyed without iſſue. By his ſecond wife, Anne, daughter of . . . John, above-mentioned, the ſecond ſon of Richard Sammes ſon of John firſt named in this genealogy, was of Langford-hall. He married Margaret, daughter of John Paſchal of Great Badow, and had by her three ſons, John; Richard, of Coggeſhall, from whom deſcended the Sammes's of Tolleſhunt-Beckingham; and Robert of Boreham. He had alſo one daughter married to Thomas Alleyn.——John Sammes of Langford-hall Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, married . . . daughter of Bartholomew Averell, by whom he had John; and Mary, married firſt to William Wroth Eſq; afterwards to . . . Cotton. —— Sir John, the ſon and heir, was a knight, and governor of Iſendike in Flanders, where he lies buried. By Iſabella, his wife, daughter of Sir John Gerrard, Kt. How theſe Families ſucceeded one another in this Maner, we ſhall ſhew under Goldangre, which went along with it: In the mean time we proceed to or Rook-hall, the other Maner in this pariſh.

The houſe is ſituated about a quarter of a mile out of the road leading from this pariſh to Heybridge.

Eduuolt, and Aluric, were owners of this eſtate in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey it was the Fee of the Biſhop of London [G].

A family ſurnamed Wichingham held it under the Biſhops. Nicolas Wichingham Eſq; who dyed in 1433, held the maner of Little Totham called Rookhalle of the Biſhop of London, as of his maner of Stortford; and 1 marſh and 40 acres of arable in Mundon, of the Abbot of Colcheſter. By Alice his wife he had one ſon, William, who was dead before him, and left—— Robert, aged 22 at his grandfather's deceaſe. He held the ſame lands, and departing this life in 1451, left—— John his ſon and heir (u), of Great Wychenham and Fiſhley in Norfolk. In 1493, he ſettled by deed this maner, and the lands in Mundon, on himſelf, and Anne his wife daughter of John Bampton in tail. And in 1507, a Fine paſſed between John More and others, plaintiffs, and Edmund Aylmer and Elizabeth his wife, deforc' of the maner of Rokehall and lands in Great and Little Totham.

It was next in the Southcott family of Witham. For John Southcott Eſq; who dyed 18 April 1585, held the maner or farm called Rock-hall in Little Totham; and the moiety of one meſſuage or farm there called Fowchers, containing 100 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, purchaſed of George Scott (w). Fowchers took its name from William Foucier, an owner, mentioned in the Compoſition made between the Rector of Goldhanger and the inhabitants of Little Totham, 29 October 1440. [For an account of the Southcott family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 110.]——Sir Edward Southcott ſold this eſtate to

Benjamin Lord, of Maldon; who, in 1720, ſold it again to Nicolas Corſellis, Eſq; of Wivenhou, grandfather of Nicolas Corſellis Eſq; of that place.

Thomas Fabell, who dyed in 1353, held lands and tenements in Great and Little Totham and Hebrugge, containing 1 meſſuage, 440 acres of arable, 20 acres of meadow, 30 of paſture, 28 of wood, and 4 l. rent, of the Prior of Hatfeild, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 4 d. a year (x).

The CHURCH of Little Totham, dedicated to All-Saints, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. It hath a ſquare ſpire, partly built of flints, and ſhingled.

This Church, or rather Chapel, hath been from time immemorial annexed to the Church of Goldangre (y).

Little Totham is rated to the land-tax at 400 l.

6. GOLDANGER, lies cloſe to the Bay which receives the Stream from Maldon, oppoſite to the Iſle of Oſey.

Aungre ſignifies The Place, as we have obſerved above, p. 125. But how This came to be dignified with the fine name of Gold, we cannot well conceive.

The owners of the lands in this pariſh, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, were Leuuin Poſthagra; Leuuin, and Uluuard; and Elric. Thoſe that held them at the time of the Survey, were, Hugh, ſon of Malger, or de Montfort; Ralph Piperell; and Earl Euſtace [H].

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into three Maners. 1. The maner of Goldangre. 2. The maner of Follifaunts. 3. . . . that of Fawlty. But which of them were what belonged to Montfort, or the two others, we cannot determine.

The Maner of TOTHAM with GOLDANGRE, ſuch is the ſtyle of this Maner.

After the general Survey, the earlieſt poſſeſſors we have here were the Jarpenvill family. John de Jarpenvill, who dyed in 1259, held of the King, in capite, 2 carucates of land, by the ſervice of 20s. a year to the ward of Dover-caſtle, worth 10*l. per annum.*——Roger Jarpenvill was his next heir. This Roger had in Goldhangre 300 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, 12 of paſture, 7s. rent of aſſiſe; and in rent for ſalt 18s. 6d. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1287, he was found to hold of the King, in ca. in Totham and Goldhangre, 200 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 20 of paſture, 10 of wood, 1 garden, 1 dove-houſe, and 53s. rent of aſſiſe, 300 days work &c. by the ſervice of 3 knights fees, and 40s. yearly to the ward of Dover caſtle: He held alſo in theſe pariſhes of the Abbey of St. Albans 50 acres of arable, and 20s. rent of aſſiſe, by a yearly payment of 34s.

This family had alſo eſtates at Sutton, Eſtwood, Aſſingdon, Hakewell, and South-Bemflete. [See above, p. 283. 292.]—John Heveningham, ſon and heir of Sir John, ſucceeded his mother in theſe eſtates in 1394, being then 35 years old (b). He dyed in 1425, poſſeſſed of this maner of Little Totham.—Sir John Heveningham his ſon (c) held alſo the maners of Totham and Goldhanger of the Honor of Hagnett, by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee; [See above, p. 98. 100.] and departing this life 10 May 1499, left——Thomas Heveningham, or Henningham, his ſon and heir, 40 or 50 years old (d).——Sir John Heveningham held theſe maners, and the Advowſon of the Church of Goldanger and of Totham Chapel, at the time of his deceaſe 4 Auguſt 1536 (e).——Sir Antony his ſon held alſo the ſame, but of the Honor of Raylegh, and not of that of Hagnett. John Sammes Gent. 1 March 1573 (i).

Alderman Clithero had it, with Joyces and Highams in Tolleſhunt-Major, and by female heirs it came to William Waddis and Henry Heath, who ſold it, but to whom we do not find.

It has ſince been in Sir Nicolas Gerrard of Eaſt-Ham, Bart. and is, or lately was, in his Family.

Some of the Heveningham family are ſaid to have anciently reſided here.

FAWLTY.

The manſion-houſe lies near the Channel, about half a mile ſouth weſt from the Church.

This maner, as it is called, belonged, as well as the laſt, to Bilegh Abbey. John Samys was fermer here of lands called Weymerſh, Eaſtmerſh, and Weſtmerſh in Goldhanger. See above, p. 334 (k).

After the ſuppreſſion K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, in 1538, farms called Purleigh and Goldhanger alias Falty in Goldhanger, to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. He by licenſe, 20 January the ſame year, ſold the maner of Goldhanger in Falty, to

Robert Trapps, of London, goldſmith, and Joan his wife; remainder to —— Nicolas their eldeſt ſon and heir, who dyed 7 May 1544, leaving

Mary wife of the Lord Giles Paulet, and Alice wife of Henry Brown, his daughters and heirs. Robert Trapps dyed 12 December 1560, and his wife Joan 16 January 1563. A partition being made in July 1565, this was the ſhare of the Lord Giles Paulet and Mary his wife. They two had licence, 9 July 1565, to alienate a marſh, called Fawtry-marſh, in Goldhanger to Humfrey Shelton (l).

John Whigtacres who dyed 23 Auguſt 1627, held a meſſuage and 60 acres of land, with appertenances called Goldhangers, alias Vautie, alias Faultie, in Goldhanger of the King in capite. —— John Shaw Gent. was his couſin and heir (m).

This eſtate belonged to the late Mr. Charles Coe, of Maldon, and now to his family.

Mr. James Buxton; William Marryon; Robert Harrington; John Cooper, &c. have alſo ſome Eſtates in this pariſh.

Here is a conſiderable Saltwork, in which is uſed Rock Salt, brought from Cheſhire, mixed with the ſea water. It may be preſumed that the ſalt water here would of itſelf produce ſome Salt, becauſe the Saltworks of this and Winſtree Hundred are frequently met with in Domeſday-book.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace, but the Chancel has a ſouth Chapel; all tiled. The Steeple is of ſtone, and hath four Bells.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the capital Maner, and as ſuch in the gift of the Families of Heveningham, or Henningham, Sammes, &c.

It ſeems the Advowſon was ſold with the demeſnes to Henry Barrett.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 558 l.

TOLLESHUNT.

In this Hundred are three Pariſhes of the name of Tolleſhunt, or Toleſhunt, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Mauger or Beckingham; Darcy; and Knights. The name ſeems to be formed from the two Saxon words Toll, toll, or cuſtom, and hunt. It is otherwiſe written in records, Touzon.

7. TOLLESHUNT MAUGER, or BECKINGHAM, is neareſt to Goldanger. The addition of Mauger, or Malger, it took from Malger who held it under Robert ſon of Corbutio, at the time of the Survey [L]. The name is corrupted into Major, or Malgri; and it is alſo ſometimes called Magna, Great, though it is really the leaſt of the three.

The appellation of Mauger it had in the reign of K. Henry III. (n).

It received the ſurname of Beckingham from Stephen Beckingham, who had it firſt about the year 1543.

One Sercar was poſſeſſed of it in Edward the Confeſſor's reign.

In this pariſh there is one Maner; and two other reputed ones, named Heighams and Joyces; and Wykes.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT BECKINGHAM.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the north-weſt corner of the Church-yard. It has a ſtately Gate of brick remaining, with four turrets, embattled.

This Maner belonged in K. Stephen's reign to Geffrey de Tregoz, lord of the next pariſh of Tolleſhunt Tregoz or Darcy, and was given by him to Coggeſhall-Abbey; under the name of one virgate of land at Toleſhunt, and 60 acres near the ſame, and common of paſture there (o).

By an Inqueſt taken in 1257, it was found, that the Abbot of Coggeſhall had in Tolleſhunt Mauger 7 acres and 1 rood of wood, by the King's perch, within the cover of the Foreſt of Eſſex, and 4 acres of heath near the ſame; and in Tolleſhunt Tregoz, 7 acres of wood, and 10 of heath (p).

At the time of the Surrender, 5 February 1538, it was lett to John King, for the yearly rent of 34*l.* 13*s.* 4*d* (q).

The ſame year K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Seymour, brother to the Duke of Somerſet. He exchanged it with the King, who, in 1543, granted it to Stephen Beckingham, and Anne his wife, and the heirs of Stephen, by the name of Tollſhunt-Major, alias Tolleſhunt-Grange, and Long-Wyke (r).

The Beckingham family was originally of Wiltſhire. Antony, or John, Beckingham, by Alice his wife, daughter of Thomas Tichborn of Hamſhire, had 3 ſons, John; Thomas; and Stephen.——Stephen, who had a grant of this eſtate, was thrice married; namely, firſt, to Anne daughter of Hugh Unton Eſq; next, to Avis ſixth child of Sir Henry Tyrell of Heron; and laſt to Elizabeth daughter of William Browne, of Flamberts. By the firſt wife he had Thomas, Alice, Thomaſine, and Elizabeth; by the ſecond he had one ſon; and by the third, Stephen and another. Stephen, the father, dyed 10 December 1558, and was buried in this Church.——Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir (s), ſucceeded him in this and other eſtates [M]; and dyed 9 October 1596 (t): having had, by Mary his wife daughter of Thomas Hill, Thomas, Stephen, and Aviſia.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, was knighted; and beſides the capital manſion houſe, he held a Park here, and a meſſuage called Briſes's hatch. By Elizabeth his wife he had a ſon named William, who dyed before him, leaving two ſons William, and Henry. Sir Thomas departed this life 3 September 1633, and his grandſon William, then aged twelve years and a half, was his heir (u). It is preſumed he and his brother Henry ſurvived Sir Thomas but a little while [N]. For Sir Thomas's brother — Stephen above-mentioned was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1635, and ſold it in 1636, to

Sir Thomas Adams, Kt. Alderman of London. His ſecond ſon——Sir William Adams Bart. ſold it in 1674, to

Mr. Thomas Fox cheeſemonger of London, who married Hannah, daughter of Mr. Henry Bigg merchant taylor. She married a ſecond time to Mr. John Bradley, and in 1710, ſold the reverſion of this maner and eſtate to

Dr. Daniel Williams, who by will, dated 26 June 1711, ſettled it in Truſtees, namely in the Society for New England, as long as that Society ſhall continue, upon condition that Sixty pounds a year ſhall be allowed between Two well qualified perſons as to piety and prudence, to be nominated ſucceſſively by his Truſtees, to preach as Itinerants in the Engliſh Plantations in the Weſt Indies, and for the good of what Pagans and Blacks lye neglected there: and the remainder to be paid yearly to the Colledge of Cambridge in New England, or ſuch as are uſually employed to manage the bleſſed work of converting the poor Indians there. But if his Truſtees were hindred from nominating the ſaid Itinerants under pretence of any ſtatute in New England or elſewhere, he gave the ſaid 60l. per annum to the ſaid College in New England, to encourage and make them capable to get ſome learned Profeſſor out of Europe to reſide there, and ſhall be of their own nomination in concurrence with the Miniſters of the Town of Boſton in New England. And if the aforeſaid Society or Corporation ſhould happen to be diſſolved or deprived of their privilege, he gave the ſaid Maner, with all the profits, to the Town of Boſton with the Miniſters thereof, to benefit the Colledge as above, and to promote the Converſion of the poor Indians. This eſtate, in 1710, was reckoned worth 120l. per ann.

is one of thoſe Eſtates, ſo named from the Higham family, its ancient owners.

The manſion houſe lies near the road leading from Goldanger to Tolleſbury [P].

Here lived ſucceſſively three of the name of Robert Higham, that are buried, with their wives, in this Church. The firſt dyed 23 June 1427: Leticia was his wife. The ſecond dyed 16 Auguſt 1429: Margaret was his wife. The third dyed 4 February 1460: His wife was Johanna, daughter of Thomas Barrington.—The two following are buried in the Chancel of Goldanger Church.——Thomas Heigham Eſq; who dyed 31 December 1531. and——Antony 15 November 1540. The latter, at the time of his deceaſe, held the maner of Higham of Sir Thomas Seymour, as of his maner of Tolleſhunt Major, by fealty, and rent of 3s. 4d. He had alſo the maners of Wickhams in Woodham-Ferrers, Harons in Althorn, Batells in Bradwell, &c.——Robert Higham, his ſon and heir (w), had licenſe, 24 October 1545, to alienate the maner of Higham, with appertenances to Stephen Beckingham. A fine was levied ſoon after between the ſaid Stephen, plaintiff, and Robert Higham Eſq; and Margaret his wife, deforc' for the Maners of Highams, and Joyces; 20 meſſuages, 1 dove-houſe, 3 orchards, 4 gardens, 300 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 400 of paſture, 40 of wood, 400 of marſh, and 40s. rent in Tolleſhunt Major, and Darcy, Goldanger, and Little Totham (x).

Mr. William Harris is the preſent owner of this eſtate.

JOYCES,

as appears by the Fine above-mentioned, belonged to the Higham Family, and was paſſed to that of Beckingham. It is now a conſiderable Farm in this pariſh.

The manſion houſe lies about a mile and a half ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

Stephen Beckingham Eſq; who dyed 10 December 1558, held the maner, or capital manſion and farm of Highams and Joyces, and all other meſſuages, lands, tenements, meadows &c. in Tolleſhunt Major, Goldanger &c. belonging to this maner, or capital meſſuage.——Thomas his ſon and heir, held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe 9 October 1596 (y).

Chriſtopher Clitherow, of Clitherow in Lancaſhire, Alderman of London, one of the Sheriffs in 1625, and a Knight, and Lord Mayor in 1636, had this eſtate. He married, firſt, Catharine, daughter of Thomas Rowland; and his ſecond wife was Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Cambel, Kt. and Alderman (z). His ſon——Henry dying without iſſue, left this eſtate to his two Siſters, Jemima, and Mary.

Jemima was married to Robert Heath, citizen of London; and had by him a ſon named——Henry.——Mary, who inherited Joyces, had by her huſband Thomas Fettiplace, M. D. ſeveral children. Their only ſurviving daughter Waldegrave Fettiplace, being married to William Waddis of London, cordwainer, left two daughters, . . . wife of . . . Payn, the other unmarried.

This eſtate belongs now to Mr. Iſaac Foſter.

WYKES, is another reputed Maner in this pariſh.

The manſion houſe ſtands on Tiptree-heath, near the Parſonage called Renters: It is ancient, and part of it pulled down.

We have no account of this eſtate till 1525, when we find it granted to Cardinal Wolſey (a). Probably it was part of the endowment of ſome Religious Houſe.

Sir John Huddilſton had licenſe, 1 May 1554, to alienate the maner of Wekes, in Tolleſhunt Major, to

Thomas Darcy; who, at the time of his deceaſe 27 October 1557, held it, and 2 meſſuages, 2 gardens, 60 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 120 of paſture, 12 of wood, 160 of furze and heath, and 25s. rent, in this pariſh, Norton, Monden, and Bramſton, [ ] of the Queen (b).——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, had it not, but his next brother——Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Oſith, dyed poſſeſſed of it 25 December 1587, leaving——John, his ſon and heir (c); afterwards Serjeant at law; who ſold it to

John Sammes, of Langford-hall, Gent. above-mentioned. For the latter, at the time of his deceaſe 20 May 1608, held this maner of Weekes, alias Wicke; and a meſſuage called Allens; and the great Tithes of this pariſh, of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice: and a capital meſſuage, lands, and tenements called Renters of Sir Thomas Beckingham, as of his maner of Tolleſhunt Major (d). This John Sammes married, firſt Elena, daughter of Thomas Golding of Poſtlingford in Suffolk; and his ſecond wife was Anne daughter of John Brett of this pariſh. By the firſt he had George, John, Elianor, and Mary; and by the ſecond, John, and Elizabeth.——George, the eldeſt ſon and heir, by Abigail daughter of John Rand had John, George, Abigail, and Elizabeth.——John, the eldeſt ſon, had for ſucceſſors —— George, —— George ——and another George. Of this laſt the Eſtate was purchaſed by

Charities.

Sir Stephen Beckingham gave the Sum of forty ſhillings for ever to the Poor of this pariſh; and, for the perpetual payment of it tyed a capital meſſuage called the Freme, lying in Tolleſhunt Darcy.

Sir Chriſtopher Clitherow did give out of Highams and Joyces in this pariſh Three pounds per annum for ever to the Poor of this pariſh; paid every Chriſtmaſs day, at the Communion-table to the Miniſter and Church wardens, and by them diſtributed to 12 poor people that take no collection.

The Church, dedicated to St. Nicolas, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled; in a brick-Tower are three Bells.

On the north ſide of the Chancel was a Chapel called Beckingham's Chapel, with a ſtately Monument of alabaſter finiſhed 15 September 1609, for Stephen Beckingham Eſq; But both Monument and Chapel are demoliſhed, and the arch or opening between that Chapel and the Church is walled up.

This Church belonged to the Priory of Caldwell in Bedfordſhire, founded by Simon Baſſet Alderman of Bedford, in 1152, for Canons of the Order of St. Auguſtin. The Convent kept the whole profits to themſelves, and ſupplied the Cure by a ſecular Prieſt, till Dr. Stokeſley, Biſhop of London, brought them to agree 7 February 1530, to the erection and endowment of a Vicarage, which is at large recited by Mr. Newcourt (e).

This diligent author has found an Inſtrument, without date, by which the Prior of Caldwell conveys this Rectory to William Prior of Dunmow. And, accordingly, in Fulk Baſſet's Regiſter, the patronage is ſaid to be in the Priory of Dunmow. How it came to be again in that of Caldwell, which preſented in 1495, he hath not found. 'Tis very probable it was only leaſed for a term of years.

If I were to gueſs why the Priory of Dunmow rented this, it may be that having lands in this Pariſh, and Caldwell only the Parſonage, it might be for their convenience. That Dunmow Priory had lands in this Tolleſhunt, though the memory of them be loſt as well as the name, appears from K. Henry VIIIth's grant to Robert Earl of Suſſex, of lands called Bargholts, in Great, that is this Tolleſhunt (f), amongſt other poſſeſſions of Dunmow Priory. Perhaps the leaſing out the Parſonage gave the Houſe the name of Renters.

It ſtands on Tiptree-heath, near the Maner-houſe of Wykes. The Priory of Caldwell leaſed out, in 1528, the Rectory of this pariſh to Antony Darcy. And by virtue of that leaſe, he and his ſon Thomas Darcy Eſq; preſented ſeveral times to the Vicarage: As did Brian Darcy (g).

In 1608, John Sammes dyed poſſeſſed of this Rectory, with all its rights members and appertenances, and the Tithes of hay and corn, and the glebe lands; which he held of the King as of his maner of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty only, in free ſocage: And the capital meſſuage, lands, tenements, &c. called Renters, he held of Sir Thomas Beckingham. His ſon——George Sammes ſucceeded him (h). They had alſo the Advowſon of the Vicarage. John Sammes ſold the premiſſes to Robert Jegon of Kelvedon, Attorney at law.

Capt. John Sammes, by his will dated 18 May 1675, gave to the Vicar of this pariſh, and his ſucceſſors for ever, all the Tyth Hay and Graſs of his Rectory of Tolſhunt Major. But after his death this being not paid, it was at laſt ſettled by a Commiſſion for Charitable uſes, 4 April 1699, That the ſum of Five pounds ſhould be paid, yearly for ever on Chriſtmaſs-day, unto the Vicar of this pariſh and ſucceſſors by the owners of the Rectory or Parſonage of Tolſhunt Major called Renters, which eſtate was tyed by the teſtator for payment of this bequeſt. The Miniſter is obliged to preach a Sermon on Chriſtmaſs day.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 480l.

8. TOLLESHUNT KNIGHTS lies north-eaſt of Tolleſhunt-Beckingham, adjoyning to the Hundred of Winſtree. Beſides Tolleſhunt-Knights, in Latin Militis, and in French Chivaler, it is called Parva, Little in oppoſition to the laſt deſcribed pariſh, which, as we have ſeen, is ſometimes ſtyled Magna; and Tolleſhunt-Buſhes, [corruptly Biſhop,] becauſe the Church lies upon a heath among Buſhes. From what Knight it was named, I do not find.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Ailmar, Alric, and eight freemen, were owners of the lands in this pariſh; which Ralph Baignard, and Gonduin, held at the time of the Survey.

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Barnewalden, or Barne-hall. 2. . . . . . . that of Brooke-hall.

The Maner of BARNEWALDEN.

The manſion houſe is pleaſantly ſituated upon the ſide of an hill, near a mile north-eaſt from the Church; and hath an extenſive view of Merſey iſland, and out at ſea.

Roman pavements were dug up near it, ſome years ago, ſeveral feet under ground.

This is the Maner that belonged at the time of the Survey to Ralph Baignard [Q].

One Bernard held it under him, and it may poſſibly have taken its denomination from him and the Saxon word Ƿeald, wood, qu. Bernard's wood.

William Baignard, grandſon of Ralph, loſt this and his other eſtates for ſiding with K. Henry the firſt's enemies; and that King gave them to Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, anceſtor of the noble Family of Fitz-Walter: for which reaſon this was holden of that Family. [See a fuller account of them in the other Volume, p. 427].——Walter Fitz-Robert ſucceeded his father in this eſtate. And under him Robert de Tolleſhunt held one knight's fee in the reign of K. Henry II. (k).

In the reign of K. Edward II. this eſtate came into the Family of Patteſhull. For, in 1316, a fine paſſed between Walter de Pateſhull, and Joanna his wife, plaintiffs, and Thomas de Pateſhull deforc' of the maners of Barwaldone and Salcote Verley, with appertenances, and 440 acres of arable, 11 of meadow, 60 of paſture, 25 of wood, and 27s. rent in Tolleſhunt Chivaler, Tolleſbury, Layre Marny, and Wigbergh. And another fine between the ſame Walter de Pateſhull and Walter de Peldon and Alice his wife, for 1 meſſuage, 47 acres of arable, &c. He dyed in 1330, holding Careteſlond of the heirs of Robert Fitz-Walter, and the reſt of the Abbeſs of Berking, John Nicole, John le Bouſſer, William de Marney, and Richard de Teye, in ſocage.——Thomas was his ſon and heir (l). He had alſo 122 acres of arable &c. in Bardfield Saling, Stebbing, and Finchfeild. [See in the other Volume, p. 330.]——John de Patſhul had ſummons to parliament in 1342.

This eſtate was next in the Family of att Lee; ſeated at Aldbury in Hertfordſhire. John de la Lee was ſeveral times Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire. He dyed in 1307. Geffrey de la Lee was Knight of the Shire in ſeveral parliaments for the County of Hertford (m). Sir John att Lee, who dyed in 1370, held this maner of Berwaldon; and two turns in the Advowſon of this Church, and the Abbot of St. Oſith the third turn. He had alſo 76 acres of arable, 3 of paſture, &c. in Cheping Walden, and the maner of Hertiſhobury in Fernham.——Walter his ſon and heir (n), was a conſiderable man in his time, repreſentative for the County of Hertford in nine parliaments, and a Knight. He had a Park at his maner of Barn Walden in 1384. At the time of his deceaſe in 1395 he was ſucceeded by his three ſiſters: For a ſon of his, named Thomas, was dead before him without iſſue. The three ſiſters, were Margery, wife of Robert Newport; Joane, wife of John Barlee; and Alice of Sir Thomas Morewell. [See in the other Volume, p. 625.] Upon the partition of their inheritance,

Margery, or Margaret, and her huſband R. Newport, had this eſtate. He dyed 28 October 1428, and ſhe 20 January 1467 (o).——William Newport, their ſon and heir, held this maner of Berwaldon of the Abbeſs of Berking, and Lady Fitz-Walter: and dyed in 1434 (p). By Cecily his wife remarried to . . . . Bothe, and that held this eſtate in dower till her deceaſe in 1477, he had——George, born in 1427 (q); who by Margery his wife, daughter of William Tirwhitt, had Robert, and 5 daughters, one of whom was married to . . . Bendiſh, and afterwards to William Wentworth. He held this eſtate of the Abbeſs of Berking only, by the ſervice of 3 s. per ann. and departing this life 27 October 1484, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Robert, then 33 years old (r). He held 60 acres, parcel of this maner, of the Abbeſs of Berking; and lands called Prebeours, other parcel of the ſame, of Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, in ſocage; and the remainder of this maner, of Sir Robert Ratcliffe, Lord Fitz-Water. Morley and Montegle, 1 July 1622 (t). —— Henry 10 May 1655. They held this eſtate of the maner of Filloll's-hall ——Thomas, the laſt Lord Morley and Montegle, ſold it to Antony Abdy Eſq; Alderman of London: From whom it deſcended to his ſon——Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. and then to —— Sir John——Sir Robert, and the late——Sir John, who left it to his aunt ——Mrs. Cranke, for her life. For a more particular account of the Lords Morley, ſee the other Volume, p. 512. and for the Abdy family, ſee above, p. 177.

MANYFELD WIC, that goes along with this eſtate, ſtands near the Church.

It belonged, as we have ſeen, to John Newport; and then to the Parker family (u) [S]. ——Sir Martin Lumley, of Bardfield, held in 1634, this eſtate, and a meſſuage called Hubbards-farm, in Tolleſhunt Knights, of the maner of Filloll's hall (w).

The Maner of BROOKE-HALL.

The manſion-houſe ſtands on the north ſide of a Brook, which occaſioned the name. It is a mile and a half north-weſt from the Church.

This eſtate belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Alric: One Gondwin held it at the time of the Survey [T], being the only Eſtate he had in this County.

It was early in the Abbey of St. Oſith: but by whom given we do not find. The Abbot had free warren in his lands here, by charter of K. Henry III. (x).

The Abbey leaſed out the demeſnes to William Wood for 4l. rent (y). They were afterwards lett to John Heywood, for the yearly rent of 14*l*. 10*s*. 1d. (z). This maner continued in that Houſe till the Suppreſſion, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. granted it, in 1539, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, upon whoſe attainder it was again in the Crown; and that King granted it to his forſaken Queen the Lady Anne of Cleve.

In 1599, Aug. 1. Qu. Elizabeth gave the maner of Brokehall once belonging to St. Oſith's monaſtery, to John Spencer Eſq; born at Waldingfield in Suffolk, and Alderman of London. He was knighted, and at the time of his deceaſe, 30 March 1609 [U], held the maners of Brocks-Hall; of Bowre-hall, and Bocking-hall in Weſt-Merſey; and of Rewſalls and Eaſt-Merſey; and the Rectories of Eaſt-wood, and Newport-pond. By Elizabeth Bromfield his wife he left—Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, wife of the Rt. Hon. William Lord Compton (a). Spencer their ſon ſucceeded who was Earl of Northampton, ſlain on Hopton-Heath near Stafford, 19 March, 1642-3. fighting for K. Charles I.

This eſtate, as that of Merſey, was ſold to Ralph Fox of London, Taylor, who left it to ——Daniel his ſon and heir; Daniel left it to —James Fox, and he to—John Fox his nephew, who kept Court here 19 September, 1715 [W].

It belongs now to Marcellus Oſborne, Eſq;

Under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, John Filoll held 5 fees and a half in Tolleſhunt, Little Badewe, Hokle, and Mokelinton. And under Walter Fitz-Walter, in 1386, Sir Richard de Sutton, and Sir John de Bohun held the ſame (b).

Beſides the above-mentioned Eſtates, Mr. Joſeph Beſton; John Keys; John Darling, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Four pounds per annum, to be diſtributed in bread, were given to the poor of this pariſh, out of lands in Tolleſbury, called Rolles.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; tyled. In the Bellfrey which is of wood, with a Spire ſhingled, are two Bells. It ſtands low amongſt the Buſhes.

This Rectory was at firſt in the gift of the lords of Barnwalden-maner.

In 1370, Sir John att Lee had two turns in the Advowſon, and the Abbey of St. Oſith every third turn, as mentioned above. Afterwards the Abbey got every other turn. Henry Barlee, a deſcendent from one of Sir Walter att Lee's Siſters, preſented in 1468. At the Suppreſſion of Abbeys the Crown took the whole Advowſon, and have had it ever ſince.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 554l. 2 s. 0 d.

9. TOLLESHUNT DARCY lies ſouth of Tolleſhunt Knights, and between Tolleſhunt-Beckingham and Tolleſbury.

It hath been diſtinguiſhed from the two others by the ſucceſſive additions of Tregoz, Boys, and Darcy, three conſiderable Families that have been lords of the capital Maner.

Siuuard, and Gotra, were poſſeſſors of the lands in this pariſh, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: Robert Piperell, and Robert Greno held them at the time of the Survey [W].

From hence aroſe theſe three Maners. 1. The maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoz, alias Boys, alias Darcy. 2. . . . . that of Gernons. 3. The maner of Verli.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT DARCY, with VERLI.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the ſouth ſide of the Church yard. It is ancient, and moated round, with a ſtone bridge over the moat.

In the wainſcot of the Parlour are carved the Arms of Darcy; viz. Argent, 3 cinquefoils, gules.

Of Ralph Peverell there is a full account in the other Volume, p. 130, under Hatfeild-Peverell, to which we ſhall beg leave to refer.—— William Peverell his ſon ſucceeded him. This eſtate was holden afterwards of the Honor of Peverell.

In K. Stephen's reign it was in the Family of Tregoz. For that King confirmed lands given to Coggeſhall Abbey, in this pariſh and Tollſhunt-Major, by Geffry Tregoz (b). In 1263, K. Henry III. granted free warren to Robert Tregoz in Tolleſhunt and Blunteſhalle, which, together, made two Knights fees (c).

Robert de Valoines who dyed in 1282, held the maner of Tolleſhunt of the King in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and in the ſame maner 200 acres of arable, and 20 of paſture, of John Fillol, by the ſervice of 3 s. 4 d. per ann.——Roeſe and Cecily were his daughters and heirs. He held alſo Blunteſhalle in Witham (d), by inheritance from Roeſe his mother, daughter and coheir of William le Blund. Eve was wife of this Robert de Valoines, relict of Nicolas Tregoz, and dyed about 1293. Upon the death of this Eve, there were different claims for the inheritance of Tregoz, which were brought into Parliament, in 1293, Nicolas being dead without iſſue. He had four Siſters married, whoſe ſons put in their Plea; viz. John de Bois, ſon of Lucy; James de Burnham, ſon of Alice; John de Ludham, ſon of Joane; John de Gernon, ſon of Hawiſe.

On the other hand, Hugh de Creppinges moved, that he might have livery of the eſtate, and not the others, becauſe Nicolas de Tregoz did infeoff him, the ſaid Hugh, of this eſtate, and put him in poſſeſſion of it long before his death; untill Hugh demiſed it to Eve, at will. But, upon the whole, it appearing that the eſtate had been ſettled on Nicolas and Eve only for life, remainder in want of iſſue, to the heirs of Nicolas, the coheirs above-named were put in poſſeſſion (e). How this Maner was holden by thoſe coheirs, will appear by the following Extracts from the Inquiſitions. James de Burnham, who dyed in 1295, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of 3 quarters and an eighth part of a knight's fee, the fourth part of one meſſuage, 63 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow, half an acre of paſture, 4 of wood, and 7 s. rent: And of the Abbeſs of Berking, 17 acres of arable, by the rent of 5 d. yearly; and of John Filoll, 4 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow, by the rent of 3 s. 4 d. ob. —— Hubert was his ſon (f).——Thomas de Burnham, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1303, held 60 acres of arable in the maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoz, which whole maner, with that of Blunteſhale, was holden of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of 2 knights fees.

Alice, his ſiſter and heir (g), ſold, in 1306, 140 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 5 of paſture, 3 of wood, 10 of more, 24 s. rent, in Tolleſhunt; and the fourth part of a meſſuage in Blunteſhall; holden of the King in ca. of the Honor of Peverell, by the ſervice of 2 knights fees, and ſuit at the Court of Hatfeild Peverell; to

John de Boys, and Petronilla his wife: and a Fine paſſed, in 1316, for the ſame, under the title of 11 meſſuages, 168 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 20 of wood, 71 of marſh, 140 s. and 4 d. rent, with appertenances, in the three Tolleſhunts, Tolleſbury and Langely (h). So that here was an end of the family of Burnham. John de Boys, at the time of his deceaſe in 1340, held in Tolleſhunt Tregos 285 acres of arable, 27 acr. and 1 rood of paſture, and 10 s. 11 d. ob. q. rent of aſſize from the free tenants, of the King, as above, by the ſervice of 5 parts of a knight's fee: and ſome meſſuages, 102 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 8 of wood, 12 of paſture, and 5 s. in work of the cuſtomary tenants, of the maner of Kelvedon; and of the Abbeſs of Berking, by the ſervice of 20 d. a year, 80 acres of arable, 2 of paſture, 15 of more, and 13 s. 8 d. rent of aſſize; and of the Abbot of Coggeſhall, by the ſervice of 16 d. a year, 14 acres of paſture; and of the heir of John Gernoun, by the ſervice of a half penny a year, 16 acres of arable.—— John de Boys, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1361 (i). His ſon——John de Boys was alſo poſſeſſed of it in 1403, and departing this life 15 Auguſt 1419 was buried in the Chapel adjoyning to this Church (k).

No more of his poſterity is mentioned, but he ſeems to have had Children, becauſe in the account of the Darcy Family I find, that John, ſon of Robert Darcy of Maldon, married a daughter and coheir of . . . Boys of Tolleſhunt-Tregoes. By this match the eſtate coming to Darcy, might be blended with his other maner here, and ſo the name of Tregoz, laid aſide for Darcy's, who had by this time both maners, that of Peverell, and Gernons.

Seeing this Family had ſuch large Poſſeſſions in this pariſh, and enjoyed them a conſiderable time, I therefore think it proper to give here a particular account of them. They derived themſelves from the ſame ſtock as the noble Family of Darcy Earls of Holderneſſe, namely from Norman de Areci, living at the time of the Conqueſt. This branch, in particular, ſprung from Norman Darci, to whom K. Edward I. granted the marriage of . . . D'amory, of Little Maldon; and he had by her——Henry Darcy, Sheriff of London in 1327, and Mayor in 1337, the firſt of the family that had lands in Eſſex; namely the maner of Great Yeldham.——Thomas was his ſon and heir, who being a ſpend-thrift, ſold his father's lands before the year 1366.——Thomas, his ſon, was enfeoffed of lands in Thurrock in 1394. By . . . . daughter of . . . . Torell he had his ſon and heir——Robert Darcy, of Maldon, ſteward and executor to Joane Counteſs of Hereford and Northampton, and who purchaſed large eſtates. By his wife, Alice, daughter and heir of Henry Fitz-Langley of Maldon, widow of John Ingoe, he had, Robert, THOMAS; and ſix daughters, Elianor, married to Sir William Tyrell of Heron; Anne, to . . . Montgomery; Margaret, to William Tyrell of Gipping; Alice, to John Clopton; Elizabeth to Henry Bruyn; Catharine, to Robert Crane. Robert, the eldeſt ſon, was of Danbury, and referring to the note below for a further account of him [X], we ſhall proceed to Thomas Darcy Eſq; [called by ſome John,] the ſecond ſon, who ſettled in this pariſh, had two wives. The firſt, or ſecond, for it is not certain which, was, . . . daughter and heir of . . . . Bois of Tolleſhunt Tregoz; with whom I ſuppoſe he had this maner; the other wife was Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, or South Okendon, Eſq; He is not recorded to have had any iſſue by the daughter of Bois: But by the other he had —— Antony Darcy Eſq; his ſon and heir; Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1511; who married Elizabeth daughter of Chriſtopher Wilkinſon Eſq; and had by her three ſons, Robert, that took to wife Joan daughter of John Baſſet Eſq; remarried to Francis Bernard, but he dyed 30 March 1535, in his father's life-time, without iſſue; the ſecond ſon was Thomas; and the third Antony of Norwich. Their father dyed 18 October 1540; and his wiſe 24 February 1535, and are both buried in this Church. ——Thomas, the ſecond ſurviving ſon and heir, born in 1511, married, firſt, Catharine . . . . who dyed 7 July 1535. His ſecond wife, was Anne, daughter of Sir John Munday, Lord Mayor of London, and he had by her Thomas; and Antony; and 3 other ſons. She dyed 3 January 1540. His third wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Heydon; widow of Robert Bedingfeild, by whom he had Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Oſith, and Arthur that left no iſſue. She dyed 23 Auguſt 1559, and her huſband 27 October 1558. They are all buried in this Church.—— Thomas Darcy Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was Sheriff of Eſſex in 1580, and dyed 2 September 1586. He married Margaret, daughter of Euſtace Sulyard of Runwell Eſq; and had by her, Thomas; Euſtace; John, who dyed without iſſue: and ſix daughters, Bridget; Dorothy; Margaret; Anne; Mary wife of Richard Southwell, of Woodriſing in Norfolk; and Elizabeth wife of Henry Maynard, of Great Waltham, Eſqres. —— Thomas Darcy Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Camilla, daughter of Vincent Guicciardine, of Florence, remarried to Francis Harvey of Ickworth Eſq; and had by her Thomas, and two other ſons, who dyed young; and ſix Daughters, Mary, wife of Chriſtopher Nevill, third ſon of Edward Lord Abergavenny; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Henry Mildmay of Woodham-Walter Kt. younger brother to Sir Thomas Mildmay, of Moulſham-hall, Kt. and Bart. Bridget, wife of Sir George Fenner Kt. Frances, of Sir Henry Vane, Kt. Secretary of State to K. Charles I. and Margaret, wife of John Browne. The name of the Sixth is not mentioned: She dyed young. Their father departing this life 14 November 1593, aged 33 years, was buried in the Chapel belonging to this Church, where a ſumptuous monument was erected to his memory.

For an account of Brian Darcy, of Tiptree and St. Oſith above-mentioned, and his heirs and ſucceſſors, ſee the other Volume. p. 140.

We ſhall now proceed to ſhew what Eſtates the Darcy Family had in this pariſh. In the reign of K. Henry VI. Robert Darcy held one knight's fee in Tolleſhunt, late Robert Gedding's, and [X] This Robert was of Maldon and Danbury; knighted; and Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1420. He dyed about 1449. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Tyrell of Heron, he had, Thomas; Robert; and Elizabeth, wife of William Barty, or Berkley.—Thomas Darcy Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, was Squire of the body to K. Henry VI. and Edward IV. and dying 22 September 1485, was buried in the Church of All-Saints in Maldon. He married Margaret, daughter and coheir of John Harleſton of Suffolk by Mary Bardwell, and had by her Roger; John; Robert, who dyed 28 April 1514, without iſſue; and Margaret.—Roger Darcy, of Danbury Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1506, and dyed 3 September 1508. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth of Nettleſted; that had been married before to John Bourchier Earl of Bath; and to Thomas Windham; he had Thomas, born in 1506; Elianor; Thomaſine, wife of Sir Richard Southwell, mother of Elizabeth wife of Sir George Heneage; Margaret; and Elizabeth, wife of John Leigh.—Sir Thomas Darcy, the ſon and heir, married Elizabeth daughter of John de Vere, the 15th Earl of Oxford. He was created Baron Darcy of Chiche 5 April 1551. And for a more particular account of him, and his poſterity, we ſhall beg leave to refer to the pariſh of Cice, or St. Oſith, where was their Seat and reſidence.

afterwards John de Boys's, called Tolleſhunt-hall (l).——John Darcy being attainted for his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, K. Edward IV. granted in 1471, the maner of Colſond [Tolleſhunt] Darcie to his brother Richard Duke of Glouceſter (m).

This is the firſt time we meet with the addition of Darcy, but that of Tregoz continued as low as the reign of Qu. Mary and K. Philip.

Antony Darcy Eſq; who dyed 18 October 1540, held the maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoos, alias Tolleſhunt Darcy, of John Earl of Oxford; then worth 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year; paying to the Sheriff of this County 6 s. He held alſo the maner Vyrley, of Sir Thomas Semer, as of the maner of Tolleſhunt Major, worth 30 l. per ann. by fealty, and rent of 2 s. And a meſſuage, and 40 acres of arable, in this pariſh called Barons, by fealty and yearly rent of 2 s. And another meſſuage here, and 20 acres, called Betts, by fealty, and rent of 6 d. both holden of the maner of Typtree.——Thomas Darcy, Eſq; his ſon and heir (n), held this maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoos, alias Tollſhunt Darcie; and 1 meſſuage, or tenement, 500 acres of paſture, 100 of marſh, 40 of wood, and 10 of meadow, called Skynners Wyke; another meſſuage, and 35 acres of paſture called Heronſhaw; and another meſſuage, and 30 acres of paſture, called Gerrards: and four crofts, or cloſes, called Formes, Hookes, Flowers, Wyggs; and Buſhie leez, 10 acres; He held alſo in this pariſh a meſſuage, 30 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 120 of paſture, and 6 of wood; called Lambrokes, all of the Earl of Oxford. And the maner of Virlee, in this pariſh and Tolleſhunt Major, of Stephen Beckingham Eſq; by fealty and yearly rent of 2 s. And the Parſonage here, with a granary, a curtilage, and a moat, and 31 acres of arable, and Priors hide 30 acres more. Beſides lands in other places [Y]. He dyed 27 October 1557, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Darcy Eſq; then 20 years old (o); who departing this life in September 1587, left——Thomas his ſon and heir. He held the maners of Tolleſhunt Darcy, and Virley; and Copland wood; with all rents and ſervices, ſuit at the Court of Mandeville, Court lete, liberties, privileges, &c. alſo Parkers land, and Bowchers, in the three Tolleſhunts and Tolleſbury, newly purchaſed, then worth 10 l. a year; and Lee-hoo, &c. At the time of his deceaſe, 14 November 1593, he had five Daughters, living, then very young; Margaret, 8 years old; Mary, 6; Elizabeth, 5; Bridget, 2; and Frances, one (p). It is ſaid in the Inquiſition, that between the taking of it and the Father's death, Margaret dyed: But when his Monument was put up, Margaret is mentioned as alive, and is ſaid to have been afterwards married to John Browne [Z].

To whom theſe five coheireſſes were married, hath been juſt mentioned above; namely, Elizabeth to Sir Henry Mildmay, Kt. younger brother of Sir Robert; and his ſucceſſor at Moulſham-hall, &c.

But before we ſhew how they diſpoſed of them, it will be proper to give an account of the firſt and ancienteſt poſſeſſors of the Maners of Gernons, and Verli; before they came into the Darcy family.

The Maner of Gernons took its name from Robert Gernon [A], abovementioned, lord of Stanſted Montfichet, upon which account this was holden of that Barony.

As low as the year 1314 the family de Verli had this eſtate. For then a Fine paſſed between Philip de Verli, plaintiff, and Walter de Patteſhull, deforc.' for this maner of Tolleſhunt-Tregoz, with appertenances (q). Walter, at the time of his deceaſe in 1330, held the maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoz, of John de Lancaſtre, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (r). We find at Stanſted, John de Lancaſter ſucceeding there to Gernon's eſtate. [See in the other Volume, p. 577.]

Stanſted being purchaſed by one of the noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford, this maner came to be holden of them. For inſtance, Robert de Gedding held a knight's fee under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford: and under Thomas the 8th Earl (s). In 1340, John de Boys held of the heir of John Gernoun 16 acres of arable here, by the ſervice of a half penny a year (t). And, in 1384, Robert Boys held this eſtate of the Vere Family (u).——John Boys held, in 1399, a knight's fee under Aubrey de Vere, in Tolleſhunt Boys, which is the firſt time that name occurrs. The ſame John Boys is ſaid to hold the maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoz of the Honor of Bologne, in 1406 (w).

In the reign of K. Henry VI. Robert Darcy held one knight's fee in Tolleſhunt, late Robert Gedding's, and afterwards John de Boys's called Tolleſhunt-hall. This eſtate was forfeited by the attainder of——John Darcy, and given by K. Edward IV. to his brother the Duke of Glouceſter, afterwards K. Richard III. as mentioned above.——Antony Darcy, however, did homage for it at Caſtle-Hedingham in 1504 (x). And, at the time of his deceaſe in 1540, held this maner, called the maner of Tolleſhunt Tregoos, alias Darcy, of the Earl of Oxford.——Thomas, his ſon, held the ſame alſo, of the Earl of Oxford. And——Thomas Darcy, grandſon of the laſt, left five Daughters coheirs, as we have ſeen above.

The Maner of VERLI

appears to have been originally part of Gernon's Maner, and to have taken its name from Robert de Verli, above-mentioned, tenant to Robert de Gernon. In perſons ſurnamed de Verli it continued down to the year 1314, as hath been ſhewn a little above. It was holden of the Maner of Tolleſhunt Major.

Antony Darcy dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1540, as did his three ſucceſſors of the name of Thomas. Upon the death of the laſt in 1593, it fell among his five Daughters and coheirs above-mentioned. There belonged to this eſtate lands called Bradfeilds, Highfeilds, Gosfeild, Home-mead, and 3 crofts of Bridge-houſe (y).

Having traced down the Maners of Gernons and Verli into the Darcy Family; we ſhall next ſee how the coheirs divided theſe ſeveral Eſtates.

Chriſtopher Nevill, and Mary his wife, had the Hillyfield, Half-Hyde, and other lands; in all to the amount of 290 acres.

Sir Henry Mildmay, and Elizabeth his wife, had the ſite of the capital meſſuage of Tolleſhunt Darcy-Hall; with all edifices thereto belonging; alſo Hall-fields, Flatting-fields; and other lands to the amount of 243 acres.

Thomas Browne Eſq; and Margaret his wife, had the Parſonage-houſe; Upper Wild-field; the Hoe grounds in Tolleſhunt Beckingham; and other lands to the amount of 400 acres.

Bridget Darcy had Virleys houſe, or Newick houſe; Spooners field; High field; the three Brookfields; and other lands to the amount of 330 acres.

Frances Darcy had the maners of Tolleſhunt Darcy, and Virley; Skinners wic; 238 acres of cloſes and marſhes to the ſea; and other lands to the amount of 402 acres: and the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage.

And the great Tithes growing or ariſing upon each of thoſe Five parcels were added to each of them reſpectively; upon which account the owners of thoſe lands have the great Tithes in themſelves, and their Tenants do not pay any. The deed of partition is dated 1 June 1608, and a Recovery was ſuffered.

Let us now ſee how thoſe lands were afterwards diſpoſed of.

The Maner of TOLLESHUNT TREGOZ, alias DARCY, was ſold by them, 20 January, 1609, to Richard Hale, citizen and grocer of London, founder of the Free-School at Hertford. He married, firſt, Mary, daughter and heir of . . . Lambert, by whom he had, William; Alice, wife of Humfrey Walcot, and Mary of Thomas Watkins, Eſq; By his ſecond wife he had Richard of Clobury in and departing this life 27 February 1620, was buried in the Church of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt, London. ——William, the eldeſt ſon and heir, ſeated at King's Walden in Hertfordſhire, married Roſe, daughter of Sir George Bond, Lord Mayor of London in 1587, by whom he had Richard, William, Roland, George, Thomas, Bernard, John; Alice, Winifred, Anne, Deeves, &c. He dyed 27 Auguſt 1634.——Richard Hale Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, 2 January 1634-5, releaſed this eſtate to his brother——Bernard Hale D. D. who preſented to the living in 1660, and 1662. On the 4th of May 1654, for want of heirs of his own body, he ſettled this eſtate upon his brother Roland's ſon by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Garraway Kt. namely——William Hale Eſq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Hertford in 1661 and 1678. He conveyed it, 9 February 1674 to Abraham Hedgthorn, of Colcheſter, merchant; who 27 July 1675 ſettled it in jointure on his wife, Anne, daughter of William Baſſet, of Keales in Lincolnſhire Eſq; He preſented to this Church in 1675 and 1686, and left four daughters coheirs; Anne married to Nathanael Redgrave, of Rendham in Suffolk Eſq; Sarah, Dorothy, and Suſan, that were never married. The 6th of July 1717, his widow and four daughters, ſold this Eſtate, and the Rectory, to Sir Iſaac Rebow of Colcheſter, Kt. He dyed 6 September 1726, and was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Iſaac Lemyng-Rebow Eſq; who departed this life in 1735. His widow, Mary, daughter of Matthew Martin Eſq; hath it in jointure; namely the Maner, the Hall-farm, with another leſſer farm, and the Rectory, or Great Tithes except ſuch parts of them as had been granted to the coheireſſes with their ſhares of the Eſtates.

The Maner of GERNONS, though no ſuch place is at preſent known by that name, came from Thomas Darcy and Brian Darcy Eſqres. and Sir Thomas Darcy, of Braxted lodge Bart. to Frances, one of his daughters, married to Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York. His ſon,——Sir Darcy Dawes, enjoyed it after him; whoſe daughter——Elizabeth brought it in marriage to Edwin Laſcelles Eſq; and it is now in four Siſters.

As to VIRLE, or Newick-houſe, Bridget Darcy, who had it for her purparty, was married to Sir George Fenner. He ſold Virles, and the manſion houſe called Newick-houſe to Frances being married to Sir John Dawes, Bart. brought this eſtate into that Family.

LANGBROKES,

an ancient ſeat here, formerly reputed a Maner, is about half a mile north from the Church.

It was holden by a branch of the Gernon-family: Whether as part of the maner of Tregoz, to which Gernon's mother was heir, nothing at preſent ſhows. However, it was, according to tradition, in Richard, ſecond ſon of Ralph Gernon, who married Sabina, daughter of Simon Lycambron. He dyed in 1458, leaving Helen his daughter and heir, who brought the eſtate to her huſband John Langbroke. His poſterity enjoyed it; namely——Richard, father of——John, that had iſſue——Richard. At length it came to the Darcy's, a younger branch of which reſided here, and afterwards at Patſwick. Sir Thomas Darcy of Braxted-Hall left it to his ſon, on whoſe death it came to his ſiſters, married to Sir William Dawes, William Pierpoint, and Richard Butler, Eſqres. Sir Darcy Dawes Bart. had it afterwards, and now his heirs.

SKINNERS-WIC belongs now to James Bonnel Eſq;

The houſe is about a mile and a half ſouth from the Church.

The NEW-HOUSE, or WHITE-HOUSE farm, was purchaſed in 1635 by the Truſtees of the Charity of Henry Smith Eſq; and ſettled, in 1641, as is more particularly recited below under the article of Charities.

Some time ago, ſeveral Roman Urns were found in the fields near this New-houſe.

Sir Robert Bernard, or the St. John Family's, eſtates extend into this pariſh.

Dr. Daniel hath a farm here, late Mr. George Martin's.

Charities.

Henry Smith Eſq; deſerves an honorable mention in this place; for, though he was not the immediate Donor to the Poor of this pariſh, yet it is through his benevolence that this and ſeveral other pariſhes enjoy a conſiderable Charity [B]. He amaſſed a very large perſonal Eſtate; with part of which was purchaſed in 1635, of Sir Chriſtopher Nevill Knight of the Bath, and Mary his wife, Richard Nevill Eſq; his ſon and heir, and his wife, a Farm in this pariſh, called The New-Houſe, or White-Houſe farm, then of the yearly value of 140 l. but now much reduced, ſo as to be rated but at 75 l.

The uſes of this Charity are thus ſet forth in the Deed, dated 26 January 1626.

The Church-Wardens and Overſeers of the Poor, are weekly, or otherwiſe, to diſpoſe of this Charity, either in clothing, bread, fleſh, or fiſh, among the Poor of their ſaid Pariſh, which have been inhabitants therein above five years. If any clothing be given to the Poor, it ſhall be in upper garments; on the right arm of which ſhall be a Badge with the letters, H. S. that it may be known to be the gift of the ſaid Henry Smith. No poor Perſon, that takes Alms of the Pariſh, or are guilty of exceſſive drinking, profane ſwearing, pilfering, and other ſcandalous crimes; or are vagrants; or idle perſons; or have been incorrigible, when ſervants; or do entertain in-mates, ſhall have any of this charity. The Church-Wardens and Overſeers, before they receive any of the mony in this Charity, ſhall give bond to the Parſon, or Vicar, in double the ſum ſettled upon the Pariſh, That they will apply it according to the aforeſaid directions, and account for the ſame as follows. The Officers aforeſaid, yearly, on ſome Sunday between Eaſter and Whitſuntide, ſhall publickly and openly give up their accounts of this Charity in their pariſh-church, immediately after Sermon in the afternoon, of which they ſhall cauſe notice to be given the ſame day after Morning Prayer: And likewiſe on the next following Sunday ſhall, after Morning-Prayer, cauſe the ſame to be publickly read, and then ſhall affix for fourteen days in ſome publick place of their ſaid Church a fair copy thereof, ſubſcribed by themſelves, that any perſon may make exceptions, if there be cauſe; and at the expiration of the ſaid term, the ſaid copy when amended, if needful, ſhall be ſent to the feoffees, being firſt ſigned by the Miniſter, Church-Wardens, Overſeers, and Inhabitants preſent at the paſſing of, or amending thereof.

The accounts of this Charity ſhall be entred in a book to be kept in the Pariſh for that purpoſe. The Miniſter is to certifie to the feoffees the receipt of the ſecurity aforeſaid, before the Church-Wardens and Overſeers do receive any money. Upon default of any of the aforeſaid premiſes, the Pariſh to loſe the benefit of the Charity for one year.

[B] This Mr. Smith has been hardly treated, being called Dog-Smith. There was indeed one of the ſame name in Surrey that went about begging for a bone for his Dog, from which he picked out a living for himſelf. But our Henry Smyth, was born at Wandſworth, and lies buried there with an Epitaph now to be ſeen. Beſides what he gave to the Poor in other Counties for their relief, and the ſetting them to work, Croydon, Kingſton, Guilford, Darking, Farnham, Richmond, and Rygate, had each 1000 l. Wandſworth had 500 l. and almoſt all the reſt in the County ſomething conſiderable. He was a Salter and Alderman of London: and dyed 3 January 1627, or 1637. For a more particular account of him, ſee S. Dale's Antiquities of Harwich, &c. p. 80 &c.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Nicolas, hath a north aiſle or Chapel, called Darcy's Chapel, being the burial place of that family: but the Chancel is of one pace with the Church; the whole leaded. In a Tower of ſtone, embattled, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given to the neighbouring Priory of Tiptree; but by whom is not mentioned.

The Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained; of which the Prior and Convent continued patrons till 1525, when they were diſſolved, with other ſmall Monaſteries, at the inſtance of Cardinal Wolſey, in order to found and endow his two Colleges at Oxford, and Ipſwich. The Dean and Canons of Cardinal College in Oxford preſented to this Vicarage in 1527, and 1528. Upon the Cardinal's præmunire the whole devolved to the Crown, and K. Henry VIII. preſented in 1546. K. Edward VI. 27 March 1547, granted the Parſonage of Tolleſhunt-Darcy to John Dudley, Earl of Warwick (a), afterwards Duke of Northumberland; but, upon his attainder, 19 Auguſt 1553, it reverting to the Crown, Qu. Mary I. granted it to Thomas Darcy Eſq; who dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1587; as did his ſon Thomas in 1593.

Upon the partition of the Eſtates of the latter in 1608, the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, were allotted to his youngeſt daughter Frances Darcy; and paſſed from her to Hale, and to Hedgethorn, and Mrs. Rebow. But the moſt part of the great Tithes having been parcelled out among the latter Thomas Darcy's five coheirs, as above related, are now in Seven hands.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 838l. 2s. 0d.

10. TOLLESBURY joins on the weſt to the Tolleſhunts and Goldanger, and on the eaſt ends in a point againſt Merſey, having Blackwater-bay on the South.

The name is derived from the word Toll, above-mentioned, and buꞃh, or bẏꞃiᵹ, a town; This being unqueſtionably the place where Toll, or Cuſtom, was paid by Ships coming up this bay.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Gudmund, a freeman, was owner of Toliſbery; at the time of the Survey, Euſtace Earl of Bologne held it, and it was of the Fee of Ingelric [C]. The Nunnery of Berking had lands here before and at the time of the Survey; Siuuard held ſome part of it under the Abbeſs, and afterwards Ralph Piperell.

From the time of the Survey to the year 1329, the name of the Maner of Tolleſbury doth not occur in records; but that of Tolleſhunt Guiſnes, or Guyſnes, from Baldwin Earl of Guiſnes, in France, an ancient poſſeſſor; and ſometimes Little Tolleſhunt; which ſeems to be this Eſtate, and might be denominated Tolleſhunt, becauſe it extended into the adjoyning pariſhes ſo named.

It was holden of the Honor of Bologne; and the ancient account we have of it, is as follows. Torbern, Almar, Uluric, and four Freemen, were poſſeſſed of this Tolleſhunt in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; at the time of the Survey, Earl Euſtace held it, and St. Martin's Collegiate Church held part of it under him [D].

This pariſh is divided into four Maners. 1. The maner of Tolleſbury, or Bourchier's-hall. 2. The maner of St. Mary of Berking. 3. . . . that of Gorwell and Prentiſes. 4. Bohuns-hall. The Rectory is alſo a Maner.

The Maner of TOLLESBURY hath gone through theſe ſeveral names, Tholeſhunta, Little Tolleſhunt, Tolleſhunt-Guiſnes, Tolleſhunt-Bourchier, the maner of Tolleſbiry; and the maner of Over-hall, from its ſituation, or in contradiſtinction to ſome other Hall in this pariſh that lyes lower.

Bourchiers hall, the manſion-houſe, is pleaſantly ſituated on a riſing ground, about a mile north-weſt from the Church. From thence there is a pleaſant proſpect to the Sea and Merſey iſland.

In 1166, Robert le Hende held a knight's fee in Tolleſhunt of the Honor of Bologne (b).

In 1210, and 1211, Robert le Hold, which I take to be a corruption of Hende, held a fee in Tolſbir, of the fee of Bologne.

Ernulph de Hordres gave this eſtate in marriage with his daughter to Baldwin Earl of Guiſnes, who poſſeſſed theſe three knights fees about the reign of K. John. Ernulph had, beſides this, lands in Kent, Eſſex, and Bedfordſhire, which he loſt by ſiding with the Barons, and K. John gave them to Alan Marceld, a Monk of Bury (c).

But, upon K. John's death, Ernulph making his peace with the ſucceſſor K. Henry III. recovered his lands, and dyed poſſeſſed of them in 1222, leaving——Baldwin, his ſon and heir, who paying his relief had livery of his father's inheritance. He granted, or left, this eſtate to his brother——Robert; and he had a licenſe, in 1247, to impark his wood of Tholeſhunt, called Schiricheſhall, which had been of old incloſed for a Park (d).

This Robert de Guiſnes gave to Fulk Baſſet Biſhop of London, the homage in this place, of Henry de Merk; a deſcendent from Adelolph de Merk, that held this eſtate under the Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey. In 1251, the Earl of Gyſnes held Tolleſhunt, for two knights fees, and Fulk Baſſet Biſhop of London held it after him (e). —— Philip Baſſet, brother and heir of Fulk Biſhop of London [E], at the time of his deceaſe in 1271, held the maner of Tolleſhunt of the King in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, of the Honor of Bologne.——Alina, or Aliva, Counteſs of Norfolk was his daughter and heir (f); ſhe was married, firſt, to Roger le Bigod, Earl of Norfolk; and, ſecondly, to Hugh le Deſpenſer, Juſtice of England, ſlain in the battle of Lewes, fighting againſt K. Henry III. But K. Edward I. confirmed to her the maner of Tolleſhunt, which had been forfeited by her laſt huſband's rebellion (g). This Alina le Deſpenſer, Counteſs of Norfolk, by a deed without date, conveyed her maner of Tolleſhuntes Gynes to Hugh de Eſſex, in exchange for the maner of North Welde. This was about the year 1280. She dyed in 1281 (h). [See above, p. 149.] Hugh de Eſſex was deſcended from a younger ſon of Henry de Eſſex, Baron of Raley. He had an only daughter and heir,

Anne, wife of Sir John de Prayers, of Prayers, alias Boure-Hall, in Sible-Hedingham, who brought him this eſtate. Sir Thomas Prayers, their ſon, left Margaret, his only daughter, wife of Robert Bourchier, Lord Chancellor of England; and by her this Eſtate came into the noble Family of Bourchier, Earls of Eſſex.

Having traced this Maner of Little Tolleſhunt, holden of the Honor of Bologne, down to the Bourchier Family, which had before that of Tolleſbury, but ſwallowed up hitherto by the moſt conſiderable and extenſive one of Tolleſhunt; I ſhall now ſhew how long it continued in that Family.

Robert Lord Bourchier kept his firſt court here, in 1329, and had a Charter for free warren, in his maner of Tolleſbury in 1330. He dyed in 1349, holding the maner of Tollſhunt of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (i). His eldeſt ſon——John Lord Bourchier held it in the like manner, by the ſervice of 12 d. a year. As did——Bartholomew ſon and heir of John (k), whoſe daughter and ſole heir,——Elizabeth, carried it to her two huſbands Sir Hugh Stafford, and Sir Lewis Robeſſart. The latter held it of the Honor of Hugenet. She dyed in 1433, and was ſucceeded by her kinſman ——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu (l). He was made Earl of Eſſex, and held the maner of Tollſhunt of the King of his Honor of Hakenet. His ſon William being dead before him, his grandſon——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, inherited his eſtates (m), and dyed 13 March 1540. All this while Tolleſhunt comprehended the maner of Tolleſbury.

Anne Bourchier, ſole daughter and heir of the laſt, was married to William Parr, Marquis of Northampton. At the time of her deceaſe, 26 January 1570, ſhe held the maner of Tolleſburye, and 40 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 40 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of paſture, 600 of freſh marſh, 2000 of ſalt marſh, 140 acres of wood, 8 l. rent, wrec of the Sea, and free warren, in Tolleſbury, Tolleſhunt Knights and Darcy, Fering, Salcote Wyborowe, Salcote Virley, Goldanger, and Bradwell near the Sea. Her heir was her kinſman

Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley (n), afterwards created Earl of Eſſex. [For a fuller account of the noble Families of Bourchier, and Devereux, ſee above, p. 203, and in the other Volume, p. 253, &c.] Walter Earl of Eſſex dyed 22 September 1576, poſſeſſed of this maner (o) [F]. His ſon——Robert Devereux, the famous Earl of Eſſex, jointly with his brother Walter Devereux, and Chriſtopher Blount, ſold this eſtate to a farm and tenement called Oldhall, in this pariſh. He alſo held the maners of Great and Little-Maldon, and a tenement called Swaynes in Wivenho (p). He had 3 ſons, Thomas, Chriſtopher, and Jeremy. His eldeſt ſon,——Thomas Gardiner, Eſq; married Jane, only daughter and heir of Arthur Breame Eſq; and had with her the maner of Bois-hall in Halſted; [ſee in the other Volume, p. 251.] but dying without iſſue 18 October 1638, aged 68, was ſucceeded by his brother——Chriſtopher, who, by Catharine Denbold, his wife, had——Francis his ſon and heir. He married, firſt, Timothea, daughter of Sir Henry Bokenham of Thornham in Suffolk, Kt. and had by her Thomas, and Francis. By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Garrard, of Whethamſted, he had no iſſue.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, was knighted in 1660, and held this eſtate. He married Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Kempe of Spains-Hall in Finchingfield: She dyed 10 October 1654 (q).——Francis his brother, ſucceeded him, and had to wife Jemima, daughter of Robert Bacon of Redgrave in Suffolk, Eſq; remarried to Sir John Brattel of the Mint office in the Tower: She lived till 23 Auguſt 1719. —— Thomas Gardiner Eſq; their ſon and heir, married Lucy, one of the daughters and Coheirs of Col. Henry Mildmay of Graces in Little Badow. He dyed 23 Auguſt 1707, and ſhe in 1740. They had two ſons——Francis, who dyed 9 May 1727, and the Rev. Henry Gardiner, Rector of Woodham-Ferrers, who departed this life in 1736, both unmarried. They had alſo two Daughters, Lucy, wife of Sir Richard Bacon, of Gillingham, premier Baronet, and Jemima, wife of Mr. John Joſeph, Chirurgeon. —— Lucy had ſeveral children that dyed young; and Jemima had one daughter——Jemima, married to Mr. Robert Duke of Colcheſter. They have two ſons, and one daughter [G].

Mr. Thomas Hallam, or his executors, had this eſtate afterwards.——Mary, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her huſband, Philip Bennet Eſq; about the year 1733. He dyed 11 December 1761, leaving one ſon, —— Philip Bennet Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor; and one daughter named Mary.

There has been a Park encloſing Bourchiers-Hall. Another old Park called Shiricheſhall joins to Tollſhunt-Knights.

The Maner of St. Mary of Berking was ſo named, becauſe it belonged to the Nunnery of Berking [H]: and continued in it till the diſſolution of Monaſteries.

The maner-houſe, called Tolleſbury-Hall, ſtands ſouth of the Church.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted this eſtate by the name of the maner of Tolleſbury, to Thomas Lord Cromwell, a few days before he created him Earl of Eſſex (r). Upon his attainder it reverted to the Crown, and was appointed for the maintenance of the Lady Mary, afterwards Queen.

On the 12th of February 1562, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. He being ſo imprudent as to eſpouſe, with more zeal than diſcretion, the cauſe of the Queen of Scots, was attainted and beheaded in 1573. However, —— Thomas, his ſon by his ſecond Lady, Margaret daughter of Thomas, Lord Audeley, being reſtored in blood, in 1584, this Lordſhip was given him by Qu. Elizabeth in 1595, by the name of the maner of Tolleſbury, alias Tolleſbury-hall, and the ſite of the ſame, and a corn and fulling mill (s). In 1597 he was ſummoned to Parliament by the title of Sir Thomas Howard, Baron Howard of Walden, and created Earl of Suffolk 21 July 1603. By Catharine, daughter of Sir Henry Knivet he had 7 ſons, Theophilus, Thomas, Henry, Charles, Robert, William, and Edward; and four daughters. [See in the other Volume, p. 549.] He dyed 28 May 1626. —— Henry his 3d ſon; then —— William the 6th ſon; and at length——Sir Edward Howard, Knight of the Bath, his 7th ſon, ſucceeded him in this eſtate. The 29th of April 1628, he was created Baron Howard, of Eſcrick, in Yorkſhire, which was the eſtate of his mother, coheireſs to her uncle Thomas Lord Knivet, of Eſcrick. He departed this life 24 April 1675. By his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Lord Butler, he had, Thomas, William, Cecil, Edward: and Anne, married to Charles Earl of Carliſle.——Thomas, Lord Howard of Eſcrick, the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded his father; but had no iſſue, by Elizabeth his wife daughter of John Earl of Peterborough; ſo that the title and eſtate came to his next brother —— William Lord Howard of Eſcrick; the ſame that was an evidence againſt William Lord Ruſſel. He married Frances, ſecond daughter of Sir James Bridgman, brother of Sir Orlando, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and had by her, Charles; William, Edward, and Henry, which three laſt dyed young: and two daughters Mary, and Frances. —— Charles, the eldeſt ſon and heir, ſucceeded his father [I]. GORWELL and PRENTISES are ſtyled Maners, but ſubordinate to that of Bourchier's-hall, of which they hold by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; and keep no courts.

Prentiſes is at the South-weſt end of this village; and Gorwell-hall, or Gerwells, about half a mile from it, on the right hand ſide of the road leading from hence to Maldon.

They both belonged to Bilegh-Abbey; and, at the time of the ſuppreſſion, were lett in farm to John Hogan for 21 years, at the rent of 9l. 14s. 4d. (t).

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted them to Thomas Lord Cromwell (u).

Upon his diſgrace they returned to the Crown, and were allotted with the maners of Tolleſbury, Boneſhall, and High-hall, for the maintenance of the Lady Anne of Cleve, as ſhe was ſtyled; if ſhe lived in England (w). After her deceaſe they came again to the Crown, and continued there till 29 June 1566, when Qu. Elizabeth granted them to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leiceſter (x).

Mr. Roberts, of Kent, had them ſome time ago, and alienated them to Mr. Robert Taylor, of London.

Andrew Wharton, of the Middle Temple Eſq; was the next poſſeſſor. He ſold Gorwells to Mr. Francis Jeſſop, of Bedford, and the latter ſold it again to John Goodman, of Tolleſhunt-Knights, yeoman.

It belongs now to his nephew

Mr. John Wilkin.

Prentiſes was alienated by Mr. Wharton to Mr. Hawes of Chelſey, whoſe daughter brought it in marriage to John Purcel, of Clifford's-inn, Gent.

It is now the eſtate of Henry Lamb, Eſq;

The Maner of BOHUNS-HALL,

otherwiſe Bowns-hall, vulgarly Bones-hall.

The manſion houſe ſtands a little below the Church.

To what Religious Houſe, whether St. Martin's le Grand, or Tiptree, or to whom elſe, this belonged originally doth not appear. For we do not find mention of it till 1539, when it was granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, by the name of the Maner or Farm called Boneshall in Tolleſbury (y). Upon his attainder it came to the Crown.

In 1589, it belonged to Francis Craddock Eſq; and Gervaſe Howley, who had licenſe, 22 February that year, to alienate it to Margaret Whettell (z). But, the ſame year, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to

Thomas Mildmay, and others; to hold in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee (a). They had licenſe, 1 March 1603, to ſell it to

He departed this life 15 February 1623-4, leaving —— Sutton Altham, his ſon and heir, born 27 Auguſt 1622, and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Frances (b). Sutton dyed 19 July 1630, whereupon his two Siſters,——Elizabeth, then 10 years old, and Frances, 9, became his coheirs (c). [See in the other Volume, p. 33. 60. 488.]

Oſmond Beauvoir, of Downham Eſq; purchaſed it ſome years ago; and it belongs now to——Oſmond Beauvoir Eſq; Rolls farm belongs to Mr. Robert Bailey: and the Mill houſe farm to Mr. Robert Spooner.

Mrs. Montgomery; Mr. Kirby; Mr. Edward Monk; William Corbet; Samuel Chinnery; Robert Keyes; William Brand; Moſes, and John, Fletcher, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Mr. John Taylor gave three pounds a year, out of lands in Tolleſhunt Knights, to ſuch poor labouring men of this pariſh as could maintain themſelves without aſſiſtance from the pariſh.

Here is a Fair June 29.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Tower embattled are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged, with one of the Maners, to Berking Nunnery. The Rectory, or great Tithes were appropriated to it; and a Vicarage ordained, about the year 1373; the Advowſon of which continued in the Nunnery till its ſuppreſſion; when both Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage came to the Crown.

The 10th of February following, they conveyed them to Thomas Freſhwater Eſq; and John Freſhwater, and their heirs; and they preſented to the Vicarage in 1616. Purſuant to a decree in Chancery, they ſold the premiſſes, 3 March 1627, to Thomas Sandford Gent. and his heirs. William Sandford ſucceeded him, and preſented in 1670, and 1677. John Sandford, of Biſhop's Stortford Eſq; ſold the Rectory in 1720, to Samuel Ruſh, of the Park, in South-wark Eſq; and it hath continued in his heirs ever ſince. This Rectory is a ſmall Maner. The Parſonage was on the South ſide of the ſtreet, but is now down, and only a Barn ſtanding. To this Maner belong 30 acres of copyhold, and 10 acres of demeſne lands, and ſome Houſes; and all the great Tithes of the pariſh.

THE HUNDRED OF WINSTREE,

JOINS on the Weſt to that of Thurſtable; has that of Lexden on the North; is bounded on the South by the Sea; and on the Eaſt by the River Colne. In its greateſt length from weſt to eaſt it is about nine miles; and from north to ſouth where broadeſt about five miles.

The name is derived from Wina, a name not uncommon among the Saxons, or Ƿin, victory, and ꞇꞃeo, or ꞇꞃeoƿ, a tree, or wood. The Normans diſguiſed, or corrupted it into Wenſiſtrea, Wenſiſtreu, and Wenſetre; and ſome have turned it into Winſtred.

This Hundred belonged anciently to the Priory of Weſt Merſey (d), granted to it undoubtedly by Edward the Confeſſor.

Upon the Suppreſſion of that Alien Priory it came to the Crown, and hath ever ſince been under the power of the High Sheriff of Eſſex for the time being.

As to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, it is within the Archdeaconry of Colcheſter.

In this Hundred are twelve Pariſhes, of which I treat in the following order.

Layer Marney.
Layer Breton.
Layer de la Hay.
Abberton.
Fingringho.
Langenho.
Peldon.
Great Wigborough.
Little Wigborough.
Salcot Verli.
Weſt Merſey.
Eaſt Merſey.

It may ſeem unaccountable to ſome, why theſe two ſmall Diſtricts, of Thurſtable and Winſtree, ſhould be dignified with the name of Hundreds, when Becontree and Harlow are reckoned but Half-Hundreds. The way of accounting for that, is, That when, in the Saxon times, the Hundreds were divided and ſettled, the former were better peopled, and fuller of inhabitants, than thoſe of Becontree and Harlow, which were then chiefly Foreſt. For, on this coaſt there were then many Salt-works, and a great deal of Navigation and Commerce carried on.

LAYER.

In the north part of this Hundred, adjoyning to that of Lexden, are three contiguous Pariſhes, ſo called, diſtinguiſhed by the Names of their ancient moſt conſiderable owners, the Marneys, Bretons, and de la Hay.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Layre, Leyre, Legra, Lega; and may be derived either from the Brook running through them, which is ſuppoſed to have been called by the Britons, or Saxons, Lare, or Lire.

There is ſuch a Saxon word as Leᵹeꞃe, burial, but how it could be applied to this place I am not able to judge.

1. LAYER-MARNEY

The word deratiocinavit, uſed here, ſignifies, he recovered by due courſe of law. For Derationare, according to Du Freſne, ſignifies, 'litigare, in jure agere, jus ſuum diſceptare, 'ad rationem ponere, cauſam ſuam coram judice rationibus 'probare.' The old French word for it is 'derainer, ou 'deſrener;' words uſed in the Laws of William the Conqueror, § 27. and the Grand Couſtumier de Normandie. In our Common Law, the word deraign generally ſignifies to prove, to make out.

The learned T. Madox's obſervation is, That 'William I. being ſeized of the whole Kingdom of England in demeane, retained a great part of it in his own ſeiſine; and other part thereof he granted and transferred to others. He found the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and ſeveral of the Abbots and Pri-

Biſhop of this ſee continued in poſſeſſion of them we do not find. The Marney Family held the chief of them as early as the reign of K. Henry II. under Henry de Eſſex (e). However this pariſh is mentioned as holding of the Biſhop of London, as low as the year 1627 (f).

The capital Maner here is that of Layer-Marney, ſo denominated from the noble Family of Marney, who enjoyed it from the reign of K. Henry II. to that of K. Henry VIII.

Their name was anciently written de Mareni, ſometimes de Marinis, but moſt uſually de Marney [L].

About the year 1166, William de Marny held a knight's fee under Henry de Eſſex, of the Honor of Hagnet. —— Werry de Marinis was excuſed by a writ of K. Richard the Firſt, in 1194, from paying ſcutage for that King's ranſom, being after the rate of 20*s.* for each knight's fee (g). In 1206, a Fine paſſed between—— William de Marinis, pet' and Roger ſon of Hugh de Marini, tenant, for half a hide of land with appertenances in Legre, the right of the ſaid Roger, and his heirs (h). In 1254,——Ralph de Mareny, uncle of William ſon of Roger de Mareny, held lands in Layre-Marney (i). And in 1262, William de Marny purchaſed lands here of Robert le Carpenter and Mary his wife (k). To this William K. Henry III. in 1263, gave leave to impark his Wood of Lire within the precincts of the Foreſt of Eſſex. And at the ſame time he had liberty granted him to hunt within the ſaid Foreſt. He had obtained before a licenſe for free warren in his maner of Layre-Marney (l). In 1318, either this William, or anohter—William de Marny, and Catharine his wife, and their ſon Robert, joined in conveying, by fine, this maner, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Robert de Bryche [or Birch] who reconveyed them to William and Catharine for their lives, remainder to their ſon Robert, and the heirs male of his body; and in failure of ſuch, to the right heirs of William (m). To this —— Robert de Marny K. Edward III. in 1335, granted in fee, his Park of Lire, within the bounds of the Foreſt of Eſſex, which had been granted to his father William by K. Henry III. He married . . . daughter of . . . Gernon, and had by her —— William his ſon and heir, who by . . . . daughter and coheir of . . . . . Venables, left —— Robert his ſon and ſucceſſor. He was knighted, and having married Alice, daughter and heir of Richard Layer of Suffolk, and widow of Sir William Bruyn of South Okendon, had —— Sir William Marney, High-Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1402. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Richard Sergeaulx: They had 3 ſons, Thomas, William, and John; and a daughter, Anne, married to Sir Thomas Tyrell, of Eaſt-Horndon, where they both are interred. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1414, he held the maner of Leyre-Marney, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London, by fealty, and the ſervice of 18*s.* rent per an. And the maner of Arden-Hall in Horndon, and Horndon-houſe, with 100 acres of land; a meſſuage in South-Okendon; the maner of Gipperake in the Tothams, and 100*s.* rent out of the maner of Little-Leighes;——Sir Thomas his eldeſt ſon and heir, dyed in 1417, leaving only a daughter that was never married. His next brother ——William dying ſingle; the third ſon—— Sir John Marny inherited the eſtates (n); and left——Henry, his ſon and heir, a man of great abilities and courage; privy Counſellor to K. Henry VII. and K. Henry VIII. [M]; Knight of the Garter; Captain of the guard; made Keeper of the Privy Seal 4 February 1522; and 9 April following created Lord Marny. He departed this life 24 May 1523, and was buried in the Chancel of this Church, with a monument. He held the maner of Layer-Marney of the Biſhop of London, as of his Caſtle of Stortford, by fealty, and rent of 16s. 8d. per annum; and lands and tenements in this pariſh, Wigborough, and Meſſing, called Heyns; and other lands, called Betts or Bygods, holden of Sir Robert Drurye, Robert Ratcliffe Lord Fitz-Walter, Sir John Veere, Sir Thomas Tey, John Fitz-James, John Tyrell, William Cartlixſewe, and Thomas Aſhebye, as of their maner of Laer Marney, by fealty, and rent of 8s. 8d. a year. I ſuppoſe this maner was then in thoſe truſtees. He held alſo Ulcomys in Great Wigborowe and Meſſing; and Tothamſtent, alias Sawins; beſides Gibcrake &c. (o). By Thomaſine, his firſt wife, daughter of Sir John Arundel of Lanherne in Cornwall, he had John, Thomas; and Catharine wife of Thomas Bonham, of Stanway Eſq; By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Nicolas Wifield, Lord Mayor of London in 1450, he had one daughter, married to Sir Henry Bedingfield.——John, Lord Marney, his eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded him, and departed this life, 27 April 1525, poſſeſſed of the ſame eſtates as his father; and, beſides, of Bodwalls, Ewell more, &c. in Inworth (p). He was twice married. By his firſt wife, Chriſtian, daughter and heir of Sir Roger Newburgh, he had two daughters, Catharine married firſt to George Ratcliff, afterwards to Thomas Lord Poynings; and Elizabeth, to Lord Thomas Howard, ſon to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, created Lord Howard of Bindon. Bridget 4th daughter of Sir William Waldegrave, widow of Thomas Finderne Eſq; of Little Horkeſley, was Lord Marney's ſecond wife by whom he had no children.

Of the Lord Marney's coheirs this Maner was purchaſed by Sir Brian Tuke, [mentioned above, p. 117.] Secretary to Cardinal Wolſey, &c. At the time of his deceaſe, 26 October 1545, he held the maner of Layer Marney, and ſeveral lands, tenements &c. thereto belonging; and the Hall meadow, 15 acres; and the Wyke or the Dayrey; and Howfeild in the tenure of Robert Cammocke; alſo Layer Marney Park, and Wood; tenements called Andrewes, Brownings, and Montchenſe's; the Smithe-houſe; 50 acres parcel of this maner, in Great Wygborow; 4 fields called the Parſonage lands; and a tenement called Machyns; all holden of the Biſhop of London, as of his Caſtle of Stortford, and maner of Feryng Bery: He had alſo the New Park, in Meſſing; the maner of Thorp and Thorp-hall and Eaſtlee, in South-Church; [See above, p. 299.] the maner of South-weald; and lands in Naveſtock, Kelvedon-Hatch, Horn-Church, and Havering &c. (q). He married Griſild . . . that dyed 28 December 1538, and had by her, Maximilian, Charles, George; and three daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Reginald Scot; Alianor, of John Maynard, of London; and Mary, of George Touchet, Lord Audley.——Maximilian and——Charles both dyed, as far as we can find without iſſue; the latter 29 March 1547 (r).——George Tuke Eſq; the third ſon, then 23 years old, ſucceeded him; and married Margaret daughter of William Morice of Chepping-Ongar Eſq; by whom he had Brian, Thomas, and Peter. He departed this life in 1573: what iſſue——Brian had by his wife . . . daughter of Pennant, we do not find.—Thomas, the ſecond ſon, married twice. By the firſt wife Jane, daughter of Edward Bettenſon, no iſſue is recorded: But by the ſecond, who was a daughter of Edward North of Walkingham in Nottinghamſhire, he had ——Thomas Tuke Eſq; born in 1612. Peter Tuke Eſq; [N] ſold this maner and eſtate to

Sir Samuel Tryon, Kt. and Bart. of Bois-hall in Halſted. [See in the other Volume, p. 251.] He dyed 8 March 1627, holding this maner of the Biſhop of London, part of which was in the tenure of George Tuke: He held alſo a meſſuage here, lately purchaſed of Brian Tuke Eſq; ——Samuel, his ſon and heir, then aged upwards of 10 years (s), ſold this eſtate afterwards to

John Ellys, woollen-draper in St. Paul's Church-yard, and Alderman of London; who ſold it again to

Nicolas Corſellis, of London, an eminent merchant. John Corſellis, his kinſman, was naturalized in April 1664 (t). Nicolas was ſon of Zeager Corſellis, of Rouſſilier in Flanders, by Joyce his wife, daughter of . . . Vanacker of Amſterdam, or Antwerp. He married Suſan, daughter and coheir of Peter Baldo, of Leyden in Holland, merchant; and, according to Sir Edward Byſhe's Viſitation of London in 1664 (u), had two ſons, James ſon and heir, and Nicolas. Departing this life 19 October 1670, aged 70, he was buried in this Church, with a monument ſet up by his kinſman and executor John above-mentioned. —— James married . . . daughter of Peter Fountain of London, merchant, and had by her, Nicolas; Nicolas, brother of James, married Martha, daughter of Maurice Thompſon Eſq; (w) ſiſter of John Thompſon Eſq; and aunt of Maurice created Lord Haverſham, and had by her Nicolas, John, and Charles, that dyed infants.——Nicolas, ſon either of James, or his own brother Nicolas, [for by all the accounts I have ſeen it doth not clearly appear which he was,] was educated at Lincoln-College in Oxford, and Barriſter of Lincolns-inn: He departed this life 27 January 1727, and was buried in this Church. By Elizabeth his wife, youngeſt daughter of Richard Taylor, of Chiſwick Eſq; he had, Nicolas, born at Wivenhou 3 November 1697; Martha, that dyed unmarried; and Elizabeth wife of Capt. James Kettle, one of the elder Brothers of the Trinity-Houſe. —— Nicolas Corſellis Eſq; the ſon and heir, was educated, as well as his father, at Lincoln-College, where he took a Batchelor of Law's Degree. In 1741 he married Frances, daughter of Sir Cæſar Child, Bart. by whom he had two ſons, Nicolas, and Nicolas Cæſar. To the latter he left by Will this eſtate: and dying 10 December 1761 was buried in this Church. Nicolas, the eldeſt ſon, is ſeated at Wivenhou-hall, and hath married Mary, ſecond daughter of Thomas Goodell, Gent. by whom he hath 4 children. [See in the other Volume, p. 188.]

It appears by an Epitaph in this Church, that the Family derived themſelves from Frederic Corſellis, who firſt found out the Art of Printing [O]. We ſhall not enter here into a diſcuſſion of this curious point, but refer to thoſe that have treated of it in the fulleſt and moſt accurate manner; namely M. Mattaire Annales Typographici; Hiſtoire de l'Origine et des premiers Progrés de l'Imprimerie, Haye, 1740, 4°. without a name, but written by Proſper Marchand; Mallinkrot's Collection; Dr. Con. Middleton's Diſſertation; and Palmer's Hiſtory of Printing. Dr. Gerard Meerman, of Roterdam, who hath lately publiſhed two Volumes in 4°. upon this ſubject, and left it as doubtful and obſcure as he found it, aſſerts (x), that it was Laurence ſon of John, deſcended from Theodoric, a natural ſon of Arnulph Earl of Holland, who was the inventor of that excellent art. He was not ſurnamed Coſter, as Malinkrot imagined (y). Cornelius was his under-ſervant and book-binder at Harlem [P]. Mr. Ames obſerves, that the name of Freder. Corſellis was never found as Printer

The demeſnes of this Maner are upwards of 400 acres of rich paſture-land, that hath not been broke up many years.

Mr. Corſellis hath alſo a Farm in this pariſh called Stevenſon's; and another called Thorrington.

Layer-Marney-Hall, built as is ſuppoſed by Henry Lord Marney, was a grand and capacious Houſe, wherein many perſons could be conveniently lodged. The Building was ſquare, encloſing a Court, with a grand Entrance towards the South. This Entrance, or Tower as it is called, ſtill ſtanding, is eight ſtories high; from whence there is a beautiful and extenſive proſpect out a great way at Sea, and all round, though this is a flat country. What appears in it about the windows &c. as ſtone-work, is only white brick earth, framed in moulds. The windows were adorned with many eſcocheons of Arms [Q]. The Plate of this Tower, which was delivered with the firſt Part of this Hiſtory, is to be placed here, facing page 408.

HEYNS, is a capital Meſſuage in this pariſh, on a place called Heyns-green; formerly reputed a Maner, but not ſo now.

The firſt mention we find of it is in 1523, after the death of Henry Lord Marney. He held lands and tenements called Heyns in Leir-Marney, Great Wigborowe, and Meſſinge (z).

It belongs now to St. John Eſq;

CAMOCKS, is another capital meſſuage and large brick houſe, in this pariſh, ſo named from its ancient owners the Camock family.

John Camock of Layer-Marney, Gent. was father of—— Robert Camock, who dyed 1 March 1585, holding the meſſuage called Duckes, Bigwoods, Gooſes and Felces, with other lands thereto belonging, in Layer-Marney, of Peter Tuke Eſq; as of this his maner, by fealty in free ſocage. He held alſo lands in Layer Breton, Great and Little Birch, Eaſtthorp, Meſſing, Langenhoo, Eaſt Merſey, Maldon, &c. [R] (a). He married, firſt, Elizabeth daughter of Richard Badby of this place, by whom he had, Thomas, born in 1545, and five daughters. By his ſecond wife, Mary, daughter of John Everton, he had no iſſue.——Thomas, the ſon and heir, married, firſt, Urſula, daughter of John Wyrley of Dodford, in Northamptonſhire, and had by her 4 ſons and 5 daughters. Living in the Earl of Warwick's Family, he ran away with his daughter Frances, as is related above, p. 323, and had by her two ſons, and eleven daughters. He lies buried in the Church of All-Saints in Maldon.

It was purchaſed by the Rev. James Boys, Vicar of Coggeſhall, and Rector of Aldham. Upon his death in the year 1725, it came to his eldeſt ſon——James Boys Eſq; Counſellor at law, who by Suſan his wife had James; and nine daughters. By will he entailed this and other eſtates upon his ſon, and his heirs; and in caſe of failure of his iſſue, he entailed them upon his daughters, Mary, Lucy, and Martha, for their lives, and the life of the longeſt liver of them; then to go to the ſons of his eldeſt daughter Dorcas Siday, and the heirs male of their bodies; and for want of iſſue, to the ſons of Mary, Lucy, Martha, Catharine, Suſan, and Elizabeth. Their father dyed 14 Novemb. 1753.——James, the ſon, Vicar of Meſſing, married Mary, daughter of Mr. Robert Seaman of Colcheſter, but dying 20 April 1756, without iſſue, this eſtate came to Lucy, married to the Rev. Charles Ley, who hath ſeveral children.

Jeffrey's is alſo Mr. Ley's.

Layer-Wic, or THE MORE, is another eſtate, the Houſe of which ſtands in this pariſh, but the lands lye moſtly in Salcot Verley. See under that pariſh.

Mrs. Laurences; and Eſdras Cooke, have alſo ſome Eſtates here; and part of Sir John Shaw's, and Sir Roger Burgoyne's lands extend into this pariſh.

Henry Lord Marney, by his will, ordered a new Brick Alms-houſe to be built with apartments for five poor men, and one common Kitchen, roofed with timber and tiled; Alſo a garden encloſed with a brick-wall: They were to have yearly, twenty loads of wood in their yard, out of the profits of his lands; each of them towards their maintenance 10 d. every week; and a gown of Ruſſet-frize ready made, every year, againſt Michaelmaſs. This building is ſaid to have ſtood by the Pond coming to the Houſe. It was of ſhort continuance; for Qu. Elizabeth in 1592, granted the Almeſhowſe in Laier Marney, to thoſe two greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe (b).

Here is alſo a farm of above 100 l. a year, given by Mrs. Priſca Coburne to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, for the relief of ſuch perſons as ſhall be judged incurable. I believe it is called Rockingham's.

The CHURCH dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is large, and hath a north aiſle: formerly leaded, but now tiled, the Churchwardens having ſold the lead to make bullets during the civil wars in the laſt century.

The eaſtern part of this aiſle, though not ſeparated from the reſt, where it joins to the Chancel, is called the Chapel. It was begun by Henry the firſt Lord Marney, who directed in his will, that this Chapel which he had begun ſhould be new-made, with a ſubſtantial roof of timber covered with lead, and the windows to be glazed with imagery. Likewiſe that a tomb of marble ſhould be in the wall betwixt the Chancel and the ſame Chapel, with his image, and thoſe of his two wives; Thomaſine on his right hand, and Elizabeth on his left. In this Chapel he ordered maſs to be celebrated by two Prieſts for his ſoul, the ſouls of his wives, and of his anceſtors.

John Lord Marney, by his Will, dated 10 March, 1524, appoints his own burial in the middle of the new iſle, or Chapel, and the Tomb to be of ſuch ſtone as his father's, or elſe of gray marble. He appointed alſo an Image of braſs for himſelf; and, on either ſide of his Image, one for each of his two wives. Alſo that at the weſt end there ſhould be an Altar for a Prieſt to ſing for him perpetually. He gave 250 l. towards new building of the Church.

In the Tower, which is of brick, and embattled, are 4 Bells.

William de Marney by licenſe dated in 1330, founded in this Church a College, for a Warden and two Chaplains for two Chantries, which he endowed with thirty acres of land and the Advowſon of the Church. This is, according to the licenſe granted; but Mr. Newcourt mentions not the Advowſon: And that part of the endowment may have been retracted before the ſettlement. In the return of the Chantry lands, in the reign of K. Edward VI. one Prieſt only is mentioned, appointed by John Lord Marney, as it is ſaid by miſtake inſtead of William, who aſſiſted alſo in the Cure. The yearly value of the lands with which it was endowed was then 10 l.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

In 1434, Sir Nicolas Thorley, Robert Darcy Eſq; and John Symons preſented to it, as Lords of Layer Marney (c), but it doth not appear how their right accrued. At all other times the right of preſentation was clear.

Layer-Marney pariſh is rated to the land tax at 804 l.

It hath right of Commonage upon Tiptree-heath.

2. LAYER-BRETON

is eaſt of Layer-Marney. In records it is written Layer Breton, or Britton, and alſo Layer Barley alias Breton; which names it received from its ancient poſſeſſors.

The owner of the lands in this pariſh, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, was Ailmar; Ralph Piperell, and his under-tenant Turold, held them at the time of the Survey [S].

Here is only one MANER, and the manſion houſe ſtands at a little diſtance weſt from the Church.

The name of Breton occurrs in the Liſt of thoſe that came over with William the Conqueror (d): and the adventurer ſo called might be one of thoſe who attended Alan Fergent, Earl of Bretagne, at the Battle of Haſtings, where he then commanded the rear of William's army.

However, the ſurname of Breton, le Breton, and Brito, is of great antiquity in this County.

Lewis Brito granted to the Church and Monks of St. John's in Colcheſter his meſſuage, with appertenances, in Hercheſtede. His ſon, Ralph Brito confirmed the ſame; and, moreover, granted to them two parts of the tithes of all his demeſnes in Leyre-Breton [T], to hold by the ſervice of 8 d. a year. His widow Adeliza granted

[T] Thoſe demeſnes were about 220 acres. There having been great diſputes about theſe Tithes, between the Abbey and the Rector of Layer-Breton; Simon, biſhop of London, 13 November 1364, decreed, That the Rector and his ſucceſſors ſhould receive thoſe Tithes, paying the Abbot and Convent the yearly ſum of two marks, at two terms, viz. them 10s. 8d. a year in Legra, in perpetual alms, for the good of her huſband's ſoul. Their ſon, Robert le Bretun, gave to the ſame Monks 11 acres in Legra, for the Souls of his father and mother, who were buried in that Abbey (e).

In the reign of K. Richard I. Robert de Bretton held lands in and about Ardley, and was a benefactor to St. Botolph's Priory in Colcheſter (f). In the reigns of K. John and K Henry III. William le Bretun held two knights fees in Lehere in Eſſex: And Sir John le Bretoune was a Knight banneret in this County in the time of K. Edward I. (g).

In 1325, a Fine paſſed between William Bretounn, plaintiff, and John Breton, Parſon of . . . and Robert ſon of Hamon de Bryche, deforc' of the maner of Layer-Breton and the Church, by which they were ſettled on William for life, and after his death on Nicolas his ſon, and Iſabell his wife, and the heirs of the ſaid Nicolas (h). William le Bretton preſented to the Living in 1329 [U]. Nicolas Britton ſucceeded his father, and preſented to the Church in 1395, and 1397. Alice his wife dyed 6 May 1392, and was buried in this Church with an epitaph.—Richard de Bretton held half a knight's fee in Leyr Breton, near Colcheſter, and was taxed 10*s*. for his reaſonable relief for the marrying of Blanch the eldeſt daughter of K. Henry IV. with Lewis afterwards Duke of Bavaria, in 1402. The further account we have of this family, is, That William Bretton married . . . daughter of . . . Haynes Gent. and had by her William, and Grace wife of . . . Ratcliff. —— William, married Anne, daughter of . . . Denham, by whom he had Henry, Francis, William; John, and Thomas, which two laſt dyed without iſſue. We hear no more of this family here: They removed to Monckton-Farley in Wiltſhire, and ſeemed to have had no concern here after the year 1420.

The Walden Family, mentioned above, p. 131, 155, appear next poſſeſſed of this eſtate. Elizabeth, widow of Sir John Walden, preſented to the Living from 1431 to 1442. Leaving no iſſue, her huſband's two ſiſters, Catharine, wife of John Barlee junr. and Margaret wife of John Langley, inherited his eſtates. [See in the other Volume, p. 497. 570. 612.]

Catharine had this for her purparty, and preſented to the Rectory in 1465. Her huſband John Barlee dyed in 1445 (i). He left two ſons, Henry, and William.——Henry, the eldeſt ſon, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1467. He held this maner of Laier Bretton of Richard Duke of Glouceſter, as of his Caſtle of Hedingham (k); that had been given to him by his brother K. Edward IV. upon the attainder of John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford: By which it appears, that this maner held of Hedingham-Caſtle. He had alſo the maners of Wickham Bonhunt, Elſenham, and Moulſham in Wigborough. Departing this life in 1475, he left, by Anne his wife relict of Sir John Colvile——William, his ſon and heir 24 years old. He was ſo imprudent as to aſſiſt Perkin Warbeck, for which he forfeited his eſtates; but was pardoned, and reſtored to them by K. Henry VII. in 1500. At the time of his deceaſe, 17 March 1520, or 1521, he held, beſides the above, the Advowſons of the Churches of Tolleſhunt in le Buſhe, and of Little Salcote: and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry Barlee Eſq; then 34 years old (l). He was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1523, and dyed 12 November 1529, poſſeſſed of the aboveſaid eſtates. By Anne his wife, relict of Edward Lord Gray, he had William; Antony: Anne, wife of Philip Gunter; and Margaret, and Elizabeth.—— William, his eldeſt ſon and heir (m), was born in 1511. He married Joyce, daughter of John Perjent, and departed this life in 1565, leaving two daughters coheirs Dorothy, and Anne. The latter became wife of Richard Barlee. [See in the other Volume, p. 571.]

Dorothy, the eldeſt daughter, having this for her purparty, was married, firſt, to . . . Clopton Eſq; by whom no iſſue is recorded. But by her ſecond huſband Thomas Leventhorp Eſq; of Albury in Hertfordſhire, ſhe had Thomas, and four daughters. At the time of his deceaſe, 8 June 1588, he held this maner of Leer Barlee, alias Leer Bretton, of the Earl of Oxford (n). —— Thomas Leventhorp Eſq; the ſon, dying without iſſue, his Eſtates came among his four ſiſters and coheirs, namely,

Anne, married to Richard Franck; Ellen, to John Langmore, next to John Capel, Eſq; and laſtly to . . . . Sidney; Elizabeth; to Francis Hubert; and Dorothy, to Simeon, ſon and heir of Sir John Brograve of Hamels in Hertfordſhire. In 1621, Simeon Brograve and Richard Frank Eſqres; John Capel, ſecond huſband of Ellen; and John Brograve Eſq; held the maner of Layer Breton, and the Advowſon of this Church, and of the two others above-mentioned. A fine was levied in 1627, by Sir Leventhorp Frank, and his brother Thorniff, who ſold their ſhare, namely a 4th part, to

Thomas Coteale Eſq; (o) Simeon Brograve, and others, who had the other parts, preſented to this Church in 1632. The next owner of this maner upon record, was Iſaac Rebow of Colcheſter Eſq; knighted 27 March 1693. He preſented to this Church from 1677 to 1692, and dyed 6 September 1726. His grandſon —— Charles Chamberlain Rebow Eſq; inherited after him, and departed this life in 1754. By Mary Nevill, his wife, ſiſter of the Rt. Hon. William Lord Bergavenny, he left an only daughter, named Mary, married to Thomas Adams Eſq;

William Day, Eſq; had a Farm in this pariſh, which he ſold lately to Mr. Edward Morley; who alſo purchaſed another farm adjoyning of Joſeph Worral: It had belonged to Antony Weſtup, and to one Ruſſel. Mr. Everard hath alſo a farm upon Layer-Breton-heath.

3. LAYER DE LA HAYE lies eaſt of the two laſt. It took its name from the ancient Family of De la Haye.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Alric, a freeman, and Luivin, another freeman, were poſſeſſed of the lands in this pariſh; At the time of the Survey, they were holden by Euſtace Earl of Bologne, and Hugh de Montfort. What Euſtace held was, The Maner of Layer de la Haye; and Hugh de Montfort's, made up afterwards The Maners of Blind knights, and the Rye. For there are thoſe three Maners in this pariſh.

The Maner of LAYER DE LA HAYE.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the north ſide of the Church, and is large and fair [W].

This Maner is what Earl Euſtace held [X]. It came early into the Family ſurnamed De la Haye. Maurice de Haia; his ſon Ralph; Maurice, and Walter de la Haie, ſons of Ralph; and William, ſon of Ralph, were benefactors to St. John's Abbey (p).

About 1210, and 1211, William de la Haye held one fee and a half in Leigre and Mereſey, of the Honor of Bologne; and one knight's fee of Henry de Eſſex, of his Honor of Raleye. A Fine was levied before the King's Juſtices, in 1250, between Henry de Eſſex plaintiff, and Ralph de Haia, deforc' of Cuſtoms and Services, which Henry demanded of the ſaid Ralph, for a tenement in Leyre; Ralph promiſed to pay 40s. for ſcutage when it ſhould fall out, and 9 marks of ſilver for his relief, and coſt of ſuit (q). Ralph, at the time of his deceaſe in 1253, held in the vill of Lega de la Hay of the King in capite, 120 acres of arable, ten of wood, two of meadow, and one mark of rent; it belonged to the Honor of Bologne, and he owed ſuit for it to the Court of that Honor. He held alſo in this place, of Henry de Eſſex, 140 acres of arable, one of meadow, 20 of wood, and 29 s. 8 d. rent of aſſize, for one knight's fee. And 60 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, and 6 s. rent of aſſiſe, of the Fee of Earl de Ferrers, by the 4th part of a knight's fee. Likewiſe, in Quendon 100 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 52 s. work: and in Rettenden, 200 acres of arable, 7 s. rent &c. (r). [See in the other Volume, p. 40.] His next heir was William de Monkaneſey, or Montchenſi, who ſucceeded him here, and from him this place was called for ſome time Legre de Montchenſy [Y].

In 1264, a Fine was levied betwen Lucia widow of Ralph de la Haye petent' and William de Munchenſi tenent' of the maner of Leghere de la Haye, which Lucia claimed as her reaſonable dower, wherewith her huſband Ralph had endowed her when he eſpouſed her at the Church-door: William granted to her this maner for her life, in the name of dower; the reverſion of the ſame to come to him, the ſaid William, and his heirs for ever.

In 1313, there was another Fine between William de Montchenſi and Alice his wife plaintifs, and Oſbert de Aldham deforc', of the maner of Leyre de la Hay, the right of Oſbert; who regranted it to the ſaid William, and Alice, and his heirs (s) [A].

William de Montchenſi, at the time of his deceaſe in 1286, held among others, this maner of Leyer del Haye, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; payment of 2 s. yearly to the Prior of St. Ouen at Roan, for ward-penny, and ſuit at the King's Court of Wytham, from month to month.——William, his ſon and heir, held the ſame, in 1301, of John de Frowyck, of the fee of Chiche Ridell then in his hands, by the ſervice of 1 d. a year.——William was his ſon (t).

In 1330, it was one of the fees of Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, and holden of him, by the name of Leyre-Hay, of his maner of North-Weld (u).

Hugh de Nanton held, in 1353, Cheſtwood, 40 acres, parcel of the maner of Leyre del Hay; Afterwards John de Nanton, and Agnes his wife, remarried to Thomas Bretoun in 1358, held this maner of the King, in capite, as of the Honor of Bologne, by knight's ſervice. —— Edward Nanton, was ſon and heir of John (w). It was called from them the maner of Nanton.

Soon after it came into the Family ſurnamed de Tey; and ſeated at Aldham and Marks-Tay, under which ſee a full account of them in the other Volume, p. 197, 198. 202. Roger de Tay married Edith de la Haye, and had by her Thomas, who by Emma his wife daughter of . . . Nawton had Martin de Tey. His great great grandſon, —— Sir Robert Teye held the maner of Leyre de Hay of the King as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee: He dyed in 1426. His ſon——John, held the ſame, and departing this life in 1440, left——John, his ſon and heir, who had it at the time of his deceaſe in 1445 (x).——Robert Tey, of Copford, was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate. He dyed in 1473 (y).——William Tey Eſq; his ſon and heir, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe, 8 June 1502 (z); as did his ſon—Thomas Tey Eſq; [B]; who dying 20 April 1543 (a), was ſucceeded by his ſon——John. He departed this life 29 May 1568.——Thomas Tey, Eſq; his ſon and ſucceſſor, got a licenſe, 12 September 1596 (b), to ſell this lordſhip to

This eſtate falling amongſt co-heireſſes, they ſold it; and it was lately in Colonel John Brown of Hubert's-Hall in Harlow; now in Sir Roger Burgoyne, Bart.

The Maner of Blindknights, is that part of this pariſh which Luivin, a freeman, enjoyed before the Conqueſt, and Hugh de Montfort at the time of the Survey [C].

The manſion-houſe is about a quarter of a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

This eſtate was given to the Priory of St. Botolph's in Colcheſter; and confirmed to it, with the Church of Legra, by K. Richard I. [D]. It is ſaid to have been given to them for the maintenance of certain Knights who had loſt their eyes or limbs in the Cruſades. It continued in this Priory till the ſuppreſſion, and then the Maner, Rectory, and Advowſon of the Church were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1536, to

Sir Thomas Audeley, Chancellor of England (d); who had them at the time of his deceaſe 8 May 1544 (e); and bequeathed them by will to his brother Thomas for life, and after his deceaſe to his eldeſt ſon——Thomas Audeley Eſq; The latter dyed poſſeſſed of this maner 31 December 1572, and of ſeveral parcels of land thereto adjoyning containing 60 acres, called Wards, Gyles, Harveys, Heath-houſe, Hotts, Savyas, Symmes, Bealdes, Graftons, Underwoods, Glevers and Clevers; and of the Rectory, and Church (f).——Robert, his ſon, held the ſame, and dying 27 September 1624, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry, then 20 years old (g), afterwards knighted. He married, in 1628, Anne Packington, by whom he had Thomas; Henry who dyed young; Catharine, wife of Henry Barker; Mary, and Abigail: Theſe two laſt were never married. By his ſecond wife, Anne Daniell, he had Henry.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, dying unmarried and inteſtate —— Henry, his brother inherited the Eſtates. But being a ſpendthrift, he mortgaged this, among the reſt, to

James Smyth, of Upton Eſq; He departed this life, unmarried, 12 October, 1741, and was ſucceeded by his great nephew——Sir Trafford Smyth Bart. who alſo dying unmarried in December 1765, was ſucceeded by his nephew——Sir Robert Smyth, Bart. who hath likewiſe the maner of Rye in this pariſh; Bere-church, and other conſiderable Eſtates in this neighbourhood. [See above, p. 14. and Hiſtory of Colcheſter, Book II. under Bere-church.]

The Maner of Rye.

The manſion houſe is about half a mile north-eaſt from the Church.

This was moſt probably derived from Euſtace's maner.

John de Ry gave it to St. John's Abbey, being deſcribed as 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 8 s. rent in Leyre de la Hay. The licenſe in mortmain was dated 28 December 1290. See Hiſtory of Colcheſter, p. 142.

It continued in the Abbey till K. Henry the VIIIth's time.

Then Thomas Marſhall, Abbot of St. John's, alienated this maner of Rye in Leir de la Haye to Thomas Audeley Chancellor of England, by licenſe dated 20 May 1538 (h). He dyed poſſeſſed of the maner or meſſuage called the Rye, in Layer de la Hay, with appertenances; and 20 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 100 of paſture, and 20 s. rent, called Wardes, &c. as above, under Blind-Knights (i). His nephew——Thomas moſt probably had it, though it is not ſet down in the Inquiſition taken after his death, but it is in that taken after his ſon ——Robert's, in 1624. He held the maner of Rye, and one meſſuage and 70 acres of arable, in this pariſh; and 4 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, and 6 of paſture, with appertenances (k). It came as the former from the Audeley family to

Sir Robert Smyth, Bart.

Layer-Wic; The Farm upon the Hill; and other lands here, belong alſo to Sir Robert Smyth: and ſome to Mr. Charles Tiffen; and Henry Cole.

Layer-Croſs is a cluſter of Houſes in this pariſh, where formerly ſtood a Croſs.

The CHURCH, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a ſtone Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner of Blind knights, to St. Botolph's Priory, as we have ſeen above; and the grant was confirmed by K. Richard I. The Monks, or Canons, engroſſed the whole Tithes to themſelves, and ſupplied the Church either with one of their own body, or a deputy, ſo that it became a mere Curacy, and ſo continues. Though the pariſh is pretty large, and the value of the tithes conſiderable, the allowance to the Curate is only a ſmall pittance of 12l. a year. The Impropriator pays the Procurations and Synodals.

In 1364, June 24, there was an Exchange between the Abbey of St. John's and the Priory of St. Botolph's of the Tithes of Blindknights and the Ry: that is the Priory granted to the Abbey the Tithes both great and ſmall of Blindknights, for the Tithes both great and ſmall of the Ry; which the Prior and Convent were to receive whether the maner of the Ry was in the hands of the Abbey, or lett to farm (l). But the Abbey received ſeveral portions of Tithes in this pariſh (m).

The whole Tithes, with the advowſon or donation of the Curacy, were granted to the Lord Chancellor Audeley; and came to his nephew Thomas, and his deſcendents above-mentioned. Sir Henry Audeley, by Indenture 6 June 1628, upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington, ſettled, among other things [E], all the Tithes as well great as ſmall, of what nature or kind ſoever, and the farm called the Graftons, upon her, and her iſſue in taile male; and in truſtees, to raiſe portions for the Daughters, if there ſhould be no ſon.

Thomas Audeley Eſq; dying in 1697, without iſſue and inteſtate, his Eſtates, ſettled as above, came to his two ſiſters and coheirs, Mary Audeley, of London, ſpinſter, and Catharine wife of Henry Barker of Monkwick. By the marriage of Mary it came to Francis Canning, of Foxcote in Warwickſhire Eſq; He dyed 6 February 1732-3, Francis Canning, Eſq; his ſon and heir, hath married Bridget, daughter of Thomas Goodel, Gent. eldeſt ſiſter of Mrs. Corſellis, of Wivenhou; and hath ſeveral children.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 824l.

4. ABBERTON,

adjoins eaſt to the laſt deſcribed pariſh. It is otherwiſe written in records, Aburton, Adburton, Adburgeton, Adberturton, Edburgetun, and Edburghetun; which name ſeems to be derived from an owner's name, and tun.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Siward, a freeman, and two other freemen, enjoyed the lands in this pariſh; They were held, at the time of the Survey, by Euſtace Earl of Bologne, and his under tenant Ralph de Merci; and by Ralph Peverell; and Odo, under Suene.

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Abberton. 2. . . . that of Badcocks.

The Maner of ABBERTON-HALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church.

This is what belonged to Earl Euſtace [F].

After Earl Euſtace, the next mention we find of this maner is in 1247, when Oſbert de Brightlingeſey, held of the King in capite, of the Honor of Bologne, one carucate of land in Adburgeton by the ſervice of half a fee; Aveline, wife of Peter de Aldham, Joane, wife of Roger de Blakeham, and Roeſe, wife of Richard Munerum, were his ſiſters and next heirs.——Aveline, the eldeſt, ſurnamed afterwards de Rameſeye (n), undoubtedly becauſe remarried to a man ſo called, ſold this eſtate to William de Montchenſi, who conveyed it to the Abbey of St. Oſith [G], that held it in pure alms of the heirs of the ſaid William (o).

It continued in this Convent till John Colcheſter, Abbot of St. Oſith, by licenſe dated 1 Auguſt 1538, alienated it to Sir Thomas

At the time of the Lord Audeley's deceaſe, this maner was 14 l. a year (q). It paſſed from him to his brother, and to his nephew, both named Thomas; and then to —— Robert, and to —— Sir Henry Audeley, Kt. The latter ſettled it, with the maner of Badcocks in this pariſh, upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington, in the manner related under the Church of Layer de la Hay.

The Maner of BADCOCKS.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a quarter of a mile north-weſt from the Church.

This is the part that Ralph Peverell, and Odo, held at the time of the Survey [G].

No mention occurrs of it afterwards for a long time; except what follows ſhould relate thereto.

Alice le Deſpenſer, daughter and heir of Philip Baſſet, at the time of her deceaſe, in 1281, held in Leghere, in the pariſh of Ardburthetone, and Peltingdon, a capital meſſuage 150 acres of arable, and four of meadow, out of which ſhe paid 10 s. per ann. to James de Adburthon, and to William ſon of Ranulph 14 s. and to the ward of Stortford-Caſtle 18 d.——Hugh le Deſpenſer was her ſon and heir (r). It ſeems to have been the land which Thomas Whot and John Henny gave to St. Botolph's Priory, in Colcheſter. For, in 1398, they obtained a licenſe to give to that Monaſtery 3 meſſuages, 242 acres of arable, 17 acr. of meadow, and 21 d. in Adburton, Peldon, and Leyre del Hay (s).

We do not find it by the name of Badcocks till 1523; then, Thomas Springe, who dyed 13 June that year, held the maner of Adburton, called Badcocks, with appertenances, and 20 acres of land called Bradfield, and 12 called Tolmanis; and a tenement called Smythes, all in Adburton, of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, by the ſervice of 50 s. a year, worth 10 l. (t). By this it appears to be the ſame Eſtate as Alice le Deſpenſer had, which held firſt of the Biſhop of London, and afterwards of the Dean and Chapter.——John Springe was heir to his father. [Concerning this Family, ſee above, p. 228. and in the other Volume, p. 185. 284.]

Thomas Lord Audeley, dyed 8 May 1544, poſſeſſed of the maners of Abberton, and Badcocks, with appertenances (u). We do not find a grant of it to him, but he might eaſily hook it in under the general words in his patent, of all other rights and hereditaments in the town of Colcheſter and the ſuburbs of the ſame, Leyre de la Hay, Peldon, Abberton, Fyngringhoo, Great and Little Wigborow, &c. part of the poſſeſſions of the Priory of St. Botulph's; granted to him in the fulleſt manner (w). His nephew ——Thomas Audeley Eſq; had this maner at the time of his deceaſe 31 December 1572; and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Robert (x); whoſe ſon ——Sir Henry Audeley, Kt. ſettled it upon his marriage with Mrs. Anne Packington. And it came, as the Tithes of Layer de la Hay, to

Francis Canning Eſq;

The Rev. Richard Boys; Mr. George-Kettle Stephens; Joſeph Balley; Thomas Wiltſhire; Robert Quarles; Mrs. Nevill, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Andrew, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a brick Steeple there is 1 Bell.

This Rectory was in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of St. Oſith till 1538, when the Abbot alienated it, with the Maner, to Sir Thomas Audeley (y). About the beginning of this century, Henry Audeley Eſq; ſold it, with other Livings in and about Colcheſter. Sir Francis Daſhwood Bart. purchaſed it afterwards, in order to make an exchange of it with the Crown for the Living of Weſt Wycombe in Buckinghamſhire, where he had a Seat: So that this Living of Abberton is now in the King's gift.

is the north-eaſt corner of this Hundred. The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Fyngeringho, Fyngrynghoo, Fingrithe: which name ſeems to be formed from the Saxon words, Finᵹeꞃ, inᵹ, and hou. In Æthelfledes will it is called Finᵹinᵹꞃaho.

No mention of it occurrs in Domeſday-book; but it doth in the Charter of K. Edward the Confeſſor, in 1046, whereby he granted Weſt Merſe to the Abbey of St. Ouen at Roan in Normandy (z): ſo that moſt probably it was reckoned, at the Survey, part of that Abbey's demeſnes, and included in their valuation.

The grant of Edward the Confeſſor to the Abbey of St. Audoen, or Ouen, was confirmed by William the Conqueror, and K. Henry II. (a). K. Henry I. granted to that Monaſtery free warren here [H]: which privilege was confirmed by K. Henry II.

This Maner belonging to a Priory Alien, namely in France, was ſeized by K. Edward III. in 1337, or 1338, during his wars with that Kingdom. [See in the other Volume, p. 407.] However he ſeems to have afterwards given it up again, at leaſt for a while; for the Prior of Merſey preſented to the Vicarage in 1368: but the King himſelf, having reſumed it, preſented in 1373, and his grandſon and ſucceſſor K. Richard II. in 1393 (b).

John Doreward, who had a grant of it, with the maner or Priory of Merſeye, preſented to the Vicarage in 1401; and dyed poſſeſſed of this maner, or Priory, in 1420; as did Iſabell his widow in 1426. She is ſaid to hold it of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury in alms (c). For K. Henry V. having, in 1414, entirely ſuppreſſed the Priories Alien, he had granted, 2 May 1422, the Priory of Merſey, and the maners of Fingeringho and Pete-hall belonging to it, after the death of Iſabella Doreward, to Henry Chichley, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who made theſe maners part of the endowment of his College of Higham Ferrers, in Northamptonſhire (d).

The Maſter and Fellows preſented to the Vicarage from 1434 to 1534. And what they held in this pariſh, was, a meſſuage, 300 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, and 200 of paſture: another meſſuage, and 30 acres of land: and another meſſuage, and 13 acres of land.

Upon the diſſolution of Religious Houſes, theſe eſtates fell to the Crown.

In 1542, K. Henry VIII. granted this maner, with appertenances, and the Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, to Robert Dacres Eſq; and his heirs; together with the Half Hundred of Winſtree. He dyed 20 November 1543, leaving——George, his ſon and heir (e).

But K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553, granted this maner, with thoſe of Weſt-Merſey, and Pete-hall, and the Rectory, and Advowſon of this Vicarage, to

Thomas Lord Darcy, of Chiche, and his heirs; with fiſheries, and other ample privileges (f). He departed this life, 28 June 1558. As did ——John Lord Darcy, his ſon and ſucceſſor, 3 March 1580 (g).——Thomas Lord Darcy his ſon ſucceeded him, and was created, 5 July 1621, Viſcount Colcheſter, and 1 November 1626 Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639, Thomas his ſon being dead before him without iſſue, his eſtates deſcended among his four daughters and coheirs, Elizabeth, Mary, Penelope, and Suſan. [For a fuller account of this noble family, ſee under Chiche St. Oſith.]

Elizabeth, the eldeſt daughter was married to Sir Thomas Savage, of Rock-Savage in Cheſhire, Kt. and Bart. He dyed in 1635. Elizabeth his widow, Counteſs Rivers, and divers truſtees, by leaſe and releaſe, 24 October 1648, conveyed this maner of Fingringhoe, with appertenances, to

George Frere, or Freer, of London, merchant. He left it by will to his nephew

John Goddard, Gent. from whom it deſcended to his ſon ——John Goddard, who, 26 Auguſt 1707, ſold it to Marmaduke Rawdon, Gent. He was ſon of Marmaduke Rawdon, of Hoddeſdon in Hertfordſhire, Eſq; by Heſter, or Eſther, daughter of Abraham Corſellis, of Eaſt-Smithfield, London, merchant, brother of Nicolas Corſellis, Eſq; mentioned above, p. 407. [I].

Marmaduke, the ſon, was an Attorney at law in Colcheſter. By Dorothy his wife, eldeſt daughter of John Freman, of the ſame place, Gent. he had Dorothy, who dyed young, and Heſter. She was married, firſt, to Mr. Plomer, of Hoddeſdon, by whom ſhe had no iſſue; afterwards, to Joſeph Keeling Eſq; but dyed 5 September 1756, without any children by him. She conveyed to him this eſtate, 26 March 1751; and he took to his ſecond wife, 6 January 1757, Mrs. Alice Slaney, by whom he has Joſeph Slaney; John; William; and Mary [K].

A Cuſtomary of Fingringhoo, Peete-Hall, and Weſt-Merſey, made at a Court held at Peete-Hall the Tueſday after Whitſontide by Thomas Bonham Eſq; King's Steward and William Pirton Eſq; Bailiff of the ſaid maners in 1520.—— Thomas Camock general Surveyor to the Lord John Darcey Aug. 12, 1572, took a draught of it; The Lords are to have all manner of advantages of the Admyraltie of the ſea within the Towns of Weſt-Merſey, Fingeringhoo and Peete-Hall, and the finder of the ſaid wreck to have half thereof, or the like advantage after the uſe of the Admirall Court. The Lord, or his farmer, muſt keep a common bull, or boar. The eldeſt daughter ſucceeds to copy-hold eſtates not partable.

[H] The grant was in theſe words, Henricus Rex Anglie, Ricardo Epiſcopo Londonienſi, & Hugoni de Brook, & omnibus Baronibus ſuis Francis & Anglicis de Eſſex, ſalutem: Sciatis me conceſſiſſe Holgotto Abbati Sancti Audoeni de Rotomago totum Manerium de Fyngherynghoo in Warenna, & totam terram que ad illud pertinet, & defendo ſuper decem librarum foris factura ne aliquis in ea fuget, neque beſtiam in ea capiat, niſi ejus licentia. Teſtibus Cancell' Ranulfo, Ricardo Capellano Cuſtode Sigilli, & Willielmo de Say, apud Oyſett. This grant was confirmed by K. Henry II. with a prohibition that no body ſhould hunt, or catch a hare, within this maner, without the leave of the ſaid Abbey, or their officers. And the Privilege was allowed before the Juſtices itinerant in the time of K. Edward II. Placita forinſeca, temp. Edw. II.

[K] Arms of Keeling. Sable, a Lion erect holding in his paws an eſcocheon with a croſs croſslet fitché. Creſt. Out of a mural crown, a demi-lion, as above.

The Corporation of Colcheſter, by the Charter of K. Richard I. confirmed by other ſubſequent ones, had the Fiſhery in the river Colne from North-bridge to Weſt-neſſe; which they thought included all the Creeks within the ſame, but Marmaduke Rawdon Eſq; recovered from them the Fiſhery in the Creeks called North and South Gedon, as belonging to his Maner of Fingringhou.

Mr. James Hurlock, and Mr. John Luffe have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

John Frere Eſq; gave 52 s. per ann. to be diſtributed on Sundays to the poor in bread, paid out of the Hall eſtate.

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, conſiſts of a body and north and ſouth aiſles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled: In the Tower, which is pretty lofty, and chiefly built of flints, are 3 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, to the Priory of St. Ouen at Roan in Normandy. The Rectory was appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained, to which they preſented in 1321, and 1329; as did the Prior and Convent of their Cell of Weſt Merſey in 1368. John Doreward preſented in 1401, and the Maſter and Fellows of the College of Higham Ferrers from 1434 to 1534. Both Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage were afterwards granted to Robert Dacres, and then to Thomas Lord Darcy, in whoſe poſterity they continued many years (b). They are now in the heirs of the late Mr. William Hickeringill of Colcheſter, and in Richard Hunt, Eſq;

About fourteen acres of land, called Hame, or Church-lands, were given for the reparation of the Church.

Here is a Fair on Eaſter-monday.

6. LANGENHOU, lies ſouth of Fingringhou, near Merſey. It is otherwiſe written in records Langhou, Lagenho, Langenſo, and Langynhoo; a name formed from the two Saxon words, Lanᵹ, and hou, that is, long hill.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Ingelric was poſſeſſed of this eſtate; and Euſtace Earl of Bologne held it at the time of the Survey [L].

Here is only one Maner.

Langenhoo-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

The firſt mention we find of this pariſh after Euſtace, is in 1284, when John le Deſpenſer, and Margaret his wife, daughter and heir of Clement de Ryſeing, recovered 2 carucates of arable land, and 60 acres of wood in Langeho, of Almaric Petche (i).

The Lord Fitz-Walter was lord paramount of this maner. Under Robert Fitz-Walter, who dyed in 1328, Lionel de Bradenham held half a fee and a quarter in Langenſo (k). This Lionel was a very incroaching and troubleſome man, and endeavoured to appropriate to himſelf the Geedons, part of the Royalty of the river Colne belonging to the Corporation of Colcheſter, pretending that they lay within his maner [M]; and incloſed them with piles. A commiſſion being thereupon granted, in 1362, to Robert de Herle, Lord Admiral, to enquire by the oaths of legal men and true, after ſeveral Seſſions and adjournments it was declared and adjudged, by advice of Counſel, that Lionel de Bradenham had nothing to do there. However he ſtill continued his encroachments, and another writ was iſſued, in 1363, to enquire of the matter, and of ſeveral enormities committed by him. In 1364, he was forced to ſue for a pardon, in which it is ſet forth, that he was guilty of many felonies, and had beſieged Colcheſter for a quarter of a year with 200 men, attempting to burn it, and retained at his houſe in Langenhoo ſeveral thieves or robbers as his ſervants, and had cauſed three or four people to be drowned in the South-Geedon, for which he took ſanctuary (l). In 1368, he paſſed this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, to John de Sutton, the ſon, Richard his brother, and others (m). The Sutton family was of Wivenhou.

Sir John de Sutton held it, as one knight's fee and a quarter, under Walter Lord Fitz-Walter, that dyed in 1386 (n).

John de Boys held, in 1406, half a fee here, under Walter Lord Fitz-Walter. His father John Boys held the ſame under L. de Bradenham, in 1361 (o).

This Eſtate was next in the Browne Family, mentioned above, p. 137. and in the other Volume, p. 469.

John Browne, who dyed in 1468, held the maner of Langenho, of the Warden of the College of Higham-Ferrers; —— Thomas his brother ſucceeded him and left it to——Robert his ſon and heir, who held this maner of the Maſter and Fellows of the College as of their maner of Pete Hall. He departed this life 30 April 1489,—William was his ſon and heir, then aged 15 years (p).—John Browne Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 27 October 1530, held the maner of Lagenhoo and Advowſon of the Church, and one meſſuage, one mill, 1000 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 1000 of paſture, 100 of wood, 3000 of marſhland, and 6 l. rent in Lagenhoo, Aberton, Peldon, Fyngringho, and Bere Church, of John Earl of Oxford, by fealty; worth 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. a year. —— George Browne, Eſq; his eldeſt ſon and heir (q), held alſo this maner, and Advowſon of John Earl of Oxford, as of his Caſtle of Henningham: and departing this life 26 February 1558, was ſucceeeded by his ſon—Wiſtan Browne, Eſq; who, beſides this maner, held a moiety of lands and tenements in this pariſh called Lexendens, Evelletts, and Wades (r). He dyed 1 Auguſt, 1580; As did——Sir Antony, his ſon and heir, 14 April 1589. The latter leaving no iſſue, his two Siſters, Catharine, and Jane, inherited his eſtates (s). [For a more particular account of this family, ſee above p. 118. 138.] Catharine was married to Nicolas Waldegrave Eſq; and Jane, firſt, to Edward Wyatt, and afterwards to Gamaliel Capel, Eſq; They all jointly kept a court here, 27 March 1585 (t). As did the ſaid Nicolas, and Sir William Petre, 26 September 1605.

Nicolas Waldegrave, Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 19 June 1621, held the maner of Langenhoe, and a moiety of the Advowſon of the Church, of the Earl of Oxford, by fealty only. ——Philip was his ſon and heir (u).

William Lake Eſq; and Thomas Whitebread Gent. kept a court here 7 October 1628; and Richard Weſton, Earl of Portland, and Lord High Treaſurer, 8 October 1632, and 25 October 1636. It doth not appear by what right, but moſt probably as truſtees; for the Maner continued afterwards in the Waldegrave family.

Philip Waldegrave Eſq; kept his firſt court here 11 September 1666. He was ſucceeded by his ſon——John; and he by his ſon——Philip Waldegrave, Eſq; The latter dyed 24 February 1720-1. Having no iſſue, he gave this eſtate, and that of Borley, to his kinſman, the eldeſt branch of the Family,

The Rt. Hon. James, Lord Waldegrave: created Earl Waldegrave 13 September 1729; who dying 11 April 1741, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——James, Earl Waldegrave: and he dying 8 April 1763, was ſucceeded by his brother ——John Earl Waldegrave. [See above, p. 182, and in the other Volume, p. 318.]

Langenhoo-wic belongs alſo to his Lordſhip.

There is a ſort of iſland ſouthward of Parrock, between Merſey-Creek and Parrock, of about forty or fifty acres, belonging to Earl Waldegrave, called Pewet-Iſland, and lett with the Hall.

Mr. Francis Butcher's daughter; Mr. Mark Lay; Pariſh Fiſher, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, or St. Andrew, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled: adjoyning to the north wall of the Church are the ruins of an oratory, or Chapel. In a Tower of ſtone there is 1 Bell [N].

7. PELDON

lies weſt of Langenhoo. The name is otherwiſe written in records Peltendune; Pellingdon, Peltindone, Peltyngdon, and Poltendon: ðun, ſignifies a hill, which is the ſituation of part of this pariſh, eſpecially about the Church. As for the former part of the name, I do not know from whence it is derived.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Turchill a freeman, and another freeman, were poſſeſſed of the lands in this pariſh; at the time of the Survey, William the Deacon held one part, and Suene and his under tenant Odo the other part [O].

They were divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The maner of Peldon-hall. 2. The maner of the Rectory.

The Maner of PELDON.

Peldon-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands on the north ſide of the Church.

This eſtate was granted by William the Conqueror to William the Deacon, about the year 1086, towards rebuilding the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, which had been newly deſtroyed by fire [P]. Hence this maner came to be holden of the Biſhops of London.

It was ſo by a Family ſurnamed from it de Peltindone. In 1282, Walter de Peltindone enfeoffed John de Nevyll, and Margery his wife, in this maner, viz. in one meſſuage, 360 acres of arable, and one wind-mill, which he held of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of one knight's fee (w). And, in 1332, John de Langwoode did by fine releaſe his intereſt in this maner of Peltyndon, and the Advowſon of the Church, to —— Hugh de Nevill (x). —— John Nevill, of Eſſex, who dyed 25 July 1358, held for his life, and the life of his wife Alice, this maner of Peltyngdon, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee: remainder to William de Bohun, Earl of Northampton, and his heirs. Alice preſented to this Church in 1384 and 1390, and dyed in 1394 (y). [See above, p. 304. 385. and in the other Volume, p. 79. 242. 371. 515.]

Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Lord Chancellor of England, was poſſeſſed of this maner and that of Langham: But being forced to quit the realm, for being reputed one of K. Richard the ſecond's evil counſellors, his eſtates became forfeited. His ſon, Sir Michael de la Pole, and Catharine his wife, daughter of Hugh Earl of Stafford, petitioned for a reſtitution of theſe maners in 1389 (z). But it doth not appear they recovered this.

Some time after it was in the ancient Family of Teye, particularly mentioned in the other Volume, p. 202.

Robert Teye, who dyed in 1426, held the maner of Peldon, or Peltyngdon, and the Advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London, by fealty, and rent of 4 s. per ann. And 4 acres which made up the croft called Seven acre: And the maner of Newhall, of the ſaid Biſhop.——John, his eldeſt ſon and heir, held alſo the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe in 1441 (a). As did his ſon and ſucceſſor——John Teye, Eſq; who departed this life in 1462 (b), leaving ——Henry, his ſon, born in 1455, afterwards knighted, and Sheriff of this County in 1488, and 1500. He held this maner, and Advowſon, of the Biſhop of London, by fealty, and yearly rent of 6 s. 8 d. By Margaret his wife, daughter and coheir of John Grene of Gosfield, which dyed 24 September 1520, he had Thomas, born in 1483; William, and John: Departing this life 9 September 1510, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon —— Thomas (c), who was knighted; and at the time of his deceaſe, 31 December 1540, left four daughters coheirs; namely, Margaret, wife of Sir John Jermye; Elizabeth, wife of Marmaduke Nevill, third ſon of Richard Nevill, Lord Latimer; Mary, wife of Sir Thomas Nevill, brother of Marmaduke; and Frances, married firſt to William Bonham Eſq; next to Edward Bocking; and laſtly to Thomas Bonham (d). Upon the partition of Teye's eſtates, this fell to the ſhare of Bonham. But, by what means we cannot diſcover, it came to the Crown. For, K. Henry VIII. 2 September 1545, granted it to

Sir William Petre, Kt. and Anne his wife, and his heirs (e). The 18th of December following, they exchanged it with the King, being then valued at 34 l. a year, for the maner of Cherſtowe in Devonſhire, and the Parſonage of Ging Mountney in this county (f). K. Edward VI. 4 April 1551, granted this maner, and the advowſon of the Church, to Sir Thomas Darcy, Kt. afterwards created Lord Darcy, and to the heirs male of his body (g). He dyed poſſeſſed of it 28 June 1558, as did his ſon——John Lord Darcy, 3 March 1580 (h) [Q].——Thomas Lord Darcy, ſon of the laſt, was created, 5 July 1621, Viſcount Colcheſter, and 14 November 1626, Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639. A ſon of his, named Thomas, was dead before him without iſſue; ſo that his four daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, Penelope, and Suſan, divided his great eſtates. [Q] This lordſhip having been granted to Sir Thomas Darcy, and his heirs male; upon the death of the ſon of Thomas the third Lord Darcy, K. James I. granted it, 22 December 1612, to Robert Carr, Earl of Somerſet; but the Earl gave it back to the King and his heirs, the 22d of January following: and K. James granted it, 13 December 1613, to William Noy, and John Dackmore Eſqres. in truſt for the Darcy family.

Sir Thomas Savage, Kt. who dyed 20 November 1635. Her father Earl Rivers, by his will dated 14 March 1636-7, appointed her his executrix. The 26th of October 1647, ſhe ſettled this eſtate in truſtees, viz. Richard Viſcount Lumley, Henry Nevill of Creſſing-Temple; and Iſaac Creme, Gent. in order to have it ſold. Accordingly it was purchaſed by

Mr. Thomas Reynolds, who kept his firſt court here 10 September 1650. He was born near Ipſwich in Suffolk, of good parentage, and ſettling in Colcheſter became an eminent clothier, by which he accumulated a conſiderable eſtate. He built the large brick houſe without Eaſt-gate, now belonging to John-Blatch Whaley Eſq; and was Mayor of Colcheſter in 1662. By Margery, his wife, daughter of Samuel Decoſter, of London, merchant, who dyed 15 April, 1649; he had four ſons and four daughters. He himſelf departed this life 29 April 1665; aged 61 years, and was buried in the ſouth aiſle of St. James's Church in Colcheſter; where a monument is erected to his memory.——Samuel Reynolds Eſq; his eldeſt ſon and heir, was choſen one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for Colcheſter in 1681, and 1688. He married Judith, daughter of Thomas Samford, of Colcheſter Eſq; by whom he had Samuel, George, Thomas, John; Judith, and Suſan. And dying 23 Auguſt 1694, aged 52 years, was buried near his father, under a black marble grave-ſtone, with an epitaph.——Suſan, the youngeſt daughter, was married, firſt, to Mr. George Jolland; afterwards, to the Rev. Francis Powell. She dyed in 1750, having had by her ſecond huſband, William-Samuel Powell; William; and Suſan. —— Samuel Reynolds Eſq; eldeſt ſon and heir of Samuel, who dyed in 1694, married Frances daughter of Charles Pelham, of Brockleſby in Lincolnſhire Eſq; a branch of the noble family of Pelham Duke of Newcaſtle, and had by her, Samuel who dyed ſeveral years ago without iſſue, and——Charles: The latter married . . . daughter of . . . Anderſon Eſq; and had a ſon and a daughter, who both dyed young, He himſelf departed this life in 1760, and by will left this, and other eſtates at Little Bentley &c. to his kinſman,

The Rev. William-Samuel Powell, D. D. Archdeacon of Colcheſter, and Maſter of St. John's-College in Cambridge [R].

The Rectory is alſo a Maner, and had 30 acres belonging to it at the time of the Survey. It keeps a court, and hath ſome quit-rents. Out of it is paid a penſion of three pounds a year by the Rector to the Crown.

Thomas Tey, of Layer-Marney Eſq; who dyed 20 April 1543, held lands and tenements called Newports, in Peldon; and a capital meſſuage called Samptons Wyke in Peldon and Sampton; and all thoſe lands, tenements &c. belonging to the ſaid capital meſſuage and the Wyke; and cloſes called Abbotts nine acres, Abbotts twenty acres, Abbotts ſeven acres, and Abbotts four acres called Woodcroft, in Peldon and Sampton, with appertenances, formerly belonging to the Abbey of St. Oſith: and another meſſuage with a croft adjoyning called Poyſecroft, alias Tye-houſe feild, in Peldon, with commonage in the Weſt ſtreete: and two crofts here called Stonerock, and Brakefeild, late Thomas Morrant's, of Great Wigborowe: alſo a meſſuage and lands called Nevards, in Leyr de la Hay, and Bretton, and Great Birch: all which he held of William Bonham Eſq; and Frances his wife, as of their maner of Peldon (i).

Mrs. Great; Mr. William Mendham; John Ward; Thomas Green; John Wayland; John Eley; Samuel Bullock, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Tower of ſtone there is 1 Bell.

It appears by Domeſday-book, that here was a Church at the time of the Survey, but whether it be the ſame as is now ſtanding, is quite uncertain.

This Rectory was many years appendent to the Maner. But was alienated from it by Samuel Reynolds Eſq; and hath ſince paſſed through ſeveral hands.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 894 l.

WIGBOROUGH.

Two contiguous Pariſhes ſo named ſtand weſt of thoſe we have been laſt deſcribing. The name is formed from the two Saxon words, ƿiᵹ, a battle, and buꞃᵹ, or buꞃh, a fort, or caſtle. Theſe parts were much expoſed to the incurſions of the pirating northern Nations, as I have frequently obſerved, and therefore here might be ſome fortification to oppoſe their landing; in or near which ſome remarkable Battle was fought.

What renders it moſt probable, is, that near the Church of Great Wigborough there is a Tumulus, probably thrown up to cover the ſlain; which, upon waſting of the bodies, may have ſunk to its preſent low ſtate.

The name is otherwiſe written in records, Wiegheberga, Wigheberga, Wigberwe, Wykebyrh.

(i) Inquiſ. 35 Hen. VIII. May 22.

[R] Arms of Reynolds. Sable, a chevron checky argent and ſable, between 3 croſslets fitche, argent: In a chief, ſable, 3 eſtoiles, argent. Creſt, on a torſe of his colours, and a cloſed helmet, a wolf's head eraſed collared ſable.

8. GREAT WIGBOROUGH is the largeſt of the two, as the name denotes.

The Nunnery of Berking had part of this pariſh before and after the Conqueſt; Aluric, a freeman, had another part, which Hugh de St. Quintin held at the time of the Survey.

Theſe produced two Maners, 1. The maner of Abbeſs-hall. 2. The maner of Moulſham.

The Maner of ABBESS or ABBOTS-HALL took that appellation from the Lady Abbeſs of Berking [S]; or from the Abbot of St Oſith, who had a Maner here.

The manſion houſe is large, and lies about a mile ſouth weſt from the Church, towards and not far from Salcot-Verley.

This Eſtate belonged to the Cellereſſe of the Nunnery; and the collector of Wigberwe paid 10l. by even portions at the two feaſts of St. Michael and Eaſter (k).

It continued in that Houſe, or in St. Oſith, till the diſſolution of Monaſteries. K. Henry VIII. granted it, 10 April 1540, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (l).

Upon his attainder it ſoon fell to the Crown again, and was appointed toward the maintenance of Lady Mary, afterwards Queen Mary I. In 1545, the ſame King granted to Charles Tuke Eſq; and his heirs, the maner of Abbotts-hall in Wigborough, and Abbotts grove 12 acres; to hold in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee (m). He dyed 29 March 1547, poſſeſſed of Abbots-hall, and the grove, and 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 20 of wood, 40 of marſh, 100 of furze and heath, and 6l. rent, holden of the King, as above. He held alſo, in this pariſh, Layer-Marney, and Meſſing, a meſſuage, called Vyners, and 40 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 20 of wood, 40 of marſh, and 20s. rent, of John Danyell Eſq; by fealty, and other lands in Wigborough, and Layer Marney.——George Tuke, Eſq; his ſon and ſucceſſor, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe (n). [Concerning this family, ſee above, p. 407.]

Qu. Elizabeth, 12 February 1562, granted the maner of Wigbarghe, otherwiſe Wigberghe, or Great Wigborough, Salcote, and Toileſbury, &c. to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk (o). He was reckoned the greateſt ſubject in England, but imprudently forming a deſign to marry Mary Queen of Scots, and entering into a conſpiracy againſt Qu. Elizabeth, he was arraigned 16 January 1572, and beheaded 2 June following, and his eſtates were confiſcated to the Crown. He married, firſt, Mary ſecond daughter, and one of the heirs of Henry Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel. His ſecond wife was Margaret, only ſurviving daughter and ſole heir of Thomas Lord Audeley of Walden. By the former he had ——Philip, who bore only the title of Earl of Arundel, and by the ſecond, Thomas.——Philip, the eldeſt ſon, was reſtored in blood by a ſpecial act of parliament in 1580, but afterwards being thought guilty of diſloyal practices, and condemned to dye, his eſtates came to the Crown, and Qu. Elizabeth preſented to this Living in 1591.——Thomas, the ſecond ſon, being reſtored in blood in 1584, Qu. Elizabeth granted him, in 1594, this Maner with the Advowſon of the Church. He was ſummoned to Parliament in 1597 by the title of Baron Howard of Walden, and created Earl of Suffolk 21 July 1603. [See in the other Volume, p. 549.] (p). Departing this life 28 May 1626, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon and heir ——Theophilus, Earl of Suffolk, who, at the time of his deceaſe 3 June 1640, tranſmitted this eſtate to his eldeſt ſon and heir——James Howard, Earl of Suffolk. He ſold it, 17 March 1647, to Chaloner Chute, Eſq; and John Aylet, of Fering Gent. together with the maner of Salcote in Wigborowe, for the ſum of 3500l. (q). John Aylett conveyed it to

Sir Mark Guyon, of Coggeſhall, Kt. who preſented to the Rectory in 1688. He bequeathed this eſtate, by will 10 March 1689, to his ſon William; and, if he dyed without iſſue male, to his two Daughters, Elizabeth, and Rachel. The firſt became wife of Edward Bullock, of Falkborne-hall Eſq; but dyed in child-bed, as well as her child, within the month.

Rachel, the other daughter, was married to Thomas Guyon Eſq; and afterwards to John Bullock, of Dynes-hall in Great Mapleſted Eſq; younger brother of Edward above-mentioned. They had iſſue John, who did not marry; and ——Rachel. She dyed unmarried, and, without a will, in 1765, whereupon her real eſtates deſcended to her kinſman, and heir at law, John Bullock, of Falkborn-hall Eſq; who enjoys This, among the reſt; and her perſonal eſtate came to her kinſman, Lieutenant-Colonel Mordaunt Cracherode, Governor of Fort St. Philip in Minorca. [See in the other Volume, p. 118, and 279.]

The Bullock Family had been long ſeated, and had Eſtates before, in this neighbourhood, particularly at Loftes in Great Totham. [See above, p. 384.] Edward Bullock, who dyed 10 February 1595, held in Great and Little Wigborowe, a meſſuage and lands called Skippetts; a meſſuage, and 30 acres, and crofts of land adjoyning, with appertenances, of Sir John Cotton, as of his maner of Copthall, by fealty, and rent of 14d. per ann. and other lands elſewhere (r) [T].

Abbots-Wic. The houſe ſtands in this pariſh, but the lands extend into Salcote Verley. This eſtate belongs as well as Salcote to Mrs. Crank.—It belonged in 1645 to Col. Thornhill, as appears by the Sequeſtrators Book in my poſſeſſion. Quære, whether this is not what belonged to St. Oſith.

The Maner of MULSHAM took its name from William de Mulſham, who had it formerly: It is otherwiſe called Moulſham. The Houſe ſtands a little way north-eaſt from the Church.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Aluric, a freeman, had this eſtate: Hugh de St. Quintin held it at the time of the Survey [U].

It was afterwards holden of the Honor of Mandeville, by the Families of Patteſhull, att Lee, Barle, and Leventhorp. But as we have given a full account of them, a little above, under Tolleſhunt-Knights and Layer-Breton, p. 393. 410. we ſhall beg leave not to enlarge upon them here. The Arms of Pateſhull are on the roof of the Chancel of Salcot-Wigborough Chapel [W].

In the Feodary of the Honor of Caſtle-Hedingham we have the following ſucceſſion of the lords of this maner. Wigborowe and Salcot-Virle, Maner called Mulſhams. Walter de Pattiſhull in 1351. Robert Gedding in 1356. Walter at Lee in 1384. John at Lee,——John Barley, and Sir William Thirlewite, in the time of K. Henry VI. Will. Barley in 1505. —— Richard Franke Eſq; Simeon Brograve, and John Longmer Gent. in right of Mary, Dorothy, and Helen, their wives, and Elizabeth, wife of Francis Huberd Gent. ſiſters and coheirs of Thomas Leventhorpe Eſq; held this maner of the Honor of Caſtle-Heningham, by one knight's fee.

Part of this eſtate belonged to Sir John Peake, Lord Mayor of London in 1687. His only daughter and heir Margery brought it in marriage to Sir John Shaw, of Eltham Bart. [X]. He dyed 11 December 1721, leaving his ſon and heir——Sir John Shaw, Bart. In September 1716, he married Anna-Maria one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir Thomas Barnardiſton of Kedington-hall in Suffolk Bart. and departing this life 4 March 1738-9, was ſucceeded by his only ſon——Sir John Shaw, Bart.

A third part of this eſtate belonged to the late John Wale, of Colne-Priory, Eſq;

The Hyde, an eſtate here ſo called, belongs to Mr. Kilham.

Philip Roberts Eſq; Mr. Philip Havens, and Mr. Maſſingarb, have alſo eſtates here.

And Mrs. Houſſaye has two farms.

The Church, dedicated to St. Stephen is of one pace with the Chancel, leaded. In a Tower of ſtone are 2 Bells. It ſtands on the top of a hill, from whence there is a very extenſive proſpect at Sea, and all round.

This Rectory was originally appendent to the capital maner, and in the gift of Berking Nunnery till its diſſolution. K. Henry VIII. granted it, 10 April 1540, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (s). Upon his attainder it fell again to the Crown, and continued in it till Qu. Elizabeth gave it, with the maner, to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. His ſon Thomas Earl of Suffolk had it with the Maner, as related above. James Earl of Suffolk alienated it, and it was in Sir Mark Guyon in 1680.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 89 l. 1 s. 0 d. and Salcote-Wigborough, at 142 l. 2 s.

SALCOT-WIGBOROUGH, is a Hamlet to Great-Wigborough. The Lord of Gr. Wigborough maner has a Pound near this Church. The name ſeems to be from a Salt-work, or ſtore-houſe here; for Cote ſignifies a little houſe, or building. In Peldon we find one Saltwork, to which the water might be conveyed from Piſleet creek. Salcot, though now a poor decayed Village, is reported to have been a Market Town [Y], and a conſiderable place, the Streets having been paved. The fair and lofty building of the Church, now a Chapel to Wigborough, and the Chantry here, give ſome countenance to the tradition.

The Church ſtands near the Creek, which parts it from that of Salcot-Virley; they are ſo near one another as to have founded a tradition, ever to be met with in the like caſe, that two ſiſters not agreeing, each built a Church for herſelf. This is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled; the Tower has one bell. 'Tis not improbable, that this and Salcot-Virley were once the ſame vill, as the name ſeems to ſhew. The

This ſteddineſs procured him a ſeat in Parliament, without the trouble of canvaſſing; beſides the dignity of Baronet: and eſpecially the advantageous place of being one of the farmers and collectors of the Cuſtoms. difficulty of paſſing the Creek to go to Church, might induce the lord of Virley to build one for his tenants. This, which is now eſteemed but a Chapel, makes much the greater appearance.

In this Church there was formerly a Chantry, well endowed [Y].

9. LITTLE WIGBOROUGH

lies ſouth-eaſt of the other, nearer the ſea.

Got, a freeman, was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: Hamo Dapifer, and his under-tenant Vital, held it at the time of the Survey [Z].

Hamo Dapifer, Steward, or Sewer, of Normandy dying without iſſue, left his great poſſeſſions to his elder brother Robert Fitz-hamon, whoſe eldeſt daughter and coheir, Mabel, brought this in marriage to Robert Earl of Glouceſter, natural ſon of K. Henry I. He dyed in 1147. His eldeſt ſon——William, by Hawiſe, daughter of Robert Boſſu, Earl of Leiceſter, left at the time of his deceaſe in 1173, three daughters, Mabel, Amice, and Iſabel. Amice, the ſecond, was married to Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford; and in her right her eldeſt ſon——Gilbert de Clare inherited the Earldom and Honor of Glouceſter.

Here is only one Maner.

Copped-hall, otherwiſe Cipped, or Cipt-hall, ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

Under the Earls of Glouceſter, this maner was holden by an antient Family ſurnamed Senannz, de Cennants, Senance, Septvance, or rather Sept Vanns, de Septem Vannis, i. e. of Seven Fans. Robert Senannz, who dyed in 1253, held of Ralph de Suford, in this pariſh, 300 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, paſture of marſh worth 22 s. 7d. a year, and rent of aſſiſe from the free tenants 37 s. 3 d. ob. qa. and 2 pounds of pepper; by the ſervice of 2 knights fees, with dower.——Robert, his ſon and heir, was 3 years old (t). Under Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter and Hertford,——Robert de Cennants held two fees in Wykebyrh (u). Of Elizabeth de Burgh, Lady of Clare, William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, held jointly with Richard Dalleſle, this maner of Wiggebergh, in 1354. His nephew——John was his heir (w). And yet we find it after that in the Sennanz family. For in 1364,——William de Septvanz granted this maner to William de Boudon, and his heirs: And, in 1376,——William, ſon and heir of Sir William de Septvance, releaſed to Walter de la Lee, and Robert de Teye, Kts. &c. all his right in the maner called Coppede-hall in Little Wygebergh, with the Advowſon of the Church (x). However,——Robert Senance held, in 1398, two fees in Little Wigbergh, under Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March, who had one lete in Wigbereue (y).

John de Boys and Thomas Bataile had this maner, and preſented to the Living, in 1390.

The next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record was Richard Bukland Eſq; who dyed in 1435. He held this maner of Little Wiggebergh, called Copped-hall, with the Advowſon of the Church, of Richard Duke of York, as of his Honor of Clare, by knight's ſervice. The ſon of his daughter——Agnes, namely, Richard Wichingham Eſq; was his next heir (z).——Agnes, moſt probably daughter of theſe, and wife of Nicolas Sharpe Eſq; held for the term of her life, this maner of Copped-hall, and lands, tenements, rents and ſervices, in Great and Little Wiggebergh, Salcote, and Peldon, with the Advowſon of this Church, of Cecily Ducheſs of York, as of her Honor of Clare, by fealty, and yearly rent of 1 d. Remainder to Thomas Cotton, Eſq; born in 1444 [A], and to Joanna his wife, daughter of the ſaid Nicolas and Agnes: Agnes departed this life in 1484 (a).

Thomas Cotton, married, firſt, Margery, daughter of Philip Wentworth, by whom he had a daughter. By his ſecond wife, Joanna abovementioned, he had Robert, John, Leonard a prieſt, William; and Etheldreda, wife of John Baſſingbourn. At the time of his deceaſe, 20 July 1499, he held this maner of Copydhall, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the Honor of Clare, as above (b). His eldeſt ſon and heir——Sir Robert Cotton, of Landwood in Cambridgeſhire, held alſo the ſame, and dying 18 July 1517, left, by Alice his wife, daughter of . . . Thornborough, and widow of Sir Nicolas Griffin,——Thomas, his ſon, then 10 years old. He departed this life, 30 March 1526.——John, his poſthumous ſon (c), ſucceeded him; and dyed in 1593. By Iſabella his wife, daughter of William Spencer, he left his ſon and heir——Sir John Cotton, of Landwood, Kt. who otherwiſe written Salcott-Verley, and Výrley, or Salcott cum Verley, and ſometimes ſtyled Little Salcot, ſtands oppoſite to the other Salcot, on the north ſide of the Creek. It is very thinly inhabited, having only three farm-houſes, and about four cottages. The greater number of people, chiefly Seamen, live in the other Salcot.

This pariſh had the additional name of Verli from Robert de Verli, who held it at the time of the Survey under Robert Gernon: It had belonged before to one freeman [B]. Robert de Verli had alſo Layer Breton, and a Maner in Tolleſhunt-Darcy, now united to the capital maner.

In this pariſh there is only ONE MANER.

Verli-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands near the Church.

The Family of Verli, though at firſt holding under Gernon, came at length to be proprietors here. For by an Inquiſition upon the death of Aveline, wife to Edmund, ſecond ſon of K. Henry III. in 1275, it appears, that Robert de Verley held four knights fees of the Barony of Stanſted; belonging to Gernon; viz. Toleſhunt Darcy, Little-Birche, Saltecote, Cofford, and Samantune (d). By which two laſt is meant part of Copford, and an eſtate here, and in Peldon.

As to the ſucceſſion of the Verli, or Verley, Family, it ſtands thus. Robert above-mentioned was father of——Robert, whoſe ſon and heir was ——Sir Philip de Verley, who had——Robert, that married Margaret, daughter of Sir Ralph Gernon, by Alianor his wife, daughter of Robert De Vere Earl of Oxford; his ſon and heir was—Philip, who had two ſons,——John, that dyed without iſſue, and——Roger.

In 1314, Philip de Verli paſſed this eſtate to Walter de Patteſhull, as appears by a fine between Walter de Patteſhulle, plaintiff, and Philip de Verli impedient, of the maner of Salcot-Verli, and Advowſon of the Church (e). Walter, at the time of his deceaſe in 1330, held the maners of Berwalden and Salcote Verly, and lands as mentioned above, p. 393. in Wykbergh, Tolleſbury, Leyre-Marny, and Tolleſhunt-Knights. ——Thomas was his ſon and heir (f), who muſt have had a ſon——Walter, elſe the Feodary of Stanſted agrees not with that of Hedingham, which finds Walter alive in 1351. [See under Great Wigborough.]

This Eſtate was next in the ancient family of Att Lee, of Albury in Hertfordſhire, already mentioned above, p. 393. and in the other Volume, p. 96. 473. 625. Sir John att Lee, who dyed in 1370, held two fees in Salcote Verley under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford, and the Advowſon of the Church of St Marys at Salcote, &c.——Sir Walter, his ſon, held the ſame fees under Thomas the 8th Earl of Oxford, and departing this life in 1395, left three Siſters coheirs; namely Margery, wife of Robert Newport; Joane, wife of John Barlee; and Alice wife of Sir Thomas Morewell (g). [See in the other Volume, p. 625.] Upon partition of the Eſtates, this came to the ſhare of Margery, and her huſband Robert Newport. He dyed 28 October 1428, and ſhe 20 January 1467. Their ſon and heir——William Newport, at the time of his deceaſe in 1434, held this maner of SalcoteVirley, of John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford.——George, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 27 October 1484 (h). And——Robert his ſon and heir held it of John the 14th Earl of Oxford, under the name of the maner of More, with appertenances, in Salcot Vyrley and Tolleſhunt Knights. He dyed 7 November 1518.——John Newport Eſq; his ſon and heir (i), held the maners of More and Salcott-Virley, and Mill-feild, of John Earl of Oxford; and departing this life 26 May 1524, left an only daughter,

Grace, then only eight years old, contracted in marriage with Henry Parker Eſq; ſon and heir of Henry Lord Morley (k). He dyed in his father's life time, in 1550, leaving——Henry, his eldeſt ſon and heir, who became Lord Morley,

His ſucceſſors were——William, and——Henry, Lords Morley and Montegle. [See in the other Volume, p. 515.] The latter ſold this eſtate to Antony Abdy Eſq; Alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1630. [See above, p. 177.] He gave this to his third ſon——John Abdy, created a Baronet 22 June 1660, and ſtyled of Moors in Salcot, an eſtate in this pariſh which hath chiefly gone along with this, as we ſhall ſhew preſently. Sir John dying without iſſue, this eſtate came to his heirs, ſeated at Albins, and hath deſcended to them with the neighbouring maner of Bernwalden in Tolleſhunt-knights. It is at preſent in Mrs. Crank.

The MORE, ſtyled above a Maner, and belonging to the ſame Family, is not now acknowledged a diſtinct Maner, but included in that of Salcot-Virle. It was holden of the Earls of Oxford by Walter de Patteſhull in 1351; by John atte Lee in 1360, and Sir Walter att Lee in 1371; by John Barle, and William Tirwhite; by William and George Newport, in 1446, and 1502; by Robert Newport, in 1518, and by John Newport in 1524 (m).

ABBOTS-WIC; The lands of this eſtate extend into Salcot-Verli, but the houſe ſtands in Great Wigborough. It belongs to Mrs. Crank.

This is reckoned amongſt the four knights fees, or part of them, which Robert de Verli held under Edmund ſecond ſon of K. Henry III. as aboveſaid.

The Abbot of St. Oſith held one knight's fee under John de Vere the 7th Earl of Oxford, in 1358; which is ſuppoſed to be this eſtate (n).

In the Rental of the lands belonging to the Barony of Stanſted, it is called one fee in Salcote Wigbergh and Samanton in le Peeke.

This Samantun belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to two Freemen: Odo, biſhop of Bayeux, and his under-tenant Ralph ſon of Turold, held it at the time of the Survey [D].

Great Panes, an eſtate here ſo called, belongs to Mr. Harriſon.

And Little Panes to Mr. Philip Havens.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is very ſmall, and tiled. The Tower being fallen down, there is only a ſmall timber incloſure which contains 1 Bell [E].

This Rectory was appendent originally to the Maner of Salcot-Verli, and in the gift of the Families of Patteſhull, and att Lee or de la Lee. When, after Sir Walter att Lee's deceaſe, the eſtate came to be divided between his ſiſters, Margery wife of Robert Newport, Joane wife of John Barlee, and Alice as recited above; the Preſentation came to be alternate between the Newports who preſented from 1410 to 1519, and the Barlees from 1409 to 1557. It hath of late been alternate between the Abdy Family, and that of Rebow; namely Sir John Abdy's heirs, and Charles-Chamberlain Rebow Eſq; the latter it ſeems by a right derived from the maner of Moulſham in Great Wigborough (o).

Salcot is rated to the land-tax at 142 l. 2 s. 0 d. and Virley at 244 l. 2 s. 0 d.

MERSEY.

This is an iſland at the confluence of the River Colne, and of the River Blackwater or Idumanius, where they diſcharge themſelves into the German Ocean. It is parted, on the weſt and north, from Winſtree Hundred by a Channel or Fleete called Pyefleet, which produces the beſt Colcheſter-Oyſters.

The name is formed from the Saxon words, Meꞃe, the Sea, or a marſh, and iᵹ, an iſland: unleſs the firſt part of the name ſhould be derived from the word Mæꞃa, the extremities, or a boundary, this being a boundary here againſt the ſea; but the former appears to me the moſt probable. It is otherwiſe written in books and records Meres-ig, Mæres-ige, Mereſai, Mereſaia.

This place appears to have been the Reſidence or Seat of ſome conſiderable Roman General, and unqueſtionably of the Count of the Saxon Shore: For here are ſtriking Remains of the Magnificence of that people; and this Iſland ſtood moſt convenient for preventing the piracies of the Northern rovers either up the Colne-water or Blackwater-bay.

Upon repairing Weſt-Merſey-hall, and making a new Garden, a fine piece of Moſaic Work was diſcovered. In the Year 1730, Cromwel Mortimer M. D. Fellow of the College of Phyſicians, and Secretary to the Royal Society, ſon of John Mortimer of Topingho-Hall in this County, went down to examine it, and to take a draught of that part of the Pavement which lies in the Hall-yard. The account he gave of it, with his conjectures on the whole, is as follows: On the right of the gravel-walk which goes from the Green to the Hall-door, about a foot deep, he found the ſouth-eaſt Corner of the Pavement. He firſt met with a white bordure, twenty-one inches wide, compoſed of Teſſellæ three quarters of an inch ſquare; then a narrow liſt of black, three inches wide; and within this a white liſt, about the ſame wideneſs; which three ſeem to have run through the whole Pavement without interruption: And all the Teſſellæ of theſe parts are but half inch ſquare. Next to the white liſt runs a wreath or chain, five inches and half wide, of black, blue, and white, beautifully diſpoſed in ſhades, which ran the whole length of the eaſtern ſide, and making a return at the ſouth-eaſt angle, is interwoven with another ſhort wreath, of red, yellow, and white, diſpoſed in ſhades in the form of an S made ſquare, but ſeparated by a narrow white liſt, except where they croſs each other. Juſt beyond the red wreath, on the ſouth ſide, was a white ſquare bordered with black, in the middle of which was a large roſe of four leaves, ſhaded with red, yellow, and white; within this ſquare ran a narrow white liſt, eaſt and weſt; cloſe to this, a black, blue, and white wreath, like that on the eaſt ſide; and within that another white liſt, an inch and three quarters wide, which ſeemed to run round the whole work: At the ſouth-eaſt angle of this white liſt begin two parallel liſts of a ſort of fret-work, five inches wide and near five foot long, running ſouth and north, joined at the north end by a return of the frets: Theſe frets are alternately ſhaded with black, blue, and white; or red, yellow, and white; encloſing a white ſpace four foot and half long, and nine inches wide, containing a wreath of ſix ivy leaves, the ſtalks and edges of the leaves blue, the middle of the leaves alternately ſhaded, one with black, blue, and white; the other with red, yellow, and white. At the north end of this fret-work was a ſquare white ſpace, which ſeemed to be the middle of the eaſt ſide. Cloſe to the weſt ſide of this fret-work ran another white liſt, an inch and three quarters wide, extending the whole length from ſouth to north. Next to this is a wreath of red, yellow, and white, five inches wide, of the ſame length with the foregoing. And joining to this is another white liſt, of the ſame length, but only two inches and half wide. Then comes a very narrow black liſt, one inch wide, which ſeems to run quite round the larger middle ſquare. Along the ſouth and eaſt ſide of this middle ſquare is a row of diamonds or lozenges, twelve inches in diameter, bordered with white, each containing a knot or wreath croſſing at right angles, and alternately compoſed, one of black, blue, and white; the other of red, yellow, and white; diſpoſed in ſhades: The intermediate triangular ſpaces being each divided into three ſmaller triangles, the middle one being white, the three outer ones blue. Encompaſſed by theſe lozenges and triangles, at this ſouth-eaſt corner, was a ſmall ſquare, two foot on each ſide, ſurrounded by a narrow black liſt, within which is a wreath of red, yellow, and white, in ſhades, five inches wide, encloſing a ſmall white ſquare, bordered with a double liſt of black and white, having in its middle a Roſaceous flower like the Lotus, conſiſting of four large leaves lying uppermoſt, compoſed of red, yellow, and white; and the points of four other, lying underneath, appearing between in ſuch another ſmall ſquare as this. Wherefore the Doctor concludes there are three of theſe leſſer ſquares on the eaſt ſide of the Church-yard pales. And upon digging a hole in the Church yard about four foot deep, exactly ranging with the firſt-deſcribed leſſer ſquare, and weſt of it, he found ſuch another ſquare, like to it in all particulars, with the ſame bordure of lozenges round it; wherefore he concludes, there are but two of theſe leſſer ſquares on the ſouth ſide.

[E] In the weſt window of the Church was this Coat, in antique faſhion, Gules, a croſs azure, charged with 5 leopards faces, or.

From theſe circumſtances the Doctor conjectures, that the whole Pavement was of an oblong rectangular form, extending twenty-one foot and half from north to ſouth, and eighteen and half from eaſt to weſt; having at each angle the blue and red wreaths interwoven; next to them, two of the ſquare white ſpaces with the large roſe in each on the north and ſouth ſide, with an oblong white ſpace between in the middle of each of theſe ſides. On the eaſt and weſt ſides are the fret-works with the ivy leaves repeated on each ſide the white ſpace in the middle of each of theſe ſides. Then a red wreath on the eaſt and weſt ſides, and a blue wreath on the north and ſouth ſides of a larger ſquare, which forms the middle of the Pavement, containing three of the leſſer ſquares in a row on the weſtern ſide, and three on the eaſtern ſide, all the intermediate Spaces being filled up with the lozenges and triangles.

The Miniſter and Sextan informed the Doctor, that the whole Church-yard was paved at the ſame depth, and that moſt of the coffins are placed on theſe Pavements, which are of different ſorts in different parts of the Church-yard: That in the Chancel they found a Pavement conſiſting of red Teſſellæ, one inch and half ſquare, and forming the rays of large ſtars: That, weſt of the Church, they were compoſed of ſmall tiles, two or three inches ſquare: And that once two old braſs Coins were found here. The Doctor reviſited this place in 1740, and then ſaw a grave dug in the Church-yard, eaſtward of the Church, and due ſouth of the ſouth-weſt corner of the grand Pavement, where he found part of a Pavement compoſed of nothing but red Teſſellæ, an inch and half ſquare.

From the diverſity of theſe Pavements, contiguous to each other; and, according to the account of the Miniſter and Sextan, extending near one hundred foot from eaſt to weſt, and about fifty from north to ſouth, the Doctor imagines, that the grand Moſaic Pavement was not merely the Subſtratum of a General's tent, but that all theſe Pavements rather belonged to the Villa of ſome Roman Prætor, who was invited by the delightfulneſs of the ſituation to make this his Summer abode; like that at Weldon in Northamptonſhire, diſcovered in 1738, on the eſtate of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Hatton.

The Farmer who dwells at Weſt-Merſey-Hall, informed the Doctor, that ſeveral ſmall pieces of braſs, ſuch as Buckles, Haſps, Styli, and the like, have been found about his yards and orchards; and ſhewed him a very curious piece, dug up a few years ago: It is a ring of braſs, five inches diameter, with ſmall holes in the Border of it, probably to ſew a leathern bag to, faſtened at top to a ſwivel, with a loop to paſs a belt through. The Doctor takes it to have been the rim of ſome military pouch; moſt likely the bag of a Fundator, or Slinger, to carry his ſtones in.

On the other ſide of the Idumanum, on St. Peter's-Sands, which at low-water are uncovered for a league in the ſea, the Doctor met with ſeveral curious natural productions, ſuch as ſtar-Fiſh, ſea-apples, various Fuci and Conſervæ, ſome as beautifully ramified as thoſe which have formed the Dendrites or Mocho-Stones. He picked up ſeveral pieces of Roman Pateræ, ſome of which are to be ſeen in the Britiſh Muſeum.

There, are ſome Roman Tumuli, or Barrows, in the Iſland: and the Hill above Manwood Bridge in the road to Colcheſter, the ancient Camulodunum, is called Roman-hill.

The earlieſt, nay almoſt all the mention we find of this Iſland in Hiſtorians, is, that it uſed to be a ſort of Shelter for the roving and plundering Northern nations.

In the year 994, after K. Ælfred had beaten the Danes at Fernham, they fled up the Colne into this iſland; where the King's army beſieged them as long as their proviſions laſted. The year following, the remains of ſeveral bodies of Danes, and ſuch as had retired into this iſland, having made incurſions into divers parts, took refuge again into Merſey-iſland: but not caring, or not being able, to winter in the iſland, they ſailed up the Thames, and towed their ſhips up the river Lee as far as Hertford (p).

A Block-houſe, or ſmall Fortification, was at the South-eaſt corner of the Iſle, to defend the place, and the paſſage up the river Colne, but now ruinous. The Parliamentarians ſeized it during the ſiege of Colcheſter in 1648. Its preſent name is the Block-houſe ſtone.

During the Dutch wars in the laſt century, a Camp was kept here to prevent their landing.

This Iſland is divided into Two Pariſhes, one called Weſt, and the other Eaſt, Merſey; from their ſituation with regard to one another.

11. WEST-MERSEY,

the largeſt of the two, was, before the Conqueſt, diſtinguiſhed into two Maners; The Maner of Weſt-Merſey belonging to the Priory of St. Audoen, or Ouen, at Roan in Normandy; and the Maner of Bocking-hall, to the Priory of St. Saviour's in Canterbury, to which it was given with Bocking. The former was ſubdivided into the Maners of Peete-hall, and Boure-hall.

The Maner of WEST-MERSEY.

Weſt-Merſey-hall ſtands near the Church.

This Maner was given by K. Edward the Confeſſor, in the year 1046, to the Priory of St. Ouen, at Roan in Normandy [F], as I have obſerved juſt now.

That Priory was found poſſeſſed of it at the time of the Survey [G].

On this eſtate, near the eaſt end of the Church, was founded a Priory by Roger Fitz-Ranulph, dedicated to St. Helene, or St. Peter. It was of the Benedictine Order, and a Cell to the Priory of St. Ouen, which held it, with the Maner and Half Hundred of Winſtree, as of the gift of St. Edward King of England.

The time of its foundation is not mentioned, but it muſt have been ſoon after the Conqueſt: For the donation of K. Edward was confirmed by William the Conqueror, and K. Henry II. Some ſingular privileges belonged to this Houſe; among the reſt, that they held theſe eſtates in free, pure, and perpetual alms, without any ſervice; and that, on the death of a Prior, the demeſnes were not to be ſeized into the King's hands, by way of cuſtody of the Temporalities (q).

Upon the wars between England and France, the Priories Alien being ſuppreſſed, and their revenues given by Parliament to K. Henry V. in 1414; that King, 2 May 1422, granted this Priory and Maner of Merſey, with appertenances, to

The Archbiſhop ſettled it on the Collegiate Church founded by him at Higham-Ferrers in Northamptonſhire, his native place, for eight ſecular Canons, four Clerks, and ſix Choriſters. But the Abbot and Convent of St. Ouen having, with the licenſe of K. Henry IV. and of the Biſhop of Enachdun in Ireland, granted this eſtate to John Doreward and Iſabell his wife for their lives; the College of Higham did not come into poſſeſſion of it till after the death of Iſabell in 1426 (r). It continued annexed to that Church till the final Diſſolution of Religious Houſes, when it came to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. in 1542, granted the ſite of the maner of Weſtmerſey, a maner there called Petehall, the maners of Weſtmerſey, Fingringhoo, and Pete, with appertenances, the Half Hundred of Wynſtree, the Rectories of Weſt-Merſey and Fringringhoo, and the Advowſon of the Vicarages there, to Robert D'Acres and his heirs, to be held in capite by the ſervice of the 20th part of a knight's fee. At the time of his deceaſe, 20 November 1543, he held the maners of Weſt-Merſey, Pete-hall, and Fyngryngho, with appertenances, and the Rectories and Advowſons of the Vicarages of thoſe Churches, and 200 meſſuages, 200 tofts, 2 mills, 200 gardens, 3000 acres of arable, 2000 of meadow, 2000 of paſture, 500 of wood; and 100l. rent, with appertenances, in Weſt-Merſey, Pethall, and Fyngryngho; and left ——George his ſon, 10 years old (s).

But K. Edward VI. granted them, 1 June 1553 to Thomas Lord Darcy, of Chiche, and his heirs (t). They all paſſed, from him, as the Maner of Fringringho, to——John Lord Darcy, and to——Thomas Lord Darcy, created 5 July 1621 Viſcount Colcheſter, and 1 November 1626 Earl Rivers. He dyed 21 February 1639, without iſſue male ſurviving.——Elizabeth Counteſs Rivers, widow of Sir Thomas Savage, Kt. and Bart. was his eldeſt daughter and coheir. Her father, Thomas Lord Darcy Earl Rivers having left her his Executrix, ſhe ſold this Eſtate of Weſt-Merſey-hall, or Priory, 4 October 1649, to John Kidby, M. A. Rector of Shenfeild. He dyed in 1694, and having married Anne, daughter of Edmund Plumb of Hawkdon in Suffolk, had by her, among other children,——Edmund, his ſecond ſon, Rector of Eaſt and Weſt-Hanningfeild, in Eſſex, who dyed in 1718. By Anne his wife daughter of Thomas Selyard, of Penſhurſt in Kent, Eſq; ſon and heir of Sir Thomas Selyard, Kt. he had——John Kidby, M. D. of Balliol-College in Oxford; who leaving no iſſue, and a will he had made not being legal, it came to his uncle's daughter and heir at law——Miſs Kidby.

The Quit-rents of this Maner are now 28 l. per annum, formerly 32 l.

The Maner of PEETE

is not confined to the Iſland, but extends beyond Pyefleete upon part of the continent; aud ſome of its demeſnes lye in the pariſh of Peldon.

Peete-hall, the manſion-houſe, is about a mile and a half north out of the iſland, near Peete-bridge.

The cauſway leading hence to Colcheſter is from Peete-bridge, by Peete-Tye, croſs Abberton-Green, over Manwood-Bridge, by the ſide of Blackheath, and enters the Town on the eaſt of St. John's-Abbey.

Le Peete, that is this eſtate, is mentioned by name in Edward the Confeſſor's grant to St. Ouen's Priory. And was granted in 1542, by the name of the maner of Pete-hall, to Robert Dacres, with the maners of Fingringho and Weſt-Merſey (u), as above-mentioned.

K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553, granted it, with the reſt, to Thomas Lord Darcy (w); and it paſſed with them to his ſucceſſors——John Lord Darcy, ——Thomas Lord Darcy, Viſcount Colcheſter, and Earl Rivers. His eldeſt daughter, Elizabeth, Lady Savage, and Counteſs Rivers, ſold this, with Fringringho-hall 24 October 1648, to

George Frere, merchant, who bequeathed it to his nephew

John Goddard, Gent. His ſon,——John Goddard left a ſon——John, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Gardiner, Mayor of Norwich in 1685: A ſon that he had by her dying an infant, he deviſed this eſtate to be ſold, after his wife's deceaſe, for payment of his debts, giving the remainder to

Mr. Thomas Bayles, of Colcheſter:
The latter ſold it in 1728 to Mr. Jacob Browne.

The Maner of BOWER-HALL.

The manſion houſe is about a mile and a half north-eaſt from the Church.

This belonged, as well as the former, to St. Ouen's Priory, and the College of Higham-Ferrers.

It appears by Sir Thomas Montgomery's will, 28 July 1487, that he then held the maner of Bowre-hall in Merſey.

John Abell, who dyed 10 January 1524, held, of the Warden of the ſaid College, the maner of Bower-hall; lands and tenements called Merchants; and other lands and hereditaments in Weſt-Merſey, Peldon, Leyer de la Hay and Bretton, and Salcott (x).

At the diſſolution, it came to the Crown. In 1558, K. Philip and Qu. Mary granted it to Sir Thomas White, being parcel of the poſſeſſions of Thomas Bacon and Anne his wife (y).

Qu. Elizabeth, 1 Auguſt 1599, granted it, with the maner of Brookhall in Tolleſhunt-Knights, to John Spencer Eſq; Alderman of London; who dyed poſſeſſed of it 3 March 1609 (z). [See above, p. 394.]

Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her huſband William Lord Compton, afterwards Earl of Northampton. He kept his firſt court here 14 October 1617.——Spencer was their eldeſt ſon and heir. He ſold this eſtate to

It now belongs to Marcellus Oſborne, Eſq; who hath married Mrs. Fox.

The Maner of Bocking-Hall.

The manſion houſe ſtands about 2 miles eaſt north-eaſt from the Church.

This maner, or eſtate, was originally part of the poſſeſſions of two noble Saxons, Ætheric and Leofuuine, who gave it, in the year 1006, to the Church and Priory of St. Saviour in Canterbury, with the Lordſhip of Bocking in this County, for the maintenance of the Monks (a). Being reckoned a member of Bocking maner, it hence took the name of Bocking-hall.

The Priory of St. Saviour, then dedicated to the H. Trinity and thence ſo called, had this eſtate at the time of the Survey [H]. It continued in that Church till 20 March 1539, when the Priory and Convent of Chriſt's Church, for it was then ſo ſtyled, ſurrendered their revenues to the Crown.

K. Henry VIII. upon his ſettling a Dean and Canons in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury inſtead of the Monks, 26 May 1542, made this maner of Bocking in Marſey part of their endowment. But, 23 November 1545, they aſſigned it, with others, to the King, in diſcharge of 200 l. a year which they were obliged to pay for the maintenance of Scholars at Oxford and Cambridge (b). [See in the other Volume, p. 390.]

It continued in the Crown till 1 Auguſt 1599, when Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Bocking, with appertenances; and the ſite of the ſame; and marſh and lands, 18 acres, called Le Rey; and 20 acres more, parcel of this maner; to John Spencer, Eſq; to hold of the Queen, of the Honor of Hampton-Court, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and not in capite. He held it at the time of his deceaſe, 3 March 1609, with the maners of Bowrehall and Brookhall (c).

Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to her huſband William Lord Compton, afterwards Earl of Northampton. [See above, p. 394.]

John Convers, Gent. had it ſome years ago:

And afterwards Arthur Winſley, of Colcheſter, Eſq; who made it part of the endowment of hi Hoſpital in the pariſh of St. Botolph's in Colcheſter.

Beſides the Eſtates above-mentioned, there are others in this pariſh belonging to George Wegg; and James Round; Eſquires; and to Mr. Thomas Cook; Mr. William Smythies; Mr. Thomas Wiltſhire; Joſeph Wayland; James Abbot; Edward Kempton; William Weaver; Edward Webb; the widows Wayland, and Wakelin; two called Maydors, and Northcourts; and the Barrow-hill farm, ſo called becauſe there is a Tumulus near it: this and another belong to Mr. John Hawes.

There is a dry paſſage into the Iſland at low water, every eight hours, over a Beach or cauſeway, called the Strode or Stronde, ſignifying a bank or road on the ſide of a creek, the ſea, or a river. For the ſupport and repair of this Strode there is an Eſtate in the Pariſh of about 30 acres, more or leſs, called the Stroud lands and Churchfields. There was formerly elected a Strode-keeper: And in K. Henry the VIIIth's time there was a Church houſe, now down and forgotten. Theſe lands are holden of the Maner of Weſt Merſey-hall, by feoffees, in truſt for repair of the Strode and Church: all is put into one bag; whether diſpoſed of according to the Will of the donor, is uncertain.

Some lands in this pariſh were formerly holden of the Honor of Bologne: namely by William de la Haye, and Ingelram de Blendett, in 1210: and by John de Blendett in 1256 (d).

Here is a Fair on Whitſun-Tueſday.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, ſtands near the ſouth-weſt corner of the iſland. It conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle; but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church went along with the Maner to St. Ouen's Priory; and the great Tithes were appropriated to their Cell here, and a Vicarage ordained to which they preſented till ſuppreſſed. It was afterwards in the gift of the Maſter and Fellows of Higham-Ferrers College from 1435 to 1525. And then came, with the Maner, into the Darcy family, and ſince into that of Kidby.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 858 l. 1 s. 0 d.

The Vicarage was holden many years by ſequeſtration.

For, in 1210, and 1211, Richard de Rivers held Merſey of the Honor of Haganet (e); it being lett to him by the King, and worth 15 l. a year (f) [K].

Whether he came into this by marriage of Maud de Lucy, as he did into Stanford, which bears his name nothing ſhews, [See above, p. 128. and in the other Volume, p. 115.]——William de Rivers had free warren in Martſey, in 1267 (g). At the time of his deceaſe in 1276, he held this maner of Eſt Merſey of the King, in capite, of the Honor of Reylie, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——John, his ſon and heir, followed him two years after, departing this life in 1278, and left——William, his ſon (h) under age, and in wardſhip to Giles de Fenes [L]. ——John, ſon and heir of this William, gave K. Edward I. in 1302 or 1303, fifty ſhillings for his relief for this half knight's fee, which his father William had holden of the King in capite in Mereſly (i). —— Sir Richard de Rivers was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1325: At the time of his deceaſe in 1332, he is ſtyled lord of Eſt Merſey, and huſband of Alice de Luckambroc. He left——Robert his ſon and heir (k).

In 1390, Alice daughter of Alianor Mary, and wife of Edmund de la More, releaſed to Sir Robert de Swynborne, and Ralph Chamberlain, and their heirs, all her right in the maner of Eſt-Merſey (l). This Sir Robert Swynborne married Joane daughter and heir of Sir John Boutetort, with whom he got a conſiderable fortune. By her he had 5 ſons who dyed without iſſue; and two daughters, Alice, wife of John Helion; and

Margery wife of Nicolas Berners Eſq; [See in the other Volume, p. 233. 564.] Theſe laſt had an only daughter

Catharine, married to Sir William Fynderne; who in her right became poſſeſſed of this, and other great eſtates. He dyed 15 May 1462; as did his ſon——Sir William 18 December 1515; and——Thomas Fynderne Eſq; their ſon, 10 March 1523 (m). The latter leaving no iſſue, the eſtates deſcended to

Anne, wife of Sir Roger Wentworth, of Goſfield. She was daughter and heir of Humfrey Tyrell, of Warley Eſq; by Iſabell, daughter and heir of John Helion Eſq; whoſe mother Alice was one of the ſiſters and coheirs of Thomas, ſon of Robert Swynborne, above-mentioned. [See in the other Volume, p. 235. 332. 381.] Sir Roger dying 9 Auguſt 1539, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——John Wentworth Eſq; who, 1 July 1544, exchanged this maner with K. Henry VIII. for that of Wethersfield, as appears by an Inſpeximus in 1615 [M]. [See more concerning this family of Wentworth in the other Volume, p. 372. 381.]

This eſtate belonged in the laſt century to one Col. Edward Bellamie, citizen and fiſhmonger, who dyed 28 Auguſt 1656, aged 59, and was buried in this Church, with an inſcription. Of one of his ſucceſſors it was purchaſed by

Sir Ralph Creffeild, of Colcheſter, Kt. who departed this life 22 June 1732, and was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Peter Creffeild Eſq; He dyed in November 1748. —— Thamar, his only daughter and heir, brought it in marriage to James Round, Eſq; eldeſt ſon of William Round of Birch-hall Eſq; He hath alſo here Bromans; Paulfreemans; Block-houſe, and Ivy-houſe.

The Maner of REUSHALL, otherwiſe Reveſhall, or Ruſall, and Northlands, was viſibly ſo named from the Rivers family, part of whoſe inheritance it was.

The manſion houſe is above a mile north from the Church.

We find no account of this maner till 1368, when William, ſon and heir of Hugh Groos, is recorded to hold a moiety of the maner of Reueshalle in Merſeye, of Lionell de Bradenham, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee (n). He was alſo lord of the Maners of Little-Bentley, New-hall in Tendring, and Hamſtall in Wikes. His moiety of the maner here was ſettled by his brother——Sir John Groos in truſtees for maintenance of a Chantry Prieſt in the new Chapel of Bentley Church, who was to have 8 l. 3 s. and two hundred fagots from the three maners above-mentioned. The lands apportioned for that purpoſe, were, the moiety of one meſſuage, 240 acres of arable, 130 acres of marſh, and 30 s. rent in Eſt-Merſeye, holden of Sir John Sutton, by knight's ſervice. This moiety, according to the ſame Grant, was conveyed to the Abbey of St. Oſith, who were to keep his Obit, and, I preſume, pay the Chantry money (o) [N].

Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor, had a grant of this eſtate at the Suppreſſion, for at the time of his deceaſe, 8 May 1544, he held the maner of North-Lands in Eaſt-Merſey (q). The latter waſting his eſtates, this came into the poſſeſſion of James Smyth Eſq; From him it hath deſcended to —— Sir Robert Smyth, of Bere-Church, Bart. [See above, p. 14.]

This eſtate contains about 101 acres.

There is another Eſtate, or capital Farm, in the ſouthern part of this pariſh, called Ruſalls.

Sir William Capell, who dyed 6 September 1515, held the maner of Ruſalls, with appertenances, of Sir William Findern, as of his maner of Eſt-Merſey. —— Sir Giles Capell was his ſon and heir (s).

In 1558, Qu. Mary and K. Philip granted this maner, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Sir Giles Capell, to Sir Thomas White (t).

Sir John Spencer, who dyed 3 March 1609, is recorded to have held this maner of Rewſalls and Eaſt-Merſey, with the ſite of the ſame, and 1 meſſuage, 1 garden, 1 orchard, 300 acres of arable, 60 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 100 of furze and heath, with appertenances, in Rewſalls and Eaſt Merſey; of the King, as of his maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in free and common ſocage. —— Elizabeth, his daughter, was married to William Lord Compton (u). This Rectory was given by Robert ſon of Suene to the Priory of Prittlewell founded by him, and continued in the gift of the Prior and Monks till the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, except for ſome years during the wars between K. Edward III. and France. At the general Diſſolution of Religious Houſes, the Advowſon fell to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

THE HUNDRED OF TENDRING,

IS a peninſula, being bounded on the South and Eaſt by the Sea; on the North by the River Stour, which divides it from Suffolk; on the Weſt by the Colcheſter Channel and the Hundred of Lexden.

In its form it is almoſt round; fifteen miles from eaſt to weſt, and about thirteen miles from north to ſouth.

It takes its name from the Pariſh of Tendring, ſtanding near its center, where the Hundred courts were originally held.

This Hundred was diſafforeſted by K. Stephen, as appears by the Copy of his Charter below [O].

About fifty years ago, this Hundred was very much covered with wood, and full of foul and buſhy ground, but hath been ſince much cultivated and improved.

The perſons to whom this Hundred is recorded to have been granted at different times, with the Caſtle of Colcheſter, by ſeveral Kings, are as follows.—Stephen Harengood, in 1214.—Guy de Rochfort in 1256.—John de Burgh in 1273. Richard de Holebrook in 1275.—Sir Robert de Benhall in 1364.—Henry Duke of Lancaſter in 1404.—Margaret, Queen of K. Henry VI. in 1446.—Sir John Howard in 1461.—Thomas Kendale in 1485.—John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, in 1496.—Sir Thomas Darcy in 1541.—Antony Kempe Eſq; in 1553.—Henry Mack-William Eſq; in 1558.—Sir John Stanhope in 1599.—James Hay Earl of Carliſle obtained the reverſion in 1629, to him and his heirs for ever. He releaſed it to—Archibald Hay in 1636. The latter conveyed it to—Sir John Lenthall: and Lenthall to—James Northfolk Eſq; in 1656. From him it came to his ſon—Robert Northfolk; and then to—Martha ſiſter of Robert, wife of Hope Gifford Eſq; (w).

On the death of Mrs. Gifford her Heireſs conveyed this Hundred to the Rev. Mr. Francis Powell, who ſold it to Mr. Henry Briggs, and of him it was purchaſed in the Year 1750, by Charles Gray Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor, and by that means re-annexed to Colcheſter Caſtle from which it had been for many Years ſeparated.

This Hundred includeth a Stewardſhip and Bayliwick. The donation of the office of Steward of the Hundred, and the nomination of the Bayliffs, belong to the proprietor of the Caſtle of Colcheſter. Within this Hundred there is kept a Court Baron at Manningtree, every three weeks, for plaints of debt &c. And a Court-lete, or View of frank-pledge, once a year, within twelve days after the Nativity of Chriſt, for the Pariſhes of Tendring, Ardley, Lawford, Miſtley, Little Bromley, Beaumont, and Alresford. The Waſte grounds, and Woods thereupon growing, within the precinct of the View of frank-pledge, belong to the Lord of the Hundred; and the offenders in felling the woods, and incroaching on the waſtes, or other like offenders, are puniſhed at the court. Waifs and ſtrays within the Pariſhes aforeſaid, and divers others within the Hundred, belong alſo to the lord [P]. And he hath an Acre and more of land, called the Bayliff's Acre, in Tendring.

The Steward has kept the Sheriff's Torne at Tendring, twice in every year, according to the form of the ſtatute. And to this Torne the pariſhes of Ardley, Lawford, Little Bromley, Elmſted, Alresford, Great Bentley, Frating, Tendring, Miſtley, Beaumont, Great and Little Oakley, Great Holland, Weeks, Bradfeild, Wrabnes, and Ramſey, do owe ſuit and ſervice. This Hundred doth not render any account into the Exchequer; and though the Sheriff of Eſſex uſeth to execute proceſs and writs therein, he cannot conſtitute the Bailiff of the Hundred (x).

(w) See Hiſt. of Colcheſter, p. 8, 9.

(x) Inquiſition taken at Colcheſter, 12 April 1637, before Sir Benjamin Ayloffe, Bart. Sir John Tunſtall, Kt. Henry Neville, and John Sayer Eſqres. by vertue of a Commiſſion under the Seal of the Court of Exchequer.

1. ARDLEY, is the north-weſt corner of this Hundred. It is a large Pariſh, and through it runs the road to Maningtree and Harwich.

The name is derived from the Britiſh word Ardh, high (y), and ley, paſture, untilled land.

It is otherwiſe written in records Aerlege, Ardlee, Ardelegh, Ardeleye, Erdelega, Erleia, Hardley.

The lands in this pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to ſix Freemen; to two Freemen; to Oſbert; and Scapie: At the time of the Survey, the perſons that held them, were, Roger de Ramis; Hugh de Gurnai; Robert Gernon; and Geffrey de Magnaville.

Hence aroſe the following Maners. 1. The maner of Picotts. 2. The maner of Bovills, and Bradvills. 3. The maner of Moſe, or Mooſe-hall. 4. Martells hall.

The Maner of PICOTTS, otherwiſe Pigotts, and Pycottys.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the weſt end of the Church: It is vulgarly called Picketts-hall.

This is the part that belonged to Roger de Ramis [Q]; of whom and his family having given a particular account in the other Volume, p. 175, 403. I ſhall beg leave to refer thither, and not repeat it here.——Roger, ſon of Roger de Ramis, was poſſeſſed of this eſtate in the reign of K. Stephen, and gave the Church to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, as I ſhall ſhew preſently.

Under this noble Family de Ramis, which held theſe lands of the King, in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, they came to be holden early by a family ſurnamed Picott, and continued in it ſeveral years. [See ſome account of it in the other Volume, p. 411. 601.] In 1194——Ralph Pikot owed 50s. for a relief for half a knight's fee in Reines and Ardeley, of the fee of Henry de Eſſex: And, about 1210, he held of Roger de Ramis one carucate of land in Erdele (z).——Sir William Picot, his ſon, was living in 1226, and the jury of Tendring Hundred certified before the Judges itinerant at Chelmsford, that he held 10l. rent in land by the ſervice of keeping one hawking horſe (a).——Sir William, his ſon and heir, held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe in 1283. His ſon——Sir Ralph Pycott, about 1329, ſold this maner of Ardelegh to

William de Tey; it being holden of the King, as of the Barony of Reynes, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (b). In 1350,——Robert de Teye, Lionell de Bradenham, and Milo le Frenſhe, enfeoffed Richard de Sutton, and Anne his wife in this maner of Ardleigh, which was holden of the King in capite, as of the Barony of Reynes, by the ſerjancy of keeping one ſparrow-hawk at the King's Charge (c). In 1400, his ſon and heir——Robert Teye releaſed his maner called Pycotts, in Ardleigh, to

John Bohun, and others (d). Notwithſtanding which, the Tey family appears afterwards poſſeſſed of this eſtate. For——Robert Tey, who dyed in 1426 or 1427, held the maner of Pycotts of the King, in ſocage, by fealty, and rent of 2s. to the King. And his ſon——John Teye Eſq; held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1440, or 1441, leaving——John his ſon and heir. This latter held alſo the maner of Ardleigh; of which, 200 acres of arable, 40 of wood, and 6 of meadow, parcel of the ſaid maner of Ardleigh, were called the maner of Pycottes, and holden of the King, by the ſervice of one ſparrow hawk yearly, or 2s. for the ſame, in lieu of all ſervices. He departed this life in 1462.——Henry, his ſon and heir, was but 7 years old (e). In 1522 a fine was levied between John Willoughby, Thomas Baldry, and others, plaintiffs, and——Thomas Tey Eſq; and Mary his wife, deforc' of the maners of Pycottys, Bovylls, and Moſſe-hall, with appertenances, and 1000 acres of arable, 300 of meadow, 400 of paſture, 200 of wood, and 15 pounds worth of land by the year, the right of Thomas Baldry (f). The fine was to lead to ſome uſe not expreſſed. This Thomas Tey was ſon of Henry above-mentioned; and a knight. At the time of his deceaſe, 31 December 1540, he held the maner of Piggotts-hall of the King as of his Honor of Swanſcomb, by fealty, and rent of 12s. per annum. His four daughters were his coheirs, namely, Margaret, wife of Sir John Jermye, of Brightwell in Suffolk; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Marmaduke Nevill, third ſon of Richard Nevill Lord Latimer; Mary, wife of Sir Thomas Nevill, brother of Sir Marmaduke; and Frances, married firſt to William Bonham Eſq; next to Edward Bocking, and laſtly to Thomas Bonham (g). [For a fuller account of the Tey family, ſee above, p. 412, and in the other Volume, p. 202, 203.]

Upon partition of the Tey eſtates, this fell to the ſhare of Sir Thomas Nevill, in right of Mary his wife [R]. She dyed 28 October 1544, leaving——Thomas Nevill, her ſon and heir, 9 years old (h).

William Cardinall, of Great Bromley Eſq; was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record; which he held of the Honor of Swanſcomb, and dying 7 Auguſt 1568, was ſucceeded by his ſon——William Cardinall, Eſq; (i).

John Strut, of Hadley in Suffolk, Gent. had it afterwards; and Mrs. Dawſon, of the ſame place. It belongs to Mrs. Dawſon, of Groton.

The Maner of BOVILLS and BRADVILLS is placed next, becauſe we find it ſtyled parcel of the Maner of Ardleigh, in the Inquiſition taken in 1462.

It had its name from ſome ancient owners about the reign of K. Henry II.

The manſion houſe is about half a mile ſouth and by weſt from the Church.

This Maner is what Hugh de Gurnai held at the time of the Survey [S]. One of his ſucceſſors, named alſo Hugh, forfeited it to the Crown in the reign of K. Henry II. [See in the other Volume, p. 319.] Beſides this maner, they had only Fordham and Liſton in Eſſex.

Richard de Bovill, from whom it takes its name, was a conſiderable man in this place, and a benefactor to St. Botolph's Priory in Colcheſter in 1189. And, both he and William de Bovill; were alſo benefactors to the Abbey of St. Oſith (k).

This maner was holden of the Honor of Clare.

It was as well as the former in the Tey family.

In 1320, a fine paſſed between William de Teye, plaintiff, and Robert de Teye, and Anne his wife, deforc' for one meſſuage, 3 mills, 240 acres of arable, 50 of wood, 8 of alder, and 5s. rent in Ardley, the right of the ſaid Robert. To have and to hold to the ſaid William and the heirs of his body, of the foreſaid Robert and Anne for ever (l).——Robert de Teye enfeoffed in this maner

Richard de Sutton for the term of his life; who held it, about 1361, of the Honor of Clare by the ſervice of one knight's fee. And Gilbert de Clare Earl of Glouceſter kept a lete in Ardley every year: The chief pledge paid for himſelf and his decennary 2s. the common fine (m). The ſaid Richard and Anne his wife held this maner under Roger de Mortimer Earl of March, who dyed in 1398 (n). It was again in the Tey family in 1400. For then——Robert, ſon and heir of Robert de Tey, releaſed his tenement of Bovilles and Bradvilles to John de Bohun (o).——John Teye, Eſq; who departed this life in 1440, held this maner of Bovylles and Bradvylles of Richard Duke of York. And his ſon——John Teye held, in 1462, of Cecily Ducheſs of York, 100 acres of arable, 8 of wood, 2 of meadow, parcel of the maner of Ardleigh, called Bovills and Bradvills.——Henry, his ſon and heir (p), dyed 9 September 1510, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Thomas Tey, who, at the time of his deceaſe, 31 December 1540, left four daughters, as related above.

Frances, the youngeſt, brought it in marriage to her firſt huſband Thomas Bonham Eſq; whoſe ſon——Thomas Bonham, upon her deceaſe in 1575, paid ingreſs fine; and ſold it, in 1582, to John Southwell. He alienated it, the year following, to Edmund Bedingfeild, Eſq; and the latter conveyed it, in 1584, to Richard Bridgewater, L. L. D. After whoſe deceaſe,——Judith, his widow, came into poſſeſſion in 1587. Their ſon——Richard Bridgewater dyed 10 May 1589, leaving——Richard his ſon and heir; who conveyed this eſtate, in 1635, to

William Theedham, Gent. Of him it was purchaſed in 1645, by James Arwaker: But the purchaſe ſeems not to have gone on, for Bezaleel Gael bought it of William Theedam in 1649; and ſold it again to Henry Lamb, of Colcheſter, in 1665. His ſon——Henry ſucceeded him in 1677. And it belongs now to——Henry Lamb, Gent.

The Maner of MOSE, otherwiſe Mooſe-hall, Moyes-hall, and vulgarly More-hall.

This was, as well as the former, parcel of the Maner of Ardleigh in 1462.

The manſion houſe ſtands near 2 miles ſouthweſt from the Church, on the right hand ſide of the road from Colcheſter to Ardley.

It is what belonged to Robert Gernon at the time of the Survey [T]. His ſucceſſors, ſeated at Stanſted-Montfichet, were——William,——Gilbert —— Richard, and another —— Richard. The latter dying about 1258, without iſſue, his noble inheritance was divided among his three ſiſters, Margery, wife of Hugh de Bolebec; Aveline, wife of William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle; and Philippa, wife of Hugh de Playz. [See in the other Volume, p. 576, 577.]

This appears to have fallen to the ſhare of Aveline, and her huſband the Earl of Albemarle. He dyed in 1241. Their ſon and heir—William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle, had three ſons, who left no iſſue; and two daughters.

Aveline, the youngeſt daughter, and only ſurviving child and heir, was married, in 1269, to Edmund Crouchback, Earl of Lancaſter, ſecond ſon of K. Henry III. But departed this life in 1292, without iſſue. In her right, her huſband held 14 knights fees, as of the inheritance of Richard de Montfichet: and Richard de Pevelin held under him 4 knights fees part of this eſtate, ſome of which lay in Ardelegh, and Braham.

After that we hear no more of this eſtate till we find it in the Tey family. Robert Teye held the maner of Moſehall in 1426, and his ſon——John in 1440, whoſe ſon ——John Teye (q), at the time of his deceaſe in 1462, held 200 acres of arable, 20 of wood, and 4 of meadow, parcel of the maner of Ardleigh, called Moſe-hall. He was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry (r); whoſe ſon and heir——Sir Thomas Tey held the maner of Moſe-hall, with appertenances in Ardleigh, Grynſted, Dedham, and Markes, of the King as of the Priory of St. Botolphs in Colcheſter, by fealty, and 8s. rent a year; and dyed in 1540. His four daughters were his coheirs, as abovementioned (s). This maner is ſaid all along to be holden of the Priory of St. Botolph's. By the Inquiſition taken in 1462, it appears that one part of the maner of Ardleigh held of the Priory of St. Botolph's in Colcheſter, namely of the lands they had in Ardley of the fees of Ralph Martell, and Richard de Bovill (t).

In 1570, Peter Penant held Moſe-hall of the Honor of Clare.

Then it was in William Theedam, Gent. who ſold it to John Wall; and from him it deſcended to his ſon —— Daniel Wall, Vicar of Bromfield, and after him to his four children: One of them —— Sherman Wall, of Chelmsford, apothecary, alienated it to Ralph Creffeild Eſq; He dyed 12 December 1723.

Charles Gray Eſq; who married his widow, enjoys this eſtate for his life.

The Family have alſo a Brick houſe, formerly a ſeat, in this pariſh, about half a mile north from the Church:—And a Farm in which the widow of Peter Creffeild Eſq; ſon of the ſaid Ralph, remarried to Edmund Affleck Eſq; is jointured.

MARTELLS-HALL

vulgarly called Martyns-hall, is the other Maner in this pariſh.

The manſion-houſe ſtands about three quarters of a mile ſouth from the Church.

This is what Geffrey de Magnaville held at the time of the Survey [U].

And it was afterwards holden of the Honor of Mandeville.

The name of Martell it took from a family, that had it as under-tenants, ſoon after the Survey: They had alſo Martells-hall in Rivenhall.

William Martell, ſon of Geffrey, and Albreda his wife, founded the Priory of Snapes in 1155, and gave it as a cell to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter. And Ralph Martell had a fee here, part of which he gave to St. Botolph's Priory in the ſame town (u).

In the reign of K. Henry II. Ralph Martell held one knight's fee here, of Geffrey de Mandeville Earl of Eſſex.——William was his ſon (*). Felicia, widow of William, dyed in 1252. ——Ralph, her ſon, at the time of his deceaſe in 1259, held 10l. in the vill of Hardeley, of the Earl of Hereford, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.——John, his ſon and heir, held this maner, and departing this life in 1307, was ſucceeded by his ſon —— William (w). —— John Martel, who was living in 1317, married Alice daughter of Benedict de Cokefeild: A fine was levied between them two, plaintiffs, and Ranulph de Cokefeild, deforc' for this maner, with appertenances (x). —— William Martell Eſq; was the next poſſeſſor, and after him——Thomas; that held this maner of the Dutchy of Lancaſter: It lay in the pariſhes of Ardeley, Dedham, Elmeſted, and Grynſted. He dyed 26 June 1424, and lies buried in this Church. His next heir was Elias Doreward, ſon of Walter, and grandſon of Elias Doreward, by Anne daughter of John ſon of Benedict de Cokefeild (y) [W]. He departed this life in 1426, leaving by Joane his wife, three children. Elizabeth; Margaret; and William, only two years old. His widow was remarried to Nicolas Mortimer: and departed this life in 1456. William the ſon dying in 1438 under age, and without iſſue,

Elizabeth his ſiſter, wife of David Mortimer, and 22 years old, ſucceeded him in this and other eſtates (z). She dyed in 1452. They had two ſons Robert and David. ——Robert Mortimer, the eldeſt ſon, held this maner of the King, as David, the younger brother dyed 30 March 1494; it ſeems without iſſue, for his niece Elizabeth was his heir. They had alſo the maner of Great Bromley, and conſiderable eſtates at Dovercourt and Harwich.

Elizabeth Mortimer, aboveſaid, was married to George Gilford (a). They levied a fine of this eſtate in 1528, and ſold it ſoon after to William Mannock, of Giffords-hall in Suffolk Eſq; He dyed poſſeſſed of it 8 June 1558, being ſucceeded by his ſon——Francis Mannock Eſq; then 35 years old (b); who dyed 3 November 1590.——William, his ſon dyed 15 March 1617.——Sir Francis, his ſon, was created a Baronet 1 June 1627, and dyed 20 November 1634. His ſucceſſors were—— Sir Francis, who conveyed this eſtate to his youngeſt ſon——Thomas Mannock Eſq; of Great Bromley-hall. He dying without iſſue, his eſtates deſcended to his nephew——Sir Francis Mannock, of Giffords-hall, Bart. and after his deceaſe 27 Auguſt 1758, to his eldeſt ſon—— Sir William Mannock, of Great Bromley, Bart. He departed this life in March 1764, leaving an only child. —— Sir William Mannock, Bart. a minor.

For a further account of this Family, ſee the Baronettage, Vol. II. p. 57. and the other Volume, p. 456.

The quit-rents of this maner are 2l. 11s. 8d.

BADLEY, or Bedley-hall, is called another Maner in this pariſh.

The houſe ſtands about a mile out of the road from Colcheſter to Maningtree.

The account we find of it is this. William Gilberd of Colcheſter Eſq; who dyed 10 December 1603, held the maner of Badley-hall, with appertenances, in Ardley, and Badley meadow; and a meſſuage and lands called Croſſes. His heir was,——William Harris alias Wolfe, jun. ſon of Margaret, only ſiſter of the whole blood to the ſaid William Gilberd (c).

It belonged ſome time ago to Capt. Philips, of Harwich; and now to Mr. Edward Lugar.

Edward Waldegrave Eſq; who dyed 13 Auguſt 1584, held, in this pariſh, of the maner of Martins-hall, lands and tenements called Babbis; and of the maner of Shawes, Newbolls-land; parcel of Bradleys; Paines lands, parcel of the ſame, of the maner of Picotts-hall; and other lands called Bradleys and Babbis (d).

In the reign of K. Henry III. Baldwin Filioll held, in Ardeleye, land worth 40s. by the ſerjeancy of keeping one Miſe (e).——Richard Filioll, who dyed in 1259 or 1260, held this land, called the maner of Arle, of Robert Fitz-Walter.——John was his ſon and heir (f).

Abells and Knatchbulls, a parcel of about 40 acres in this pariſh, near the Ipſwich road, were conveyed by John Potter to Edmund Styles, 6 November 1601.

Ardley-wic, about a mile and a half weſt from the Church, belongs to Mr. Robert Baines of Dedham.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle: the Chancel is of one pace, rebuilt with brick ſome years ago, and leſs than it was before. The ſouth aiſle is leaded, the reſt tiled. In a ſtone Tower embattled are 6 Bells. The ſouth Porch is large, and handſomly built with a mixture of free ſtone and flints [W].

This Church was given, in the reign of K. Stephen, by Robert ſon of Roger de Ramis to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, in free and perpetual alms (g). In 1237, the Abbot and Convent gave the Advowſon to the Church of St. Paul, and to the Biſhop of London and his ſucceſſors, reſerving to the Abbey, and to the Vicar of this place 13 marks yearly. Soon after, the Advowſon of the Vicarage being reſerved to the Abbot and convent, and their ſucceſſors, with an endowment of ten marks yearly to the Vicar, and a penſion of 3 marks to the Abbey; the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to the Archdeacon of Colcheſter; and ſo continue, being his corps. As for the Advowſon of the Vicarage it fell, at the Reformation, to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1282l. 3s. 6d.

2. LAWFORD lies eaſt north-eaſt of Ardley, bounded on the north by the river Stour.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Lagford, Lalleford, Halleford, and Halford.

K. Harold had the chief part of this pariſh before the Conqueſt: Upon his being then defeated and ſlain, it fell to William the Conqueror. Another part belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Aluric, a freeman; Euſtace, Earl of Bologne, held it, and Adelolf, under him, at the time of the Survey.

The Maner of LAWFORD.

Lawford-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands pleaſantly, a little way from the Church, and hath a fine proſpect on the north. The old part was built by Edward Waldegrave Eſq; in 1583, as appeared by a date, but is now taken down; and the new was rebuilt by Edward Green Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor.

This is the chief part, that belonged to Earl Harold, and K. William [X].

In 1269 Peter de Leyham held one fee and a half in Lalleford (h). This is the firſt time we find it in private hands.

Benedict de Cokefeild, who dyed in 1341, held the maner of Halleford, with the advowſon of the Church, of Gilbert de Lay, as of his caſtle of Frome, by homage, and ſervice of 9 marks a year. And 1 toft, 40 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 30 of paſture, and 40 of marſh, of Robert de Burchier by knight's ſervice. —— Edmund was his ſon (i). From this Benedict it was afterwards called Benett-hall, and the maner of Cokefeilds.

Sir Hugh Stafford, at the time of his deceaſe in 1421, held, in right of Elizabeth his wife daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, one fee in Lalleford called Benethall (k).

From Anne, daughter of John, ſon of Benedict de Cokefeild, it deſcended to the Doreward family. For, in 1424, upon the death of Thomas Martell, ſufficiently mentioned under the foregoing pariſh of Ardley, who held this maner of Halleford called Cokefeild of the Lord de Bourchier; Elias Doreward, ſon of Walter, and grandſon of Elias huſband of Anne daughter of Benedict de Cokefeild, was found to be his next heir (l).

This eſtate was next in the Say family, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 593, and from them took the name of Lawford-Says. Sir John Say, who dyed in 1478, held the maner of Halleford, with the advowſon of the Church, of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of her caſtle of Frome: and the other lands, as above ſet down, of Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex. William Say was his eldeſt ſon and heir 24 years old (*).—— Thomas, the ſecond ſon had ſome eſtates in Eſſex. [See in the other Volume, p. 321. 592.]. The Maner of DALE-HALL.

The manſion houſe is about half a mile eaſt from the Church.

This is what belonged to Aluric before the Conqueſt, and to Euſtace Earl of Bologne at the time of the Survey [Z].

It was afterwards in a family ſurnamed Dale, from which came the preſent name.

Sibilla, wife of Sir Thomas Dale, held, at the time of her deceaſe in 1416, the maner of Dale in the vill of Lalleford, of the King, in ca. as of his Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Thomas de Dale, her grandſon, aged 6 years, was her heir (r).——John Dale, who dyed in 1479, held this maner of Halford; and left his ſon——William, 8 years old (s). In 1590, Qu. Elizabeth granted this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, to Peter Wilcox, and William Wynn (w).

But it came ſoon after in the Waldegrave family. For Edward Waldegrave Eſq; who dyed 12 February 1621, held the maner of Dale-hall, with appertenances, and 200 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, wood, and marſh in Lawford, in the tenure of Richard Sheldrake, William Lynne, &c (x). It belongs now to Mrs. Burton of Maningtree.

ABBOTS, anciently ſtyled a Maner, was ſo named becauſe it belonged to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter. It is otherwiſe called Abbots Lawford.

The manſion houſe lyes on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

After the diſſolution of Abbeys K. Henry VIII, 9 April 1545, granted the meſſuage called Abbots in Lawford, belonging lately to St. John's Abbey, to John de Vere, the 16th Earl of Oxford, and the Lady Dorothy his wife, and his heirs. He had licenſe 3 May following, to convey it to John Rither, John Chriſtmas, and John Seaman (y). The 12th of July next enſuing J. Rither had licenſe to alienate it to John Clarke: And he had licenſe, 20 October 1557, to alienate the ſame to——Richard Clarke (z). He dyed 10 March 1595, leaving——John his ſon and heir. Fifty acres then part of this eſtate, he had purchaſed of Edward Waldegrave (a). And ſome part of it was called Stewards hope.

Henry Keeler, at the time of his deceaſe, 12 April 1610, held this meſſuage of Abbots, with appertenances, of the King in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee.——Francis his ſon and heir was 9 years old (b).

This is now but an inconſiderable eſtate; and not acknowledged as a Maner. It belonged lately to —— Thomas Archer, and purchaſed of him by

Edward Green Eſq;

FEYTES, alias Shawes, is another ſmall thing, partly in this pariſh, and partly in Dedham and Ardley, that hath born the name of a Maner. It pays 10 s. a year to Lawford-hall; and yet receives quit-rents to the amount of 35 s. a year.

Sir John Raynesforth, who dyed 15 September 1559, held the maner of Feytes, with appertenances, of the Queen, as of the maner of Parkehall, by fealty, and rent of 13 s. 9d. in lieu of all ſervices (c).

It belonged lately to Thomas Lufkin; and afterwards to Mrs. Lufkin of Dedham: now to Mr. John Richardſon of Colcheſter.

Beſides the eſtates above-mentioned, ... Pariſh, of Ipſwich, Eſq; hath two farms; and the widow of Mr. Turner a conſiderable one in this pariſh.

Mr. Peckſale gave a houſe, at the Church-gate, to the Sextan for the time being for ever; provided he keeps it in repair, and pays 8 s. yearly rent to Lawford-hall.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, ſtands high, with an extenſive and pleaſant proſpect, eſpecially on the north.

Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, and tiled. In a ſtone Tower are 3 Bells. The Chancel is a fair and ſpacious fabrick, and the ſtone-work on the inſide moſt curiouſly wrought.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner.

Some years ago it was purchaſed by St. John's College in Cambridge, of Dr. Dent.

The Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 896l. 2 s. 0d.

Here are two contiguous Pariſhes ſo called; the name being derived from the two Saxon words, Bꝛom, broom, and leý, paſture ground. In records the name is written Brumleia, and Brumbeleia.

3. LITTLE BROMLEY

adjoins ſouth to Lawford.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign it belonged to Queen Edeva: At the time of the Survey, it was holden by Wálter the Deacon, and Richard Fitz-Giſlebert.

Hence it came to be divided into two Maners: namely, 1. The maner of Little Bromley-hall. 2. . . . that of Braham-hall.

The Maner of LITTLE BROMLEY.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the Church; and is upon that account ſtyled Church-hall.

This maner is what belonged to Walter the Deacon [B]. Walter had two ſons, Walter Maſcherel, and Alexander; and one daughter Henry II. and Little Eaſton, was the head of that Barony in this County; which by the marriage of the heireſs of Robert de Haſtings came to the Loveins. One knight's fee was in Bromley, Eaſton, and Godmanſton in the County of Dorſet: Wikes in this neighbourhood was another of their knights fees. Little Bromley continued many years in this family of Haſtings, which took the ſurname of Godmanſton from their lordſhip near the town of Dorcheſter.

Under Matthew de Loveyn, who dyed in 1302, Robert de Godmanſton held 4 knights fees in Bromlegh, and in Godemanſton (d).—John, his ſon and heir, held under John de Lovayne, in 1347, four knights fees in Brumle and Godmanſton, and paid to the maner of Eaſton 4 l. (e) —— Walter de Godmanſton, moſt probably his ſon, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1381, and preſented to this living in 1364, as did his ſon —William from 1395 to 1408.——John Godmanſton, his ſon and heir, preſented to the living from 1432 to 1446. He was returned as one of the Gentry of Eſſex in 1433, and was Sheriff of Eſſex &c. in 1452. —— William, his ſon and ſucceſſor, preſented to the Rectory in 1464 and 1467 (f). He loſt his life at Barnet feild, 14 April 1471, fighting for K. Henry VI. being a retainer to John de Vere the 13th Earl of Oxford. And with that noble Earl, and Sir George and Sir Thomas de Vere of Wivenhou, attainted of treaſon by act of Parliament, in 1472. He held this maner of Little Bromley of Henry Earl of Eſſex; and the maner of Frempton, and advowſon of both Churches; and one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, 6 of wood, 20 of paſture, in Bromley, Frempton, Miſteley, and Ardeley (g). But the noble family of de Vere, and He by the name of William Godmanſton of Bremle, Squier, were reſtored to their honors and eſtates, in the Parliament that met 27 November 1485 (h) [C].

Joane his widow, having this eſtate in dower, was remarried to Gilbert Huſſy. They preſented jointly to this Church in 1491, and ſhe alone in 1495 and 1498. After her deceaſe, Philippa, ſiſter of William Godmanſton inherited this eſtate. By her huſband Henry Warner, Gent. ſhe had——Chriſtiana, married, firſt, to William Brown Eſq; who preſented alone to the living in 1503, and they two jointly in 1524. Her ſecond huſband Humfrey Dymock preſented in 1536, in her right.

Sir Ralph Chamberlain had next this eſtate. His heir was married to

. . . Gray; whoſe daughter and heir

Mary was wife of Henry Cockain, and preſented to this living in 1579. Their daughter and heir

Dorothy was married to William Pirton, of Little Bentley Eſq; They ſold this eſtate, in 1593, to

Paul Bayning, Alderman of London, it then conſiſting of 200 acres of arable, 12 of wood, and 8 of meadow; and he paid his ingreſs fine to the Honor of Clare. He conveyed it again to them in 1598, and they ſold it to

Sir Francis de Vere, that brave General, who ſo diſtinguiſhed himſelf during the wars in the Low Countries. He dying 28 Auguſt 1608, without iſſue ſurviving, was ſucceeded by his next brother——John de Vere, of Kirby-hall in Hedingham-Caſtle Eſq; who, at the time of his deceaſe 10 March 1624, held this maner of Little Bromley-hall, alias Church-hall: and ſo did his next brother and ſucceſſor——Horace Lord Vere, Baron of Tilbury. He departed this life 2 May 1635, leaving five daughters coheirs. Elizabeth, married to John Lord Haughton; Mary, married firſt to Sir Roger Townſhend, afterwards to Mildmay Fane, Earl of Weſtmoreland; Catharine, firſt to Oliver St. John, and next to John Lord Paulet; Anne, to Thomas Lord Fairfax; and Dorothy, to John Woſtenholm Eſq; The Lord Vere's widow ſurvived him till 25 December 1671, and preſented to this living in 1663, 1664, and 1671. [For a more particular account of this family, ſee the other Volume, p. 335. 336.]

Catharine, the third daughter, married firſt to Oliver St. John, Eſq; afterwards to John Lord Paulet; had this for her purparty. The latter ſold this eſtate, 25 November 1675, to

Mr. John Warner, of Sudbury, clothier, who by will, 1 June 1676, bequeathed it to his daughter

Elianor. She brought it in marriage to her huſband the Rev. Richard-Allington Harriſon, Rector of Weſt-Wickham in Cambridgeſhire. They had an only daughter Mary, married to Mr. Thomas Newman, who was Mayor of Sudbury, more than once; being his third wife. He bought this eſtate of his father-in-law Mr. Harriſon 24 March 1714, and left by this wife an only ſon—The Rev. John Newman.

This eſtate was formerly very conſiderable, containing about 300 acres of demeſne land, and 600 acres holden by copy of court-roll.

The Maner of BRAHAM-HALL, vulgarly Breame-hall, otherwiſe called Nether-hall to diſtinguiſh it from Church-hall.

This maner and eſtate paid a ſparrow-hawk, or 6s. 8d. a year, to the maner of Little Eaſton.

This is what belonged to Richard ſon of Earl Giſlebert in this pariſh [D]. His ſucceſſors took the ſurname of Montfichet.

Aveline, one of the ſiſters and coheirs of Richard de Montfichet, brought this eſtate to her huſband William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle, about the year 1258. Their only ſurviving child——Aveline was the firſt wife of Edmund ſecond ſon of K. Henry III. and in her right he enjoyed 14 knights fees, as of the inheritance of Richard de Montfichet: and Richard de Pavelin held 4 of them under him, ſome of which lay in Braham and Ardelegh. [See above, p.]

It was ſoon after in a family ſurnamed de Brumle, or Bromley. In 1347, John de Brumle held the ſixth part of a knight's fee in Little Brumle under John de Lovayne, for which he paid a ſparrow-hawk on 15 Auguſt yearly (i).

Sir John de Braham, who from hence took his ſurname, held lands and tenements in Great and Little Bromleye, Benteley, Miſteley, and Lalleford, in 1357. His heirs held 1 fee in Little Bromle under Albrey de Vere, the 10th Earl of Oxford, in 1400 (k).

There went with this maner lands and tenements called Braham hall, Marſhall, Boltons, Stacyes, and Alphrithes, which were holden of the Honor of Clare, and afterwards of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; and paid a relief.

In 1430, John Godmanſton paid 27 l. to the feodary of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, for the maner of Little Bromley called Marſhalls and Boltons, purchaſed of John Cornwallys.

And in 1507 William Brown Eſq; made a payment for the maner of Marſhalls and Boltons, formerly John Braham's and afterwards John Godmerſton's in this pariſh.

So that this maner paſſed, as the other maner, from Godmanſton to Brown: and then to Gray, and Cockain; whoſe daughter and heir brought it to her huſband

William Pirton, Eſq; He and his wife ſold this eſtate in parcels; namely

Braham-Hall, with 78 acres of arable, 8 of meadow, and 8 of wood, holden of the Honor of Clare, to Charles Cardinal, attorney at law, who paid 54 s. for ingreſs fine, in 1592. He had it in 1626. His ſon——Robert Cardina ſold it in 1640, to

Richard Marlow, of Eaſt Bergholt. His ſon ——and then his grandſon——John Marlow, of Ipſwich, grocer, inherited it after him. It belongs now to the daughter of John Marlow [E], widow of Mr. Sparrow, of Ipſwich.

Stacyes and Alphrithes were ſold to Paul Bayning Eſq; for which he paid an alienation fine of 6 l. in 1615.

Theſe belong now to Richard Rigby, of Miſtley-hall, Eſq;

4. GREAT BROMLEY

is the largeſt of the two Bromleys, and ſtands more ſoutherly than the laſt.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Brictmar enjoyed this lordſhip: At the time of the Survey, Ralph Linel held it, and Weſt Manetun [F]. Geffrey de Magnaville had the ſervice of this land.

It was divided afterwards into theſe two Maners. 1. The maner of Great Bromley. 2. . . . that of Cold-hall.

The maner of Great-Bromley.

The Hall, which is the maner houſe, ſtands near the north-weſt corner of the Church-yard.

The noble family of De Vere Earls of Oxford were lords paramount of this place: and William de Langvalei held it under them, in K. Henry the ſecond's reign, as part of the Honor or Barony, of Lanvalei, by the ſervice of a knight (l).——William, his ſon, was father of another ——William, who dying in 1217, left by . . .

Hawiſe, who being put under the wardſhip of Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, and Chief Juſtice of England, he diſpoſed of her in marriage to his ſon——John de Burgh: ſhe departed this life in 1249.——John, their only ſon and heir, had livery of his mother's lands in 1274; and, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1280, left three daughters; Devorguill, ſecond wife of Robert Fitz-Walter; Hawiſe, wife of Robert Greſley; and Chriſtian, a nun at Chickſand. [See in the other Volume, p. 190. 511.]

Robert Fitz-Walter enjoyed a moiety of this eſtate in right of his wife, by the courteſy of England, till his deceaſe in 1325 (m).

Robert Greſley dyed in 1284, and Hawiſe his wife in 1299. She held a moiety of the maner of Brumleigh of the Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Thomas was their ſon and heir, who departing this life without iſſue, was ſucceeded by his ſiſter Joane de Greſley. She was married to John ſon of Roger De la Ware, and brought a fine eſtate into that family (n).

One of Robert and Devorguill Fitz-Walter's daughters being married to John le Mareſhall, brought him part of this eſtate.—— Sir William le Mareſhall was father of —— John, who dyed without iſſue, in 1316; and of a daughter named

Hawiſe, married to Robert de Morle, that held this eſtate by the courteſey of England; and dyed in 1360. Their ſon and heir——Sir William de Morle held a moiety of this maner of Great Bromle, and of the Advowſon of the Church, of the Earl of Oxford, by knight's ſervice: As did ——Sir Thomas, his ſon (o). From this family it was denominated Bromley-Morley; But we do not find that it continued any longer in their heirs. [For a more particular account of the Morley family, ſee the other Volume, p. 511. &c.]

The other moiety of this maner which was in Greſley, came into the Doreward family; but whether by marriage or purchaſe doth not appear. Thomas Doreward, of Stiſted and Terling, had two ſons, Martin and Elias. Amicia, or Alice, his wife ſurvived him, and preſented to this Living in 1336 (p).——Elias, the younger ſon, married Anne, daughter of John, ſiſter of William, and of Thomas, Martell, of Martells-hall in Ardley, and had by her——Walter, who preſented to this Church in 1380. He made his will 23 Auguſt 1423, and left a ſon; and one daughter, Anne, married to . . . Mulſho. —— Elias Doreward Eſq; the ſon and heir, inherited Martell's Eſtates in right of his grandmother Anne above-mentioned [G]. He dyed in 1426. By Joanna his wife [remarried to Nicolas Mortimer] he left three children, William, Elizabeth, and Margaret.——William, who was only two years old at the time of his father's deceaſe, departed this life in 1438, under age, and without iſſue; as did the two younger ſiſters.

Elizabeth, the eldeſt daughter, was married to David Mortimer Eſq; (q) who preſented to this living in 1441. They had two ſons, Robert, and David.——Robert Mortimer, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, held a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley, with appertenances, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Caſtle of Hedingham, by fealty and ſuit of court, worth 20 l. alſo the maner of Martell-hall in Ardley, and large eſtates in Dovercourt, Tendring, and Thorp [H] —— David, the younger brother, held a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley called Morleis, of the Earl of Oxford, worth 20 marks.——Robert, the elder brother, dyed 22 Auguſt 1485, leaving an only daughter, Elizabeth, ten years old (r). David, whether as guardian to his niece, or that ſome eſtates fell to him upon his brother's dying without iſſue male, held at the time of his deceaſe the maner of Bromley, with the Advowſon of the Church; and a moiety of the maner of Great Bromley called Morleis, of the Earl of Oxford; and Martells-hall. He left no iſſue; for his niece

Elizabeth was his heir. She was then 18 years old, and the wife of George Gilford (s); ſecond ſon of Sir Richard Guilford, Controller of the Houſhold to K. Henry VII. They levied a fine of this maner, and advowſon of the Church, in 1525 (t): and had one ſon named John; and two daughters, Mary, wife of Owen Weſt, ſecond ſon of Thomas Weſt, Lord De la Ware; and Anne, married, firſt, to Walter Wodland, and afterwards to Richard Lynne.——Sir John Guilford, the ſon and heir, married, firſt, ... daughter of . . . Fitz-William, by whom he had a ſon named Richard. By his ſecond wife, Barbara, daughter of Thomas Weſt, Lord De la Ware, he had ſeveral ſons and daughters. In 1537, a fine paſſed between

William Cardinal Gent. plaintiff, and Sir John Guilford and Barbara his wife deforc.' of the maner of Great Bromley, 4 meſſuages, 1 dovehouſe, 4 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 500 of furze and heath, and 20 l. rent in Great and Little Bromley (u). And 13 November 1542, this maner, and the Advowſon of the Church, were conveyed by them to the ſaid William Cardinal; who preſented to the Living in 1554; and twice afterwards (w). He was an active Juſtice of the Peace for this County (x). By his firſt wife, Joane, daughter of . . . Gurdon, of Aſſington, Eſq; he had William: and 3 daughters; Fides, married to Henry Appleton; Roſe, to George Sayer; and Joane, to Robert Veyſey, Eſquires. By his ſecond wife, Lætitia, daughter and coheir of William Knightly, widow of John Clipſby, he had Charles, Edward, Stephen, John, Robert; and Julian, married to Robert Derehaugh. He dyed 8 Auguſt 1568, holding this maner of Great Bromley, and the

He had alſo the maners of Cold-hall in this pariſh; Piggots in Ardley; Moverons in Elmſted: and eſtates in Bradfeild.——William Cardinal Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, born in 1535 (y), married Mary, daughter of Henry Wentworth of Le Mount Eſq; and had by her

Anne his only daughter and heir, married to Sir Clement Higham, of Barrow-hall in Suffolk, who preſented to the living in 1600.

But ſtill the Maner doth not ſeem to have gone out of the Cardinal-family. For, 5 June 1607,

William Cardinal, and Edward his brother, did by indenture convey the maner of Great Bromley, and Advowſon of the Church, to Nicolas Timperley, and Edward Newport Eſq; and the heirs of the latter. Theſe two conveyed the premiſſes, by indenture dated 4 November 1618, to

Thomas Bowes Eſq; This family came originally from York. Thomas Bowes was father of Sir Martin Bowes, Lord Mayor of London in 1545, who had Martin Bowes of Jenkins in Berking Eſq;

Thomas Bowes Eſq; the purchaſer of this eſtate, afterwards knighted, was a Juſtice of Peace for this County 50 years; and cruelly buſy in the proſecution and execution of ſome poor ſilly perſons, called Witches [I]. He dyed 3 October 1676, and was buried in the Patron's Chapel in this Church. By . . . his wife, daughter of . . . D'Ewes, he had, Thomas; William, Rector of Tendring, buried here 19 April 1670: and ſome daughters: Cecily, the eldeſt, was buried 21 April 1674.——Thomas Bowes, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Elizabeth daughter of Richard Harlakenden, of Earl's-Colne Eſq; and, had by her, Thomas Harlakenden; and Mary, wife of John Haynes, of Copford-hall, Eſq; He was buried in the Chapel here 28 December 1680.—Thomas-Harlakenden Bowes Eſq; the ſon, married Elizabeth, only daughter of Sir Thomas Smith, of Stutton in Suffolk, Kt. and had Thomas baptized 7 October 1686, Elizabeth, baptized 5 January 1687, married to Thomas Maſon of Maningtree Eſq; and Bridget now the widow of Read Grimſton, of Chapel, Gent. Theſe two daughters had no iſſue. I do not find when he dyed [K]. But, about the beginning of this century, this eſtate was purchaſed by Thomas Mannock Eſq; youngeſt ſon of Sir Francis Mannock, of Giffords-hall in Stoke, Bart. He had three wives, The firſt was Mary, daughter of Thomas Varvell of London Eſq; barber to K. Charles II. and the third, Mary, daughter of Galloway, Gent. but he had no iſſue by any of them. Charles Beard, and Charles Smith, truſtees for Thomas Bowes Eſq; conveyed this maner with appertenances by indenture, 3 June 1704, to Sir Cecil Biſhop, Bart. and Richard Snow, in truſt for Mary, the wife of Thomas Mannock Eſq; and her heirs; by way of jointure, moſt probably. She dyed 15 September 1720, and her huſband leaving no iſſue, Bromley-hall, and Martells hall, fell to the heir at law,——Sir Francis Mannock of Giffords-hall, Bart. and, after his deceaſe, 27 Auguſt 1758, to his eldeſt ſon——Sir William Mannock, Bart.

(y) Inquiſ. 10 Eliz. June 27.

[I] An account of it was publiſhed at the time, under this title, " A true and exact Relation of the ſeveral Informations, Examinations, and Confeſſions of the late Witches, arraigned and executed in the County of Eſſex. Who were arraigned and condemned at the late Seſſions, holden at Chelmesford before the Right Honorable Robert, Earl of Warwicke, and ſeverall of his Majeſties Juſtices of Peace, the 29 of July 1645. Wherein the ſeverall murthers, and deviliſh Witchcrafts, committed on the bodies of men, women, and children, and divers cattell, are fully diſcovered. Publiſhed by Authoritie. Lond. 1645. 4°." The Examinations were taken before Sir Harbottell Grimſton, Kt. and Bart. and Sir Thomas Bowes, Kt. in March and April 1645. By the Account it appears, That the following perſons were executed, on the imputation and accuſation of Witchcraft.—At Chelmsford, Elizabeth Clarke alias Bedingfeild; Elizabeth Gooding, of Maningtree; Anne Leech, of Miſtley; Elizabeth Harvie, of Ramſey; Joyce Bones; Suſan Cock; Margaret Landiſhe; Sarah Hating; Rebecca Jones, of St. Oſith; Anne Cate, alias Maidenhead, of Great Holland.—At Maningtree, Hellen Clark; Anne Weſt; Anne Cooper; Marian Hocket.—Margaret Moone dyed by the way to execution; and Roſe Hallybread in gaole. . . . I am ſorry to ſee among the reſt of the informers and evidence, John Edes, Clark; and Joſeph Long, Miniſter of Clacton.

For a ſpecimen of the extraordinary Proceedings againſt thoſe unhappy perſons; who, if they ſaid or confeſſed all that is imputed to them, were fitter for a mad houſe than the gallows; we ſhall ſet down the laſt article in that very ſcarce Book.

" The teſtimony of Sir Thomas Bowes, Knight, which he ſpake upon the Bench, concerning the aforeſaid Anne Weſt, ſhee being then at the Barre upon her tryall. . . . That a very honeſt man of Mannintree [one Goff, a glover,] whom he knew would not ſpeake an untruth, affirmed unto him, that very early one morning as he paſſed by the ſaid Anne Weſt's dore, about foure a clock, it being a moon-light night, and perceiving her dore to be open ſo early in the morning, looked into the houſe, and preſently there came three or foure little things in the ſhape of black rabbits, leaping and ſkipping about him, who having a good ſtick in his hand, ſtruck at them, thinking to kill them, but could not, but at laſt caught one of them in his hand, and holding it by the body of it, he beat the head of it againſt his ſtick, intending to beat out the brains of it; but when he could not kill it that way, he took the body of it in one hand, and the head of it in another, and indeavoured to wring off the head; and as he wrung and ſtretched the neck of it, it came out between his hands like a lock of wooll; yet he would not give his intended purpoſe, but knowing of a Spring not farre off, he went to drowne it; but ſtill as he went he fell downe, and could not goe but downe he fell againe, ſo that he at laſt crept upon his hands and knees till he came at the water, and holding it faſt in his hands, he put his hand downe into the water up to his elbow, and held it under water a good ſpace, till he conceived it was drowned, and then letting goe his hand, it ſprung out of the water up into the aire, and ſo vaniſhed away: and then coming backe to the ſaid Anne Weſts dore, he ſaw her there ſtanding in her ſmock, and aſked her why ſhee did ſet her impes to moleſt and trouble him? to whom ſhee made anſwer, that they were not ſent him to trouble him, but were ſent as ſcouts upon another deſigne."

Every Reader muſt think it quite extraordinary, that Sir Thomas, who ſat upon the Bench, ſhould turn evidence, and be judge and jury too. And, as to Goff's declaration, who doth not ſee, that he took the locks of wool, which the poor induſtrious old woman was ſpinning ſo early, and the wind happened to blow about; for rabbits leaping and ſkipping? The man fell down, becauſe he was unqueſtionably drunk.

[K] Thomas Bowes Eſq; his ſon, lived at Upton in Weſt-Ham. He married, 22 June 1722, Adriana, daughter of . . . Vernatti and Petronilla his wife, with whom he had a fortune of 5000 l. in conſideration of which he ſettled on her a jointure of 400 l. a year, and 80 l. a year during coverture. He dyed 12 March 1747-8, without iſſue, poſſeſſed of an eſtate of 1500 l. a year, part of which was the General Poſt-Office in London lett at 326 l. per ann. and ten other meſſuages adjoyning.

He dyed in March 1764, leaving an only ſon ——Sir William Mannock, Bart. a minor.

The quit-rents of this Maner are 14l. 0s. 8d. and the Reve's rent 1l. 13s. 4d.

The Maner of COLD-HALL.

The manſion houſe is about three quarters of a mile ſouth from the Church.

There is very little account of this Maner. It went moſtly along with the other.

John Seyntcler, who dyed 26 Auguſt 1493, held this maner of Coldhall in Great Bromley, of David Mortimer, as of his maner of Great Bromley, worth 5 marks. —— John, his ſon, then 14 years of age, and afterwards knighted, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 25 November 1546; alſo the maners of Mevaromes in this pariſh and Fratyng; of Nevaromes in Brykelſey; St. Clere's, and Frodewyke in St. Oſith, &c. ——John, his ſon and heir, was then 23 years old (z). He paſſed by fine, in 1549, the maners of Cold-hall, and Moveronnes, with ſix meſſuages and lands in Bromley, Frating, Elmſted, Alleſford, and Great-Bentley, to William Cardinall, Gent. (a).

It belonged lately to Mr. Samuel Salmon; now to his Children.

Mr. John Jacobs; Mr. Mays; John, and Henry, Gardiner; and William Smith, have alſo ſome eſtates, and lands here.

Belchers wood in this pariſh belongs to Cay's-College.

In 1574, William Lyttylbury held a meſſuage, and 60 acres of land in Great Bromley, called Morrants (b).

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. George, is an elegant ſtructure, conſiſting of a body and two aiſles. The Chancel hath a ſouth Chapel called the Patrons Chapel. The roof of the Church is lofty, and of curious workmanſhip: and there was abundance of painted glaſs in the windows, of the Apoſtles and Saints. In the Tower, which is high and handſom, are 5 Bells.

This valuable Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner of Bromley-hall, till Thomas Bowes Eſq; ſold the perpetual Advowſon to John Freman of Colcheſter Gent. who ſold it again to John Morley of Halſted Eſq; by whom it was conveyed to Samuel Fiſke of the ſame Town, apothecary. In his family it continued till lately, when it was alienated.

5. ELMSTED

lyes weſt of Great Bromley; and the ſouthern part extends as far as the river Colne. The two Saxon words Elm, and ꞅꞇeꝺ, ſignify Elm place: it abounding undoubtedly with Elms when it received that name. It is otherwiſe written in records Almeſteda, and Enmeſted.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Robert ſon of Wimarce was poſſeſſed of this pariſh: Suene, and his under-tenant Sincus, held it at the time of the Survey [L].

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Elmſted. 2. . . . that of Motts, and Bannings marſh.

The Maner of ELMSTED.

Elmſted-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands pleaſantly on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

In the reigns of K. Henry II. K. Richard I. and K. John, this lordſhip, with the maners of Stapleford-Tany and Great Stanbridge, were in a Family ſurnamed Fitz-William. Richard Fitz-William held them (c); and was ſucceeded by —William Fitz-Richard, or ſon of Richard; who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1260, held 1 carucate of land in Enmeſted; 2 carucates in Stapleford; and 2 in Stanbridge, of the fee of Reyleigh; by the ſervice to the King of 8 knights fees.

Margery, his daughter and heir, brought them in marriage to her huſband Sir Richard de Tany (d). He obtained a licence, in 1253, to keep a Market, and a Fair, at his town of Elmeſted (e): from which I ſuppoſe a village in this pariſh, about a mile ſouth from the Church, is called Elmſted-Market to this day. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1271, he held this maner of Elmeſted, with the Advowſon of the Church, of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reley. He held alſo the maners of Stapleford Tany, Great Stanbridge, Chigenhall St. James, and Latton. —— Richard, his ſon and heir, held the maners of Elmeſted, Stapleford, and Eſtwyck, in 1296: and yet it is recorded the ſame year that John de Taney held the maner of Elmeſted jointly with his wife Julian, and that of Stapleford. —— Roger, or Robert, his ſon, held the maners of Elmeſted and Stapleford, at the time of his death in 1301 (f).——Laurence de Tany, his ſon and heir, held the maner of Elmeſted of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Reyley, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and yearly rent of 8 s. to the ward of Colcheſter-caſtle; and to the King's Bayliffs of Tendring at the view of frank-pledge at Elmeſted 2 s. on St. Thomas's day; and to the ſame Bayliffs 41 d. a year to the Sheriff's aid; and ſuit at the Hundred of Tendring from three weeks to three weeks: He had alſo Stapleford-Tany. Departing this life in 1317, without iſſue, his ſiſter Margaret inherited his eſtates. Margaret his widow had this maner in dower, and was re-married to Sir Thomas de Weſton; who enjoyed this eſtate during his life [M] (g). Margaret de Tany, ſiſter and heir of Laurence, became wife of John de Drokenesford. He dyed in 1341, but was not poſſeſſed of this eſtate, which his father-in-law Thomas de Weſton held till his death in 1354 (h). —— Thomas de Drokenesford, or Trekenesford, ſon of John, held this maner of Elmeſtede at the time of his deceaſe in 1361 [N], and left Anne, his only daughter and heir, 4 years old (i). She was married to Thomas Mandeville, Eſq; afterwards knighted, ſon of Walter Mandeville, of Black-Notley. Their ſon and heir, —— Sir Thomas Mandeville, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Wauton Kt. had, Thomas, Joane, and Alice. —— Thomas dyed in Auguſt 1499, poſſeſſed of the maners of Elmeſted, Stapleford Tany, Black Notele, Bromfield, and Chatham-hall in Great Waltham. Having no iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his two ſiſters,

Joane, wife of John Barry Eſq; and Alice, wife of Helmingius Legate, or Leget (k). Joane had this for her purparty; and, after her huſband Barry's deceaſe, took to her ſecond huſband

William Pirton, of Ipſwich, Eſq; by which marriage this Eſtate came into the Pirton, or Pyrton, family; of this and the neighbouring pariſh of Little Bentley. —— John Pirton his ſon was father of —— Sir William Pirton, who held this maner of Elmeſted, with appertenances; and one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 70 of furze and heath, in Elmeſted market, of John Earl of Oxford. He departed this life 1 July 1490, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— William, then 30 years old (l). The time of his death is not mentioned. His ſon —— William Pirton Eſq; held this maner of the King as of the Honor of Rayleigh, by the ſervice of 1 knight's fee, and departed this life 24 June 1533, leaving —— Sir William Pirton, his ſon and heir, 40 years old (m); who held this maner, and 16 acres of wood called Mounpeleres wood, alias Market-wood, in this pariſh. He dyed 6 November 1551, and was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Edmund, then aged 21 years (n). At the time of his deceaſe, 20 October 1609, he held this maner, with divers other lands thereto belonging; of the Honor of Raleigh. His ſucceſſor was his couſin —— Edmund Pirton Eſq; (o). He dyed 9 October 1617, and his brother —— William, then 25 years old, was his next heir (p).

This eſtate belonged afterwards to Sir Harbottle Grimſton, Kt. and Bart.

And then to . . . Rich, of Kent. About the year 1692, Richard Rich ſold it to John Hurlock, Gent; who dyed 22 December 1710, He married Catharine, daughter of Mr. Hugh Till, of Shadwell, and had by her, John, James, Mark; Catharine, Anne, and Elizabeth. This Church was a Rectory, and preſented to by the owners of the Hall, till 20 March 1382, when Albrey de Vere the 10th Earl of Oxford, and Clement Spice, gave two acres of land, and the Advowſon of this Church to the Abbey of St. Oſith, to find a Canon of their Houſe, or a Secular Prieſt, to perform divine ſervice in the Church of that Abbey, every day for ever, for the ſouls of Robert de Naylinghurſt, and all the faithful departed this life. The great Tithes were appropriated to that Abbey, and a Vicarage ordained 14 December 1411, which continued in the Abbey's gift till its diſſolution; when both came to the Crown (r). The great Tithes belong now to Mr. John Simons. Thomas Sutton Eſq; having given 500 marks to Jeſus College in Cambridge, with that they purchaſed the Advowſon of the Vicarage. It was augmented with Qu. Anne's Bounty in 1720. BENTLEY.

Here are two pariſhes ſo named, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great, and Little.

The name is derived either from Bent, a ſort of graſs [O], or Bent a place where ruſhes grow; and ley, paſture, unploughed ground.

Beſides Bentley, or Bentleigh, it is otherwiſe written in records Bendtleia, Benecléia, Benedeia, Benetleia.

6. LITTLE BENTLEY

lieth northward of Great Bentley.

The lands here were holden, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, by two perſons called Eluuin, and Wiſgar; and, at the time of the general Survey, by Alan Earl of Bretagne, and Richard Fitz-Gilbert Lord of Clare, by the names of Benetleia, and Menetlea: their under tenents being Hervey de Spain, and one Roger [P].

Theſe two Lordſhips became afterwards united into one Maner; called of which the manſion houſe ſtands on the ſouth ſide of the Church.

Who were the firſt poſſeſſors of it after the ſaid two Earls, we have no account. But, in Edward the IId's reign, it was in a Family ſurnamed Le Gros, which had ſeveral eſtates in other parts of this County [Q]. Among which we find mention of William—Walter—and Hugh le Gros; within the compaſs of about ten years. In 1366, Aleſia, and her huſband Hugh de Groos, held this maner of the Biſhop of London, by homage, and the ſervice of 4s. a year to the ward of Stortford caſtle. She dying about that time (s), was ſucceeded by her ſon——William de Groos, who ſurviving her only two years, had for ſucceſſor his brother and heir——Thomas de Groos (t): and he likewiſe enjoyed it but a little while. For——Sir John Groos dyed about 1383, poſſeſſed of the ſame (u).

Sir Richard de Sutton, who dyed in 1395, held, of the Biſhop of London, this maner, and advowſon of the Church and of a Chantry here (w): He had alſo the maner of Wivenhou.——Thomas was his ſon and heir.

The next poſſeſſor was Sir Bartholomew Bourgchier; ſummoned to parliament from the firſt to the 10th of K. Henry IV. How he came by this eſtate I do not find; unleſs it was from his firſt wife Margaret widow of Sir John de Sutton. His ſecond wife was Idonea Lovee, widow of Edmund ſon of Sir John de Brookeſborne [R]. At his death, in 1409, he left the premiſſes to his wife Idonea, which ſurvived him about a year (x).——Elizabeth Bourgchier, their only daughter and heir, had two huſbands. The firſt was, Sir Hugh Stafford youngeſt ſon of Hugh Earl of Stafford, who in her right took the title of Lord Bourgchier; was ſummoned to parliament 12 Henry IV; and attended K. Henry V. in his wars in France; but dyed without iſſue in 1421 (y). Her ſecond huſband, was Sir Lewis Robeſſart, a native of Hainault, knight of the Garter, ſtandard-bearer of England, and ſummoned to parliament 3, 4, 5, and 7 Hen. Her next heir was her couſin,—— Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eu; ſon of Sir William Bourchier; grandſon of Sir William brother of John Lord Bourgchier her grandfather.

Soon after it came into the Pyrton-family, which had likewiſe Elmſted-maner, but made this place their chief reſidence: of which ancient family we find this account.

William Pyrton of Ipſwich Eſq; by Joan, widow of John Barry, ſiſter and coheir of Tho. Mandevill; [concerning which ſee under Elmſted, Black Notley, Stapleford-Tany, and Bromfield] had iſſue——John, father of——William, afterwards knighted; a brave warrior; captain of Guiſnes in Picardy, who dyed 1 July 1490, and lyes buried, in the Chancel of this Church, with Catharine his wife: She deceaſed 10 September, 1501. They had five ſons, and five daughters (a).——William, the eldeſt ſon, was Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1502; reſident at Digſwell in this laſt named County; and, by . . . daughter of . . . Langley, had Margaret wife of William Roberts of Little Brackſted Eſq; and William his ſon and heir; who held the maner of Little Bentley, and all lands and tenements thereto belonging, and parcels of land called Northlond, Moyſes, and Boylond, with the Advowſon of the Church; of the Biſhop of London, of his caſtle of Stortford, as his father had done before, by fealty and rent of 19s. 4d. (b). He married Agnes, daughter of John Tymperley; and dyed 24 June 1533 (c), leaving—Sir William Pyrton, his ſon, then aged 40; and two daughters, Catharine wife of Thomas Sherington, and Agnes of . . . Biſhop. Sir William married Margaret daughter and coheir of William Salford, and dyed 6 Nov. 1551.——Edmund his ſon and heir, had to wife Conſtance, daughter of Thomas Lord Darcy of Chiche, and was high-Sheriff of Eſſex in 1574. He dyed 20 Octob. 1609, and was ſucceeded by his couſin and next heir——Edmund Pyrton Eſq; who departed this life 9 Octob. 1617, leaving——William, his brother and heir. Their father was ſlain at the battle of Newport in Flanders, whoſe father had been 45 years a juſtice of peace for this County [S]. The laſt named Edmund, or William, ſold this eſtate to

Paul Bayning Eſq; This family was originally of Neyland in Suffolk.——Richard Bannyng, or Bayning, dwelt at Dedham, about the end of the fifteenth Century. His ſon——Richard, married Anne, daughter and coheir of Robert Raven of Creting St. Mary's in Suffolk [T], and had——Richard, of Dedham, who married Anne, daughter of John Barker of Ipſwich, by which he had——Paul, [and Andrew a very eminent merchant in Mincing lane, that dyed without iſſue, 21 Decemb. 1610, aged 67. See under Powers in Little Waltham.] Paul was a citizen and alderman of London, and one of the Sheriffs of that city in 1593 (d). He accumulated a very great fortune by merchandizing: ſo advantageous was Trade even in its infancy, which Sir Thomas Greſham, Sir Andrew Judde, Thomas Sutton, founder of the Charter-houſe, and our two brothers, Paul, and Andrew, raiſed immenſe and incredible Riches by. Theſe two have a monument erected to their memory in the Chancel of the Church of St. Olave Hart-ſtreet; by which it appears that Paul dyed 3 Septemb. 1616, aged 77 (e). He had two wives. The firſt was, ... daughter of . . . Mowſe of Needham or Creting in Suffolk, by whom no iſſue is recorded. His ſecond wife was Suſan, daughter and heir of Richard Norden, of Miſtley, (remarried after his deceaſe to Sir Francis Leigh Kt. and Bart.) [U] He dyed 1 Octob. 1616, and was buried in St. Olave's Church above-mentioned, leaving his only ſon and heir——Sir Paul Bayning Kt. then aged upwards of 30. He was created a Baronet 25 Novemb. 1612. conſtituted Sheriff of Eſſex in 1617, advanced to the title of Baron Bayning of Horkſley in Eſſex 27 Febr. 1627-8, and to the further dignity of Viſcount Sudbury in Suffolk the 8th of March following. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Henry Glemham Kt. by Anne Sackville, daughter of Thomas Earl of Dorſet, by which he had Paul his ſon and heir; and four daughters; Cecily, married to Henry Pierpont Viſcount Newark, eldeſt ſon of Robert Earl of Kingſton; Anne to Henry Murray Eſq; one of the grooms of the bed-chamber to K. Charles I; afterwards created, 17 March 1673, Viſcounteſs Banning of Foxley [W]; Mary, firſt to William Villiers Viſcount Grandiſon, afterwards to Chriſtopher Villiers Earl of Angleſea, thirdly, to Arthur Gorge Eſq; and Elizabeth to Francis Lord Dacre [X], created, 6 Sept. 1680, Counteſs

[W] They had three daughters,—Elizabeth, married, firſt, to Randolph Egerton, of Betley in Staffodſhire, Major-general of the horſe to K. Charles I. and Lieutenant Colonel of K. Charles the IId's own troop of guards, who dyed in 1681. of Shepey. He dyed at his houſe in Mark-lane, 29 July 1629, poſſeſſed of a very large real eſtate, as appears by the particulars below [Y], and of an immenſe perſonal eſtate, of a hundred and fifty three thouſand pounds fifteen ſhillings; viz. in debts, 136751 l. 15 s. 0 d. and in ready mony 17000 l. without the jewels, plate, and houſhold-ſtuff (f). His widow was remarried to Dudley Carleton Viſcount Dorcheſter.——Paul, Viſcount Bayning, his ſon and heir, born in 1616, paid the king 18000 l. for the fine of his wardſhip, and for charges about the ſame 185 l. He dyed at Bentley-hall 11 June 1638, and was buried in a vault in this Church. By his Lady Penelope, only daughter and heir of Sir Robert Naunton, Kt. Maſter of the Court of Wards and Liveries, and once Secretary of State, [remarried afterwards to Philip Earl of Pembroke] he had two daughters, Anne; and Penelope born in November after his deceaſe.

Anne, the eldeſt was married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and laſt Earl of Oxford, of that moſt noble and ancient family. Her large fortune was a ſeaſonable and neceſſary ſupply, and recruit to the Eſtate of that family, which had been greatly impaired, and almoſt ruined, by the paſſionate extravagance of his anceſtor, Edward Earl of Oxford, in Qu. Elizabeth's reign (g). But by this Lady, which dyed in Sept. 1659, he had no ſurviving iſſue [Z].——Penelope, the youngeſt daughter, was married to John Herbert, Eſq; youngeſt ſon of Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery; remarried to John Wentworth Eſq; She dyed in 1657, without iſſue.

This Eſtate becoming the purparty of the Earl of Oxford, and his Lady (h), they cauſed to be pulled down the ſtately and magnificent ſeat of Bentley-hall, which had been erected by Paul Bayning Eſq; in K. James the Iſt's reign, and ſold the materials, wherewith many houſes in Colcheſter and elſewhere are ſtill adorned.

About 1680, they ſold the reverſion of this, and other eſtates, to——Edward Peck, of Little Samford Eſq; Serjeant at law, Edward Rigby of Covent-Garden Eſq; Mrs. Pierpont &c. And after the Earl of Oxford's deceaſe in 1703, the ſurvivors of them, and the heirs of the reſt, joined in obtaining an act of Parliament, to ſettle the diviſion of the ſaid Eſtates (i). Whereupon this was allotted to

William Peck Eſq; the Serjeant's grandſon. [See under Little Samford.] His ſon—William Peck Eſq; ſucceeded him. But, about 1740, he alienated this maner and eſtate to

John Moore Eſq; of Southgate in Middleſex. Who again in 1761, ſold it to Sir Percy Brett Kt. Captain of a man of War, and Commodore; for the ſum of 8800 l.

The Peck-family had three other good Farms in this pariſh, which were purchaſed of the late William Peck Eſq; by Charles Reynolds Eſq; lord of the maner of Peldon. And, by his will, he has left them to his firſt couſin the Rev. William-Samuel Powell, D. D. who is the preſent poſſeſſor. [See above, p. 419.]

Mrs. Burton; Mr. Jacob Brown; Benjamin Carrington; Richard Smith; Stephen Lufkin; Joſeph Nun; John Root, &c. have alſo Eſtates in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body, and north aiſle, both leaded; as is alſo an adjoyning vault for the burial of the Bayning-family. The Chancel is of one pace, and tyled. At the weſt end, there is a Tower of ſtone, containing 5 Bells.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner, till about 1730, when it was conveyed by the late William Peck Eſq; to John Watſon Cl. in exchange for the Rectory of Little Samford. Mr. Watſon ſold it to Richard Bridgman, Cl. or Mr. Henry Harrington, of Long Melford.

Here was formerly a famous Chantry, of which we find the following Account.—Sir John Groos, brother and heir of William, ſon of Hugh Groos, who dyed 7 Ric. II. granted to Sir Richard le Sutton, and Sir John Cherteſeye and to Tho. Hinton, and Richard Heynes, all his Maners, lands, &c. with the advowſon of Little Bentley Church, and the reverſion of his rent of Lutherne in Eſſex, and a water-mill in Suffolk; upon condition, that if the ſaid Sir John Groos dyed without heir of his own body, his next heir ſhould, within one year after his deceaſe, rebuild the Old Chapel belonging to this Church, and found therein a Chantry. Accordingly, three years after, the ſaid Sir Richard le Sutton, and the reſt, founded here a Chantry for one Chaplain, called Groſe-Preſte, and endowed it with one acre of land in this pariſh, and the yearly rent of 8 l. 3 s. 0 d. and two hundred fagots out of their woods in the maners of Little Bentley, New-hall in Tendring, and Hamneſtall in Wykes (k).

At the ſuppreſſion of Chantries, the return made of this, was, That the Prieſt was to ſing maſs here, and help to ſerve the cure; and that this was ‘ a great Towne, having yn yt ‘ above the numbre of . . . howſeling people’ (l).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 407 l.

7. GREAT BENTLEY

lies South-ward of the other, and part of it extends as far as a Creek that communicates with the river Colne. Near the Church there is a very pleaſant Green.

Uluuin was owner of this pariſh in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: Alberic de Vere, anceſtor of the noble and long flouriſhing Family of the Earls of Oxford, held it at the time of the Survey [A].

That Family had a Seat here, in which they often reſided. Thomas, the 8th Earl of Oxford, made his will here 1 Auguſt 1370, and Maud his widow, 20 January, 1412.

Their Seat ſtood behind the Church, in Hallfeild; but is ſo entirely demoliſhed, that no ſigns remain of it but the moats and fiſh-ponds. There belonged to it a large Park.

Here is only one MANER.

The manſion houſe is on the north ſide of the Church.

This lordſhip was holden by the noble family of De Vere, by Barony, as Coln and Hengham, for being Great Chamberlains of England, and as part of the Earldom of Oxford (m). Hugh de Vere, the 4th Earl, held it ſo; as did likewiſe Robert,——Robert,——John, and——Thomas; the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Earl of Oxford (n), and their ſucceſſors.

Upon the attainder of John the 12th Earl, in 1461, this eſtate fell to the Crown, and was by K. Richard III. 25 July 1485 granted to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, and confirmed to him 28 February 1486 (o). But upon the acceſſion of K. Henry VII. to the throne, it was reſtored to the De Vere family, Earls of Oxford: and continued in them [B] till Edward the 17th Earl waſted his eſtates: And they being extended, by a warrant from the Lord Treaſurer, dated 23 July 1590, for a debt of 11000 l. to the Crown, This was ſold to . . . . Glaſcock. Afterwards it was purchaſed by

Roger Townſhend Eſq; of the neighbouring pariſh of Wivenhoo. [See in the other Volume, p. 188, and for a more particular account of the De Vere family, p. 293.] Sir Roger Townſhend dyed 11 June 1590. He held this maner of the Queen, in capite, by knight's ſervice. —— Sir John Townſhend, Kt. his ſon and ſucceſſor held the ſame; as did his grandſon —— Sir Roger Townſhend, Bart. (p) —— Sir Horatio Townſhend ſold it, with the maner of Wivenhou, to Nicolas Corſellis, of London, merchant. He ſold it again to George Papillon, of London, merchant, ſon of David Papillon Eſq; by Anna-Maria, daughter of . . . . Calendrine, of Lubeck, ſiſter to the famous . . . Calendrine, Paſtor of the Dutch Congregation in London. He married Mary, daughter of . . . Nicholſon, and had by her, Samuel; Mary, wife of Samuel Hall, of Hackney, Eſq; Anne, wife of Mr. Thomas Gledhill; and another. ——Samuel Papillon, of Hackney, merchant, ſucceeded his father, and married Fiducia, daughter of . . . Steere, by whom he had, David, John; and ſeveral other children that dyed young.——David, the eldeſt ſon and heir was father of —— John Papillon, Eſq; of Inglefield in Berkſhire [C]. The Eſtates the family have here, are the Maner, the Hall, the Lodge, and the Parſonage-glebe.

Cay's College, or St. John's, have an eſtate in this pariſh; and woods called Great and Little Catlins.

The owners of the other eſtates are, General Honywood; Admiral Elliott; Mr. John Barrodell; John Heckford; Stephen Lovekin; James Fenn; Mrs. Drury; Mr. Lowther; Richard Carrington; William Sherlock; Daniel Paton; John Clark, &c.

Here is a Fair July 15.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, ſtands pleaſantly on the weſt ſide of a beautiful Green. It is of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole tiled. The Doors of the Church have elegant round arches, decorated with roſes &c. On the South ſide there is a porch, ruinous. The Tower is about 18 or 19 yards high, and built of flint and ſtone intermixed, chiefly rag ſtone like iron, and many appear like a heap of gravel petrified together: ſome of the ſtones are laid aſlant. In this Tower there are 5 Bells. The Church is partly cieled; the Chancel not at all: at the weſt end of the Church there is a Gallery.

This Church was given by Alberic de Vere to the Monks of Abingdon in Berkſhire, and the Priory of Earl's-Coln, founded by him for a Cell to that Monaſtery. The Grant was confirmed by his ſon Alberic de Vere, and K. Henry I. The great Tithes were appropriated to Colne-Priory, 1 March 1321, by the Biſhop of London; who in July 1323, ordained a Vicarage here, reſerving the collation of it to him-lies weſt of the two Bentleys. The ſituation of it is in general high and pleaſant, and moſt of it well watered.

Part of the great Tithes belong now to Mr. James Wilder of Ipſwich: Other parts have been purchaſed by the owners of ſome of the eſtates here.

8. FRATING.

It is otherwiſe written in records, Freting: and the name ſeems to be derived from Fꞃea, a lord, and inᵹ, meadow, or paſture; with the inſertion of a t between them, to help the pronunciation.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to Retel: Ralph Peverel, and his under-tenant Turold, held it at the time of the Survey [D].

This pariſh was divided afterwards into two Maners. 1. The maner of Frating. 2. . . . . that of Mevaromes.

The Maner of FRATING.

The manſion houſe, called the Hall, ſtands on the north ſide of the Church, and is large.

This maner belonged originally to the Honor of Tutbury, and was holden of it by the noble Family of Ferrers, by the ſervice of one knight's fee.

Under them, perſons ſurnamed de Frating held it in the reign of K. Edward II. John de Frating, who dyed in 1308, held the maner of Frating of William Bagod and Elianor his wife by the ſervice of one knight's fee, as of the dower of his ſaid wife, by the aſſignment of William de Ferrar. He had alſo lands in Great Bromley, and Great Bentley [E].

Alice de Frating, his only daughter and heir (s), brought it in frank marriage to her huſband Robert de Cheddeworth; and they ſettled this eſtate by fine, in 1320, and 1321, being deſcribed as 200 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 12 of wood, with appertenances, in Great Bentleigh, &c. (t). Under Henry de Ferrar, or Ferrers, who dyed in 1343,——Thomas de Cheddeworth, Cl. held this as one knight's fee; then worth 10 l. a year. He departed this life in 1336 (u).

John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, held the maner of Fratynge of Sir William de Ferrers by knight's ſervice (w).

Dr. Robert Wells held this maner, of the Honor of Tutbury, by the ſervice of one knight's fee: and one Turn here for the Dutchy of Lancaſter, the common fine being 12 d. (x).

This Eſtate was next in the Ford family. John Ford, of St. Oſith, married . . . . daughter of . . . Tey, and had by her, John; William, that dyed without iſſue; and two daughters, Anne, and Alice. The eldeſt ſon——John Ford, of Great Horkeſley, by Catharine his wife, daughter of Thomas Johnſon, of Stoke, had John; and three daughters, Anne, wife of John Parker; Elianor, firſt wife of Thomas Bendiſh; and Margery, of Richard Hovell of S. Hillington, in Norfolk. He dyed 30 November 1611, aged 67, and his wife in September 1619. ——John, the ſon and heir, married Etheldred daughter of Henry Morrys: but doth not appear to have left any iſſue; for his ſiſters became his coheirs [F].

Elianor, and her huſband Thomas Bendiſh Eſq; of Bumpſted-Steple, had this maner, which they held of the King, of his Honor of Tutbury, by knight's ſervice; with other lands in this pariſh, and ſome adjoyning, named Chriſtmaſſes, Belches, Gateland and Crabtrees, the Pounding and Swallows, Heckford, Hull-wood, and Pipſgrove. He dyed 23 February 1602, and was buried, with his firſt wife, in a Chapel by the north ſide of this Church, under the eaſt Window, where a handſom monument is erected to him.—Thomas, his eldeſt ſon and heir, then 36 years old, ſucceeded him (y). [For a more particular account of this family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 351.] Thomas Bendiſh Eſq; was created a Baronet 22 May 1611. He ſold this eſtate to

Dr. Peirce, who gave it to Gonvile and Keys College in Cambridge, and that Society have been poſſeſſed of it ever ſince.

[F] Arms of Ford. Argent, a talbot ſaliant, ſable.

There is in this pariſh, and in Great Bromley, and Brightlingſea, a Maner or Maners, ſtyled Mevaromes, Mewarons, Moverons, which are reaſonably ſuppoſed to have been ſo called from ancient owners ſurnamed Monviron, or Muntviron. That in Brightlingſea is the ancienteſt upon record. They all centered in the St. Clere family, mentioned before under Great Bromley. Sir John Seynt Clere, who dyed 25 November 1546, held the maner of Mevaromes in Fratynge and Bromeley, of William Cardinall, as of his maner of Great Bromley. ——John, was his ſon and heir (z).

We find it next in the Beriff family, which anciently reſided in a houſe called Jacobes in Brightlingſey; and ſeveral of them are interred in the Church there, under fair marble ſtones; the firſt of them in 1496, which ſhews them to have been perſons of ſome note [G]. Auguſtin Beriff had iſſue——William, who married Catharine, daughter of William Draper of Aldham, and had by her, William, and John. The eldeſt ſon——William Beriff of Colcheſter, Eſq; held the maner of Morons alias Moverons, in Frating and Bromley, and a capital meſſuage in Colcheſter and Greenſted. He dyed 5 January 1627, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——William. John, the other ſon, had eſtates in Alresford, Thorington, Great Bentley, Peldon, and Langenhou; and departing this life 22 October 1624, left—John his ſon and heir (a). William aforeſaid married Frances, daughter of . . . . Sidemore of Ipſwich, and had by her John; Anne, wife of William Armitage, of Doncaſter, and Mary. —— John, was ſucceeded by —Richard Beriff Eſq; who lived at this place. His daughter was married to——James Harvey, of Cockfield, in Suffolk Eſq; But having no iſſue, Mrs. Beriff gave this and other eſtates to

Jacob Brand, ſecond ſon of Jacob Brand, of Polſted-hall Eſq; He dyed without iſſue; and it is now in his elder brother——William-Beale Brand, of Polſted-hall, Eſq;

The Eſtate belonging to General Honywood, and mentioned above under Great Bentley, extends into this pariſh: as doth alſo a wood, late Sir Ralph Creffeild's, now Mrs. Affleck's.—Mr. Thomas Barr hath likewiſe ſome lands here.

The CHURCH is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tiled. In the Tower are 3 Bells.

The patronage of this Rectory belonged to St. Botolph's Priory in Colcheſter, and continued in their gift till the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries. K. Henry VIII. granted it to Sir Thomas Audeley, Lord Chancellor; who by his will, dated 19 April 1544, left it to his brother Thomas Audeley Eſq; in whoſe poſterity it continued till Henry Audeley Eſq; alienated it to David Kinneir, Cl. Some years ago, it was purchaſed by St. John's College in Cambridge.

The Parſonage-houſe hath been greatly improved by the preſent Rector, Mr. Fowler.

9. THORINGTON lies ſouth of Frating.

The name of this pariſh is otherwiſe written in records, Thoryton or Thoriton, Thureton, Thuritone, Thurton, Torindune, Toriton: and is apparently derived from the Saxon Deity Ðoꞃ, and the words inᵹ, and ꞇun, a meadow, and town, &c.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign this belonged to Adſtan; at the time of the Survey it was one of the 39 Eſtates which Odo biſhop of Bayeux held in this County; Ralph was his under tenant; but it had been unjuſtly taken by Turold of Rocheſter [H].

Here is only one MANER.

Thorington-hall, the manſion-houſe, ſtands on the north-weſt ſide of the Church.

About the reign of K. Henry II. this eſtate was in the Family of Aneſty, from which it paſſed to thoſe of Montchenſy, Vere, Valence, Haſtings, and Beauchamp.

Hubert de Aneſtie, or Anſty, held, in 1199, ten knights fees in Eſſex and Hertfordſhire, and paid ſcutage for them (b). His ſon——Nicolas left an only daughter and heir, Dionyſia, that was married to William de Montchenſy, baron of Swainſcamp in Kent: whoſe ſiſter Joane was wife to William de Valence Earl of Penbroke, brother by the mother's ſide to K. Henry III. William and Dionyſia de Montchenſy had two children, William that dyed without iſſue, in 1289; and Dionyſia, wife of Hugh de Vere, ſecond ſon of Robert the 5th Earl of Oxford, who in her right became Baron of Swainſcamp. They both dyed in 1313, and leaving no iſſue

Adomar de Valence, Earl of Penbroke, ſon of William and Joane above-mentioned, ſucceeded them in their great eſtates. He held this maner of Thuriton by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee. Though he was thrice married, yet he dyed without iſſue, 23 June 1324 (c) [H]. He had three ſiſters, Iſabell, Joane, and Agnes, [See above, p. 238, and in the other Volume, p. 35. 138. 342.] After the deceaſe of Adomar's third wife, Mary de St. Paul, in 1376, the eſtates were divided between his three ſiſters heirs. Iſabell was married to John de Haſtings Lord Bergavenny; Joane to John Lord Comyn of Badenoch; and Agnes, firſt to Maurice Fitz-Gerald, afterwards to Henry Balliol, but left no iſſue.

As the heirs of Iſabell had this eſtate, we ſhall juſt carry down the ſucceſſion of them. John de Haſtings, Baron Bergavenny, dyed in 1324.——Laurence, his ſon, Earl of Penbroke, in 1348. ——John, in 1375 (d).——John de Haſtings, Earl of Penbroke, who came into poſſeſſion of this eſtate, was killed at a tournament, 30 December 1389, in the 17th year of his age. He married Philippa, daughter of Edmund Mortimer, the third Earl of March, but left no iſſue. Julian, mother of Laurence de Haſtings, remarried to William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, held this maner, in dower, till her death in 1367 (e).

Upon the violent death of John de Haſtings, laſt Earl of Penbroke of this family, his heirs were found to be, Sir Richard Talbot, ſon of Gilbert, ſon of Elizabeth one of the daughters of Joane ſiſter of the abovesaid Adomar de Valence; Elizabeth, wife of Sir John Le Scrope; and Philippa, wife of John Haleſham, daughter of David de Strathbolgi, late Earl of Athol, ſon of David ſon of Joane; another daughter of the foreſaid Joane ſiſter of Adomar (f). [See in the other Volume, p. 35. 138.] But they did not inherit this eſtate, for John de Haſtings Earl of Penbroke, had ſettled them on his mother's ſiſter's ſon,

William de Beauchamp, a younger ſon of Thomas Earl of Warwick, together with the Barony of Bergavenny. At the time of his deceaſe, 8 May 1411, he held this maner of Thoriton, of the King in ca. and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Richard de Beauchamp (g), created Earl of Worceſter in 1419, ſlain in 1422 at the ſiege of Meaux in France. His mother Joane, who held this maner in dowry among others, ſurvived him till 1435. He had an only daughter and heir,

Elizabeth, 18 years old at the time of her grandmother's deceaſe, and then married to Sir Edward Nevill, fourth ſon of Ralph Earl of Weſtmoreland, who in her right became Lord Bergavenny. He dyed 18 October 1476, his Lady being dead before him (h). They had two ſons, Richard who lived but a few years, and —— George: He departed this life in 1491 or 1492, leaving —— George, Lord Bergavenny, his ſon and heir. In 1521, he ſold this maner, and that of Redgwell, for the ſum of 920l. to

John Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Hugh Aſhton, Archdeacon of York, executors to Margaret Counteſs of Richmond, foundreſs of St. John's College in Cambridge, for the uſe of that Society. [See in the other Volume, p. 35, 36. 138. 342.]

This Maner is a conſiderable Eſtate, with the demeſnes which are divided into ſeveral Farms; particularly the Marſh-farm, or Dairy-houſe, ſtanding among the marſhes.

Another Farm among the marſhes, is the property of Mr. John Baker.—The Rev. Edward Arrowſmith purchaſed of John Cooke two Farms, now belonging to his daughter, married to Philip Roberts Eſq;—Mrs. Everard hath alſo a Farm here.

Great Hockley Wood, 38 acres, and Little Hockley Wood, 4 acr. and a half, in this pariſh and Frating, belong to Cay's College in Cambridge.

Here is an alms-houſe for two dwellers.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, conſiſts of a body, tiled; and north aiſle, the length both of Church and Chancel, leaded: In the Tower, built of a mixture of flints and ſtones, are 5 Bells.

John Deth, who dyed 20 April 1477, and lies buried in the Belfrey with an Epitaph, was a great benefactor to this Church: ſo that it was then either built, or repaired [I].

This Rectory hath been always appendent to the Maner, and ever ſince the year 1531 in the gift of St. John's College.

10. ALRESFORD

is a kind of peninſula, bounded on the weſt by the river Colne.

The name is formed from the two Saxon words Alꞃ, or Aleꞃ, Alder, and ꝼoꞃꝺ, a ford; i. e. Aldersford. It is otherwiſe written in records, Aleford, Allesford, Elesford.

In the Confeſſor's reign the owners of the lands in this pariſh, were, one Edward; Edwold: and Algar: At the time of the Survey, Euſtace Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant [H] His heirs, at the time of his deceaſe, were, John de Haſtyngs, Elizabeth Comyn, and Joane Counteſs of Aſſhell, or Athol. Inquiſ. 17 Edw. II.

[I] In the north aiſle of the Chancel were the Arms of Montchenſy. Two barrs gules, vaire argent et azure: and thoſe of Valence, Barry of 10 argent et azure, 10 martlets gules, 3 2 2 2 1.

Hato, held what had been Edward's; Edwold's part was the Biſhop of London's fee; Richard FitzGiſlebert had what was Algar's; and Algar was permitted to hold it under him [K]; one of the few inſtances of that kind that occurr after the Conqueſt.

Theſe lands were divided afterwards into theſe two Maners. 1. The maner of Alresford. 2. . . . that of Cokayne.

The Maner of ALRESFORD.

Alresford hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands a little way ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

The earlieſt account we have of this Maner, after the Survey, was in 1211, when Geffrey de Fercles held 3 knights fees in Aleford, of the Honor of Bologne (i).

Lucy de Apleford, who dyed in 1270, held of the King, in ca. of the Honor of Bologne, in the vill of Alesford, 1 meſſuage, 220 acres of arable, 3 of paſture, 60 of wood, 3 of marſh, and 20s. 9d. rent by one fee, and ſuit at the court of Bologne from month to month.——William was her ſon and heir (k).

The next poſſeſſor upon record was Andrew de Thunderle, who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1311, held of the King, in ca. at Alesford, 1 meſſuage, 120 acres of arable, half an acre of meadow, 9 acr. of paſture, 140 of wood, 17 s. 2 d. ob. by the 4th part of a knight's fee, a race of ginger, and a ſtalk of clove-gilly flower, and ſuit at the Court of Bologne, as aboveſaid. ——Philip, was his next heir (l).

In 1312, a fine paſſed between Anfrid de Staunton, plaintiff, and John ſon of William de Botiller, deforc' for the maner of Allesford, with appertenances, and the Advowſon of the Church (m). He held, jointly with Margery his wife, the maner of Alesford, and Advowſon of this Church, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee: and of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, 1 meſſuage, 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 52 of paſture, 240 of wood, and 16 s. 8 d. rent, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee. This was in 1337, the time, we ſuppoſe, of his death. Margery, his widow, held the ſame, at the time of her deceaſe in 1343. But what held of the King, was then 1 meſſuage, 280 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 14 of paſture, 120 of wood, 24 s. rent: and what held of the Biſhop, was 1 capital meſſuage, 200 acres of arable, 8 of paſture, 20 of wood, and 20s. with the Advowſon of the Church. —— Hugh Gros was her couſin and next heir (n). Though there was an unity of poſſeſſion, we find that the two Maners mentioned at the Survey, were ſtill kept diſtinct.

This Eſtate was next in the knightly family of de Coggeſhall, and their ſucceſſors, the Dorewards, Thurſbies, and Beaupres.

Sir John de Coggeſhall, who dyed in 1361, held in the vill of Alisford 1 meſſuage, 150 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, 52 of paſture, 240 of wood, and 16s. 8d. rent, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of 4s. a year. ——Sir Henry, his ſon and heir, held alſo this maner of Alesford. He married Margery, daughter and heir of Humfrey de Stanton, and had by her —— Sir William de Coggeſhall (o); who leaving no iſſue male, his large inheritance came among his four daughters and coheirs, Blanch, Alice, Margaret, and Maud. [See above, p. 261, and in the other Volume, p. 162. 373, wrong printed 371.]

Blanch, the eldeſt daughter, brought this eſtate to her huſband John Doreward, of Bocking, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 385.] They had four ſons, and by his will dated 25 Auguſt 1456 he gave this maner of Alresford, among others, to his eldeſt ſon —— John Doreward Eſq; who departed this life in 1476, leaving——John, his ſon and heir. At the time of his deceaſe in 1480, he held the maner of Alresford, the Advowſon of the Church, and a mill here, of the King, as of the Honor of Bologne (p). He was ſucceeded by his uncle——William Doreward, Eſq; who, by Margery his wife, eldeſt daughter and co-heir of Sir Roger Arſick of Norfolk, had John; and Elizabeth, married to Thomas Fotheringhay, of Woodriſing in Norfolk Eſq;——John, the ſon and heir, among other large eſtates, held this maner of Alresford, with appertenances, and 160 acres of arable, 348 of paſture, and 16 of meadow, in this pariſh, Fratinge, Thorington, and Wivenho, of the Biſhop of London: and 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 52 of paſture, 60 of wood, parcel of the maner of Alresford, of the King, in ca. as of the Honor of Bologne, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee. He dying in 1495, without iſſue [L], the three Daughters of his ſiſter

Elizabeth Fotheringhay ſhared his eſtates. They were, Margaret, wife of Nicolas Beaupre; Elena, wife of Henry Thurſbie Eſq; and Chriſtian, [L] There is ſome variety in Authors about the perſon whom he married. Some call her Margaret daughter of . . . Lyhert; and others Margery, daughter of John Nanton, Eſq; wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (q). [For a more particular acconnt of this Doreward family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 162, 192. 299. 384.]

Margaret Beaupré, the eldeſt daughter, had for her ſhare 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 52 of paſture, 60 of wood; that is, the part which was holden of the King; and dyed poſſeſſed of it 10 February 1513, leaving —— Edmund Beaupre her ſon and heir, 13 years old (r). In 1556, his kinſman, Edward, ſon of Henry Thurſby, paſſed to him, by fine, the maners of Alresford and Eſthall, a view of frank pledge, free-warren, and a fiſhery in this pariſh. He was poſſeſſed of them, beſides his own ſhare, and of the Advowſon of the Church, at the time of his deceaſe 14 February 1558.

Mary, wife of Richard Barwicke, and Anne Wright, were his two daughters and coheirs (s). The whole eſtate ſeems to have centered in Mary Barwick. Her huſband preſented to the living from 1568 to 1578. She departed this life 26 June 1586, holding part of this maner of the Crown, as above deſcribed, together with ſeparate fiſheries in the ſalt waters called Alresford Ford; by the hundredth part of a knight's fee; and the reſidue of the maner, lands, tenements, &c. half a water-mill, in this pariſh, Frating, and Thorington, of the Biſhop of London. —— Thomas Barwick, her ſon and heir was then 30 years old (t).

William Tabor, Doctor of the Civil Law, who dyed 19 April 1611, held the maner of Alresford and Eſthall, and divers lands, tenements &c. thereto belonging, in this pariſh, Thorington, and Wivenhoe; of the Honor of Bologne. He had alſo Weſtwicke, in Bradwell near the ſea; Edmuud Oates alias St. John's houſe, with divers other eſtates in Writtle; and in Moulſham, &c. —Martha, his only daughter and heir, then 5 years old (u), brought it afterwards in marriage to

John Browne, Eſq; who ſold it to

John Hawkins, of Braintree, clothier. By his will, dated 3 September 1633, he bequeathed it to his eldeſt ſon——John Hawkins Eſq; The latter left it to his only daughter and heir

Chriſtian, that was married to Sir John Dawes of Lyons in Bocking, Bart. Of his heirs it was purchaſed by Benjamin Feild, of London, wine-cooper. His ſon——Benjamin Feild, of Lombard-ſtreet, goldſmith, ſold it in 1720, to

Matthew Martin, of Wivenhou Eſq; He dyed 20 July 1749, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Samuel Martin Eſq; upon whoſe deceaſe, without iſſue, 16 May 1765, it deſcended to his brother —— Thomas Martin Eſq; Counſellor at law. [See in the other Volume, p.]

The Maner of COKAYNE took its name from an ancient Family, that had eſtates in theſe parts, as appears by the following records.

In 1279, a Fine paſſed between Richard de Skeketon, plaintiff, and John de Cokaine, deforc, for two parts of 1 meſſuage, 1 carucate of arable land, 20 acres of wood, 20 of paſture, and 6 marks rent, with appertenances, in Elmeſtede, Benetleye, and Brumley (w).

By leaſe and releaſe, 18 and 28 June 1332, Benedict de Cokefeld conveyed the maner of Cokayne, with appertenances, to Sir John de Sutton, of Wyvenho. The year following, John de Drokenesford, and Margaret his wife, paſſed by fine this maner of Cokayne, with appertenances, to Sir John de Sutton; and Agatha his wife (x). His younger ſon —— Sir Richard de Sutton, who dyed in 1395, held this maner of Cokayne, of the heirs of Sir Thomas Mandeville, in free ſocage, by the ſervice of 19d. a year ——Thomas was his ſon and heir (y). [For a more particular account of this family, ſee above, p. 176. and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

Who were the poſſeſſors of it for a while, we do not find: It hath been ſome years in the ſame hands as the laſt.

THE LODGE, a reputed Maner in this pariſh, lyes near the river Colne. The Houſe is about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church.

It belonged to Mrs. Kinaſton of London. She ſold it to James, and Jonathan, Phoedam, of Wivenhou, brothers, and mariners.——Jonathan, ſon of James, enjoyed it afterwards. But it being deeply mortgaged, the Family were forced to part with it; and it was purchaſed by——Samuel Martin, Eſq; Selby Thorowgood Eſq; hath an Eſtate here; Mr. Nathanael Cardy; William Crooks, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Thirteen ſhillings and four pence a year are paid to the Poor, out of a piece of land in this pariſh.

Here are two Almſhouſes, but without endowment.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a Spire ſhingled are 2 Bells.

This Church was built by Anfrid, or Anfrey, de Staunton, above-mentioned, as appears by his Epitaph in old French in the Chancel.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

The pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 395 l. 3 s. 0 d.

11. BRIGHTLINGSEY is very nearly an Iſland, formed by ſome branches of the Sea, and the river Colne. There is but one paſſage into it, on the road from Thorington-croſs, except when the tide is out, and then one may go over the Ford at the bottom of the Creek.

The name of it is otherwiſe written in records, Bricticeſia, Brictriceſeia, Brichling, Brichtling, Brichlinges, Brichtlingeſeye, Britlyngeſeye, Brithlingeſea, Brickelſey.

The name ſeems to be taken from a perſon, or owner, named Brictric or Brightling, and iȝ iſland, or ea, water.

J. Speed imagined (z), that this was the iſland where the remains of the Daniſh army ſheltered themſelves, after their defeat at Fernham by K. Ælfred: But it was in Merſey, as I have obſerved above, p. 426.

The Town is about a mile ſouth from the Church, by the Sea-ſide. It drives a great trade in Oyſters. And here is a Houſe for extracting and preparing Copperas.

This little Town is a member of the Cinq-Ports [M], and belongs to Sandwich in Kent. The perſon that took care of their affairs here was called a Deputy, as appears by the Epitaph of William Beriffe, who was one, and is buried in this Church. The Privileges of the Cinq-Ports were formerly very great and extenſive; but, we apprehend, have been much curtailed, and many of them are grown obſolete or diſuſed.

Before the Conqueſt, King Harold was poſſeſſed of this Lordſhip: at the time of the Survey, it was in the Crown, i. e. in William the Conqueror [N]: He gave it ſoon after to Eudo Dapiſer.

BRIGHTLINGSEY-HALL,

the maner-houſe ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church. But the ſeat where the lords of the maner uſually reſide, is about half a mile ſouth from the Church, between it and the Town.

Eudo made this maner part of the endowment of St. John's Abbey, which he founded in Colcheſter: And his grant was confirmed both by K. Henry I. and K. Henry II.

This maner continued in St. John's Abbey till its diſſolution, when it came to the Crown. In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted it to

Thomas Lord Cromwell, Keeper of the Privy-Seal (a). It reverted to the Crown upon his attainder, and continued in it till 1576, when Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Brightlingſea, and the maner-place called Brightlingſea-hall; and all the demeſnes belonging to this maner, and the inn-marſhes and out-marſhes, to

Thomas Henneage Eſq; (b) afterwards knighted, and one of Qu. Elizabeth's Privy Council. [See a particular account of him above, p. 46—48.] He dyed 17 October 1595.——Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, then 38 years old, was the wife of Moyle Finch, Eſq; (c) created a Baronet 22 May 1611. She herſelf was created, 8 July 1623, Viſcounteſs Maidſton; and advanced to the title of Counteſs of Winchelſea 12 July 1628. Sir Moyle dyed 18 December 1614. He or his wife ſold this eſtate to Richard Wilcox, or Wilcocks, of London, Gent. whoſe father was of Shropſhire. He married Alice, daughter of George Parkhurſt of Ipſwich, Gent. and had by her, George; Thomas; Nathanael; and 2 daughters, Mary, wife of Robert ſecond ſon of Sir Edward Barkham, Kt. and Sarah, of Peter Daniel, of Tabley in Cheſhire, Eſq; He departed this life 4 May 1624 (d).——George Wilcox, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon had Samuel who dyed in minority; and leaving no iſſue, was ſucceeded by his next brother——Thomas Wilcox, of Tottenham High-Croſs Eſq; of the body to K. Charles I. He married Mary, eldeſt daughter of John Wakering, of Kelvedon Eſq; by whom he had——Dionyſius, born in 1629; and Mary [O].

Col. George Thomſon was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate, and had it from 1660, to 1686. He left it by will to

Capt. John South, who ſold it, in 1694, to Iſaac Brand, of London, that fined for Sheriff of that City. He bequeathed it to

John Colt, and his heirs male. He was fourth ſon of Robert Colt, Cl. Rector of Semer in Suffolk, deſcended from the ancient Family of Colt, of Colts-hall, in Cavendiſh, Suffolk. The ſaid Robert married Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Rogers, of . . . . in Suffolk Eſq; by Mary his wife, daughter of John Brand, of Edwardſton in Suffolk Eſq; and had by her ſix ſons; and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Mary. Robert, the eldeſt married Sarah, widow of Seaman, of Colcheſter, but had no iſſue. Edward, the ſecond ſon, by Lucy, daughter of Simon Maine, member of Parliament for Ayleſbury in Buckinghamſhire, had only a daughter. Joſeph dyed unmarried.——John, the fourth ſon, to whom Iſaac Brand left this eſtate, was a mercer in Grace-Church-ſtreet, London. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Man, of Tooting in Surrey Eſq; formerly a draper in London, and had by her, Iſaac-Brand; John: and two daughters, Elizabeth, and . . . . . .——Iſaac-Brand

Colt, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, dyed unmarried, in 1759. One of his ſiſters and coheirs was married to the Lord Trimleſton, of the Kingdom of Ireland; and the other to

Sir Thomas Kemp, Bart.

By virtue of Mr. Colt's will, Sir John Kemp, Bart. and Benjamin Mee Eſq; being appointed truſtees for ſale of theſe Eſtates; of them they were purchaſed in 1763, by Nicolas Magens Eſq; a rich merchant. He was very charitable and bountiful to his neighbours; and juſt to the tenants of the maner; but, to their great loſs and concern, enjoyed it little more than a year, dying 18 Auguſt 1764.—His widow is now poſſeſſed of it, and hath his good and beneficent qualities.

Six pounds a year out of this maner were granted by K. Henry I. to St. Mary-Magdalens Hoſpital in Colcheſter; confirmed by K. Henry II. (e). That ſum is now paid to the Maſter of the Hoſpital, by the King's Receiver.

The chief Cuſtoms of this maner, are as follows. If a tenant dyeth, ſeized of any cuſtomary tenements, his youngeſt ſon ſhall inherit, or for want of ſuch ſon, his youngeſt daughter, and for want of ſuch daughter his youngeſt brother or ſiſter. Alſo the wife ſhall have no dowry of her huſband's cuſtomary lands. If two or more perſons have a joint eſtate in any cuſtomary lands that are heriotable, there is no heriot due till after the death of the lateſt liver.—If a man have an eſtate of inheritance, and the wife an eſtate for life, in any cuſtomary lands or tenements, being heriotable, the man being dead, and having any quick cattle at the day of his death, the heriot ſhall be ſeized by the bayliff and appraiſed by the tenants, and the wife ſhall have the uſe and occupation of the ſame heriot during her life, putting in ſureties to the Court for the true payment of the price of the ſame heriot at her death.—The cuſtomary tenants, which have an eſtate of inheritance, are not puniſhable for felling or cutting down any wood or timber growing upon their cuſtomary lands, putting it to what uſe they think fit; nor for taking down or carrying away any houſes, timber, or other parts of them, ſo that they keep and maintain a ſufficient houſe upon the ſame to make a dwelling, or elſe to compound with the court for the ſame dwelling houſe.—Every tenant of this maner may for his tenement, according to the cuſtom of the maner, put upon the Commons one ſheep and a half for every acre that he holdeth of the ſame maner, and as many hogs as he may reaſonably keep, ſo that they be lawfully ringed and yoked, and every cottager one barrow-hog only, being likewiſe lawfully ringed and yoked.

The Quit-rents of this Maner are 21l. 13s. 11d. ½.

is another Maner in this pariſh, dependent upon the former.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile from the Church.

This eſtate is otherwiſe called Monviron, Mewarones, Maronis, Morehams, Morehouſe; and was ſo named from its ancient owners, the family of Monviron, Muntviron, and by contraction Mun'um.

Oſbert de Brightlingeſey, who dyed in 1247, had three ſiſters, coheirs; Aveline, wife of Peter de Aldham; Joane, wife of Roger de Blakeham; and Rhoeſe, wife of Richard Mun'um (*): who, we ſuppoſe lived here.—In 1260, John de Muntviron had a grant of free-warren in Brightlingeſey, and Hayleſley (f).——Mariote, daughter and one of the heirs of John de Monviron, claimed againſt William de Harewold and Cecily his wife, the right ſhe had in all the lands and tenements which were fallen to her upon the death of her ſaid father, in Wrightlingſey, Frating, Bromley, Thuriton, Purle, and Woodham Walter; and the Advowſon of Hexelſlee Church (g).

We have no mention of this eſtate for a long while after, till we find it in the family of St. Clere. John Seyntcler, who dyed 26 Auguſt 1493, held the maner of Maronis in Brigtlinſey, of the Abbot of St. John's in Colcheſter, as of his maner of Brytlinſey (h).——Sir John St. Clere, his ſon and heir, at the time of his deceaſe 25 November 1546, held the maner of Newaromes in Brykelſey, parcel of the poſſeſſions of St. John's Abbey, by fealty, ſuit of court to the other maner, and yearly rent of 28s. 8d. and lands called Drybookes.——John, his ſon and ſucceſſor, was 23 years old (i).

In 1554, Laurence Warren, and Joane his wife, paſſed this eſtate by fine to Thomas Darcy Eſq; He held this maner of Moverons, alias Morehous, with 10 meſſuages, 10 gardens, 1000 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 800 of paſture, 30 of wood, in Brightlingſey, Thorington, and Alresford, late Laurence Warren's, of the maner of Brickelſey. Departing this life 26 October 1557, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Darcy Eſq; (k). One of his ſucceſſors——Sir Thomas Darcy, Bart. ſold it to

Robert Barwell, of Witham, bay-maker: and his ſon —— Newman Barwell ſold it again in 1718, to

John Colt Eſq; from whom it deſcended to his ſon,——Iſaac-Brand Colt, Eſq;

Nicolas Magens Eſq; purchaſed it with the other.

Henry Lamb, Gent. Mr. Philip Havens; Mr. John Baker; Mr. William Smythies, &c. have alſo ſome eſtates in this pariſh.

John Sympſon, Rector of St. Olave Hart-ſtreet, London, a native of this place, gave 52s. a year to the Poor of this pariſh, payable at Michaelmaſs and Lady-day, out of ſome lands in the pariſh of Kirby in le Soken, once the eſtate of Samuel Mott of Colcheſter, Gent. afterwards of   Cook of Thorington-hall, in right of his wife, daughter and coheir of John Weſtbrowne.

William Whitman of this pariſh, by his will proved 2 April 1730, left Seven pounds a year, iſſuing out of lands in Kirby, Walton, and Little

Here is a Fair Auguſt 1.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, ſtands on a hill, being a ſea-mark, and viſible ſeveral leagues off. It is a lofty ſtately building, conſiſting of a body and two aiſles, leaded; but the Chancel is tiled. The Steeple is 31 yards 12 inches from the ground to the battlements. In it are 2 Bells, and a Saints bell; but there are frames for five.

This Church originally belonged, as well as the Maner, to St. John's Abbey. In 1237, the Abbot and Convent gave the Patronage of it to the Church of St. Paul, and Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors (l). Soon after, the Dean and Canons appropriated it to the Lights of St. Paul's Church, and a Vicarage was ordained, which hath been ever ſince in the Biſhops Collation, and exempt from the Archdeacon's juriſdiction.

12. CICE, CHICH, or St. OSITH.

This large pariſh is the South end or ſide of this Hundred, along the Sea-ſhore. The rental of it is above 3800l.

From whence the Saxon name Cice (m) came we cannot learn: As for that of St. Oſith, it was borrowed from the Lady Oſgith, or Oſith, daughter of Frithuwald, King of I know not what place, by Wilburga daughter of Penda king of Mercia. She was born at Quarendon in Ayleſbury pariſh, and brought up with an aunt of hers at Eleſborough in Chiltern-hills, three miles from Ayleſbury. She had made a vow of virginity, but was obliged by her father againſt her will to marry Sighere the Chriſtian King of the Eaſt Angles, however, the marriage was never conſummated; for, in the abſence of her huſband, ſhe veiled her head, which he at laſt conſented to, and gave her his village of Chic, where ſhe began to found a Church, dedicated to the honor of St. Peter and St. Paul; and inſtituted a Nunnery of Maturines, or of the order of the Holy Trinity. Inguar and Hubba ſpoiled the monaſtery of St. Oſiths, and cauſed her head to be cut off at a fountain near Chich, where ſhe uſed to waſh herſelf with her virgins. She was buried before the door of her Church. Her body was removed from St. Oſiths to Ayleſbury 46 years, for fear of the Danes, and then brought back again (n). Her feſtival was on the 7th of October.

The reader is to obſerve, that he is not to expect much of Chronological truth or exactneſs in the Lives of Saints.

Beſides Cice, the name of this place is otherwiſe written in records Cica, Cicce, Cita, Cihc, Ciz.

This Pariſh was anciently part of the royal demeſnes, that is of the lands belonging to the Kings of England.

K. Cnut granted it to Godwin, the great Earl of Kent, who gave it to Chriſt's-Church in Canterbury, with licence of K. Edward the Confeſſor (o). It was taken from that Church at the Conqueſt: For, at the time of the Survey, it belonged to the Biſhop of London [P].

The reſt of the lands, that had belonged, before the Conqueſt, to one Edward, and to Siuuard; were held, at the time of the Survey, by Euſtace Earl of Bologne [Q]; and Ralph Peverell, and his under-tenant Turold.

The Biſhop of London's part, and what was Euſtace's, made afterwards the chief Endowment of the Monaſtery here; being divided into theſe ſeveral Maners: The maner of Chiche St. Oſith. —Ampners-wic;—Coket-wic;—Howic; and—Welwic.——Earl Euſtace's Share, belonged alſo chiefly to the Monaſtery, that was divided into the Maners of — Earls-hall: and — Wyers, or Wiſton-hall.

Of theſe Maners we ſhall give a particular account, when we come to ſhew how they were granted away after the Suppreſſion of Abbeys.

Ralph Peverell's part produced the Maners of——Chich-Ridell, and——Frodwick, or Frowick.

St. Osith's Monastery, and its Revenues, being the moſt conſiderable part of this Pariſh, we ſhall treat of it firſt.

The Maner of Cice belonging to the See of London, Biſhop Richard de Belmeis, or de Beaumes, who was conſecrated in 1108, obtained it from the Church of St. Paul, in order to build and endow his Monaſtery here; giving in exchange for it 14 pounds in land in Lodeſword; and ſix pounds in land yearly in Sudminſter, which he had bought of Robert de Wigecot (p).

The Abbot, Prior, and eighteen Canons, ſubſcribed to the King's Supremacy, at the time of the ſurrender, which ſhews what number were maintained here.

A Liſt of the Abbots may be ſeen in Newcourt, Vol. II. p. 456. and in Br. Willis's Hiſt. of the Abbies, Vol. II. p. 80.

The Advowſon or Preſentation to this Abbey was granted to the Biſhop of London in 1205 (w).

Of the above Eſtates, or Maners, COKETWIC was ſo called, becauſe Richard de Belmeis bought it of Ernulph Coket (x). And EARLS-HALL becauſe it was what belonged to Euſtace Earl of Bologne. The addition of WIC, in moſt of them, denoted that they were conſiderable grazing farms: a term ſtill uſed in many parts of England.

The ſite of the Monaſtery was converted into a Seat by the Lord Darcy: Part of it only is ſtanding, and the Seat of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

In 1545, an act of Parliament paſſed for erecting St. Oſithes into an Honor.

Soon after the Surrender, K. Henry VIII. granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, the ſite of St. Oſith's Monaſtery, and the maners of Chiche St. Oſithes, Barnton, Coketwyke, Wigbarugh, Erles-hall, Weſtwike, Howyke, Le Wyke, Wyerſhall alias Withſton-hall, Canon-hall, Abbots-hall, Coſted-hall, Mile-end-hall, Broke-hall, and Birch-hall: a meſſuage and marſh called Le Raye in Southminſter: lands and tenements called Plomptons and Downeland, with the Tithes, and all other meſſuages, lands, tenements &c. here, belonging to the Monaſtery of St. Oſith. To hold in capite, by the ſervice of a whole knight's fee (y).

Upon his attainder the premiſſes reverted to the Crown. K. Edward VI. 1 June 1553, for the ſum of 3974l. 9s. 4d. $\frac{1}{2}$, granted to Thomas Lord Darcy, Kt. of the Garter, and Chamberlain of his Houſhold, the maners of Chiche St. Oſith, Ampnerſwic, and Welwic; the Rectory and Church of Chiche; and the ſeveral parcels of land in this pariſh, mentioned above; together with two water-mills, a fulling mill, and three fulling ſtocks: and the Maners of Weſt-Merſey, Fingringhou, and the Rectories, and Advowſon of the Vicarages, of thoſe two pariſhes; and the maner of Pete-hall. To hold to him, and his heirs and aſſigns for ever, by the 40th part of a knight's fee (z).

Having given above, p. 396, 397, and in the other Volume, p. 28. 140. an account of ſome branches of the Darcy Family, we ſhall here give an account of the moſt conſiderable branch of it, which obtained this eſtate, and was ennobled, namely, Sir Thomas Darcy, Kt. He was ſon of Roger Darcy of Danbury Eſq; Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1506, and Squire of the body to K. Henry VII. by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Henry Wentworth of Nettleſted Eſq; that had been married before to John Bourchier, Earl of Bath, and next to Thomas

Having married Elizabeth, daughter of John de Vere Earl of Oxford, he had by her, John; Alberic; Robert: and two daughters, Thomaſine; and Conſtance, wife of Edmund Pirton of Little Bentley.——John Lord Darcy, the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Frances, daughter of Richard Lord Rich, and had by her Thomas; John: and Mary, wife of Robert, Lord Lumley. He departed this life, 21 February 1639, and was buried here (a). Sir Thomas Savage, upon whom the titles were entailed, dying before him, 20 November, 1635, his widow

Elizabeth, the eldeſt daughter, took the title of Counteſs Rivers. She was greatly moleſted during the unhappy Civil wars in the laſt century; no leſs than 16970l. 9s. 10d. being taken from her for rents, ſales of wood and timber, &c. (b). By Sir Thomas Savage ſhe had 7 ſons, John, Thomas, Francis, William, James, Richard, and Charles: and 6 daughters, Jane, married to John Paulet, Marquis of Wincheſter; Dorothy, to Charles Howard, Earl of Berkſhire; Elizabeth, to Sir John Thimbleby, Kt. Anne, to Robert Brudenel, afterwards Earl of Cardigan; Catharine, a nun; and Henrietta-Maria, to Ralph Sheldon, Eſq; The eldeſt ſon——Sir John Savage, Bart. ſucceeded his father in 1639 in the title of Earl Rivers. His firſt wife was Catharine, daughter of Henry Parker, Lord Morley and Montegle; and his ſecond wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Ogle Eſq; By the firſt, he had, Thomas, John, Richard: and four daughters, Elizabeth, married to William Lord Petre; Jane to, George Bridges, Lord Chandos, ſhe had two other huſbands afterwards; Catharine; and Mary. Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Emanuel Scroop, Earl of Sunderland: and 2. Arabella, only child of Robert Bertie, Earl of Lindſey. By this laſt he had no iſſue; but, by the firſt, he had, Thomas; Richard: and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Annabella. He departed this life 14 September 1694. Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, dyed before him. He had married Charlotte, daughter to Charles Stanley Earl of Derby, but leaving by her only one daughter Charlotte, that never married: the next brother, the Hon.—Richard Savage, ſucceeded to the honor and eſtates in 1694; and dyed 18 Auguſt 1712. He was Lieutenant-general of horſe, Lord-Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of this County &c. He married Penelope, daughter of John Downs Eſq; by whom he had Elizabeth, married to James Barry, Earl of Barrimore. Having no legitimate iſſue male ſurviving, he gave his eſtates here to his natural daughter, Beſſy. She was married to the Rt. Hon. Frederic Zuleiſtein de Naſſau, Earl of Rochford: and in 1721 an act was obtained for ſettling the eſtates of Richard late Earl Rivers, purſuant to an agreement made between Frederic Earl of Rochford and Beſſy Counteſs of Rochford his wife, James Barry Earl of Barrymore, and Lady Penelope his daughter, and John Earl Rivers, &c. His Lordſhip departed this life 14 June 1738, leaving two ſons, William-Henry; and Richard-Savage de Naſſau. —— William-Henry, Earl of Rochford, the preſent poſſeſſor of this eſtate, is Lord-Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of this County, &c. But his brother, the Hon. Richard-Savage, who married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edward Spencer Eſq; widow of James Duke of Hamilton, hath ſeveral children. For a more particular account of theſe noble Families we ſhall beg leave to refer to the Peerages.

Beſides the Abbey's Maners and Eſtates, there were other Maners in this pariſh called Chiche-Ridell; and Frodwick, or Frowick. They ſprung from what Siuuard poſſeſſed in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, and Ralph Peverell at the time of the Survey [S].

From the Peverell family this eſtate came, by the marriage of Margaret daughter and heir of William Peverell of Nottingham, to William de Ferrers. In 1252, William de Ferrers, of Groby; ſon of William, and brother to Robert de Ferrers the laſt Earl of Derby of this family, had, of the gift of his father, the maners of Woodham-Ferrers, Stebbing, and Fairſted, and one meſſuage in Chiche, all in Eſſex, to hold to him and his heirs, by the ſervice of five knights fees (c).

The Maner of St. Cleres.

The manſion houſe is about a quarter of a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

This eſtate took its name from the ancient Family of St. Clere, mentioned above, p. 443. and in the other Volume, p. 28.

Juliana, daughter of Peter de Kertlington, and wife of Alexander de Raines, gave to Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, all the homage and ſervice which Ralph Fitz-Walter of St. Oſith owed her, for the tenement he held of her in St. Oſith de Chiche in Suffleete.

By the Feodary of the Honor of Caſtle-Hedingham, it appears, that theſe lands called St. Cleres-wic, and St. Cleres Park, were held under the Earls of Oxford by the following perſons. ——Ralph ſon of Walter de Oſith, and Cecily St. Clere, in the reign of K. Henry III.——Philip de St. Oſyth, in 1273. Next——William St. Clere: and his ſon and heir——John in 1334. ——Thomas Sencler held half a fee in Chiche under Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl of Oxford; and under his ſucceſſors Robert, and Alberic, in 1384 and 1406 (d). In 1446 and 1454,——William St. Clere held the 12th part of a knight's fee in Chich, paying 4 d. yearly to the maner of Bentle.——Sir John Seyntclere, who dyed 25 November 1546, held the maner of Chichridill, alias St. Cleres-hall, in St. Oſith, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his Caſtle of Henyngham, by the third part of a knight's fee, then of the yearly value of 30 l. He had alſo the maner of Frodewyke, as we ſhall ſee preſently.——John was his ſon and heir. In 1555, he paſſed by fine this maner, and lands in Bentley, Cutteridge, and Willie, to John Gaſon, Eſq; (e).

It was ſoon after in the Darcy Family. Thomas Darcy, of Tolleſhunt Tregoos Eſq; who dyed 27 October 1558, held 2 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 300 of marſh, with appertenances, in this pariſh, late John Seyntclere's, of Thomas Lord Darcye, as of his maner of Chiche, then worth 40 l. a year (f). [For a further account of him, ſee above, p. 396.]——Brian Darcy, Eſq; his ſon by his third wife, had this eſtate after him; which he held, at the time of his deceaſe 25 December 1587, together with St. Cleres-wic, and other eſtates (g) [T]. He married Bridget, one of the daughters of John Corbet, of Sprowſton in Norfolk Eſq; by whom he had, John; Robert, Jane, and Penelope; which three laſt dyed without iſſue, and are buried with him in this Church. ——John Darcy, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, born in 1560, was a ſerjeant-at-law, and dying 15 March 1638 was alſo buried in this Church. By Dorothy his wife daughter of Thomas Audeley of Bere-Church Eſq; he had Brian who left no iſſue; and——Thomas; The latter dyed before his father in 1632, having married in 1621, Mary, daughter of Sir Andrew Aſtley, of Writtle, Kt. by which he had Mary, and—— Thomas, poſthumus, created a Baronet 20 June 1660. He married, firſt, Cecily daughter of Sir Symonds D'ewes, and had by her Anne, who dyed young. By his ſecond wife, Jane, daughter and heir of Robert Cole, he had Robert, who dyed young; Thomas, born in 1668; Brian, born in 1669; William; John, and Elizabeth, which two laſt dyed without iſſue. [See in the other Volume, p. 140.]

Of the heirs of the Darcy family it was purchaſed by Mr. Richard Daniel; and belongs now to——Dr. Richard Daniel.

Frodewick, or Frowick-Hall, is another Maner, or reputed Maner, in this pariſh.

At the time of the Survey, it ſeems to have been a diſtinct village, called in Domeſday book Forowica, and belonging to Earl Euſtace.

Anciently it belonged to a Family ſurnamed from it de Frothewyke, or Frowyck. John de Frothewyke, who dyed in 1312, held one meſſuage, and 2 carucates of arable in the village of Frothewyk, Chiche Ridell, Cruſtwic, and Earl's Chiche, of the heirs of Ralph de St. Oſith, in capite, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee.——Laurence was his ſon; whoſe heirs held a knight's fee in Chiche Ridell, under Henry de Ferrers, in 1343 (h).

John de Seyntclere, at the time of his deceaſe, 26 Auguſt 1493, held the maner of Chych-Frodwick in St. Oſith, of Sir John de Bowcher Lord Ferrers of Groby. His ſon——Sir John Seyntclere held alſo this maner of Frodewyke, and a tenement called Fenhowſe in the pariſh of Chiche, of William Parr, Marquis of Northampton, who had married Anne, daughter and heir of Henry Bourchier Earl of Eſſex (i).

This Eſtate is now divided into two, Great Frowick-hall, and Little Frowick-hall.

Great Frowick-hall is about a mile and a half north from the Church, and to it belongs the north Chapel of the Chancel.

. . . Thwaytes, Gent. had it ſome time ago; one of whoſe heirs was married to . . . . Spilman.

It was afterwards in the Harlow family, that reſided here for ſome generations. Martha daughter of John Harlow, Gent. and her huſband William Berney, of this place, Gent. ſold it to

His ſecond wife was Martha, ſiſter of William Weoley, of Weley-hall.——John, the eldeſt ſon, married Elizabeth, daughter of Antony Boradale, of Brightlingſey, and had by her, John, James, Adam; Sarah, Hannah.——John Denes, the eldeſt ſon, dyed 4 October 1704, in the 55th year of his age, and was buried here, with an epitaph. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Heckford, of Great Bentley, by whom he had, John, Edward; Elizabeth, Hannah, and Sarah.——John Denes, or Dines, is the preſent poſſeſſor.

Little Frowick-hall, ſtands not far from the other.

All the account we find of it, is, That it belonged, ſome years ago, to Thomas Green, of Eaſt-thorp, Eſq; and now to Mr. John Baker. [See in the other Volume, p. 180.

Mr. Thomas Martin; Samuel Gordon; &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, and St. Peter and St. Paul, is large, conſiſting of a middle pace and north and ſouth aiſles; all tiled. In the Steeple are 5 Bells.

This Church was given, with the Maner, by Richard de Belmeis, to the Monaſtery here: and the Tithes being appropriated to them, they ſerved the Cure by one of their own Canons. Since the ſuppreſſion, it hath been a Donative, or perpetual Curacy.

This Pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1873l. 1 s. 8 d.

In 1317, a Market was kept here, as appears by the preſentment below [U].

Talbot LLoyd, M. A. is the preſent perpetual Curate of this pariſh.

13. MISTLEY, with MANINGTREE.

Having ſurveyed the Weſtern part of this Hundred, we return to deſcribe the middle and more inland parts of the ſame.

Miſtley, the pariſh we begin with, hath Ardley and Lawford on the weſt, Bromley on the ſouth, Wickes and Bradley on the eaſt, and the Stour or Channel on the north.

The name is formed from the Saxon words, Miꞅꞇel, the herb baſil, and leẏ, paſture; this place probably abounding with that ſort of herb. There is another Saxon word Miꞅꞇ, a miſt, but how it could be applicable particularly to this place I do not underſtand.

This pariſh belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Alric, or Aluric, and Aleſtan: At the time of the Survey, it was divided into three Maners, holden, by the wife of Henry de Ramis; by the Counteſs of Albemarle, under the title of Sciddinchou; and by Robert Gernon, and his under-tenant Nigel, by the name of Dicheley.

The Maner of MISTLEY.

Miſtley-hall, or Sciddinchou-hall, ſtands pleaſantly on an eminence, with a good proſpect, eſpecially on the north. It was new built by Richard Rigby Eſq; and much improved by his ſon the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Eſq; with fine plantations of trees &c.

This maner is what the wife of Henry de Ramis held [W]. It was at firſt called Old-hall, but where the manſion houſe ſtood, is at preſent unknown. From the decay of it aroſe another named New-hall; which is about 2 miles ſouth from the Church. They were anciently ſet down in records by thoſe diſtinct names, and two capital meſſuages ſo called. But neither of them occurs in the Inquiſitions poſt mortem, till about the year 1387. Then Thomas Hardyng had in Miſtleigh 1 meſſuage, 50 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 3 of underwood, called le New-hall; and in the hamlet of Manytree 1 meſſuage, and 1 cottage; and in Lalleford, a water-mill, and 2 crofts of land. The ſame year, he releaſed to Richard Wythermerſhe and Thomas Sankyn Parſon of Little Bentele, his right in all thoſe lands and tenements, which he had formerly granted them (k). In 1414,——William, ſon of Thomas Hardyng, releaſed to Joanna de Bohun, Counteſs of Hereford, Eſſex and Northampton, being in poſſeſſion, all his right in thoſe lands in Miſteleygh, Little Bromley, Little Bentley, and Wrabenaſe, called Newhalle; with the advowſon of Miſteleigh-Church (l).

The next mention we find of this eſtate is in 1543; when a Fine paſſed between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and William Ford, and Elizabeth his wife, deforc' of the maners of Old-Hall and New-Hall in Myſeley, and Little Bromley, with the advowſon of the Church; to be the right of the King (m).

This eſtate being thus veſted in the Crown, K. Edward VI. in 1552, granted to Sir John Rainsforth, the maner of Old-hall, and New-hall, with appertenances, and a capital meſſuage called Old-hall and New-hall in Myſteley; lands called le Thorne; and the advowſon of this Church; To hold of the King, in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee: Alſo the maner of Abbots, alias Edlins, here, to hold in ſocage (n).

This Maner of ABBOTS was ſo called, becauſe it belonged to the Abbey of St. Oſith: and, under the name of Eſtlines in Miſtley, was lett at the time of the ſuppreſſion, to Thomas King

As Sir John Rainsforth became poſſeſſed about the ſame time of the Maner of Maningtree, and that henceforth theſe three Maners of Old-hall, New-hall, and Maningtree, came to be mentioned together in the Inquiſitions; we ſhall therefore give an account of it here.

MANINGTRE, or MANYTRE, is a name that doth not occur in Domeſday-book [X], but Sciddinchou is the appellation it is there mentioned by. 'Tis otherwiſe written in records, Scidmehau, Sedingho, Sidingho, Shedham, Chedingham, Chedingho; and the maner-houſe is called Sheddon-hall, or Sharing-hall. It ſtands about a mile from Maningtree, upon a riſing ground.

Maningtree is not ſo conſiderable for being a Maner, as for being a Town by the ſouth ſide of the river Stour; where a pretty conſiderable Trade is carried on in Deals, Coals, Corn, Iron, &c. and from whence the beſt Whitings, and a quantity of other Fiſh are brought to Colcheſter. There is a Market in it weekly on Thurſdays; and a Fair June 15 [Y]. This place is however only a Hamlet in Miſtley-pariſh.

Sciddinchou belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Aluric; at the time of the Survey, the Counteſs of Albemarle held it in demeſne [Z]. This Counteſs was Adeliza, half-ſiſter to William the Conqueror, wife of Eudo Earl of Champagne, to whom Odo Biſhop of Bayeux gave Albemarle or Aumarle in Normandy, and William the iſle and Earldom of Holderneſſe (p).

By an extent taken of this maner of Sindingho, in 1279, it appeared, that it comprized one meſſuage, 1 garden and curtilage, worth 10s. a year; in arable ground, eight ſcore acres and ten, worth 3d. an acre; 7 acres and a half of meadow, worth 2s. an acre; 28 acres of paſture, worth 6d. an acre; in the herbage of a wood felled, of 27 acres, 10s. a year; item a water mill worth a mark yearly; a dove-houſe worth 4s. two acres of marſh worth 12d. yearly; Rents of aſſiſe, 6l. 19s. 8d. in work of cuſtomary tenants 7s. in tolls, 40s. It was holden of the Counteſs of Albemarle, together with the maner of Godlisford in Suffolk, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and not of the King in capite. Iſabell, widow of Hubert de Ruly, held a third part of it in dower (q).—In 1311, Geffrey, ſon of William de Rully, or Ruylli, of Rameſey, releaſed all his right in the maner of Schidingho to

The Abbey and Convent of Legh, or Canon Leigh in Devonſhire. For Maud de Clare, Counteſs of Glouceſter and Hereford; having changed the Priory of Legh, [founded by Walter Clavell, for Canons of the order of St. Auguſtin,] into an Abbeſs and Nuns, or Canoneſſes, of the ſame order, ſhe gave them this her maner of Sydynghaw. And Sir Robert de Inſula releaſed to them, in 1319, his right in all the lands and tenements he held in Shidingho, and Manitree, with appertenances (r).

This eſtate continued in the Nunnery till 19 February 1538, when it was ſurrendred to the Crown (s).

In 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the maner of Manytree alias Schidinghoo, and all the lands tenements &c. in this pariſh, Lawford, Little Bromeleigh, Ardleigh and Bradfeild, to Sir John Rainsforth, and his heirs; to hold in ca. by the tenth part of a knight's fee (t). At the time of his deceaſe, 16 September 1559, he held the maner of Manytree, alias Chedingho, with appertenances, and the Crane, the Key, and Key-houſe, of the Queen, in ca. as above: and a Chapel called our Lady in the Oates, and the Gild or fraternity of Manytree: alſo the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and the Rectory of Miſteley, of the Queen, in ca. by the 40th of a knight's fee; and the maner of Abbotts alias Edlyns, of the Queen, by fealty only, in free ſocage. He had two wives, viz. 1. . . . . daughter and heir of Edward Knivet. 2. Winifred daughter and heir of John Pyme; but left no iſſue by either, ſo that his heirs were the deſcendents of his mother's ſiſter Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Humfrey Starkey, namely Chriſtopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne, wife of Henry Joſſelyn.

To explain this a little. Sir Humfrey Starkey, created Serjeant at law in 1478, and conſtituted Chief Baron of the Exchequer in 1486, had four daughters, coheirs, Catharine, Elizabeth, Emma, and Anne. The latter was the mother of Sir John Rainsforth, firſt wife of his father Sir John Rainsforth.——Elizabeth, the ſecond daughter, was wife of Thomas Blodlowe, whoſe father was Sheriff of London in 1472. They had two daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, and Catharine. Elizabeth was married firſt to Andrew Edmonds of Creſſing-Temple Eſq; father of Chriſtopher Edmonds Eſq; above-mentioned, of Lewknor in Oxfordſhire, and a knight. [Elizabeth's ſecond huſband, was Sir John Williams of Tame, by whom ſhe had Iſabel, wife of Richard Wenman Eſq; and Margery wife of Henry Lord Norris, of Ricot.] Catharine, the other daughter and coheir of Thomas Blodlowe, became wife of John Goodwin Eſq; and had by him a ſon named John.——Emma, the third daughter and coheir of Sir Humfrey Starkey, was married to Henry Torell Eſq; whoſe deſcendent Humfrey Torell left an only daughter and heir Anne, born in 1541, and married to Henry Joſſelyn Eſq;

Chriſtopher Edmonds, and his wife, had licenſe 20 September 1561, to alienate the fourth part of the maners of Manytree, Shedinghoo, Old-hall, New-hall, Abbotts alias Edlings, in Miſtley, with appertenances, to

John Goodwyn (u). In 1567, a precept was directed to the Sheriff, to cauſe John Goodwyn Eſq; and Anne his wife, and John Lucas Gent. and Mary his wife, to perform their agreement with Francis Saunders Eſq; and William Walter ſenior, about theſe maners; with view of frank-pledge, free-warren, and other liberties and franchiſes, and the advowſon of this Church (w). By licenſe dated the 18th of April 1576, John Goodwyn, and Elizabeth his wife, alienated a moiety of the maner of Maningtree, and of 60 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 10 tofts, 4 water-mills, 4 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 4 of paſture, 400 of wood, 600 of heath and furze; with free warren and franchiſes, &c. in Manytree, alias Miſtle, to

John Barker, Eſq; who purchaſed the other moiety, 7 October 1577, of Henry Joſſelyn Eſq; and Anne his wife (x). Mr. Barker dyed 26 May 1589, poſſeſſed of the premiſſes, leaving —— Robert, his ſon and heir aged 26 years (y), who ſold this eſtate to Paul, Viſcount, Bayning. At the time of his deceaſe, 29 July 1629, he held the maner of Shedingho and Maningtree, of the King, in capite, by the tenth part of a knight's fee; and the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and advowſon of this Church, of the King, in ca. by the 40th part of a knight's fee; likewiſe the maner of Abbots in this pariſh (z). —— Paul, Viſcount Bayning, his ſon and heir, departed this life 11 June 1638. He had only two daughters that inherited his very large fortune and eſtates, Anne; and Penelope, the latter of which dyed in 1657, without iſſue; though ſhe had two huſbands.

Anne, the eldeſt daughter, was married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and laſt Earl of Oxford of that moſt ancient family: But alſo left no iſſue. About 1680, the Earl ſold the reverſion of this, and other eſtates to Edward Rigby Eſq; William Peck Eſq; Mrs. Pierpont, &c. After the Earl's deceaſe in 1703, the ſurvivors of them, and the heirs of the others, joined in obtaining an act of parliament to ſettle the diviſion of the ſaid eſtates: Whereupon this was allotted to Edward Rigby Eſq; His ſon and heir,——Richard Rigby Eſq; married Mrs. Anne Perry, and had by her a ſon, and two daughters, Richard; Anne; and Martha, wife of Col. John Hale. He departed this life in November 1730, and his widow Anne in February 1741. Their ſon, The Rt. Hon. —— Richard Rigby Eſq; Privy Counſellor in England and Ireland; and Maſter of the Rolls, and late Vice-Treaſurer, of this laſt kingdom; is the preſent poſſeſſor. He hath in this pariſh New-hall, White-hall, Abbots farm, Fords; and Dikeley-hall of which laſt we proceed to give an account.

The Maner of DIKELEY.

Dikeley-hall, is about a mile and a half ſouth from the Church.

The owner of it in Edward the Confeſſor's reign was Aleſtan: Robert Gernon held it at the time of the Survey [A]. As he was lord of Stanſted-Montfichet, this eſtate held therefore of that Barony: and came with it to the De Vere family.

One Norman de Dikeleye, who took his name from hence, was a benefactor to St. Oſith's monaſtery (a).

It ſeems afterwards to have belonged, as well as the former maner of New-hall, to Thomas Hardyng, and to have received from thence the name of Hardynges. For David Mortimer, and Robert Brooke of Dedham, held, in the time of K. Henry VI. one knight's fee in Dikelegh near Manytree, called Hardynges in Miſteley (b).

Paul Viſcount Bayning, at the time of his deceaſe in 1629, held the meſſuage called Dykel-hall, and Dykel-hall-wood, of the King, as of his Hundred of Tendring, in free and common ſocage (c). He was ſucceeded by his ſon——Paul Viſcount Bayning, who departed this life 11 June 1638.

Anne, his eldeſt daughter and coheir, brought this, among the reſt of her large fortune, to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and laſt Earl of Oxford of that noble family. About the year 1680, the reverſion of this eſtate was purchaſed by Edward Peck Eſq; and paſſed from him, as the eſtates at Little Bentley, to his ſon —— William, and his grandſon —— William Peck, Eſqres. [For a more particular account of the Bayning family, ſee above, p. 446, 447, and for thoſe of de Vere, and of Peck, ſee the other Volume, p. 292. 526.] This eſtate belongs now to the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Eſq;

The Lord Viſcount Grimſton has two farms in this pariſh, called Marjorams, and Bockins. Thomas Hickeringill Eſq; Mr. Simey; and Philip Long &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

At the Thorn, the late Richard Rigby Eſq; built a village of about 50 brick-houſes, convenient for tradeſmen, and well-inhabited. He alſo built ſeveral Granaries, Warehouſes, a large Malting-office; and made good Quays, and Coal-yards.

The old Church, dedicated to St. Mary, ſtood almoſt a mile ſouth-eaſt from the new one. The Church-yard is incloſed, and a Vault with a portico over it remains, for the burial of the Rigby-family. The new Church ſtands at the Thorn; and was conſecrated by the Biſhop of London 6 June 1735. It is a neat edifice. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Rectory was generally appendent to the capital Maner. But from 1390 to 1395 it was in Geffrey Cockfield: and from 1432 to 1458 in Robert Darcy (d); which do not appear from records to have had that maner.

Maningtree, as we have already obſerved, is only a Hamlet in this pariſh; and the Church or Chapel there is a Chapel of eaſe to the mother Church of Miſtley. About the year 1616, it was built out of the ruins of the ancienter Chapel, that ſtood on a riſing ground not far from the ſite of the new Church. It conſiſts of a body and two aiſles ſupported by pillars of the Tuſcan order. At the weſt end there is a Turret with one Bell.

In this place was formerly a Guild or Fraternity called Trinity Guild, the yearly value of which amounted to 8 l. 5 s. 4 d. There was in it one pair of Organs valued at 26 s. 8 d. two hand-bells 16 s. four bells eſteemed at 38 c. weight, at 15 s. per hundred; three chalices of ſilver, parcel gilt, weighing 29 oz. at 4 s. 6 d. the ounce and more; one pax of ſilver, parcel gilt, 6 oz. at 4. 8 d. per ounce; in ready money of the Trinity guild 4 l. In the Certificate of Chantry-lands, the account of this place is, 'The ſaid Town ys a great Towne, and alſo a haven Towne, having in yt to the number of 700 of howſeling people: The ſaid Chapple ys diſtant from any Pariſh Church one mile and a quarter.'

Miſtley is rated to the land-tax at 429 l. 1 s. 0 d. and Maningtree at 265 l. 1 s. 6 d.

BRADFIELD

lies eaſt of Miſtley, being bounded on the north by the river Stour.

The name is formed from the Saxon word Bꞃaꝺ, broad, and field.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Aluric Camp was poſſeſſed of this pariſh: which Roger de Ramis, and Roger Pictavienſis, held at the time of the Survey [B].

Theſe lands occurr afterwards, in records, under the ſeveral denominations of The Maners of Bradfeild-hall, Over-hall, and Franke-hall; which were one and the ſame: and The Maner of Nether-hall.

Bradfield-hall, or Over-hall, ſtands in the upper part of the pariſh: The manſion houſe, which is large, and formerly conſiderable, was the Seat of the Harbottle and Grimſton Families. It is about three quarters of a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church.

Nether-hall lyes near the water-ſide, about half a mile north from the Church. This was the chief Maner.

At preſent there are but two acknowledged Maners in this pariſh. 1. The maner of Bradfield-hall. 2. The maner of the Rectory.

The Maner of Bradfield-Hall.

The earlieſt account we have of this Eſtate after Roger de Ramis, was

In the year 1312, when William Franke, or Frankes, the elder, of Herewich, granted all his maner of Bradfeild, to John de Brokeſburne, and Joane his wife (e). She was either daughter, or a near relation, of the ſaid Franke. The next year Franke ſettled by fine this eſtate on John de Brokeſbourne: who, jointly with Margery his wife, in 1332, ſettled the maner of Bradefeld near Manicitree, with appertenances in Bradſeild, Miſteley, Wrabneſe, and Dedham, on himſelf, and his ſaid wife (f).

The Brokeſbourne family took their name from a place ſo called, in the pariſh of Wics.

John de Brokeſbourne above-mentioned, at the time of his deceaſe in 1342, held, jointly with Margaret, or Margery, his wife, the maner of Bradfeild of the heirs of Robert de Ralph, by the ſervice of one knight's fee; and tenements in Kirby and Walton: he held alſo for his life, in Miſteleigh 1 meſſuage, and 100 acres of arable, of Robert Fitz-John, by the ſervice of 8 s. remainder of this laſt to his ſons William, and John.——Robert de Brokeſbourne, his eldeſt ſon and heir, ſucceeded him in the maner of Bradfeild (g).

In 1343, he granted to his mother Margery, and the heirs male of her body by his father, the maner of Bradefeld, and one meſſuage, 480 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, 50 of paſture, 130 of wood, 12 of alder, and 40 s. rent, in Bradefeld, Miſtlegh, and Dedham: and to his mother, and Sir John de Sutton, to whom ſhe was remarried, and to her heirs male, he granted all that meſſuage and lands which his father had purchaſed of William de Boxtede, and Hamers land, and Stebbynges land in Bradefeld (h). He appears to have dyed without iſſue. For in 1384, when his mother [then wife of Sir John de Sutton] departed this life, her heir was found to be her other ſon——Edmund de Brokeſbourne (i). He married Idonea Lovey, to whom K. Richard II. confirmed, in 1396, the grant of a free-warren made to John de Brokeſbourne in 1312, in all their lands in Bradfeild, Miſtley, Wrabneſe, Ramſey, Dover-court, Wykes, Brokeſbourne, and Tendring (k). She was remarried to John Glevant; and her third huſband was Bartholomew, Lord Bourchier. [See in the other Volume, p. 253.] For the term of her life ſhe enjoyed, among many others, the maner called Over-hall, with lands and tenements in Bradefeild, of the gift of Ralph Chamberleyn and William Brett to her former huſband Edmund de Brokeſbourne; holden of the heirs of Hubert de Raleigh, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (l). This is the firſt time, we find mention of the maner of Over-hall. Idonea dyed in 1409; By her ſecond huſband, Edmond Brokeſbourne, ſhe had a daughter,

Alianor, born in 1393; married, firſt, to John Fitz-Raufe, Eſq; (m) afterwards to Sir Wiliam Rainsford, to whom ſhe brought this eſtate. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1433, he held the maner of Frankehall in Bradfeild, of Humfrey Duke of Glouceſter, as of his caſtle of Colcheſter, by the ſervice of 1 knight's fee: and the maner of Strondelond in Ramſeye of Robert de Roydon.——Henry Rainford, then fifteen years old; is ſaid to be their ſon and heir (n); but we find nothing more of him in records. Alianor, the mother, dyed 30 July 1437,——Sir Laurence de Reynsforth, moſt probably another ſon of theirs, who dyed 18 September 1490, held the maner of Bradfeild-hall, with appertenances, of John Earl of Oxford; and the maner of Netherhall of Elizabeth Queen of England, as of her maner of Parkhall, by the ſervice of 2d. a year; and ſeveral other eſtates. He was ſucceeded by his ſon and heir——John Reynsforth Eſq; 30 years old (o); afterwards knighted. At the time of his deceaſe, 16 September 1559, he held the maners of Bradfeild-hall and Over-hall, and divers meſſuages, lands, &c. in Bradfeild, Tenderinge; Kirby, Walton, and Ramſey: and the maner of Nether-hall, of the Queen, as of her maner of Parke-hall: with ſeveral other maners and eſtates (p) [C]. Though he had two wives, namely, ... daughter and heir of Edward Knivet; and Winifred, daughter and heir of John Pyme, yet he left no iſſue; ſo that his large eſtates came among the deſcendents of his mother's ſiſter Elizabeth Starkye; namely Chriſtopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne wife of Henry Joſſelyn. [See this more at large, above, under Miſtley, and Maningtree.] Which of theſe coheirs had this eſtate, and how long it continued amongſt them, doth not appear.

In 1568, William Waldegrave Eſq; was lord of the maner of Bradfeild (q).

Soon after, it came intothe Grimſton family, and hath continued in it ever ſince. They derive themſelves from one Silveſter, who was ſtandard-bearer to William the Conqueror at the battle of Haſtings, and had Grimſton in Yorkſhire, from whence he took his ſurname. For a particular account of their deſcents and inter-marriages we ſhall beg leave to refer to the Peerages: And ſhall begin with the firſt of the Family, that came to reſide here. It was Edward Grimſton Eſq; [D] ſon of Edward Grimſton Eſq; by . . . . daughter of . . . Sturrow, of Ipſwich, widow of . . . Hall. He was one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for the burgh of Aye in Suffolk in 1589; and marrying Joane, daughter and coheir of Thomas Ryſby, of Lavenham in Suffolk Eſq; got with her a very conſiderable fortune. She dyed 23 January 1604. Her mother was Joane, daughter of John Harbottle, of this place, and of Crowfield in Suffolk Eſq; At the time of his deceaſe, 16 Auguſt 1610, he held the maner of Bradfield hall, with appertenances, and Bradfield-Park, with lands in Bradfield, Tendring, Miſtley, Ramſey, and Kirkeby; the Cock-meadow, and lands called Brights, in Bradfield; the maners, or tenements, of Faytes, and Margeries, in Bradfield, Miſtley, and Wicks; a meſſuage with 100 acres called Pilcocks in Tendring: alſo the maner of Skirmans fee, or Frinton-hall; Keties wood, and ſeveral parcels of land in Bradfeild, Miſtley, Lawford, &c. By his wife, Joane Reſby above-mentioned, he had two ſons Harbottle, and Henry: and a daughter named Mary, wife of Thomas Cornwallys Eſq; Henry, the ſecond ſon, married Frances, daughter of Ralph Coppinger, of Stoke in Kent Eſq; by whom he had William, Henry, Thomas; Cecily, Elizabeth, and Mary.——Harbottle Grimſton Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was knighted, created a Baronet 25 November 1612, and elected Knight of the Shire for Eſſex in the 2d, 3d, and 4th Parliaments of K. Charles I. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Coppinger Eſq; ſiſter to his brother Henry's wife, and had by her Edward, Harbottle, Henry, Thomas, William; and Elizabeth, married to Chriſtopher Harrys of Shenfield in Margaretting Eſq; The 19th of February 1647, he departed this life in the 70th year of his age, as did his wife 12 December 1649 aged 70, and were both buried in the Chancel of this Church. Edward, the eldeſt ſon, dyed in 1624, aged 24 years: He married Elizabeth ſecond daughter of Thomas Marſham Eſq; by whom he had Edward, and Elizabeth, that both dyed in minority; ſo that Sir Harbottle, the father, was ſucceeded in title and eſtate by his ſecond ſon—Sir Harbottle Grimſton,

He had two wives: The firſt was Mary, daughter of Sir George Croke, Kt. one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas; which dyed 21 May 1649, aged 35 years. By his ſecond wife, Anne, youngeſt daughter of John Earl of Thanet, he had Edward, born 22 July 1674, and Mary born in 1675, but they both dyed young. His widow was remarried to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Viſcount Barrington. ——James, the next brother, is the preſent Lord Viſcount Grimſton.

His Lordſhip hath Bradfield-hall, Nether-hall, the Lodge; and in ſhort by much the greateſt part of this pariſh.

Bradfield MANESTUNE, or Manſton, is a Hamlet in this pariſh, by the ſide of the Channel; called otherwiſe Mountherd alias Jakes. There was formerly in it a Chapel ſtyled our Lady in the Oats, it being dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Alfelin enjoyed this manor in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey it was holden by Roger de Ramis [D]. About the reign of K. Henry II, William de Ramis conveyed it to Aubrey de Vere, Earl of Oxford; to hold as a quarter of a knight's fee (r). Part of it had belonged to Ralph Fitz-Adam, and next to Philip de St. Oſith, who paſſed it to John ſon of Vincent de Kirkby; and the latter granted and releaſed to Robert Earl of Oxford a meſſuage and lands in Manſton Bradfeild, Ramſey, and Weeks, paying to the chief lords all due ſervices, and to himſelf a clove gilly flower. —— Richard, —— Robert, and——Gilbert de Kirkby, and —— John de Weſtwick, held it, under the Earls of Oxford. In 1358, and 1370, Nicolas Launch, John Aleyn, and their partners William Adam, William Treydevers and Nicolas Baker, held half a fee in Manſton, under John, and Thomas de Vere, the 7th and 8th Earls of Oxford (s). —— William Aleyn, and Richard Herd, William St. Clere, and John Somercote, held it in the time of K. Henry VI. ——Thomas Pepper, in K. Edward the Sixth's reign. —— Antony Balls held Mountherd alias Jakes in the beginning of Qu. Elizabeth's reign. And, in 1568,——William Cardinall Eſq; held divers meſſuages, lands &c. in Bradfeild, called Mountherds, otherwiſe Jakes, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his caſtle of Hedingham, by the tenure called Manſtohoulde, and yearly rent of 3s. 4d. And lands called Longforrowe, Churhfeild, Dovehouſe, Winterbornes, Newmans garden, Oldfeild, and Oldfeild meadow, in this pariſh and Wykes. —— William Cardinall was his ſon and heir (t). [See above, p. 442.]

Mrs. Anne Lamb, of Silam near Saxmundham, had it ſome years ago.

It belongs now to Mrs. Selley. This is called Jacks-hall. The houſe ſtands about a mile north-eaſt from the Church, near to the river.

A farm called Slipe belongs to Mrs. Burton: ——Ruſh-crofts to Thomas Hickeringill Eſq; and ——Convens to Mr. Cutting.

Mrs. Sarah Carrington; Mr. Samuel Sacker; Henry Hans; John Edgar; Thomas Gentry; William Stone; &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

The Governors of Dedham Charity have here a farm; and Wragmarſh, part of the endowment of Dedham-ſchool, lies partly in this pariſh, and partly in that of Wrabneſe.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. John Baptiſt, or St. Laurence, is ſituated in a fair open place, near the road that leads to Wics, Wrabneſe, and Ramſey. It is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. The Steple is ruinous, and partly down. In it were three Bells.

This Church was given by William de Ramis, in free and perpetual alms, to the Prior and Convent of St. Bartholomew, Smith-field: which grant was confirmed by K. Henry III. 15 July 1253. Afterwards the great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained, which continued in their gift till the ſuppreſſion; when both the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage came to the Crown. The Prior and Convent of St. Bartholomew's had here 16 meſſuages, 111 acres of arable, which were holden by their tenants in villenage by ſeveral ſervices. There belonged to the Church one meſſuage containing 2 acres, and in three crofts 31 acres of arable, and 5 acres and a half of wood: and there belonged to the Vicarage one meſſuage, and 16 acres of land. The Prior and Convent had View of Frank-pledge of all their tenants, who came upon ſummons to the next Court after Michaelmaſs, and collected among themſelves, and paid 2s. to the Ward of Colcheſter-caſtle. Hence the Rectory or Parſonage came to be ſtyled a Maner.

Both Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, continued in the Prior and Convent till their ſuppreſſion; when they came to the Crown.

After that, they were in William Waldegrave Eſq; and then in the families of Goodwin, and Barker, of Miſtley, till after 1620. Paul Viſcount Bayning purchaſed them of Barker; and he and his ſon enjoyed them.—Anne, eldeſt daughter of the laſt Lord Bayning, brought them in marriage to her huſband Albrey de Vere, the 20th Earl of Oxford. He ſold the reverſion of this eſtate, as that of Miſtley, to Edward Peck, and Edward Rigby Eſqres.—Edward Rigby, Eſq; had the impropriate Tithes, and the advowſon of the Vicarage, in 1706; and they belong now to his grandſon, the Rt. Hon. Richard Rigby Eſq; who hath alſo in this pariſh about Seventy acres of land, one part of which is called Cricks.

Bradfield pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 530 l. 2s. 6d.

15. WICKES

is the next pariſh in order, lying eaſt and ſouth of Bradfield.

The name is otherwiſe written in records, Wica, Wics, Wikes, Wykes, Wixe; and is derived from the Saxon word, Ƿic, ſignifying a village, caſtle, farm, or dairy.

In this pariſh are four Maners. 1. The maner of Wickes, or Park-hall. 2. . . . that of Carbonells. 3. The maner of Hamſtall. 4. The maner of the Abbey, or Nunnery.

The Maner of Wics, or Wykes, otherwiſe Park-hall, is the capital maner in this pariſh.

Queen Edeva had it in Edward the Confeſſor's reign; And, at the time of the Survey, it was holden by Walter the Deacon [E]. He left two ſons, Walter ſurnamed Maſcherell, and Alexander ſtyled de Waham or Wix; alſo a daughter named Editha. Alexander having no iſſue by his wife Aelia, granted his lands of his own acquiring in Wikes and elſewhere [F], within the Hundred of Tendring, to Ralph ſon of William ſon of Robert; for which his lord William, ſon of Robert, and father of Ralph gave him 30 marks of ſilver, and one ſaddle-horſe (u).

From this Walter deſcended the noble Family ſurnamed de Haſtings, lords of the Barony of Haſtings, which conſiſted of 10 knights fees; one of which lay in Wikes, and for which Robert de Haſtings paid to the ſcutage of Normandy, in 1206 (w). The ſucceſſion of this family of Haſtings is thus recorded (x): Robert,——Alexander, whoſe wife was named Adeliza.—Ralph,——Robert,——William, had 3 ſons, Robert, Ralph, and John.——Ralph confirmed to the Church of St. Mary de Wikes, and to the nuns, the gift of Alexander de Waham his father's uncle, which his father William and his brother Robert had confirmed to them.

Little Eaſton was the head of the Barony of Haſtings: Delicia daughter and heir of Robert de Haſtings being married to Godfrey de Lovain, brother of Henry Duke of Brabant, brought him the Barony of Haſtings, and the 10 knights fees thereunto belonging, of which Wikes was one. [See in the other Volume, p. 430.] Godfrey was ſucceeded by his ſon——Matthew de Lovain, or Loveyn, living in the year 1262; whoſe ſon——Matthew de Loveyn was father of——Thomas, that dyed in 1345; as did his ſon——John in 1347 [G]. The latter left two daughters coheirs, Alianore; and Iſabell who dyed in 1359, without iſſue (y).

her great inheritance to her huſband Sir William Bourgcher, to whom ſhe was married on or about the year 1365.

Under the families of Loveyn, and Bourchier, this eſtate was holden by the other great families of Baſſet, le Deſpenſer, and Bohun. Philip Baſſet, who dyed in 1272, held of Matthew de Loveyn, in capite, by the ſervice of 20s. a year, the maner of Wyke by the law of England, of the inheritance of Halewiſe his wife.——Aliva, Counteſs of Norfolk, wife of Roger Bigot, was his daughter and heir (z). Her ſecond huſband, Hugh le Deſpenſer held of Mattthew de Loveyn, a quarter of a knight's fee in Wykes (a). Probably, Roger Bigot Earl of Norfolk, gave it up to the Crown with his other eſtates. [See in the other Volume, p. 260. 269] For, by grant of K. Edward III. in 1332, William de Bobun, afterwards Earl of Northampton, had this maner in general tail, with ſeveral others in the Counties of Berks, Oxon, Buks, Lincoln, and Nottingham (b). At the time of his deceaſe in 1360, he held this maner of Sir William Boucher (c). His ſon——Humfrey de Bobun, Earl of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton, held the ſame at the time of his death in 1372 (d) [H]. He left two daughters coheirs, Elianor; married to Thomas of Woodſtock Duke of Glouceſter, and Mary to Henry, Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV.

Upon partition of the Bohun eſtates between K. Henry V. ſon of Mary, and Anne daughter and heir of Elianor;

Anne had this for part of her ſhare, together with a Park; then worth 26l. 13s. 4d. a year. From this Park, undoubtedly, the manſion-houſe had the name of PARK-HALL. It ſtands about a mile weſt from the Church.

Anne brought this eſtate into the noble family of the Earls Stafford. [See above, p. 193.] But upon Humfrey Stafford's, Duke of Buckingham, being killed at the battle of Northampton in 1460, fighting againſt K. Edward IV. his eſtates were confiſcated to the Crown.

K. Richard III. on the 13th of July 1483, granted it, among others, to Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, coſin and heir of blood to Humfrey Bohun Earl of Hereford, and rightful inheritor of ſuch inheritances as were of the ſame late Earl: but, upon his being beheaded not long after, all his eſtates reverted to the Crown (e).

In 1595, Qu. Elizabeth granted the Park of Wikes, with appertenances, to Gilly Merick; to hold of the Caſtle of Hertford, by fealty (f).

It belonged afterwards to John Philipſon, of Harwich, Eſq; Commiſſary to the Packet-boats, ſon of John Philipſon, of Kendall in Weſtmoreland, Gent. by Elizabeth daughter of Roger Colman, of Harwich, Gent. He married firſt, Rachel daughter of Robert Lane, by whom he had, Elizabeth, and three other children that dyed young. By his ſecond wife, Grace, daughter of Kendrick Ediſbury, Eſq; he had John, and Grace. He dyed 3 March 1742.——John Philipſon, Eſq; his ſon and heir, was elected one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for Harwich in 1741. 1746. and 1753. and departed this life 28 November 1756 [I]. By Suſanna his wife, daughter of Richard Burton Eſq; Commiſſioner of the Navy, he had one daughter and heir Suſanna, married to Robert Briſtow Eſq; They have one daughter, named Suſanna.

The Maner of CARBONELLS ſeems to be derived from the capital maner of Wics, which we have been treating of.

The Houſe ſtands in a field near the Church.

It took its name from ancient owners.

In 1280, John Carbonell received 14s. yearly of Aliva le Deſpenſer, daughter and heir of Philip Baſſet above-mentioned, for the maner of Wykes, which ſhe held (g).

K. Edward I. in 1301, granted to Robert Carbonell free-warren in his lands in Wykes; and in Newton, and other pariſhes in Suffolk; which grant K. Richard II. confirmed, in 1393, to Margaret Boteler &c. (h).

John Mannock Eſq; who dyed in 1476, held the maner of Carbonells, and lands in Wikes, Ramſey, Bredfeild, and Manſton, of Elizabeth, Queen of K. Edward IV.——George was his ſon and heir (i).——William Mannock Eſq; ſon of George, at the time of his deceaſe 8 June 1558, held the maner of Carbonalls, of the Queen, as of her Dutchy of Lancaſter.——Francis Mannock Eſq; his ſon and ſucceſſor (k), held alſo this maner of Carbnells in Wikes, and departing this life 3 November 1590, left——William his ſon and heir, who dyed 15 March 1615.——Francis Mannock, Eſq; ſon of the latter, was created a Baronet 1 June 1627; and departed this life 20 November 1634.——Sir Francis Mannock, Bart. his ſon and heir, dyed 26 April 1686, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir William Mannock, Bart. who departed this life 26 January 1713-14. His ſon——Sir Francis Mannock of Giffords-hall, Bart. ſold this eſtate to Alſo he held in Wykes 4 meſſuages, 340 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 8 of paſture, 60 of wood, of the heirs of Sir Robert de Kendall, by the ſervice of 13s. 4d. a year. The Maner of HAMSTALL is what Hugh de Montfort, and his under-tenant Roger, held at the time of the Survey. It had belonged, as well as the former, to Queen Edeva in Edward the Confeſſor's reign [L].

The lord paramount of this maner was Sir John de Sutton.

For Aleſia wife of Hugh de Groos, of Little Bentley, held jointly with him, in 1366, the maner of Hamſtall in Wikes, of Sir John de Sutton, by homage, and the ſervice of one pound of cummin, yearly.——William de Groos, her ſon and heir, dyed in 1368, poſſeſſed of the ſame; leaving——Thomas his brother and heir (m).

Sir Richard de Sutton had this eſtate in 1383; and dying in 1395, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas (n).

Margery, widow of John de Brokeſbourne, being remarried to Sir John de Sutton, this eſtate, or part of it, ſeems to have come into the Brokeſbourne-family. For, in 1409, when Idonea, formerly married to Edmund de Brokeſbourne, and then wife of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, dyed, ſhe held 40 acres of arable, 30 of wood, 10 of meadow, 20 of paſture, and 30 s. rent in Wikes, called Hamſtalls, of the Biſhop of London, by fealty only (o). In right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bourchier, had this maner called Hamſtall in Wikes (p).

It was afterwards in the Pirton family, of Little Bentley. Catharine, widow of Sir Wllliam Pirton, that dyed 10 September 1501, held the maner of Hampſtall with appertenances of the Prioreſs of Wykes, by fealty and yearly rent of 12 d.——William, the ſon and heir, then 40 years old, held alſo this maner, of the Earl of Oxford &c. at the time of his deceaſe 24 June 1533 (q). He was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir William Pirton, who departed this life 6 November 1552, leaving——Edmund, his ſon and heir (r). He dyed 20 October 1609, and his ſucceſſor was his couſin——Edmund Pirton Eſq; who dying 9 October 1617, was ſucceeded by his brother——William. [See above p. 446.] The latter ſold this eſtate to

Paul Bayning, Eſq; [M] from whom it paſſed, as the maners of Little Bentley, Miſtley, &c. to his ſon——Paul, and then to his grandſon——Paul, Viſount Bayning, and to——Paul, Viſcount Bayning, ſon of the latter, who departed this life 11 June 1638. He had two daughters coheirs;

Anne, married to Aubrey de Vere, the 20th and laſt Earl of Oxford, and Penelope to John Herbert Eſq; youngeſt ſon of Philip Earl of Pembroke, but neither of them left any ſurviving iſſue. The Bayning family held this maner of the Biſhop of London. This eſtate being veſted in the Earl of Oxford, he ſold the reverſion of it to

Edward Peck, Eſq; And it came to his grandſon——William Peck Eſq; upon the Earl's death 12 March 1702-3. His ſon——William Peck Eſq; ſold it to

The Rev. William Samuel Powell, D. D. [For a more particular account of the de Vere family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 292. and for that of Peck, p. 526.]

A NUNNERY

here, for Benedictine Nuns, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded in the reign of K. Henry I. by the ſons of Walter the Deacon, namely, Walter ſurnamed Maſcherell, Alexander his brother, and their ſiſter Editha. They endowed it with two carucates of land in demeſne, 7 villanes, in Wikes, and the Church, with a garden; and the third part of this vill, or pariſh, with appertenances; alſo 10 s. rent in Fintmores; and the Church of Chatteſham, in Suffolk. The foundation was confirmed by K. Henry II. who added five acres of aſſarts in Tolleſhunte, and gave permiſſion to the Nunnery to aſſart as far as a hundred acres in Eſſex; together with ample privileges and exemptions (s). From ſubſequent benefactors they had, in this County, lands or tithes in Purley; meſſuages and lands in Tendring, Myſtelegh, and Great Okele; the Church of Wormingford, given by Walter de Windleſores, and Chriſtian his mother; in Suffolk, lands in Chatteſham, Wulverſton, Swilland, liberties in Hintleſham, and the advowſon of Bildeſton-Church (t). In 1331, John de Brokeſbourn obtained licenſe to give 1 meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 10 of paſture, 15 of wood, and 20 s. rent, in Wykes, Miſtleigh, and Tendring, holden of William de St. Clere, to the Prioreſs and Nuns of Wykes, and their ſucceſſors for ever (u). And, in 1363, Sir John de Sutton of Wivenhoo, got leave, to grant them 1 acre of arable, in Tendring, and the Advowſon of the Church (w). But this grant did not take effect, for they never preſented. Chriſtina, daughter of Ralph de Wyndeſore, gave them a moiety of the Advowſon of the Church of Burnham: and Ralph de Hoding half a mark's rent in Ham-

Joane ſecond daughter of Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter; and afterwards Edmund, Earl Stafford, had the Advowſon of this Priory (y).

At the ſuppreſſion it was valued at 92l. 12s. 3d. a year.

Cardinal Wolſey having obtained, in 1525, the Pope's bull for diſſolving the leſſer Monaſteries, in order to endow with their revenues his Colleges at Oxford and Ipſwich; accordingly, Mary Abbeſs of Wixe, the ſame year, ſurrendred this Houſe to the Cardinal: and the King having confirmed the ſurrender, this maner was ſettled on Cardinal College in Oxford. But in 1527, Dr. Higgons Maſter of this College conveyed the Nunnery of Wixe to Cardinal-College in Ipſwich. Upon Wolſey's incurring a præmunire in 1528, this eſtate became veſted in the Crown by act of parliament. Two years after, K. Henry VIII. granted the ſite of the maner of Wixe to Sir Adam Forteſcue, by way of exchange. The ſame King granted afterwards this eſtate to Edward Gilbert, and Alice his wife. They had licenſe, 26 January 1561, to alienate the maner of Wikes Abbey which they held of the Queen, in ca. to William Veyſey, and Robert Veyſey or Veſcey, and Johanna his wife (z). We find it deſcribed as the maner of Wikes-hall alias Wikes-Abbey, and 10 meſſuages, 10 tofts, 1 dove-houſe, 10 gardens, 600 acres of arable, 80 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 100 of wood, 100 of marſh, 100 of furze and heath, and 56s. 8d. rent, in this pariſh, and elſewhere (a). —— William Veſey, ſon of Robert, at the time of his deceaſe, 4 July 1577, held the maner of Wixe, and the ſite of the ſame; and lands, meadows, and paſtures, parcel of the demeſnes of this maner; ſome called Edmund lands, Wichell, Forethenall lands, and Windnall. He married Joanna daughter of William Cardinal of Great Bromley.——William was his ſon and heir (b). He was ſucceeded by ——Robert; and he by——William Veſey.

Of the Veſey family it was purchaſed by . . . Warner, of Little Waldingfield Eſq; From him it deſcended to his three daughters and coheirs, Catharine, Elianora, and Anne. The eldeſt was married to Henry-Vere Graham Eſq; and had by him ſeveral daughters.—Elianora, one of them, was married to Sir William Bunbury, Bart.—Kitty, was married to the Rev. Langhorne Warren; and——Anne to Humfrey Hanmer Eſq;

John Abell held, in 1524, of the Prioreſs of Wykes 100 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 40 of paſture, and 4 of wood, with appertenances, called Spynells, in Wykes and Bradfeild (c).

The Nunnery did not ſtand where is now Wics-hall, built by the Veſeys, on the ſouth ſide of the Church; but it ſtood in a field not far off, where the moates are, or lately were, ſtill viſible; and on the ſite of it large trees were grown up.

POND-HALL, about half a mile north from the Church, belongs to Thomas Hickeringill Eſq;

Here is a Fair Auguſt 31.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Michael, was of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The ſteeple ſtood at the eaſt end. The Revenues of this Church conſiſting only of a ſmall ſtipend of 6l. 13s. 4d. a year, and no divine ſervice being performed for ſo ſmall a trifle, the Church was ſuffered to grow ruinous, and at laſt fell down. A ſmall Church was rebuilt, partly with the remains of the old one, by a ſubſcription amongſt the Clergy and Gentry, about the year 1740.

This Church was given to the Nunnery in this pariſh by the founders, Walter Maſcherell, and his brother, and ſiſter; and their grant, with the Church by name (d), was confirmed by K. Henry II. The whole Tithes were appropriated to the Nuns, and they employed ſome Clergyman to ſerve the Cure for the ſmall ſtipend abovementioned; and ſo it was found at the ſuppreſſion. It hath continued ever ſince a perpetual Curacy. In 1719, it was augmented by lot with 200l. by the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty: and 200l. more were raiſed by the neighbouring Clergy and Gentry.

In 1530 K. Henry VIII. granted the farm of the Rectory of Wixe to Windſor-College.

Qu. Elizabeth, in 1595, granted the Rectory of Wikes, with all the Tithes, to John Welles, and Henry Beſt, to hold in ſocage (e).

Edward Waldegrave, of Lawford-hall Eſq; who dyed 12 February 1621-2, held the Rectory of Wixe with appertenances, of the King, in fee-farm, by the yearly rent of 55s. 8d.——Anne, wife of Drue Drury, and Jemima afterwards married to John Lord Crew of Stene, were his two daughters and coheirs (f).

The Tithes are now divided. Part of them belongs to Thomas Hickeringill Eſq; — Mrs. Dundaſs has the Tithes of 800 acres of arable, and of 64 of wood.—And Mr. Ralph Bull hath another part.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 929l. 3s. 0d.

Earl of Bologne; the Biſhop of London; Ralph Peverell: and their under-tenants.

The Maner of OLD-HALL

The manſion houſe ſtands a little way north-weſt from the Church.

This Maner is what belonged to Earl Euſtace at the Survey [N].

Euſtace's grand-daughter and heir, Maud, brought this, among the reſt of her great inheritance, to her huſband K. Stephen.

In the reigns of K. Henry II. and K. John, Oger de Curton held two parts of a fee in Tendringe, of the Honor of Bologne (g).

Sir Andrew le Blund [O], by a deed without date, gave his maner of Tendring with the Advowſon of the Church, to his daughter and heir

Catharine. She was married to Sir Richard Battaile, or Betaile, lord of Wivenhoo maner, [See in the other Volume, p. 187,] and had by him two daughters, coheirs, Margery, married to Sir William de Sutton, and Anne to Peter de Taleworth.

Margery, and her huſband Sir William de Sutton, took this maner for their purparty, in 1298. ——Sir John de Sutton, their ſon and heir, had two ſons, John, and Richard. He was living in 1366, but I do not find the time of his death. ——Sir John, the eldeſt ſon and heir, held the maner of Tendring-hall, with the advowſon of the Church, of the heirs of Sir Hugh Blount, by knight's ſervice; and a tenement called Eldeſhonſland: He held alſo a tenement called Gernons, in this pariſh, of the heirs of Hugh Groos, by knight's ſervice. Departing this life in 1393, he was ſucceeded by his brother —— Sir Richard de Sutton, who held theſe ſame eſtates at the time of his deceaſe in 1395.——Thomas, his ſon, ſucceeded him (h) [P]. But this eſtate ſeems not to have continued in that family, or their heirs; but to have come into the Doreward family. For, in 1406, John Doreward Eſq; in conſideration of his acquitting K. Henry IV. of 200 marks his Majeſty owed him, got a licenſe to give the maner of Tendring-hall to the Abbey of St. John Baptiſt in Colcheſter (i). But this not being performed by Doreward in his life-time, the grant became void. His ſon,——John Doreward Eſq; founding an Hoſpital in Bocking, in 1438, endowed it with the maner of Tendring. And, the year following, William Talworth of Little Holand Eſq; who had ſome intereſt in this maner, as a deſcendent of Peter above-mentioned, releaſed to John Doreward, and his heirs, all his right in the maner called Le Olde-hall in the vill of Tendring (k). [See in the other Volume, p. 388.] His ſon——John Doreward Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe in 1476, held the maner of Oldhall, with the advowſon of the Church of Tendring, of William Pyrton Eſq; as of his maner of Bentley, by fealty. His ſon——John Doreward Eſq; held alſo the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1480 (l). Having no iſſue, he was ſucceeded by his uncle —— William Doreward Eſq; who left,——John, his ſon and heir, and Elizabeth married to Thomas Fotheringhay Eſq; Upon John's deceaſe in 1495 without iſſue, the three daughters of his ſiſter Elizabeth Fotheringhay ſhared the large inheritance of that wealthy family. They were, Margaret, wife of Nicolas Beaupre; Elena, wife of Henry Thurſbie; and Chriſtian, wife of John de Vere, afterwards the 14th Earl of Oxford (m). [For a more particular account of the Doreward family, ſee above, p. 289. 452. and in the other Volume, p. 162. 315. 385.]——Anne, widow of John Doreward Eſq; father of the laſt John, was during her life lady of this maner and had for her ſecond huſband Thomas Fenys. Under her Catharine Pirton, widow of William Pirton Eſq; held this maner, at the time of her deceaſe 10 September 1501.——William Pirton, her ſon, was then 40 years old (n).

Edmund Arblaſter, or Arbalaſter, Gent. who dyed 7 September 1560, held the maners of Tendring-hall, alias Oldhall, and Gernons, with the Advowſon of the Church; and a meſſuage called Bretts-hall, with divers lands, meadows, paſtures &c. therewith uſually lett, of Sir William Pirton, as of his maner of Bentley.——Edmund, his ſon and heir, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 10 April 1565; and having no iſſue, was ſucceeded by his three ſiſters and coheirs, Jane, wife of Henry Wentworth, Gent. Prudence, wife of William Scott, Gent. and Margaret, of William Mallowes, Gent. They had alſo the Maner of Little Holland (o). Between them were theſe Eſtates divided.—John Heton Gent. and Margaret his wife, [late the wife of William Mallows; it ſeems] had a third part of the maners of Tendring-hall, Garnons, and Bretts-hall.—Henry Wentworth Eſq; and Jane his wife, had the maners of Garnons, and Tendring-hall. What part William Scott had, is not mentioned. After having levied ſeveral Fines in 1568 and 1569, Jane wife of Henry Wentworth Eſq; ſold the maners of Tendring-hall alias Old-hall, and Gernons, and a capital meſſuage called Brettes-hall, to

William Drury, Eſq; or Sir John his ſon. This Family was of Rougham in Suffolk, and deſcended from Sir Roger Drury, who married Margaret, daughter and coheir of . . . Naunton. His ſucceſſors were, —— Sir William, —— Thomas,——John, —— John. This laſt married Elizabeth, daughter of John Goldingham of Belſted in Suffolk Eſq; one of the three daughters and coheirs of Thomaſine Liſton her mother, and had by her three ſons, Robert who dyed in his life-time in 1540, leaving by Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Tey of Layer de la Hay Eſq; Sir Robert &c. John Drury, the ſecond ſon, was of Eaton in Norfolk.——William Drury Eſq; the third ſon, and the purchaſer of this eſtate, was L.L. D. Judge of the Prerogative Court, and Maſter in Chancery. He lived at Bretts-hall in this pariſh. By Mary his wife, daughter of Sir Richard Southwell of Woodriſing in Norfolk, he had John, George, William, Robert; and two daughters, Bridget, married to . . . Babington, of Worceſterſhire Eſq; and Elizabeth to Charles Clere, of Stokeſly in Norfolk, Eſq; He dyed 7 May 1589, holding of Edmund Pirton Eſq; as of his maner of Little Bentley, a capital meſſuage called Brettes-hall, and the maner of Tendring-hall, or Old-hall, and 2 parts of 50 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 50 of paſture, and 4 of wood, dividable into three parts, called Gernons.——John Drury Eſq; his ſon and heir, then 16 years old (p), was afterwards knighted. He held the maner of Tendring-hall, and Advowſon of the Church, and the capital meſſuage or maner of Bretts-hall, with appertenances in Tendring, Weeley, and Great Bentley, of the maner of Little Bentley; alſo a meſſuage and lands called Old-houſe, Oldhouſe lands, and Cheſley feild; and Boughtons mill and lands in Tendring and Weely. By Anne his wife, daughter of Edmund Saunder of Charlton in Surrey Eſq; he had John, Southwell, William, and Robert: He departed this life 18 December 1619, and was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——John, then aged 16 years (q). His ſon——John ſold this eſtate to his uncle ——Robert Drury, Gent. who lived here [Q]. He married . . . daughter of . . . Welby, of London, merchant. Whether he had any iſſue doth not appear: but he left this eſtate, by his will dated 14 April 1691, to

James Clarkſon, Eſq; that took to wife Mary daughter of William Beriff of Mevaromes in Frating, and had by her Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, that brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband Henry Wale, of Little Bardfield, Eſq; They had two ſons James, and Henry.——James Wale Eſq; ſucceeded his father.——Henry Wale Eſq; his ſon and heir, is the preſent owner of this eſtate.

The Maner of GERNONS.

The ſite of this is at preſent unknown. But that here was ſuch a maner, is manifeſt from records. It took its name from the Gernon family to which it originally belonged, and for that reaſon was holden of their Honor of Stanſted-Montfichet, and of their ſucceſſors the family of de Plaiz. Under Giles de Plaiz, who dyed in 1303, Roger Michell, and William de Billingford held 2 fees in the vill of Tendring (r). In 1327, Thomas de Poninges held half a fee in Tendring, under Richard de Plaiz: and William Baud held the ſame, in 1360, under his ſon Richard de Plaiz (s).

Some think, that this is what belonged in this pariſh to Thremhall Priory: but it is not certain. See in the other Volume, p. 580.

The firſt time we find it mentioned by the name of Gernons, is in 1384, when Margery wife firſt of John de Brokeſbourn, and afterwards of Sir John de Sutton, held in dower from her ſecond huſband Sir John, a certain tenement in the vill of Tendring, called Gernons.——John de Sutton had it in 1393 (t).

In 1512, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford held the maner of Garnons in Tendring of William Pirton Eſq; and was ſucceeded by——John the 14th Earl (u).

It went along with Old-hall from 1560 to 1569. After that it was divided between the coheirs of Arblaſter, and part came into the Wentworth family, and from them into that of Drury; namely two parts out of three.

Paul Viſcount Bayning, at the time of his deceaſe, 29 July 1629, held a meſſuage called Garnons, and lands therewith occupied, of the Biſhop of London, as of his maner of Little Bentley, in free ſocage, by fealty, then worth 3 s. 4 d. (w), which ſhews that it was only a part of the demeſnes.

We find them deſcribed, in 1569, as one meſſuage, 1 toft, 2 gardens, 40 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 30 of wood, 10 of heath and furze, 6 of more, and 20 s. rent (x).

As far as we can find, Gernons is incorporated into ſome of the other maners; or is one of thoſe eſtates in the pariſh, which go by other names.

In 1337, Anfrid de Stanton held here, of the Biſhop of London, 2 meſſuages, 60 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 30 s. rent, by the ſervice of the 40th part of a knight's fee (*).

The Maner of BRETTS-HALL

having gone a while with the two laſt, we ſhall take it into conſideration here. It was ſo named from a Family. See above under Bradfield-hall.

The manſion houſe ſtands above half a mile ſouth from the Church.

Edmund Arblaſter above-mentioned, at the time of his deceaſe in 1560, held one meſſuage or tenement called Bretts-hall, with divers lands, meadows, &c. thereto belonging, of Sir William Pirton, as of his maner of Little Bentley. After the death of his ſon——Edmund, in 1565, it was divided amongſt his three Siſters and coheirs. John Heton, Gent. and Margaret his wife, had a third part of it: Henry Wentworth, and Jane his wife, had another third part (y); and at length, it ſeems, the whole: which was conveyed by them to the Drury family, in which it continued ſeveral years.——William Drury Eſq; had it in 1589 (z).

Afterwards it came into the family of Bowes, of Great Bromley. [See above, p. 442.]——Thomas Bowes Eſq; the laſt heir male of the family, dying without iſſue, 12 March 1747-8, it deſcended to his ſiſter——Bridget, widow, of Read Grimſton, Gent. ſtill living. For a further account of the Bowes family, ſee above, p. 442.

The Maner of NEW-HALL is now reckoned the chief Maner in this pariſh, the others keeping no Courts. It was undoubtedly ſo named in contradiſtinction to the other Maner of Old-hall.

This maner is what Aluuard had before the Conqueſt; and, at the time of the Survey, was part of the Biſhop of London's fee [Q].

The firſt mention we find of it by the name of New-hall is in 1366, when Aleſia, and her huſband Hugh de Groos, held jointly the maner of Tendring called New-hall, of the heirs of Thomas Stoddeye, by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee, and a pair of gilt ſpurs of the price of 6d. They held alſo in this pariſh, of the Prior of St. Botolph's Colcheſter, 60 acres of arable, formerly Peter att Hill's, by the ſervice of 15s. a year; and 20 acres called Wildis, of Sir John Sutton, by homage, and the ſervice of 20d. a year.——William de Groos was their ſon. He held the premiſſes at the time of his deceaſe in 1368, and was ſucceeded by his brother —— Thomas (a): [See above, p. 445.]

Sir Richard de Sutton had the maner of New-hall in 1383. He dyed in 1395, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas (b). From the Sutton family it paſſed, as Hamſtall in Wics, to Idonea, wife of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier. [See above, p. 468.] For, at the time of her deceaſe in 1409, ſhe held 100 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 20 of paſture, and 20s. rent in Tendringe, called Newhall; and 80 acres of arable, 5 of paſture, and 2 of meadow, called Le Hide; all of the Biſhop of London, by fealty only (c).

Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bourchier, had it afterwards (d).

And then it came, as Hamſtall, into the Pirton family. William Pyrton Eſq; dyed poſſeſſed of it 24 June 1533 (e).

It was afterwards in the Cardinal family, a branch of that which formerly had Great Bromley. From the late Mr. William Cardinal, it came to his ſon——Clarkſon Cardinal, Gent. who hath ſold it to Charles Gray, Eſq; Lord of the Hundred of Tendring.

The Demeſnes had been ſeparated ſome years ago from this maner. The late John Philipſon Eſq; had them; and they belong now to

Robert Briſtow Eſq;

The Maner of HARESTILLS, alias HANHAM-HALL.

This maner is juſtly ſuppoſed to be what Ralph Peverell held at the time of the Survey [R].

We have a very imperfect account of its ſubſequent owners.

In 1474, Margery, widow of John Hanham, held, in Tendring, one meſſuage, 200 acres and half an acre of arable, 5 of meadow, 4 of paſture, and 17 of wood, of Sir John Doreward, in ſocage, by the ſervice of 3s. a year: and 100 acres and more, of Sir William Pyrton, alſo in ſocage, by the ſervice of 11s. a year.——John Hanham was her ſon and heir (f).

The account we have of this family is as follows. Sir John Hanham, knight of the H. Sepulchre, married Catharine, ſecond daughter and coheir of Sir Robert Mortimer, by Elizabeth ſecond daughter of John Howard Duke of Norfolk, and had by her——Sir John Hanham, of Eſſex, who married . . . daughter of . . . Long, and had by her——Peter, living in 1489; and Edward. This latter, by Agnes his wife, daughter and heir of Nicolas Reeve of Hitcham in Suffolk, Gent. gentleman uſher and carver to the laſt Abbot of Bury, had Robert Hanham, of Hitcham, where his poſterity continued. Peter, the eldeſt ſon, married . . . daughter of . . . Rookwood, and had by her——a ſon, whoſe ſon and heir . . . Hanham, of Tendring and Fanton, married . . . daughter of . . . St. Clere, and dyed without iſſue, having ſold and ſpent his whole patrimony [S].

This eſtate was afterwards in the Pyrton family. For William Pyrton Eſq; who dyed 24 June 1533, held the maners of Hamſtall [which ſeems to be a miſtake for Hanham-hall] and Newhall, with appertenances, in Tendring, and lands called Wyland, Smales, and Hellond, of John Earl of Oxford, Sir Humfrey Wyngfeild, Sir John Seynt-

This eſtate belongs now to Mr. Fox.

Wolfes

is another Maner, or reputed maner, in this pariſh.

The houſe is about a mile north from the Church.

This eſtate belonged to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, and was given to it, either by John Doreward, and Richard Fitz-Nicol, in 1406, under the title of the maner of Tendring, excepting the advowſon of the Church; being then holden of William de Ferrar, Lord of Groby, by the ſervice of 2 parts of a knight's fee (h): Or elſe it was part of the 483 acres of land, in Tendring and other pariſhes, which John Wawayn, and John Chateris, gave in 1364 to that Abbey (i).

At the time of the ſuppreſſion it was lett for 7l. 13s. 4d.

Queen Elizabeth, 5 April 1566, granted the maner of Wolfes in Tendring, with appertenances, late belonging to St. John's Abbey in Colcheſter, to Edward Lord Clinton, and Saye (k). The 17th of December 1602, ſhe granted the maner, farm, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of Wolves, in Tendring, to Timothy Lucy, to hold in free ſocage (l).

It belonged to James Smith Eſq; and now to ——Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart. who hath alſo in this pariſh an eſtate called Old-houſe, and Oders, or Odow's land; formerly Drury's.

Other Eſtates in this pariſh.

Mitchells, a maner or meſſuage formerly belonging to the Rainsford-family of Bradfield; and ſo named from Roger Michell, who held, jointly with William de Billingford, 2 fees in Tendring, in 1303 (*).

Pilcocks, a meſſuage with 100 acres of land, formerly belonging to the Grimſton family, now to John Harriſon, Gent.

Brockets, belongs to the widow of Henry Bevan, Eſq;——Foulſhams, . . . to Mr. William Dennis.——Swallows Roſe . . . . to Mrs. Edwards.—A farm called the Folly . . . to Clarkſon Cardinal. — Mrs. Moore hath alſo an Eſtate here.

In 1263, John de Stodham held in the vill of Tendering 80 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 5 of wood, and 13s. 4d. rent, of the heirs of William Fitz-Adam of Goſfend, by the ſervice of one ſoar hawk (m). [See above, p. 291.]

In 1418, Joanna Filyoll held a tenement called Badons in Tendringe, and 80 acres of arable, and 6 of wood, of Hugh Stafford, Lord Bourgcher, by the ſervice of 2s. a year (n).

What eſtates theſe now are, or what parts of the others, that are better known, we cannot diſcover.

Here is a Fair September 21.

The Church, dedicated to St. Edmund, ſtands on an eminence, which hath a pleaſant ſlope or deſcent to the ſouth. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, tiled. In a wooden Turret are 4 Bells; above which is a Spire, ſhingled, painted of a leaden colour.

This Rectory was appendent to the maner of Tendring-hall, or Old-hall; as appears by the ſeveral inſtitutions in Newcourt [T]. Before the year 1663 it came into the Bowes family, Lords of Bretts-hall; of whom it was purchaſed by the Incumbents Bowtell, and Curtis. Of the laſt, Biſhop Compton bought it, and ſettled it upon Balliol-college for ever, of which he was Viſitor.

Tendring Rectory hath a large Glebe of about 80 acres, upon which was rebuilt a very good Parſonage-houſe by the Rev. Mr. William Bree, the late Rector; who thoroughly repaired the other edifices. This Parſonage-houſe ſtands a mile north from the Church.

There belongs alſo to this Living another Parſonage-houſe, a little way north-eaſt from the Church, wherein the Rector commonly reſides. It was greatly repaired by Mr. Bree; but moſtly improved, with additional buildings, and brick-walls round the Gardens, by the preſent Rector, the Rev. John Hunſdon.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 548l.

17. WILEY.

This pariſh joins to St. Oſith, and therefore is ſometimes called Wiley juxta S. Oſitham.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Weeley, Wiggele, Wigley, Wilege, Wyleigh, Wyrley; and ſeems to be derived from the Saxon words Ƿiʒa, a hero, a nobleman, or Ƿiʒ, a battle, and leẏ, paſture: Here, poſſibly, having been ſome remarkable battle fought.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign this pariſh belonged to Godwin: Eudo Dapifer held it at the time of the Survey [U].

It was divided afterwards into theſe two which is a good houſe, chiefly of brick, ſtands by the Church, moſt pleaſantly on an eminence; the lands about it falling in an eaſy natural ſlope, and having a good proſpect on moſt ſides, eſpecially the ſouth-weſt.

Eudo Dapifer gave this maner of Wilege to his Abbey of St. John Baptiſt's in Colcheſter, being the firſt mentioned in his Charter (o). [See under the Hiſtory of Colcheſter.]

It continued in that Abbey till its ſuppreſſion, being then lett to farm for 29 l. 6 s. 8 d.

In 1539, K. Henry VIII. granted, among other things, the maner of Wyleghe to Thomas Lord Cromwell: Upon whoſe attainder it reverting to the Crown, K. Edward VI. granted in 1553, the maner and park of Wileigh, and tenements here called Maykins and Brookes, to

Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs; to hold by the 20th part of a knight's fee (p). His ſon ——John Lord Darcy ſucceeded him; and had for ſucceſſor —— Thomas Lord Darcy his ſon, created Viſcount Colcheſter, and Earl Rivers, who departed this life 21 February 1639, without ſurviving iſſue male. [For a further account of this family, ſee above, p. 457.] His eldeſt daughter, and coheir,

Elizabeth, widow of Sir Thomas Savage, and Counteſs Rivers, ſold this eſtate to William Weoley, or Weeley, Eſq; This family was originally of Camden in Glouceſterſhire. William, the purchaſer of the eſtate, was ſon of Thomas, and grandſon of Richard Weoley of London. He married Martha, daughter and coheir of Jolliffe Lowndes, apothecary to K. Charles I. and had by her William who dyed young, another William, Stephen, John, Thomas; Martha, Judith, Jane, Mary, Anne.——Thomas Weoley Eſq; was educated at Hart-hall in Oxford, and the Inner Temple, London. He married, firſt, Catharine, daughter of . . . Paine, of Leiceſterſhire, Eſq; and had by her, Edward: His ſecond wife was . . . . . ——Edward Weeley Eſq; of the Inner Temple, the ſon and heir, having no iſſue, left this eſtate by will to

Samuel Weeley, Eſq; who was ſucceeded in it about the year 1743 by his heir at law

Samuel Weeley, Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor [W].

The Lodge, about half a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church, belongs alſo to Samuel Weeley Eſq; and other farms in the pariſh.

Crustwic is the other Maner in this pariſh, otherwiſe named Cattridge-hall, Cuſtard-hall, Cuſtridge, and Gutridge-hall.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church.

Of this maner the only account we have is as follows.

In 1301, Maud wife of Richard Batayle granted to her nephew Anfrid de Staunton 4 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 12 of paſture, 8 of wood, and 2 s. rent, in Wylegh, Great Bentley, and St. Oſyth; holden of the King in ca. by the ſervice of 12 d. a year only (q).——Margery, wife of Humfrey de Staunton, held the ſame in 1343, then deſcribed as 240 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 4 of paſture, and 18 of wood, of the King in ca. by the ſervice of 12 d. called Wardpennis, payable yearly by the hands of the Bailiff of the Hundred of Tendring for the time being.——Hugh Gros was her couſin and heir. They had alſo the maner of Alleſford. In 1358, Roger de Stonham, and Mabill his wife, held the ſame (r).

After that we have no account of this maner till 1580, when Edward Coke, and Charles Cardinall, recovered againſt George Knightley Eſq; Cruſtwicke, alias Cruſticke-hall maner, and 4 meſſuages, 3 tofts, 2 mills, 1 dove-houſe, 3 gardens, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 20 s. rent in Wileghe, holden in capite (s). It continued after this many years in the Coke family of Norfolk.——Robert Coke, of Holkham Eſq; married the Lady Anne, ſecond daughter of Thomas Oſborne, Earl of Danby, and Duke of Leeds. She was remarried to Horatio Walpole Eſq; but dyed without iſſue 4 Auguſt 1722. This eſtate being veſted in her, ſhe ſold it to William Feild, Eſq; He married Arabella daughter of Earl Rivers, by whom he had, Richard, an Officer in the Army; William, of the Inner Temple, Eſq; and Elizabeth, wife of Sir Richard Lloyd, Kt. one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

It belongs now to Richard Lloyd, Eſq; ſon of Sir Richard.

Here was another Littlle Maner, which Edgiva a noble woman, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, and her huſband, gave to the Church of St. Paul in London. It was lett to farm about the year 1200, for a yearly penſion of 40 s. (t).

Miſs Sarah Saville; William Lynch Eſq; Mr. Thomas Alefounder; Abraham Thorp; &c. have alſo Eſtates here.

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, ſtands pleaſantly on an eminence near the Hall, and is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Tower is built of bricks (remarkably large) and embattled, and in it are 3 Bells. The Church is well cieled and neat, and paved with ſquare ſtones. Here is a very handſom pulpit of oak.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner, which as we have ſeen belonged to St. John's Abbey, till the year 1237, when the Abbot and Convent gave to the Church of St. Paul, and to the Biſhop of London and his ſucceſſors, the whole Patronage of the Church of Wyley: and it hath continued ever ſince in the collation of the Biſhops of London.

The Parſonage-houſe, which is thatched, and one of the worſt in the kingdom, ſtands about a mile ſouth ſouth-weſt from the Church, at the bottom of a little dirty and ſquealy heath, upon the confines of the pariſh of St. Oſith. A Barn, and a few other out-houſes, ſtand in the ſame yard. There is about the houſe a ſmall Glebe of 7 acres; and a piece of Glebe more, of two roods, about half a mile north of the other, by the right hand ſide of the road leading from the Parſonage to Weeley-ſtreet.

CLACTON.

Here are two contiguous Pariſhes ſo named, and diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great and Little. They were not diſtinct at the time of the Survey. The name is otherwiſe written in records Clachintun; Claſton; and Claſton; and from whence it is formed I cannot well ſay, unleſs it is from the Saxon words, Clæᵹ, clay, and tun, a town, village, or farm.

18. LITTLE CLACTON

being neareſt to the laſt Pariſh I have been deſcribing, I therefore begin with it. Before the Conqueſt, and after, Great and Little Clacton, were part of the Revenues of the Biſhopric of London [X].

In this pariſh are two Maners. 1. The maner of Geddy-hall. 2. . . . that of Bovills.

The Houſes belonging to theſe two Maners are about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church, with a little Green between them. Geddy-hall is a new houſe.

The Maner of GEDDY-HALL, is otherwiſe ſtyled Engains, or Engayne.

It belonged formerly to the Priory of Thremhall in Stanſted Montfichet, but when and by whom given I do not find. [See in the other Volume, p. 580.]

After the ſuppreſſion, K. Henry VIII. in 1536, granted the maners of Thremhale, and Engayneſhall, to John Cary, and Joyce Walſingham, widow and their legitimate iſſue, to hold in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee (u). Sir John Cary, at the time of his deceaſe, 9 September 1552, held the maner of Engerſhall, with appertenances.——Wymond Cary, his ſon and heir, was then 15 years old (w). In 1565, 21 March, Qu. Elizabeth made him a grant of Thremhall Priory, and Engaynſhall among the reſt. The ſame year, he had licence to alienate the maners, meſſuages, and lands called Engaineſhall, Roſebridge, Perſtede, and Wantmeade, lying in Great and Little Clackton, Tendring, Welye, and Thorpe, to Henry Golding (x).

This eſtate was afterwards in the Drury family of Tendring. For William Drury, who dyed 7 May 1589, held the maner called Gyddy-hall, alias Eynegaynehall, and meſſuages called Peſtells, Roſebridge or Riſbridge, and Watmeade.——John Drury, Eſq; his ſon and heir (y), afterwards knighted, was ſucceeded by his ſon——John. [See above, under Tendring, p. 471.]

Edward Webbe, of London, Eſq; had this eſtate ſome time ago. It belonged afterwards to

Robert Baker, Gent. and now to Capt. Bagney.

The Maner of BOVILLS.

Of this we find very little account in records, only what follows; where it is called Devill alias Dovell.

In 1552, a fine paſſed between William Cardinall, Gent. plaintiff, and John Brokeman, deforc' of the maner of Devill alias Dovell, 4 meſſuages, and lands in Little Clacton; the right of William (z).

William Hubbard had this eſtate afterwards: And Samuel Travers, Eſq; of Great Holland.

It belonged lately to Samuel Holditch, of Witham, Eſq;

Cookes, a meſſuage ſo called, with divers lands &c. in this pariſh, were holden of the maner of Chiche by the Arblaſter family of Tendring (*).

Mrs. Turner; Mr. William Pikarel; Richard Ladyman; Thomas Bidwell; John Keble; John Sparling, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

Six pounds a year in land belong to the Poor, diſtributed amongſt them by the Churchwardens and Overſeers.

Here is an Almſhouſe for 3 dwellers.

This Church was given by Robert de Belmeis, or de Beaume, to his Monaſtery of St. Oſith. The Great Tithes were appropriated to it, and a Vicarage ordained and endowed, of which the Abbot and Canons remained poſſeſſed till their ſuppreſſion, when the great Tithes, and Advowſon of the Vicarage came to the Crown; and were granted to Lord Cromwell. Afterwards they paſſed to the noble Families of Darcy, and Savage.

The Advowſon of the Vicarage is now in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford; but the great Tithes belong to Col. Schutz.

19. GREAT CLACTON, lies ſouth of the other, nearer the Sea, towards the Gunfleet; and is the largeſt of the two, as the name denotes.

This pariſh belonged chiefly, by way of exchange or otherwiſe, to Richard de Belmeis, Biſhop of London, who made ſome of it part of the endowment of his Abbey of St. Oſiths. But another part remained in the See of London [Y].

There are in it four Maners. 1. The maner of Clacton; the manſion houſe of which ſtands on the north ſide of the Church. 2. The maner of Canons-hall, or Can-hall. 3. Aulton-park. 4. The maner of Colbaines.

The Maner of CLACTON, was in the Biſhopric of London, before the Conqueſt, and at the time of the Survey, as we have ſeen above; and Richard de Belmeis, biſhop of that See in K. Henry the Iſt's time, confirmed it to his ſucceſſors for ever.

They enjoyed it till 26 July 1545, when Bp. Bonner conveyed to K. Henry VIII. this maner of Great Clacton, Aulton Park, and the maner of Loddeſworth in Suſſex; by way of exchange for ſome other lands in Worceſterſhire, and elſewhere, which K. Henry ſettled upon the ſaid Edm. Bonner, and his ſucceſſors Biſhops of London (a).

In 1553, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Clacton with appertenances, and Walcote marſh, lands called Weſtwicke, the Rouch, See-land, the Cow-park, and the Parks of Acton and Clackton, all in this pariſh, to Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs. He had alſo then a grant of the or Aula Canonica, in this pariſh, of which I proceed to give an account: It had been granted before, with the reſt of the Abbey's poſſeſſions, to Thomas Lord Cromwell (b).

Can-hall, the manſion-houſe, is above half a mile weſt north-weſt from the Church.

It was called Canon-hall; and by contraction Can-hall, becauſe it belonged to the Abbot and Canons of St. Oſith.

Thomas Lord Darcy dyed 28 June 1558, poſſeſſed of the maners of Clacketon &c. and divers meſſuages, and lands in Clacketon, and the Rectories of Great and Little Clacketon: and, though Can-hall is not mentioned in the Inquiſition, he undoubtedly had it among the reſt. For his ſon——John Lord Darcy, at the time of his deceaſe, 3 March 1580-1, held the maners of Great and Little Clackton, and Can-hall; the Rectories of both Clacktons; and the tithes of Clackton, Biſhopſwic, and Jaywic; and a yearly penſion of 13 s. 4 d. out of the Rectory of Great Clackton. —— Thomas Lord Darcy, was his ſon and ſucceſſor (c). So that although the firſt Thomas Lord Darcy had obtained a licenſe, 25 June 1556, to alienate the maner of Canne hall alias Canons-hall, together with the Rectories of Great and Little Clackton, late belonging to, and parcel of the poſſeſſions of St. Oſithes monaſtery, with other lands (d) [Z], to Henry Windham, yet they remained in the Darcy family. However Henry Windham had licenſe, 8 May 1570, to alienate the maner of Canne-hall, alias Cannons hall, to —— John Lord Darcy (e).

From him the maners of Great Clacton, and of Can-hall, deſcended to Earl Rivers; and are now in

The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

But the demeſne lands both of Great Clacton, and of Can-hall, maners belong to Col. John Schutz; who hath ſeveral good Eſtates in the two Clactons, and St. Oſith.

AULTON-PARK,

is above a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church.

This, as far as we can find, is the Park that was made in this pariſh by Richard de Belmeis, wherein he incloſed the wood belonging to the Canons of St. Paul's, called Edulveſnaſe (*).

[Y] That plainly appears from hence; when this Biſhop made a Park here, he incloſed in it a wood called Edulveſnaſe, belonging to the Canons of the Church of St. Paul's: but fearing they might thereby loſe it, he ſolemnly reſtored it, and gave this maner to his ſucceſſors the Biſhops of London for ever. Dugdale's Hiſtory of St. Paul's.

[Z] Thoſe lands are deſcribed, as lying between Biſhops-well and Alton Park, late the Biſhop of London's, and Long-land thereto annexed; and Bennetts land; and the Biſhop's three Wics, viz. Creſwic, Biſhops-wic, and Clackton Jawic; together with Skilmasfield, and Buttiſhills; and the two Pond-pittels. Pat. 3 & 4 Ph. & Mar.

It went along with the Maner of Great Clackton.

K. Edward VI. granted it, in 1553, to Thomas Lord Darcy, by the name of the Park of Acton; together with Clackton Park (f).

It belonged lately to Samuel Travers, Eſq; who left it for Charitable Uſes.

The Maner of COLBAYNS, is otherwiſe called Colbrooke, Copt-hall, and Copping-hall.

A court is kept here.

Of this Maner we find little or no account in records: Only that Henry Parker, who dyed 15 January 1541, held the maner of Colbayns; and a tenement called Boytons, and 200 acres of arable and paſture thereto belonging, in Great Clakton, of the Biſhop of London, as of his maner here, in ſocage, by the yearly rent of 17 s. then worth 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. per ann. —— Roger Parker, his ſon and heir, was 17 years old (g). [See in the other Volume, p. 380.]

Jaywic farm, once Lord Darcy's, afterwards Garbat's, belongs to George Wegg, Eſq; who hath alſo Croſs-houſe, and Miller's, in this pariſh.

Pill-croft-farm, and Ironſide farm, belong to Mr. Abraham Thorp.

William Mayhew, William Feild, and Philip Dennis; Eſqres. Mr. Daniel Nicholſon &c. have alſo ſome Eſtates and lands in this parſh. Skirmans fee in Frinton extends into Great and Little Clacton.

One meſſuage, with 140 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 8 of wood, called Grays, and 10 s. rent; likewiſe another meſſuage, 20 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, and 2 of wood; all in this pariſh; were ſettled, in 1461, by Thomas Kemp, biſhop of London, on a Chantry founded by him in St. Paul's Cathedral (h).

St. Oſith's Abbey had alſo 1 meſſuage, 32 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, a marſh, and 20 d. rent, in Great and Little Clacton (i).

Here is a Fair June 29.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. John, ſtands pleaſantly by the Hall. Both Church and Chancel are of one pace, and tiled. The Tower, in which are 6 Bells, is 17 yards high to the battlements; and hath on the top a low ſhingled ſpire.

This Church was given by Richard de Belmeïs to his Monaſtery of St. Oſith; and the great Tithes being appropriated to it, a Vicarage was ordained, which continued in the gift of the Abbey till its ſuppreſſion, when the Rectory and Advowſon of the Vicarage came to the Crown; and were given to Thomas Lord Cromwell, who had them a very little while. In 1553, K. Edward VI. granted them both to Thomas Lord Darcy; and from him they deſcended to Earl Rivers. But now the Advowſon of the Vicarage is in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford, and the Rectory or great Tithes belong to Col. Schutz.

HOLLAND.

Two Pariſhes, called Great and Little Holland, lie along the Sea ſide, eaſt of the Clactons.

The name is derived from the Saxon word Hol, hollow, or from the Belgic, or Celtic, word Hoy, hay; and land. It is otherwiſe written in records Hoiland, and Hoyland.

20. LITTLE HOLAND

is neareſt to the laſt deſcribed pariſh of Great Clacton.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Leſtan, and afterwards Ingelric, were poſſeſſed of Little Holland; which Euſtace, the great Earl of Bologne, held at the time of the Survey, and Adelolf de Merk under him [A].

Here is but one MANER.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the north ſide of the remains of the Church.

About the year 1210, the Earl of Guiſnes mentioned above, p. 400. held one fee and a half in Little Hoiland of the Honor of Bologne (k). He had it afterwards in his own hands.

Fulk Baſſet, biſhop of London, held it in the year 1251; and Robert Earl of Guiſnes gave him the homage of Henry de Merk, a deſcendent from the foreſaid Adelolf (l).

This eſtate was afterwards in the Batayle or Betaile family. Sir Richard Betaile, at the time of his deceaſe, left two daughters coheirs, Margery married to Sir William de Sutton, and Anne to Peter de Taleworth. The latter had Little Hoyland for part of their ſhare. [See above, p.   and in the other Volume, p. 187.]

How long this family enjoyed the maner of Little Holland doth not appear.

Sir Hugh Stafford, Lord Bourchier, who dyed in 1421, held, in right of Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Bartholomew Lord Bourchier, chier, half a knight's fee in Little Holand, which had formerly been Nicolas Talleworth's (m).

The Abbey of St. Oſith had this maner about that time, of whoſe gift we cannot diſcover. But, their lands here being rendered unprofitable by the frequent inundations of the Sea, was one of the reaſons given for appropriating the Church of Elmſted to that Monaſtery (n).

Upon the diſſolution it fell to the Crown, and continued in it till it was granted to the Arblaſter family. Edmund Arblaſter, Gent. who dyed 7 September 1560, held the maner of Little Holland, with appertenances, of the Queen, as of her maner of Parkehall, parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, by fealty, and yearly rent of one penny, or one pair of hare-ſkin-gloves if demanded, in lieu of all ſervices, then worth 20l. a year.——Edmund, his ſon and heir, held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe 10 April 1565. and Jane, wife of Henry Wentworth, Gent. Prudence, wife of William Scott, Gent. and Margaret, wife of William Mallowes, Gent. were his ſiſters and coheirs (o). See above, p. 470.]

It paſſed from them to the Drury family of Tendring. For William Drury Eſq; who dyed 7 May 1589, held this maner of Little Holland of the Queen, as of her maner of Parkehall in Wicks, by the ſervice of 1 knight's fee, and one pair of hare-ſkin gloves, doubled or lined, and 2 d. a year, if demanded. —— Sir John Drury, his ſon, ſucceeded him (p).

This eſtate was afterwards in the heirs of Brian Darcy Eſq; of St. Clere's-hall in St. Oſith, and of Tiptre. His great-grandſon —— Sir Thomas Darcy, Bart. kept a court here 26 Auguſt 1691. His ſon, —— Sir Thomas, left at his deceaſe,—Sir George, a minor, who dyed young; and three daughters, Frances, married to Sir William Dawes, Bart. Archbiſhop of York; Mary, to Richard Boteler Eſq; and Elizabeth, to William Pierpont, Eſq; [See above, and in the other Volume, p. 139, 140.] Sir William Dawes ſold this maner and eſtate to Nicolas Corſellis Eſq; who held a Court here 2 October 1711. He gave it to his daughter Elizabeth, married to Capt. James Kettle. They leaving no iſſue, it came to Capt. Kettle's ſiſter's ſon,

Mr. Patrick Coppinger, who hath ſold it to Mr. Michael Hills.

The Church ſtood near the Hall, but was ſo much expoſed to the blaſts from the Sea, that it is demoliſhed.

This Church belonged to the neighbouring Monaſtery of St. Oſith, to which the Tithes were appropriated, they ſerving the cure by ſome of their own Monks; for there is no record of any inſtitutions thereto: ſo that it is a perpetual Curacy, the profits of it being annexed to Little Clacton.

After the ſuppreſſion of St. Oſith's Abbey, the Rectory, and Tithes of this pariſh were granted to Thomas Lord Cromwell, in 1539. Upon his attainder they reverting to the Crown, K. Edward VI. in 1553, granted them to Thomas Lord Darcy, and his heirs (q). From the Darcy family they deſcended to that of Savage; and to Elizabeth, Counteſs Rivers. They belong now to Col. Schutz.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 93l. 2s. 0d.

21. GREAT HOLLAND, lies by the Sea ſide, north of the other.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Leſtan was poſſeſſed of it, as well as of the laſt; and very likely they were then but one eſtate: Walter de Doai held this at the time of the Survey [B].

In this pariſh there is one MANER.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the north ſide of the Church.

In the beginning of K. Edward the Firſt's reign, this eſtate belonged to Robert Burnel, biſhop of Bath and Wells, and Lord Chancellor (r). His nephew —— Philip Burnel dyed in 1294, immenſely rich; holding, particularly in this pariſh, of the King, in ca. by the third part of a knight's fee, 1 meſſuage, 380 acres of arable, 19 of meadow, 45 of wood, 1 marſh, 46s. 2d. ob. rent of aſſiſe, with work of cuſtomary tenants, perquiſites of court, and a wind-mill. —— Edward Lord Burnel, was his ſon and heir (s).

In the mean time Philippa, eldeſt daughter and heir of Walter Bolebec, lord of Stanſted-Montfichet, and widow of Roger de Lancaſter, who dyed in 1293, held in Great Hoyland, of the King, in ca. by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee, 120 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, and 16s. rent of aſſiſe.——John de Lancaſter, her ſon (t), parted with this eſtate. [See in the other Volume, p. 577.]

Edward Lord Burnel, who dyed in 1316, doth not appear to have enjoyed this eſtate (u); but his ſiſter and heir,

Maud, did. She was married, firſt, to John Lovel; and afterwards to John de Handlo. In 1330, She and John de Handlo held this maner of Great Holland of the King in ca. as parcel of the Barony of Montfichet, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and yearly payment of 3s. to the ward of Colcheſter-caſtle. John de Handlo, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1346, held the ſame, by the courteſy of England, of the King, in ca. as parcel of the Barony of Montfichet, by the ſervice aforeſaid (w). His ſon Richard was dead before him; therefore he was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Edmund de Handlo. But he dying 1 June 1355, a minor, and without iſſue; the great inheritance came to his uncle ——Sir Nicolas de Handlo, who took the ſurname of Burnel from his mother. He held the maner of Great Hoyland, with the advowſon of the Church, in the ſame manner as his predeceſſors: and departing this life in 1382, left —— Hugh Burnel, his ſon and heir; who held this maner of the King, in ca. by the ſervice of the third part of a knight's fee. He dyed in 1420, having only theſe three Daughters coheirs, Joice, wife of Thomas Erdyngton jun. Catharine Burnell, and Margery wife of Edmund Hungerford (x).

In the mean time, ſome branches of the Burnel family were intereſted in this eſtate. For, in 1417, a fine paſſed between Joane wife of Sir William de Beauchamp, of Bergavenny, and others, plaintiffs, and Sir John Burnell of Holcgote, deforc' of the maner of Holand, and the Church of this pariſh; with lands in Hatfeild-Peverell and Boreham (y). And, in 1439, Elizabeth, wife firſt of Sir Thomas Criſton, and afterwards of Sir Edward Burnel, held for her life the maner of Holand, of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice (z). [For a more particular account of the Burnel and Handlo families, ſee above, p. 14. and in the other Volume, p. 12. 92. 577.]

James Boteler, Earl of Wiltſhire, who was attainted 4 March 1461, for his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, held this maner, with the advowſon of the Church (a).

K. Edward IV. gave them, in 1474, to Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, and Iſabell his wife, ſiſter of Richard Plantagenet Duke of York, that King's father. He dyed 4 April 1483, and was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex, who was killed by a fall from his horſe 13 March 1540, leaving an only daughter and heir, Anne Marchioneſs of Northampton. [See in the other Volume, p. 254.]

In 1542, May 1. William Stafford, and others, had licenſe to alienate the maner of Great Holland, with appertenances, and 20 meſſuages, 10 tofts, 1000 acres of arable, 400 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 100 of wood, 300 of furze and heath, 40 of marſh, and 20 l. rent, in Great Holland, Walton, Great and Little Claſton, Kirkby, Thorpe, Moſe and Beamond, and the Advowſon of this Church, to Sir Thomas Pope, and Nicolas Bacon, Eſq; (b). This ſeems to have been in truſt. For, in 1546, a fine was levied betwixt the King, plaintiff, and Nicolas Bacon Eſq; and Joane his wife, deforc' of the maner of Great Holland, the right of the King (c). And in 1551, K. Edward VI. granted this maner, and the advowſon of the Church, to Sir Thomas Darcy, afterwards Lord Darcy, who dyed poſſeſſed of them, 28 June 1558 (d). As did his ſon——John Lord Darcy 3 March 1580 (e).

As far as we can find, Elizabeth, Counteſs Rivers, ſold it about the year 1639.

In part of the laſt century, and beginning of this, it was in Joſeph Thurſton, Eſq; Recorder of Colcheſter. After his deceaſe, an act of parliament being obtained for ſale of part of his eſtates, by his widow Mary, daughter of Sir Iſaac Rebow, Kt. the truſtees under the act conveyed this Maner to

Mr. Daniel Bayley, of Colcheſter. He ſold it again to

Sir Richard Hopkins, of London, Kt. who dying inteſtate, it came, among the reſt of his coheirs, to his ſiſter

Elizabeth Barrow, widow. And Elizabeth Barrow, widow, and Rachel wife of William Stephens, of Hereford, coheirs of the firſt named Elizabeth Barrow, ſold it, in 1748, to

Robert Martin, of Row-edge, Eſq; He dying 7 November 1763, was ſucceeded by John Kirby Eſq; who hath married his only daughter and heir, Anne.

The Demeſnes are ſeparated now from this Maner; for when it was ſold by the truſtees, the Demeſnes were purchaſed by Samuel Travers Eſq; member of Parliament for New Windſor, and Secretary to the then Prince of Wales, afterwards K. George II. He left this, as well as Aulton-Park to Charitable uſes.

The late Samuel Holditch Eſq; had them as truſtee for his uncle's Charitable gift.

Mr. Samuel Newton; and John Blowers, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tiled. In the Tower are 4 bells.

This Church was at firſt a Sine-cure, appendent to the Maner, with a Vicarage endowed, in the Rector's gift; and ſo continued till after the year 1410, when they were united, and have remained ſo ever ſince as one Rectory. It went along with the Maner till Mrs. Thurſton alienated it; ſince which time it hath paſſed through ſeveral hands.

There belongs to it a large Glebe.

lies upon the Sea-coaſt, next to Great Holland.

The name is otherwiſe written in records Frientuna, and Fretuna.

Norden ſays, that in ſome records it is called Frunting, as being on the very front or brow of the Sea-cliff.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it belonged to Leveſin, and Harold; at the time of the Survey, it was holden, in almoſt equal portions, by Geffrey de Magnaville, and Euſtace Earl of Bologne [C].

Theſe two parts became very early united into ONE MANER; ſtyled the Maner of Frinton, alias Skyrmans fee, and ſaid in the Court-rolls to extend into the Pariſhes of Great and Little Clacton.

Frinton-hall ſtands upon the beach, about half a mile eaſt north-eaſt from the Church.

About the reign of K. Henry II. this eſtate belonged to the Tregoz family, of Tolleſhunt-Tregoz or Darcy.

In 1205, a fine paſſed between Peter Tregoz, pet'. and Geffrey de Bereford, for land of 100 s. with appertenances in Freintone (f).——Nicolas Tregoz, who dyed in the reign of K. Edward I. had four Siſters coheirs, Lucy, married to . . . de Bois; Alice, to . . . de Burnham; Joane, to . . . de Ludham; and Hawiſe, to . . . . de Gernon. [See above, p. 395.]

Alice, and her huſband, to whom this eſtate was allotted for their purparty, had a ſon and heir named——James de Burnham. He dyed in 1295, and was ſucceeded by his brother, or ſon, ——Hubert (g). Of the ſame family was——Geffrey de Burnham, who preſented to this living in 1321.

Under Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Eſſex, who dyed in 1298, John de Leys held two knights fees in Frynton, and Shelſteye, [Shelley] (h).

In 1392, John Rokele held the maner of Frynton of Thomas de Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee (i).——Geffrey de Rokett, or rather Rokell, preſented to the living in 1421, and 1426. Of this Geffrey,

John Godmanſton, of Little Bromley, purchaſed a moiety of the maner of Frynton, and of the Advowſon of the Church, for the ſum of 500 marks; of which he paid in part 80l. in 1440; and a ſixth payment of 50 marks, in further part of the ſaid ſum of 500 marks, in 1445 (k). The Godmanſton family remained poſſeſſed of the maner and advowſon from 1426 to 1473, or rather to 1495. For, Joane widow of William Godmanſton taking to her ſecond huſband Gilbert Huſſy, Eſq; they jointly preſented to the Living in 1493 and 1495 (l). Her firſt huſband, William Godmanſton Eſq; loſt his life at Barnet feild, 14 April 1471, fighting for K. Henry VI. She held this eſtate in dower till her deceaſe about the year 1498. After which it came to Philippa, ſiſter of William Godmanſton, aforeſaid. She was married to Henry Warner, Gent. and had by him an only daughter,

Chriſtiana, whoſe firſt huſband was William Brown Eſq; and her ſecond Humfrey Dymock Eſq; [For a further account of the Godmanſton family, ſee above, p. 439.]

Sir Ralph Chamberlain was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate. His grandaughter,

Mary Gray, was married to Francis, or Henry, Cockain, and being his widow in 1576; ſhe preſented to this living. Their daughter and heir, Dorothy, took for her huſband William Pirton of Little Bentley Eſq; who, in her right, preſented to this living in 1585 (m). Of them this eſtate was purchaſed by

Edward Grimſton, of Bradfeild, Eſq; He held his firſt court here 11 Auguſt 1603. and, at the time of his deceaſe, 16 Auguſt 1610, held the maner of Skirmans fee, alias Frinton-hall, in Frinton and Kirkeby.——Sir Harbottle, his ſon and heir, was created a Baronet 25 November 1612, and departing this life in 1648, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Harbottle Grimſton, Bart. His heirs ſold this eſtate to Thomas Warren, of Wapping, mariner, who preſented to the Rectory in 1691. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Culmer, of Deal, and had by her Jeremy; Thomas: Joane, wife of James Buſhell, of Little Holland, mariner, and Martha.——Jeremy Warren, the eldeſt ſon and heir, had, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of —Greenglaſſe, of Suffolk, Gent. two daughters, Lucy, and Joanna.

Sir Richard Hopkins, Kt. purchaſed it; and from him it deſcended to his heir at law

Sir Edward Bellamy, one of whoſe daughters brought it in marriage to George Lynne of Southwic, Eſq; Frinton-wic belongs to Mr. Michael Hills.

Thomas Scipper hath alſo ſome land in this pariſh.

Not far from the Church is a pretty little Houſe and Gardens, belonging once to the famous Cornelius a Tilbury, who, in K. William's reign, eat a great quantity of poiſon, and yet ſurvived it.

Either this, or another, in this pariſh, belonged to the famous Capt. James Buſhell, who was ſo ſucceſsful in fiſhing for wrecks.

The Sea-ſhore here affords plenty of copperas.

The CHURCH, or rather its remains, are on a riſing ground by the Sea-ſide. Nothing of it is ſtanding, but part of the weſt end.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

Frinton pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 143l.

23. THORPE,

is one of thoſe three Pariſhes, lying in a line from weſt to eaſt, that are called the Sokens, vulgarly Sookins: which name of Soken, or rather Socen, is derived from the Saxon word Soc, or Soca, ſignifying a peculiar power, authority or liberty to adminiſter juſtice and execute laws, within itſelf, and likewiſe the circuit or territory wherein ſuch power is exerciſed [D].

Theſe three Pariſhes were ſo ſtyled, becauſe they were peculiars belonging to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's London, exempt from the Archdeacon's juriſdiction, and alſo from the Commiſſary's. The Dean and Chapter enjoyed thoſe Privileges, with the Maners, till they were taken from them by K. Henry VIII. On the 2d of March 1553, Qu. Mary I. united and annexed theſe three Pariſhes to the juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London (n); ſince which time they have been ſubject to the Biſhop's Viſitations, who alſo grants inſtitution and induction to the Vicars.

The Cuſtoms in the Soken, as to lands, are particular. They are moſtly copyhold, but very near as good as free. 1. They pay twelve pence an acre for a Fine, and two ſhillings for a cottage. 2. They may pull their houſes down without a licence. 3. They may alſo cut down their ſmall trees. 4. They may grant a Leaſe even for fifty years.—And indeed do moſt things contrary to the cuſtoms of other copyholds.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted to Sir Thomas Darcy the maners of Thorpe, Kirby, and Walton; the Park of Thorpe; lands there called Beldams; the Rectories of Thorpe, Kirby, and Walton; and the advowſons of thoſe three Vicarages, with their ſingular Privileges. Theſe Privileges have deſcended from him to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford. He ſtyles himſelf Lord of the Liberty, Franchiſe, Dominion, and peculiar Juriſdiction of the Soken in the County of Eſſex; and appoints a Commiſſary, who takes the title of Official principal and Vicar-general in ſpiritual cauſes to the ſaid Lord. This Commiſſary keeps court at Thorpe every three weeks, as occaſion ſerves, and proves wills and teſtaments within the Soken; which wills are kept in the Church of Thorp.

The Lord of the Soken hath alſo this temporal excluſive Privilege, That no Bailiff can arreſt within them, but his own.

The diſtrict including theſe three Pariſhes, and containing then thirty manſes, and about 4000 acres of land, was given to the Church of St. Paul by K. Athelſtan, before the year 941, under the name of Eadulfeſneſa (o).

Under the ſame name, a little altered to Adulnaſa, it was found to belong to the Canons of St. Paul, at the Survey [E]. And there is no other name than that, in Domeſday-book, for the whole diſtrict, which then unqueſtionably was not divided into the three pariſhes.

Eadulfes-næſe, was formed from Eadulf, a Saxon Thegn, mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle (p), and næſe, a promontory, or point of land, jutting out into the Sea; there being ſuch a remarkable one at Walton, called the Naſe.

Thorpe in Saxon ſignifying a Village, this place ſeems to have been dignified by that name, as The Village by way of eminence.

In this pariſh are two Maners. 1. The maner of Thorpe. 2. The maner of Landmere.

The Maner of THORPE.

Thorpe-hall, the manſion houſe, is about half a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

This Maner, as we have ſeen, belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, till taken from them by K. Henry VIII.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Thorpe, and the Park of Thorpe, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (q).

Thoſe greedy hunters after concealed lands, William Tipper, and Robert Dawe, got, in 1589, a grant of the Maners of Thorp and Thorp hall, and of the Advowſon of the Rectory. As did, the ſame year, Gilbert Wakering (r).

But the Maner of Thorp, and the Advowſon of the Living, remained in the Darcy family, as the Eſtates in St. Oſiths, and other parts in this neighbourhood; and deſcended from them to the Earls Rivers, and to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

Thorp-hall, and the demeſne lands of the Maner have been long ſeparated from it. For, either Elizabeth Counteſs Rivers, or ſome of that family, ſold them to Thomas Wharton Eſq; of Grays-inn, Secretary to Queen Henrietta-Maria, mother of K. Charles II. He was ſon of Humfrey Wharton Eſq; and Catharine Senhous; a branch of the ancient and noble family of Wharton, and born at Reagill-grange in Shapp in Weſtmoreland; Juſtice of Peace for the Counties of Middleſex, Eſſex, Lancaſter, and Weſtmoreland. Departing this life 6 Auguſt 1669, aged 47 years, he was buried in the Chancel of this Church, with Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Andrew Browne of Lincolns-inn, Eſq; A neat monument was erected to their memory by their ſon and heir——Andrew Wharton Eſq; [F]. This eſtate being mortgaged by him, it came to

Henry Nurſe, of Mile-end: After whoſe death, it was ſold by decree in Chancery, in order to be divided, and purchaſed, in 1723, by

His eldeſt ſon——Stephen-Martin Leake Eſq; Clarencieux King at Arms, ſucceeded him, and is the preſent poſſeſſor. He hath written a moſt excellent Life of Sir John Leake, one Volume 8vo. of which only fifty copies were printed: and is alſo the Author of Nummi Britannici Hiſtoria: or an Hiſtorical Account of Engliſh Money, &c. The Rectory, or great Tithes of this pariſh, belong alſo to Stephen-Martin Leake Eſq;

The Maner of LANDMER,

Landmer-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands about a mile and a half north-eaſt from the Church, and is reckoned the oldeſt houſe in the pariſh. The flowing of the tide here making a Landmere, is what occaſioned the name.

We have very little account of this eſtate in records [H].

Robert Mortymer Eſq; who dyed 22 Auguſt 1485, held the maner of Lardiner [Landmer] hall, with appertenances, of the Dean of St. Paul's, as of his Soke, by fealty and ſuit of court; worth then 10l. a year.——Elizabeth Mortimer, his daughter and heir (s), was afterwards married to George Gilford. [Concerning this Mortimer family, ſee more above, p. 434, 435. 441.]

This eſtate was next in the Abell family. John Abell, of Fordham, and Weſt-Bergholt, Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe 26 June 1575, held the maner of Landmer-hall, with appertenances, of John Lord Darcy of Chiche, as of his maner of Thorpe, in ſocage, by fealty. ——Waldegrave Abell, his ſon and heir, ſucceeded him (t). But doth not appear to have enjoyed this eſtate at the time of his deceaſe 24 Auguſt, 1613 (u). It was then in

Paul Bayning Eſq; who dyed 1 October 1616, poſſeſſed of the meſſuage, farm, and lands called Landmer-hall; and lands called Pages, in Thorpe. His ſon——Paul Viſcount Bayning held the ſame, at the time of his deceaſe 29 July 1629 (w). Whoſe ſon,——Paul Viſcount Bayning, leaving only two daughters coheirs, Anne, the eldeſt, brought it to her huſband John de Vere, the 20th Earl of Oxford. From him it came, as the eſtates mentioned above, p. 447. to

William Peck, Eſq; whoſe ſon——William Peck, Eſq; alienated it to Richard Weſtley.

And he ſold it to

Robert Shearcroft, Gent. who hath made a quay near it, to load and unload veſſels.

Thorpe-Park, a conſiderable farm, belongs to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford:—Another, called Thorp Beldams, near the Church, belongs to Mrs. Burton: This laſt, was once the Lord Darcy's (*).

Mr. Thomas Rutland; and Thomas Hallam, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Thomas Howſe Eſq; who dyed in 1442, had in this pariſh, in right of Joane his wife, daughter of John Filioll of Thorp, one hide of land, called Le Hide in Thorp within the Soke; containing 120 acres; holden of Thomas Bekington, Prebendary of Holbourne, in the Church of St. Paul, London.——Walter Howſe, his ſon and heir, was 30 years old (x).

Comarques, a ſeat in Thorp, built by Capt. Comarque, and the Rev. Mr. Joſhua Liſle, belongs to Shaw King Eſq; who hath alſo an eſtate in this pariſh.

Henry Lamb Gent. hath alſo a houſe here; but his eſtates lye elſewhere. [See above, p. 433.]

Near the Church-yard are Alms-houſes for 4 dwellers, but no endowment.

Here is a Fair on the Monday before Whitſunday.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, or St. Michael, is large, conſiſting of a body tiled, and two aiſles, leaded; but the Chancel is of one pace, and tiled. In the Tower are 5 Bells.

This Church belonged to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and was a Rectory, till it was taken by K. Henry VIII. and given by K. Edward VI. to Sir Thomas Darcy. Then the great Tithes were taken from it, and a Vicarage endowed. The Advowſon of the Vicarage hath continued ever ſince in Sir Thomas Darcy's heirs, and is now in the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford. But the great or impropriate Tithes belong to Stephen-Martin Leake Eſq; owner of Thorp-hall demeſnes.

Creſt: A carriage with a piece of ordnance thereon, proper.

[H] Between the pillars of the South aiſle, and the Church, under an arch, is the pourtraicture of an armed man, croſs-legged, holding a ſhield in his left hand, his feet reſting on a lion couchant, his head on a cuſhion, and his hands folded. By the dreſs it muſt be as old as the time of K. Henry III. or Edward I. Over him hangs his coat armour, being azure a lion rampant, argent, his mane or, between 16 croſs croſlets fitche: which are the Arms of Salberghe. Vulgar tradition reports, that it is for the King of Landmer-hall.

24. KIRBY

lies eaſt of Thorp, chiefly. The name is otherwiſe written in records, Kirbe, Kirkby, and Kirkeby; derived from the Saxon words Cyric, or Kirk, a church; and bi, near, or bye, a dwelling.

This is one of the three Sokens, and belonged, as Thorpe, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; except Birch-hall.

In this pariſh are four Maners. 1. The maner of Kirby. 2. . . . that of Grove-houſe. 3. Sneddon-hall. 4. The maner of Birch-hall.

The Maner of KIRBY.

Kirby-hall, the manſion houſe, is near the weſt end of the Church.

The lord of the Soken keeps his court, on St. Anne's day, here, as being the center of the Soken.

This Maner continued in the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, till taken from them by K. Henry VIII.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Kirby, alias Kirkby, and the rectory, and advowſon of the Vicarage, to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body (y). From him they paſſed to his ſon——John Lord Darcy, and to the Savage family; and the maner is now in the Rt. Hon. the Lord Rochford.

The demeſne lands were ſold from the maner by Elizabeth Counteſs Rivers, to John La Motte Eſq; Alderman of London; who gave them to his daughter the Lady Heſter, wife of Sir Thomas Honywood, of Markeſhall, Kt. They have deſcended from them to——Lieutenant General, Philip Honywood. [See in the other Volume, p. 169.]

The great Tithes of this pariſh belong alſo to him.

The Maner of GROVE-HOUSE.

All the account we have of this eſtate, is as follows. Sir John Reyneſforth, who dyed 16 September, 1559, held the maner or tenement called Grovehouſe, with appertenances, of the Lord Darcy of Chiche, as of his maner of Kirkeby, worth 11 l. per ann. by fealty, and yearly rent of 28 s. His heirs were, Chriſtopher Edmonds; John Goodwyn; and Anne, wife of Henry Joſſelyn, Eſq; (z) [See above, p. 461.]

Robert Alefounder, of Dedham, was poſſeſſed at the time of his deceaſe 5 April, 1630, of this whole maner or capital meſſuage of Grove-houſe; and of a meſſuage called Faytes, and 126 acres of land therewith occupied, in Kirkeby; holden of this maner, in ſocage, by fealty, and rent of 18 s. 2 d.——Robert his ſon and ſucceſſor was then 40 years old (a).

MERELAND, a good eſtate in this pariſh and Walton, of which the manſion houſe ſtands about a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church, belonged to the family of Shaw (b).

John Shaw, of Colcheſter, Gent. by Mary his wife, daughter of . . . Lufkin of Ardley, had ——John, his ſon and heir; of Catharine hall, and Lincolns-inn; Member of Parliament for Colcheſter in 1659, 1660, and 1661; Recorder of that Town (c); knighted before 1664; created Serjeant at law 26 November 1683, and who dyed in 1690, aged 75. He married Thamar, daughter and heir of Samuel Lewis, of Roydon in Suffolk, Eſq; and had by her John, born in 1648; Samuel; Thomas; Jeremy: and 6 daughters, Thamar; Mary, wife of Joſeph Thurſton, Eſq; Abigail; Penelope; Hannah; Elizabeth. John, the eldeſt ſon, dyed 13 January 1681, before his father, without iſſue ſurviving; though he had three wives, namely, 1. Anne, daughter of Thomas Brome, of Kent, Eſq; 2. Penelope, daughter of Sir Thomas Dereham, of Norfolk, Bart. 3. . . . . Daniel, of Colcheſter, widow. By the firſt he had John, Thomas, Joſeph, Anne, which all dyed before him. Samuel, the ſecond ſon, was a Barriſter at law, but dyed unmarried, 16 April 1677. Thomas the third ſon, was Rector of Greenſted, and Great Holland, and departed this life 3 May 1692, aged 40 years.

Jeremy Shaw, Eſq; the fourth ſon, ſeated at Kirby, was a Juſtice of peace for this County. He married, firſt, Sarah daughter of Joſeph Barbar of Bedfordſhire, Eſq; His ſecond wife was Anne, daughter of . . . Hamond, of Oxfordſhire, Gent. widow of John Nicholas, Eſq; By the firſt he had——Gabriel Shaw Eſq; many years a Juſtice of Peace for this County. By Anne his wife, daughter of Edward Cremer, of Eaſt-Bergholt, Gent. he had his only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, married, firſt, to John King, Eſq; by whom ſhe had Shaw King Eſq; By her ſecond huſband, Mr. George Pickard merchant, ſhe had one ſon named Thomas.

Shaw King Eſq; ſucceeded his grand father in this and other eſtates. He married, firſt, Mrs. Catharine Slaney, by whom he hath one daughter living. By his ſecond wife he hath ſeveral children [I].

SNEDDON-HALL

is the other Maner I have mentioned in this pariſh. It is otherwiſe called Sneating, and Sneting.

The manſion houſe is near a mile north-weſt from the Church.

This is the endowment, or corps of one of the Prebends in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's London. It hath the 14th Stall on the right ſide of the Choir, and is rated at 100 s.

The Maner of BIRCH-HALL, otherwiſe the Maner of Birch-hou with Horſey.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the ſide of a hill, near a mile north from the Church.

Before the Conqueſt, Ingelric held this maner of the Church of St. Paul in London; Euſtace the great Earl of Bologne, and his under-tenant Robert, held it at the time of the Survey [K]. So that it was taken from St. Paul's Cathedral, to be granted to Earl Euſtace.

Afterwards it came to be part of the poſſeſſions of St. Oſith's monaſtery; but by whom given we have no account: However it was before the year 1437 (d).

The yearly value of Birch-how, alias Birch-hall maner, with Horſey, at the time of the ſuppreſſion of Abbeys, was 25l. 8s. 0d. (e).

In 1539, K. Henty VIII. granted this maner of Birch-hall in Horſey to Thomas Lord Cromwell (f). Upon his attainder, it reverted to the Crown, and continued in it till Queen Elizabeth, 24 June 1564, granted it to

Henry Fanſhawe, and Dorothy his wife, to hold by the 40th part of a knight's fee (g). [Concerning the Fanſhawe family, ſee more above, p. 4. 7.] How long it continued in the family of Fanſhawe we have no exact account; But have reaſon to think, that Mary, daughter of Thomas Lord Viſcount Fanſhaw, brought it to her huſband Sir Thomas Cambell. [See above, p. 7.] For Lady Cambell had it in the beginning of this century.

Mr. John Blatch of Colcheſter, merchant, and John Edwards, M. D. who married his third daughter, Sarah, purchaſed this eſtate. Dr. Edwards dyed 3 January 1757. His widow holds it now in jointure.

Horſey-iſland belongs to this maner.

Mr. John Bloſs hath alſo an eſtate here.

By the Church-gate there are Alms-houſes for the poor, and elſewhere in the pariſh, four in all.

Here is a Fair July 26.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle. The Chancel is only of one pace; the whole tiled.

This Church belonged to St. Paul's Church in London, and was taken from it by K. Henry VIII. In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the Rectory, and Advowſon of Kirkby, to Sir Thomas Darcy (h). From him the Advowſon of the Vicarage hath deſcended to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.—But the great Tithes belong to General Honywood, as I have already obſerved.

The Vicarages of Kirby and Walton were united by Bp. Gibſon in May 1730 (i).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 94l. 2s. 6d.

25. WALTON is the furtheſt of the three Sokens, bounded on the eaſt by the German Ocean. Part of it is a long ſlip of earth, running from ſouth to north, about three miles in length, and one, or leſs, in breadth. The flowing in of the tide makes it a peninſula.

The Wall thrown up on this ſhore to keep out the Sea, is what gave name to this town, or village; It extended conſiderably further eaſt than it does now, but hath been devoured by the Sea. Some have affirmed, that ruins of buildings have been diſcovered under water at a conſiderable diſtance. About five miles off from this ſhore lyes a ſhole of rocks, called Weſt rocks, which on a great ebb are ſometimes left dry: A ſpot amongſt them is called the Town. The raging ſea keeps daily undermining, and encroaching upon this pariſh, ſo that the Hall will ſoon be in an iſland.

The Naſe [L] is a point of land in the eaſt part of this pariſh, jutting into the ſea, well known to ſailors. Near it, the Trinity-houſe have erected a tower, or light-houſe, of brick, about 80 feet high from the foundation; for the direction and ſafe-guard of ſhips paſſing that way. The moſt northern part, or point, of the peninſula in this pariſh is called Walton-ſtone; and Goldmans gap is near the neck of land in the ſouth part of the ſame.

There is only one Maner in this pariſh.

Walton-hall, is the manſion houſe.

This Maner belonged, as the two other Sokens, to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and have paſſed from them to Thomas Lord Darcy, Earl Rivers, and the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rochford.

The other eſtates in this pariſh are; Walton-Aſhes; and another good farm, belonging to Philip Bennet Eſq;—A conſiderable eſtate, in Walton and Kirby, belongs to Shaw King Eſq; ——John Kirby Eſq; hath alſo an Eſtate here.— And Mr. John Wheely, or Wheeler.

A farm in this pariſh was purchaſed, in 1739, by the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty, for the Augmentation of the Rectory of H. Trinity in Colcheſter. It conſiſts of 55 acres, 3 roods, and 20 perches, of free-hold land, and about 34 acres of copy-hold: but it is too near the Sea, which undermines ſome part of it often.

Mr. John Bernard; William Stone &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

Here was formerly the endowment, or corps, of one of the Prebends of St. Paul's London; but the Sea hath conſumed or devoured it long 26. BEAUMONT with MOSE.

Theſe two pariſhes lye north of the Sokens; and were united and conſolidated by act of parliament in 1678. They belonged moſtly to the noble Family of De Vere, Earls of Oxford. We ſhall conſider them as diſtinct, as long as they continued in other Families.

BEAUMONT.

This French name ſignifies fine Hill; and was undoubtedly taken from the pleaſant proſpect there is from the ſpot where the Church ſtands over the Sokens, and out at ſea. It is otherwiſe written in records, Beamont, Beaumond, Bemond, and Bellamont, and Berners Beamont, from the Berners family that held it under the Earls of Oxford.

No mention occurs in Domeſday-book of this pariſh; which probably was then included under Moſe, or ſome other adjoyning pariſh. Nor is Bellamont, or Beaumont, mentioned till about 1242.

Here are two Maners. 1. The maner of Old-hall, and New-hall. 2. . . . . that of Bernhams.

The Maner of Old-Hall and New-Hall.

The manſion houſe ſtands on the north ſide of the Church.

In 1242, a fine paſſed between William le Bretton, plaintiff, and Matthew de Leyham, and Neſta his wife, tenants, for the maner of Bellamont in Eſſex, which Roheſia de Cockfield, mother of Neſta, held for her life, remainder to the ſaid William after her deceaſe (k).

And, in 1270, another fine paſſed between Peter de Champvent, plaintiff, and Richard de Tylbyr, impedient, for one meſſuage, and 120 acres of arable, the right of the ſaid Peter (l).

The lords paramount of this maner were the Earls of Oxford. For, Ralph Berners, who dyed in 1297, held in Beamund of Robert de Vere, the 6th Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of 3 parts of a knight's fee, 1 meſſuage, 180 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 6 of paſture, 16 of wood, and 9 s. 4 d. rent.——Edmund Berners, his ſon and heir, was 30 years old (m). Under John de Vere, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358,——John de Berners held two parts of a fee in Beaumond; and John Sencler the twelfth part of a fee in the ſame place; and the advowſon of the Church (n). Robert de Vere, the 9th Earl of Oxford, Marquiſs of Dublin, and Duke of Ireland, being baniſhed the realm, and all his poſſeſſions confiſcated: and Sir James de Berners, one of the declared enemies of the publick, a favorite of K. Richard II. being executed for treaſon; this, among the reſt of their eſtates, fell to the Crown.

K. Richard II. 10 July 1389, granted the maner of Beamond, for the ſum of 250 marks, to Joane de Bohun, Counteſs of Eſſex and Hereford; and to John de Ondely, Ralph de Ondely, Cl. and John de Hermeſthorp (o) [M].

But the Honors and Eſtates of the noble Family of De Vere being reſtored to Alberic, the 10th Earl of Oxford: and Richard de Berners recovering his father Sir James's inheritance, they both had their proper right in this eſtate. Accordingly the Earl, at the time of his deceaſe in 1400, held the maner of Bewmond of the King, in capite, by knight's ſervice. And had two fees beſides in this pariſh, of which half an one was in his hands, and one fee and a half in John Armyſthorp, or Hermeſthorp (p), by virtue of K. Richard's grant. But the right of the Berners family ſtill ſubſiſted; For Richard de Ferrers departing this life in 1421, left

Margery, his only daughter and heir, married firſt to Richard de Feriby; and afterwards to John Bourchier, fourth ſon to William Earl of Eu, who in her right bore the title of Lord Berners (q). John Ferby, moſt probably her ſon, preſented to the Living in 1429, being ſtyled lord of Beaumont. She herſelf, jointly with her huſband John Lord Bourchier, preſented in 1473 (r). He departed this life 21 May 1474, and ſhe in December 1475. They held this eſtate of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of Glouceſter (s): for John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford, with his eldeſt ſon Aubrey, falling a ſacrifice to the unhappy contentions between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, and being beheaded 26 February 1461, K. Edward IV. gave the chief of their eſtates to his brother Richard.

In 1451, a fine was levied between Richard Paulyn, Cl. and others, plaintiffs, and Thomas Ondely, and Joane his wife, deforc' of this maner and advowſon of the Church, the right of Richard Paulyn. Fine. term. Trin.

The latter, in the firſt of his reign, 25 July 1483, granted this to John Howard, Duke of Norfolk (t). His enjoyment of it was ſhort; for he being killed at Boſworth field, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, had his father's Honors and Eſtates reſtored to him by K. Henry VII. At the time of his deceaſe, 10 March 1512, he held the maner of Beamont Old-hall, with appertenances, of William Pirton Eſq; worth 10l. a year.——John the 14th Earl ſucceeded him (u).

How this eſtate came afterwards to the Crown we do not find; unleſs it was through the Duke of Somerſet's means in the manner related in the other Volume, p. 293. note [P]. However K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted, among other things, to

Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body, the maners of Old-hall and New-hall, and Beaumont, and the Advowſon of the Church. He dyed poſſeſſed of them 28 June 1558. His ſon ——John Lord Darcy ſucceeded him (w): from whom they deſcended to the—Earls Rivers, &c.

This eſtate belonged afterwards to the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Guilford, who ſold it ſome years ago for the uſe of Mr. Thomas Guy's Hoſpital.

Here was formerly a Park.

The quit-rents of this maner are 7l. 19s. 9d. $\frac{1}{2}$.

This maner has the Royalty of fiſhing, and Hunckford water, and Oylford bed.

BERNHAMS

was a meſſuage in this pariſh, or reputed Maner derived from the other, but the ſite of it is now quite unknown.

All that we find concerning it are theſe few particulars.

In 1393, K. Richard II. granted to John Hundelby, Cl. a meſſuage called Bernhams in Beaumont, late Robert Vere's Duke of Ireland (x).

About the reign of K. Edward IV. it belonged to the Tanfeild family.

William Tanfeild, who dyed 26 November 1487, held the maner of Bernhammes of John Lord Berners, worth 100s. a year. —— Robert Tanfeild, of Everton, his nephew, was his heir (y).

Thomas Chriſtmas, at the time of his deceaſe 5 February 1519, held the maner of Barnhams, with appertenances, of Elizabeth Counteſs of Oxford, as of her maner of Beamont-hall.—John Chriſtmas, his ſon then 30 years old ſucceeded him (z). See above, p. 377.

Robert Alefounder, of Dedham, who departed this life 5 April 1630, held the maner of Barnhams, and 120 acres of land thereto belonging, in Beamont, Weeley, Tendring, and Thorpe, of Earl Rivers, as of his maner of Old-hall and New-hall in Beamont, in free ſocage, by fealty, and 4s. rent.——Robert, was his ſon and heir (a). See under Kirby.

This eſtate, as far as we can find, is incorporated into the other.

MOSE.

This pariſh lies along the Sea ſide; a little north of the other; and is otherwiſe written in records Mooſe, and Moyſe.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign Leueſun was poſſeſſed of it: At the time of the Survey it was held by Geffrey de Magnaville [N].

Here is but one MANER.

Moſe-hall, the old manſion houſe, lies near the Water ſide.

New Moſe-hall is by the ruins of the Church, in a bottom.

In the reign of K. Henry II. William de Botever held two fees here under Geffrey de Mandeville (b) [O].

Maud, daughter of Geffrey Fitz-Piers, heireſs of the Mandeville family, brought this eſtate to her huſband Henry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, and in her right Earl of Eſſex; High Conſtable of England. In this family it continued for ſome time.

Humfrey de Bohun, who dyed 17 January 1372, had 2 fees in Moſe and Maſchebery which William Boteveleyn formerly held (c). [For a particular account of this family, ſee the other Volume, p. 451, 452. and for that of Mandeville, p. 545, 546.]

John Plays, or de Playz, of Stanſted-Montfichet, who dyed in 1388, held the maner of Moſe.

Margaret, his only daughter and heir, brought it to her huſband, Sir John Howard: At the time of her deceaſe in 1391, ſhe held this maner of Thomas of Woodſtock, Duke of Glouceſter, who had married Elianor one of the daughters and coheirs of Humfrey de Bohun. Sir John held, after her deceaſe, by the law of England, the maner of Moſe, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Great Bentley: and having Elizabeth, wife of John de Vere, ſon and heir of Richard the 11th Earl of Oxford (d). He had the misfortune of being beheaded in 1461, for his adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter; and this eſtate was ſeized among his others, and continued in the Crown, or was granted away, till K. Henry VIIth's acceſſion to the throne, when the De Vere family were reſtored to their Honors and Eſtates.

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, dyed poſſeſſed of this maner, and that of Great Oakley, in 1512; and was ſucceeded by——John, the 14th Earl (e).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted to Sir Thomas Darcy, and the heirs of his body, the maner of Moſe, with appertenances, the advowſon of the Church; and the Park of Moſe (f). For here had been a Park ever ſince the time of K. Richard I. [P].

This eſtate paſſed from the Rt. Hon. Lord Guilford to Tho: Guy's Hoſpital.

A Court is kept at Old Moſe-hall, and the quit-rents are 7 l. 12 s. 8 d. [Q].

Holmes-iſland, Sunk-iſland, and one or two more, formed by the flowing in of the tide, belong to this pariſh.

There are ſaid to be 840 acres of land in Moſe.

The CHURCH of Beaumont, dedicated to St. Leonard, ſtands pleaſantly on a hill. It is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. In a wooden Belfrey are 2 Bells.

This Rectory was all along appendent to the Maner.

The CHURCH of Moſe ſtood near the Hall, but is demoliſhed. Some of the ruins ſtill remain, covered with briars and thorns, and not even incloſed.

This Rectory was appendent to the Maner of Old-hall and New-hall.

Theſe two Churches and Livings were united in the reign of K. Charles II. For it being made appear, that the pariſh Church of Beaumont, and that of Moſe, were very near adjacent, and the inhabitants of both pariſhes ſo poor, that they were not able to contribute to the ſufficient reparations of their reſpective Churches; as alſo that the farmers belonging to the pariſh of Mooſe were but to the number of eleven, and their pariſh Church become very ruinous, and ready to fall down, the Steeple thereof being already faln, and both the Churches having then the ſame patron and the ſame incumbent; therefore both theſe pariſhes were united and conſolidated by act of parliament in 1678, and the Church of Beaumont made the Pariſh Church of both theſe Pariſhes, and the Patron and Rector enabled to pull down the Church of Mooſe, and to imploy the materials towards the repairs of the Church of Beamont, and for the fencing in of the ground where the Church of Mooſe ſtood, and the Churchyard of the ſame; which ground and Churchyard was to be continued for the burial of the dead of the ſaid pariſhes, and for no other uſe; and that the ſaid Churches, and all tythes, and other duties, heretofore due and payable to the incumbent of the Church of Mooſe, ſhall hereafter be paid, and payable to the incumbent of the Church of Beamont only.

Beaumont and Moſe are rated to the land-tax at 764 l. 1 s. 0 d.

OAKLEY.

Two pariſhes of this name lye along the Sea-ſide, diſtinguiſhed from each other by the addition of Great and Little.

The name is derived from Oak, and ley, i. e. Oak paſture: and is otherwiſe written in records Ocle, and Orle; and Acle, or Acley: Ac is the Saxon word for an Oak.

27. GREAT OAKLEY, is much the largeſt of the two.

The lands in Great and Little Oakley belonged to Aluric Caper, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign: At the time of the Survey, they were part of the many lordſhips holden by Robert Greno, or Gernon, lord of Stanſted-Montfichet [R]. And for that reaſon held afterwards of the Barony of Stanſted-Montfichet.

In Great Oakley are three Maners. 1. The maner of Great Oakley. 2. . . . that of Skighaughs. 3. The maner of Blounts.

The Maner of GREAT OAKLEY.

Great Oakley-hall, the manſion-houſe, is above a mile eaſt north-eaſt from the Church.

For a particular account of Robert Gernon, and his deſcendents, we ſhall beg leave to refer to the other Volume, p. 231. and eſpecially p. 576. under Stanſted-Montfichet, which was their capital ſeat, and the head of their Barony. Robert was ſucceeded by his ſon —— William, who took the ſurname of Montfichet, whoſe ſon ——Gilbert had for ſucceſſor —— Richard, that dyed in 1203. —— Richard, ſon of this latter, departed this life about 1258; and leaving no iſſue, his great inheritance was divided among his three ſiſters, Margery, wife of Hugh de Bolebec; Aveline, of William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle; and Philippa, of Hugh de Plaiz.

Great Oakley came to the ſhare of Philippa, and her huſband.——Richard de Plaiz, their ſon, did homage to K. Henry III. for the maner of Acley in Eſſex (g).——Ralph, his ſon, dyed without iſſue. His ſucceſſor——Giles de Plaiz, at the time of his deceaſe in 1303, held this maner, and the advowſon of the Church.—— Richard, his ſon (h), held the maner of Great Okele of the King in ca. by the Barony called Mountfitchett. He dyed in 1327. —— Giles, his ſon and ſucceſſor, held alſo the ſame. As did his ſon —— Richard Playz; to whom the King confirmed free-warren in all his lands in the Counties of Eſſex, Hertford, Kent, and Bucks; and one Market, and Fair, at his maner of Acle in Eſſex.——Sir John, his ſon, ſucceeded him in 1360 (i). And departing this life in 1388, left

Margaret, his daughter and ſole heir, then married to Sir John Howard [S]. At the time of her deceaſe, in 1391, ſhe held the maner of Okle, of the King in ca. by the ſervice of one knight's fee (k). Her huſband, Sir John, held this maner, by the law of England, till his death in 1437. They had one ſon, Sir John Howard, who dyed before his father, and left an only daughter Elizabeth, heir to this and other conſiderable eſtates (l) [T]. She was married to John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. He was beheaded with his eldeſt ſon Aubrey, in 1461, for their adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter. And K. Edward IV. gave their eſtates to his brother Richard Duke of Glouceſter.

The De Vere family recovered their eſtates and Honors upon the acceſſion of K. Henry VII. to the Crown. This continued in them till 1 March 1540, when John the 16th Earl of Oxford had licenſe to alienate the maners of Great Okeley and Dodinghurſt to William Pirton, and others (m). But K. Edward VI. in 1551, granted the maner of Great Okeley, and the Park of Okeley to Sir Thomas Darcy (n). It continued in his poſterity for ſome time.

Mrs. Gilly, of Cleveland-Court had it afterwards; and ſold it to Brigadier Warren.

It belongs now to Carteret Leathes Eſq; or to his ſon John Leathes Eſq;

Oakley-lodge, belonging to the Park, is about half a mile north from the Church. This alſo is part of the eſtate of Carteret Leathes Eſq; was taken from the foregoing maner.

The Maner of SKIGHAUGHS,

John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, who dyed 10 March 1512, held, among the reſt of his large eſtates, this maner of Skighaughs. And ſo did his ſucceſſor,——John, the 14th Earl, in 1526 (o).

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Skighaw to Sir Thomas Darcy [U]. His ſon —— John Lord Darcy, at the time of his deceaſe, 3 March 1580, held it of the Queen, in ca. by the half of a knight's fee; then worth 9l. 15s. a year (p).

It belonged to the Rt. Hon. Lord Guilford, now to Thomas Guy's Hoſpital.

This eſtate contains 253 acres: and the quit-rents belonging to it are 3l. 15s. 11d. ½.

DENGWELL HALL.

This eſtate contains 250 acres of land, but is no Maner.

It took its name from Thomas de Denſhewell, who had it in the reign of K. Edward III. But it originally belonged to the Family of Plaiz.

Under Richard de Plaiz, who dyed in 1360, Geffrey de Derſham held one fee in Great Ocle: And, afterwards, Roger Derſham held three quarters of a fee in this pariſh, called Derſham-hall (q). Whether it was the ſame as this eſtate, doth not clearly appear. However,—Sir John de Plaiz, and——Sir John Howard, who married his daughter and heir Margaret, held 3 parts of a fee in Great Okle, called Daneſwell (r).

This eſtate was afterwards in two moieties. Arthur Ruſſhe, who dyed 2 July 1537, held a moiety of the maner of Dangewell-hall, 360 acres of arable, 40 of wood, 20 of heath, and 20 s. rent, in Great Okeley, and Weekes; of John Earl of Oxford, and Chriſtopher Roydon, Beſides the maner of Oakley, they had three quarters of a fee in this pariſh. Inquiſ. 53 Hen. III. 31 Edw. I. 1, & 34 Edw. III. 16 Hen. VI.

[U] And yet, 18 June 1555, John Coxhead had licenſe to alienate the maner of Skyghawe, with appertenances to Edward Markaunt. Lett. pat. 2 & 3 Ph. & Mar.

Eſq; by the ſervice of 10s. a year. His ſon and heir——Antony Ruſſhe was then three years old (s).

Thomas Storgard, Gent. and Edmund Withipole, had this about the year 1556. Nicolas Steward held Dengwell-hall, in 1566, of John Lord Darcy. He left a ſon named James (t).

Another moiety was in John Ford, Eſq; of Great Horkeſley and Frating; as appears by a precept to the Sheriff, wherein it is deſcribed, as one moiety of 2 meſſuages, 3 tofts, 3 barns, 3 gardens, 2 orchards, 300 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 40 of wood, 20 of furze and heath, and 20 s. rent, in Great Okeley, Herewyche; and Wykes (u). J. Ford's ſecond daughter and coheir, Elianor brought this eſtate in frank marriage to her huſband Thomas Bendiſh, of Bumpſted-Steple, Eſq; At the time of his deceaſe, 23 February 1602, he held a moiety of the maner of Dangwell-hall, with appertenances, of Thomas Lord Darcy, as of his maner of Oakley, by fealty, and yearly rent of 10 s. His ſon——Thomas Bendiſhe Eſq; afterwards created a Barronet, ſucceeded him (w). For a particular account of this Family ſee above, p. 449, and eſpecially the other Volume, p. 350.

Mr. Thomas Guy's Hoſpital hath now this Eſtate, with Stone-hall, and ſome other lands.

This eſtate pays 1 l. a year quit-rents, or heriets, to Roydon-hall in Ramſey.

The Maner of BLUNTS-HALL, took its name from an ancient owner, Sir Andrew le Blund, mentioned above under Tendring, p. 470. From him it deſcended by marriage to the family of Battaile; and then to Sutton, Walton, and De Vere, as Wivenhou. [See in the other Volume, p. 187.]

In 1342, Sir John de Sutton granted to Ralph de Fylliol, for life, a yearly rent out of his maner of Great Ocle; in conſideration of which, the ſaid Ralph releaſed to him all his right in this maner, and the advowſon of the Church (x).

This eſtate ſeems to have gone along with that of Dengwell. For Thomas Bendiſh, Eſq; held the maner of Blunts-hall with that maner (y).

It belongs now to the child or children of Mr. Thomas Maſon, of Dedham, but is not reckoned a Maner.

HOUBRIDGE-HALL

belonged to one ſurnamed Hobrege, in K. Edward the third's reign. For Thomas Botelere, and Walter Arderne, enfeoffed Walter Hobrege, of Great Okele, and Roſe his wife, and Maud daughter of Thomas Denſhewell, in 60 acres of land in this pariſh; to hold to them and their heirs. This land was held of the King, in ca. by knight's ſervice, as parcel of the maner of Great Okele, and paid 11 s. and 11 d. to that maner (z).

John Borlas, alias Borlacy, who dyed 6 May 1589, held the maner, or farm, of Hobridge-hall, and divers meſſuages, lands, and tenements &c. in Great and Little Okeley, Bradfeild, &c. ——William was his ſon and heir (a).

In 1327, under Richard de Plaiz, Alexander Flyntard held 3 quarters of a fee in Great Okele. Sir John Howard held the ſame in 1437. Thomas de Brom held alſo three quarters of a fee here, under Richard de Plaiz (b).

Richard Drake, Rector of this pariſh, gave, 1 November 1718, an houſe new-built, with an orchard, that coſt him in all above 50l. to this pariſh, for ever, for the Poor to dwell in; upon condition, that the inhabitants built another houſe as large and as good. They accordingly did ſo, and theirs was finiſhed 31 Auguſt 1721. Each of theſe Houſes contain four families, and are ſituated above a quarter of a mile ſouth from the Church.

Here is a Fair April 25.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel, both tiled. The Steeple, that was built of flints and ſtones, fell ſome years ago: In it were 5 Bells. About three years ago, the Pariſhioners having obtained a faculty to diſpoſe of the four leſſer Bells, and ſold them for 80l. they added 60 or 70l. more, and repaired, almoſt rebuilt, the Steeple, and hung in it the great Bell.

This Rectory was anciently appendent to the Maner of Oakley-hall; and in the gift of the Families of De Plaiz, Howard, Vere &c. (c) till 19 Auguſt 1547, when K. Edward VI. granted the advowſon of it to Sir Thomas Seymour, Baron of Sudeley, and his heirs, to hold in capite (d). The 24th of September following Sir Thomas gave it to——William Britton, Gent. who conveyed it, in 1549, to —— Edward Regard; and the latter, 3 May 1561, conveyed it to——John Rocheſter, of Terling, Gent. He gave it, 1 May 1566, to his brother——Thomas Rocheſter, Cl.——John Rocheſter, Gent. his ſon, ſold, 11 March 1614, the perpetual advowſon to ——Humfrey Cole, of Tillingham, Cl. and his heirs.——Robert Cole, his ſon, was inſtituted to this Rectory in 1627. He gave it to his ſon ——Henry, who was inſtituted to the ſame in 1673, upon Bockenham's reſignation; and dyed without a will in 1704, leaving two daughters coheirs, Jane wife of John Kirk, of Harwich, and Elizabeth wife of the Rev. Richard Drake; Elizabeth dyed 19 January 1706, only 25 years old; and left a daughter named Suſanna. The Rev. Mr. Grimwood having purchaſed the advowſon, ſold it to St. John's College in Cambridge.

The Glebe belonging to this Living is above 60 acres.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 902 l. 1 s. 0 d.

28. LITTLE OAKLEY, lies north of the other, along the Sea ſide, towards Harwich.

The lands of this pariſh are comprehended in what hath been ſet down under the other, as belonging to Robert Gernon; eſpecially that part, which one Ralph held, containing two hides and ten acres. This Ralph I take to have been Ralph Baynard, lord of Little Dunmow. [See under that pariſh.]

Here is only one MANER.

Little Oakley-hall ſtands near the eaſt end of the Church.

The demeſnes of it are about half the pariſh.

Ralph Baynard's grandſon, William, being deprived of his eſtates, they were given to Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, anceſtor of the Lords Fitz-Walter.

In 1259, Richard Filoll held the maner of Acle, of Robert Fitz-Walter. His ſon —— Sir John Fillol ſucceeded him (e).

In 1316, a fine was levied between John Fillol ſen. plaintiff, and Robert Fillol, deforc.' of this maner; remainder to John Fillol, jun. and Chriſtian his wife, and the heirs of their bodies. And, in 1331, Ralph Filiol paſſed this eſtate by fine to Sir John Filiol, and Margery his wife (f). At the time of his deceaſe, in 1332, he held this maner of Little Okeley, with the advowſon of the Church, of the heirs of Sir Robert Fitz-Walter, by the ſervice of two knights fees and a half, and rent of 8 s. 4d. a year, for ward at Caſtle Baynard ſix months. —— John, his ſon and heir (g), left two ſons, who dying without iſſue, the eſtates came to his daughter

Cecily. [For a further account of the Fillol family, ſee in the other Volume, p. 21. 151.] The 3d of February 1346, Cecily and her huſband ſettled this eſtate by fine on themſelves, and the heirs of their body; and for want of heirs on Ralph Fillol; and on default of his iſſue on

William, ſon of Sir John de Sutton, of Wivenhou, and his heirs male. By that means it came into the Sutton family, and they preſented to the living (h). Griffin de Sutton, Parſon of Tendring, had granted before to Sir John de Sutton, and his ſon Richard, all his right to the third part of this maner of Little Okele (i). —— Sir Richard de Sutton, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1395, held this maner, with the Advowſon of the Church, of Walter Fitz-Walter, Lord of Woodham, by knight's ſervice. —— Thomas de Sutton ſucceeded his father (k): but dying without iſſue, it came by the marriage of his ſiſter, or aunt,

Margery, to John de Walton Eſq; He was ſucceeded by his ſon—John; and he by—Richard de Walton Eſq; who leaving no iſſue, his ſiſter

Joane, wife of Sir John Howard, jun. inherited. Sir William Marny, and other truſtees, releaſed and confirmed to them, 6 January 1407, this maner, and the advowſon of the Church. He dyed 13 December 1424 [W], leaving an only daughter Elizabeth, married afterwards to John de Vere, the 12th Earl of Oxford. This noble family preſented to the living from 1448 till 1540 (l), which ſhews how long they remained poſſeſſed of the maner.——John de Vere, the 13th Earl, who dyed in 1512, held, of the Abbot of St. Johns in Colcheſter, this maner, and the advowſon of the Church: As did——John, the 14th Earl, at the time of his deceaſe in 1526 (m).

This Maner and Advowſon being afterwards in the Crown, by the means, we think, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 293. K. Edward VI. granted them to Sir Thomas Darcy (n): and he and his deſcendents enjoyed them from that time, and preſented to the Living till 1641.

Then it was in the family of Gilley; who firſt preſented in 1660.

William Leathes Eſq; had it next. He was appointed Reſident in the Auſtrian Netherlands, 1 April 1716. And was ſucceeded in this eſtate by his nephew——Carteret Leathes, Eſq;

Capt. Cockerell; and Capt. Baggot, of Harwich; Widow Lilly; Mr. Samuel Carrington; Francis Wilſon &c. have alſo eſtates in this pariſh.

Pewit-iſland belongs to this pariſh.—It is ſo called from the great quantity of Pewits which come and breed in it in the ſpring. But whether all the wonderful circumſtances related by Dr. T. Fuller, are exactly true, is doubtful; as that they they come on St. George's day preciſely; that they ſeldom ſleep whilſt they ſit on their eggs, &c. See his Worthies, in Eſſex, p. 378.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, is of one pace with the Chancel, the whole tiled. In a ſtone Tower are 4 Bells.

This Church hath been all along appendent to the Maner.

The pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 429l. 1s. 0d.

29. WRABNESE, lies north of the two Oakleys, and eaſt of Bradfeild, abutting north on the river Stour; into which part of the pariſh advancing into a point, or promontory, [in Saxon næꞅe,] is what gave occaſion to the latter part of the name. As for the former part, I cannot find from whence it is formed.

It is otherwiſe written in records, Warbenaſe, Wrabnas, Wrabnaſhe, and Wrabbenaſe.

Before and after the Conqueſt, this pariſh belonged to the Abbey of St. Edmundſbury in Suffolk [X], to which it was given by Alfric Kempe (o). Out of the rents of it, 10 marks yearly were paid to the cellarer of that Monaſtery.

Under the Abbey, it was held by the families of Blund, de Ufford, de Vere, Hende, and Ayloffe, upon the payment of 10 marks per ann.

1. Wrabneſe-hall; and 2. . . . Denballs, are the two Maners in this pariſh.

The Maner of WRABNESE.

The Hall, or manſion-houſe, ſtands a little way eaſt from the Church.

Of the Blund family, who were its ancienteſt owners, or tenants, we have this account. Robert le Blund, or Blond, i. e. the Fair, one of William the Conqueror's attendants (p), had——Gilbert, his ſon, founder of the Priory of Ikeſworth in Suffolk; and huſband of Alice de Colekirk. By her he had——William, living in the reign of K. Henry II. that married Sarah de Montchenſy. ——Hubert; his ſon, had by Agnes Liſle his wife,——William le Blund, who married Cecily de Vere, and had by her William; and two daughters, Agnes, and Roeſe.——William, the ſon and heir, was ſtandard-bearer to the Barons, at the battle of Lewes fought againſt K. Henry III. and was there ſlain. He held in the maner of Wrabenaſe 305 acres of arable, paſture, wood, marſh, &c. 4 l. rent of aſſiſe, and a water-mill; of Edmund Fitz-Thomas, Sir Richard de Wykes, John de Daneſey, and Simon Plebien; and paid 10 marks yearly to the Abbot of St. Edmund. His two ſiſters were his coheirs.

Agnes was then the wife of William de Creketoft, and had a ſon William, of full age. Roeſe, who was married to Robert de Valeyns, had a ſon Robert, 17 years of age (q). Between theſe two coheirs Blund's eſtates being divided,

Robert de Valeyns, or Valoines, had this. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1282, he left two daughters, Roeſe married to Edmund de Pakenham, and Cecily to Robert de Ufford (r). They had three ſons, Robert de Ufford, the firſt Earl of Suffolk of this family; Ralph; and Edmund.——Ralph de Ufford, the ſecond ſon, married, firſt, Maud one of the daughters of Henry Plantagenet Lord of Monmouth and Earl of Lancaſter, ſecond ſon of Edmund Crouchback brother to K. Edward I. widow of William Lord Burgh Earl of Ulſter, by whom he had one daughter, named Maud. By his ſecond wife, Eve, daughter and heir of John de Clavering, he had two ſons (s).

Maud, the daughter by the firſt wife, was married to Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl of Oxford. At the time of his deceaſe, in 1370, he held the maner of Wrabbenaſe of the Abbot of St. Edmundſbury, by the ſervice of 10 l. a year (t). Their ſon Robert de Vere, Marquis of Dublin, and Duke of Ireland, dyed 22 November 1392, without iſſue. Maud, his mother, who ſurvived both huſband and ſon till 1412, by her will dated 20 January that year, gave the maner of Wrabneſs, to the Abbeſs and Convent of Bruſyard in Suffolk for a Chantry conſiſting of a Warden and four Prieſts founded by her mother in 1354, and converted afterwards into a Nunnery: provided it was amortized, at the expence of that Houſe in three years after her deceaſe, otherwiſe to be ſold by her feoffees, and the money paid to the Abbeſs and Convent, and their ſucceſſors, for the health of her ſoul. To all appearance it was ſold by her feoffees, and purchaſed by Sir John Hende, a rich citizen of London, mentioned above, p. 188. and in the other Volume, p. 66. 155. 470. At the time of his deceaſe, 1 Auguſt 1418, he held the maner of Wrabnaſe, with a Sea-water mill, of the Abbot of Bury. He had two ſons both named John. ——John, his eldeſt ſon and heir, then 9 years old (u), dyed in 1461, and John the younger in 1464. The eldeſt left an only daughter, named Joane, heireſs to the whole eſtate of this rich family. She was married to Walter Writel of Bobbingworth Eſq; He departed this life 18 April 1475, leaving two ſons, William, who dyed young; and——John: that was cut off by the ſweating ſickneſs, which raged in 1485. [See in the other Volume, p. 156.]——John, his only child, then but 6 weeks old (w), was married very young to Etheldreda, daughter of his guardian Sir John Shaa, but dyed under age, 28 July 1507, leaving an only daughter—Julian, which ſurvived him but a little while. His mother Anne held this maner, and that of Ramſey, at the time of her deceaſe in 1488. And, upon his death, in 1507, it came into the king's hands (x).

Sir George Whitmore, of London, Kt. that had before a moiety of the maner of Ramſey-hall, or Michel-ſtow, granted him by K. James I. He was the ſecond ſon of William Whitmore, Alderman of London, an eminent merchant, ſon of Richard Whitmore, of Charley in Shropſhire Eſq; Sir George Whitmore was alſo Alderman of London, for Langbourn-ward, one of the Sheriffs in 1621, Lord Mayor in 1631, and knighted 27 May 1632. He lived moſtly at his manſion houſe called Barnes, between Hoxden and Kingſland, in the pariſh of Hackney in Middleſex, where he dyed 12 December 1654. By . . . his wife, daughter of . . . Caſcot, he had three ſons, William; Charles; George: and three daughters, Mary; Elizabeth; and Anne, wife of Sir John Robinſon, Bart.—— William Whitmore, Eſq; his eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded him. For ſome time he reſided at Ramſey-hall; but, upon his father's death, went and lived at Barnes in Hackney. In his advanced years he took to wife Penelope, one of his menial ſervants, and had by her one ſon, born about 1670. Departing this life in 1678, aged 64 years, he was buried at Ramſey.——William, his ſon and heir, was contracted in marriage very young with the daughter of Sir William Whitmore, of Shropſhire, Bart. and conſummated his marriage ſome time after his father's death. He was accidentally killed by a piſtol which lay by him in his own chariot, as he was returning from Epſom, being under age, and without a child [Y]. In caſe he ſhould dye without iſſue, his father had by will ſettled his eſtates in truſtees, who were to ſell them, and divide the produce among about twenty five Legatees. Accordingly the following truſtees, William, Marquis of Powis, William Earl Craven, and Charles Lord North and Gray, ſold the Maner and Demeſnes of Wrabneſe in March 1686-7, to Sir Thomas Davall, Kt. deſcended from an ancient family in the northern parts of England [Z]: who purchaſed at the ſame time the Whitmore's eſtates in Ramſey, and Dovercourt. He was knighted 21 February 1682, one of the Burgeſſes for Harwich, in all the Parliaments of K. William, and the two firſt of Qu. Anne; and alſo Recorder of that Burgh. He dyed in November 1712, and was buried in Ramſey-Church, By Rebecca his wife, daughter of Daniel Burr of Amſterdam, merchant, that departed this life in January 1714, he had, Daniel who was buried 29 September 1711; Thomas; and Mary. ——Thomas Davall, Eſq; the only ſurviving child and heir, ſucceeded his father; and was knighted 19 June 1713. Dying before his mother in April 1714, he was likewiſe buried near his father at Ramſey. He married Lydia-Catharine Van-Hattem, daughter of John Vanhattem Eſq; by his aunt Lydia Davall his father's third ſiſter, and had by her two ſons, Thomas; and John, buried 8 February 1715.——Thomas Davall, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, had a ſhort enjoyment of the eſtates, being buried 23 June 1718; and with him ended the Davall family here [A].

Upon the death of this laſt child, a conteſt aroſe about the title to this eſtate, between Daniel Burr Eſq; who claimed by virtue of the will of Sir Thomas Davall the younger, made in April 1714; and between Lydia Van-Hattem, widow; Elizabeth Davall; and Mary Davall, ſpinſters; and Catharine Bovey, widow, daughter and heir of Anne Riches, eldeſt ſiſter of the firſt Sir Thomas Davall; all which four claimed as heirs at law to the Davall family. Alledging, that Sir Thomas Davall, the younger, dyed inteſtate, as not being of a ſound mind [non compos mentis] at the time of making his will; or if he was, that the deviſe to Mr. Burr was void, for repugnancy [B]. The ſuit was begun in 1719, and laſted till 30 May 1722, when, upon an iſſue directed out of Chancery, at a trial in the Court of King's Bench, a verdict was found for Mr. Burr. Afterwards there was an agreement between the contending parties, about Davall's great Eſtate of between four and five thouſand pounds a year; by which it was ſettled, That the Lady Lydia-Catharine, widow of the laſt Sir Thomas, ſhould have her whole jointure of 800l. a year at her own diſpoſal, and her late huſband's perſonal eſtate, which was very conſiderable: And Mr. Burr had the eſtates at Wrabneſe, Ramſey, and Dover-court, and in Burr-ſtreet at Wapping. [See above, p. 246.] This Daniel Burr Eſq; married Elizabeth, daughter of Frederick Danchert of Amſterdam, and Petronilla his wife, and had by her, Frederic; Daniel; Sophia-Rebecca &c. [C].

Some years ago, Mr. Burr ſold this, and the eſtates at Ramſey, Dovercourt, &c. to Lewis-Peak Garland Eſq;

The Maner of DENBALLS.

Very little occurrs in records concerning this Maner; nor is it known from whence it took its name.

In 1544, Chriſtopher Roydon, Gent. held lands and tenements called Danbold and Haſtings, in Ramſey, Wrabnes, and Miſtelley, of the maner of Hedingham-caſtle.

[Z] Sir Thomas Davall had three brothers, John, Jaſpar, and Samuel, who all dyed unmarried; and five ſiſters, Sarah, wife of John Pocock of Berkſhire, Eſq; Anne, wife of John Riches of Southwark Eſq; Lydia, wife of John Van Hattem Eſq; [who had by him John Van Hattem, and Lydia Catharine mentioned above,] Elizabeth, and Mary, the two younger ſiſters of Sir Thomas Davall, dyed unmarried.

[B] The controverſy aroſe upon this caſe: Sir Thomas Davall, the younger, having by his will given the maners of Wrabneſe, Ramſey, Dovercourt &c. to his eldeſt ſon Thomas and the heirs of his body; and an eſtate in Middleſex to his younger ſon and the heirs of his body; and, if either of his ſons dyed without iſſue, what was deviſed to him in tail, to go to the other ſon, and the heirs of his body. Then follows the controverted clauſe. ' And if both my ſaid ſons ſhall ' depart this life with (inſtead of without) iſſue of either of ' their bodies, then I give all the premiſes in the Counties of ' Eſſex and Middleſex unto my couſin Daniel Burr and his ' heirs.'

[C] Arms of Burr. Ermine; on a chief indented, ſable, two lionels rampant, or.

held a maner called Denballs, and 30 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow, in Wrabnes, of William Ayliff Eſq; as of his maner of Wrabnes-hall, in free ſocage, by fealty.——John, his ſon and heir, at the time of his deceaſe 13 December 1619, held a meſſuage with appertenances called Denballs, and the other lands as his father: worth 3 s. 4 d. a year.——Alexander, his ſon and ſucceſſor, was then 20 years old (y). [See under Ramſey.]

The next poſſeſſor we meet with, was James Smith, of Upton Eſq; whoſe heir is——Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart.

Mr. Jonas Palmer; John Lucas; John Conſtable, &c. have alſo ſome lands in this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, and tiled. Here was formerly a ſtone-tower, with 5 Bells; now only 2, in a wooden Turret.

This Rectory belonged, as well as the Maner, to St. Edmundſbury-Abbey, till its ſuppreſſion. The Advowſon then came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

Mr. Robert Rich, late Rector, was a benefactor to this Church. by purchaſing a piece of land for the convenience of his ſucceſſors [D].

30. RAMSEY, lies between Wrabneſe, Oakley, and Dovercourt; bounded on the north by the river Stour, or Channel: Part of it is a peninſula, called The Ray.

The name is formed from the two words, Ram, and ige, i. e. Ram's iſland. In records it is ſometimes written Rameſey alias Miſſletow, and Rameſey cum Miſſletow, Mickleſtow, or Miſtletow.

Aluric Caper, and Alric, were owners of the lands here, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign. Ralph Baignard, or Baynard, held them at the time of the Survey, in two parcels, under the diſtinct appellations of Rameſeia, and Micheſletou [E].

They were divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners. 1. The maner of Ramſey, Parkers, or Roydon-hall. 2. . . . that of Ramſey-hall. 3. The maner of Michelſtow. 4. Eaſt Newhall. 5. Strond-land. 6. The Ray. 7. Foulton.

The Maner of Ramsey.

Roydon-hall, the manſion houſe, ſtands about two miles weſt from the Church.

Ralph Baignard was ſucceeded by his ſon——Geffrey, father of——William Baignard, or Baynard; who, for joining with William Malet, and others, in a conſpiracy againſt K. Henry I. was deprived of his eſtates: and that King gave them to his Steward,

Robert, a younger ſon of Richard Fitz-Giſlebert, progenitor of the ancient Earls of Clare, from which Robert deſcended the noble Family of Fitz-Walter: And therefore this eſtate was holden of the Lords Fitz-Walter. [See above, p. 313. 338. and in the other Volume, p. 427.] The ſaid Robert gave to Alberic de Vere, the firſt Earl of Oxford, who had married his niece Adeliza, the fee that Ralph ſon of Roger held of him in Rameſeia, conſiſting of three knights fees (z).——Hugh de Vere, the 4th Earl of Oxford, held, in 1263, the maner of Ramſey, of the fee of Walter Fitz-Robert, for which he paid 10 s. every 24 weeks, towards the ward of Baynard's-caſtle (a).——Robert, his ſon, the 5th Earl, held the little maner [manerettum] of Rameſey, of Robert Fitz-Walter, by the rent of 5 s. every 24 weeks, for the uſe aforeſaid: And la Stonehyde, of the heirs of Alexander de Rameſey, by the yearly rent of 2 s. (b).——Thomas, the 8th Earl, in 1370, held the maner of Ramſeye of the Lord Fitz-Water, in the ſame manner as Hugh, the fourth Earl (c).——Alberic, the 10th Earl, held, in 1400, half a fee for a reaſonable aid, from the villans of Ramſey (d).

On, or before, the year 1358, that noble

[D] Mr. Rich was born at Hatton in Scotland, and dyed 28 January 1728, having been 33 years Rector of this pariſh, and 48 Vicar of Ramſey. He is ſaid in his Epitaph to have been a father to the orphan, a helper of the friendleſs, a preventer of ſtrife, and one that ſpent his life in acts of charity and beneficence. He had a very uncommon Collection of Books of Alchemy, 39 Volumes of which are in Colcheſter-caſtle, depoſited in the Library there belonging to the Book-Society; and by his marks in them with pen and ink, it appears he had thoroughly read them.

Family ſeems to have parcelled out this Maner. For, upon the death of John the 7th Earl, it was found, that of him Walter de Reydon held one fee in Ramſey, worth 100 s. when it happened to be taxed; and Geffrey Roily three quarters of a fee, worth 75 s. (e).

From hence aroſe the diſtinction of Reydon, or Roydon, Hall, which was the capital Maner; and The Ray, holden by the Roily, or de Ruly, family, as we ſhall ſhew preſently.

In the mean time, we ſhall obſerve, That this eſtate ſhared the different fates of the noble family of De Vere. For, when Robert, Duke of Ireland, was accuſed of high-treaſon, and his eſtates were confiſcated, K. Richard II. in 1393, granted to Thomas de Percy, and John de Bourchier, and others, in fee, the Maners of Ramſey and Frating in Eſſex, 4 meſſuages, 286 acres of arable, 7 of meadow, 6 of paſture, 17 of wood, and Borfleet mill, the eſtate of Robert Duke of Ireland, attainted (f). And John Hend, mentioned above, p. 188, who held this maner of Ramſeye of the Lord Fitz-Water, in ca. granted it to Sir William Bourchier, in 1416 (g) [F].

Under the Earls of Oxford, this eſtate was holden by a family ſurnamed de Ramſey: and from them it came by marriage to Parker, from which it took the name of Parkers; then to Roydon, that gave it the name of Roydons; and laſtly to Lucas.

Elias de Ramſey held it in the reign of K. John. Alexander de Ramſey in 1260, Alice de Ramſey in 1269. Alexander had, by Maud his wife, three daughters coheirs. Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, granted the marriage of them, and of their mother Maud, for 100 marks, to William de Clara, Archdeacon of Sudbury (h). Iſabell, the eldeſt of theſe daughters, was married to Sir Ralph de Philely. Joane, another daughter, to John le Parker. Theſe were poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1275. The name of the third daughter is not mentioned.

By marriage, I ſuppoſe, it came into the Roydon, or Reydon, family. Walter de Reydon held it as one fee in Ramſey in 1360, and 1370 (i).——John Reydon in 1409 (k). In the reign of K. Henry VI. —— Robert Reydon held a knight's fee here, called Reydons. —— Thomas Roydon held the ſame in the time of K. Edward IV. And —— John Roydon did homage for it at Caſtle-Hedingham in 1498. —— Chriſtopher Roydon Gent. who dyed 6 September 1544, held the maner of Ramſey, called Parkers, alias Roydon-hall; and lands and tenements called Danbold and Haſtings, in Ramſey, Wrabnas, and Miſtelley, of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Henningham-Caſtle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. He left an only child and heir, Mary, or Margaret, then only two years old (l). She was married afterwards to John Lucas Eſq; to whom ſhe brought this eſtate in marriage. He was the ſon of John Lucas Eſq; of Colcheſter, by his ſecond wife Elizabeth Chriſtmaſs; and by Mary Roydon his wife had five ſons, John; Roydon; Edward; Edmund; Chriſtopher: and three daughters, Elizabeth, married to Robert Darcy of Tiptre; Mary, to Edward Bedingfeild; and Margaret to . . . Tillingham. [See Hiſtory of Colcheſter, p. 124.]

In a precept to the Sheriff, in Hilary-term 1567, this maner of Roydon is deſcribed as 10 meſſuages, 600 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 600 of paſture, 500 of wood, 190 of marſh, 200 of furze and heath, and 3 l. rent, in Ramſey, Wrabnes, and Witham (m). John Lucas Eſq; at the time of his deceaſe, 27 May 1599, held this maner of Parkers, alias Roydon-hall, with appertenances, and 300 acres of arable and paſture, 20 of meadow, and 75 of wood, in Ramſey, of William Stanley, Earl of Derby, as of his maner of Heningham-Caſtle, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, alſo a tenement, and 8 acres of land: and 40 acres of arable and paſture, and 9 of meadow called Barwicks, in this pariſh.——John Lucas Eſq; his eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded him (n). He dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame 13 December 1619. —— Alexander, his eldeſt ſon and heir was above 20 years of age (o). He had beſides a ſon named Thomas, and a daughter Anne.

Robert Carey, Earl of Monmouth, held this maner of Thomas Lord Bruce, and the Lady Diana his wife, Counteſs dowager of Oxford, in 1630, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and yearly rent of 3 s.

Sir Harbottle Grimſton, Kt. and Bart. had it in 1635.

James Smith, of Upton, Eſq; purchaſed it ſome years ago: and it now belongs to——Sir Robert Smith, of Bere-Church, Bart. who hath alſo a farm cloſe to Stoure-wood.

The Maner of RAMSEY-HALL.

The manſion houſe ſtands a little way ſouth from Roydon-hall.

This maner was taken from the other capital one; but when, doth not plainly appear. The earlieſt mention we find of it, is, That it belonged to John Herde, in 1599 (p).

K. James I. 22 July 1605, granted the maner of Ramſey, with appertenances, to Robert Earl of Suſſex, to hold of the maner of Eaſt-Greenwich, in ſocage (q).

Thomas Branſon, of Eaſt-Bergholt, clothier, had it next.

Mrs. Peeke of Lawford was afterwards poſſeſſed of this eſtate; And upon her deceaſe it came amongſt her daughters, one of whom is married to Mr. William Elliſton of Sudbourn in Suffolk. — Mr. Palmer Firmin hath alſo one ſhare.

This Maner conſiſts of demeſnes, rents, and ſervices.

And William Ayloffe Eſq; held the ſame, in 1517, of Sir Francis Bryan, then lord of the ſaid maner. Inquiſ. 4 Hen. VII. & 14 Hen. VII.

The Maner of MICHELSTOW was originally a member of the capital Maner in this pariſh, and uſed to be named with it; viz. Rameſey cum Michelſtou.

It came to be ſo called, becauſe the Houſe ſtands near the Church, which is dedicated to St. Michael. By late improvements it is made a handſom ſeat.

When it was ſeparated from the capital Maner we have no plain account, but it was before the year 1379. For then K. Richard II. granted licenſe to Walter Legat Vicar of Dovercourt, Adam Waryn, and John Hall of Colcheſter, to give 3 meſſuages, 200 acres of arable, 9 of meadow, and 16s. rent, in Michelſtou, and Adburton, to the Monaſtery of St. Oſith. The ſaid meſſuages and lands were held of the Earl of Oxford, as of his maner of Gelham, by the ſervice of one roſe, and ſuit of court from 3 weeks to 3 weeks (r).

At the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, this Maner was lett, with the Rectory, for the yearly rent of 50 l. (s) which ſhews how fine an eſtate it was.

It then falling to the Crown, a moiety of it was granted to Robert Carey, Earl of Monmouth; and the other moiety to Sir George Whitmore. From the Whitmore family it came to that of Davall, and then of Burr, as the maner of Wrabneſe; and now belongs to

Lewis-Peak Garland, Eſq;

The Maner of EAST NEW-HALL.

The manſion houſe is about three quarters of a mile north from the Church. 'Tis ſometimes called Eaſt-Hall.

Like the other eſtates in this pariſh, it was held of the Earls of Oxford; except during their attainder under Edward IV. Richard at Pantry, and Thomas Holbeck were poſſeſſed of it in 1406.——Thomas Holbeck, who dyed in 1480, held this maner of Eſt New-hall in Ramſey of Sir Thomas Montgomery, as of his maner of Great Tey; by fealty, and rent of 5s. a year. He had alſo the Ray in this pariſh. His heirs were, Chriſtiana, and Alice, two of his daughters, and Thomas Wilkokys, ſon of Margery, another daughter of his (t).

A fine paſſed in 1543, between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and William Burnynghyll and Elianor his wife, deforc' of the maners of Eaſt New-hall, and le Ray, and 300 acres of arable, 31 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 150 of marſh, 80 of wood, and 5 l. rent in Ramſey; to be the King's right (u).

The families of Whitmore, Davall, and Burr, had it afterwards, and now Lewis-Peak Garland Eſq;

In 1557, this eſtate was granted, among many others, to Sir Thomas White, as parcel of the poſſeſſions of William Burnegill, Henry Wilcocks, and John Broke, copartners (w).

The Maner of STROND-LAND, was ſo named, becauſe the Houſe and land lie upon the Strand, by the river Stour.

It was taken, like the former, from the capital Maner.

We have no diſtinct accountof it till 1433; Then William de Reynford Eſq; of Bradfeild, held the maner of Strondelond, in Ramſeye, of Robert Reydon: And departing this life that year, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Henry (x). [See above, p. 464.]

The next poſſeſſor upon record was John Lucas Eſq; mentioned above. At the time of his deceaſe, 27 May 1599, he held this meſſuage called Strandlands, of John Herd, as of his maner of Ramſey-hall, in free ſocage.——John, his ſon and heir, was ſucceeded, in 1619, by his ſon——Alexander (y).

Sir George Whitmore had it afterwards; from whom it paſſed, as the reſt of the eſtates, to the Families of Davall, Burr, and Garland.

The Maner of RAY, or LE REY lies in the peninſula, formed by the influx of the tide, in the north part of this pariſh.

The manſion houſe is about a mile, north north-eaſt from the Church. Here was formerly a Chapel, dedicated to St. Peter (z).

This was one of the knights fees granted by Robert Fitz-Richard to Alberic de Vere, Earl of Oxford, as mentioned above; and it appears by the Feodary-book of the Honor of Caſtle-Hedingham, that a Family, ſurnamed de Ruly, held it under ſome of the Earls, in the reigns of K. Henry III. and K. Edward I. II. and III. William de Ruly is the firſt mentioned——Geffrey de Ruly did homage for his tenement in le Ray and Michelſtow, being half a knight's fee; in the years 1291. 1293. and 1319. Under John, the 7th Earl of Oxford, who dyed in 1358, ——Geffrey Royly, held three quarters of a knight's fee.——John de Rily, and the Vicar of Ramſey, held the ſame under Thomas de Vere, the 8th Earl, who dyed in 1370 (a). And afterwards ——Geffrey de Ruly is recorded to hold half a fee in Ramſey, and Michelſtow; and half a fee in Le Ray.

In the reign of K. Henry VI. the Abbey of St. Oſith, Thomas Holbeck, and Nicolas Peeke, held three quarters of a knight's fee in Ramſey, and Le Ray, called Rulyes.——Thomas Holbeck, at the time of his deceaſe in 1480, held the maner of Ray in Ramſey, of the King, as of the Honor of Hengham-Caſtle, by fealty, and ſuit at the Court of that Honor; which was fallen to the Crown, upon the cruel execution of John, the 12th Earl, in the year 1461. Holbeck's heirs were his two Daughters, Chriſtian, and Alice; and Thomas Wilkokys, ſon of Margery, another daughter of his (b).

In 1543, William Bunynghyll, and Elianor his wife, paſſed this eſtate by fine, with Eaſt otherwiſe Foughton, or Fulton, is another Maner in this pariſh.

Foulton-hall, the maner-houſe, is about three quarters of a mile ſouth from the Church.

This hamlet belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Bricſius, and to Ednod a freeman. At the time of the Survey, Suene of Eſſex, and his tenant Odard, held one part; and Robert ſon of Corbution, and his under tenant Robert, the other part [G].

The earlieſt poſſeſſors of this eſtate upon record, after that, was the Filyoll family, of Little Oakley adjoining.

Joanna, daughter of John Filyoll of Thorpe, who dyed in 1418, held of the Earl of Oxford a tenement called Fulton Bernes, and 40 acres of arable, and 40 of marſh, in Ramſey. She took for her huſband, as the record expreſſes it, John Howſe, by whom ſhe had a ſon named—— Walter, born in 1402 (d).

Edward Duke, Gent. at the time of his deceaſe 8 May 1572, held the maner of Fulton-hall, with appertenances, of the Lord Hunſdon, of his Honor of Raleigh, by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee, homage, and ſuit of Court. His ſon——John Duke, of Colcheſter, in 1629 held this maner of Foulton-hall, with 60 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 20 of paſture, and 20 of marſh, in Ramſey, of Sir Thomas Wroth, Kt. and William Couch, as of their Honor of Rayleigh (e).

It belonged formerly to Robert Lowndes, Gent. and afterwards to his widow —— Mrs. Mary Lowndes.

Philips Baggot, Gent. is the preſent owner of Foulton-hall.

South-houſe belongs to Mr. Robert Carrington. —Hicks, to Mr. Amis Hempſon. Robert Briſtow Eſq; Wadham-College; Mrs. Warner; and Miſs Stebbing; Humfrey Sidney, Eſq; The Rev. Mr. John Hall's; Mr. Richard, and Samuel, Carrington; Mr. Thomas Seaman; George Simpſon; Arthur Taylor; Philip Hempſon; John Smith; Hazel Salmon; William Welch; Wimple Pavell; Samuel Simpſon; John Blane,—Preſcot, or James Clements, Gent. Abraham Everard; John Conſtable; Mr. Wilſon, &c. have alſo eſtates, or lands, in this pariſh.

On the weſt ſide of a Creek, which the tide comes into, there is a number of Houſes called Ramſey-ſtreet: And, over that Creek, a long timber Bridge, in the great road to Harwich, kept up at the charge of the County.

Here is a Fair June 15.

This pariſh had a benefaction of 20 nobles a year, given by Henry Smith Eſq; and payable out of the maner of Stroughton in Leiceſteſhire; but now reduced to 4l. 4s.

The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is of one pace with the Chancel, tiled. In a ſtone Tower are 5 Bells. The Chancel was built, in 1597, by . . . . Goldingham Gent. and William . . . . (f).

This Church was given to the Abbey of St. Oſith, and the great Tithes being appropriated to it, a Vicarage was ordained, which continued in the Abbey's gift till the Suppreſſion. Then it came to the Crown, and hath remained in it ever ſince.

In the Hamlet of Foulton was a Chapel, now entirely demoliſhed: in which the Vicar of this pariſh was obliged to perform divine ſervice. The Advowſon of it was holden of the Lords Fitz-Walter, and Earls of Oxford (g). It was endowed with lands called Northfeild, Brodehole, Hawkland, Wall croft, and Galleis-pightel, Brodepiece, Preiſtsfeild, Yard land acre, Mill-hill-feild, Louncefeild, Fryreſon marſh, and Burgh-pightel, the firſt mowing of one acre in Foulton-marſh, and feed in that marſh for 50 ſheep. Upon the diſſolution of Chantries, the endowment of it was granted, in 1549, to William Fountayn, and Richard Mayne (h).

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1219l.

Here is only one MANER.

The Earls of Oxford continued lords paramount of this Maner from William the Conqueror's time to K. Henry the Eighth's, except during the forfeiture of Robert Duke of Ireland, and the attainder of John, the 12th Earl.

Under them it was held by the noble Families of Bigod, or Bigot, Plantagenet, and Mowbray, Earls and Dukes of Norfolk &c.

Alberic de Vere, Firſt Earl of Oxford, had a daughter named Juliana who was married to Hugh Bigot, and brought him the maner of Dovercourt with Harwich. He dyed in 1177. ——Roger his ſon dyed in 1220. As did his ſucceſſors——Hugh in 1225——Roger in 1270. This laſt held the maner of Dovercourt, with the vill or town of Herewic which was a member of this maner, of the Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. His brother Hugh's ſon ——Roger Bigot, ſucceeded him (i). This Hugh was his ſecond brother, and chief Juſtice of England. Roger, either out of fear of K. Edward Iſt's. reſentment, whom he had highly offended, or out of diſlike to his brother and heir apparent; conſtituted the ſaid King his heir, 12 April 1302, ſurrendring to him his Honors, and his high office of Mareſhal of England: upon condition, that if his wife bore him any children, all ſhould be returned, and he ſhould hold it peaceably. Upon his death in 1306 or 1307, without iſſue, his eſtates, and this in particular (k), came to K. Edward I. [See more fully in the other Volume, p. 554.]

The 16th of December 1312, K. Edward II. gave this maner, with others, to his brother Thomas de Brotherton, and afterwards the office of Mareſhall. His firſt wife was Alice, daughter of Sir Edward Hayls, of Harwich, and his ſecond, Mary daughter of William Lord Roos. By this laſt he had no iſſue (l); but by the firſt he had two daughters, Margaret, and Alice. The latter had for huſband Edward de Montacute.

Margaret, the eldeſt daughter, ſtyled Marſhall Counteſs of Norfolk, was married, firſt, to John de Segrave, and afterwards to Sir Walter de Manny, Knight of the Garter, from whom this maner is ſometimes called Mawney. She was created, 29 September 1398, Dutcheſs of Norfolk for life. Her firſt huſband John de Segrave dyed in 1353, and Sir Walter de Manny in 1372. The firſt is recorded to have held, jointly with her; and the latter in her right as parcel of the Earldom of Norfolk; this maner of Dovercourt with Herwiche, of the Earl of Oxford by the ſervice of one knight's fee (m). She herſelf, departed this life 24 March 1399. By John de Segrave ſhe had two daughters, Anne Abbeſs of Berking, and Elizabeth, born in 1340; who was married to John de Mowbray, Lord Mowbray, of Axholm; He dyed 9 October 1368. By him ſhe had two ſons, John, and Thomas. —— John, the eldeſt ſon was created Earl of Nottingham 16 July 1377; but dying under age 10 February 1382, ——Thomas Mowbray, the other ſon became heir apparent to the eſtate. The 12th of February 1382, the title of Earl of Nottingham was conferred upon him, and he was further advanced to the title of Duke of Norfolk, 29 September 1397, and conſtituted Earl Marſhall of England. He dyed an exile at Venice in 1400. By his firſt wife, which dyed 23 Auguſt 1383, he had no iſſue. But by Elizabeth his ſecond wife, Siſter and coheir of Thomas Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, he had two ſons, Thomas, and John; and two daughters, Margaret, and Iſabell. Elizabeth his widow was married again twice, namely to Sir Robert Gouſhill, and Gerard Ufflet. Robert Gouſhill, at the time of his deceaſe in 1403, had a third part of the maner of Dovercourt with Herwich, in right of his wife, whoſe dower it was (n).

The ſaid Elizabeth, at the time of her deceaſe, in 1424, held the maner of Dovercourt, of the Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and the Burgh of Harwiche of the King, in burgage (o).——Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marſhall, her eldeſt ſon, was beheaded in 1405, for being in a conſpiracy againſt K. Henry IV. and forfeited all title to his eſtates.——John, his next brother, was reſtored to the Earldom of Nottingham, with the Office of Earl Marſhall in 1413, and to the Dukedom of Norfolk in 1416. He held this maner of Dover-court of the Earl of Oxford; and the burgh of Herewich, at the time of his deceaſe 19 October 1432. By Catharine his wife, daughter of Ralph Nevill; to whom this maner, and the burgh of Harwich were aſſigned, in part of her dowry (p); he had ——John Mowbray, his ſon and heir, that dyed 6 November 1461 (q). Having married Elianor only daughter of William Bourchier Earl of Eu, he had by her——John Mowbray, the laſt Duke of Norfolk of this family, who dyed in 1477. He held the maner of Dover-court, of whom was unknown; and the maner of Harwich of the King, in capite, by knight's ſervice (r): For the Earls of Oxford were then attainted. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Talbot Earl of Shrewſbury, by whom he had an only daughter, Anne, contracted in marriage to Richard, Duke of York, ſecond ſon of K. Edward IV; but he dyed without iſſue in 1483, having been privately murdered, as there is reaſon to believe. Anne, the wife dyed in June 1483 (s).

Upon that, the large Eſtates of the Mowbrays, Dukes of Norfolk, came to the families of Howard, and Berkley, as deſcended from Margaret, and Iſabell, above-mentioned, the two daughters of Thomas Mowbray, the firſt Duke of Norfolk. Margaret was married to Robert Howard, anceſtor of the noble and numerous family of that ſurname; and Iſabell to James Lord Berkley, in 1423. They had two ſons, William, and Maurice. Upon partition of this great inheritance, Dover-court and Harwich were allotted to Berkley. [See in the other Volume, p. 554, 555].——William Lord Berkley, the eldeſt ſon, who had this eſtate, among others, was knighted in 1438, created Viſcount Berkley, 21 April 1481; made Earl of Nottingham, 28 June 1483, advanced to the title of Marquis of Berkley, and conſtituted Earl Marſhall, in 1485. Though he had three wives, yet having no iſſue ſurviving, and being diſpleaſed with his brother and heir Maurice, for marrying beneath his quality, he did by indenture, 10 December 1487, covenant to aſſure moſt of his eſtates to K. Henry VII. But the maners of Mawny, Dover-court, Harwich, Great Cheſterford, and Denge, were allotted, or given up, to the Marquis (t).

Moſt probably, they came to the Crown among the reſt, and This was granted to the ancient proprietors the De Veres Earls of Oxford. For, John de Vere, the 13th Earl of Oxford, at the time of his deceaſe 10 March 1512, held the maners of Harwich and Dovercourt of the Abbot of St. Oſith, then worth 39l. 11s. 8d. a year. And ſo did——John, the 14th Earl, who dyed 14 July, 1526 (u). —— John, the 16th Earl, gave up this, and other eſtates, to the Crown. For, in 1544, a fine paſſed between K. Henry VIII. plaintiff, and John Earl of Oxford, Dorothy his wife, and Robert de Vere, deforc' of the maners of Dovercourt, Harwich, Great and Little Oakley, Skighawe, Mooſe, Old-hall, and New-hall, in Beaumond, with great parcels of land; the Advowſons of the Churches of Great Oakley, Mooſe and Beaumond; the Advowſons of the Vicarage of Dovercourt, and of the Chapels of Harwich, and Fulton; the right of the King (w).

In 1558, Qu. Mary granted the lordſhip and maner of Dovercourt, late parcel of the lands and poſſeſſions of the Earl of Oxford, to Sir Thomas White, and others (x).

This maner came again ſoon after to the Crown; and reſted in it all the reign of Qu. Elizabeth, and part of K. James's. The latter ſold, or granted, it to

Sir George Whitmore. From whoſe Family it paſſed into thoſe of Davall, Burr, &c. and it belongs now to Lewis-Peak Garland Eſq; like moſt of the neighbouring eſtates.

Mr. Thomas Chriſtmaſs; Mills Rutland, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

In this pariſh grows a ſtrong, knotted, and crooked ſort of Elms, famous for their ſeveral uſes in huſbandry; which, it is ſaid, are very durable, and wear like iron (y).

This is one of the Pariſhes in this County that receive part of the Benefaction of Henry Smith Eſq; namely 4l. 6s. 8d. a year.

Here are two Fairs, May 1. October 18.

The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; all tiled. In a ſtone Tower are 5 Bells.

Alberic de Vere, founder of Colne-Priory, endowed it, among other things, with the Church of Duurecourt, and the lands thereto belonging, and the tithes of the demeſnes, and of the town, and fiſhery, and feed for 100 ſheep in the marſh, and one tenant with 10 acres. His ſon Alberic confirmed this grant: as did K. Henry I. in 1111 (z). Roger Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, having, with the conſent of Colne-Priory, founded the Chapel of Harwich, made a freſh grant of this Church, with all its appertenances, and with the Chapel of Herewiche, to the Monks of Colne (a). The great Tithes were appropriated to theſe Monks, and a Vicarage ordained, of which they continued patrons till their diſſolution, and then both fell to the Crown. The Advowſon of the Vicarage hath continued in it ever ſince: But K. James I. alienated the great Tithes and Glebe to Sir George Whitmore, and they have paſſed with the reſt of the eſtates.

The Vicarage was augmented with a Farm purchaſed by Bp. Robinſon's benefaction, jointly with the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty.

In this Church was anciently a famous Rood or Crucifix, whoſe ſuppoſed Sanctity drew from far unto it many votaries and pilgrims, with their offerings. See an account of it in J. Fox's Book of Martyrs, Book II. p. 250.

Here was alſo a Preſbyter Guild, or Fraternity of St. George, endowed with ſome lands and houſes, and a garden at Harwich. It is ſuppoſed, that the George-inn over againſt the Church, was either the ſite of it, and from thence received the name; or was part of its endowment [I].

That Inn, with a tenement and ſhop adjoyning, is part of the Eſtate given for the reparation of the Church: And for the ſame uſe a field of ſeven acres called Frankes was given by Richard Strowght in 1631. Two fields, of ten acres, near Dover-court-green, are alſo appropriated to the ſame uſe.

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 67l. 3s. 0d.

HARWICH,

otherwiſe Herewic, and Herewich, was ſo named from the two Saxon words, Heꞃe, an army, and ƿic, a caſtle, a fortification, or a bay, the winding of a river, &c. (b).

By the Saxons naming it Here-wic, i. e. the Army's Caſtle, it ſeems probable that they kept here an Army always ready to oppoſe the deſcents of the pirating Danes: and it is not improbable, that the Count of the Saxon ſhore had ſome Fortification here in the Romans time.

A confirmation of it, is part of the Roman Caſtra, or Camp, ſtill remaining; which ſhews not only ſuch labour and induſtry as that great people was famous for, but alſo carries in it viſible marks of antiquity. One ſide of it, at leaſt half a mile long, runs ſoutherly from without the Town-gate to the Beacon-hill-field, in the midſt of which is a Tumulus, whereon ſtands, or lately ſtood, a wind-mill. The Rampart, or Vallum, in many places is 12 feet high; and the Ditch, or Foſſa, though chiefly filled up, at leaſt 6 feet deep, and 40 feet wide. The Sea hath devoured the reſt. On the top of the hill another Work runs acroſs from the firſt, eaſterly. The high road going to it, which is the preſent one leading to the Town, is ſtill called the Street: and has here and there mutilated parts of a conſiderable large ſtone-pavement. From the name of Street, and theſe remains, they preſerve a tradition, that hereabout was formerly a conſiderable Town; and that theſe ſtones are remains of its pavement, when it was a great ſtreet. All which evidently prove it a very large military way of the Romans, or in the Saxon ſtyle, a Stane ſtreet. To put its Roman original out of all doubt, ſeveral Coins have been found in it, formerly in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Bagnal, naval officer here. A teſſellated Pavement was alſo diſcovered at a ſmall adjoining Farm, belonging to the Vicarage of Dovercourt. And, as far as a deſcription of the Bricks can warrant us, about 20 years ago a Wall was pulled down, built entirely of Roman materials (c).

The earlieſt account we have of any tranſactions in theſe parts, was in the year 885, when K. Ælfred obtained a compleat victory over a Daniſh fleet here. The particulars are thus related in the Saxon Chronicle (d). K. Ælfred ſent a fleet from Kent into Eaſt-Anglia. When they came to Sturemuth, i. e. the mouth of the Stour here, they met ſixteen of the enemies ſhips, which they fought, and took them all, and ſlew the men. But as they were going back with their booty, they met a large fleet of the enemy, which attacked them, and the Danes got the victory.

The firſt time Herewic is mentioned in records, is in 1270. It was then an appendage to the maner of Dover-court, and a Hamlet in that pariſh, and ſo continues ſtill, though in 1477, &c. it is called a Maner.

As it was all along in the ſame Lords as the Maner of Dover-court, namely, the noble Families of De Vere, Earls of Oxford; of Bigod, Earls of Norfolk; of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk; of Mowbray, Dukes of Norfolk; and Earls Marſhall; &c. of which we have given an account under the pariſh of Dover-court; we ſhall beg leave to refer thither, and not to repeat the ſame things over again here.

Of late it hath been in the Families of Whitmore, Davall, Burr, and now of Lewis-Peak Garland, Eſq;

This Town is 72 miles from London. It ſtands on a Cliff, or point of land, at the north-eaſt corner of this County; bounded on the eaſt by the Sea, and on the north by the mouth of the Stour, and the famous haven of Orwell. The waſhing and undermining of the Tides, and the falling of large pieces of the Cliff, have made this point a peninſula, and it is apprehended in a courſe of years will make it quite an iſland.

Though it is ſo near the Sea, yet ſtanding high, and by a clean bold ſhore, it is therefore healthy.

Its nearneſs to the Sea expoſes it to this inconvenience, that their Water is brackiſh. So that, beſides what they ſave from rain in ciſterns; in a drought, they are forced to have water fetched in water-carts, from a ſpring near a mile from the Town by the road to Dover-court; or to have it brought in boats, or ſchoots, from a fine ſpring at Land-guard fort; or from a ſpring at Arwarton in Suffolk, which they had by permiſſion from Sir Philip Parker, Bart. lord of the ſoil.

The Town in general is well-built, conſiſting of three main Streets, the High ſtreet, Church-ſtreet, and Weſt-ſtreet; out of which ſeveral Lanes branch out on each ſide. Formerly it was walled round [K], and had four Gates, namely, St. Helen's Port, Barton's or Water-gate, St. Auſtin's gate, and the Caſtle-Port; beſides three other Gates called Savers or Salve-gate, Burham's, and Tilney's gates. It had alſo a Caſtle; and an Admiralty-houſe: But they are all either gone to Sea, or ruinous. The Dukes of Norfolk had a large Houſe near St. Auſtin's gate; in the Hall-window of which were the Arms of Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, till 1676, when they were taken down.

The chief Buildings at preſent are a School-houſe, intended for a Charity-School by Humfrey Parſons, Eſq; at whoſe Charge it was erected. Alſo, the Guild-hall, and a pretty good Exchange.

As this is a Sea-port, here is a Cuſtom-houſe, called The King's Houſe, with a Collector, Comptroller, Land Surveyor, Tide Surveyor, two Land-waiters, and four Tide-waiters.

England and Holland being from this Port; that brings a conſiderable number of Travellers this way, eſpecially in time of War. For whoſe Conveniency, and the carrying of the Mailles, there are Four Pacquet-boats: and, in war-time, two Dover packet-boats.

K. William, and K. George I. and II. uſually embarked and landed at this place, in their Journeys to and from Holland and Hanover.

For the Conveniency of Travellers, a Stage-coach comes hither from London Mondays and Thurſdays; and returns again to London Tueſdays, and Fridays. They have alſo a Machine, part of the year.

Here is a convenient Yard for building Ships, belonging to the King, and three Store-houſes. From the year 1665 to 1765, ſeveral Men of War, of conſiderable burthen, have been built in this yard; the firſt was the Rupert, a third rate, by Sir Antony Deane, and the laſt the Arrogant, a 74 gun ſhip, by Mr. Bernard.

The Harbour is very ſafe and of great extent, able to receive the biggeſt Ships. The Author of the Tour through Great Britain affirms of his own knowledge, ‘ That there has been in it ‘ one hundred ſail of men of war, with their ‘ attendants; and between three and four hundred ‘ ſail of Collier ſhips all in this Harbour at a ‘ time, and yet none of them crowding or riding ‘ in danger one of another (e).’

For the ſafety of Navigation, and the Guidance of Ships; in a Room over the chief Gate there is a Light kept every night with a coal fire: to which anſwers a Light-houſe, on the Town Green below the Cliff, with lamps ſupplied with oyl. By means of them, ſhips are conducted clear off a ſand called the Andrews into the Rolling grounds, where there is good anchorage; from whence the paſſage lies ſafely to Orwell before the Town.

The Cliff, on the ſouth-ſide of the Town, dividing Orwell-haven from the Bay that extends to Walton-Naſe, contains many acres of land. The height of it, from the beach to the top where higheſt, is about fifty foot. At the bottom, there is a layer of clay of a blueiſh colour about a foot thick, which is ſucceeded by another of ſtone of much the ſame colour for a foot more: In this layer of ſtone are imbedded Shells, though but ſparingly, of the turbinate as well as bivalve kinds; and alſo pieces of wood and ſticks petrified. Upon the fall of a piece of the Cliff, a few years ago, a large tree lying horizontally appeared, which was as hard and black as jet, but was ſoon after buried again by the fall of another lump of the Cliff. Above the layer of ſtone are divers layers of the ſame blueiſh clay mentioned already, about 20 feet high or more; this clay hath Copperas ſtones ſticking in it, but no ſhells. Several layers come next, reaching within about two feet of the ſurface, ſome of which are only of fine ſand, and others have ſtone and gravel mixt with ſmall pebbles; and it is in ſome of theſe laſt mentioned layers, that the foſſil ſhells are imbedded. Theſe foſſils lie promiſcuouſly together, bivalve and turbinate; neither do the layers in which they lie obſerve any order, being ſometimes higher and ſometimes lower in the Cliff; with layers of ſand, gravel, and fragments of ſhells between. Nor do the ſhells always lie ſeparate or diſtinct in the layers, but are oftentimes found in lumps or maſſes, ſomething friable, cemented together with ſand and fragments, of an iron or ruſty colour, of which all theſe layers are. Over all is a covering of common ſandy earth, about the thickneſs of two feet, in which are ſometimes to be ſeen veins of a white friable ſubſtance reſembling icing-glaſs, though more tender than that brought from Germany.

The blueiſh Clay above-mentioned tumbling down upon the Shore, within a ſhort time turns to Stone, though waſhed by the Sea at high water. Some pieces new fallen are as ſoft as the Clay in the Cliff; others that have lain longer, are cruſted over and hard, but if opened or broke, the Clay is ſtill ſoft in the middle; others that have lain longer are petrified to the heart: And with theſe the Walls of the Town were for the moſt part built, and the Streets are paved (f). The Walls of the Town of Colcheſter ſeem alſo to be moſtly built with ſome of the ſame kind of ſtone.

On the top of this Cliff, along the Sea-ſide, is a handſom Walk, about a mile long: which is of great uſe to thoſe who come here for benefit of Bathing.

For Griffith Davis Eſq; hath made two very convenient Baths; one cold, and the other hot.

From the ſide of the Cliff, above the level of the Sea, iſſues a Spring of fine and pleaſant Water: But it is not of a petrifying quality, as ſome have imagined (g).

This Town was firſt incorporated, in 1318, by K. Edward II. through the procurement of his brother Thomas de Brotherton, lord of this place. The ſubſtance of the Charter was, That the Town of Harwich be a free-borough, and that the ſaid Earl's men and tenants of the ſaid town, and their heirs and ſucceſſors, be free-burgeſſes; and uſe and enjoy the liberties and free-cuſtoms appertaining to a Free-borough; with a Market every week on Tueſday, and free-cuſtoms belonging to Markets, &c. (h).

This Charter was confirmed, 12 Auguſt 1342; again 20 March 1377, and afterwards by K. Henry IV. V. and VI. The laſt of whom, in 1422, by the adviſement and aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in his Parliament then held, confirmed their Liberties and Franchiſes, not in the leaſt revoked: and again, 21 May 1438, accepted of, approved, ratified and confirmed them. K. Edward VI. in 1547; and Qu. Mary, in 1553; and Qu. Elizabeth, in 1560, renewed and confirmed the ſame. But the ampleſt Charter was procured for them, 18 April 1604, by Sir Edward Coke, then Attorney-General. Under the former Charters, the government of this Corporation had been in a Port-Reeve, or Portman; in a Bailiff, Con-

Conſtables, and Tenants; a Chamberlain and Treaſurers; a capital Burgeſs, or Præpoſitus. By this laſt Charter it was ſettled in a Mayor, eight Aldermen, twenty four capital Burgeſſes, and a Recorder. The Mayor is choſen by the capital Burgeſſes on St. Andrew's day, and ſworn on St. Thomas's day. They were alſo then inveſted with the Privilege of ſending two Burgeſſes to Parliament; [and a Liſt of their Burgeſſes may be ſeen in the Introduction.] Moreover, they had then the grant of a ſecond Market weekly on the Friday; and two Fairs yearly, each to laſt three days: the one on the feaſt of St. Philip and St. James, the other on the feaſt of St. Luke the Evangeliſt.

K. Charles II. confirmed their Franchiſes and Immunities by Charter, 24 April 1675: a Quo-warranto was afterwards brought againſt it; but it was fully reſtored and confirmed by K. William III.

As to the Extent of the Corporation; By Charter of K. James I. it contains the Burgh of Harwich, and the Tenants, Reſidents, and Inhabitants of the village of Dovercourt, near adjacent and adjoyning to the ſame Burgh. How far it reaches by water is not aſcertained in the Charters; only by the records of their Admiralty Courts it appears, that they have amerced certain perſons for unlawful fiſhing near Shotley (i).

The Arms of this Burgh, are, a Portcullis. Creſt. An ancient one-maſted ſhip, with ſail furled, the poop and ſtern much higher than the middle.

Harwich hath given the title of Marquis, and Viſcount, to ſome noble Families. Frederic, Count Schomberg, was created Marquis of Harwich 9 May 1689; Benjamin Mildmay, Viſcount Harwich, 14 May 1733; and Wills-Hill, Lord Hilſborough in 1756.

The CHURCH, belonging to this Town, dedicated to St. Nicolas, conſiſts of a body and two aiſles, but the Chancel is only of one pace; the whole leaded. At the weſt end, there is a low Tower of ſtone, with an octangular wooden frame and a ſpire, leaded. In it are 5 Bells.

This Church is only a Chapel of eaſe to the mother Church of Dovercourt. It was founded by Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk, ſon of Juliana daughter of Aubrey de Vere: and probably was at firſt a donative, or free Chapel (k).

Charitable Gifts.

A farm of 20l. a year lying in Tendring, given for the perpetual repairs of Harwich Chapel.

Fifty ſhillings yearly, to be diſtributed to the Poor of this place, at the diſcretion of the Miniſter and Church-wardens; being the gift of Mrs. Offley; who alſo gave to the poor two ſmall tenements in Weſt-ſtreet.

Twelve wheaten loaves given weekly to the poor by the Corporation.

This place partakes alſo of Mr. Henry Smyth's benefaction, mentioned above under Dovercourt.

Near the Sea are Alms-houſes of brick, for four dwellers, but without endowment (l).

Harwich is rated to the land-tax at 1340l. [L].

For the defence of this Town, and the excellent Ports of Harwich and Orwell, LANDGUARD-FORT was built. It ſtands upon a neck of land, now joined to Walton Colneſe in Suffolk; but the common tradition is, That the river Stour paſſed on the north ſide of it, and diſcharged itſelf into the Sea about Hoaſeley-Bay. The remains of the Channel are to this day called Fleets. And the ground, which the Fort ſtands upon, juts out further ſouth than the town of Harwich. So that it is not improbable, that the two great Rivers Stour and Orwell bringing down by the violence of the floods much ſand and gravel, and by degrees lodging it near their mouths, firſt made an iſland in the middle of the Haven; and then, by frequent additions on the Suffolk ſide, ſtreightned the paſſage, until by degrees it was filled up, and the waſhing away of the Cliff on the Eſſex ſide contributed to the bringing of the mouth of the Harbour more ſouthward than it was at firſt. This is more probable than what a certain Author (m) aſſerted, namely, that this harbour or channel was artificial, and of no old date; againſt which opinion ſeveral good reaſons are urged in the Philoſophical Tranſactions (n).

It may further be obſerved: From the great quantity of ſhingle or beach ſtones in Walton marſhes on the Suffolk ſide, from the courſes of the ſeveral Creeks, the regular ſloping of the Cliffs, &c. it ſeems likely, that the river Orwell had its outlet into the Sea below Bulls Cliff in the pariſh of Walton, and there found the ſpacious Harbour of Orwell, ſecured from the eaſt and north-eaſt winds by a large tract of land, now waſhed away by the ſea, [as appears from records,] where lately were to be ſeen the ruins of a very ſtrong Caſtle built by the Romans, which belonged after the Conqueſt to the Bigods. And it was bounded on the ſouth and ſouth-weſt by a long narrow tract of land, extending from the Naſe in Eſſex, about 6 or 7 miles, or ſomewhat more; at or near the extremity of which was ſeated the Town of Orwell, ſo called from the River or Harbour on whoſe banks it ſtood: all which have been long ſwallowed up by the Sea.

This town of Orwell ſtood on the ſouth ſide

[L] It appears by S. Taylor, that ſeveral of our Kings were at this place, either in their paſſage to and from the Continent; or elſe in their progreſſes. Particularly, 12 Auguſt 1561, Qu. Elizabeth came hither, and accepted of an entertainment from the Burgh, lodging, as it is ſaid, for ſeveral days at a houſe about the middle of the High-Street; and being attended by the Magiſtrates at her departure as far as the wind mill out of town, ſhe graciouſly demanded of them, what they had to requeſt of her, from whom ſhe received this anſwer, 'Nothing, but to wiſh her Majeſty a good 'journey.' Upon which ſhe turning her horſe about, and looking upon the town, ſaid, 'A pretty town, and wants 'nothing,' and ſo bad them farewell. S. Taylor, p. 246. 253.

of the Harbour, upon a neck of land running out from the coaſt of Eſſex, at the place now called the Weſt Rocks; where are to be perceived, at low water, ruins of old buildings, ſquare ſtones, bricks with mortar about them, tiles, &c. [See above, p. 484.] The place is large and full of deep holes, and from thence to Walton in Eſſex the ſand lies in a ridge, and there is not above 5 or 6 feet water, or ſcarce ſo much at low water.

Upon the decay of Orwell, Harwich began to grow populous and conſiderable. But the ſea has, ſince that, ſwept away a great part of the land belonging to it, there being nothing, ſince Orwell is gone, to break off the violence of the ſea when the wind is in the eaſt.

To corroborate what hath been ſaid, about the Stour's running formerly on the north ſide of Landguard Fort; we ſhall add the thoughts of an ingenious correſpondent. “It is very certain that the point of land on the extremity of which the Fort ſtands, now a mile and near a quarter from the Cliff or high land, was not in being when the Romans were in Britain. For, at a Roman Caſtle, called by Camden Walton, alias Felixſtow Caſtle, near the Fort, you can hardly turn up the ſoil in any part, but you will find fragments of Urns, pieces of Coin, and various things that belonged to that people. A man who has dug eringo-roots upwards of fifty years in the low land between the Caſtle and the Fort, never yet found the leaſt remains of the Romans; and therefore it may be taken for granted that the point did not then exiſt. If it had, a place ſo contiguous to it muſt have, even at this day, ſhewn ſome marks of it. I lately found an Elephant's tooth near the remains of this Caſtle; and Mr. Davis of Harwich ſays, he has ſeen more than one that has been found in Harwich Cliff. The moſt rational account how thoſe Bones and Teeth came here, is as follows.

Teeth and bones of Elephants are often dug up in countries of which this animal is not known to have ever been a native. Some call them Hammon's or Mammuth's bones, as they are vulgarly believed to have belonged to Giants. Wherever theſe teeth and bones are found lying with unbroken ſtrata over them, they are ſuppoſed by Naturaliſts to be as old as Noah's flood, or at leaſt to have been buried there, at a time when the earth ſuffered ſome greater alteration in its ſurface, than any recorded ſince the beginning of the hiſtoric age among the Greeks. It ſeems uncertain whether any have been found lying in this manner in England; but there has been one found lately near Harwich, which was undoubtedly buried there while the Romans were in this Iſland. For it was found in the ruins of that ancient Fortification mentioned by Camden near Landguard Fort: together with many Coins, Utenſils and Ornaments, which are well known to have belonged to the Romans. The exact age of this tooth may be gueſſed at with the higheſt probability, for we can hardly doubt of its having belonged to one of thoſe Elephants which Dion Caſſius in the 21ſt Chapter of his 60th Book, ſays, were brought by Claudius into England, who landed with his Army in Kent; and croſſed the Thames with it into Eſſex, where he conquered the Natives, and, after diſarming them, eſtabliſhed a Roman Government. This happened in the year of our Lord 43, at which time therefore the Elephant was living to which this tooth belonged; which probably has been buried in the earth ſeventeen hundred years. Camden, in his Britannia, relates from Ralph de Coggeſhal, who wrote 500 years ago, that in King Richard's time there were found two teeth of a Giant near Neſſe point; and there is an account in the Philoſophical Tranſactions N°. 274. that A. D. 1701. there were bones found of an extraordinary ſize at Wrabneſe near Harwich: all which may reaſonably be ſuppoſed to be parts of thoſe Elephants brought over by Claudius, probably the firſt ever ſeen in this Country. Some of theſe foſſil teeth are ſaid to have weighed twelve pounds; this, which I am now ſpeaking of, weighs not quite ſeven, and perhaps did not weigh above eight when it was entire: For at one end there is a piece broken off. We might judge then, that this was the tooth of an Elephant not full grown, if the different quantity, as well as kind, of ſtony matter united with the foſſil teeth, allowed us to form any certain judgment from their weight.”

To conclude what we have to ſay about this Fort; The officers of his Majeſty's ordnance did lately, and perhaps do ſtill, according to former precedents, write it as being in Eſſex. It is ſupplied with freſh water by Pipes under ground from Walton Colneſe.
